9. India has taken the lead with respect to the ‘Chambers of Commerce CBM’ and the ‘Commercial Opportunities CBM’. We intend to develop a cooperative framework through which we are able to bind the region in a web of trade, energy and transport linkages that will not only act as a major confidence building measure but will also contribute to greater economic synergies in the region and spur economic growth in Afghanistan and beyond. This is a task which cannot be achieved by any one country alone and hence within the framework of the Istanbul process we will seek to involve countries in the region so that they develop a vested interest in peace, stability and economic growth in Afghanistan.

10. The Delhi Investment Summit on Afghanistan organised by the Confederation of Indian Industry (CII), with the support of the Governments of India and Afghanistan as also apex Afghan business and investment organisations, on June 28 this year was aimed at attracting investments into Afghanistan through cross-cutting partnerships and joint ventures. The Summit is an example of how regional countries and the wider international community can seek to come together to change the discourse in Afghanistan from one of conflict and despair to one of progress and prosperity.

11. These various CBMs point to what Afghanistan’s neighbours can contribute. If we seize the opportunity available for establishing cooperative arrangements in Afghanistan we could avert the dangerous possibilities ahead and create a climate of peace.

Media Briefing on the State Visit of President Karzai to India.

New Delhi, November 9, 2012.

Deputy Secretary (XP) (Shri Bishwadip Dey): Good Afternoon friends. Thank you very much for coming this afternoon. Today I am deputizing for the Official Spokesperson Mr. Syed Akbaruddin.

I have two announcements to make. I have with me Additional Secretary (Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran) Mr. Yash Sinha. He will speak to you on one of the topics of the announcements that I have to make.

The announcement is about the President of Islamic Republic of Afghanistan His Excellency Hamid Karzai who will be on a state visit to India from November 9-13, 2012. He will be in Mumbai and Delhi during the course of his visit. The President of Afghanistan will be accompanied by a high level Ministerial and official delegation from Afghanistan.

While in Delhi, President Karzai will be accorded a ceremonial welcome on November 12, 2012. The President of India will host a state banquet in his honour. Delegation-level talks will be held between the Prime Minister and President Karzai.

President Karzai will also deliver the Maulana Abul Kalam Azad Memorial Lecture organized by the Indian Council of Cultural Relations in New Delhi on November 12, 2012.

The second announcement is with regard to the visit of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, Chairperson of the National League of Democracy of Myanmar. She would be visiting India from November 13-18, 2012. She is scheduled to deliver the Nehru Memorial Lecture on the occasion of the birth anniversary of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru on November 14, 2012.

It would be recalled that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi had accepted the invitation from Shrimati Sonia Gandhi, in her capacity as Chairperson of Nehru Memorial Fund, to deliver the Nehru Memorial Lecture when she met the Prime Minister during his visit to Myanmar in May 2012.

We shall soon be providing you with the details of her visit including her engagements during the visit.

Additional Secretary Mr. Sinha would further brief you on the visit of President Hamid Karzai and has kindly agreed to take a few questions. The questions for today’s briefing would be limited only to the visit of President Karzai.

May I now request Additional Secretary Mr. Sinha to make his opening remarks?
Additional Secretary (PAI) (Shri Y.K. Sinha): Thank you Bishwadip. Good afternoon to all of you.

As my colleague has said, I am to inform you that President Hamid Karzai will be making a state visit to India from the 9th to the 13th of this month. He is arriving later today in Mumbai. He has a full engagement during his visit here. We have outlined the elements of the programme. It is a state visit with a ceremonial welcome planned on the 12th at Rashtrapati Bhavan. The President will also be hosting a banquet in his honour later that evening. During the day he has engagements, meetings with the Prime Minister, delegation-level talks. And of course he will be delivering the Maulana Azad Memorial Lecture later in the evening. We expect that during the visit, apart from reviewing the entire gamut of bilateral relations there would be discussions on regional and international issues. We also expect that a few MoUs/agreements would be signed during the course of the visit.

Thank you.

Question: Yash, I am given to understand by the Afghan Ambassador that Mr. Karzai is going to Bombay trying to raise funds for the projects which our consortiums have been able to bag and so on. I am just curious, do we have a plan B in the unlikely event of the Taliban and ISI ganging up after the Americans and NATO forces leave Afghanistan, to protect our assets in Afghanistan?

Additional Secretary (PAI): The President of Afghanistan will be in Mumbai and, as I said, would be interacting with business leaders in the financial capital. The idea obviously is to encourage Indian business to look at Afghanistan as a destination for investments, for greater trade, for greater economic cooperation. As you are aware, India hosted the Delhi Investment Summit on Afghanistan, the first such summit that India has hosted for any other country in India. That was in the end of June this year. There has been considerable follow-up since then. Obviously the intention is to try and attract Indian industry, Indian business to looking at Afghanistan as a destination for investments and trade.

On your second question, I think I would rather not answer that in detail now because obviously the situation is evolving and we will have to wait and see how things develop in Afghanistan and the region. All I can say is that the Government monitors these developments very closely and we will take necessary measures to safeguard our interests.

Question: During the talks, is the implementation of Chabahar agreement also to come up?

Additional Secretary (PAI): As I said, all issues, regional, international and bilateral issues, will come up for discussion. Specifically of course you are aware that the Strategic Partnership Agreement was signed on the 4th of October last year. And I think both the leaders will use this opportunity to review and consolidate our strategic partnership.

Question: You just said that there is a considerable follow-up to the Delhi Summit on Investment in Afghanistan. Could you give us any concrete proposals being cleared for investment by Indian companies in Afghanistan? Anything concrete?

Additional Secretary (PAI): When I referred to follow-up I referred to the follow-up in terms of attracting investments into Afghanistan. As you are aware, there is a regional process called the Istanbul Process of which India is a member. India in fact is the lead country for two of the seven regional confidence-building measures, namely the Regional Chambers of Commerce CBM and the Commercial Opportunities CBM. So, it is part of our policy of trying to attract investments into Afghanistan and also to change the narrative from a narrative of anxiety to a narrative of hope.

Question: In the Strategic Partnership Agreement, we had offered to train Afghan army personnel. Can you give us a sense of how many personnel have been trained, how many we plan to train in the coming years, as also a sense of the aid? Yesterday the Cabinet also approved I think something like Rs.540 crore third phase of SDP or whatever. Could you just give us a sense of how much has been given in the last decade? We have committed 2.1 billion dollars one knows. But how much has been invested and how much still remains to be done?

Additional Secretary (PAI): As far as your first question goes, India is involved in capacity building in various fields including the security sector. You are aware of the provisions of the Strategic Partnership Agreement. All I can say at this stage is that we are doing training of the Afghan National Security Forces specifically on requests received from the Government of Afghanistan. I think the numbers are modest. I would not want to go into details.

As far as the investments into Afghanistan are concerned, we are looking at investments in various sectors, particularly in mineral sector. You are aware that the consortium of Indian companies led by SAIL has won the bid for the Hajigak iron ore mines, and discussions are under way to finalise the contract in this regard. So, we are obviously looking at a greater, enhanced economic cooperation with Afghanistan to expand our already very vibrant relationship from a Government-to-Government assistance programme or relationship to cover the entire gamut of activities in the economic, commercial field, in the people-to-people contacts which are extremely strong, and other areas like culture, etc.

Question: Since the strategic agreement was signed, how many times have the Working Groups met? Or have they met at all?
Additional Secretary (PAI): As you are aware, the implementing mechanism for the Strategic Partnership Agreement is the Partnership Council which is co-chaired by the Foreign Ministers of both the countries. The first session of the Partnership Council was held on the 1st of May this year in New Delhi. This was preceded by a Joint Working Group on political and security consultations, which is headed on our side by the Foreign Secretary and on the Afghan side by the Deputy Foreign Minister. There are three other Joint Working Groups - on trade and economic cooperation, on development assistance, and on education, capacity building and culture which we hope will meet shortly.

Question: Sir, you are of course aware of the CAREC meeting that approved 23 billion dollars of trade routes, what is known as the Bonn Agreement. It seems that most of the routes seem to be coming to Gwadar and exit is planned from Gwadar. How are we trying to speed up our connectivity plans with Afghanistan and Central Asia?

Additional Secretary (PAI): I will limit myself to Afghanistan because that is what I handle. Refer your question to my colleague who does handle Central Asia. As far as connectivity and transit to Afghanistan and Central Asia are concerned, obviously it is a priority for us, and not only for us but for Afghanistan also, and we hope that existing treaties like the Afghanistan-Pakistan Trade and Transit Agreement (APTTA) would at some point be extended to cover transit of goods from India to Afghanistan.

Question: Sir, very recently the UN Security Council under the Indian Presidency announced sanctions against the Haqqani Network. Later India in its statement held the Haqqani Network responsible for violent attacks on Indian interests. Which particular attack is India holding the Haqqani Network directly responsible for, Sir?

Additional Secretary (PAI): I think the statement basically welcomed the listing of the Haqqani Network under the UNSC resolutions. As far as attacks on Indian interests are concerned, there have been specific attacks that have been believed to be carried out by the Haqqani Network. I do not want to go into details at this stage except to say that there are credible reports of not only attacks that have taken place but of attacks that could take place in the future.

Question: Is there evidence of ISI involvement in such attacks, Sir?

Additional Secretary (PAI): I would not like to comment on that.

Question: Afghanistan, India and the US held a trilateral dialogue in September. Could you please shed some light on what was discussed in that dialogue?

Additional Secretary (PAI): As you are aware, India and the US during their strategic dialogue in June in Washington decided to convene a trilateral dialogue between India, Afghanistan and the US. That dialogue took place in September on the margins of the UNGA in New York, and gave an opportunity to all three countries to discuss a variety of issues regarding Afghanistan and the region, and to see where the three countries could cooperate in trying to bring peace, stability and progress in Afghanistan.

Question: Yash, with Pakistan all set to give the MFN status to India by the end of this year, is there any possibility of a trilateral dialogue between India, Pakistan and Afghanistan to explore the possibility of opening up Wagah to send our goods to Afghanistan and vice versa?

Additional Secretary (PAI): I would not like to comment on that right now because I think it is a bit premature. But certainly greater regional cooperation and better connectivity would be good for all the countries in the region.

Deputy Secretary (XP): With that we come to the conclusion of this briefing.

Thank you.
New Delhi, November 12, 2012.

Your Excellency President Hamid Karzai,, President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

It is my great pleasure to welcome President Hamid Karzai and members of his high-level delegation to India.

President Karzai is no stranger to India. He has long been a close friend of our country and a steadfast supporter of India-Afghanistan relations. We admire his leadership of Afghanistan through a very critical period of more than a decade, during which Afghanistan has made significant progress despite multiple challenges. I therefore consider it a special privilege to be able to receive him in Delhi on a State Visit.

We had detailed and frank discussions today covering the entire spectrum of our bilateral relations, as well as the challenges confronting our region. We reaffirmed our shared vision of a stable, strong, united, sovereign and prosperous Afghanistan. We reviewed progress in the implementation of the Strategic Partnership Agreement during the past year and we reaffirmed our commitment to deepen our cooperation in accordance with the vision outlined in the Agreement.

President Karzai and I have agreed to intensify our cooperation with a special focus on deepening our economic engagement in areas ranging from agriculture and small businesses to mining and infrastructure.

We discussed the need to develop a strategic economic partnership, which will build on our economic synergies for mutual benefit of our two peoples. I also reiterated to President Karzai our belief that Afghanistan’s regional economic integration will contribute to overall prosperity and stability in our region.

India remains committed to supporting Afghanistan in its development efforts. Our development assistance commitment to Afghanistan currently stands at approximately 2 billion us dollars. We have expanded our programmes for capacity-building, institution-building and human resource development. With the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding today, we will launch the Third Phase of Small Development Projects to address the socio-economic needs of people throughout Afghanistan.

We also discussed the changes in the security and political situation in and around Afghanistan. I expressed to President Karzai our belief that sustained international support and cooperation in all respects, including in combating terrorism emanating from the neighbourhood, will help Afghanistan meet these challenges. President Karzai’s own enlightened leadership will play a big part in this effort.

Ladies and Gentlemen

The natural bond between India and Afghanistan is based on several millennia of engagement between our two peoples. India supports the nation-building efforts of Afghanistan, especially in the areas of governance, security and development. We also support efforts to achieve a lasting peace in Afghanistan that brings together all sections of Afghan society while preserving the achievements of the last decade, including in the area of women’s rights. We respect the choices that the Afghan people make of their own free will.

I am confident President Karzai’s present visit will further strengthen the excellent relationship between our two countries. I once again convey my personal good wishes to President Karzai as he leads his country through a challenging time and wish to assure him that India stands with him and the people of Afghanistan.

I Thank you
Joint Statement issued on the occasion of the State Visit by Afghan President Hamid Karzai.

New Delhi, November 12, 2012.

1. At the invitation of His Excellency Mr. Pranab Mukherjee, President of the Republic of India, His Excellency Mr. Hamid Karzai, President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, paid a state visit to India from November 9-13, 2012. During the visit to Mumbai, the President of Afghanistan attended a Business Meet on November 10, 2012 where leading business leaders of India participated. He delivered the prestigious Maulana Abul Kalam Azad Memorial lecture organized by the Indian Council of Cultural relations (ICCR) in New Delhi on November 12, 2012. A high-level delegation comprising Dr. Zalmay Rassoul, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Rangin Dadfar Spanta, National Security Advisor, Mr. Anwar Ulhaq Ahady, Minister of Commerce and Industries, Mr. Wahidullah Shahrani, Minister of Mines, and Mr. Sayed Makhdoom Raheen, Minister of Information and Culture accompanied the President.

2. After a ceremonial welcome in New Delhi, the President of Afghanistan visited Raj Ghat to pay homage to the memory of Mahatma Gandhi. The Vice President of India, Shri M. Hamid Ansari, Minister of External Affairs, Shri Salman Khurshid, the Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha, Smt. Sushma Swaraj and the Chairperson UPA, Smt. Sonia Gandhi called on the President of Afghanistan. The President of India hosted a banquet in honour of the visiting dignitary.

3. Afghanistan and India have had a long shared history going back over millennia. The two countries are natural strategic partners by virtue of geography and a common vision of peace and cooperation in the region. The two countries have built up extensive, mutually beneficial relations in all fields. The strong ties have been manifested in recent times in the form of a robust Strategic Partnership Agreement signed between the two countries in October 2011.

4. The President of Afghanistan held delegation-level discussions with Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest and relevance. The talks between President Karzai and Indian leaders were held in an extremely warm, cordial and friendly atmosphere reflective of the special and unique relationship between the two countries. The Prime Minister assured the President of Afghanistan of India’s support as Afghanistan completes the crucial period of transition by 2014 and, noting the timeless nature of India-Afghanistan relations, reiterated the continuation of India’s support in the period beyond transition.

5. While reviewing their relationship, the two leaders expressed satisfaction at the progress of implementation of the Strategic Partnership Agreement with the convening of the first meeting of the Partnership Council on May 1, 2012. The two leaders reaffirmed their commitment to the full implementation of the Agreement in all areas, including the expansion of political, security, economic and cultural cooperation. The two sides noted that the Strategic Partnership Agreement underlines the multifaceted ties between two countries and has drawn its inspiration and strength from the warmth and resilience of our historical people-to-people ties.

6. The two sides welcomed the steps taken towards the promotion of business links between Afghanistan and India, and were supportive of Indian efforts at encouraging investment in Afghanistan through the Delhi Investment Summit on Afghanistan, held in Delhi on June 28, 2012. The Delhi Investment Summit helped attract regional and international attention towards investment in Afghanistan and its potential in providing economic development and stability to Afghanistan during the transition period. They felt there were prospects for enhanced cooperation among all countries of the region in helping Afghanistan build a better future through harnessing of its natural resources.

7. The two sides also reviewed the implementation of Indian development and reconstruction projects in Afghanistan and were appreciative of their contribution to the development of Afghanistan. They also encouraged Indian investments in Afghanistan to help Afghanistan realize its economic potential to both countries’ mutual advantage.

8. Both sides acknowledged the importance of regional cooperation and connectivity which could assist in Afghanistan’s political and economic progress. They welcomed the Indian stewardship of the two commercial Confidence Building Measures under the Istanbul process that seeks to inspire new trust and confidence in the region by acknowledging and capitalizing on Afghanistan’s position at the ‘Heart of Asia’. The two sides also discussed the potential of the Chabahar port in helping expand trade and transit opportunities and providing alternative transport routes for the prosperity and development of Afghanistan and the region.

9. The two leaders expressed severe condemnation of terrorism and extremism that had been inflicted on their countries from beyond their borders. The President and Prime Minister offered their condolences over the killings of civilians and troops in Afghanistan, most recently the suicide bomb blast at a mosque on the day of Eid al Adha, killing more than 40 people and injuring scores of others, and expressed their determination to work with the international community to combat the forces of terrorism posing a threat to the region. They also stressed on the need to deal firmly with the safe havens for terrorists groups that continue to exist outside Afghanistan’s borders.
10. Both sides reiterated abiding faith in and commitment to democracy, development and peace. They shared the confidence that cooperation at the bilateral, regional and multilateral levels will enable the two countries to realize their developmental aspirations, and contribute to peace, prosperity and security in the region.

11. The two sides signed the following documents during the visit: (i) Memorandum of Understanding on Small Development Projects (SDPs) up to US $ 100 million; (ii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the Field of development of Coal Mineral Resources; (iii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Fertilizer; (iv) Memorandum of Understanding for Cooperation in Youth Affairs.

12. The President of Afghanistan thanked the President of India for the warmth, cordiality and gracious hospitality extended to him and members of his delegation during their stay in India.

222. Cooperation in power sector between India and Bangladesh

In response to a question on cooperation in power sector between India and Bangladesh, the Official Spokesperson said that during the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Bangladesh in September 2011, India and Bangladesh had agreed to promote trans-border cooperation in the management of shared water resources, hydropower potential and eco-systems and in the area of connectivity. It was also agreed that arrangements for cooperation in the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity, including electricity from renewable or other sources, would be established.

India has a liberal policy permitting 100% FDI in respect of projects relating to electricity generation, transmission and distribution. In this regard, the participation of Bangladesh in power projects in India, particularly in the north-eastern states of India adjoining Bangladesh, would be welcome. Such joint ventures in the power sector involving the two countries would also facilitate the evacuation of power from North-Eastern India to Bangladesh and through Bangladesh into other parts of India. Details of such cooperation can be discussed at the forthcoming meeting of the Steering Committee on Power held at the level of Secretaries between the two countries.

I am happy to be in your midst on my first visit to Tripura and participate in the 9th Annual Convocation of the University. In its journey of 25 years, the University has traversed a distinguished path in disseminating knowledge and pursuing excellence, with a focus on aspects of life and culture specific to the North East Region and to the State of Tripura.

Today is a special occasion, as all convocations are. They mark the rite of passage of students from the portals of academia to the world outside to pursue their chosen vocations and their calling in life. They also give us an opportunity to recognise the exceptional and the brightest for their achievements and contributions to the public good.

It gives me great pleasure in welcoming in our midst Bangladesh's illustrious daughter, Her Excellency Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina. As the daughter of the Father of Bangladesh, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, and as Prime Minister, Your Excellency's tireless efforts in upholding democratic values and women's rights in Bangladesh are recognised and serve as a global benchmark.

We admire your courage, Prime Minister, in facing the threats of terrorism and extremism afflicting humanity, your advocacy of pluralism, moderation and tolerance, and the ambitious agenda of economic growth, welfare and social justice that you have planned for, and implemented in Bangladesh.

Meeting neighbours is always an occasion of happiness and rejoicing. It also provides occasion to review and renew bonds that bind us and address concerns that distract us.

Ladies and gentlemen

The destinies of India and Bangladesh are interlinked. Our people share in great measure a common history, culture, language and tradition. They have co-operated and faced challenges together. Our relationship is rooted in shared values and commitment to secularism, multi-party democracy, social justice and fundamental human freedoms.

The landmark visits of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to India in January 2010 and of Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to Dhaka last September elevated the bilateral relationship to new heights.

Bangladesh abuts our North Eastern region and provides critical linkages to its economy, ecology and environment. Indeed, the North Eastern Region Vision 2020 document approved by the North Eastern Council and released by the Prime Minister in July 2008 reflects the commitment of the Union and various State Governments to the comprehensive, inclusive and accelerated development of the region so as to restore its national economic eminence.

We stand committed to fashioning economic and trade arrangements, not only for ensuring closer integration of the region with the national economy but also with the economies of neighbouring countries in the region.

The Vision document has noted that the region should play "the arrow-head role....in the vanguard of the country’s Look-East Policy". It specifically calls for "making the Look East Policy meaningful for the region" by improving connectivity with markets of neighbouring countries. It notes that "opening up the land route through Bangladesh could enormously benefit both countries" and calls for diplomatic efforts focused on "improving relations with the neighbours".

The commitment was demonstrated when Prime Minister Manmohan Singh was accompanied by Chief Ministers of Assam, Meghalaya, Tripura and Mizoram during his visit to Bangladesh in September 2011. This underscores the great interest and enthusiasm of the States of Northeast India in furthering their engagement with Bangladesh.

Tripura shares a special relationship with Bangladesh. Having borders with it on three sides, the state and its people had played important roles in the path leading to the birth of Bangladesh. We remain confident that implementing the Joint Communiqués issued after the landmark visits of the two Prime Ministers would cement this special relationship through enhancing connectivity between Tripura and Bangladesh and promoting close people to people and business linkages.

As we enter a new year, let us recall that last year was special for our countries as it marked two important milestones in our bilateral relationship. First, Bangladesh celebrated its 40th anniversary of freedom and formation. Second, Bangladesh and India held joint commemorations to mark the sesqui-centenary of the birth of that versatile and multifaceted genius Rabindranath Tagore, who both our nations and our people refer to as kobiguru, Vishwa-kavi and Gurudev and whose pen wrote our respective national anthems.

I myself visited Dhaka in May last year to take part in these celebrations and was struck by how Rabindranath Tagore represents much that is precious in our common heritage and has influenced our intellectual and cultural ethos in an enduring and distinctive manner.

Let us all work together for the one supreme cause that animated Tagore, the union of all sections of humanity in sympathy and understanding, in truth and love.
I take this opportunity to congratulate Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina on whom the University has conferred the degree of Doctor of Literature honoris causa.

I also felicitate the students graduating today and wish them all success in their lives and chosen professions."
224. Press Release of the Ministry of Culture on the joint India-Bangladesh celebrations of the 150th birth Anniversary of Rabindranath Tagore.

New Delhi, May 4, 2012.

A Joint Communique was issued highlighting the importance of joint Indo-Bangla celebrations to mark the 150th Birth Anniversary of Rabindranath Tagore after the visit of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh Sheikh Hasina to India in January, 2010. The decision to jointly celebrate the 150th Anniversary provided the two countries an opportunity to build a vibrant and forward looking relationship.

A National Committee (NC) under the Chairmanship of Prime Minister had been constituted on 27th April, 2010 to consider policies and lay down guidelines for the appropriate commemoration. It held its first meeting on 20th May, 2010. A National Implementation Committee (NIC) had also been constituted on 27th April, 2010 under the Chairmanship of Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee for chalk out the programmes and activities and to implement the decisions of the National Committee. The NIC had met twice in 2010 - on 5th May and 14th July. The third meeting of the NIC was held on 6th April, 2011 and the fourth meeting of NIC was held on 24th March, 2012. Several programmes and projects were approved by the NIC for a befitting commemoration of 150th Birth Anniversary of Rabindranath Tagore.

A delegation led by the then Secretary Culture, Government of India visited Dhaka in December, 2010 to chalk out the programmes of Joint Indo-Bangla Celebrations. Subsequently a delegation from Bangladesh also visited India in April, 2011 and further discussions was held on joint commemorations. The inaugural function of the commemoration in India was held on 7th May, 2011 in New Delhi to start the year-long joint celebrations. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Planning Minister of Bangladesh, Air Vice Marshal (Rtd.), Shri A. K. Khandker, Smt. Sonia Gandhi, Chairperson, National Advisory Council (NAC). Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Culture Minister Kumari Selja, Information & Broadcasting Minister Smt. Ambika Soni, External Affairs Minister Shri S. M. Krishna, HRD & Communications Minister Shri Kapil Sibal and President, ICCR Dr. Karan Singh participated in the inaugural programme.

Earlier, an inaugural function was also held on 6th May, 2011 in Dhaka, Bangladesh.

The National Implementation Committee had decided in its fourth meeting held on 24th March, 2012 that the joint commemoration will culminate with Closing Ceremonies to be organized in Dhaka on 6th May, 2012, and in New Delhi on 7th May, 2012. Accordingly, the Closing Ceremonies are being organized in Dhaka and New Delhi. Vice-President of India Shri M. Hamid Ansari will be the Chief Guest at the Closing Ceremony on 7th May, 2012 at Vigyan Bhawan, New Delhi. Several cultural programmes will also be organized by Indian and Bangaladeshi groups on 6th and 7th May, 2012 in Delhi as well as Dhaka.

During the year-long joint Indo-Bangla celebrations, several programmes involving various art forms like songs, dramas, recitation, poetry, kantha paintings etc., were organized in India and Bangladesh. The programmes have been attended by several dignitaries, high officials and top cultural artists of Bangladesh. The performances in packed auditoria have received rave reviews in practically all leading newspapers and electronic media of India and Bangladesh. The same have renewed the bonds of shared cultural heritage of the two countries.
225. Joint Press Interaction by External Affairs Minister and Foreign Minister of Bangladesh at the conclusion of first meeting of India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission.

New Delhi, May 7, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen of the media. I welcome you to this media interaction. As is usual, we will begin with opening remarks.

I would now request the External Affairs Minister of India Mr. S.M. Krishna to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister of India (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Dr. Dipu Moni, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Bangladesh, members of the respective delegations, friends from the media:

Foreign Affairs Minister Dr. Dipu Moni and I have just had a very useful and productive first meeting of the India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission.

This meeting is reflective of the qualitative transformation that India-Bangladesh relations have witnessed in recent years. Our relations now encompass every possible area of cooperation.

Dr. Dipu Moni and I have reviewed the progress in bilateral cooperation in all areas, including trade, connectivity, power, water resources, security, border management, infrastructure, people-to-people contacts, culture, environment, education among others.

We are happy that our mutual cooperation has resulted in commendable achievements in recent months. Some of these include:

- India is now facilitating 24-hour unfettered access to Bangladesh nationals at Dahagram and Angarporta through the Tin Bigha Area.
- The signing of the India-Bangladesh boundary strip maps by our Plenipotentiaries is almost complete, except for a few which are also likely to be completed very soon.
- The Coordinated Border Management Plan is now in operation, and will help to reduce incidents on the border, including illegal and criminal activities.
- Following the positive experience in Meghalaya, we hope to open new border haats along the International Border in the States of Tripura and Mizoram as well.
I am confident that these measures would act as catalysts in strengthening the excellent bonds of friendship existing at the level of the people of our two countries.

We reviewed our cooperation in the power sector. The work on power inter-grid connectivity is progressing, and we are hopeful that 500 MW power would flow from India to Bangladesh during the summer of 2013. We are also moving ahead with the setting up of a 1320 MW coal-based joint venture power plant which is expected to be commissioned by 2016. We welcome the participation of Bangladesh in power projects in India, particularly in the North-Eastern States of India.

We have made steady progress in the utilization of the US $ one billion Line of Credit extended by India to Bangladesh. Just yesterday, Hon. Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee announced in Dhaka that US$ 200 million of the Line of Credit would be converted into grants-in-aid for projects of priority to Bangladesh. Our focus now is to ensure timely delivery on the contracts that have been signed by the Government of Bangladesh. So far, projects worth more than US $ 810 million have been agreed upon, and five contracts worth US$ 83 million have been signed. The first consignment of buses has arrived in Dhaka and deliveries of railway rolling stock will start by the end of the year.

On the trade and investment front, the decision by India in 2011 to grant zero duty access to all goods from Bangladesh has opened new opportunities for expansion of bilateral trade. I understand that there has been a significant increase of textile exports from Bangladesh to India.

I have assured Dr. Dipu Moni that India remains committed to an early solution on the issue of sharing Teesta waters. Since water is a sensitive issue, in accordance with the traditions of consensual decision-making in India’s democratic polity, internal consultations are on amongst stakeholders.

On the Tipaimukh project, it has been agreed that a subgroup under the Joint Rivers Commission would be constituted to look into all aspects, including our Prime Minister's proposal for joint participation in the project.

Friends, there are few countries in the world whose destinies are as interlinked as ours. We share the longest land borders with each other. Many of us share the same religious beliefs, language, customs and aspirations. We deeply appreciate the initiative taken by the Government of Bangladesh to honour the 'people of India' and the 'Indian Armed Forces' for their contribution to the liberation of Bangladesh, a cause which is very close to our hearts.

The year-long joint celebrations of the 150th Birth Anniversary of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore is reflective of the common ethos of shared cultural and civilizational links. We are honoured that Dr. Dipu Moni would be representing her Government at the closing ceremony of the joint celebrations being held later today.

I take this opportunity to reiterate to Dr. Dipu Moni that India attaches the highest importance to our relations with Bangladesh. We desire to continue to fully utilize our geographic and economic complementarities to mutual benefit.

We desire to use all opportunities in a spirit of trust, understanding, accommodation, friendship and respect for each other's sovereignty.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: I now request Foreign Minister of Bangladesh Her Excellency Dr. Dipu Moni to make her opening remarks.

Foreign Minister of Bangladesh (Dr. Dipu Moni): Your Excellency, friends from the media, and delegations from both sides:

I am very happy to be here. The purpose of my visit here is two-fold. One is to attend this meeting, the first meeting of the Joint Consultative Commission, which is very important and we take this very seriously. You have heard from the statement made by His Excellency Mr. S.M. Krishna how extensive the talks have been. We have touched every aspect of our bilateral relationship. The other reason for my being in Delhi is obviously the joint celebration of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore's 150th birth anniversary celebrations and the conclusion of the year-long celebrations. I am happy and delighted to be representing the Government of Bangladesh in that ceremony.

We have gone through all the aspects, all the areas of cooperation. And we have noted with satisfaction the achievements that are there, especially in the areas of trade. Bangladeshi trade with India has gone up. We are happy about the import of cotton which is very important for our garments sector. The 24-hour unfettered access through the Tin Bigha Corridor to Dahagram and Angarpota has been achieved. And there are many other achievements. We have also noted with satisfaction the ongoing issue of connectivity, sub-regional cooperation, especially in the areas of water and power.

Indian side has reassured us about the river-linking project. We have been reassured, not just today but also yesterday, on this issue by the Indian Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee that the Himalayan rivers will not be part of this project. And Mr. S.M. Krishna has reassured that there will be no unilateral undertaking on the Himalayan rivers without consultation with Bangladesh.

On the Tipaimukh thing, the Joint Study Group is now working. And we have talked about our cooperation in water. We have raised our requests with Indian side about the early conclusion of the ratification of the LPA and the protocol, and also the Teesta agreement. We have been reassured that the Indian side is working on all these issues.

We are very happy with the outcome of this meeting, and we have spent a very fruitful afternoon, running through the entire range of issues on our bilateral agenda. I will return to Dhaka with the confidence that the vision of our two Prime Ministers for collaboration between our two countries for the betterment of the lives of our peoples is fully on track. I am confident that our relationship will be further strengthened and deepened in the days ahead.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to take a few questions.

Question: My question is addressed to the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh. In this bilateral relationship, connectivity is an important component. So, while reviewing the relations, have you come to any kind of resolution on the transit issue which India has been asking for long? Can you specify on this transit issue what has actually happened in the meeting?

Foreign Minister of Bangladesh: We have discussed about the connectivity issue, issue relating to transit. Both sides are working on this issue. On our side, a lot of work has been done. So, we believe that it has to be done in a sustainable manner. It is not just doing one component or the other. You have to do the whole thing. So, we are working on this, and we are very much hopeful that it will be done.

Question: This is for the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh. Regarding the Line of Credit, the Indian Foreign Minister pointed that projects worth US$ 810 million have been approved which has not yet been signed. It has been ... (Inaudible)... How do you see the progress on the Line of Credit that has been offered to Bangladesh? What are your expectations? Could it be expedited in the next one and a half years in the remainder of the term of the current Government in Dhaka?

Foreign Minister of Bangladesh: I think now it has reached a stage where it will not take much time because all the groundwork, all the work that both sides needed to conclude, we have already done that. So, I think it will be now done quickly.

Question: The relations between India and Bangladesh which are already extremely good, will gather height once the Teesta agreement is signed. Thousands of Bangladeshi people are eagerly waiting for this agreement. When will it be done?

External Affairs Minister of India: The Teesta agreement is being talked about since 2009, perhaps a little earlier also. We are trying to develop a political consensus in India. It is important that the views of all those who are dependent on the waters are taken into account and the burden is shared fairly and equitably. Meanwhile, there is no change in the ground situation. The waters are flowing, and in the last technical level meeting held in Kolkata in February this year, both sides exchanged data at Dalia in Bangladesh and Gazaldoba in India. We look forward to making progress on finishing an agreement on Teesta water sharing at the earliest.

Official Spokesperson: With that we come to the conclusion of this event.

Thank you very much.

226. Remakrs of External Affairs Minister to Media at the conclusion of the First Meeting of the India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission.

New Delhi, May 7, 2012.

Your Excellency Dr Dipu Moni, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Bangladesh,
Friends from the media,

Foreign Affairs Minister Dr Dipu Moni and I have just had a very useful and productive first meeting of the India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission (JCC).

2. This meeting is reflective of the qualitative transformation that India-Bangladesh relations have witnessed in recent years. Our relations now encompass every possible area of cooperation.

3. Dr Dipu Moni and I have reviewed the progress in bilateral cooperation in all areas, including trade, connectivity, power, water resources, security, border management, infrastructure, people to people contacts, culture, environment, education, among others.

4. We are happy that our mutual cooperation has resulted in commendable achievements in recent months. Some of these include,

• India is now facilitating 24 hour unfettered access to Bangladesh nationals at Dahagram and Angarporta through the Tin Bigha Area.

• The signing of the India-Bangladesh boundary strip maps by our Plenipotentiaries is almost complete, except for a few which are also likely to be completed very soon.

• The Coordinated Border Management Plan is now in operation, and will help to reduce incidents on the border, including illegal and criminal activities,

• Following the positive experience in Meghalaya, we hope to open new border haats along the International Border in the States of Tripura and Mizoram as well.

5. I am confident that these measures would act as catalysts in strengthening the excellent bonds of friendship existing at the level of the people of our two countries.

6. We reviewed our cooperation in the power sector. The work on power inter-grid connectivity is progressing and we are hopeful that 500 MW power would flow from India to Bangladesh during the summer of 2013. We are also moving ahead with the setting up of 1320 MW coal based joint venture power plant which is expected to be commissioned by 2016. We welcome the participation of Bangladesh in power projects in India, particularly in the North-Eastern states of India.

7. We have made steady progress in the utilisation of the US $ one billion Line of Credit extended by India to Bangladesh. Just yesterday, Hon'ble Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee announced in Dhaka that $ 200 million of the Line of Credit would be converted into grants-in-aid for projects of priority to Bangladesh. Our focus now is to ensure timely delivery on the contracts that have been signed by the Government of Bangladesh. So far, projects worth more than $ 810 million have been agreed upon and five contracts worth US$ 83 million have been signed. The first consignment of buses has arrived in Dhaka and deliveries of railway rolling stock will start by the end of the year.

8. On the trade and investment front, the decision by India in 2011 to grant zero duty access to all goods from Bangladesh has opened new opportunities for expansion of bilateral trade. I understand that there has been a significant increase of textile exports from Bangladesh to India.

9. I have assured Dr Dipu Moni that India remains committed to an early solution on the issue of sharing Teesta waters. Since water is a sensitive issue, in accordance with the traditions of consensual decision-making in India's democratic polity, internal consultations are on amongst stakeholders.

10. On the Tipaimukh project, it has been agreed that a Sub-Group under the Joint Rivers Commission would be constituted to look into all aspects, including our Prime Minister's proposal for joint participation in the project.

11. Friends, there are few countries in the world whose destinies are as interlinked as ours. We share the longest land borders with each other. Many of us share the same religious beliefs, language, customs and aspirations. We deeply appreciate the initiative taken by the Government of Bangladesh to honour the 'people of India' and the 'Indian Armed Forces' for their contribution to the liberation of Bangladesh, a cause which is very close to our hearts.

12. The year-long joint celebrations of the 150th Birth Anniversary of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore is reflective of the common ethos of shared cultural and civilisational links. We are honoured that Dr Dipu Moni would be representing her Government at the closing ceremony of the joint celebrations being held later today.

13. I take this opportunity to reiterate to Dr Dipu Moni that India attaches the highest importance to our relations with Bangladesh. We desire to continue to fully utilise our geographic and economic complementarities to mutual benefit.

14. We desire to use all opportunities in a spirit of trust, understanding, accommodation, friendship and respect for each other’s sovereignty.

Thank you.
227. Joint Statement by India and Bangladesh on First Meeting of the India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission.

New Delhi, May 7, 2012.

The first meeting of the India-Bangladesh Joint Consultative Commission (JCC), as envisaged in the Framework Agreement on Cooperation for Development signed during the visit of the Prime Minister of India to Bangladesh, was held in New Delhi on 7 May, 2012. The Indian delegation was led by Shri S. M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister. The Bangladesh delegation was led by Dr. Dipu Moni, Minister for Foreign Affairs.

2. The Ministers reviewed the progress in the bilateral relations between the two countries since the visit of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh to India in January 2010 and the visit by the Prime Minister of India to Bangladesh in September 2011. They agreed that greater bilateral cooperation between their countries will promote inclusive growth and development, and contribute to peace, prosperity and stability in their countries and the region.

Political and Security Cooperation

3. The Ministers expressed deep satisfaction at the current state of India-Bangladesh relations which were marked by warmth, cordiality and mutual respect. They noted that India and Bangladesh had entered a new phase in their bilateral relations and had achieved commendable progress in their efforts to further strengthen their friendly ties. There were high expectations for their further growth and development. Both sides welcomed regular high level exchanges, which had helped promote deeper understanding and friendship and the broadening of the areas of cooperation between the two countries. In this context, they welcomed the visit of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh to Tripura on 11-12 January, 2012.

4. Recalling the visit of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh to Tin Bigha on 19 October, 2012, the two sides expressed satisfaction at the facilitation of the 24-hour access for Bangladesh nationals.

5. The two Ministers welcomed the recent meetings of the Home Ministers, Home Secretaries and Directors General of the BSF and BGB. They welcomed the commencement of implementation of the Coordinated Border Management Plan (CBMP) to control cross-border illegal activities, and crimes as well as for maintenance of peace and harmony along the border. They expressed confidence that it would enhance cooperation between the border guarding forces of the two countries, and enable them to manage the identified vulnerable areas with a view to preventing criminal activities, illegal movement, acts of violence and loss of lives along the border areas. They also noted that the fencing work in
6. The Ministers noted that the signing of the Protocol to the Land Boundary Agreement had paved the way for settlement of all remaining land boundary issues. They agreed on the need for early implementation of the Protocol, including the early signing of the strip maps pertaining to Adverse Possessions and recently demarcated segments.

7. The Ministers noted that the legal framework for bilateral security cooperation would be completed with the signing of the Extradition Treaty. They agreed that both sides would expedite efforts to conclude the Treaty at the earliest. They also reiterated their commitment that the territory of either side would not be allowed for activities inimical to the other and resolved not to allow their respective territory to be used for training, sanctuary and other operations by domestic or foreign terrorist/militant and insurgent organizations and their operatives. They also rejected extremism, violence and terrorism and agreed to cooperate proactively in combating these evils.

8. To further strengthen bilateral cooperation, they agreed to intensify consultations by holding annual meetings at the level of the Foreign/External Affairs Ministers (Joint Consultative Commission) and Foreign Secretaries (Foreign Office Consultations). It was also agreed that biannual consultations at the level of Director General/ Joint Secretary would be institutionalized between the two Foreign Ministries.

Trade Connectivity

9. The Ministers noted that increase in trade and investment between the two countries was mutually beneficial, and pledged to continue their efforts to promote balanced and broad-based trade, including border trade. Both sides agreed that the decision by India in 2011 to grant zero duty access to all goods (except 25 items on the Negative List) had opened new opportunities for expansion of Bangladesh exports to India. They welcomed the outcome of the recent meeting of the Commerce Secretaries and the renewal of the Trade Agreement by three years. They agreed that both sides should similarly extend the validity of the Protocol on Inland Water Transit and Trade.

10. Both sides called for more vigorous efforts to upgrade border infrastructure, including Land Customs Stations and Integrated Check Posts, and removal of non-tariff barriers on both sides. The Ministers welcomed the inauguration of a second border haat on the Bangladesh - Meghalaya border and the establishment of four border haats on the Bangladesh - Tripura border. They noted that both sides had succeeded in arriving at an understanding on the Mutual Cooperation Agreement between Bureau of Indian Standards and the Bangladesh Standards Institute and stressed that it should be concluded at an early date.
11. The Ministers noted with satisfaction the inauguration in the presence of the Finance Ministers of the two countries of a Car Pass System at Petrapole-Benapole in January 2012, for movement of cargo vehicles to the Land Custom Station of each other’s countries. The Ministers welcomed the agreement to commence a bus service on the Dhaka-Shillong-Guwahati sector. It was agreed to expeditiously conclude the Motor Vehicles Agreement for regulation of passenger and cargo traffic.

12. Both sides reiterated their commitment to the early finalization of the MoU for construction of the Akhaura-Agartala railway link, to be built with grant-in-aid assistance from India. They directed that infrastructure development works and land acquisition activities be taken up urgently.

13. The two sides agreed that necessary formalities for use of Chittagong and Mongla seaports for movement of goods to and from India through water, rail and road would be completed urgently.

Development Cooperation

14. The Ministers reviewed the status of implementation of projects under the $1 billion Indian Line of Credit. They noted that projects amounting to US $ 810.46 million had been agreed upon and were under implementation. They directed the concerned Ministries to expedite procedures and finalise the preparation of Detailed Project Reports (DPRs) for new projects so that the benefits could reach the people. Bangladesh welcome the announcement made by India during the visit of Finance Minister to Bangladesh on May 5-6, 2012, to convert an amount of USD 200 million from credit to grants-in-aid for projects of priority to Bangladesh.

15. The two sides agreed to expedite the implementation of development projects including construction of a Cultural Centre, undertaking feasibility study for upgradation of Dhaka - Chittagong railway line, setting up of IT labs in 64 model schools and IT centres at Military Institute for Science & Technology, Bangladesh Public Administration Training Centre and Bangladesh Police Academy and provision of solar lamps to 2800 families affected by the Sidr Cyclone.

16. The Ministers noted with satisfaction that preparatory activities for the construction of a bridge across Feni River were underway and directed its implementation as early as possible.

17. The Ministers agreed to develop the inland container terminal at Ashuganj with Indian assistance and to commence transshipments at Ashuganj port.

Bilateral Cooperation in Water Resources and Power

18. Both sides welcomed the recent exchange of data on the flow of the Teesta River at the technical level. They reiterated their commitment to the early finalization of agreements for water-sharing of Teesta and Feni rivers. The Indian side reiterated its commitment that it would not take any unilateral decision on the Himalayan component of the proposed River Interlinking Project which may affect Bangladesh. Both sides agreed to constitute a sub-group under the Joint River Commission (JRC) that would go into all aspects of the Tipaimukh Hydroelectric Project.

19. The Ministers welcomed the Power Purchase Agreement signed between BPDB and NVVN for purchase of 250MW power from India by Bangladesh as well as the decision of the Government of Bangladesh to shortly invite tenders for the purchase of an additional 250MW power from India. Both sides agreed to complete the pending administrative formalities for commissioning the inter-grid connectivity by July 2013. They also welcomed the establishment of a Joint Venture between NTPC and BPDB to set up a 1320MW thermal power plant in Bagerhat and directed them to complete its installation expeditiously. They also directed the Joint Venture to speed up the conclusion of a feasibility report for a similar power plant in Chittagong. Both sides welcomed the constitution of a Technical Team to conduct feasibility study for transmission of power from India to the Eastern part of Bangladesh and options for interconnection for evacuation of power.

20. India welcomed the participation of Bangladesh in power projects in India, particularly in the North-Eastern states of India.

Sub-Regional Cooperation

22. The two Ministers welcomed the formation of technical-level teams for sub-regional cooperation in Water & Power and Connectivity & Transit by both the countries and looked forward to the convening of the meetings at an early date.

People to People Exchanges

23. Both sides expressed great satisfaction at the successful hosting of the year-long festivities of the 150th Birth Anniversary of Rabindranath Tagore in each other's countries. Both sides looked forward to jointly marking the 90th anniversary of the publication of Bidrohi by Poet Kazi Nazrul Islam.

24. The two Ministers agreed to expand steps to increase people to people exchanges between the two countries and directed that the Revised Travel Arrangements be finalized at an early date.
25. The Ministers noted with satisfaction that the Joint Empowered Group on Maitree Express would meet on 9 May, 2012 to improve passenger comfort and reduce travel time.

26. Both sides agreed to hold the next meeting of the Joint Consultative Commission in
228. Information supplied by the Ministry of Home Affairs to the Rajya Sabha on the fencing of the India-Bangladesh Border.

New Delhi, May 9, 2012.

Out of total of 2579 km of fencing sanctioned under Phase-II project along Indo-Bangladesh Border (IBB), 1871 km fencing has been completed. In addition, work in 160 km is in progress. Further, under Phase-III, replacement of entire fencing (861 km) constructed under Phase-I project was sanctioned. 771 km of replacement work has been completed and work in 21 km is in progress. As per the present approval, the above works were targeted to be completed by March, 2012. However, the balance works have been spilled over primarily due to on-ground constraints i.e. pending land acquisition, forest/wildlife clearance, undemarcated border/ adverse possession issues with Bangladesh, habitation up to zero line in some cases, nature of terrain in some places - riverine, low lying etc. The balance works are likely to be completed on resolution of above constraints.

Out of 77.72 km. (Assam), 272.17 km (Meghalaya) and 856.00 km (Tripura) sanctioned fencing under Phase-II Project, fencing to the extent of 73.38 km (Assam), 126.07 km (Meghalaya) and 746.70 km (Tripura) has been completed. In addition, work is in progress in 0.84 km (Assam), 62.92 km (Meghalaya) and 31.31 km (Tripura).

An amount of Rs.2195.67 crore has been spent till March 31, 2012 on fencing works along Indo-Bangladesh border.

Whenever damage to the barbed wire fencing along Indo-Bangladesh border is reported, Central Public Works Department (CPWD), takes up the maintenance/repairs of the works.

New Delhi, July 24, 2012.

Your Excellency, Foreign Secretary Mijarul Quayes; High Commissioner Tariq Karim; and Members of the Bangladesh delegation

At the outset, let me extend to you a warm welcome and wish you a pleasant stay in India.

Our two sides have held substantive interactions at the first meeting of the Joint Consultative Commission (JCC) held in May in New Delhi. We agreed on some important initiatives with the objective of developing and strengthening our cooperation in various areas. I am glad that as envisaged at the JCC our annual Foreign Office Consultations are being held with a view to further intensifying our bilateral engagement.

Some notable developments have taken place since the JCC meeting. The Sub-Group on Infrastructure met in June to examine the infrastructure at the Land Customs Stations and the proposed ‘Border Haats’ along the Tripura-Bangladesh border. A review meeting of the Line of Credit was held in June in New Delhi with the objective of fast tracking implementation of the projects. Our Shipping Secretaries have met and agreed to renew the ‘Protocol on Inland Water Transit and Trade’ by a further two years. The two sides are cooperating in facilitating the return of mortal remains of freedom fighters of 1971 and a delegation from Bangladesh was in India recently to discuss modalities with the concerned Ministries and state governments. The Joint Technical Committee set up to explore the possibility of power exchanges between eastern side of Bangladesh and India and to recommend associate transmission systems on both sides of border met recently. A number of high level visits at Ministerial level have also taken place during this period adding to momentum to our bilateral relations. All these are very positive developments in a short time.

Excellency,

India attaches the highest importance to its relations with Bangladesh and seeks a deeper and a more dynamic bilateral partnership. We approach our relations with the utmost sincerity and believe that our destinies are interlinked.

You would agree that we are witnessing a qualitative transformation in virtually all areas of bilateral cooperation making our relationship a truly multi-faceted one. The Joint Communiqué of 2010 and the Joint Statement of 2011 provide us with a blueprint for comprehensive partnership based on a mutuality of interests. I am happy to note that we have already made considerable progress in the implementation of the decisions taken by the Prime Ministers of our two countries following the landmark visit of Sheikh Hasina to India in 2010 and Dr. Manmohan Singh to Bangladesh in 2011.

I understand there are three documents that are at the final stages of consideration by our two sides. These are the 'Protocol to amend the Double Taxation Avoidance Convention' (DTAC), a comprehensive 'MOU on Health Cooperation' and a MOU on implementation of 'Small Development Projects'. I would seek your intervention to have these signed as early as possible.

I am confident that today's discussions would provide fresh impetus and direction to the ever-expanding and multifaceted cooperation between our two countries.

If the agenda before us meets with your approval, I would suggest we consider the issues on our agenda item-wise.

New Delhi, July 24, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): ... the Foreign Secretary had Foreign Office Consultations with his counterpart from Bangladesh. These were held in a very cordial, warm and constructive atmosphere. The two sides had comprehensive discussions on the entire gamut of bilateral relations. This includes security related matters, border management, counterterrorism, trade and investment, water resources, power cooperation including renewable energy, connectivity, development cooperation, and increasing people-to-people ties.

That is what I have in terms of formal announcements. I am willing to take a few questions if any of you have any.

Question: Was it held in Delhi?

Official Spokesperson: Yes, it was held in Delhi this morning.

Question: You said water resources was also discussed. Was Teesta problem also discussed and has anything come up?

Official Spokesperson: When we mentioned all aspects I am certain that it includes the issue that you refer to. Yes, it was raised. You are aware of our position on this that we are in the process of working out an internal consensus on this, and when we are ready, we will take it forward.

Question: About Bangladesh, how big was the delegation from our side? Which Departments were represented? Has anything conclusive come out of this meeting? Is there going to be any high level visit between the two countries in the near future?

Official Spokesperson: Yes. Both the Indian and the Bangladeshi delegations were composite ones. That means they were not only from the Ministry of External Affairs but also from other Ministries - the Home Ministry, the Commerce Ministry, the Shipping and Transport Ministry, these are the ones which I can recall off hand. As regards the meeting and its outcome, first of all I would like to mention to you that this meeting is to take forward the policies that are already agreed to by the two Prime Ministers last year and the two Foreign Ministers at the JCM meeting which was held in May. So, it is more a policy implementation meeting than a policy formulation.

You have also asked about likely visits. We are expecting the Commerce Minister to visit Bangladesh in December for an India Trade Fair. And that will be a major activity that we intend to focus on during the rest of the year. There are also other smaller visits of various officials that are likely to take place. These are just being worked out. The major visit that we have next on the calendar is the visit of the Commerce and Industry Minister.

Question: There have been reports about Border Haats between Bangladesh and India? Was that issue discussed? has there been any expansion in bilateral trade between India and Bangladesh

Official Spokesperson: You are talking about Border Haats I think. These were opened in Meghalaya and both the sides seem to think that they have been very successful. As you are aware, since then we have suggested that these should be opened in other States. And careful attention is being given by both the sides to opening these elsewhere. We hope to have some good news at some stage in the future because the experience of both Bangladesh and India of these Border Haats has been a very happy one.

To respond to your second question, since the agreements came into being we have not completed a year. So, it is difficult to make an assessment of an increase in trade because you can only do it for a comparable period in the previous year. But yes there have been increases in various areas, for example readymade garments. Also there are various other areas where Bangladesh, as you are aware now Bangladesh enjoys duty free access to India in virtually every area except for alcohol and maybe one other thing. Therefore, there is likely to be an increase in trade activity. The figures will be known at the end of the year and we will certainly share them with you.

Question: Bangladesh is setting up a nuclear power plant close to Indian border. First of all, is this with the help of the Chinese? Has this issue been raised? What is the status of that? It is in the plan stage now.

Official Spokesperson: This is not a new story that Bangladesh, like India, is interested in nuclear energy. Nuclear energy we in India feel is a clean form of energy, it is also in the context of requirement of energy security various countries are looking at it. There are thirty countries in the world which have nuclear power plants including India. And Bangladesh has been looking at it. I do not want to get into the detail but my understanding is that they have signed memorandum of understanding with the Russian Federation on this, and perhaps they will be better placed to explain to you what type of reactor, where it is, etc. But I would just like to tell you based on my own experience of such matters that these things take a long gestation period. A nuclear power plant takes anything between six to ten years to come up. So, we are talking of a timeframe which is long, but I would suggest that you may like to address your question about the specifics of that to our colleagues and friends in Bangladesh.
Question: But the site is close to the Indian border.

Official Spokesperson: I think there are IAEA conventions on the location of nuclear sites and trans-boundary issues. We are very familiar with it because India is a very active member in the International Atomic Energy Agency and we understand what are the requirements for these and what countries need to do. At this stage, as I said, ten years in advance of something, let us not jump the gun on that. Let us wait for decisions and there will be discussions if they are required.

Thank you very much.

230. Visit of former President of Bangladesh Lieutenant General (Rtd.) H.M. Ershad to India.

New Delhi, August 14, 2012.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesperson said

"The former President of Bangladesh Lieutenant General (Rtd.) H.M. Ershad is on a visit to India. General Ershad's visit is part of our ongoing engagement with a democratic and multi-party polity in Bangladesh.

General Ershad called on Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh on August 14, 2012. The Prime Minister conveyed the high priority that the Government and people of India attach to developing the friendliest of relations with Bangladesh, which is an important neighbour of India.

General Ershad will also visit Ajmer Sharif on August 15-16, 2012. He is scheduled to call on the President of India on August 17, 2012.

His last visit to India was in 2010 to attend the Golden Jubilee celebrations of the National Defence College of which Gen. Ershad is a distinguished alumnus."

Press Release on the Director General level talks between India and Bangladesh to control drug trafficking.

New Delhi, October 4, 2012.

India and Bangladesh have agreed to enhance mutual cooperation through effective sustained steps to control drug trafficking. This was decided at the third Director General level talks between Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB) India and Department of Narcotics Control (DNC) Bangladesh held in New Delhi today. Both sides agreed to continue sharing of actionable intelligence and adopt a coordinated strategy to prevent cross border drug trafficking. It was also decided that the best practices in curbing drug trafficking and demand reduction will be shared bilaterally. Both sides expressed their commitment towards their obligations under the different international and bilateral agreements, protocols, conventions, declarations and resolutions in letter and spirit.

It was also agreed to enhance cooperation in capacity building by organizing training programmes as well as sending resource persons in combating drug trafficking.

Both sides shared the concern of the growing menace of Narcotic Drugs. The existing cooperation and information sharing between NCB and DNC was noted with satisfaction. India and Bangladesh also expressed concern over growing menace of synthetic drugs/pharmaceuticals preparations containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and precursor chemicals which are susceptible to misuse and are the fastest growing drugs of abuse today.

Both sides agreed that the Directorate General level talks between NCB, India and DNC, Bangladesh should be held annually and the next meeting would be held in Dhaka sometimes in June next year.

The Indian delegation was led by Shri Ajay Chadha, Director General, NCB, while the Bangladesh Delegation was lead by Mr. Mohammad Iqbal, Director General, DNC, Bangladesh.
232. Press Release issued by the President's Secretariat on the Call by Bangladesh Youth Delegation on the President.

New Delhi, October 8, 2012.

A 100 member delegation of youth from Bangladesh called on the President on October 8, 2012 at Rashtrapati Bhavan.

The President appreciated the initiative taken by the High Commission of India in Dhaka for organizing this visit and pointed out that half of the population in both the countries belongs to the younger generation. He said that human beings from all countries across the world have only one religion, that is, the religion of humanism.

The High Commission of India in Dhaka in co-ordination with the Ministry of Youth Affairs & Sports organized the visit of the delegation to India and arranged for them to tour to places of historical, educational, technical and industrial interest. The basic objective of the programme is to foster

233. Joint Press Statement on the Home Secretary Level talks between India and Bangladesh.

Dhaka, October 19, 2012.

The 13th meeting of the Home Secretaries of India and Bangladesh was held on 16-17 October 2012 at Dhaka. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. R.K. Singh, Union Home Secretary, Government of India. The Bangladesh delegation was led by Mr. C. Q. K. Mustaq Ahmed, Senior Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of Bangladesh.

The two Home Secretaries recalled the excellent and friendly bilateral relations existing between India and Bangladesh and reiterated their commitment to further take these multi-faceted relations forward. They noted that the exchange of visits by the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and India in January 2010 and September 2011 respectively had infused a new dynamism in the bilateral relations and opened up new avenues for cooperation between the two countries.

The two Home Secretaries expressed satisfaction at the visit of both delegation to Agartala - Akhaura Integrated Check Post (ICP) to review the existing infrastructure, and noted that this would facilitate trade between Bangladesh and India, particularly North-East. They also welcomed the opening of several Land Ports/Integrated Check Posts for bilateral trade between Bangladesh and India. Both sides agreed to allow developmental work including construction of ICPs/LCSSs within 150 yards of zero line. Both sides also agreed to constitute a high-level team to monitor development of border infrastructure.

They took note of the outcome of the 12th JWG meeting on security issues held on 15 October 2012, wherein the two sides discussed issues such as land boundary demarcation, border management, security issues, implementation of agreements, visa and consular related issues and capacity building etc.

Indian Home Secretary conveyed the appreciation of Government of India to Government of Bangladesh for extending cooperation for addressing the security concerns of India, particularly in dealing with the Indian Insurgent Groups. Both sides reiterated their commitment to act against the elements inimical to both countries.

Both sides expressed satisfaction at the smooth operation of Coordinated Border Management Plan (CBMP) and agreed to increase number of joint patrolling with a view to curbing criminal activities along the border.

They noted with satisfaction that the implementation of the Coordinated Border Management Plan has reduced the number of incidents along the border. They expressed confidence that increased number of coordinated patrolling would enhance cooperation between the border guarding forces of the two countries, and enable them to manage the identified vulnerable areas with a view to preventing criminal activities, illegal movement, acts of violence and loss of lives along the border areas. As an additional measure for better border management, both sides agreed to revive the mechanism for regular consultations between the Deputy Commissioner (DC) District Magistrate (DM) of border districts for resolving local issues.

Both sides agreed to further intensify the activities of the different nodal points in different areas of cooperation such as human trafficking, drugs, INTERPOL, etc. They expressed satisfaction at the regular interaction of different bilateral mechanisms, including BGB-BSF DG level meetings, Narcotics DG level meetings, JWG on Security issues etc. and noted that these regular exchanges helped to enhance understanding and resolve issues for mutual satisfaction.

Both sides agreed to extend cooperation for apprehension of wanted criminals and fugitives and in this regard, Bangladesh Home Secretary once again urged for immediate tracking, arresting, and handing over the killers of the father of the Nation, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. The Indian Home Secretary assured that all possible assistance would be extended in this regard.

Both sides welcomed the recent meeting of Directors General of the respective Narcotics Controlling agencies held in New Delhi in the first week of October 2012 and expressed satisfaction at the level of cooperation for the seizure and curbing of drugs particularly Phensydile. It was agreed to expand and strengthen further cooperation in this regard to curb the menace of drugs.

Both sides noted that the implementation of three agreements (Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons and Combating Terrorism, organized crime and illicit drug trafficking) signed during the visit of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to India in 2010 has been satisfactory. Both sides agreed to take immediate measures for repatriation of released prisoners and victims of trafficking.

Both sides agreed to hold a meeting at an early date to discuss liberalization of visa procedures to facilitate people-to-people contact and movement of people on both sides. India has offered and Bangladesh has agreed to avail of training courses for Bangladesh Police Personnel in Indian Institutions.

Both sides discussed the ratification of the LBA-1974 by the Government of India and the protocol signed in 2011 and noted that early ratification of the same would pave the way for implementations of the provisions of the agreement and lay the long pending boundary related issues at rest. Both sides agreed to exchange strip maps already signed in a time bound manner.

The Home Secretary also handed over an invitation letter to his counterpart inviting him to visit India. The Home Secretary also invited the Home Secretary of Bangladesh for the 14th Home Secretary level talks at a mutually convenient date and time to be held in 2013 in India.

236. Conolences of Prime Minister at loss of lives in fire tragedy in Bangladesh.

New Delhi, November 25, 2012.

I am deeply saddened at the loss of life resulting from the fire in a garment factory outside Dhaka. On behalf of the government of India, I express to the government and people of Bangladesh our sincerest condolences at this tragedy. Our thoughts and prayers are with the bereaved families.

The condolence message was occasioned by a major fire in a garment factory outside of Bangladesh Capital city, in which at least 112 people were killed.
237. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on the Visit of Begum Khaleda Zia, Chairperson of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party to India.

New Delhi, October 26, 2012.

In response to a question from the Media on the visit of Leader of the Opposition and Chairperson of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) Begum Khaleda Zia, the Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said:

Begum Khaleda Zia, Leader of the Opposition and Chairperson of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP and former Prime Minister of Bangladesh, would be visiting India at the invitation of the External Affairs Minister from October 28 to November 3, 2012.

During her visit, Begum Khaleda Zia is scheduled to call on the President and the Prime Minister. She would also meet with the External Affairs Minister, Leader of the Opposition in Lok Sabha, National Security Adviser and Foreign Secretary. She is also expected to visit Ajmer Sharif.

Begum Khaleda Zia’s last official visit to India was in 2006 as the then Prime Minister of Bangladesh. The visit is part of our ongoing engagement with a democratic and multiparty polity in Bangladesh. It would provide an opportunity to exchange views on all matters of mutual interest with a view to building upon the positive momentum in India-Bangladesh relations.

238. Extract from the Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the visit of Begum Khaleda Zia.

New Delhi, October 30, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): ........

Question: Sir, Begum Khaleda Zia met the External Affairs Minister today and there was a discussion. She met the PM also. What were the issues discussed between the External Affairs Minister and Begum Khaleda Zia and also between her and the PM? Was the issue of terrorism taken up?

Official Spokesperson: You are aware that Begum Khaleda Zia is visiting India at the invitation of the External Affairs Minister and it is obviously normal that she should meet the External Affairs Minister. The visit of Begum Khaleda Zia is part of our ongoing attempts of engagement with a democratic and multiparty polity in Bangladesh. The discussions covered all areas of mutual interest. They were expansive in nature, both with the Prime Minister and with the External Affairs Minister. They were extremely cordial. Perhaps I can best sum it up with what Begum Zia said at the end of her discussion with the External Affairs Minister. She said that this marks a new beginning and let us look forward and not into the rearview mirror. Perhaps that encapsulates the theme of this entire discussion over the last two days. I hope I have answered your question. Or do you want the specifics?

Question: ...(Inaudible)...

Official Spokesperson: I said all issues of mutual interest. I would like to specify for your record that the issue regarding mutual sharing of river waters did come up as did the issue of border management, as did the issue relating to terrorism and insurgent groups, as did the issue of bilateral trade, as did the issue of the immense commonality in terms of people-to-people contacts and cultural relations between the two countries. Every aspect of these issues came up.

Question: I will come back to the issue of Begum Zia’s visit. Yesterday in her talks with the hon. Prime Minister she assured that the ground of Bangladesh will not be used for any insurgent acts or terrorism. I understand that the Indian side, especially the Prime Minister also heard this assurance. Is the Government of India assured that if she is voted to power she will keep her commitment? What is the understanding of the Indian side?

Official Spokesperson: I will not get into speculative outcomes of the future. But yes, she did mention yesterday, and she reiterated it today in the meeting with the External Affairs Minister, that the soil of Bangladesh will not be allowed to be used for violent activities or insurgent activities against India. She did reiterate this again today. As regards the other question, I think it is not fair on my part, I am not a soothsayer to talk about the future. So, I will desist from responding to that.

Question: Going back to Khaleda Zia’s visit again and taking a cue from the earlier question, regarding Khaleda Zia’s assurance on terrorism and insurgent groups, and given the track record of her Government during 2001 to 2006, how convinced are you this time?

Official Spokesperson: I think the metaphor that she spoke on recently encapsulates it all. ‘Do not look into the rearview mirror, look forward’.

Question: What will India think to resolve the problems between Bangladesh and India like border killing, water sharing, and other such problems?

Official Spokesperson: On water sharing I presume you are referring to Teesta. If that is so, Prime Minister as well as the External Affairs Minister have indicated that we are in the process of building a political consensus in India. Our External Affairs Minister also explained to Begum Khaleda Zia the contours of his engagement on this matter, and assured that it is our intention to continue this process. As for the present, water from the Teesta flows into Bangladesh unhindered and uninterrupted.

239.  Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the close economic ties between India and Bhutan.

New Delhi, February 3, 2012.

Bhutan has expressed happiness over acceptance of their request of exemption from application of any export bans on essential commodities. The Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles, Shri Anand Sharma, during his meeting with Mr. Lyonpo Khandu Wangchuk, Minister for Economic Affairs of Bhutan, today, informed that Director General of Foreign trade has issued notification exempting Bhutan from the application of export ban on Milk Powder, Wheat, Edible Oil, Pulses and Non-Basmati Rice with annual limits indicated by the Bhutanese side. “India values the special relationship with Bhutan and we will be happy to expand our multifaceted cooperation which already covers key sectors such as hydropower, health, education, human resource development, media, telecom, ICT and infrastructure” said Shri Anand Sharma.

Both leaders expressed satisfaction that progress in meeting the target of developing 10,000 MW of hydropower capacity in Bhutan by 2020 is on schedule. Bhutan has an estimated hydropower potential of 30,000 MW with a little over 1,472 MW harnessed. Three major hydroelectric power projects (HEPs) have been built with Indian assistance in Bhutan - 336 MW Chukha, 60 MW Kurichhu and 1020 MW Tala HEPs. In July 2006, India and Bhutan signed an Agreement wherein India agreed to develop and import 5000 MW of electricity from Bhutan by 2020. This target was revised to 10,000 MW during PM’s visit to Bhutan in May 2008.

Bhutan has been requesting for Ghasuapara and Dalu in Meghalaya on Indo-Bangladesh border as on exit/entry points for Bhutan’s trade with Bangladesh. Shri Anand Sharma informed that the Letter of Exchange (LOE) has been signed for allowing LCSs from 1st February, 2012. Similarly, The Letter of Exchange (LoE) to amend the Letter of Guarantee (LoG) under the India-Bhutan Agreement on Trade, Commerce and Transit has been finalised for implementation from 01.02.2012.

Total trade between the two countries has been increasing. Total exports to Bhutan were $ 176.00 million while total imports from Bhutan were $ 201.57 million during 2010-11. India’s trade balance with Bhutan has turned negative from 2006 i.e. India imports more than it exports to Bhutan. Both the Minister expressed the confidence that the trade can be diversified and also be doubled in less than 5 years.

Political Developments in Maldives

New Delhi, February 7, 2012.

We have noted the decision of President Mohamed Nasheed to resign in favour of Vice President Dr. Mohamed Waheed. This is an internal matter of the Maldives, to be resolved by Maldivians. We hope that all issues will be resolved in a peaceful and democratic manner.

India has traditionally enjoyed close ties of friendship and cooperation with the Maldives. We remain committed to extending the fullest support and cooperation to the Government of Maldives in its endeavour to promote peace and progress in the Maldives and the prosperity and well being of its people.

We continue to closely monitor the situation in the Maldives and understand that the Indian expatriate community there is safe.

February 8, 2012.

The Prime Minister has assured the new President of Maldives Dr. Mohamed Waheed of continued support to the Maldivian people and cooperation with the Government of Maldives. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh in his felicitation letter to President Dr. Waheed said India is committed working with the Government of Maldives for the continued security and prosperity of both the countries.

The text of the Prime Minister’s letter is as follows:

"I take this opportunity to extend my warm felicitations to you on your assumption of office as President of the Maldives.

As a close and friendly neighbour, India will, as always, continue to support the Maldivian people’s efforts to build a stable, peaceful and prosperous country. Our two countries share a common destiny and have common security interests, India is committed to working with you and the Government in Maldives to further enhance our close, bilateral cooperation to mutual benefit and for the continued security, progress and prosperity of our two countries."

Foreign Secretary’s remarks to Media in Maldives after his meetings in the Maldivian capital.

Male, February 16, 2012.

Good evening.

• I came to Malé yesterday as part of our continued engagement to be of assistance in finding a way forward in these very difficult political circumstances.

• I have called on the President of Maldives and met the leaders of all the main political parties, including Mr. Mohamed Nasheed of the MDP, Mr. Abdulla Yameen of the PPM and Mr. Thasmeen Ali of the DRP. I also met the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and the Speaker of the People’s Majlis. I reiterated our belief that there is need for a Maldivian led process for reconciliation and resolving political differences through constitutional means.

• There was a degree of convergence on how matters should be taken forward. The Parties also agree to the need for maintenance of constitutional order. The President has come out with a roadmap for an inclusive political process which provides a very good basis for the Parties to resolve their differences.

• Consequent to my discussions, the following formulation was agreed upon by all the parties concerned;
In addition, in the interests of national reconciliation and to encourage harmony between our citizens, the Government of National Unity will hold discussions with all relevant parties to conduct elections by an early date. The Government of National Unity will work towards the conditions that will permit such elections to take place including any necessary constitutional amendments.

Our understanding is that elections would be held as early as considered feasible by all concerned. This is to be discussed by the Parties.

- The MDP, on its part, committed itself to encouraging an atmosphere appropriate to the holding of elections. In this context, we understand that their decision to hold a rally tomorrow is being reconsidered.

Statement of Official Spokesperson on the situation in Maldives.

New Delhi, February 17, 2012.

In response to a question on the situation in the Maldives, the Official Spokesperson stated that we have seen the press release on the website of the Office of the President of the Republic of Maldives, H.E. Dr. Mohamed Waheed, welcoming the agreement of all Political Parties “to the blueprint that restores calm to our Islands and sets out the next steps for our nation – Roadmap for a Possible Way Forward”. The Roadmap includes the following paragraph:

“In addition, in the interests of national reconciliation and to encourage harmony between our citizens, the Government of National Unity will hold discussions with all relevant Parties to conduct elections at an early date. The Government of National Unity will work towards the conditions that will permit such elections to take place including any necessary constitutional amendments.”

We welcome the Press Release which is as per the understanding arrived at during the Foreign Secretary's consultations in Maldives with all concerned Parties. We note that the Attorney General of Maldives had made a public announcement in the news bulletin of the evening of 16th February 2012 on the understanding.

We look forward to all Parties, including the Maldives Democratic Party, to act in accordance with the agreement reached to enable the process to move forward as envisaged.
Foreign Secretary’s visit to Maldives
February 29, 2012

Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai visited Maldives from 27-29 February, 2012. The objective of his visit was to take forward the political process and continue India’s engagement with all parties concerned. In this connection, Foreign Secretary had extensive consultations with all parties individually and collectively. All parties expressed the view that India had played a very useful role in taking the process forward as a facilitator and friend of the Maldivian people.

2. There was a broad measure of agreement in talks with all parties and some important principles were underlined. These include:

- Continued dialogue on the way forward including possible amendment to the Constitution and enactment of legislation for institutional reforms.
- All Parties recognized the need to undertake the necessary amendments and legislation within a quick timeframe in the People’s Majlis.
- Broad agreement on the need for early elections and for this purpose the All Party Consultative Committee (APCC) and further consultations among all major Parties would continue.

3. The President of Maldives, while reiterating appreciation for India’s assistance and support to the reconciliation process, conveyed in a concluding meeting with the Foreign Secretary that considerable progress had been achieved and that there was optimism on the further potential outcome. It was agreed that India would continue its role of facilitator, as needed.

March 2, 2012

In a reply to a question on developments in the Maldives, the Official Spokesperson urged all parties to maintain calm and to exercise restraint. He encouraged them to exercise their responsibilities to the Maldivian people, and to continue necessary discussions under the All Party Consultative Committee and the People’s Majlis to find a peaceful and viable solution as agreed under the Roadmap. He reiterated the Government of India’s position that this was an internal matter of the Maldives, to be resolved by Maldivians in a peaceful and democratic manner. India, he said, stood ready to assist the Government and people of Maldives in any manner necessary.
Visit of former President of Maldives Mr. Mohamed Nasheed to India.

In response to questions on the visit of Mr. Mohamed Nasheed, former President of Maldives to India, the Official Spokesperson stated that the former President of Maldives had visited India and interacted with businesses, media, civil society and others in the country. During the visit, the former President paid a call on the Prime Minister and met the National Security Adviser and the Foreign Secretary.

Earlier this month (1-4 April 2012), the Foreign Minister of Maldives, Dr. Abdul Samad Abdullah, visited India at the invitation of the External Affairs Minister and held discussions with EAM. The Defence Minister of Maldives, Mr. Mohamed Nazim, had visited India from 27-30 March 2012 to attend ‘DEFEXPO 2012’. The Defence Minister called on Raksha Mantri and had discussions on Indo-Maldives defence cooperation.

India hopes that engagement with all the stakeholders in Maldives will facilitate a constructive dialogue among all the political parties and help in bringing stability to the country in line with the Roadmap of 16 February 2012 drawn up by the President of Maldives.

India and Maldives enjoy very close and cordial relations. We have extensive cooperation in a number of areas, including trade, investments, connectivity, health, tourism, defence, security, human resource and infrastructure development. The Coast Guards from the two countries would be carrying out annual joint exercise named ‘DOSTI-X’ later this month. India remains committed to further strengthening and expanding the multifaceted relationship with Maldives.

241. Appeal of the Official Spokesperson to maintain peace and tranquility in Maldives.

New Delhi, July 20, 2012.

In response to a question on the situation in Maldives the official spokesperson said:

“India has been closely monitoring the situation in the Maldives following the transfer of power on 7 February 2012. We have noted that the Government of Maldives has constituted a Commission of National Inquiry, to look into the events surrounding the transfer of power in the Maldives in February 2012, which was later reconfigured by including a retired judge from Singapore as a Co-chair and a nominee of the former President of Maldives, Mr. Mohamed Nasheed.

India and Maldives enjoy close ties of friendship and cooperation. We are concerned at the recent reports indicating increased political tension in the Maldives. The Government of India appeals to all political parties to exercise restraint and to refrain from actions that might adversely impact on the atmosphere of peace and tranquility in the country.

India remains committed to extending the fullest support and cooperation to the Government of Maldives in its endeavour to engage the leaders of various political parties in resolving the current situation for the continued progress and prosperity of the people of Maldives."
242. Visit the leader of the Dhivehi Rayyithunge Party in Maldives Mr. Ahmed Thasmeen Ali to India.

New Delhi, August 4, 2012.

In response to a question on the visit of Leader of the Dhivehi Rayyithunge Party (DRP) in Maldives to India, the Official Spokesperson said:

“Mr. Ahmed Thasmeen Ali, Leader of the Dhivehi Rayyithunge Party (DRP), accompanied by Dr. Abdulla Mausoom, MP (DRP Parliamentary Group Deputy Leader, President-DRP Commercial Wing), Dr. Asim Ahmed, Minister of Education, Mr. Ali Azim, MP (DRP Council Member) and Mr. Hassan Saeed, Minister of State of Foreign Affairs of Maldives visited India from 31 July to 4 August 2012.

Mr. Ahmed Thasmeen Ali called on the Prime Minister on 4th August 2012. He also met the National Security Adviser and the Foreign Secretary. During the discussions the close ties of friendship and cooperation between India and Maldives were underlined. The Prime Minister conveyed that India was committed to working with Maldives for the economic development and progress of Maldives. In this regard, it was hoped that all the stake holders in Maldives would work together to resolve the current situation in the Maldives and help in maintaining an environment of peace and stability in the country.

Mr. Ahmed Thasmeen Ali addressed an audience at the Observer Research Foundation in New Delhi on the topic of “Challenges and Problems of an Infant Democracy - The Maldives Experience” on 3rd August 2012.”

New Delhi, August 29, 2012.

In response to media query on the report of Commission of National Inquiry in Maldives, the Official Spokesperson said:

“It will be recalled that on July 20, India had taken note of the decision of the Government of Maldives to constitute a Commission of National Inquiry (CNI) to look into the events surrounding the transfer of power in the Maldives in February 2012. The CNI had been reconstituted to include a retired judge from Singapore as Co-chair, and also a nominee of the former President of Maldives Mr. Mohamed Nasheed.

2. It is understood that the CNI will release its report shortly. We believe it is essential for all stakeholders to demonstrate a sense of responsibility in respecting the outcome of the Commission’s report, and to express views on the report of the CNI with calm and restraint. Actions that might adversely impact on the atmosphere of peace and tranquility in the Maldives need to be avoided. India hopes that all political parties in the Maldives would take up the issues arising out of the CNI report through a peaceful political dialogue, to make a way forward for resolving the political situation in the country.

3. The President of Maldives had visited India in early May. We have also held dialogue with the leaders of main political parties in that country. India remains committed to extending its fullest support and cooperation for the continued stability, peace, progress and prosperity of the Maldives.”
244. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on the “Visit of Mr Maumoon Abdul Gayoom, Leader of the Progressive Party of Maldives (PPM) to India”

New Delhi, September 14, 2012.

In response to a question on the visit of Mr Maumoon Abdul Gayoom, Leader of the Progressive Party of Maldives (PPM) to India, the Official Spokesperson said:

“Mr. Maumoon Abdul Gayoom, Former President of the Republic of Maldives and Leader of the PPM, met the Prime Minister on 14 September 2012. During the meeting, the Prime Minister referred to the close ties of friendship and cooperation between India and Maldives and conveyed in this regard that India was committed to working with the Government and people of Maldives for the economic development, progress and betterment of the country. The Prime Minister stressed the need for all stakeholders in Maldives to take forward the process of political dialogue; to work together to resolve the current political situation; and to maintain an environment of peace and stability in the country. The Prime Minister underlined that India would continue to work towards further strengthening and expanding its multifaceted relationship with Maldives.”

New Delhi, September 17, 2012.

Continuing with his dialogue on defence cooperation with the top leadership of Maldives, the Defence Minister Mr AK Antony called on the President Mohamed Waheed Hassan Manik In Male today.

The 30-minute meeting was attended among others by the Vice President Mohamed Waheeduddeen and the Defence Minister Col (Retd) Mohamed Nazim.

The Indian side included Defence Secretary Shashi Kant Sharma, FOC-in-C Western Naval Command Vice Admiral Shekhar Sinha and High Commissioner DN Mulay.

President Waheed appreciated the visit of Mr Antony to the island nation and said that it had ‘increased the confidence level in the relations of the two countries’. He also appreciated India’s support in facilitating a way forward in the political process in Maldives.

Mr. Antony briefed the President on the discussions he had with his Maldivian counterpart Mohamed Nazim yesterday and the decisions taken to further cement the defence relationship. The President expressed happiness over the developments and assured full cooperation of Maldivian side in implementing the decisions. He said the security of the Indian Ocean Region is of vital importance to both the countries and the two countries should strive to enhance cooperation in myriad ways to thwart any threats. President Waheed noted that there are no inhibitions on either side as each treated the other side as a close and trusted friend.

The meeting ended with the two Defence Ministers exchanging the agreement, in the presence of the President, to station the Indian Coast Guard Advanced Light Helicopter in Maldives for a further period of two years.

Last evening, Mr Antony, accompanied by his Maldivian counterpart Mohamed Nazim, flew down to the picturesque Maafilaafushi island in a sea plane and laid there the foundation stone of the Composite Maritime Training Academy of Maldives. The Academy, to be built in three phases, with assistance from India, will train personnel from Maldives Coast Guard and Marine Police.
Joint Statement on the Visit of Defence Minister to Maldives.

Male, September 17, 2012.

On the invitation of the Defence Minister of Maldives, H.E Col. (ret) Mohamed Nazim, the Defence Minister of India Shri A. K. Antony accompanied by a high level delegation paid a three day official visit from 15th to 17th September 2012 to Maldives. In Male, the Indian Minister held detailed discussions with the Maldivian side led by his Maldivian counterpart. He also called on H.E President of Maldives Dr. Mohamed Waheed.

2. The Maldivian side welcomed the second visit of the Indian Defence Minister since 2009 as a continuation of the tradition of regular exchange of high level visits between India and Maldives. At the formal talks, both the sides reviewed the status of existing bilateral defence relations including the projects being currently executed with the assistance of the Government of India. Noting the entwined destinies of the two countries and the commonalities in the security concerns, both the countries agreed to continue to work closely in the area of defence and security.

3. During the Call on H.E President Dr. Mohamed Waheed, both the sides noted with satisfaction, the enduring close and multi-dimensional relations and deep friendship between the two countries. Maldivian leadership conveyed its profound appreciation to India, its close and trusted friend for its continued support and assistance to Maldives. Indian side was briefed on the present domestic political and economic situation in Maldives and the ongoing initiative to strengthen and consolidate the nascent democracy in the country. It was agreed that both sides would work to step up the bilateral cooperation in all areas.

4. During his visit, the Indian Defence Minister formally inaugurated with H.E Mr. Mohamed Nazim, the MNDF hospital “SENAHIYA” established in Male (Maldives) with the assistance of the Government of India. Indian Defence Minister also laid the Foundation stone for the MNDF Composite Training Center, to be established with the assistance of the Government of India, in Maafilaushi (Lhaviyaani Atoll).

5. Indian Defence Minister thanked the Maldivian leadership and the MNDF for the warm reception and hospitality provided to the delegation during the visit. Shri A. K. Antony invited Defence Minister of Maldives H.E Col. (ret) Mohamed Nazim to visit India. The invitation was accepted with pleasure. On conclusion of the visit, which marked an important milestone in the bilateral relations, the Indian delegation was seen off at the Male Airport by H.E Col. (ret) Mohamed Nazim, High Commissioner of India in Maldives and senior officials of the MNDF.

248. Press Statement of the Ministry of External Affairs on Maldives.

New Delhi, October 4, 2012.

In response to a question on the situation in Maldives, the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said: -

Government of India has been closely following the developments in Maldives. As a close and friendly neighbour, we are concerned at the continuing political instability in the country. In our engagements with the Government and political parties in Maldives, we have consistently emphasised that peace and stability are necessary prerequisites to the firm implantation of democracy as well as for the economic growth and prosperity of the people of Maldives.

We call upon all parties in Maldives to continue to work towards facilitating an early and commonly acceptable internal solution to the political impasse in the country. In this context, India urges the Government of Maldives and all political parties to adhere strictly to democratic principles and the rule of law thus paving the way for the holding of free, fair and credible Situation in Maldives

249. Official Spokesperson’s Statement in response to a question regarding situation in Maldives.

New Delhi, November 16, 2012.

In response to a question regarding situation in Maldives, the Official Spokesperson stated: We have seen reports related to the arrest of former Secretary General SAARC and other members of the Majlis in the Maldives earlier today. India has maintained regular dialogue with Maldivian authorities. As a close and friendly neighbour, we are concerned at the continuing political instability in the country. There is an urgent need for dialogue and reconciliation among all political parties in Maldives in a peaceful and democratic manner. India urges the Government of Maldives and all political parties to adhere strictly to democratic principles and the rule of law thus paving the way for the holding of free, fair and credible elections. Violence and coercive measures are not conducive to this end. India has been concerned at the occurrence of anti-India demonstrations and statements by a section in Maldives. A senior official of the Government of India visited Maldives recently and conveyed our concerns in regard to recent developments in the country. The situation is being monitored closely keeping in view the need to ensure safety and security of Indians in Maldives and Indian interests in that country.

250. Cancellation of the AGREEMENT of GMR by the Maldivian Government. Official Spokesperson’s response to a question on termination of agreement with the GMR Group in Maldives.

New Delhi, November 27, 2012.

In response to questions on the decision of the Government of Maldives to terminate the agreement with the GMR Group, the official spokesman conveyed the following:

We have noted the decision by the Government of Maldives to terminate the agreement with the GMR Group to manage the Male International Airport. It would be recalled that the consortium consisting of GMR and MAHB (Malaysian Airport Authority) had been awarded the contract to manage the Male International Airport concession through a global tender conducted by the International Finance Corporation (IFC), Washington, a member of the World Bank. As the Advisor to the Government of Maldives, the IFC has stated that it has complied with Maldivian laws and regulations and followed international best practices at each step of the bidding process to ensure the highest degree of competitiveness, transparency and credibility of the process.

The investment by GMR represents the single largest foreign direct investment in the history of Maldives. The decision to terminate the contract with GMR without due consultation with the company or efforts at arbitration provided for under the agreement sends a very negative signal to foreign investors and the international community. The Government of India would continue to remain engaged with the Government of Maldives on this issue, and would expect that the Government of Maldives would fulfil all legal processes and requirements in accordance with the relevant contracts and agreement it has concluded with GMR in this regard.

We call upon the Government of Maldives and all concerned parties to ensure that Indian interests in Maldives and the security of Indian nationals are fully protected. The Government of India proposes to monitor the situation in Maldives closely and is prepared to take all necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of its interests and its nationals in the Maldives. The Government of India will continue to be seized of the matter.

On December 4, on another occasion the Official Spokesperson said:

“As you are aware, the External Affairs Minister had received a call from the Foreign Minister of Maldives earlier today and discussed among other issues the GMR case. The Foreign Minister of Maldives had mentioned that Government of Maldives would not allow relations between India and Maldives to be undermined and that there was consensus on this issue. The External Affairs Minister reminded the Foreign Minister of Maldives of his earlier discussions noting that the legal processes involved in the GMR case should be permitted to take their own course based on the contractual obligations of the parties involved. The Maldivian government should not allow the situation to go out of hand.

In this context, it is expected that no arbitrary and coercive measures should be taken pending the outcome of the legal process underway. Resort to any such actions would inevitably have adverse consequences for relations between India and the Maldives.”

253. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry expressing the hope that Nepal will fast-track the Karnali and Arun Hydroelectric Projects.

New Delhi, January 18, 2012.

Nepal has assured India of quick resolution of issues pertaining to Indian investment in Nepal. The Industry Minister of Nepal Mr Anil Jha in his meeting with Shri Anand Sharma, Minister of commerce Industry and Textiles, here today, singled out Karnali and Arun power projects for fast-track clearances. Shri Anand Sharma said that “this move on the part of Nepal will send a very positive signal for deepening of economic relations and boosting investor confidence.” Indian firms are the biggest investors in Nepal accounting for about 47.5% of total approved foreign direct investments. There are about 150 operating Indian ventures in Nepal engaged in manufacturing, services (banking, insurance, dry port, education and telecom), power sector and tourism industries. Indian joint ventures in Nepal have contributed significantly to increase in Nepal’s exports to India. They also provide direct employment to around 30,000 Nepali citizens and indirect employment to more than twice that number. As per extant FDI policy there is no restriction for inflows of FDI from Nepal. Both Governments have signed the text of bilateral investment protection and promotion agreement. Shri Anand Sharma assured Mr Jha of continued special relationship with Nepal.

The Nepalese Minister asked the Minister for better concessions for the jute products from Nepal. He also made a strong pitch for further concessions for Nepal imports and more investments from India. The bilateral trade between the two countries has increased from US$ 1985 mn in 2009-10 to around US$ 2700 in 2010-11 registering an increase of around 36%. Exports from Nepal to India have also grown from US$ 452mn in 2009-10 to US$ 476mn in 2010-11 (an increase of around 5.3%). Our growing mutual cooperation in the development of the hydropower potential of Nepal confirms the special relationship between our two countries. India would like to accelerate such cooperation which would usher in a new era of prosperity for citizens of Nepal. It is estimated that sale of electricity from the 40,000 MW hydropower potential of Nepal can generate revenues of more than 10 billion US$ per annum. Nepal could also attract a lot of investment in manufacturing/services sector by overcoming its present power shortage.
254. Response of Official Spokesperson to Developments in Nepal.

New Delhi, April 12, 2012.

In response to a media question regarding the recent developments in Nepal the Official Spokesperson stated that:

“We welcome the agreement reached on 10 April 2012 in the constitutionally mandated Army Integration Special Committee (AISC) on taking forward the process of integration and rehabilitation of the former Maoist combatants in consonance with the past Agreements. We congratulate the Nepalese leadership for the wisdom, and spirit of consensus displayed by them to complete the remaining tasks.

2. We hope the Nepali-led and Nepali-driven political processes would be taken to their logical end within the time-frame agreed by the political parties, ushering Nepal into a new era of peace and democracy.”
255. Response of the Official Spokesperson to Recent Developments in Nepal.

New Delhi, May 29, 2012.

In response to a media query on the recent developments in Nepal, the Official Spokesperson said:

“We are closely monitoring developments in Nepal.

We note the new Constitution could not be promulgated within the extended term of the Constitution Assembly. We have confidence in the democratic commitment and wisdom of the people of Nepal, which has led to considerable progress of the constitution making process. We hope that the political parties of Nepal would continue to be guided by the spirit of consensus and peaceful dialogue in their efforts to transform Nepal into a stable, democratic and prosperous nation.

India stands ready to assist, according to the wishes of the people of Nepal.”

The spokesperson was referring to the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly and decision to go in for new elections to elect a new Constituent Assembly.

3. On the conclusion of the visit, the Committee made following recommendations:

   a) The “Consular Access Agreement” of May 2008 signed between two government must be implemented fully. Consular access must be provided within three months of the arrest and repatriation must take place within one month of confirmation of national status and completion of sentences;

   b) Consular access must be provided at the immediately to all those prisoners who have not been given consular access so far and the process of nationality confirmation should start immediately after consular access is provided;

   c) A mechanism should be developed for compassionate and humanitarian consideration to be given to women, juvenile, mentally challenged, old aged and all those prisoners suffering from serious illness/permanent physical disability;

   d) It was also recommended that serious/terminally and mentally challenged prisoners must be kept in hospitals irrespective of confirmation of their national status and offence;

   e) Prisoners involved in minor offences like violation of Foreigners’ Act, visa violation and inadvertent border crossing deserve compassion from both the sides;

   f) The Committee noted that the respective courts must be requested for expeditious trial of all “under trial” prisoners. Provision of legal aid/attorneys to prisoners must be ensured at all stages of their cases;

   g) The Committee also endorsed the recommendations of the Home/Interior Secretary level talks held on 28-29 March 2011 at New Delhi to task the Pakistani Maritime Security Agency and Coast Guard of India to work on setting up a mechanism for release of inadvertent crossers (fishermen) and their boats, on the same lines as the inadvertent crossers on land; It was recommended that the fishermen should be repatriated by sea lanes along with their boats;

h) It was suggested that the next visit of the Committee to Pakistani jails be arranged during the second half of April 2012;

i) The Committee will review the action taken report on the earlier recommendations when the Committee meets next in Pakistan

259. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on Pakistan’s Transition from Positive List to Negative List Regime in Bilateral Trade.

New Delhi, February 29, 2012.

India has welcomed the decision of the Government of Pakistan to transition from a Positive List Regime to a small Negative List for trade with India. This development reaffirms the commitment of both Governments for trade normalization as per the roadmap drawn during the Visit of Pakistan Commerce Minister from 26th September to 2nd October, 2011. There is reiteration of commitment that the negative list will be phased out by the end of this year. This will mark a dramatic shift in the lines that can be traded as now almost 90% items can be traded with Pakistan as opposed to 17% earlier. Welcoming the development, the Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma said “during my visit to Pakistan earlier this month, Prime Minister Gilani and Trade Minister Makhdoom Amin Fahim, had assured me that a final decision in the matter would be taken by end-February and I am happy that this has been achieved. We believe that strengthening economic engagement between India and Pakistan lies at the heart of building enduring peace and stability in this region. Flourishing trade is the biggest confidence building measure among any two nations. During my visit to Pakistan, I saw considerable enthusiasm in industry leaders and the trading community of both countries for deepening this engagement. We now need to continue the momentum of regular exchanges which we have started since mid-2011.”

Shri Sharma’s visit to Pakistan from 13th to 16th February 2012 was first ever visit by the Commerce Minister of India for substantive bilateral meetings. Accompanied by more than hundred high power business delegates, this visit marked a historic moment for both the countries, when political leadership and the business communities extended unequivocal support for full normalization and preferential trading arrangements between the two countries. The Joint Statement by the two Ministers at the end of the visit noted “It has been agreed that Pakistan will move from a Positive List to a small Negative List by February 2012. The negative list is to be phased out; the timing for this will be announced in February 2012 at the time the list is notified. It is expected that the phasing out will be completed before the end of 2012.”

261. Press Briefing by Foreign Secretary on the meeting between Prime Minister and the President of Pakistan during the latter's halt in New Delhi on way to Ajmer Sharif.

New Delhi, April 8, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon everybody and thank you very much for coming on a Sunday afternoon here. I must apologize for the slight delay. We have here with us Foreign Secretary who will make an opening statement and a few remarks.

May I mention that we have only a limited amount of time and so we may not have a long interaction, but we will try to respond to most of the issues that you have in mind. With that, I will now request Foreign Secretary to make his opening remarks.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Good afternoon. Really the apology for being late is not from him but from me. It is becoming a bit traditional, but this time there were difficulties in my getting here on time.

Let me start by saying the Prime Minister and President Zardari spent about forty minutes before lunch, and they had a friendly and constructive conversation covering all aspects of India-Pakistan bilateral relations, and regional and global issues of common interest. As you know, this is a private visit. President Zardari was kind enough to accept Prime Minister's invitation to lunch in New Delhi on his way to visit Ajmer Sharief, where he is in fact headed just now.

In their discussions, PM and the Pakistani President noted that there had been steady progress in the dialogue process which was restarted last year. The dialogue process will continue as planned in the months to come. PM expressed appreciation of the fact that Pakistan has moved forward on trade-related issues. Both leaders felt that we should tap into the considerable potential of bilateral economic and trade ties. The issue has been discussed by the Commerce Ministers and Commerce Secretaries, and there is a way forward which has already been identified. The leaders discussed the problem of terrorism, which is a major issue by which the Indian people will judge progress in the bilateral relationship.

PM told President Zardari that it was imperative to bring the perpetrators of the Mumbai attack to justice, and prevent activities aimed against India from Pakistani soil. In this context PM also mentioned the activities of Hafiz Saeed. President Zardari said the matter needed to be discussed further between the two Governments. It was noted that the Home Secretaries are due to meet shortly and they would be discussing this issue further.
President Zardari mentioned the need for all issues including the issues of Sir Creek, Siachen, and the issue of Kashmir to be addressed. Both felt that we need to move forward step by step.

The two leaders also discussed developments in the region, and they are determined to use the potential of regional cooperation for the economic development of people of both countries. It was evident from the conversation that both countries consider the dialogue process and the improvement of bilateral relations as being in mutual interest of the people of India and Pakistan.

The leaders also felt that priority needed to be given to issues of people-to-people contacts. In this context, they decided that a liberalized visa agreement which has been worked out should be signed during the next meeting of the Home/Interior Secretaries.

President Zardari invited Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to visit Pakistan. PM accepted the invitation with pleasure and said he would be happy to visit at an appropriate time. The diplomatic channels will be used to work out the mutually acceptable dates and the substantive preparations for that visit.

One issue I forgot to mention is that the PM mentioned that he had heard the news about the avalanche which caused the feared death of a very large number of soldiers and said, if there was something humanitarian that was required of us, we would be happy to be of assistance. The President thanked PM for this and said they would check and if there was any requirement, they would come back to us.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

262. Statements of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Pakistan President Asif Ali Zardari.

New Delhi, April 8, 2012.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh: President Zardari and I had a very constructive and friendly exchange of views on all bilateral issues which affect the relation between India and Pakistan. President Zardari is on a private visit and I have taken advantage of this visit to discuss with him all bilateral issues and I am very satisfied with the outcome of this visit. President Zardari has also invited me to visit Pakistan. I would be very happy to visit Pakistan on a mutually convenient date. The relation between India and Pakistan should become normal. That's our common desire. We have number of issues and we are willing to find practical and pragmatic solutions to all those issues and that's the message President Zardari and I wish to convey.

President Asif Ali Zardari: I would like to wish the people of India Assalam Allaikum from the people of Pakistan and I am grateful to Manmohan Singh, The Prime Minister of India, for inviting me for a lunch although I am on a private visit here. We have had some very fruitful bilateral talks together. India and Pakistan are neighbours. We would like to have better relations with India. We spoke on all topics that we could have spoken about and hope to meet on Pakistan soil very soon. Thank you very much.

Shri Anand Sharma Union minister of Commerce, Industry & Textiles and Pakistan Commerce Secretary Zafar Mahmood inaugurated the Lifestyle Pakistan 2012, here today. The first ‘Lifestyle Pakistan’ exhibits designers in various categories like fashion textiles, jewellery, designer furniture and leather goods showcasing high-end items. The exhibition is one of the steps taken by both India and Pakistan to enhance bilateral commerce and open new channels for shipment of goods. Shri Sharma while inaugurating the event said, “It gives me immense pleasure to be in the midst of this distinguished gathering for the inaugural of Lifestyle Exhibition of Pakistan. It is heartening to see 100 exhibitors from all parts of Pakistan participating along with a big delegation of 650 people, in this show, demonstrating the best of Pakistani products”. All visitors from Pakistan are always special for all of us as it strikes a unique emotional chord in our hearts, Minister added.

Elaborating on the developments Shri Sharma stated, “if we look back at the last one year, the intensity of our engagement has been truly amazing. Within a span of less than five months, we have had two bilateral meetings at the Commerce Ministers’ level and will have a third one tomorrow within less than ten months- four meetings between our commerce secretaries and seven engagements of our Ministries’ Joint Secretaries! In addition, there have been many other Joint Working Group meetings relating to customs cooperation, trade infrastructure, possibilities of trade in electricity, visa issues and others. We have held an India Show in Lahore in February and within two months this Pakistan show in New Delhi is indeed heartening.”

Emphasizing on his earlier announcement made during the visit last year to Pakistan the Indian Minister said, “I had given a commitment that India would be in a position to open the Integrated Check Post at Wagah, constructed at a cost of US$ 30 million by April and tomorrow the Home Minister along with Makhdoom Fahim Sahib, me and Chief Minister of Punjab will be opening this Gate for trade between our countries. Imagine the potentiality of free flow of trade and how much benefit would accrue to the people of Punjab on both sides.” Normalization of trade is a first step in building an enduring investment partnership. We need to change this and an opportunity lost now may well be lost forever, he emphasized.

The Minister said, “We would like an economic partnership with Pakistan which is enduring and strong, which not only helps in strengthening the industrial activity on both sides, but also benefits the consumers. We would like to create an India-Pakistan Business Council which provides an institutional framework for regular and sustained dialogue between the business communities. TDAP and ITPO have already inked a Memorandum of Understanding and I have given mandate to the Chairperson of ITPO who is with me for intensifying the engagement with Pakistan. At a governmental level, equally, we need to sustain regularity in our exchanges."

This is the first collaborative exhibition of Trade Development Authority of Pakistan (TDAP) and India Trade Promotion Organisation (ITPO). “There has been lot of movement in trade in the last one year, the (trade) normalisation is going very fast,” Mr. Mahmood said. Mr. Zafar Mehmood, Commerce Secretary of Pakistan, Dr. Rahul Khullar, Commerce Secretary of India, Mr. Tariq Puri, CEO, Trade Development Authority of India, Mrs. Rita Menon, CMD-ITPO and Mr. Shahid Mallick, High Commissioner of Pakistan were also present on the occasion.

It is a fact that the bilateral trade which was barely US$ 300 million in 2004, now stands at US$ 2.7 billion, a 9-fold growth in a period of 7 years.

New Delhi, April 13, 2012.

Union Home Minister Shri P. Chidambaram Union Home Minister inaugurated the Integrated Check Post (ICP) at Attari in Punjab this evening in the presence of Chief Minister of Punjab, Shri Parkash Singh Badal, Union Commerce Minister, Shri Anand Sharma, Pakistan Commerce Minister Shri Makdoom Amin Fahim; Chief Minister of Punjab province of Pakistan Shri Shabz Sharif; Minister of State Shri Ashwani Kumar and Deputy Chief Minister of Punjab Shri Sukhbir Singh Badal; Ministers of Punjab, diplomats and other dignitaries.

- All the facilities are backed by 1800 KVA substation with 100 % power backup.
- The ICP complex has 99000 sq mts. area for future expansion.
- A helipad has also been provided.
Operationalization of ICP Attari will lead to reduction in passenger and freight processing time paving way for enhanced people to people contact and expansion of trade between the two countries.

It will provide employment and business opportunities for the local population and contribute to area development. It is symbolic of India’s desire for progressive, productive and mutually beneficial relationship with its neighbouring countries.

ICPs are being constructed as a Plan scheme with an initial outlay of Rs. 635 crore during the 11th Five Year Plan. In the initial phase, 13 ICPs have been envisaged at major designated entry/exit points along India’s international land border. 7 ICPs, out of these 13 ICPs are to be constructed in Phase I and 6 ICPs in Phase II. ICP Attari is the first to be completed and 4 ICPs (Raxaul and Jogbani in Bihar, Agartala in Tripura and Petrapole in West Bengal) are in various stages of construction.

A statutory body, the Land Ports Authority of India (LPAI) has been established from 1st March, 2012 as an overarching organization to oversee the construction, management and maintenance of these ICPs. Photographs of ICP Attari are available on PIB site i.e. www.pib.nic.in.

Suo Motu Statement in Lok Sabha by Minister of External Affairs S. M. Krishna on the visit of Pakistani President Asif Ali Zardari.

Hon'ble Madam Speaker,

I rise to inform the House on the visit of His Excellency Mr. Asif Ali Zardari, President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan on 8th April 2012.

2. His Excellency Mr. Asif Ali Zardari, President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan came to India on a private visit on April 8, 2012. The primary purpose of his visit was to pray at the shrine of Khwaja Moinuddin Chisti at Ajmer. However, President Zardari was kind enough to accept Hon'ble Prime Minister's invitation to lunch in New Delhi on his way to visit Ajmer.

3. President Zardari and Hon'ble Prime Minister met before lunch for about forty minutes and had friendly and constructive discussions covering India-Pakistan relations, and regional and global issues of common interest. In their discussions, the two leaders noted that there had been steady progress in the bilateral dialogue process which was resumed last year. The dialogue process will continue as planned in the months to come.

4. Hon'ble Prime Minister expressed appreciation of the fact that Pakistan has moved forward on trade-related issues. Both leaders felt that we should tap into the considerable potential of bilateral economic and trade ties for progress and prosperity of our two peoples. The issue has been discussed by the Commerce Ministers of the two countries, and there is a way forward which has already been identified.

5. Hon'ble Prime Minister and President Zardari discussed the subject of terrorism. Hon'ble Prime Minister told President Zardari that there is need for taking firm action to curb terrorism to enable us to make forward movement in the bilateral relationship. He conveyed that it was imperative to bring the perpetrators of the Mumbai attack to justice, and prevent activities aimed against India from Pakistan soil. In this context, he also mentioned the activities of Hafiz Saeed carried out in public. It would be evident that our concerns on terrorism had to be addressed if the people of India are to support and sustain progress in bilateral relations. President Zardari referred to judicial processes against Saeed and said the matter needed to be discussed further between the two Governments. It was noted that the Home Secretaries are due to meet shortly and they would be discussing this issue further.

6. President Zardari mentioned the need for all issues in the bilateral relationship including Sir Creek, Siachen, and the issue of Kashmir to be addressed. Both leaders felt that we need to move forward step by step and find pragmatic and mutually acceptable solutions to all those issues.

Madam Speaker,

7. The two leaders also discussed developments in the region. They agreed to use the potential of regional cooperation for the economic development of people of both countries. It was clear from the conversation that both countries consider the dialogue process and the improvement of bilateral relations as being in the mutual interest of the people of India and Pakistan.

8. The two leaders also felt that priority needed to be given to issues of people-to-people contacts. In this context, they decided that a liberalized visa agreement which has been worked out should be signed during the next meeting of the Home/Interior Secretaries.

9. President Zardari invited Hon'ble Prime Minister to visit Pakistan. Hon'ble Prime Minister accepted the invitation with pleasure and said that he would be happy to visit at an appropriate time. The diplomatic channels will be used to work out mutually acceptable dates and substantive preparations for that visit.

Statement in the Lok Sabha by Minister of External Affairs in response to the issue of treatment of minorities in Pakistan raised by Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi, MP during Zero Hour on May 2, 2012.

New Delhi, May 9, 2012.

Hon'ble Madam Speaker,

I rise to inform this august House that Government has from time to time come across reports on the problems faced by members of the minority communities in Pakistan. Incidents of persecution and intimidation of the minority communities have also been reported. Recently, in separate incidents, three Hindu girls in Sindh province have reportedly been abducted and married against their will to Muslim men, after being forcefully converted to Islam. This issue is a matter of concern to the Government and is being taken up appropriately with the Government of Pakistan.

2. In the past, we have also seen reports of kidnapping and killing of members of the minority communities and desecration/encroachment of their places of religious worship in Pakistan. It is the responsibility of the Government of Pakistan to discharge its constitutional obligations towards its citizens, including those from the minority community.

3. While, the Simla Agreement of 1972 between India and Pakistan specifically provides for non-interference in each other’s internal affairs, nevertheless, based on reports of persecution of minority groups in Pakistan, Government has taken up the matter with the Government of Pakistan in the past. The Government of Pakistan stated that it was fully cognizant of the situation and looked after the welfare of all its citizens, particularly the minority community.

4. I also wish to inform this House that according to a Government of Pakistan Press Release, President of Pakistan has taken serious note of the reports of the kidnapping of a Hindu girl from Mirpur Mathelo District Ghotki in Sindh and allegedly being forced by some influential people of the area to convert; and called for a report from the provincial government. The President also called for transparent and expeditious investigations in the matter and to take action in accordance with the law regardless of the influence and status of anyone involved in criminal activity. Several Members of Parliament, NGOs and civil society in Pakistan have also expressed grave concern on the incidents and called for implementation of laws to protect the rights of the minorities in that country.

Madam Speaker,
5. In November 2011, on the killing of three Hindu doctors in Sindh, the President of Pakistan had called for a report on the incident and directed immediate arrest of the people responsible for the killings. He had also said that it was the moral and legal responsibility of the Government to protect members of the minority community against vandalism and atrocities. In August 2011, while speaking on the occasion of the ‘Minorities’ Day’ in Pakistan, Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani said, “Unfortunately some extremist elements with a view to advancing their own narrow and bigoted agendas have targeted the minorities. The Government, however, stands fully committed to foil the designs of these extremist elements. The perpetrators of the crime against the minority community anywhere in Pakistan - must be brought to justice and they will be”.

6. While it is our hope that the Government of Pakistan will discharge its constitutional duties towards its minority communities, in view of the purely humanitarian nature of this issue, we appeal to the people and Government of Pakistan to take all possible steps to protect the constitutional rights of their minorities by ensuring their safety, security and well being.
267. Joint Statement issued by India and Pakistan on the Home Secretary level talks held in Islamabad.

Islamabad, May 25, 2012.

Under the resumed bilateral dialogue, the second round of India-Pakistan Home/Interior Secretary Talks was held in Islamabad on May 24-25, 2012. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. K. M. Siddiq Akbar, Interior Secretary, and the Indian Delegation was led by Shri Raj Kumar Singh, Home Secretary of India.

2. The meeting was held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

3. Both sides exchanged views on the decisions taken in the last round of Home/Interior Secretary Talks held in New Delhi in March 2011.

4. Both sides agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and full normalization of bilateral relations. They reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations and bring those responsible for such crimes to justice.

5. The Pakistan side provided an update on the ongoing trial and investigation in Pakistan on the Mumbai Terror Attacks. Both sides discussed Judicial Commission’s visit to India from March 14-21, 2012. Pakistan side noted that it had agreed in principle to receive a Judicial Commission from India. In this regard, modalities, mandate and composition of the Commission will be worked out through diplomatic channels. Pakistan side reiterated its commitment to bring all the perpetrators of the Mumbai terror attacks to justice expeditiously in accordance with due process of law.

6. The Home and the Interior Secretaries agreed to enhance cooperation between the NIA of India and the FIA of Pakistan on issues of mutual concern, including Mumbai terror attacks investigation.

7. India provided information on the on-going Samjhauta Express blast case investigation. It was mentioned by the Indian side that investigation in this case is still ongoing and updated information will be shared with the Pakistan authorities concerned when the investigation is completed. The Indian side agreed to forward updated information on the investigation through diplomatic channel.

8. The Pakistan side noted the technical parameters, suggested by the Department of Telecommunications (DoT), Government of India for establishing a hotline between the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan. Pakistan side would examine the technical parameters and revert.
9. Both sides welcomed the signing of the ‘MoU on Drug Demand Reduction and Prevention of Illicit Trafficking in Narcotics Drugs/Phytotherapeutic Substances and Precursor Chemicals and related matters’, during the Eighth Director General level talks between Narcotics Control Bureau of India and Anti Narcotics Force of Pakistan on Drugs Trafficking in September 2011. They expressed the hope that the MoU will help enhance mutual cooperation between India and Pakistan through effective and sustained steps to control the growing menace of drug trafficking. In this context, they also welcomed the outcome of the DG level talks, held at Rawalpindi on September 12-13, 2011, and noted the decision to hold DG level talks on Drugs Trafficking annually.

10. It was decided that CBI and FIA will schedule a meeting at an early date to work out the technical details of moving forward on issues of human trafficking, counterfeit currency, cyber crimes and Red Notices (RNs). Both sides agreed to expeditiously execute all pending RNs. Pakistan side agreed to examine issues pertaining to Letters Rogatory.

11. Both sides welcomed the finalization of the Visa Agreement and agreed to sign it at an early date. The Pakistan side informed that some internal approvals were under process and the Agreement will be signed once they are in place.

12. Both sides welcomed the release of prisoners and fishermen, including those suffering from ailments, since the last round of Home/Interior Secretary Talks. They noted the need to fully implement the understanding reached during the previous Home/Interior Secretary Talks in March 2011 so that the fishermen and the civilian prisoners who have completed their sentence, and whose nationality status has been confirmed by the respective Governments and whose travel documents have been received, are released without delay. It was also agreed that those fishermen who have completed their sentences will be released by both sides within three months along with their boats, except where the boats have been lost, damaged or confiscated by the courts. It was decided that those prisoners, whose nationality status could not be confirmed either due to lack of information or due to the physical disabilities of the prisoner concerned, would be transferred to charitable institutions in India and Pakistan pending confirmation of their nationality status.

13. Both sides commended the work done by the Judicial Committee on Prisoners and agreed that their work should continue. They also agreed on the need for implementing the 2008 Consular Agreement in letter and spirit.

14. The Secretaries also exchanged views on the issue of inadvertent crossing of fishermen from both sides. The Pakistan side noted the invitation extended by the Indian Coast Guards for a meeting with the Pakistan Maritime Agency in June 2012 in New Delhi.
15. In order to strengthen mutual cooperation in criminal matters, the two sides agreed in principle to initiate negotiations on a Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT). In this regard, it was agreed that Pakistan side would examine the draft of the MLAT handed over by the Indian side and revert with comments.

16. The Home Secretary of India thanked the Interior Secretary of Pakistan for the warm hospitality extended to the Indian delegation and the arrangements made for the visit. He invited the Interior Secretary of Pakistan to visit India for the next Home / Interior Secretary level Talks. The invitation was accepted.
268. Joint Statement on India-Pakistan Defence Secretary Level talks on Siachen.

Rawalpindi, June 12, 2012.

The Defence Secretary level talks between Pakistan and India on Siachen were held at the Ministry of Defence, Rawalpindi from 11 – 12 June 2012. The Pakistan delegation was headed by Ms. Nargis Sethi, Secretary Defence. The Indian delegation was headed by Mr. Shashi Kant Sharma, Defence Secretary of India.

2. The Defence Secretary of India called on the Minister for Defence Syed Naveed Qamar.

3. The talks were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere. Both sides reaffirmed their resolve to make serious, sustained and result oriented efforts for seeking an amicable resolution of Siachen. It was agreed to continue dialogue on Siachen in keeping with the desire of the leaders of both countries for early resolution of all outstanding issues. Both sides acknowledged that the ceasefire was holding since 2003.

4. It was agreed that the next round of talks on Siachen will be held in New Delhi on mutually convenient dates, to be fixed through diplomatic channels.

269. Joint Statement on India-Pakistan Talks on Sir Creek Issue.

New Delhi, June 19, 2012.

Under the resumed dialogue process between India and Pakistan, talks on Sir Creek issue were held in New Delhi on June 18-19, 2012. The Indian delegation was led by Surveyor General of India Dr Swarna Subba Rao. The Pakistan delegation was led by Additional Secretary in the Ministry of Defence Rear Admiral Farrokh Ahmad. The Pakistan delegation met Shri Shekhar Agarwal, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Defence.

2. The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere.

3. The two sides discussed the land boundary in the Sir Creek area and also delimitation of International Maritime Boundary between India and Pakistan. They reiterated their desire to find an amicable solution of the Sir Creek issue through sustained and result oriented dialogue.

4. They agreed to hold the next round of the talks on Sir Creek issue in Pakistan at mutually convenient dates, to be determined through diplomatic channels.
270. Congratulations from Prime Minister of India to Pakistan Prime Minister Raja Pervez Ashraf on his appointment as the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 22, 2012.

“I would like to extend to you my heartiest congratulations on your appointment as Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan. On behalf of the people and Government of India and also on my own behalf, I convey to you our best wishes for success in your new assignment as well as for the peace, prosperity and well-being of the people of Pakistan under your leadership.

I am confident, Excellency, that during your term as Prime Minister, our two countries will continue to make progress in their bilateral dialogue on all issues and build good neighbourly relations by strengthening their cooperation in all areas for the benefit of the peoples of both countries. I look forward to working closely with Your Excellency in this regard.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.”

271. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the Meeting between Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 26, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ........

......... Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan will meet in New Delhi on July 4th and 5th to discuss peace and security including CBMs, Jammu and Kashmir, and promotion of friendly exchanges.

Question: Sir, my question is regarding Abu Hamza the terrorist who was deported from Saudi Arabia. Kindly tell us something about how Indian agencies succeeded in getting Abu Hamza into the country. What is the role of yours? Also, there is a report that MEA was not aware about the whole process that the MHA and IB were following in this regard.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much, that is an important question. I understand that it is a legitimate question that you have asked in the circumstances. That said, I think you have to also give us a little bit of space to operate in. If there are questions of an operational nature which involve intelligence issues, you would not expect us to share this openly in a public platform. These are matters which are of a sensitive nature. These are matters which we operate in a manner where we do not publicly stand upon trees and shout about it. So, please understand that the achievement is of India as a country. Which element of the Government of India worked on this, which elements cooperated with which other elements, is not a matter on which we need to openly discuss. But that said, we are all happy that this is an achievement for the country.

Question: How does this incident reflect on the changing nature of Saudi-India security relationship? They were not very warm since the 1950s, and 1980s particularly. How do you define this change? How do you see this as?

Official Spokesperson: In the 1950s there was a visit of the King of Saudi Arabia to India for a month or more. So, that is reflective of the warm relationship we had during that time. So, I beg to differ with you in terms of what the relationship was then.

That said, I take your point that issues of this nature are rather new in the relationship between the two countries. I would like to share with you that our relationship with Saudi Arabia is expanding in a variety of ways. You would recollect there was a visit by our Defence Minister. That again you would say was a path-breaking thing. You would like to characterize the developments recently also in a similar way. This is for you to describe and analyze. But what we feel is we have always had very cordial relations with Saudi Arabia. There are a large number of Indian nationals there – two million on last count. So, obviously a country with which we have such strong bonds we can only describe our relationship as excellent.

Question: It looks like the talks between Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan have been postponed. What are the new dates we are looking at? And what is the trigger for this postponement?

Official Spokesperson: I do not know what it looks to you but it looks to me slightly different. Let me try and explain the situation.

We should not try and merge substance with process, because process is focused in terms of trying and setting a schedule, and scheduling always has issues. For example, we have never indicated a specific date for the visit of the External Affairs Minister. But it is obvious that at the end of the round of the dialogue there has to be a meeting of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan and the External Affairs Minister of India. And with that in mind we were working on a date.

It just happened that while we were working on the date where we had indicated a possibility of that date being suitable to us, other developments have intervened since then because when the date was being mentioned, there was no reference to an election for the President and with a specific date of polling on that date. Since that has become the date on which the polling for the President is involved, and the External Affairs Minister of India is part of the electoral college for an important election in India, obviously we seek to reschedule these dates. And this rescheduling again has issues in terms of what is suitable to us and what is suitable to the authorities in Pakistan. We are trying to work out dates because as you know, after 22nd of July Parliament is in session. And you are aware of the sensitivities and sensibilities of External Affairs Minister himself of traveling outside India during Parliament being in session. With that in mind he has mentioned that we are looking at dates sometime in August at the earliest on this.

We will try and get back to you once it is finalized. But please do not think that the scheduling issue is reflective of substantive problems. There are none and so do not look for them.

Question: Just want to add to that question that Manish has just put forward. How much of an important factor is the political situation inside Pakistan as of now to postponing of these talks further?

Official Spokesperson: As regards the issue of the present change of the dates, it is purely a scheduling issue because of conflict of another engagement.
So, again please do not mix it with the substance of the relationship. That said, since the original date was fixed, there have been changes that we are all aware of in Pakistan, and these of course will be factored in both by their side and by our side while finalizing on a new date.

Question: New Delhi is going to host the Afghanistan Investment Summit. Could you share some details on that and the objective?

Official Spokesperson: Yes, we will have plenty of details on that. Just give me some time because we will schedule a special briefing on that. So, I do not want to preempt what is going to be told to you on that shortly. We have invited about 40 countries and there are huge number of responses. We will provide you those details shortly. I just wanted to bring to your attention that this must be amongst the first or the only time where India is holding an investment conference for promoting investment in another country on our soil.

We hope that this will be useful both for providing peace and stability in Afghanistan because we do not see the Afghan issue purely as a security issue. In addition we also feel that Indian businessmen will use the opportunity provided by this forum to see if there are options that they can benefit from in Afghanistan. That said, I will leave it for the present because we will have a separate and detailed briefing on that very specific issue shortly.

Question: What has been Pakistan’s reaction to the arrest of Abu Hamza? It came out with the very clichéd response that Pakistan has renewed its offer of cooperation in counterterrorism. It seems to be a very casual kind of attitude. Has it been taken to official channel? What has been the reaction to the whole issue of the arrest and the revelations made by this man?

Official Spokesperson: As I told you at the beginning of this briefing, such issues require some space in which we need to operate. Also it requires a certain degree of depth for us to work without being asked to give you a ball-by-ball commentary on this. So, please do understand. We will at a certain stage when we are ready for this, provide information on this. But please do not expect us to say, well this morning this happened, and afternoon this further thing happened. I do understand we are great connoisseurs and interested in very rapid commentary including on T20, but this certainly is not that sort of a match.

With that I thank you very much.
272. Statement by the External Affairs Minister to media on the release of Sarabjit Singh.

New Delhi, June 27, 2012.

I have seen media reports about the impending release from imprisonment in Pakistan of Surjeet Singh son of Sucha Singh.

I welcome this decision and further renew our request to the President of Pakistan to release Sarabjit Singh who has been in custody for well over 2 decades and is serving a death sentence.

As you are aware, the Government of India has consistently urged the Government of Pakistan, on several occasions, to take a sympathetic and humanitarian view in the case of Shri Sarabjit Singh.

I also appeal to the Government of Pakistan to release all Indian nationals who have completed their prison terms and request the release of all other Indians who are serving jail sentences in Pakistani prisons for petty crimes.

The statement was made by EAM in the context of confusion created by Pakistan which first announced the release of Sarabjit Singh and then clarified to say that the release was for Surjit Singh, who had already been pardoned and his death sentence condoned to that of life imprisonment, who was now being released after he had completed his term in prison.
273. Press Statement by Official Spokesperson on India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks.

New Delhi, July 4, 2012.

The Foreign Secretary of India, Shri Ranjan Mathai and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Mr. Jalil Abbas Jilani began their talks this morning at the Hyderabad House in New Delhi.

As is customary on such occasions, they were assisted by senior officials of both sides, including the Indian High Commissioner to Pakistan, Shri Sharat Sabharwal and Pakistan's High Commissioner-designate to India, Mr. Salman Bashir.

The Foreign Secretaries along with their respective delegations have had two full sessions of detailed discussions covering all aspects of the agenda under the items Peace and Security as well as Jammu and Kashmir. The talks started at 10.30 am and spread until a short time earlier, with a brief working lunch. The Foreign Secretaries also utilized the opportunity of the working lunch to cover a wide variety of issues.

At the end of the two sessions today the Foreign Secretaries have agreed to resume the talks tomorrow, 5th July, in the morning with a view to completing all the items scheduled for consideration.

The talks tomorrow will be followed by a Joint Media Interaction. Subsequently, the visiting Pakistani Foreign Secretary will call upon the External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna at his office in South Block. At the culmination of the official engagements of the Pakistani Foreign Secretary in India a Joint Statement will be issued.

I am aware that many of you have numerous questions and queries on the discussions. However, since the discussions are ongoing, I am not at liberty to respond to your legitimate questions today.

You will surely be provided an opportunity tomorrow morning to pose questions to the two Foreign Secretaries who have graciously agreed to respond to a few questions. I therefore request you to kindly wait till tomorrow for the media interaction and the issuance of the Joint Statement. Thank you very much.

New Delhi, July 5, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends. I welcome you to this media interaction with the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan. As is usual on such occasions, we will begin with opening remarks. I now request the Foreign Secretary of India Shri Ranjan Mathai to make his opening remarks.

Foreign Secretary of India (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Foreign Secretary Jalil Abbas Jilani and I have held detailed discussions over three sessions yesterday and today on peace and security including confidence building measures, Jammu and Kashmir and the promotion of friendly exchanges. We have also taken stock of the current state of our bilateral relations and reviewed progress in the various Secretary-level meetings held on different issues in the second round of our resumed dialogue.

We have had a frank and constructive discussion on the issues in the agenda. We have exchanged our respective views on areas of mutual interest and concern. This dialogue has contributed to a better understanding of each other’s positions. While we might not agree on all issues, we do agree that relations between our two countries have to be normalized. There is a determination on both sides to take forward our dialogue with an open mind and a constructive spirit.

You have with you a Joint Statement that has been agreed by both sides which reflects our common position. I will only make a reference to three issues in this Joint Statement. We said: The issue of peace and security including CBMs was discussed in a comprehensive manner. Both sides emphasized the need to promote greater trust and mutual understanding through constructive dialogue. The Foreign Secretaries noted that both countries recognize that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security. They reaffirmed the strong commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate terrorism in an effective and comprehensive manner. The Foreign Secretaries had a comprehensive exchange of views on the issue of Jammu & Kashmir and agreed to continue discussions in a purposeful and forward looking manner with the view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences. And finally, I draw your attention, both sides underlined the importance of greater people to people contacts and friendly exchanges in building a relationship of trust and friendship between the two countries. Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: I now request the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan to make his opening remarks.
Foreign Secretary of Pakistan (Mr. Jalil Abbas Jilani): Excellency Mr. Ranjan Mathai, Foreign Secretary of India, my very dear friends from the press corps, ladies and gentlemen.

It is a great pleasure for me to be back in this historic city. I am delighted to meet my old friends and colleagues. I would like to thank His Excellency Mr. Ranjan Mathai, the Foreign Secretary of India, for the gracious hospitality extended to me and my delegation ever since our arrival in New Delhi. I bring to the people and the Government of India message of goodwill, peace and cooperation from the people and Government of Pakistan.

My talks with Foreign Secretary Mr. Ranjan Mathai on peace and security including CBMs, Jammu and Kashmir and promotion of friendly exchanges have been substantive. We discussed these issues in detail in a cordial atmosphere. We held separate meetings for each segment which are part of Pakistan-India dialogue process.

We reviewed progress on peace and security and agreed to convene separate meetings of the expert-level Working Group on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs. We also discussed in detail Jammu and Kashmir with a view to finding peaceful resolution. We also reviewed progress on various cross-LoC Intra-Kashmir CBMs. We have agreed to convene a meeting of the Joint Working Group on Cross-LoC CBMs to streamline and strengthen travel and trade arrangements.

We have agreed that friendly exchanges in various fields will help in building trust and resolving all issues. We have agreed that the process dialogue should continue as there is no alternative to dialogue and constructive engagement.

Pakistan and India are two important countries in South Asia. They have a special responsibility to promote stability, peace and prosperity in the region. We are not only close neighbours, we are also partners in SAARC. I have conveyed to Foreign Secretary Mathai that Pakistan seeks friendly, cooperative and good neighbourly relations with India.

We must make sincere and serious efforts towards building mutual trust applying political will in resolving all outstanding issues through peaceful means, and continue to work for promotion of peace, harmony and cooperation.

Let me repeat what I said on my arrival. I have come here with a clear mandate from the leadership of Pakistan to promote bilateral relations. Let me assure you of our sincere desire to make every effort to resolve our differences and move forward.

I wish to thank Foreign Secretary Mathai once again for his invitation and warm hospitality. Thank you.
Official Spokesperson: Ladies and gentlemen of the media, I am aware that many of you have questions, perhaps each of you has a question, but given the paucity of time and other engagements we will limit them to a few.

Question (Ms Ritul Joshi, Aaj Tak): My question is both for Mr. Mathai and Mr. Jilani. Mr. Mathai, now that India has fresh evidence of involvement of Pakistani state actors in 26/11 attacks, was this evidence in terms of the confessional statement of Abu Jundal, his Pakistani ID and Passport, handed over to Pakistan? And what kind of action are you expecting from the Pakistani side?

Mr. Jilani, if you want to answer the question in Urdu we will be very happy, because we work for a Hindi channel.

Even after four years, you still maintain that you have not received proofs of the Mumbai attack from India. Is the new evidence received from Abu Jindal still insufficient? Or we can now expect some sort of action” (Free translation from Hindi)

Foreign Secretary of India: The Foreign Secretaries are mandated to discuss among other things, as we said, peace and security including CBMs. It is in this context that Foreign Secretary Jilani and I discussed all issues that impact peace and security between our two countries including terrorism. I emphasized that terrorism is the biggest threat to peace and security in the region, and that bringing the guilty to justice in the Mumbai terror attacks would be the biggest confidence building measure of all.

During the Home Secretary-level talks in May 2012 in Islamabad, extensive information on the perpetrators of 26/11 has been provided to the Pakistani side. The arrest and the ongoing interrogation of Abu Jundal has now added urgency to this matter. I did take up the issue with Foreign Secretary Jilani and I have shared information with him.

As you are aware, the investigation is under way and we will continue to pursue this matter with determination to its logical conclusion. The Home Minister, as you are also aware, has already addressed this issue.

Foreign Secretary of Pakistan: I will attempt to reply in Urdu as you suggested. If I had replied in English, it would have been easier for me. I will try.

In this connection I will say that we regard terrorism as a common enemy of India and Pakistan. This is because both the countries are facing this menace of terrorism. I will also add that if we blame each other like this, it will serve no purpose, and we shall perhaps not reach anywhere. Me, my government and our people are very serious about it, they think that we need to go from a negative Having said that, let me say that the issue was extensively discussed between myself and my very dear colleague Mr. Ranjan Mathai. And I assured him that the entire evidence, whatever evidence that India has, should be shared with us, and we will investigate this matter. We will even be willing to offer joint investigation into the whole affair.

For the time being I will say only this in reply, Thank you.

Question (Mr. Manish Chand, IANS): This question is addressed to both Foreign Secretaries.

Sir, the past few months have seen a lot of positive movement on the trade front. Do you think the revelations made by Abu Jundal constitute a setback to the peace process and the so-called peace dividend which was sought to be developed by trade?

Foreign Secretary of India: I think the forward movement on economic and commercial cooperation between India and Pakistan is really a welcome development. And we see it as a win-win proposition for both sides. Enhanced economic cooperation contributes to economic growth and development in our two countries which is the primary objective on both sides. We look forward to making progress on the trade track in accordance with the roadmap which has been agreed already by the two sides.

At the same time we are very conscious terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and the full normalization of bilateral relations. In this regard we have reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate the scourge in all its forms and manifestations and bring those responsible for such crimes to justice. We expect the realization of this commitment and look forward to its fulfillment.

Foreign Secretary of Pakistan: In response to your question I will say, ‘We hope not!’ There should be absolutely no setback because setback is something that we cannot afford. I think whenever we are faced with this kind of a situation, and I said earlier that we are both faced with terrorism, we should intensify our cooperation. I have been following this process for a long time and I have every reason to believe that we have certainly made a lot of progress on almost every issue including the issue of terrorism.

As I said, our Home Ministries and the Interior Ministry, they should meet more often. The respective agencies should meet more often and enter into a comprehensive cooperation in order to defeat the forces of terrorism.
Question (Ms Geeta Mohan, Times Now): My question is to both the Foreign Secretaries.

Home Minister P. Chidambaram has said that state actors were involved in the 26/11 attacks. What is Pakistan really doing about it because every time India raises 26/11, Pakistan talks about Samjhauta when India continues to maintain that they are incomparable, that India has taken action and Pakistan has not done much on 26/11? And why weren’t the documents on Abu Jundal shared with Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary of Pakistan: I have already said that whenever we both countries are faced with terrorism we need to intensify our cooperation. I would very strongly reject any insinuation of any involvement of any state agency in acts of terrorism in India. Having said that, I would say that we have over the years improved our level of cooperation. And in case there are certain gaps that need to be filled, I think we should fill those gaps in a spirit of cooperation. And that is the only way that we can move forward on this very very important issue.

Foreign Secretary of India: I will just add to that.

Home Minister has already addressed this question in some detail and he drew attention to the scale of the conspiracy and the extent of control. I do not think I need to add anything to that. I did convey information provided to us regarding the outcome of the investigation so far that has been taken on board, as you heard, by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary. And we look forward to them taking action on that information.

Question (Mr Gautam Lahiri, Sangbad Pratidin): Good morning Excellencies. My question is addressed to both the Foreign Secretaries.

It is almost a year since both the countries have started dialogue at different levels. After these Foreign Secretary-level talks, could you give us an assessment of how the trust deficit is reduced? And has it reduced to a level that both India and Pakistan can start a cricket match right now, which has been stopped for quite a long time?

Foreign Secretary of Pakistan: I certainly can tell you that we have positively assessed this dialogue process, the resumed process that we started, and we have made significant progress. With regard to the cricketing ties, again this issue was discussed between myself and His Excellency Mr. Ranjan Mathai. I put forward certain suggestions for the revival of cricketing ties between the two countries, and I think we will continue with this positive trajectory that we have adopted over the years in moving forward in our relations.

Foreign Secretary of India: Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mr. Jilani and I reviewed the various engagements that have taken place already and we noted that we are now at the culmination of the second round of the resumed dialogue. We have made progress in people-to-people relations and trade. We are cognizant that much more needs to be done on these tracks and on the other tracks and that the path ahead is not going to be an easy one. But the very fact that both sides are determined to sit across the table and resolve all outstanding issues through a dialogue in a peaceful manner is a positive step in the right direction.

As for the resumption of cricketing ties, this is really a matter for the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) and the Pakistan Cricket Board. There are issues of security as well which arise. However, as you will see in the Joint Statement which we have circulated, we have both emphasized the need to promote sports and media contacts between the two countries. So, I think we will leave it there for the moment.

Official Spokesperson: Ladies and gentlemen, with that we come to the end of this interaction. Thank you very much.
275. Joint Statement on India Pakistan Foreign Secretaries level talks.

New Delhi, July 5, 2012.

During the second-round of the resumed dialogue process, the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in New Delhi on July 4-5, 2012 for bilateral talks on Peace and Security including CBMs, Jammu & Kashmir and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges.

2. The talks were held in a frank and constructive atmosphere. Both sides reiterated their desire to carry forward the dialogue process in a purposeful and result-oriented manner.

3. The issue of Peace and Security, including CBMs, was discussed in a comprehensive manner. Both sides emphasized the need to promote greater trust and mutual understanding through constructive dialogue.

4. The Foreign Secretaries reviewed the ongoing implementation of the already adopted Nuclear and Conventional CBMs. It was decided that separate meetings of the Expert Level Groups on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs will be held to discuss implementation and strengthening of the existing CBMs and suggest additional mutually acceptable steps that could build greater trust and confidence between the two countries, thereby contributing to peace and security. The dates for the meetings of Expert Level Groups will be determined through diplomatic channels.

5. The Foreign Secretaries noted that both countries recognize that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security. They reaffirmed the strong commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate terrorism in an effective and comprehensive manner so as to eliminate the scourge in all its forms and manifestations.

6. The Foreign Secretaries had a comprehensive exchange of views on the issue of Jammu & Kashmir and agreed to continue discussions in a purposeful and forward-looking manner with the view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences.

7. Both sides recognized the need to strengthen the existing Cross-LoC CBMs for streamlining the arrangements to facilitate travel and trade across LOC. They decided to convene a meeting of the Working Group on Cross-LoC CBMs on July 19, 2012 in Islamabad to recommend steps for strengthening and streamlining and effectively implementing the existing trade and travel arrangements and propose modalities for introducing additional cross LoC CBMs.

8. Both sides underlined the importance of greater people to people contacts and friendly exchanges in building a relationship of trust and friendship between the two countries. They noted that the text of a revised bilateral Visa Agreement has already been finalized and decided to work for its early signing. They emphasized the importance of greater parliamentary exchanges; promotion of cooperation in various fields including facilitating visits to Religious Shrines and cessation of hostile propaganda against each other.

9. The Foreign Secretaries also emphasized the need to promote media and sports contacts.

10. During his visit the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan will be calling on Minister of External Affairs of India, H.E. Mr. S.M. Krishna and National Security Adviser HE Mr. Shivshankar Menon.

11. The Foreign Secretaries will meet again in Islamabad, on a date to be decided through diplomatic channels, to prepare for the meeting of the External Affairs / Foreign Ministers in September 2012.

276. Response of External Affairs Minister to a Question on the emergency landing of an Air India flight in Pakistan and on his talks with Foreign Minister of Pakistan in Tokyo.

Phnom Penh, July 10, 2012.

At the outset I would like to convey my thanks for the helpful attitude and the cooperation we received when AI flight had to land in Pakistan. I think the Government of Pakistan went out of their way to make things easy for all those who were inside the aircraft and they provided every possible assistance including food to the passengers who were onboard the aircraft, this certainly is something which India deeply appreciated.

And as far as my meeting with Foreign Minister Hina Rabbani Khar in Tokyo which has been part of the various meetings of confidence building and meetings which would help in bridging the trust deficit has been identified by the leaders of both the countries.

Hina Rabbani Khar after assuming the responsibility of guiding the foreign affairs of Pakistan has been extremely cooperative and as she assured me when she visited Delhi that she comes with a new mindset and that mindset has been the ongoing one. I look forward to my own visit to Islamabad which was due to take place on 19th of this month but now has to be postponed because of our presidential election and also the impeding parliamentary session. So I think we have decided that in the month of September. 7th, 8th and 9th are the dates which we have proposed to Government of Pakistan. We are hoping that they would convey their concurrence.

New Delhi, July 12, 2012.

The India-Pakistan Joint Working Group Meeting for working out a mechanism for release of fishermen and their boats who cross maritime borders inadvertently was held here today. The Indian delegation was led by Vice Admiral MP Muralidharan, Director General Indian Coast Guard while the Pakistan delegation was led by Rear Admiral Waseem Akram, Director General, Pakistan Maritime Security Agency (PMSA).

The meeting was held in pursuance of the decision taken during the India-Pakistan Home/Interior Secretary Level Talks held on 28-29 Mar 2011, where both sides agreed to task the Indian Coast Guard (ICG) and PMSA to work on setting up a mechanism for release of fishermen and their boats who cross maritime borders inadvertently.

The group held preliminary discussions on the issue and recognised the need for addressing the humanitarian aspect of inadvertent crossing of maritime borders by legitimate fishermen. The discussions were fruitful in mutual exchange of ideas and deliberating way ahead in evolving a suitable mechanism for release of such fishermen and their boats. It was also acknowledged that focused approach and sustained efforts of the group needs to be continued.

278. Response of the Official Spokesperson to the OIC Summit Communiqué and some other question on Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 17, 2012.

“We note that there is an erroneous and factually incorrect mention about an integral part of India by the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) in its Communiqué issued at its Fourth Extraordinary Summit held in Makkah on August 14-15, 2012. This is wrong, unacceptable and we reject it.”

Question: Sir, you would have seen the reports about Sarabjit and his letter. What has the Indian Government done in that matter about following up; whether the Indian High Commission in Islamabad has done anything or the MEA from here? Also, can you tell us about bilaterals in Iran?

Official Spokesperson: Let me answer your first question about Shri Sarabjit Singh. Those of you who have followed this matter are aware of the keen interest that the External Affairs Minister Mr. Krishna takes in this matter. You are also aware that the Government of India has consistently urged the Government of Pakistan on several occasions to take a sympathetic and a humanitarian view of the entire case of Shri Sarabjit Singh.

If I recollect correctly, it was on perhaps 27th of June earlier this year when the External Affairs Minister himself had renewed his request to the President of Pakistan to release Shri Sarabjit Singh who has been in custody for well over two decades. With that background, let me say that what you mentioned in terms of the news reports, we have also seen them. Our High Commission in Islamabad stands ready to assist his lawyer should he require it. But at this stage my understanding is that the lawyer himself has requested the Pakistani authorities. Should he require further assistance on this matter, the High Commission would assist him in terms of consular assistance. If this matter further proceeds, the External Affairs Minister has made assured Sarabjit’s family that he would raise it when he meets his opposite number whenever and wherever that is. I hope that answers your question on Sarabjit Singh.

Question: Yesterday Home Secretary announced that the Government of India will consider giving long-term visas to Hindus of Pakistan. Has any such request has come from the Hindus in Pakistan. What is the latest update in the past 24 hours? Also, has there been any direct communication on this issue between us and them?

Official Spokesperson: Let me put it this way. When Pakistani nationals apply for visas in Islamabad, they apply in categories which are covered by the India-Pakistan Bilateral Visa Agreement. That agreement provides for categories which are of a short-term nature. Therefore, when they apply and they are considered and we do due diligence and due processes are followed, we follow a thorough procedure in granting them those visas. After they come here, as you mentioned there have been news reports of some of them perhaps indicating that they would be interested in a longer stay. This is neither unusual for any visitor to India nor should it be seen in a perspective which is different from previous cases.

We have a process available here. And as the Home Secretary pointed out, in case somebody wants a visa which is beyond the period for which he or she has applied, there is a process. They would do due diligence in that and then take it up from there. At this stage, my information is that there have not been any requests from those who have recently been granted visas in Pakistan and who have crossed here. But then they have just come to India recently and there is still time for their present visa status which is usually for about a month or so. I would leave it at that rather than speculate any further. Should there be any other information, we will then be able to respond to any questions on that at a later stage.
279. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry reviewing the Foreign Direct Investment Policy to permit investments from Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 1, 2012.

1.0 Present Position:

1.1 As per paragraph 3.1.1 of Circular 1 of 2012- Consolidated FDI Policy', effective from 10.04.2012, investment from a citizen of Pakistan or an entity incorporated in Pakistan is not permitted.

2.0 Revised Position:

2.1 The Government of India has reviewed the policy, as contained in paragraph 3.1.1 of the circular ibid and decided to permit a citizen of Pakistan or an entity incorporated in Pakistan to make investments in India, under the Government route, in sectors/activities other than defence, space and atomic energy.

3.0 Amendment to paragraph 3.1.1:

3.1 Accordingly, Paragraph 3.1.1 of Circular 1 of 2012- Consolidated FDI Policy', effective from 10.4.2012, is amended to read as below:“3.1.1 A non-resident entity can invest in India, subject to the FDI Policy. A citizen of Bangladesh or an entity incorporated in Bangladesh can invest only under the Government route. A citizen of Pakistan or an entity incorporated in Pakistan can invest, only under the Government route, in sectors/activities other than defence, space and atomic energy.”

4.0 The above decision will take immediate effect.
Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary on Prime Minister's visit to Iran to attend XVI NAM Summit.

Please Document No. 173
281. Media briefing on the visit of External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna to Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 31, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good evening everybody and thank you very much for coming over this afternoon.

At the invitation of the Foreign Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan Her Excellency Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar, the External Affairs Minister of India Shri S.M. Krishna will visit Islamabad for bilateral talks to be held on September 8, 2012. These talks will be preceded by a meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan on September 7. The two Ministers will also co-chair the Plenary Session of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission which will be held in Islamabad on September 8.

Question: Sir, agreement on business visa relaxation was to be signed during the Home Secretaries’ meet. But then there was a feeling from the Pakistani that this ought to be done at the political level, not at the official level. What is our sense? Is this agreement going to be signed during this visit?

Official Spokesperson: You are right that we were ready to sign the visa agreement during the visit of the Home Secretary of India to Pakistan. At that stage we were informed that there are certain legal and other requirements which the Pakistani Government has to complete. We have been in touch with them since then including recent discussions. We are still trying to work out to ensure that the agreement can be signed at the earliest. It is possible that one of the possibilities which you are mentioning may be an occasion when that may happen. But we never announce signing of agreements of any kind before a visit is over. I understand many of you are travelling with the External Affairs Minister to Islamabad, and you will have occasion to know what would be the outcome of that visit. We do not want to preclude and announce any outcome prior to the visit. That has not been our usual way of handling these things.

Question: Has your Ministry received evidences regarding SMS messages from Pakistan? Would the Minister be sharing all those evidences during his visit to Islamabad?

Official Spokesperson: I think this is again another favourite of yours which we have been following for some time. At this stage we have not received any evidence on this. But we are aware that evidence is being collated and collected by the concerned authorities in India. Once that is over, obviously there will be inter-Ministerial consultations to see what we can do to take that process further.

Question: Sir, this is regarding the Judicial Commission from Pakistan. Can you just tell me what the situation is, why again? Is there a change in the view of the Government? Initially it appeared that the Government would not entertain it. Now it appears that there is a different view. Can you tell us what the position is? If there is a change, what is the change and why?

Official Spokesperson: This was raised by the Pakistani Interior Minister during the discussions yesterday when Prime Minister met President Zardari. Pakistan had made a request for the Commission to have permission to interview three persons. These were, my understanding is, two doctors and one Executive Magistrate. Our response was that our Home Ministry is consulting our judicial authorities on this and we would be in a position to respond to them once we get a response from the judicial authorities. As far as the executive branch is concerned, it was also indicated that we take a positive view of this request and we would be able to respond once we complete consultations within India on this. That is what the situation is as of now. I hope I have made myself clear on that.
Q: The resumed India-Pakistan dialogue process was aimed at reducing the trust deficit and normalizing the ties between the two countries? As you prepare for your meeting with your counterpart in Islamabad to take stock of the ongoing talks, in your assessment, how fruitful this exercise has been?

Ans: Dialogue is the best way to resolve issues between two sides. We have travelled some distance since our bilateral dialogue was resumed in February 2011. There has been some progress in the area of economic and commercial cooperation and promotion of friendly exchanges, including people-to-people contacts. In other areas like terrorism, much more needs to be done and there are challenges that exist but that shouldn’t deter us from talking about how to resolve these difficult issues.

Q: What is next in the dialogue process? Are you upgrading the dialogue process into ministerial levels on more issues and areas of cooperation? Any time-bound targets you have in mind for improving the ties on various spheres?

Ans: I cannot prejudge the outcome of the meeting that I am going to have with my counterpart Foreign Minister Hina Rabbani Khar. However, we remain committed to resolving all issues with Pakistan through a bilateral dialogue in an atmosphere free from terror and violence. At this stage, there is no proposal to raise the structured dialogue process to a ministerial level. In diplomacy, we cannot fix artificial timelines for such important and complex issues between two countries.

Q: The Pakistan leadership has high praise for Prime Minister Manmohan Singh—for his vision for the region, his innovative approach towards dealing with India-Pakistan relationship. Are you hopeful that Prime Minister would be able to visit Pakistan this year? If Pakistan’s so keen to host the prime minister, what they should do in terms of deliverables that’s makes Indian prime minister to visit Pakistan possible?

Ans: PM has been very clear on this issue. He has accepted the invitation to visit Pakistan at an appropriate time. He would like a well-prepared visit, which may have suitable outcomes.

Q: We hear of so much about “suitable outcomes” that would warrant a PM visit to Pakistan? Why New Delhi insisting on big takeaways, considering there have been too many Indian PM visits to Pakistan and we are still stuck on all the core issues? Or 26/11 Mumbai attack made things very difficult for when you think of Indian prime minister visiting Pakistan?

Ans: I don’t think PM is making his visit conditional on any big takeaways as you call it. All he is saying is that for a visit of such importance the time and atmosphere has to be appropriate, and the visit has to be well prepared keeping outcomes in mind.

Q: Pakistan says don’t make the dialogue process conditional. Is the progress on dialogue conditional to Pakistan taking meaningful action in bringing the Mumbai attack plotters and minders to justice? Pakistan says they don’t follow a conditional approach like putting J &K issue over all other issues?

Ans: In diplomacy, one does not set pre-conditions for dialogue. We are certainly not doing so ! You may be aware that under the resumed dialogue two rounds of Secretary level talks on various issues have been completed and I am going to Pakistan to review progress in the dialogue process with my Pakistani counterpart. However, we have consistently conveyed to Pakistan that for the dialogue to be meaningful, comprehensive and sustained, Pakistan must address our terrorism-related concerns, including on the Mumbai terror attacks case. This would go a long way in bridging the trust deficit and lead to eventual normalization of relations.

Q: In retrospect, you think India could have allowed the judicial commission to cross-examine the witnesses of the Mumbai terror attack at the first place? The two countries have the same evidence act. It could have been a foregone conclusion that the report of a panel that didn’t have the mandate to cross examine would be rejected by a court of law in Pakistan? Why did you then allow a commission at the first place and now Pakistan argues they agreed to send the panel in deference to Indian demands, despite knowing the outcome in advance?

Ans: It is not as simple as you are making it out to be. These are complicated legal issues in which the executive has to work within the confines of law and in consultation with all concerned.

Q: It seems President Asif Ali Zardari is keen on the urgent resolution of the Siachen issue? Is India game on that considering it would be a great “take away” for him? And are you still following a step-by step approach to the dialogue process or do you think time has to come to address the core issues, which many would say, is necessary for restoring the trust between the two countries?
Ans: We are committed to resolving all outstanding issues between the two countries through dialogue. We are convinced that for the normalization of relations between our two countries a step-by-step graduated approach is the most realistic one. Given the complexities of the issues involved, we have to move forward by tackling the ‘doables’ first and at the same time continuing with our sincere efforts to resolve the more intractable issues.

Q: Are you open to the suggestion from Pakistan interior minister that both countries should step up cooperation on security matters? There were also suggestions on a joint investigation into the Mumbai attack case? Your response to them, Sir?

Ans: Under the Home/Interior Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan there is agreement on cooperation on security matters between our respective agencies. However, the challenge is to realize these agreements on the ground. The declared intention has to be matched by tangible action. In the past, we did not have a very good experience with the Joint Anti-terrorism Mechanism (JATM) that had been set up between the two countries and that is why it was not pursued. As for the Mumbai terror attacks case, we believe that we have given more than adequate evidence to Pakistan to enable them to bring all the perpetrators of the heinous crime to justice.

Q: Sir, you come from a state where the India-Pakistan narrative is quite different from what it is this part of India. Has it helped you in dealing with the issue any different?

Ans: Our relationship with Pakistan is an Indian issue and cannot be looked at from a regional or provincial angle. I look at this issue from an Indian perspective.

Q: How soon we are going to see an India, Pakistan cricket match?

Ans: That answer you should seek from BCCI and PCB.
283. External Affairs Minister’s interview to The Express Tribune ahead of his visit to Pakistan

September 7, 2012.

[India is committed to resolving all outstanding issues with Pakistan through peaceful bilateral dialogue, S.M. Krishna.]

Never one to betray unnecessary excitability, India’s foreign policy point man, the stoic External Affairs Minister Somanahalli Mallaiah Krishna, has struck some encouraging notes ahead of his visit to Pakistan in an exclusive interview with The Express Tribune.

Among other things, he stressed that India wants Islamabad as a strong and stable “partner”– and pointed out that Pakistan’s geographical location puts it in an ideal position to be a bridge between South and Central Asia.

Scheduled to arrive in Pakistan today (Friday) on a three-day visit as a part of the composite dialogue process, Krishna is to hold talks with his Pakistani counterpart Hina Rabbani Khar, as well as other top political leaders on a range of issues.

His visit comes after substantive progress has already been made on the trade and commerce front between Pakistan and India, and could lay the groundwork for an even higher-level visit: that of Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh.

Krishna spoke to The Express Tribune over email on the eve of his arrival, talking about everything from trade to terrorism, prisoners to politics and from Consulates to Kashmir.]

Q: Should we expect any major breakthrough on some of the contentious issues hampering improved relations between Pakistan and India when Indian Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh travels to Islamabad later this year?

A: Let me begin by saying that I bring message of goodwill and serious intent for dialogue from the Government and the people of India for the Government and the people of Pakistan. India is desirous of building a relationship of mutually beneficial all-round cooperation with Pakistan. We would wish to see Pakistan as our strong and stable partner in pursuit of peace, progress and prosperity in our region.

During their recent meeting on the sidelines of the NAM Summit in Tehran, Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh thanked President Zardari for his gracious invitation to visit Pakistan. Dr Singh also said that he attached great importance to normalising relations with Pakistan, and was keen to visit Pakistan. It is also clear that the right atmosphere needs to be created for the visit. It would need to be prepared well to have a substantive outcome, which could strengthen significantly the process of building a constructive relationship with all round cooperation between the two countries. Prime Minister Singh also mentioned to President Zardari that there must be a general feeling that Pakistan was doing all that it can to deal with terrorism directed against India from Pakistan's soil.
In keeping with the desire of the two leaders, I shall explore with Her Excellency Hina Rabbani Khar the possibilities of what can be achieved to facilitate a purposeful visit of the Prime Minister.

Q: Why are the two—India and Pakistan—finding it almost impossible to come to some kind of agreement on Siachen and Sir Creek—an agreement based on give and take?

A: India is committed to resolving all outstanding issues with Pakistan through peaceful bilateral dialogue to find practical and pragmatic solutions. Given the complexities of our bilateral relations, we have to be patient as we move forward and build more trust and confidence in each other. There is nothing that cannot be achieved through patience and perseverance. At the same time, we should not lose sight of the considerable progress made by the two countries over the last one year or so in regard to trade and commerce, which has enormous potential to contribute to the progress and well-being of people on both sides; as well as Cross-LoC trade and travel facilities. During my visit, I also hope to conclude a liberalized visa agreement, which will give further boost to people to people contacts.

Q: There has been a lot of talk about cooperation between the two countries to fight terrorism and drug trafficking but very little concrete progress.
What are the reasons for this slow motion on these issues, potentially dangerous for the societies of both India and Pakistan?

A: Terrorism is the most serious threat to peace and security in our region. It is in the interest of everyone to co-operate in fighting this menace effectively and comprehensively. You may know that during their last meeting in May 2012, our Home/Interior Secretaries reached an understanding to enhance cooperation between National Investigation Agency of India and FIA of Pakistan on issues of mutual concern, including Mumbai terror attacks investigation. They also took an in principle decision to initiate negotiations on a Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty in order to strengthen mutual cooperation in criminal matters. They further decided to have an early meeting of investigation agencies (Central Bureau of Investigation of India and FIA of Pakistan) of the two countries to work out technical details of moving forward on issues of human trafficking, counterfeit currency, cyber crimes and Red Notices. However, I would wish to emphasize that to be productive, co-operation against terrorism requires a high degree of trust. We hope that the forward movement from the discussions between our Interior/Home Secretaries and the above mentioned agencies will be able to generate the requisite level of trust and the feeling that India’s concerns on this issue are being addressed effectively.

As regards drug trafficking, we hope that a Memorandum of Understanding signed between the Narcotics Control Bureau of India and Anti Narcotics Force of Pakistan in September 2011 to combat this menace will help enhance co-operation in this area.

Q: India does not seem to be even partially satisfied with the progress of the case in Pakistan against those (Lakhvi and company) allegedly involved in Mumbai attacks. What in your opinion would Pakistan need to do for India to feel satisfied with the progress?

A: India has repeatedly stressed, including at the highest level, the need for an expeditious and successful conclusion of the trial in Pakistan relating to those involved with the Mumbai terrorist attacks. Prime Minister Dr. Singh has recently mentioned that action in this respect will be a major confidence building measure, help in bridging the trust deficit and also help to build public support in India for the kind of relationship we would like to see between the two countries.

Q: How does India view Hafiz Saeed’s claims of his innocence in the Mumbai attacks?

A: Any such claim cannot withstand a case prepared well on the basis of the incontrovertible and undeniable evidence available against him and his well known track record of involvement in acts of terror against India.

Q: There are still many Indians in Pakistani jails and many Pakistanis in Indian jails. Would it not add to confidence building measures (CBMs) if the two immediately released at least those who have served their sentences and also those who are not accused of being involved in proven cases of espionage?

A: I completely agree that all such prisoners who have completed their sentences should be released and repatriated expeditiously. The understanding reached between the Home and Interior Secretaries in this regard needs to be implemented vigorously. I would like to mention that a large number of prisoners and fishermen have been repatriated from both sides over the last year or so. I am happy that efforts of the two governments in ensuring a humane approach in dealing with cases of fishermen and prisoners, especially women, elderly, juvenile, and those terminally ill or suffering from serious illness or physical / mental disability, have received significant support from the work of the bilateral Judicial Committee and the NGOs engaged in the task of ensuring the well-being and timely release of such individuals.

Q: In the same spirit-CBMs-would it not help if the two decided to allow setting up of their respective consulates in Mumbai and Karachi, so far blocked by Mumbai politics?

A: The significance of Mumbai and Karachi for trade and commerce and as pluralistic megacities is axiomatic. Resumption of work by the Consulate General of India in Karachi and that of Pakistan in Mumbai will undoubtedly help in boosting trade and commerce and people to people contacts. I would not look for simplistic answers to why the re-opening of these consulates has not taken place so far despite a move to that effect some years ago. Suffice it to say that we are in favour of such a move and willing to discuss the necessary modalities with the Government of Pakistan.

Q: Officially the two countries seem to have no reservations about relaxing visa restrictions but when it comes taking a final decision on the matter, the process seems to get stonewalled by some unexplained reasons. Your views on this, please.

A: A new and liberalized Visa Agreement has been finalised. It seeks to introduce or considerably improve visa facilities for tourists, businessmen, elderly and those wishing to visit their relations and friends. I may add that India has unilaterally taken a number of measures, including expediting business visas, grant of non-police reporting visas in deserving cases and introduction of student and medical categories etc.

Q: Now that there seems to be a desire on the part of the two countries to forge closer all round relations, would the two governments consider increasing the frequency of rail, road and air communications as well as removing all restrictions on to and fro movement of media products and media persons?

A: India wishes to build a mutually cooperative and productive relationship with Pakistan. Increased connectivity is both a facilitator and a consequence of such a bilateral engagement. The existing trade and travel links between our countries will need to be expanded as people to people contacts as well as trade and commerce grow. We are willing to consider opening more trade points along the border with Pakistan. We also fully support the theme of the last SAARC Summit, which was very aptly put as “Building Bridges”. India has put forward concrete proposals for enhancing regional connectivity not only with Pakistan but within the entire SAARC region. We are cooperating with SAARC countries and other neighbours in developing multi-modal connectivity within SAARC and beyond and look forward to Pakistan joining these efforts actively. India has also proposed two regional agreements – on Motor Vehicles and Railways in the SAARC framework. Pakistan’s geographical location puts it in an ideal position to be a bridge between South and Central Asia. The new trade and energy highways passing through our countries can bring prosperity commonly associated with the Silk Route of the bygone era.

People are at the heart of relations between any two countries, more so between India and Pakistan – countries which share much in their history and culture. Enhanced interaction between our peoples and exchanges in the sphere of media will go a long way in promoting better understanding of each other, and of this shared heritage and the need to preserve it. Our films, music, TV serials, artistes and authors are popular in each other’s country. I am happy that many young artistes from Pakistan are finding increasing success in India. We encourage this, for in the success of such people lies the seeds of greater trust and better understanding.

Q: Can you categorically say that the renewed peace process is irreversible? What if another Mumbai like attack happens, will it derail the process?

A: We have all along desired the peace process between India and Pakistan to remain uninterrupted. However, such a process cannot make much progress in an atmosphere of terror and violence. It would be unrealistic to expect that peace and cooperation can coexist with barbaric terrorism of the kind we saw in Mumbai. It is incumbent upon all countries to deal with terrorist forces effectively and comprehensively and to ensure that their territory is not used for acts of terror against others.

Q: Notwithstanding the current stated position of both Pakistan and India on Kashmir, can you realistically say the two countries find an out of box solution to the decades-old problem?

A: It would be recalled that the period between 2004-2008 saw the most fruitful and productive discussions ever between India and Pakistan, including on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. These discussions were based on the common understanding that while boundaries could not be redrawn, we could work towards making them irrelevant by enabling people on both sides of the Line of Control (LoC) to move freely and trade with each other. We need to carry those discussions forward and build on them. I may add that as a result of Cross-LoC CBMs initiated during the above period, a large number of people from both sides of LoC have been able to visit their families on the other side, and goods worth crores have been traded through two designated points on the LoC. Over the last one year, Her Excellency Hina Rabbani Khar and I have taken some important decisions to improve further the trade and travel facilities along the
LoC. The number of trading days has already gone up from two to four per week. Some other steps to be implemented include improvement of trade infrastructure, introduction of six-month multiple entry permits for travel, introduction of travel for tourism and pilgrimage in addition to visiting relations and introduction of banking facilities for Cross LoC trade. India is willing to open additional points along the LoC for trade and travel.

Q: India has got massive investment in the Southeast of Afghanistan and Pakistani leadership is always skeptical of your country’s presence there. How would you assure authorities here in Islamabad that New Delhi’s involvement in Kabul should not be seen as threat?

A: India is engaged in developmental and humanitarian work in Afghanistan, at the request of the Government of Afghanistan, to assist the Afghan people as they build a peaceful, stable, inclusive, democratic and pluralistic Afghanistan. India does not see Afghanistan as a battleground for competing national interests, nor assistance to Afghanistan for reconstruction and development as a zero sum game. Our 2 billion US Dollar assistance programme in Afghanistan is largely aimed at building infrastructure, capacity building in critical areas of governance, health, education, agriculture and generating employment. This has been developed in consultation with the Afghan authorities and is spread across all areas of that country. India’s sincere and friendly cooperation with Afghanistan, a country with which we share ties since antiquity, is not directed against any other country. I believe that there is growing realization of this reality in better informed segments of public opinion in Pakistan also. As countries with a vital stake in peace and stability in Afghanistan, we ought to be able to discuss our respective role in contributing towards such peace and stability.

Q: Is it possible that Pakistan and India can be on the same page on the Afghan endgame?

A: As countries in the region, both India and Pakistan naturally have a vital stake in a peaceful, stable, inclusive, democratic and pluralistic Afghanistan. Both the countries, and their peoples, stand to benefit enormously from Afghanistan thriving as a transit hub of trade and energy. This vision has also been endorsed by the international community. Such an Afghanistan can come about only if there is no external interference in its affairs and the people of Afghanistan are left to make choices for their own future. India would respect such choices and expects all other countries to do likewise.

Q: How can you assure authorities in Pakistan that India is not in any way involved in the ongoing unrest in Balochistan?

A: We have said it on many occasions, at the highest level, and I reiterate it for the benefit of your readers, that India wishes to see a stable and prosperous
Pakistan, acting as a bulwark against terrorism in its own interest and in the interest of the region. We are highly disappointed at the allegations made against India from time to time in the context of unrest in Baluchistan, with which India has nothing to do.

284. Statement by External Affairs Minister on arrival at Islamabad.

Islamabad, September 7, 2012.

I am very happy to visit Islamabad at the invitation of the Hon’ble Foreign Minister of Pakistan and my esteemed colleague Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar.

I bring a message of goodwill from India for the people of Pakistan.

I wish to reiterate the desire of India to see a stable and prosperous Pakistan living in peace with itself and the world. That would be in the best interest of everyone.

The leadership of India and Pakistan have mandated building of trust and confidence between our two countries. We are committed to finding solutions of all issues that have beset our relationship through peaceful bilateral dialogue, while we look to the future where our two countries are able to live together in an atmosphere of friendliness and all-round cooperation, free from terror and violence.

My endeavour during this visit will be to promote the objectives that I have just mentioned.

Thank you.

285. Remarks by External Affairs Minister at the Joint Media Interaction held in Islamabad during his visit to Pakistan

Islamabad, September 8, 2012.

External Affairs Minister of India (Mr. S.M. Krishna): Excellency Mrs. Hina Rabbani Khar, Foreign Minister of Pakistan; my friends from the media; ladies and gentlemen:

Let me profusely thank the Foreign Minister of Pakistan for inviting me and my delegation to Islamabad. When she came to Delhi last year, we took a decision that the defunct Joint Commission has to be revived in order to further the bilateral relationship between our two countries. And I must commend the efforts, the positive efforts that the Foreign Minister of Pakistan has made in contributing for the revival of the Joint Commission sittings.

Yesterday I arrived here and then I called on the President and the Prime Minister. I had the privilege of calling on both of them and I conveyed to them the best wishes of our leadership and our desire for a peaceful and cooperative relationship with Pakistan. Our discussions today, which were held in very cordial, frank, positive and productive manner, covered the entire spectrum of issues within the framework of the structured dialogue process. We drew inspiration from the commitment of the leadership of our two countries, and the desire of our two peoples to resolve all issues peacefully and build a relationship of trust and mutually beneficial cooperation.

We took stock of the current state of our bilateral relations. Given the complexities of the issues that we face, we are reasonably satisfied at the progress achieved in the last round of the resumed dialogue. We are also cognizant that there is a long way to go and the path ahead will not be easy; but we are committed to moving forward in order to write a new chapter of peace and cooperation in our relationship.

We agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security, and reaffirmed the strong commitment of the two countries to fight terrorism in an effective and comprehensive manner so as to eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations. In this regard, Pakistan side reiterated its commitment to bring all perpetrators of the Mumbai terror attacks to justice expeditiously in accordance with the due process of law.

The positive assessment of the direction and progress in the dialogue process is manifest in some of the following elements. The bilateral Joint Commission held its plenary after a gap of five years. The eight technical-level Working Groups of the Joint Commission held fruitful discussions in exploring mutual cooperation in areas including agriculture, health, education, environment, and science and technology.
Bilateral Visa Agreement was signed by Interior Minister, His Excellency Mr. Rehman Malik, and me today. The Memorandum of Understanding on Cultural Cooperation between the Indian Council of Cultural Relations and Pakistan National Council of the Arts was also signed today. We decided to convene separate meetings of the expert groups on nuclear and conventional confidence-building measures in New Delhi in the second half of December, 2012.

We reviewed the existing cross-LoC CBMs on travel and trade, and endorsed the recommendations made by the Joint Working Group on Cross-LoC CBMs in its meeting in Islamabad on July 19, 2012. We have expressed satisfaction at the progress registered towards the full normalization of bilateral trade and economic relations, and reiterated the need for both sides to strictly adhere to the roadmap drawn by the two Commerce Ministers in this regard.

As people are at the heart of the relationship, we also discussed measures for promoting cooperation in various fields including facilitating visits to religious shrines, media exchanges, holding of sports tournaments, and cessation of hostile propaganda against each other.

On the way forward, we agreed to the launch of the next round of Secretary-level dialogue on all eight segments. Schedule for these meetings will be worked out through diplomatic channels. We further agreed that all these meetings will be held prior to our next review meeting in New Delhi in 2013. I look forward to receiving the Foreign Minister of Pakistan in New Delhi next year.

Let me conclude by expressing my profound thanks to the President of Pakistan, and also His Excellency Rehman Malik, and the Foreign Minister of Pakistan for the wonderful gesture of releasing all the Indian fishermen in Pakistan custody; and I hope their boats and trawlers also will be released simultaneously.

Once again, Your Excellency, I thank you immensely for the courtesies that were extended to me and my Delegation. I was here two years back. I see a positive change in the atmosphere, and I would like to compliment the present leadership of Pakistan and the role played by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan in bringing about that changed atmosphere in Pakistan which augurs well for the relationship between our two countries. Let us not look back, as you have very rightly said, let us not be held hostage to whatever has happened earlier. I think we will have to keep our sights to the future. Let us look to the future. Let us walk the talk together. Let us see that the new chapter which I spoke about is going to be mutually beneficial to both of us. And to this I dedicate myself and India, and I am sure that it will be helpful to both of us.

Thank you.
286. Media Interaction of External Affairs Minister in Islamabad.
Islamabad, September 8, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good evening friends. The External Affairs Minister has agreed to take a few questions. He has to go for a dinner, and we are running slightly behind schedule. He will take a few questions on the record. We would not have any opening remarks. You have everything that he has said. You can begin with your questions.

Question: Sir, all this talk about Visa Agreement, at the end of the day Foreign Minister of Pakistan made no reference of terror during that entire long press conference. You were present during that entire ...(Inaudible)... How did that strike you, after these hours of negotiations and all the things that you told her, not a word on terror?

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): What is material for me is the Joint Statement that has been issued after my talks, and the Joint Statement certainly contains mentions about terror. So, that is what matters for me.

Question: But did it come as a surprise that she did not even mention it?

External Affairs Minister: The Joint Statement is a document and she is a signatory to that statement.

Question: The Joint Statement gives an impression that Pakistan has been able to equate Samjhauta Express incident with 26/11.

External Affairs Minister: These are issues which are being raised every time I come to Pakistan or every time the Pakistan Foreign Minister comes to India. They raise the Samjhauta Express and we raise the 26/11 and in the Joint Statement, both of these aspects are covered.

Question: Sir, there is a lot of confusion over what you said on conditions for the Prime Minister’s visit and whether you are linking this to progress on the Mumbai attack.

External Affairs Minister: The Prime Minister’s visit needs lot of preparations. It takes months of preparation for the Prime Minister’s visit to happen. And Prime Minister has other commitments. His calendar has to be looked into. So, there is no commitment that I could make about the possible visit of the Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan. There is an invitation which has been extended to the Prime Minister, and it is for the Prime Minister to find about the invitation itself per se, to accept the invitation, and then work on the dates. So, that is something which is in the area of speculation.

Question: But is there any condition? You said there would be no conditions on any progress on Mumbai.
External Affairs Minister: The invitation to the Prime Minister, we are at that point. So, the question of any condition does not arise.

Question: Sir, on Sarabjit issue, is there any positive signal from the Pakistan’s side?

External Affairs Minister: I think when I mentioned this to the President last night, the President has taken it very seriously and he instructed his office to certainly look into it. And our approach is on humanitarian basis considering the fact that he has spent almost twenty years in a Pakistani jail. And his age, his health, all these are going to be factors which the Government of Pakistan will have to look into.

Question: Sir, you said, “When I go back I will provide an assessment to the Prime Minister”, and Ms. Khar said, “His assessment will be positive”. Can you give us a little trailer of what your assessment would be?

External Affairs Minister: I think that is between me and the Prime Minister. I cannot convey to my Prime Minister through the media. Don’t you think that if you were here you wouldn’t do this? Would you?

Question: Sir, during the press conference Pakistan Foreign Minister spoke about the Pakistan’s desire to move on on Jammu and Kashmir, Sir Creek, Siachen, and put it in the context of getting on with the relationship. Do you it also as a move, sort of suggestion, that you move on from Mumbai?

External Affairs Minister: Mumbai is very much on the table and they will have to take the follow-up action for bringing to justice the perpetrators of the heinous crime on Mumbai and on India. India is not going back on that, we are insisting on that at every conceivable occasion, and we will continue to do that. Again, you mentioned about Kashmir, you mentioned about Siachen, you mentioned about Sir Creek. These are issues which are there and they cannot be pushed aside. But a step-by-step approach which we have been advocating, which I advocated two years back which was totally rejected, and this time around I think Pakistan has accepted that and they also believe that a step-by-step approach is the most rational one for both the countries to adopt. As again the Prime Minister in one of his press conferences said, we are not afraid of the word Kashmir. We are willing to talk about Kashmir also. But for that, you need the right atmosphere for the issues to be discussed. And I think we are willing to approach Pakistan for a dialogue on any subject that they wish to.

Question: Sir, the Pakistani Foreign Minister said, “Let us not look back in the past”. Then you echoed that sentiment that we will not look back in the past, we will not be held hostage to history. That statement can be construed that you are willing to overlook 26/11. Is that exempt from 26/11? Are you not forgetting 26/11?
External Affairs Minister: There is no question of bypassing 26/11. When we said this we mean the wars that were fought and various other developments. But what happened in the immediate past in the last three years, we just cannot forget about it. We cannot gloss over it. It is very much on the table.

Thank you very much, and I hope you have had a good stay here in Islamabad.

Official Spokesperson:

Thank you very much.
Joint Statement issued by India and Pakistan during the visit of External Affairs Minister to Pakistan.

Islamabad, September 8, 2012.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan H.E. Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar and the Minister of External Affairs of India H.E. Mr. S.M. Krishna met in Islamabad on September 8, 2012, for a meeting to review progress in the Dialogue process.

2. The Ministerial level talks were preceded by a meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India on September 7, 2012.

3. The talks were held in a cordial, candid and constructive atmosphere.

4. The Ministers reviewed the status of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction on the holding of meetings on the issues of Counter-Terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial) and Narcotics Control; Humanitarian issues; Commercial & Economic cooperation; Wullar Barrage /Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Siachen; Peace & Security including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; and promotion of Friendly Exchanges.

5. The Ministers noted that the dialogue process is guided by the commitment of leadership of the two countries, expressed at the highest level, to find peaceful and mutually acceptable solutions to all outstanding issues and to build a relationship of trust and all round cooperation between Pakistan and India.

6. The Ministers expressed satisfaction at the increase in high level bilateral exchanges between the two countries since their last meeting in New Delhi in July 2011, namely, leadership level meetings between President Asif Ali Zardari and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh at New Delhi and Tehran in April and August 2012, the first ever bilateral visit of the Speaker of Lok Sabha to Pakistan at the invitation of the Speaker of the National Assembly of Pakistan, visit of the Commerce Minister of Pakistan to India, after 35 years, in September 2011, another visit by the Commerce Minister of Pakistan to India in April 2012, and the first ever bilateral visit of the Commerce and Industry Minister of India to Pakistan in February 2012. The Ministers underlined the importance of continued high level exchange between the two countries.

7. The Ministers held substantive discussions on the whole range of issues within the framework of the Dialogue process and expressed satisfaction over the progress achieved since their last review meeting in July 2011.

8. The Ministers reaffirmed the importance of carrying forward the dialogue process with a view to resolving peacefully all outstanding issues through constructive and result oriented engagement, and to establish friendly, cooperative and good neighborly relations between Pakistan and India.
9. The Ministers agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security. They reaffirmed the strong commitment of the two countries to fight terrorism in an effective and comprehensive manner so as to eliminate the scourge in all its forms and manifestations.

10. The Ministers noted the commitment given by Pakistan during the Interior/Home Secretary talks in May 2012 to bring all the perpetrators of the Mumbai terror attacks to justice expeditiously in accordance with due process of law.

11. The Ministers noted that during the Interior/Home Secretary talks in May 2012 Indian side had conveyed that the investigation in the Samjhauta Express blast case is still ongoing and updated information will be shared with the Pakistan authorities, through diplomatic channels when the investigation is completed.

12. The Ministers welcomed the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding on “Drug Demand Reduction and Prevention of Illicit Trafficking in Narcotics Drugs/Psychotropic Substances and Precursor Chemicals and related matters” between the Anti Narcotics Force of Pakistan and Narcotics Control Bureau of India in September 2011 and expressed the hope that the MoU will help enhance mutual cooperation between Pakistan and India through effective and sustained steps to control the growing menace of drug trafficking.

13. The Ministers welcomed the release of prisoners and fishermen, including those suffering from ailments, in the past year or so. They agreed that the Agreement on Consular Access should be implemented in letter and spirit including immediate notification of arrests by either side, consular access to all persons within three months of arrests, release of prisoners within one month of completion of sentence and confirmation of their national status. The Ministers also welcomed the continued work of the Judicial Committee and agreed with the need to implement its recommendations on various aspects of release and repatriation of prisoners and fishermen of each country by the other and adoption of the humane approach in dealing with cases of fishermen and prisoners, especially women, elderly, juvenile, and those terminally ill or suffering from serious illness or physical/mental disability.

14. The Ministers noted that talks were held between the Director General of the Pakistan Maritime Security Agency and the Director General of the Indian Coast Guard in New Delhi in July 2012 and agreed to the importance of continuing their meetings. They further directed that the issues relating to fishermen as contained in para-10 of the Joint Statement issued after the Interior/Home Secretaries talks between Pakistan and India in March 2011 would be further examined by the relevant authorities of the two countries.

15. The Ministers welcomed the decision during the last meeting of the Home/Interior Secretaries of the two countries in May 2012 to initiate discussions in order to strengthen mutual cooperation in criminal matters.
16. The Ministers attached importance to promoting Peace and Security, including Confidence Building Measures, between the two countries and agreed to convene separate meetings of the Expert Groups on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs, in New Delhi in the second half of December 2012.

17. The Ministers held discussions on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and agreed to the need for continued discussions, in a purposeful and forward-looking manner, with a view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences.

18. The Ministers reviewed the existing Cross-LoC CBMs and acknowledged that the ceasefire was holding since 2003. They also reviewed the implementation of the decisions taken regarding travel and trade across the Line of Control (LoC) in their last meeting in July 2011. They expressed satisfaction at the increasing number of people of Jammu and Kashmir who are able to avail of the facility to travel across LoC, and also at the growing Cross-LoC trade benefitting them on both sides of the LoC. They also welcomed the enhancement of the number of days for conducting trade across LoC from two to four per week, as had been agreed by them. Taking note of the recommendations made by the Joint Working Group (JWG) on Cross-LoC CBMs in its meeting in Islamabad on July 19, 2012, the Ministers decided the following:

Cross-LoC Travel:

(i) Cross-LoC travel would be expanded on both sides of LoC to include visits for tourism and religious pilgrimage.

(ii) Tourist and Pilgrimage sites will be designated on both sides of the LoC and information will be available with the designated authorities.

(iii) Such visits will be conducted by designated Tour Operators in groups not exceeding 15 persons.

(iv) Permits for such visits will be single entry, non-extendable and valid for up to 15 days.

(v) Travel for tourism or pilgrimage will be arranged during summer season i.e. April to October.

(vi) Crossing for such visits will initially be from Chakothi-Uri and Rawalakot-Poonch Crossing points.

(vii) Both sides will facilitate speedy clearance of applications for travel across LoC. The process time should not be more than 45 days.

(viii) Both sides will extend necessary assistance to valid entry permit holders to cross the LoC in emergency situation on crossing as well as non-crossing days. This will be facilitated by designated authorities.
Cross-LoC Trade:

(i) List of 21 products of permissible items for Cross-LoC trade will be respected by both sides.

(ii) Regular meetings between the traders on monthly basis on both sides will be facilitated.

(iii) The designated authorities will resolve operational issues concerning Cross-LoC trade through regular meetings.

(iv) Improvement of roads and bridges for Cross-LoC trade will be facilitated.

(v) Transportation links on operational crossing points will be upgraded.

(vi) Both sides agreed to facilitate the exchange of business delegations.

19. It was agreed that the JWG on Cross-LoC CBMs will meet on a bi-annual basis to review existing arrangements and suggest additional CBMs and measures for Cross-LoC travel and trade.

20. Both sides agreed to the need for promoting friendly exchanges between the two countries. They also discussed measures for promoting cooperation in various fields including facilitating visits to religious shrines, media exchanges, holding of sports tournaments and cessation of hostile propaganda against each other.

21. The Ministers welcomed the signing of the new Visa Agreement which liberalises bilateral visa regime and introduces a number of measures aimed at easing travel of business persons, tourists, pilgrims, elderly and children, thereby facilitating contacts between peoples of the two countries, who should remain at the heart of the relationship between Pakistan and India.

22. The Ministers welcomed the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation in the field of culture between the Pakistan National Council of the Arts and the Indian Council for Cultural Relations.

23. The two sides exchanged views on Siachen, Sir Creek and Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project, agreed that there is the need to effectively address these issues by finding mutually acceptable solutions and reiterated their commitment to do so. They also reaffirmed the importance of abiding by the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty.

24. The Ministers expressed satisfaction at the progress registered towards normalizing bilateral trade and commercial relations. The Ministers firmly reiterated that both sides will scrupulously adhere to the roadmap drawn up by the two Commerce Ministries for full normalization of trade relations. They agreed that a strong and enhanced economic partnership is in the interest of peoples of both countries.

25. The Ministers welcomed reactivation of the Pakistan-India Joint Commission, in accordance with their decision taken last year. They Co-Chaired the Plenary of the Joint Commission, which met for the first time after 2007. They expressed satisfaction at the meetings of all eight Technical Level Working Groups and noted that these Groups have made a number of suggestions for exploring mutually beneficial cooperation in areas of agriculture, education, environment, health, information and broadcasting, information technology and telecommunication, science and technology and tourism. They took note of and approved the Report by the Foreign Secretaries, which is annexed.

26. The Ministers reaffirmed their commitment to the goals and objectives of SAARC and agreed to make joint efforts to promote cooperation for regional development in the SAARC framework.

27. The Ministers agreed to the launch of the next round of Secretary level dialogue on all eight segments, as contained in para-4 above. Schedule for these meetings will be worked out through diplomatic channels. They further agreed that all these meetings will be held prior to their next review meeting in New Delhi in 2013.

28. The External Affairs Minister of India called on the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

Areas Identified for Cooperation by Technical Level Working Groups of the Pakistan-India Joint Commission

- The Pakistan-India Joint Commission met in Islamabad on 6th September 2012 in pursuance of the decision taken by the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan and Minister of External Affairs of India during their last meeting in New Delhi on 27 July 2011. The reactivation of the Joint Commission was welcomed by both sides. The following eight Technical Level Working Groups (TLWG) discussed and identified avenues of mutually beneficial cooperation in the respective fields:
  - Agriculture
  - Education
  - Environment
  - Health
  - Information
The working group on Agriculture discussed avenues of cooperation and identified certain areas for collaboration including exchange of experts and training of scientists in the areas of crop improvement through the use of biotechnology, cooperation in seed sector, quarantine related matters, livestock and dairy development sector, high efficiency irrigation system and rain water harvesting.

The working group on Education explored avenues for furthering cooperation in the fields of school and higher education, non-formal education and adult literacy. It also explored furthering cooperation through institutional linkages between Higher Education Commission of Pakistan and University Grants Commission of India, linkages between National Vocational and Technical Training Commission of Pakistan and All India Council for Technical Education of India and exchange of experiences between National Book Foundation of Pakistan, National Book Trust and National Council of Educational Research and Training of India.

The working group on Environment discussed various issues relating to environment and agreed to enhance cooperation in the fields of climate change, renewable energy, environmental protection, energy conservation and Clean Development Mechanism, Bio diversity and sustainable forest conservation, solid waste management. It agreed to share experiences and best practices including establishing institutional linkages for knowledge sharing and capacity building.

The working group on Health agreed to enhance cooperation in polio eradication and increasing immunization coverage, cooperation in women and child health, sharing experience for retaining human resources in rural area exchange of information on regulatory regime and institutional collaboration between Drug Regulatory Agency of Pakistan and Central Drugs Standard Control Organization of India. They also agreed to enhance cooperation in Quality Assurance and Drug Testing laboratories in pharmaceuticals and biological.

The working group on Information discussed issues concerning Information and Broadcasting. In this context, exchange of journalists and information professionals, organizing film festivals in each other's countries, holding of seminars/workshops, between Indian Institute of Mass Communication (IIMC) and suitable Pakistani Institute; and between...
Film and Television Institute of India (FTII) and Academies of Pakistan Television Corporation and Pakistan Broadcasting Corporation; news exchange between official news agencies and exchange of TV and Radio programmes were identified for future collaboration. Both sides agreed that media can play a pivotal role in building and enabling environment between the two countries.

- The Working group on IT & Telecom discussed avenues of cooperation. Pakistan invited Indian companies to participate in ICT events in Pakistan. India offered to organize a customized e-governance workshop in India for Pakistan. They also discussed possibilities of collaboration in International Domain Name (IDN), sharing best practices on e-governance. Open Source Technologies and IT Enabled Services. The Group emphasized improved visa facilitation for IT & Telecom professionals. India offered to forward a proposal for establishing telemedicine linkages between the two countries.

- The working group on Science and Technology discussed National Science, Technology Innovation System in Pakistan and India. They agreed to work on common areas of interest by holding joint workshops/seminars and short training programmes. They identified areas of medicinal plants and herbal medicines (in Pakistan), renewable energy (in India) and Standards for such collaboration. Both sides also agreed to participate in each other’s science popularization programs/activities.

- The working group on Tourism held discussion on tourism industry and potential in both countries. They explored and identified areas for cooperation particularly in information sharing, Research and Development, human resource development in the field of tourism, Destination management, marketing and promotion, Meetings Incentives Conference and Exhibition (MICE) tourism, travel and hospitality industry.
288. Remarks of External Affairs Minister for the Visitor's Book at Minar-e-Pakistan in Lahore

“I am happy to visit Pakistan. I wish the people of Pakistan peace and progress. India would like to see a stable and prosperous Pakistan. I believe that the two sovereign countries – India and Pakistan – can and need to live respectfully and in peace, as good neighbours. Both the countries also need to work closely together to ensure a brighter future for their people. To this end, India remains committed to build a relationship of trust and mutually beneficial all-round cooperation with Pakistan.”
289. Joint Communiqué issued on the 7th Round of Indo-Pakistan Talks on Commercial and Economic Cooperation.

Islamabad, September 21, 2012.

The 7th round of India-Pakistan talks on Commercial and Economic Co-operation was held during 20-21 September 2012 at Islamabad between the Commerce Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

2. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. S R Rao, Commerce Secretary and Pakistan’s was led by Mr. Munir Qureshi, Secretary, Commerce.

3. Both sides expressed satisfaction with the progress made in the bilateral trade relationship, since last round of talks in New Delhi (14-16 November 2011). The bilateral meetings and discussions of the Trade and Commerce Ministers of both countries (September-2011, February-2012 and April-2012) provided a strong political impetus to enhanced economic engagement. The transition towards full normalization of trade relations with India was initiated by moving from a ‘positive list’ regime to a ‘negative list’ regime. Following the visit of Commerce Minister Shri Anand Sharma to Pakistan in February 2012, Pakistan side notified its negative list on 20th March 2012. The understanding at the previous Ministerial level talks has been that after approval by the Cabinet this negative list would be dismantled before the end of 2012.

4. The Commerce Secretaries reviewed with satisfaction that Commerce Ministers of India and Pakistan as well as the Chief Ministers of Punjab on either side of the border had jointly participated (April, 2012) in the Inauguration Ceremony of the new Integrated Check Post (ICP) at Attari. Commerce Secretaries appreciated that better trading opportunities provided through land route would enhance mutual prosperity of the business communities and consumers of both sides of the border. They however, noted that there is need to further strengthen infrastructure on both sides. They directed the customs and the port authorities to resolve all the issues through mutual cooperation, harmonization of customs procedures, provision of laboratory facilities, scanners, weigh bridges, cold houses, containerized services and automation of the business processes. For this purpose, meetings of the Customs Liaison Border Committee would be held on monthly basis. CLBC would also explore the possibilities of organizing meetings between the relevant importers and exporters at Wagah-Attari border. It was decided that this Land Customs Station would operate seven days a week.

5. The need for more trade traffic to be carried through the Railways was emphasized. For this purpose, it was agreed that the Railway Ministries would hold joint coordination meetings on a monthly basis, at the appropriate levels.
Issues on availability of sufficient number of rakes for interchange was also highlighted by the Pakistan Railways. It was noted that the earlier agreed provision of 3-4 interchanges a day has not been adhered to due to current trade patterns. A viable solution is to allow High Capacity Wagons (HCW) from Pakistan which carry three times more load than the regular wagons. The Indian Railways agreed that specifications already provided by the Pakistan Railways for HCW would be examined and conveyed accordingly within two months.

6. On exploring the possibilities of opening new land routes for trade, Pakistan side informed that a working group on Munabhao-Khokhrapar has been constituted. Indian side has already conveyed constitution of working group. It was agreed that meeting of the JWG on Munabhao-Khokhrapar would be held in 4th week of October, 2012 at New Delhi.

7. Both sides appreciated the recent signing (September, 2012) of the new liberalized bilateral visa regime. This fulfils a long pending demand of the business communities of both sides to ensure a better enabling environment for bilateral trade.

8. Pakistan side also appreciated the recent measures which have been taken by India to remove its earlier restrictions on inbound and outbound investments to Pakistan. Pakistan side sought clarifications from Indian authorities on investment through “Government Route” and its implications for investment by Pakistani investors in India. Both sides agreed to encourage two way investment and to enhance investor confidence on both sides, the procedures need to be simplified. It was also decided that outreach programmes may be held with the business communities on both sides, regarding the new investment opportunities, application procedures and regulatory issues.

9. On the issues relating to removal of Non-Tariff Barriers, Secretary Commerce Pakistan highlighted that certifications/licensing/lab testing/ are not the only NTBs but issues like delays in customs clearance, non availability of railway wagons for cargo transport, absence of direct flights or any problem which delays the clearance of goods with no end results or change, faced by importer/exporter is an NTB. He reiterated that concrete solutions of all such issues are crucial for ensuring market access in the Indian markets for Pakistani exporters. Commerce Secretary India while noting the views expressed by Commerce Secretary Pakistan, emphasized the need for elimination of such NTBs on both sides. Both sides expressed satisfaction on signing of the three agreements i.e. Redressal of trade grievances agreement, Mutual Recognition Agreement and Customs Cooperation Agreement and directed the relevant authorities to frame rules and procedures to fully implement these agreements. These agreements are expected to substantially facilitate bilateral trade mechanisms. It was agreed that on the same pattern as Mutual Recognition Agreement between BIS and PSQCA, another agreement between Export Inspection Council of India (EIC) and PSQCA will be signed. Both sides have already exchanged the draft texts and it was agreed to complete the internal approvals before the next meeting of the Commerce Secretaries.

10. The JWG on Customs Matters has held one meeting in August 2011. In order to frame rules and procedures to implement the two agreements signed between the Customs Authorities, it was agreed that JWG on Customs would meet in the following month either at Karachi or Mumbai.

11. It was reiterated that the road map drawn in the earlier Ministerial meetings, for liberalized and preferential trade regimes would be scrupulously adhered to. Pakistan side informed that summary for removal of restrictions on trade through land route has been moved to the Cabinet and assured that decision to this effect is expected to be notified before end of October, 2012.

12. The Pakistan side expressed appreciation of the steps taken by India to reduce its SAFTA sensitive list by 30% from 878 tariff lines to 614 tariff lines as agreed earlier during the 6th Round of Talks. The Indian side explained that out of 264 tariff lines which have been removed from India’s SAFTA sensitive list, 155 tariff lines pertain to agricultural commodities and 106 tariff lines relate to textile items. To further deepen the preferential arrangements under SAFTA and to provide level playing field to Pakistani exporters in comparison to concessions allowed by India under SAFTA to rest of the countries in the SAARC region, both sides developed a long term plan. It was noted that Pakistan now has a total of 936 tariff lines at 6 digit under its SAFTA Sensitive List, as against 614 tariff lines at 6 digit of India. It was agreed that after Pakistan has notified its removal of all restrictions on trade by Wagah-Attari land route, the Indian side would bring down its SAFTA sensitive list by 30% before December, 2012 keeping in view Pakistan’s export interests. Pakistan would transition fully to MFN (non discriminatory) status for India by December 2012 as agreed earlier. India would thereafter bring down its SAFTA Sensitive List to 100 tariff lines at 6 digit level by April, 2013. As India notifies the reduced Sensitive List, Pakistan, after seeking approval of the Cabinet, will also simultaneously notify its dates of transition to bring down its SAFTA sensitive list to a maximum of 100 tariff lines at 6 digit level within next 5 years. The reductions shall be notified by Pakistan in equal measure for each year so as to complete reduction to 100 lines before end of 2017. Thus, before the end of 2017, both India and Pakistan would have no more than 100 (6 digit) tariff lines in their respective SAFTA sensitive lists. Before the end of year 2020, except for this small number of tariff lines under respective SAFTA sensitive lists, the peak tariff rate for all other tariff lines would not be more than 5%.

13. The Commerce Secretaries also reviewed the progress on other issues such as enhanced trade for petroleum products, trade in power and reciprocal opening of Bank branches. Based on this review, the Commerce Secretaries exhorted the relevant stakeholders on both sides to speed up the mutual consultations so that concrete progress is achieved within the next six months. During this review, Indian side informed its willingness to consider export of gas up to 5 million cubic metres per day, for an initial period of five years. Pakistan side informed that India’s offer has been received and is under active consideration. BHEL (an Indian PSU) made an offer to cooperate with the Pakistan side in setting up 500 - 2000 MW capacity in coal/hydro or Gas power plants, as per their requirements. Indian side indicated its willingness to cooperate with Pakistan in areas of wind and solar energy. Indian side also made an offer for meeting the requirements of Pakistan Railways for up to 100 locomotives.

14. Pakistan side emphasized the importance of taking SMEs along in this trade normalization process. It highlighted that sectors like surgical instruments, cutlery, fans, leather and marble products have a huge potential for trade. It was agreed that an institutional mechanism would be constituted to work out exhibitions of these products in India. Sharing of technology, skill development, training and collaboration in development of designs would also be encouraged. Cooperation in the manufacturing activities of the Gems and Jewellery sector would be actively encouraged.

15. As a part of this round of talks, representatives of the Civil Aviation Authorities of both the countries undertook discussions to ensure better air connectivity between New Delhi and Islamabad. It was noted that against an average of about 23 flights per week between New Delhi and other important national capitals of the SAARC countries, there is as yet no direct air connectivity between New Delhi and Islamabad. It was agreed that a Joint Working Group (JWG) would be formed before 15th November 2012, which would work out a more liberalized regime of reciprocal bilateral rights for commercial flights, to ensure economic viability of this air route. This JWG would also explore mechanisms for more efficient courier services.

16. The two sides noted with satisfaction the business-to-business contact which is steadily growing between both countries. Chambers of Commerce on either side have been supporting business delegations and trade issues in each other’s countries. This process would be supported and facilitated by the Commerce Ministries of both the countries, with the active support of the TDAP and ITPO. The Secretaries directed the two organizations to provide better guidance to chambers and business people on customs procedures, import regulations and how to organize exhibitions.

17. The Commerce Secretaries also noted the decision that was taken by the Commerce Ministers to form a Joint Business Council (JBC) as an additional institutional framework for regular and sustained dialogue between the business communities. Both sides agreed to exchange names of 10 prominent business persons from each country for this JBC within a month. The endeavour would be to have a first meeting of this JBC before December 2012 and its recommendations would be duly considered for taking forward the ongoing trade and investment dialogue. The JBC would, inter-alia, also explore measures for increasing other related activities between the people of both countries.

18. Preliminary discussions were also held on possibilities of better telecommunication linkages keeping in view the requirements of business communities on both sides for international roaming facilities. It was agreed that separate sub-groups on either side would take forward this dialogue. Commerce Secretaries would review thereafter.

19. Both sides also reviewed the earlier discussed possibilities of greater trade cooperation in sectors of agriculture and information technology. Relevant stake-holders would be encouraged to take forward economic cooperation in these areas. Cooperation for increasing cotton yield in Pakistan through trials of suitable Bt cotton seeds, would be given more focused attention.

20. The Commerce Secretaries of both countries placed on record appreciation of their predecessors Dr. Rahul Khullar and Mr. Zafar Mahmood, who had very ably steered the trade dialogue from April 2011 onwards. It was resolved to further build upon the foundations laid by them to consolidate and enhance economic engagement.

21. The 8th round of talks would be scheduled to take place in India in April 2013. In the meantime, co chairs of the JWG on economic and commercial cooperation, Joint Secretaries of Commerce, India and Pakistan would meet in December, 2012 at Islamabad.

22. The bilateral trade talks were conducted in a very cordial and positive atmosphere.
290. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on UN Sanctions on Haqqani militant network.

New Delhi, November 7, 2012.

In response to a media query on the UN Security Council, under India’s Presidency, having imposed global sanctions against the Haqqani militant Network, the Official Spokesperson said:

“India welcomes the move by the UN Security Council to list the Haqqani Network among the entities that now face an asset freeze, a travel ban and an arms embargo. This Group has also targeted Indian interests in the past. The international community has to be united in its efforts to isolate such terror groups which threaten peace and security in our region, and other parts of the world.”
291. Response of the Official Spokesperson to a factually incorrect and misleading references to Indian State of Jammu & Kashmir by the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

New Delhi, November 20, 2012.

In response to a question on Resolutions adopted during the 39th Session of the Council of Foreign Ministers of Organization of the Islamic Cooperation (OIC) held in Djibouti from November 15-17, 2012, the Official Spokesperson said:

“We note with regret that the Organization of the Islamic Cooperation (OIC) has once again made factually incorrect and misleading references to matters internal to India, including the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir, which is an integral part of India. We reject all such references/resolutions.”

Interaction of External Affairs Minister with the media on the conviction of Ajmal Kasab.

New Delhi, November 21, 2012.

External Affairs Minister (Shri Salman Khurshid): Good morning.

Question: Sir, Ajmal Amir Kasab, who has been hanged this morning. What would be your reaction if his family or the Pakistan Government claim his body, which has been buried here? As the Chief Minister of Maharashtra has said, can his body be given to Pakistan?

External Affairs Minister: There are two questions. Whatever action has been taken from the very beginning has been taken as per our laws. Whatever there is in the law has been followed. He had all the opportunities that were available from the court to the mercy petition to President. After that whatever was necessary has been done. I can say with full confidence that there is a rule of law in this country and we treat everybody equally before the law. There is no question of depriving anybody of his right, nor of giving any undue advantage. Whatever law was obligatory for everybody, has been applied here without discrimination. After giving all opportunities, whatever was necessary under the laws has been done.

If any request is received from his family or from the Pakistan Government for his body, the government will consider it. As I said the decision will as per law. Whatever action is necessary will be taken. For the present there is not such request before us.

Question: In Pakistan, they have raised the question that his confessional statement has not been relied upon and they have raise the issue of cross examination. Could this issue be used as a technical issue as far as the other accused in the Mumbai attack are concerned.

External Affairs Minister: As far as the law that operates in our country is concerned, we have honoured it fully and under that law, everything has been done. What is the law or system in other countries, I would not like to comment nor I have right to comment nor it would be proper for me to comment.

Question: Sir is it true that Pakistan was sent letters informing them that Kasab has been hanged and they rejected those letters? Is that your information?

External Affairs Minister: The information I have is as under the law we are required and in sense of propriety we attempted to convey to Pakistan Foreign Office that this decision had been taken and the execution will be done this morning. Since those missives were not accepted by the Foreign Office, by fax we indicated the information to them. Therefore, our obligation to inform them adequately was fulfilled. We also had in our possession a particular address given by Kasab and we did convey to that address as well the decision that had been taken.

Question: Sir, As far Kasab’s confessional statement is concerned, he said in details his relationship with Hafiz Sayeed; about the relations with Zaki-ur-Rehman Lakvi, As far as confessional statement of Kasab is concerned, he gave details of relations with Hafiz Sayeed and Zaki-ur-Rehman Lakvi. When you are talking to Pakistan on all these issues, what do you expect from them about the progress in all the cases that are in the court.

External Affairs Minister: It is our understanding that there is not much difference in the laws of our two countries only if they had pursued those cases in the same way as in our case in an unbiased manner. Now let us see, only time will tell what will happen.

Question: Sir, Kasab has been buried as per Prithviraj Chavan, the Chief Minister of Maharashtra. Now you are saying that if the Government of Pakistan or if the family makes a request for his body, that will be considered. Is that the correct understanding of you said?

External Affairs Minister: I would imagine it will have to be considered, as I said, in the light of legal requirements and the light of any other religious dimensions that might have to be considered. But we have no such request and we have no such information. So, this is at present very hypothetical.

Question: Sir, a question on Gaza. The Palestinian side has marked a protest with the Ministry of External Affairs saying that the response by the Indian side is very weak. Are you going to condemn the attack and the killing of Palestinians in the Gaza Strip?

External Affairs Minister: We have stated and I must acknowledge my colleague Mr. E. Ahamed was in touch with media yesterday. And we did say very categorically that disproportionate use of force is unacceptable. This is a very sad and tragic escalation of violence that has caused loss of some innocent lives, particularly of women and children. We consider that completely unacceptable. We urge that peace must be restored immediately and whatever efforts are being made for peace being restored and de-escalation of violence takes place. Our effort is that we support categorically. And we expect and hope that that is what will happen. We also want to make it very clear that our support for the Palestinian cause remains undiluted. We would reconfirm that support. We believe that Palestine deserves an independent sovereign state with East Jerusalem as its capital. We are confirming that position. But at the same time I think what is important right now is that de-escalation take place, peace return, and that the disproportionate use of force that is being inflicted is something that is completely and totally unacceptable.
Question: Sir, back to Kasab. If the missives were rejected by Pakistan, how did we indicate to them about this execution?

External Affairs Minister: We did send a fax message to the Ministry. That is normally what is done when there is no other way of communication. A fax message was sent to the Foreign Ministry in Pakistan. Question: Sir, was the result of the Pakistan Interior Minister Rehman Mallik a postponement of the visit also linked with the entire process leading up to the execution of Kasab?

External Affairs Minister: I do not think that there is any link between these. As you know, we decide everything on merit. And I believe the Home Minister made an assessment, and it was agreed that while Parliament is going to be in session, there will not be ample time and indeed there were other factors were taken into account. But it was decided that there will be another, more appropriate time for a visit of this nature.

Question: Sir, about the closure of the Kasab chapter, how do you want the world to see the event and what sort of expectation do you have from Pakistan at this juncture regarding the 26/11 trials in Pakistan?

External Affairs Minister: Frankly, as I said, we have rule of law to prevail in our country and similarly we hope and expect that rule of law will prevail in Pakistan as well. I think there is not a vast difference between criminal procedures in our country and Pakistan. And if that is upheld, I would imagine that they will be able to say that they have done whatever it takes to reach closure on an extremely unpleasant and unhappy event that caused enormous, enormous distress to our country and indeed a tremendous amount of tragic loss to our people.

Question: Sir by rejecting the message, has Pakistan disowned Kasab and Jaish as they did in ...(Inaudible)...

External Affairs Minister: I am not sure what position they have taken. I think that very clearly he was established as a Pakistani citizen. What Pakistan should have done vis-a-vis a citizen who is executed in this country is really for them to take a call on. We did what we were obliged to do which was to inform them and to inform the address that we were given about the inevitable event. Would you like to add something? If you want to add something, please do.

Minister of State for External Affairs (Shri E. Ahamed): As far as Gaza violence is concerned, we have already expressed our anxiety, our concern everything. The violence has to be stopped immediately as early as possible. We also added that disproportionate use of force by Israel which resulted in the death of innocent people including women and children is not only unacceptable, it is in a way contemptuous also. At the very same time we want the peace to prevail over there, and aspirations of Palestinian people to justice, freedom and a state of their own with demarcated boundary and also a sovereign state with East Jerusalem as the capital is to be realized. That is what we have said. The honourable senior colleague of mine has already stated the stand we have taken to support the Palestinian people in their struggle for freedom and their own state.

External Affairs Minister: Thank you very much.

SRI LANKA

The 4th meeting of the India-Sri Lanka Joint Working Group on Fisheries was held in Colombo, Sri Lanka on 13-14 January 2012. The Sri Lankan delegation was led by Ms. Kshenuka Senewiratne, Additional Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs of Sri Lanka and the Indian delegation by Mr. Harsh Vardhan Shringla, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs of India. Both sides reviewed the developments since the last meeting of the Joint Working Group which was held on 28-29 March 2011 in New Delhi, India.

2. The two sides noted that the Joint Working Group process on fisheries had a salutary effect. It was acknowledged that the Joint Statement on Fishing Arrangements of 26th October 2008 had since led to a decrease in violent incidents. Both sides reiterated the highest priority accorded by their respective Governments to the well being, safety and security of fishermen from the two countries. Both countries agreed that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances, and reiterated in this regard the importance of extending humane treatment to all fishermen. Acknowledging that fisheries involved the socio-economic and livelihood dimensions of the fishermen living in coastal areas in India and Sri Lanka, the two sides agreed to enhance cooperation that would allow both countries to pursue their fishing activity in a safe, secure and sustainable manner, including discouraging fishermen from using destructive fishing methods. They also discussed measures for the expeditious release of bonafide fishermen from both countries. The need to respect the International Maritime Boundary Line (IMBL) was stressed by the Sri Lankan side.

3. Both sides noted the importance of an ongoing engagement between fishermen and fishermen’s associations in India and Sri Lanka. They agreed to encourage a continued dialogue process between the fishermen’s communities of the two countries through regular meetings. In this context, it was agreed that a delegation of fishermen’s representatives from Sri Lanka would visit India at the earliest in 2012.

4. Both sides exchanged views on various measures to manage the fishery resources in their respective waters. Emphasizing the need for conservation of marine resources and protection of marine ecology, they agreed to the joint development of fisheries and marine resources in the Palk Bay area and the Gulf of Mannar. The two sides agreed to develop programmes for bilateral exchanges in aquaculture and fishing related activities, including training in fisheries management, genetic improvement of cultured species, fishing technology, exchange of scientists, etc.

5. The two sides held discussions on a Memorandum of Understanding on Development and Cooperation in the field of Fisheries and agreed to work towards concluding the same at an early date.

6. The Indian delegation thanked the Government of Sri Lanka for its assistance in rescuing Indian fishermen stranded due to cyclonic weather conditions in the Palk Straits area in recent weeks, enabling their speedy repatriation and facilitating the visit of a team from India to salvage the grounded boats. The Indian delegation thanked the Sri Lankan authorities for continuing to facilitate the visit of Indian fishermen and pilgrims to Kachchativu for the festival of St. Anthony.

7. It was agreed that meetings of the Joint Working Group would be held on a regular basis, at least once in six months. The next meeting would be held in New Delhi at mutually convenient dates.

Colombo, January 17, 2012.

Hon'ble Prof. G.L. Peiris, Minister of External Affairs,

Distinguished Representatives of the Media,

1. I am pleased to be in Sri Lanka again. At the outset, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Hon'ble Minister Prof. Peiris and the Sri Lankan Government for the warm hospitality extended to me and to my delegation.

2. Earlier, I had the opportunity to call on His Excellency President Mahinda Rajapaksa. We had a useful exchange of views on ways to take the bilateral relationship forward. With Minister Peiris, we had the opportunity to review progress in various areas, including trade, services and investment, development cooperation, science and technology, culture and education. I am satisfied that the projects under our development partnership have progressed well since my last visit.

3. Minister Peiris and I have just signed a MoU specifying the modalities for the next phase of the Housing Project being implemented with India’s assistance of about 260 million US Dollars. This MoU involves the construction of 49,000 houses, out of a total of 50,000 houses. As you know, the Pilot Project for construction of the first 1000 houses is in an advanced stage of completion. During my visit to Jaffna tomorrow, I would be handing over the first lot of these houses to the beneficiaries.

4. We also signed MoUs for Cooperation in the Field of Agriculture and for Cooperation between the Telecom Regulatory Authority of India and Telecommunication Regulatory Commission of Sri Lanka.

5. Our development assistance projects are entirely based on the priorities set by the government and the people of Sri Lanka. The main themes are connectivity, housing, health, education, livelihood restoration and economic revival. I would be visiting Kilinochchi tomorrow, to handover medical equipment to the District General Hospital, and also reopen schools we had helped repair. As a token gesture, we are also providing 10,000 bicycles to IDPs in the Northern Province.

6. I am happy to note that our bilateral trade in goods would touch the 5 billion US Dollar mark. India is also a leading player in Sri Lanka, as far as investments and tourist arrivals are concerned. To sustain this positive momentum in our trade and economic relations and take it to the next level, it is necessary to finalize a more comprehensive framework of economic cooperation.
7. India is committed to the unity, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Sri Lanka. It is our hope that the vision and leadership that resulted in an end to armed conflict will now be employed in the quest for a genuine political reconciliation. We look forward to progress in the ongoing dialogue process, in order to address this issue in a timely manner. We will continue to work with the Government of Sri Lanka, and help in whatever way we can, to take this process forward, in a spirit of partnership and cooperation.

8. We have noted the many constructive recommendations contained in the recently-released report of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC). These recommendations, when implemented, would mark a major step forward in the process of genuine national reconciliation, to which the Sri Lankan government is committed. Sri Lanka must seize this opportunity.

9. The Government of Sri Lanka has on many occasions conveyed to us its commitment to move towards a political settlement based on the full implementation of the 13th Amendment to the Sri Lankan Constitution, and building on it, so as to achieve meaningful devolution of powers. We look forward to an expeditious and constructive approach to the dialogue process. We believe that continuation of the dialogue between the Government and the TNA would pave the way for political settlement, including under the rubric of the Parliamentary Select Committee.

10. I discussed this matter with His Excellency the President this morning. The President assured me that he stands by his commitment to pursuing the 13th Amendment plus approach.

11. I also took this opportunity to emphasize that the issue of fishermen is an emotive issue and needs to be handled with care on both sides. As we explore possible solutions, we must ensure that there is no use of force against the fishermen and that they are treated in a humane manner. We were happy to note that the Joint Working Group on Fisheries which met a couple of days ago, was able to look at various options to address this issue.

12. Friends, India and Sri Lanka are bound by ties of history, geography and culture. Our partnership must therefore progress in the spirit of being the closest of neighbours and friends, whose destinies are intertwined.

Thank you.
Remarks by External Affairs Minister at the Handing Over of Renovated School and Completed Houses at Ariyalai Nagar I (Kilinochchi).

Hon’ble Basil Rajapaksa, Minister of Economic Development,
Hon’ble G.L. Peiris, Minister of External Affairs,
Hon’ble Douglas Devananda, Minister of Traditional Industries and Small Enterprise Development, Hon’ble Governor of Northern Province

Distinguished Guests

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to participate in this event marking the handing over of the first school under our project for repairs of 79 war-damaged schools in the three districts of Kilinochchi, Mulaitivu and Vavuniya in Northern Province.

The project was conceived with the objective of assisting early restoration of educational activities for children of resettled IDPs and to deliver a facelift to basic educational infrastructure of the region. I am happy to note that as a result of this intervention families will be able to send their children to schools, and students will have a decent learning environment offering them a better future.

Before coming here, in a ceremony at District General Hospital, Kilinochchi, I handed over critical medical equipment to improve the standard of medical care and obviate the need to refer cases for treatment to Jaffna or Colombo via ambulances. Similar equipment has also been provided to the Mullaitivu District General Hospital. We have supported other projects in the area of health-care, like providing emergency medical relief and organizing artificial limbs refitment camps immediately after the end of the war as also by donating medical equipment to the Jaffna Teaching Hospital. The Government of India has also recently approved the proposal for construction of 200 bed ward complex at the District General Hospital, Vavuniya. India has been supporting other projects for rehabilitation, resettlement and well-being of displaced persons in the Northern Province.

The houses that you see across the school compound have been constructed in the pilot phase for 1,000 houses under our Housing Project which was launched during my visit in November 2010. I am happy to hand over these houses to beneficiaries of Ariviyal Nagar here and at Ariyalai in Jaffna later in the day. I am sure that the lessons learnt from this pilot phase will be useful in the implementation of the next phase of the project for 49,000 houses for which Minister Peiris and I signed an MOU yesterday on behalf of our two governments to ensure smooth execution.

I would like to convey our gratitude to various agencies of the Government of Sri Lanka and other local partners who have extended necessary assistance in execution of all our projects. We look forward to their continued support.

India remains fully committed towards the rehabilitation, resettlement and well-being of displaced persons in the Northern Province. We stand ready to do more.

I am extremely pleased to return to Jaffna. It also gives me immense pleasure to be part of this ceremony to mark the distribution of bicycles to Internally Displaced Persons from all the five districts of the Northern Province.

I have just come from Ariyalai where I handed over the first lot of houses to beneficiaries under the Indian Housing project. This is truly the flagship project of India’s development assistance to Sri Lanka and, one of the largest grant assistance project undertaken by the Government of India in any part of the world. Prime Minister of India, His Excellency Dr. Manmohan Singh made the offer to construct 50,000 houses in Northern and Eastern Sri Lanka during the visit of His Excellency President Mahinda Rajapaksa to India in June 2010.

Yesterday, Minister Peiris and I signed an MOU to construct the remaining 49,000 houses under this Project involving a grant assistance of 260 million US Dollars from India. Both sides will follow the best practices in implementation of this Project, particularly in beneficiary selection and grievance handling.

We thank the Government of Sri Lanka, particularly the Government Agents of the five districts of Northern Province and their team for assistance with critical project requirements in the pilot phase of the Project. We look forward to more such support in the coming months.

The project to distribute 10,000 bicycles to the returning IDPs in the five districts of the Northern Province will enhance and anchor their return. I extend appreciation to Sri Lankan Government for its support as also to UNHCR, which has been associated by us as an implementation partner.

There exists a special relationship between the people of the Northern Province in general and Jaffna Peninsula in particular and those of southern India.

Today, I am happy to announce the completion of wreck removal work at the KKS Harbour at a cost of 19 million US Dollars. This is expected to facilitate marine trade in Jaffna peninsula and revive economic activity in Northern Province. We stand ready to provide further grant assistance for the next phase of the project. We are undertaking rehabilitation of Achuvely Industrial Zone to create employment opportunities in Northern Province and to provide a platform for industrial development of Jaffna.

We hope the Government of Sri Lanka will develop Palaly as a civilian airport and restore its connectivity with India and within Sri Lanka. This will give tremendous fillip to the local economies in our two countries.
To redevelop the sports infrastructure of Jaffna, we have undertaken renovation of Duraiyappah Stadium. We intend to build the Jaffna Cultural Centre next to the Public Library. Last evening, I was shown the design of the proposed Centre. I am confident that this Centre will emerge as a cultural icon and help rejuvenate such activities.

Sri Lanka has emerged from three decades of armed conflict. Now peace has dawned. It is our sincere hope that the vision and leadership that resulted in an end to the armed conflict will now be employed in the quest for a genuine political settlement based on devolution of power resulting in national reconciliation among all the communities of Sri Lanka.

We have noted the constructive recommendations contained in the report of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC) and look forward to their implementation. It is also our hope that the process of dialogue presently underway will lead to a meaningful devolution package, building upon the 13th Amendment, which would create the necessary conditions for a lasting political settlement. India will do everything possible to assist in this process.

I would like to reiterate that the Government and people of India will stand shoulder to shoulder with the Government of Sri Lanka and the people of the Northern Province all possible assistance in their reconstruction efforts.

Hon’ble G. L. Peiris, Minister of External Affairs,
Hon’ble Kumar Welgama, Minister of Transport,
Hon’ble Rohan Dissanayake, Deputy Minister of Transport,
High Commissioner of India Mr. Ashok Kantha,
High Commissioner of Sri Lanka Mr. Prasad Kariyawasam,
Distinguished Guests,

I am delighted to be in this wonderful and historic city of Galle, to formally hand over the completed section of the Galle-Hikkaduwa railway track. Today’s ceremony marks the timely completion of this section, which is part of the Southern railway line executed by IRCON International Ltd, a leading Indian company in railway infrastructure.

As part of our effort to assist the Government of Sri Lanka in the reconstruction of the Southern Railway coastal project, the Government of India had pledged a line of credit of US$ 167.4 million. This involves reconstruction of railway lines, training of personnel from Sri Lanka Railways in India, procurement of rolling stock and building of maintenance sheds.

Phase-One of this Project, comprising the Galle-Matara Section, was completed in February 2011. I am glad to note that Phase Two of the project, which involves the section from Galle to Kaluthara, will be completed on schedule, by April this year.

I recall that, during my visit to Sri Lanka in November 2010, I had launched the construction work for the Northern Railway Project. I am happy to note that work is progressing as per schedule. We expect all the projects relating to rehabilitation of the Northern Railway line by IRCON, being funded under an Indian Credit line of US$ 800 million, to be completed by the end of 2013.

Friends,

Let me assure you that the Government of India remains committed to working with the Government of Sri Lanka for consolidation of peace, prosperity and development and for the further enrichment of our bilateral ties.

I would also like to take this opportunity to share with you today another initiative by the Government of India to assist in developing human resources in Sri Lanka. I am happy to announce a substantial increase in India’s educational assistance, amounting to 2.5 billion Sri Lankan Rupees in grant-funding, to assist meritorious Sri Lankan students.

Under this programme, scholarships and self-financing slots for undergraduate, masters and doctorate-level courses will be increased to nearly 270 per year. This marks a three-fold increase, and includes 120 slots for undergraduate courses, 25 seats for IT engineering, 50 slots for Masters-level courses, and 40 slots for a highly-subsidized self-financing scheme. In addition, support for deserving students pursuing their GCE ‘A’ level and University degrees in Sri Lankan institutions has been expanded to cover about 500 students every year.

Friends,

This new initiative is being undertaken as part of our commitment under the “India-Sri Lanka Knowledge Initiative” launched by the Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and H.E. President Mahinda Rajapaksa, during his visit to India in June, 2010. These schemes would cover various categories of beneficiaries, ranging from school students to university researchers and teachers.

I am confident that the expanded scholarship programme will go a long way in further cementing our educational ties. The reconstruction of transport-related infrastructure will enhance connectivity, in addition to generating and supporting livelihood-related activities, not only within the Southern & Northern Province, but also with the rest of the country.

Before I conclude, I would like to place on record my deep appreciation for the cooperation extended by the Government of Sri Lanka, including the Ministry of Transport and Sri Lanka Railways, in implementing the railways projects. Continued cooperation between our agencies will be crucial for the timely completion of these projects.

Our cooperation in these areas is testimony to the strength of enduring friendship between our countries and peoples.

Thank you.
300. Response of Official Spokesperson to reports of incidents involving stone pelting of some Indian fishing boats in Sri Lankan waters.

New Delhi, January 23, 2012.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesperson said:

“We have seen reports of incidents involving stone pelting of some Indian fishing boats in Sri Lankan waters. We have taken up the matter with the Sri Lankan authorities. Separately, it is also understood that two Indian fishing boats which were stranded off the coast of Sri Lanka due to engine trouble were assisted by the Sri Lankan authorities and taken to Talaimannar on the coast of Sri Lanka. Officials of the Consulate General of India in Jaffna/High Commission of India in Colombo who have been in touch with the nine fishermen who were on these boats have confirmed that the fishermen and their boats are expected to return to India today. The Sri Lanka Navy have escorted them to the International Maritime Boundary Line and handed them over to the Indian Coast Guard at 1600 hours.”
Statement by External Affairs Minister in Lok Sabha on “The Situation in Sri Lanka”.

New Delhi, March 14, 2012.

Hon’ble Madam Speaker,

I rise to inform the House on “The Situation in Sri Lanka”.

At the outset, allow me to convey that I fully share the concerns and sentiments raised by the Hon’ble Members of this august House regarding the welfare of Sri Lankan Tamils.

2. The end of the long period of armed conflict in Sri Lanka in May 2009, left around 3,00,000 Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) living in camps in Northern Sri Lanka and general devastation of infrastructure in the affected areas.

3. Since the end of conflict in Sri Lanka, the focus of Government of India has been on the welfare and well being of the Tamils citizens of Sri Lanka. Their resettlement and rehabilitation have been of the highest and most immediate priority for the Government.

4. The Prime Minister, in June 2009 immediately after the conflict announced a grant of Rs. 500 crores for relief, rehabilitation and resettlement work in Sri Lanka. The Government of India has implemented and continues to implement a wide range of projects covering assistance projects for IDPs in the areas of housing, de-mining, education, connectivity, livelihood restoration, economic revival, etc. We have been informed by representatives of Sri Lankan Tamils that the tractors, seeds and agricultural implements gifted by the Government of India have greatly benefited the people in the area.

5. India also announced the construction of 50,000 houses, mainly for IDPs in Sri Lanka. During my visit to Sri Lanka in January 2012, I handed over first lot of completed houses to the beneficiaries at Ariyalai, Jaffna and Kilinochchi. These houses have been constructed under a pilot project for construction of 1000 houses. As of end-February 2012, a total of 365 houses had been completed, another 370 houses completed up to roof level and 230 houses completed up to lintel level. It may also be kept in mind that construction is taking place in largely inaccessible areas, which in many cases has to be freed of mines and other explosive ordinance and cleared of jungle.

6. In December 2011, the Cabinet approved the modalities for construction and repair of the remaining 49,000 houses. A Memorandum of Understanding for construction of these houses was signed between India and Sri Lanka on 17th January 2012 in Colombo. The project is expected to be completed within three years of commencement of work on the ground.
7. In addition to houses, I also gifted bicycles to IDPs and handed over hospitals and schools rehabilitated under the assistance of the Government of India in the Northern Province of Sri Lanka.

8. I would like to underline that it is mainly as a result of our constructive engagement with the Government of Sri Lanka and our considerable assistance programme that a modicum of normalcy is beginning to return to the Tamil areas in Sri Lanka. There has also been progress given the withdrawal of emergency regulations by the Government of Sri Lanka and the conduct of elections to local bodies in the Northern Province of Sri Lanka.

Madam Speaker,

9. Our primary objective in all that we are doing in Sri Lanka is to ensure the welfare and wellbeing of Sri Lankan Tamils, including IDPs, and to assist in the reconstruction and development of areas affected by the conflict.

Madam Speaker,

10. Several Hon'ble Members of the House have raised the issue of alleged human rights violations during the protracted conflict in Sri Lanka and on the US-initiated draft resolution on 'Promoting Reconciliation and Accountability in Sri Lanka' at the ongoing 19th Session of the UN Human Rights Council in Geneva.

11. Concerns have been expressed by various quarters on allegations of human rights violations, including as shown in the Channel 4 documentaries; it is the responsibility of the Sri Lankan Government, in the first instance to investigate and inquire into them through a transparent process.

12. We understand that the Government of Sri Lanka has initiated a series of measures, including appointment of a Cabinet Sub-committee to monitor implementation of the proposals in the National Human Rights Action Plan (NHRAP) and reactivating the National Police Commission, in line with the recommendations of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC) report. Separately, the Sri Lankan defence authorities are reported to have appointed a Court of Inquiry to look into allegations of human rights violations as required by the LLRC report.

13. The Government of India has, nonetheless, emphasised to the Government of Sri Lanka the importance of a genuine process of reconciliation to address the grievances of the Tamil community. In this connection, we have called for implementation of the recommendations in the Report of the LLRC that has been tabled before the Sri Lankan Parliament. These include various constructive measures for healing the wounds of the conflict and fostering a process of lasting peace and reconciliation in Sri Lanka.
14. We have been assured by the Government of Sri Lanka, including during my visit to Sri Lanka in January this year, of its commitment towards pursuit of a political process, through a broader dialogue with all parties, including the Tamil National Alliance, leading to the full implementation of the 13th Amendment to the Sri Lankan Constitution, so as to achieve meaningful devolution of powers and genuine national reconciliation. We hope that the Government of Sri Lanka recognising the critical importance of this issue acts decisively and with vision in this regard. We will remain engaged with them through this process and in the spirit of partnership encourage them to take forward the dialogue with the elected representatives of the Sri Lankan Tamils.

15. Hon'ble Members may be aware that the Sri Lankan authorities had said they would be happy to receive an all party delegation of Members of both Houses of our Parliament. We are working to undertake such a visit at the earliest.

Madam Speaker,

16. Several Members have raised the issue of a draft resolution initiated by USA at the ongoing 19th Session of the UN Human Rights Council at Geneva on the issue of reconciliation and accountability in Sri Lanka.

17. I would like to highlight here that on such sensitive issues we will need to consider the implications of our actions carefully. Any assertions on our part may have implications on our historically friendly relations with a neighbouring country. We would also need to examine whether our actions will actually assist in the process of reconciliation in Sri Lanka, and enhance the current dialogue between the Government of Sri Lanka and Tamil parties, including the Tamil National Alliance.

18. As far as our position on the resolution is concerned, we are engaged with all parties in an effort to achieve a forward looking outcome that is based on reconciliation and accountability rather than deepening confrontation and mistrust between the concerned parties. I may mention that the issue of human rights allegations against Sri Lanka is yet to come up for formal discussion at the 19th Session of the UN Human Rights Council in Geneva. A view on this issue will be taken as and when the time is finalized for consideration of the draft resolution on Sri Lanka in the UN Human Rights Council.

Madam Speaker,

19. Therefore, I would like to inform this House that our objectives, as always, continue to remain the achievement of a future for the Tamil community in Sri Lanka that is marked by equality, dignity, justice and self-respect.

20. I may assure the House that the Government will bear in mind the views and sentiments expressed in this House, and once a final view is taken Government will keep the Parliament informed.

Thank you,

302. Explanation of vote at the UNHRC on Promotion, Reconciliation and Accountability in Sri Lanka.

Geneva, March 21, 2012.

India believes that the primary responsibility for the promotion and protection of human rights lies with the States. Consequently resolutions of this nature should fully respect the sovereign rights of states and contribute to Sri Lanka’s own efforts in this regard.

2. India had welcomed the recommendations of Sri Lanka’s LLRC report. We believe that there is indeed a window of opportunity to forge a consensual way forward towards reconciliation through a political settlement respecting all the ethnic and religious groups inhabiting the nation. This is, in effect, what the Sri Lankan Government had committed to in this Council in 2009. We have noted the commencement of such a dialogue with several parties, including the Tamil National Alliance.

3. The LLRC report recognizes that a political solution is imperative and that the Government of Sri Lanka should provide the leadership to this political process. It further sets out several constructive recommendations including those pertaining to missing persons, detainees, disappearances and abductions, promotion of trilingual policy, reduction of high security zones, curbing activities of illegal armed groups, return of private lands and demilitarization and restoration of civilian administration. This Council has also been briefed by the Government of Sri Lanka in this session on the series of steps taken to implement the report and other measures. We welcome these steps. We are confident that implementation of the report will foster genuine reconciliation.

4. India has been involved in a substantial way in the rehabilitation and resettlement efforts, and the reconstruction process in Northern Sri Lanka. We are happy that our engagement in Sri Lanka in the areas of housing, de-mining, education, public health and connectivity have helped restore a degree of normalcy in the area.

5. In this context, we urge the Sri Lankan Government to take forward the process of broader dialogue and show concrete movement towards a meaningful devolution of powers, including the implementation of the 13th Amendment and beyond. We would also urge that Sri Lanka takes forward the measures for accountability and to promote human rights that it has committed to. It is these steps, more than anything we declare in this Council, which would bring about genuine reconciliation between all the communities of Sri Lanka, including the minority Tamil community.

6. While we subscribe to the broader message of this resolution and the objectives it promotes, we also underline that any assistance from the Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights or visits of UN Special Procedures should be in consultation with and with the concurrence of the Sri Lankan Government. These are norms which all of us in the Council subscribe to. A democratic country like Sri Lanka has to be provided time and space to achieve the objectives of reconciliation and peace. In this Council we have the responsibility to ensure that our conclusions do contribute to this objective rather than hinder it.

7. In conclusion, as a neighbour with thousands of years of cordial relations with Lanka, with deep rooted spiritual and cultural ties, we cannot remain untouched by developments in that country. We have been bound also by a shared quest for freedom and dignity. We will continue to remain engaged with the Government of Sri Lanka to take forward the process of reconciliation to secure for all its citizens a future marked by equality, dignity, justice and self-respect.

303. Letter of Prime Minister to Sri Lankan President regarding the Resolution in the UN Human Rights Council.

New Delhi, March 24, 2012.

The Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh has written to President Mahinda Rajapaksa of Sri Lanka on the resolution in the UN Human Rights Council.

The text of the Prime Minister’s letter to the President of Sri Lanka is as follows:

“Thank you for your letter of March 19 regarding the ongoing session of the UN Human Rights Council and the introduction of a resolution therein on the post-conflict situation in Sri Lanka.

As Your Excellency is aware, the Government and the people of India have stood firmly by Sri Lanka in its struggle against terrorism. The end in May 2009 of a long and tragic conflict that had claimed numerous innocent lives, in Sri Lanka and in India, was something that we regarded as providing, at last long past, an opportunity for genuine national reconciliation and for addressing the urgent needs of development and reconstruction of all citizens of Sri Lanka. Our two governments have, over the last three years, engaged intensively in the immediate tasks of relief and rehabilitation for those displaced by the conflict, as well as the more long-term effort of reconstruction of national infrastructure. Much important progress has been registered on this front and I wish to record my appreciation of the assistance your Government has provided to various Indian agencies implementing projects of national significance on the ground in Sri Lanka. I was also happy to learn of Your Excellency’s intention to continue the process of implementing the recommendations of the LLRC.

We have also had occasion in the past to discuss the way ahead with regard to a political solution that will address all outstanding issues, in particular the grievances of the Tamil community in Sri Lanka, in a spirit of understanding and mutual accommodation. It is our conviction that a meaningful devolution package, building upon the 13th Amendment, would lead towards a lasting political settlement on many of these issues and create conditions in which all citizens of Sri Lanka, irrespective of their ethnicity, can find justice, dignity, equality and self-respect. I would like to reiterate to Your Excellency my Government’s commitment to continue to be of assistance in the achievement of this important objective.

With regard to the matter of the resolution in the UN Human Rights Council, I had instructed our delegation to remain in close contact with its Sri Lanka counterparts in an attempt to find a positive way forward. Your Excellency would be aware that we spared no effort and were successful in introducing an element of balance in the language of the resolution.”
I wish to assure Your Excellency that, going forward, we will continue our engagement with the shared objective of building a stable, secure and prosperous environment in Sri Lanka in which all communities can flourish and in which India-Sri Lanka relations can continue to grow from strength to strength.”

New Delhi, April 16, 2012.

A Joint Parliamentary delegation led by the Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha, Smt Sushma Swaraj, is visiting Sri Lanka from April 16 to 21, 2012. The delegation consists of Members of Parliament from the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha nominated by various political parties, including the BJD, BJP, CPI (M), INC, J D (U) and SP.

2. The visit is being organised in the context of a commitment made by the External Affairs Minister in Parliament in response to suggestions from Members of the Parliament during Parliamentary debates on the situation in Sri Lanka.

3. The delegation is expected to travel to different parts of Sri Lanka, including its Northern, Eastern, Central and Western Provinces. The primary focus of the delegation will, however, be in the areas recovering from thirty years conflict in the North and East of Sri Lanka where development assistance projects for the resettlement and rehabilitation of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) and reconstruction of areas affected by the conflict are being undertaken by the Government of India.

4. The delegation is expected to start its programme in Northern Sri Lanka with a visit to the IDP Camp at Menik Farm. The delegation is scheduled to visit Vavuniya, Mullaitivu, Jaffna, Kankesanthurai, Kalutara, Dickoya, Hatton and Batticaloa where Indian assistance projects, including those related to the development of rail and port infrastructure, connectivity and transportation, education, public health, housing, de-mining, vocational training and economic revival, are under implementation. The delegation is also scheduled to meet a wide cross-section of parliamentarians, Pradesiya Sabha members, civil society and community leaders in the Northern Province.

5. In Colombo, the delegation is scheduled to call on the President of Sri Lanka and meet the Ministers of External Affairs and Economic Development. An interaction with the Leader of the House and Sri Lankan Parliamentarians has also been arranged. The delegation will separately meet the Leader of the Opposition and representatives of the Tamil National Alliance, the Sri Lankan Muslim Congress, the Ceylon Workers Congress and other upcountry political parties.

305. Press Release of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Trilateral Joint Coast Guard Exercises - DOSTI XI.

The five day India-Maldives-Sri Lanka Joint Coast Guard exercise - DOSTI XI is currently being held off the coast of Male (Maldives) from 23-27 April 2012. The bi-annual India-Maldives DOSTI exercises was originally started in 1991 with the objective of strengthening co-operation between Indian and Maldivian Coast Guards with a view to enhancing mutual capabilities for search and rescue operations, combating piracy and armed robbery, damage control and casualty evacuation at sea for safer seas. The present expansion of the Joint training exercises to include Sri Lanka from 2012 onwards marks an important milestone in the evolution of the DOSTI exercises.

2. DOSTI-XI exercises would aim to strengthen the bonds of friendship and enhance the mutual operational capability and cooperation between the forces of the three participating countries and would focus on Maritime Search and Rescue, Marine Pollution Response and Boarding Operations. In this round of exercises, two Indian Coast Guard Ships - ICGS SANKALP and ICGS SUBHADRA and an ICG Dornier Aircraft would take part along with three Maldives National Defense Force (MNDF) Coast Guard vessels - HURAVEE, GHAZEE and SHAHEED ALI from the Maldivian side and an offshore patrol vessel - SLNS SAGARA from the Sri Lankan Navy.

Colombo, June 29, 2012.

My visit to Sri Lanka today has been in the context of regular consultations and exchange of views between the Government of India and the Government of Sri Lanka.

- I called on H.E. President Mahinda Rajapaksa this morning. Foreign Minister G.L. Peiris was also present at the meeting. Thereafter, I met Mr. Basil Rajapaksa, Minister of Economic Development and Mr. Gotabaya Rajapaksa, Defence Secretary. I also met the TNA leader Mr. Sampanthan.

- I discussed recent developments, bilateral relations and areas of common concern. I was also briefed about steps being taken by the Government of Sri Lanka on political reconciliation and settlement. While this is a Sri Lankan issue and something that Sri Lanka has to do, we will continue to remain engaged with all concerned and offer any support required in this regard.

- India has always stood for a united Sri Lanka within which all citizens can live in equality, justice, dignity and self-respect. We have worked closely with the Government of Sri Lanka on relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of IDPs. India's assistance was appreciated by the Sri Lankan leadership in all my meetings. We remain committed to continue our cooperation.

- We also discussed the fishermen's issue. It was noted that the practical arrangements of October 2008 should be adhered to until an alternative mechanism was agreed upon. We agreed that fishermen's associations on both sides, which had met in the past and reached some understandings, needed to meet again to work on developing this further. This could then serve as the basis for finding a solution to this humanitarian issue.

- On the bilateral front, we noted that most of the Indian-assisted projects were proceeding well and several projects, particularly those relating to the development of railway infrastructure in the Northern and Southern Provinces, were being implemented well ahead of schedule. In the past two years, India has committed US $750 million under lines of credit and another US $350 million under grants-in-aid. There are a number of other new projects under consideration.

- We also discussed maritime cooperation and other security related issues. It was agreed that we could take this further.
Sri Lanka is our close neighbour, with whom we enjoy a multifaceted and dynamic relationship. We look forward to strengthening and further developing this engagement.

New Delhi, August 3, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry & Textiles, Shri Anand Sharma set a target to double the trade turnover between India and Sri Lanka from the existing level to USD 10 billion by the year 2015. Speaking at the inauguration of “The India Show- Land of Limitless Opportunities” today at Colombo, Shri Sharma highlighted India’s unbinding commitment to be a friend and a partner of Sri Lanka in meeting its aspirations of growth and development. “We have set the target to double the trade to USD 10 Billion by 2015. Captains of industry have accepted and endorsed it”, said the Minister. The Minister along with Mr. Basil Rajapaksa, Minister of Economic Development, Mr. Rishad Bathiudeen, Minister of Industry & Commerce and Mr. Sarath Amunugama, Senior Minister of International Monetary Cooperation, Mr. A.H.M. Fawzie, Senior Minister for Urban Affairs and Mr. Douglas Devananda, Minister of Traditional Industries and Small Enterprise Development of Sri Lanka inaugurated The India Show in Colombo.

Shri Sharma, after his discussions with the Sri Lankan leadership in the morning, announced that India will assist Sri Lanka in the establishment of Engineering and Automobile components SEZ which would be located near Trincomalee and will promote exports to the production chains in India. The proposed Engineering and Automobile components hub will also have a Skill Training Institute. The Minister also announced that India and Sri Lanka will work together towards the establishment of a Pharmaceutical manufacturing hub in Sri Lanka capitalising on the vast strides made by Indian Pharmaceutical industry in meeting the quality drug requirements worldwide at affordable prices. It was also agreed to setup a Joint Task Force which will submit its report within 90 days and would also work on the implementation of establishment of the two SEZs. The composition of the Joint Task Force from India would be finalised during the Minister’s visit itself.

Shri Sharma, highlighting the global trend of formation of regional trade blocks and bilateral Economic Agreements, underlined the need for economic integration within South Asia, which could be part of larger Asian trade and economic architecture. The Minister also highlighted that India was not seeking reciprocity in trade and economic relationship with Sri Lanka and assured Sri Lanka of preferential access to the large Indian market. “Accepting the principle of asymmetry, that India has always done as the leading economy of South Asia we are not seeking reciprocity”, the Minister added.

The signing of Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) will make the current economic engagement more comprehensive by bringing more investment and services into Sri Lanka. Shri Sharma said that the two Commerce Secretaries will resume dialogue on CEPA, and resolve all related issues. “India has an abiding commitment in Sri Lanka’s Development and FTA has definitely contributed to the increase in trade”, said Shri Sharma.

Shri Sharma also appreciated the large infrastructure projects being implemented by the Indian Companies including the PSUs in Sri Lanka such as Railway projects and the Sampur Power plant project. The Minister also highlighted that India has been among the top investors in Sri Lanka, is Sri Lanka’s largest trading partner and source of largest number of tourist arrivals into Sri Lanka.

In his remarks Mr. Rishad Bathiudeen called the signing of India Sri Lanka Free Trade Agreement in 1998 an historic milestone and underlined the synergy between Indian and Sri Lankan companies as a competitive necessity. Highlighting the resurgent Sri Lankan economy growing at a rate of over 8% during last two years, Mr. Bathiudeen invited Indian corporate sector to be part of Sri Lankan growth story.

Addressing the inaugural session, Senior Minister Dr. Sarath Amunugama conveyed the greetings of the President of Sri Lanka and on his behalf wished India Show all the success.

308. Response of Official Spokesperson to the Travel Advisory issued by Sri Lanka.

New Delhi, September 4, 2012.

In response to a media query on the travel advisory issued by Sri Lanka, the official spokesperson said:

“We have noted the travel advisory that has been issued by the Government of Sri Lanka for its nationals visiting the state of Tamil Nadu.

I wish to convey here that the Government of India, in close consultation with the concerned state governments, has taken and will continue to take all measures to ensure the safety, security and well-being of Sri Lankan dignitaries and visitors to India, including to Tamil Nadu.

In certain instances, it has been noticed that important visits have taken place without prior intimation to the concerned authorities.

I find it important to emphasize here that people-to-people contacts are an integral part of the close historical, cultural, ethnic and civilizational ties between India and Sri Lanka. Our High Commission in Colombo issued visas to nearly 200,000 Sri Lankan nationals to visit India last year, while approximately 175,000 Indian tourists visited Sri Lanka in 2011. It is this perspective that guides all our actions on such matters.”

I rise to respond to the House on the Calling Attention Notices regarding the Situation arising out of repeated attacks on Tamil Nadu Fishermen by the Sri Lankan navy.

I would like to reiterate at the outset to this august House that the Government of India attaches the highest importance to the safety, security and welfare of Indian fishermen. The Government of India and the High Commission of India in Sri Lanka have consistently taken up issues relating to incidents of firing on or apprehension of our fishermen with the Government of Sri Lanka to ensure that the Sri Lankan Navy acts with restraint and our fishermen are treated in a humane manner.

I would like to inform the Hon’ble members that as soon as the reports of apprehension of Indian fishermen are received, the Government through diplomatic channels takes up the matter of their expeditious release and repatriation with the Sri Lankan authorities. As a result, the fishermen apprehended by the Sri Lankan Navy have been released and repatriated expeditiously. Presently, there are no Indian fishermen in Sri Lankan custody on fisheries related charges. However, some Indian nationals have been arrested in Sri Lankan waters on charges of smuggling narcotics and contrabands. Officials from our High Commission in Colombo and Consulate in Jaffna Lanka are in regular touch with the detained Indian nationals and extending all possible consular and legal assistance to them.

Hon’ble Members would recall that to avoid recurrence of incidents involving our fishermen and keeping in mind the humanitarian and livelihood dimensions of the fishermen’s issue, the Government had reached an understanding through a Joint Statement with the Sri Lankan Government on 26th October 2008 to put in place practical arrangements to deal with bonafide Indian and Sri Lankan fishermen crossing the International Maritime Boundary Line. As part of these practical arrangements, it was agreed that there would be no firing on Indian fishing vessels and Indian fishing vessels would not tread into sensitive areas designated by the Government of Sri Lanka along its coastline. Following the October 2008 understanding, the incidents of attack and apprehension of bonafide Indian fishermen by Sri Lankan authorities have significantly come down.

I would like to inform this august House that during my visit to Sri Lanka in January 2012, I raised the issue of safety and security of Indian fishermen with the Sri Lankan leadership in January 2012. In this context, it was inter-alia noted that at the 4th meeting of the India-Sri Lanka Joint Working Group on Fisheries, held from 13-14 January 2012 in Colombo, both sides reiterated the highest priority accorded by their respective Governments to the well being, safety and security of fishermen from the two countries. Both countries agreed that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances, and reiterated in this regard the importance of extending humane treatment to all fishermen. Acknowledging that fisheries involved the socio-economic and livelihood dimensions of the fishermen living in coastal areas in India and Sri Lanka, the two sides agreed to enhance cooperation that would allow both countries to pursue their fishing activity in a safe, secure and sustainable manner, including discouraging fishermen from using destructive fishing methods. They also discussed measures for the expeditious release of bonafide fishermen from both countries.

The Government is working with the concerned State Governments keeping in mind that the issues of fishermen affect both countries, and the need to sensitise the Indian fishermen to respect International Maritime Boundary Line and not stray into Sri Lankan waters for their own safety and security. The Government has requested the State Government to finalise the dates for a proposed meeting of the representatives of fishermen association from the two countries early.

I would like to reiterate that Government continues to remain engaged with the Government of Sri Lanka to ensure that fishermen on both sides can continue to pursue their livelihood in a safe, secure and sustainable manner.

New Delhi, October 10, 2012.

In response to a question from the media on the visit of a TNA delegation to India, the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs conveyed the following:

A seven-member delegation of the Tamil National Alliance (TNA), Sri Lanka, led by Mr. R. Sampanthan, would be visiting India from 10-13 October 2012 at the invitation of the External Affairs Minister. The delegation would consist of Mr. Mavai S. Senathirajah, MP; Mr. K. Premachandran, MP; Mr. P. Selvarasa, MP; Mr. A. Vinayagamoorthy, MP; Mr. A. Adaikkalanathan, MP; and Mr. M.A. Sumanthiran, MP. A TNA delegation had also visited India in July 2010.

The delegation is expected to call on the Prime Minister and the External Affairs Minister. They would also exchange views with the National Security Adviser and the Foreign Secretary.

India has been involved in a substantial manner in rehabilitation and resettlement efforts of Internally Displaced Persons and the reconstruction process in Northern Sri Lanka. It has been widely acknowledged that our assistance in Sri Lanka in the areas of housing, de-mining, education, public health and connectivity has helped restore a degree of normalcy in the area.

The visit is part of our continuing engagement with the Government and political parties in Sri Lanka in regard to the process of reconciliation and meaningful devolution through which Sri Lanka seeks to secure for all its citizens a future marked by equality, dignity, justice and self-respect.

The first round of talks between India and Sri Lanka on comprehensive civil nuclear cooperation was held on 12 October 2012 in New Delhi. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Harsh Vardhan Shringla, Joint Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and included representatives from the Department of Atomic Energy of India. The Sri Lankan delegation was led by Mr. I. Ansar, Additional Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of Sri Lanka and included representatives from the Atomic Energy Authority and the Ministry of Power and Energy of Sri Lanka.

2. Discussions were held in a warm, friendly and cordial manner. Both sides exchanged views on all aspects of civil nuclear cooperation and reaffirmed their commitment to strengthen bilateral cooperation in the uses of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes to mutual benefit of the people of the two countries. It was agreed that the two sides would work towards a comprehensive Agreement on Bilateral Civil Nuclear Cooperation. Discussions included, inter alia, training of officials, nuclear safety and response to nuclear accidents.

3. It was agreed that the next meeting would be held in Sri Lanka in the first half of 2013.

312. Press release of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Senior Officials Talks between India and Australia.

New Delhi, September 21, 2012.

Mr. Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India visited Canberra for the Senior Officials Talks which were held on the forenoon of September 21, 2012. The Australian delegation was led by Mr. Dennis Richardson, the Secretary in the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade of the Government of Australia.

During the talks the two delegations discussed bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and global issues. Relations between the two countries in the areas of trade and investment, energy and resources, education, science and technology and defence and security were amongst the topics on which there was an exchange of views between the two delegations. The talks explored various proposals and ideas to give concrete content to the Strategic Partnership established between the two countries. Both sides agreed that while bilateral relations had expanded rapidly in recent years, there was considerable potential for a transformation of the relationship through efforts of the two sides.

The two delegations also discussed cooperation between India and Australia in multilateral fora including the G-20 and the East Asia Summit. It was agreed to strengthen cooperation in multilateral fora in areas of mutual interest. The Australian delegation also briefed the Indian delegation on the Oz Fest - a cultural festival which will be held in India from October to December, 2012.
313. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson and Joint Secretary (South) on the visit of the Australian Prime Minister.

New Delhi, October 11, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends. Thank you very much for coming today for this interaction.

……… state visit of the Prime Minister of Australia to India. Hon. Ms. Julia Gillard will pay a state visit to India from 15th to 17th October at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India. During her visit she will have bilateral discussions with the Prime Minister. She will also call on the President. The External Affairs Minister will meet her, so will the Leader of the Opposition and the Chairperson of the UPA.

The visit of the Prime Minister of Australia will lead to strengthening of cooperative relations between the two countries and will provide a further impetus for the future development of our strategic partnership.

I have here with me Mr. Sanjay Bhattacharyya, who is Joint Secretary (South) who also deals with Australia. I will request him to provide you a briefing on Australia, and then the floor is open for questions on Australia or on anything else that you would like us to answer.

With that I hand over to Sanjay to speak to you all on the forthcoming visit of the Prime Minister of Australia.

Joint Secretary (South) (Shri Sanjay Bhattacharyya): Thank you Akbar. It is nice being here with lots of old friends.

As has just been announced, the Australian Prime Minister Ms. Julia Gillard will be on her first visit to India as the Prime Minister, from the 15th to the 17th of October. Our Prime Minister has met with Prime Minister Gillard on several occasions in the recent past, in Los Cabos at the G20 Summit a few months ago, in Seoul at the Nuclear Security Summit in March 2012, in Bali at the EAS Summit last year, and in September of 2009 when she had visited India as a Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Education.

During her visit she will have talks with the Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. She will also call on the President, as the Spokesman has already mentioned, and meet with the External Affairs Minister, Leader of the Opposition, and the Chairperson of UPA. These meetings will take place on the 17th of October. A number of Memoranda of Understanding are expected to be concluded, and we hope that we would be able to make a few announcements on new initiatives.

Our bilateral relations have made rapid strides in strengthening cooperation in the fields of trade, investment, energy, mining, science and technology, information technology, education and defence cooperation. There have been exchanges of high-level visits in each of these areas, and establishment of institutional structures in these sectors. Our ties were elevated to the level of a strategic partnership during the visit of Prime Minister Kevin Rudd to India in November of 2009.

Australia assumes significance in our external engagement in overcoming our supply side constraints. We obtain resources, educational facilities and skills upgradation. Australia is a major source of mineral resources for the Indian economy and our development efforts particularly in coal, gold, copper, also in diamonds and zinc.

There are about 36,000 Indian students who are currently studying in Australia. We are also working with various Australian institutes in promoting skill training within India. In addition, there are about 450,000 Indians who have made Australia their home. These overseas Indians contribute richly to the economic and social fabric of that country. In fact, the Indian community in Australia is playing a growing role in acting as a bridge between the two countries.

The India-Australia cooperation in the field of education and training is based on an umbrella agreement in the form of an education exchange programme which was concluded in October of 2003.

For our science and technology cooperation we have a five-year Strategic Research Fund which overseas a wide range of cooperative activities. Our trade in goods has grown rapidly and currently stands at about 17.4 billion dollars in 2011-12. Our imports, as I mentioned earlier, are mainly of coal, gold and copper, and are almost US $ 15 billion, while our exports are just under 2.4 billion dollars.

We also have a fairly sizeable trade in services. Indian investments in Australia, particularly in the mineral sector, have been growing rapidly and about 11 billion dollars were approved last year. About 450 million dollars of Australian investments are currently placed in India.

We are negotiating for a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement which once concluded would enhance trade and investment flows, diversify trade in goods and services, and also address the imbalance in the trade. We have a bilateral CEOs forum which works to enhance business relations between the two countries. This is led by Mr. Naveen Jindal on the Indian side and Mr. Lindsey Fox on the Australian side.

We have a Joint Working Group on Energy and Minerals which was established way back in 1999. We have different subgroups for the different areas, and they have been working to expand our relations in the energy and resource sector.
We are also partners in the fight against international terrorism and have been discussing terrorism-related issues under the umbrella of the senior officials talks, which is the Foreign Ministry talks, the Strategic Dialogue, and the Joint Working Group on Counterterrorism. On the defence side we have an MoU in defence cooperation which was concluded in 2006. And we have exchanges at the Service level.

India and Australia have strengthened collaboration on many issues in multilateral fora such as in the G20, the East Asia Summit, the various ASEAN processes, and in the IOR-ARC. In fact, Australia will take over the Chair of IOR-ARC from us next year. Australia will also assume the Chair of G20 in 2014.

Australia has indicated support for India’s candidature for a permanent seat in the expanded UN Security Council. We see Prime Minister Gillard’s visit as an opportunity to strengthen our strategic cooperation.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: We will open the floor for questions. You could begin with questions related to what Mr. Bhattacharyya has said and then anything else. So, let us begin with questions related to Australia.

Question: During the Prime Minister’s visit to India, would the bilateral nuclear cooperation agreement be on the table?

Joint Secretary (South): As you would probably have come across in the media, the Australian Labour Party under Prime Minister Gillard had reversed the earlier policy and had agreed to consider the export of uranium to India under certain conditions. This matter was then to be taken up by the Australian Government, and so we expect that the Australian Government will take this process further.

Question: Sanjay, the Labour Party decision which you talked of took place in December 2011. Ten months have gone by. What is the status of the negotiations between India and Australia over the nuclear deal? When is it going to formally start and what is the timeline for finish?

Joint Secretary (South): Obviously the negotiations will commence once the Government decision has been taken.

Question: .... (inaudible)

Official Spokesperson: I think you will have to wait for the outcomes of the visit. We cannot prejudge those outcomes.

Question: In Australian media there have been quite a few reports that the issue will be on the table, that the Australian PM and the Indian Prime Minister would be discussing this. Do you say that is a correct assessment? That would at least save us the trouble of rehashing Australian media reports.
Joint Secretary (South): We have seen the Australian media reports as well. We are aware that the Government is looking at this issue. We will be in a position to let you know as to what the Government steps are once they are conveyed to us.

Official Spokesperson: Let me just add to it. The last time there was a formal interaction on this was between the External Affairs Minister and Mr. Bob Carr in Phnom Penh. Some of you were there. At that stage, Mr. Bob Carr, the Foreign Affairs Minister of Australia, did indicate that they were still working out their internal processes. Once they communicate to us that their internal processes are complete, which you seem to be indicating based on the reports are coming from Australia, the formal negotiations will start. But at this stage, that is where it rests. And we have told you what was the last formal communication and discussion on this.

Question: In the last discussions on the civil nuclear issue, did Australia insist on or ask for additional safeguards on top of the usual ones?

Official Spokesperson: We have not launched the formal discussions on that. All the Australian Foreign Minister indicated to the External Affairs Minister was that – and this was a few months ago during the ASEAN Foreign Ministers’ meet – they are in the process of completing their internal processes. At this stage, anything else would be premature because we have not even launched the formal negotiations on that.

Question: Akbar, are we supporting Australia for a non-permanent seat in the Security Council?

Official Spokesperson: Please do not expect us to tell you who we will vote for in an election which is by secret ballot.

Question: Sanjay, you gave some figures. One was not very sure. Is it 14 billion dollars our companies have invested in Australia?

Joint Secretary (South): Eleven billion US dollars is the amount that has been approved for investments in Australia.

Question: When last time Julia Gillard was here there were some attacks on Indian students in Australia. I think things have piped down a little bit and some people involved in that have been punished and so on. The flow seems to have resumed. More and more Indian students are going back to Australia all over again. Is that a correct impression?

Joint Secretary (South): It is like this. There were several incidents involving violence against Indian students a couple of years ago and the Australian Government did take action on the security front. It also overhauled the immigration programme that it ran. Also what it did was conduct an in-depth scrutiny of its own colleges. Since then, the number of attacks have declined very dramatically, sharply in recent times owing to a large extent to the remedial measures that were taken by the Australian authorities and the police.

One must mention of course that the problem has not entirely gone away. Therefore, it is necessary for us to continue vigilance and pay attention to this issue. But we are pleased with the cooperation that we have received from the Australian side. As regards the numbers, the numbers are about 36,000 at the moment whereas at the peak they were about close to 48,000.

Question: The figures given by you show that we have an adverse trade balance with Australia. Will there be something on the table during the Prime Minister’s visit, something by which Indian exports to Australia can be increased? Will the issue come up?

Joint Secretary (South): You are very correct in that. There is an adverse trade balance both in goods as well as in services. So, this is an issue that we need to address. But I think we should look at it in the totality of the development because what Australian imports into India do is essentially raw materials which feed into our energy and resource requirements. So, they are a part of our development exercise. In other words, all Australian exports into India, our imports from Australia, are actually inputs for our development process. In that case I think you would understand the role that they play. However, we would wish to correct this and diversify the trade basket. It is exactly for that reason that we are engaged in the CECA negotiations with the Australians. The next round is going to take place next month. Those negotiations are ongoing. As CECA generally does, it not only expands trade and provides opportunities for diversification, we expect that this would also bring about a better balance in the trade figures.
314. Press Release issued by the President's Secretariat on the call by the Australian Prime Minister on President Pranab Mukherjee.

The Prime Minister of Australia Ms. Julia Gillard called on the President Shri Pranab Mukherjee this morning and held wide ranging discussions on bilateral and multilateral issues. The discussions covered issues relating to trade and investment, energy, supply of resources for India’s economic development, education, and people to people contacts. The two leaders also discussed cooperation in multilateral forums such as G-20 whose summit Australia will host in 2014.

The President congratulated the Prime Minister on the launch of Oz fest in India and described it as a good initiative. He said India is committed to strengthen its strategic partnership with Australia. The President expressed appreciation for Australia’s support for India’s candidature in an expanded United Nations Security Council and said the two countries should work together in reforming the international financial architecture and equipping institutions like the World Bank with the resources they need.

The Australian Prime Minister informed the President that she was gifting two saplings of Wollemi Pine for the Rashtrapati Bhavan. This tree was discovered in Australia in 1994 and its origins date back to time when the Dinosaurs roamed the earth. She expressed the hope they will flourish in the Rashtrapati Bhavan.

315. Statement by Prime Minister to the media during the State Visit of Prime Minister of Australia to India.

New Delhi, October 17, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Julia Gillard,
Ladies and Gentlemen of the media,

It is a great honour to welcome Prime Minister Julia Gillard on her first State Visit to India.

Relations between India and Australia are characterized by expanding trade and investment ties, increasing defence cooperation, education and cultural linkages and growing people-to-people interaction. Our strategic partnership is responding well to the significant transformations in our region and to the developmental aspirations of our two peoples.

Prime Minister Gillard and I have had substantive discussions on measures to give greater content to our relations. I am extremely satisfied with our discussions. I have no doubt that our understandings, as reflected also in the agreements that have just been signed, herald a phase of more intense and structured cooperation between our two countries.

In our talks earlier, we have agreed to hold annual meetings at the summit level, either bilaterally or during multilateral events. We have also agreed to launch a Ministerial-level Dialogue on Energy Security, establish a Water Technology Partnership and start negotiations for an Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons.

As you are aware, under Prime Minister Gillard, the Australian Labour Party has articulated a new policy on uranium sales to India. This is recognition of India’s energy needs as well as of our record and credentials and I have expressed to Prime Minister Gillard India’s appreciation of this development. We have agreed to begin negotiations for an Agreement on Civil Nuclear Energy Cooperation, which will precede actual cooperation.

There is great potential to further strengthen India-Australia bilateral trade and investment relations, which continue to show robust growth; our bilateral trade in goods was US$ 17.4 billion in 2011-12, while India’s investments in Australia are at almost US$ 11 billion. Our negotiators are working towards a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, which will further facilitate trade and investment and make them more broad based and sustainable.

We are also developing wide-ranging cooperation in defence and security issues, including the fight against terrorism, in all of which we regard Australia as an important partner.
Prime Minister Gillard yesterday inaugurated the Australian Festival in India. Culture is an excellent medium to bring our two countries closer together. We are establishing ICCR Chairs of Indian Studies at five Australian Universities. I have also conveyed to Prime Minister Gillard our appreciation of the steps being taken by the Australian government to address the issues affecting Indians and Indian students in Australia, which have had a salutary effect.

This visit by Prime Minister Gillard is bound to open a new chapter in India-Australia relations. We look forward to the further strengthening, deepening and widening of these relations.

Thank you.
Joint Press Statement on the State Visit of Prime Minister of Australia to India

New Delhi, October 17, 2012.

The Prime Minister of Australia Ms Julia Gillard paid a State Visit to India from 15-17 October, 2012 at the invitation of Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh.

2. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard was accorded a ceremonial welcome at the Rashtrapati Bhavan on 17 October, 2012. She laid a wreath at the memorial to Mahatma Gandhi at Rajghat.

3. Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh held delegation level talks with Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard on bilateral, regional and multilateral issues. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard called on President Shri Pranab Mukherjee, received External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna and Leader of Opposition Smt Sushma Swaraj, and met Chairperson, UPA Smt Sonia Gandhi. Four Memoranda of Understanding were concluded and significant initiatives launched.

4. The Prime Ministers acknowledged the strengthening of ties in recent years and agreed there was great potential for further growth in the relationship. The India-Australia relationship is anchored in shared values as liberal democracies, converging interests and shared opportunities in the Asian Century. The bilateral strategic partnership is given effect through rapidly expanding trade and investment ties, common interest in a stable and outward looking Indian-Pacific region, growing collaboration in multilateral and regional forums, and fast growing people-to-people links.

Bilateral Cooperation

5. The Prime Ministers welcomed the progress made since the relationship was raised to the level of a strategic partnership, in 2009.

6. Noting the considerable potential to develop further this partnership, the Prime Ministers agreed to provide high-level political oversight to this process through annual Prime Ministerial meetings, either bilaterally or in the margins of international meetings.

Trade and investment

7. Trade and investment ties are expanding rapidly. The Prime Ministers noted that trade between both countries had more than doubled in the past six years to over $20 billion. They noted that trade must expand for mutual benefit and encouraged balanced growth in trade as a long term, sustainable boost to economic growth in both countries.

8. The Prime Ministers welcomed the progress towards a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA) to facilitate greater trade and investment links. They renewed the commitment of both countries for achieving an equitable, comprehensive and high-quality agreement.

9. The Prime Ministers noted the report of the second India-Australia CEO Forum and welcomed the contribution made by business in broadening and deepening the bilateral economic relationship.

10. Noting the expanding economic links between India and Australia, the Prime Ministers welcomed more regular engagement and dialogue between the two Finance Ministries.

11. The Prime Ministers noted the potential to further develop and diversify commercial relations and that this would be supported by the conclusion of the Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation and Mutual Administrative Assistance in Customs Matters which would enable effective enforcement of Customs laws and facilitate legitimate trade.

12. The Prime Ministers welcomed the conclusion of the Memorandum of Understanding on Wool, which would further facilitate bilateral trade, and the Memorandum on Cooperation in Civil Space Science, which would create a framework for peaceful space cooperation.

13. Underlining the importance of greater connectivity to support growing commercial and cultural ties, including in the education and tourism sectors, the Prime Ministers welcomed the announcement that Air India would commence direct flights to Australia by the first quarter of 2013.

Energy and resources

14. The Prime Ministers agreed to deepen the cooperation between India and Australia on energy security through an annual Ministerial-level dialogue, to be led by the Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission of India and the Australian Minister for Resources and Energy.

15. Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh welcomed the decision of the Australian Government on uranium sales to India, noting that nuclear energy will play an important role in India’s future energy needs. The Prime Ministers announced that India and Australia would commence negotiations on a bilateral Civil Nuclear Cooperation Agreement which, for Australia, is a prerequisite for uranium sales to other countries.

16. Australia’s supplies of energy and mineral resources to India have been rising steadily. Indian investment in Australia in the mining and resources sector has been growing rapidly. Australia welcomed the interest of both private and public sector companies from India in the resources sector.
17. The Prime Ministers agreed that India and Australia should collaborate more closely on the common challenge of managing scarce water resources. To give effect to this, they announced a Water Technology Partnership, under which Australia and India would share technologies to build capacity to better manage this vital natural resource. The partnership would include sharing of advanced Australian modelling work on river basin flows.

Regional and international cooperation

18. India and Australia share a common interest in the Indian Ocean and in the maintenance of stability and security through the Indian-Pacific region. As Indian Ocean states both also recognise the importance of the maritime theatre to our future security.

19. India and Australia, as Chair and Vice Chair respectively of the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation, will work closely to strengthen the Association, the apex pan-Indian Ocean multilateral forum, through concrete steps towards more effective practical cooperation in the six priority areas of maritime security and piracy; fisheries management; disaster risk reduction; tourism and cultural exchanges; academic and S&T cooperation; and trade and investment facilitation; which were identified by the member countries in the 11th meeting of Council of Ministers held in Bengaluru, in 2011. Both countries look forward to taking this collaboration within the Association to deeper level during the 12th Council of Ministers meeting in Gurgaon, India on 2 November 2012.

20. The Prime Ministers reaffirmed the positive security and defence ties between both countries, and committed to enhance maritime cooperation further, including through continued joint naval exercises.

21. India and Australia both recognise the importance of the East Asia Summit (EAS) as a crucial regional institution with the mandate to consider a broad range of strategic, political and economic issues. The Prime Ministers reaffirmed the commitment of both countries to work together to strengthen further the agenda of the EAS.

22. The Prime Ministers welcomed ongoing cooperation through other regional bodies such as the ASEAN Regional Forum and the Asia Europe Meeting. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard reaffirmed Australia’s support for India’s membership of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum (APEC).

23. As Australia prepares to chair the G-20 meeting in 2014, the Prime Ministers committed both countries to continue to engage closely in that forum to deliver concrete outcomes that will promote strong, sustainable and balanced growth of the global economy.
24. The two leaders reaffirmed the importance of reform of the UN, including the Security Council, to better reflect contemporary realities. Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh warmly welcomed Australia’s continued support for India as a permanent member in a reformed United Nations Security Council. India underlined Australia’s continued contribution to international peace and security under the UN charter and, in this context, acknowledged Australia’s candidature for a non permanent seat in the United Nations Security Council for the 2013-2014 term.

International security

25. The Prime Ministers underlined the importance of achieving universal nuclear disarmament and of countering the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard noted India’s sound non-proliferation record and expressed Australia’s recognition of the importance of India’s engagement with the four multilateral export control regimes with the objective of full membership. Both Prime Ministers agreed to annual bilateral non-proliferation and disarmament discussions at level of officials.

26. The Prime Ministers noted the ongoing work of the Joint Working Group on Counter-terrorism and recommitted both countries to close collaboration against the threat of terrorism.

27. The Prime Ministers committed both countries to continue to work together closely to fight organised crime. They noted these efforts would be supported by the Memorandum of Understanding on Narcotics to be concluded by both countries, and announced the decision to negotiate a Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons between India and Australia.

Knowledge partnership

28. India and Australia continue to be enriched by high quality knowledge partnerships in education, skills and research that support mutual efforts towards greater economic and social progress. Central to this progress is fostering academic, scientific and professional links between India and Australia.

29. The Prime Ministers welcomed the success of the Australia-India Strategic Research Fund in bringing together leading scientists from both countries for world-class research and fostering long-term scientific linkages. The Prime Ministers noted the broad range of projects supported by the Fund. They welcomed the Australia-India Fellowship Scheme, which will support Indian and Australian researchers spending time at research institutions in the other country, fostering linkages that will underpin the bilateral science relationship into the future.

30. The Prime Ministers noted the vital role played by the expanding bilateral education and training relationship and its contribution to our national goals for innovation, productivity and growth. They commended the work of the Australia-
India Education Council (AIEC) in providing strategic guidance to advance education, training and research partnerships. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard launched the new Endeavour AIEC Research Fellowships, which will support two fellows per year. Under the AIEC, Australia and India agreed to build partnerships between India’s Sector Skills Councils and Australia’s Industry Skills Councils in key industry areas.

31. Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh expressed appreciation for the continuing efforts of Australian authorities to ensure the welfare and security of Indian students studying in Australia. In support of this objective, the Prime Ministers welcomed the new Memorandum of Understanding on Student Mobility and Welfare which will expand cooperation on student welfare matters.

People to People and cultural Links

32. Rapidly growing people-to-people links between Australia and India underpin our developing partnership and will enable both countries to build even stronger relations into the future. Both Prime Ministers noted with appreciation that the Indian community, which this year was the largest source of skilled migration to Australia and the second largest source of students, is contributing significantly to the economic and social life of Australia.

33. The Prime Ministers agreed to the recommencement of Social Security Agreement negotiations, including consideration of totalisation provisions.

34. Arts and culture can be powerful forces for bringing people together and the two countries are committed to strengthening of bilateral cultural relationship. The Prime Ministers welcomed the staging of Oz Fest, Australia’s biggest cultural festival in India, which will see 100 events across 18 Indian cities between October 2012 and January 2013.

35. To give further impetus to expanding personal and cultural links, the Prime Ministers directed officials to pursue an Audio-Visual Agreement which would facilitate greater investment in film making in both countries.

36. Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh announced that India would establish ICCR Chairs of Indian Studies in five Universities in Australia to promote academic and student exchanges. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard announced that Australia would provide additional funding of $1.5 million over three years for the Australia-India Institute, and confirmed a grant to help establish a Nalanda University Chair in Environmental Studies would commence in 2013.

37. The Prime Ministers announced the commencement of negotiations towards a Memorandum of Understanding on the Movement of Persons which will promote dialogue on the regular movement of professional labour and combat irregular migration.
Memoranda of Understanding signed during the visit of Australian Prime Minister.

38. The following bilateral memoranda of understanding were signed in the presence of the two Prime Ministers:

- Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Wool and Woollen Products
- Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Student Mobility and Welfare
- Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Civil Space Science, Technology and Education
- Memorandum of Understanding between Skills DMC and the National Skill Development Corporation

39. Prime Minister Ms Julia Gillard renewed her invitation to Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh to visit Australia. It was agreed that the dates of the visit would be finalized through diplomatic channels.

40. Both sides agreed that the State Visit of the Prime Minister of Australia will lead to strengthening of the cooperative relations between the two countries, and will provide further impetus for the future development of the strategic partnership.

Speech of Prime Minister at the banquet hosted in honour of the Australian Prime Minister.

New Delhi, October 17, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Julia Gillard,

Distinguished guests,

Ladies and gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure this evening to extend a very warm welcome to Prime Minister Gillard on her first State Visit to India. Prime Minister Gillard is an ardent advocate of a closer and more vibrant relationship between India and Australia. She has led personally from the front in giving new meaning and direction to our relations. I believe her current visit will set the tone for a much more intensive relationship between our two countries.

Madam Prime Minister, in your previous responsibilities as Australia’s Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Education, you were instrumental in launching an annual Ministerial Dialogue on Education during your last visit here in 2009. That dialogue and the steps taken by the Australian Government since then have helped redress a number of issues faced by the Indian student community in Australia. The conclusion tonight of an agreement on Student Mobility and Welfare in your presence is therefore a fitting culmination of what you put into motion. It was again under your personal initiative that the Australian Labour Party reviewed its policy on uranium sales to India last year, enabling us to agree tonight on beginning negotiations for a bilateral agreement on civil nuclear cooperation.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Prime Minister Gillard personifies the freedom and equality of opportunity that India and Australia stand for. In her focus on education, health and employment policies, we see a reflection of our own priorities at home. She has steered the Australian economy admirably during the turbulence caused by a worldwide recession. Given the momentous shifts taking place in economic and political gravity in our respective regions, it shall be India’s endeavour to work together with Australia towards maintaining peace and stability in our regions and bringing development to our peoples.

Excellency,

Relations between India and Australia trace their origins to our colonial period. Even during the Cold War years, Australia remained a visible presence in our popular psyche. A large Indian-origin community of nearly half a million has made Australia its home. Our shared belief in parliamentary democracy, secularism, multiculturalism and free enterprise provides the basis for our relationship. The linkages of the English language and the Commonwealth bind us together and pave the way for greater cooperation. We can, of course, argue about which one of us is more passionate about cricket, but there is little doubt about what this sport has done to bring us closer together.

Excellency,

While we should take satisfaction in the state of our relations, I feel their full potential is yet to be tapped. Trade and investment flows, while growing, need more balance. Energy security should occupy more of our attention. And our own developmental plans should seek to leverage Australia’s considerable expertise in skills training, water modeling and environment. I look forward to working with you, Prime Minister, to bringing our dialogue on these issues to early fruition. I have no doubt that, in the years ahead, our two countries will build ever-deeper connections to the benefit of both our peoples.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

May I now request you to join me in a toast to:

- the health and personal well-being of Prime Minister Julia Gillard;
- the progress and prosperity of the friendly people of Australia; and
- ever closer friendship and cooperation between India and Australia.

CHINA

319. Speech by National Security Advisor Shivshankar Menon on “Developments in India-China Relations” at the Chinese Embassy’s function.

New Delhi, January 9, 2012.

Your Excellency, Ambassador Zhang Yan,

Ladies and Gentlemen.

Thank you for inviting me to view the exhibition on the India-China Year of Exchanges in 2011, and to share thoughts on developments in India-China relations.

Today India-China relations attract attention beyond our two countries. International developments and achievements in domestic construction by our peoples in the last few decades have given our relationship wider significance. Relations between India and China and their new equilibrium hold an important key to the emerging economic and strategic landscape of Asia and, to a certain extent, the world.

Let us look briefly at the context within which we conduct our relations and then look at the content of our relations today.

The Context

The basic facts are evident and well known. India and China are the two most populous nations on earth, are the two largest developing countries, and are among the societies and economies in the world that are transforming themselves most rapidly. They are the largest and the third biggest economies in Asia. China has the distinction of being the second largest economy in the world. The two countries are building a strong domestic economic base and rapidly training scientific and technical manpower. When much of the world is reeling under recession or grappling with political turmoil, our two countries have managed to register reasonably healthy rates of growth and maintain stability. We share a common geopolitical space and similar socio-economic aspirations for ourselves.

The future is less certain or evident. Uncertainty in the international system is at unprecedented levels. The economic and security situation facing both India and China has become far more complicated in the last few years. On the positive side, thanks to sustained growth rates, high savings rates and a prudent financial approach, Asia and the developing world have witnessed a greater accretion of relative economic power following the financial crisis of 2008. In Asia, larger economies like China, Japan, India, South Korea and Indonesia, all members of the G-20, have increased their ability to influence economic outcomes. The BRICS process has also gained ground. These are welcome developments.

At the same time, risks remain for economies which are still developing. An early return to robust growth and spending in the developed world are necessary for world economic recovery. The US, Europe and Japan still account for approximately $20 trillion of consumption expenditure as against about $2.5 trillion by China and India together. A re-balancing of economic structures in our countries in the face of such differences could be difficult. More generally speaking, the relatively benign external environment in the last two decades is changing negatively and is threatened by protectionism in the developed world.

World politics also faces new challenges. The balance of power is in flux in Asia and the world. As uncertainty rises, powers follow hedging strategies. The mechanisms of strategic communication and consultation and a common security outlook are evolving slower than the changes in objective reality.

Besides, both India and China are increasingly linked to the rest of the world, through trade, investment and their Diasporas. The impact of changes in West Asia on our energy security, for instance, is an example of how developments further away from our shores also affect India and China more and more profoundly. It is therefore natural for us to take ever greater interest on global issues.

Equally, global issues like climate change, nuclear proliferation and cyber and space security matter more to both India and China in this globalised world as they influence our development, peace and prosperity.

India-China relations

What does this context imply for India-China relations?

Both India and China currently give the highest priority to their domestic transformation, which will take time. A peaceful periphery, a stable and benign world environment and continued prosperity among our economic partners are of utmost importance to both of us. This will remain so for quite some time. It is in our mutual interest to work together, bilaterally and with other partners, to reduce uncertainty and create an international environment that is supportive to our domestic transformation efforts. Economics and development are not zero-sum games.

It is for this reason that we believe that there is enough space for both India and China to realise their development aspirations.
Economically, we are already integrated with each other to an unprecedented extent. Our bilateral trade reached over US$67 billion in the first 11 months of last year, and China has consistently remained our largest trading partner in goods for several years. However, investment flows between us have not kept pace with trade. Indian investment in China worth a total of US$ 433 million is spread over 676 projects, while Chinese investment in India is worth nearly US$ 300 million. There are several opportunities for cooperation in developing infrastructure. India is already one of China’s most important markets for project exports, with a cumulative value of contracted projects at US$ 53.5 billion and turnover realized at US$ 24.6 billion.

What is less noticed is the range of contact between our two societies. For instance, over 7,000 Indian students are studying in China today. This scale of interaction never occurred before in history.

Naturally, the corollaries of such an intensification of economic and social engagement are issues of trade imbalance, diversifying the trade basket and commercial disputes. The two governments have taken several initiatives to make our trade more balanced and harmonious, and to facilitate and streamline our business engagement. More remains to be done and we will learn by doing. For instance in September last year we held the first Strategic Economic Dialogue between India and China which identified several areas of promise for the future. Equally the business communities and their Chambers need to take advantage of growing opportunities while sharpening competitive edge. I am convinced that our business and economic engagement with each other and with other countries will intensify as we seek to overcome the prospect of sluggish recovery in the traditional engines of growth in the world economy.

Our Governments have common or similar positions on the global development agenda, in WTO and on climate change, which has made it possible for us to work together internationally.

A few vocal experts in our two countries and elsewhere argue that notwithstanding the numerous cooperative elements in our economic relations and approach to international issues, India and China are bound to be strategic adversaries. I find such determinism misplaced. It ignores the successful experience and demonstrated expertise of both governments in managing differences and building on commonalities for over three decades and particularly since the Rajiv Gandhi visit to China in 1988. It also ignores the wisdom of the leaders of the two countries, who have consistently worked to ensure that problems are managed in a mature manner. The issue is whether we can continue to manage the elements of competition within an agreed strategic framework which permits both of us to pursue our core interests. I see no reason why that should not be so. Indeed I would go further and say that the rapid changes in the international situation today also create an opportunity for India and China to work with others to shape benign international outcomes.

The boundary question remains unresolved, and there is no denying that it is a difficult issue. However, a number of mechanisms have been put in place to ensure that the border stays peaceful while we seek a settlement of the boundary question. On the settlement itself, we are in the second stage of the three stage process of agreeing principles, a framework and finally a boundary line.

Similarly, on other bilateral issues of potential difference there exist mechanisms of dialogue and communication to address them. We appreciate China’s assistance to us in tackling floods and natural disasters in the downstream areas of our shared rivers. There is a need to widen the scope and deepen the level of our communication in some areas. These include new challenges and new issues in the changing context of our relations. I am confident that we will do so.

Indeed, some security challenges, especially of the non-traditional variety, are common to India and China, and offer an opportunity to work together. Both India and China face the challenge of terrorism in our shared neighbourhood. It requires common effort by all members of the international community to tackle terrorism.

Energy is the key to domestic transformation in both India and China, which is why both of us have a common stake in energy security, and in the freedom and security of transportation on the global commons. We both have an interest in global public goods like a peaceful order, freedom of the seas and open sea lanes. We similarly need to address issues of piracy with common resolve. As important maritime nations, we can contribute to each other’s maritime security by coordinating approaches.

Asia’s security is interlinked across this great continent. India has therefore argued for an open, inclusive Asian security architecture. India and China will have key roles to play in forging a new compact for common and collective security for Asia. We should also contribute within our capacity to the global public goods that are increasingly important to our well being.

The robustness of our bilateral relation will depend on dialogue and communication so that the potential for misunderstanding and miscalculation is limited. This dialogue process must not be limited to the two Governments.
Today, there are multiple stakeholders in our relations as also multiple determinants of these relations. Each of them, be it businessmen, media or scholars of the two countries, has a responsibility to take our relations to the desired level of equilibrium. It is therefore absolutely essential that they acquire an informed understanding of their neighbour. Today, as both India and China change fast, our understanding of each other needs to keep pace. Both the quality and the scale of our interactions have also grown so rapidly that we need to learn new ways of dealing with the relationship.

Conclusion

To conclude, India and China have demonstrated an ability to deal with difficult issues and to build a cooperative partnership based on common interests. Its regional and global impact, and its long term significance to our own development, is what makes the India-China relationship strategic in the true sense of the term. I do hope that I have been successful in giving you some idea of why I am confident that by working together India and China will be able to successfully face the challenges that the new geopolitics are throwing up, and would best serve their own national interests by further deepening their strategic cooperative relationship.
320. Press release on the 15th round of talks between the Special Representatives of India and China on the Boundary Question.

The 15th round of talks between the Special Representatives of India and China on the Boundary Question, Shri Shivshankar Menon, National Security Advisor and His Excellency, Mr. Dai Binggou, State Councillor took place in New Delhi on January 16-17, 2012. During this round, the two sides continued their discussions on a framework for a resolution of Boundary Question. The SRs agreed that they would prepare a joint agreed record for their Governments on the progress made so far in the SR Talks on the Boundary Question.

2. An Agreement on the Establishment of a Working Mechanism on Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs was signed in the presence of the two SRs.

3. The SRs also discussed other bilateral, regional and global issues. The discussions were wide ranging, productive, forward-looking and marked by a commonality of views on many issues. Making a positive appraisal of the current state of bilateral relations, the SRs noted the importance of regular high-level exchanges and strengthened cooperation across different areas between the two countries. The SRs agreed that there was scope for greater coordination on regional and global issues. They agreed that the next round of SR talks will be held in China.

4. The Chinese Special Representative called on the Prime Minister on January 17, 2012.
321. India-China Agreement on the Establishment of a Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs

New Delhi, January 17, 2012.

Agreement between The Government of the Republic of India and
The Government of the People's Republic of China on the Establishment of a Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the People's Republic of China (hereinafter referred to as the “two sides”);

Firmly believing that respecting and abiding by the Line of Actual Control pending a resolution of the Boundary Question between the two countries as well as maintaining and strengthening peace and tranquility in the India-China border areas is very significant for enhancing mutual trust and security between the two countries, for resolving the Boundary Question at an early date and for building the India-China Strategic and Cooperative Partnership for Peace and Prosperity;

Aiming for timely communication of information on the border situation, for appropriately handling border incidents, for earnestly undertaking other cooperation activities in the India-China border areas, have agreed as follows:
Article I
The two sides agree to establish a Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs (hereinafter referred to as “the Working Mechanism”) to deal with important border affairs related to maintaining peace and tranquility in the India-China border areas.

Article II
The Working Mechanism will be headed by a Joint Secretary level official from the Ministry of External Affairs of the Republic of India and a Director General level official from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People’s Republic of China and will be composed of diplomatic and military officials of the two sides.

Article III
The Working Mechanism will study ways and means to conduct and strengthen exchanges and cooperation between military personnel and establishments of the two sides in the border areas.

Article IV
The Working Mechanism will explore the possibility of cooperation in the border areas that are agreed upon by the two sides.

Article V
The Working Mechanism will undertake other tasks that are mutually agreed upon by the two sides but will not discuss resolution of the Boundary Question or affect the Special Representatives Mechanism.

Article VI
The Working Mechanism will address issues and situations that may arise in the border areas that affect the maintenance of peace and tranquility and will work actively towards maintaining the friendly atmosphere between the two countries.

Article VII
The Working Mechanism will hold consultations once or twice every year alternately in India and China. Emergency consultations, if required, may be convened after mutual agreement.

Article VIII
This Agreement shall come into force on the date of its signature. It may be revised, amended, or terminated with the consent of the two sides. Any revision or amendment, mutually agreed by the two sides, shall form an integral part of this Agreement.

Signed in duplicate in Hindi, Chinese and English languages at New Delhi, on 17th January 2012, all three versions being equally authentic. In case of divergence the English text shall prevail.

For the Government of the People’s Republic of China
Remarks by External Affairs Minister at the Inauguration Function of the New Embassy Building Complex in Beijing.

Beijing, February 8, 2012.

Ambassador J aishankar,
Excellency Cheng Guoping, Vice Foreign Minister
Mr. Luo Zhaohui, Director
General of Asia Department, Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am very pleased to be in Beijing this evening to inaugurate the new Indian Embassy building complex. Let me congratulate the Ambassador and his staff on the completion of a project that symbolizes a new page in our bilateral relationship with China.

I would also like to extend my appreciation to Mr. Raj Rewal, the Architect who has designed this impressive complex. I am confident that its many facilities would enable the Embassy to be even more productive and render better services.

A modern and expansive Chancery clearly reflects our expectations of ties with China. As a neighbour of China, we have age-old ties, particularly in the field of trade and culture. The maritime routes of the East, the Silk Road or the Tea & Horse Road are some of the more well known examples. Buddhism is a strong cultural bond between us. History is replete with examples of how we have not only influenced each other, but assisted each other’s development.

The colonial era distanced our people but could not prevent enormous sympathy for the national aspirations of the other. India’s independence and the founding of the People’s Republic of China enabled us to forge common approaches to the big questions of the day.

The resumption of active cooperation that followed the period affected by the border dispute has given us an opportunity to once again demonstrate that India and China can not only work together for mutual benefit but for the betterment of the world.

As the only two nations with a population of more than a billion each, the foremost priority for both of us is to raise the quality of life of our people. A stronger India-China economic relationship can make a direct contribution to that goal. Each of us has capabilities from which the other can greatly benefit. Indeed, as neighbours, the stability and predictability that we provide to the other is itself of great value. The rise of India and China can not only be a parallel process but, with vision and commitment, actually are reinforcing one.

To realize its full potential, the relationship requires diligent tending as well as imaginative initiatives. Our bilateral interface must expand to more sectors, with constant interaction among policymakers and practitioners alike. Our civil societies too must get to know each other better, overcoming language barriers. The larger enabling environment that facilitates more people-to-people contacts also needs constant improvement. We have accomplished much in the last decade, which alone accounts for about half of our total bilateral agreements. But much still remains to be done.

At this stage of growth, our targets should be ambitious. We have certainly boosted our cooperation and contacts through the 60th anniversary celebrations of our diplomatic relations, Festivals of India and of China, and last year, of the Year of Exchange. Let us carry that forward into 2012 that my counterpart, Minister Yang Jiechi and I agreed today to mark as the “Year of India-China Friendship and Cooperation.”

India-China relations go well beyond their bilateral aspect. The larger region, indeed the whole world, observes its progress closely. With the future of so many in our hands, there is a heavy responsibility on us. That is all the more so as our choices and policies affect the prospects of developing nations as a whole. An important aspect of our growing cooperation is how closely India and China work together on global issues such as climate change, food security and a more equitable world order. This has been apparent in the last year in the UN Security Council as well.

It is inevitable that our two countries will not always be able to agree on all issues. There are differences inherited from history that still remain to be resolved. But if we are serious about creating a better future, our thinking cannot remain trapped in the past.

We must engage with each other constructively, and where necessary, candidly. Both of us are much better off with a stronger bilateral relationship that captures the vast opportunities for cooperation and mutual benefit. I am confident that the Indian Embassy in Beijing, from its new premises, will contribute to the growth of our ties in that spirit.

Thank you all for joining us today.

Opening remarks by External Affairs Minister at media interaction in Beijing.

Beijing, February 9, 2012.

I have had a very productive and busy day meeting the entire spectrum of Chinese leadership handling foreign policy and national security issues. My discussions were broad ranging and encompassed several bilateral, multilateral and regional issues.

I came with idea of engaging with my Chinese colleagues on how to take the relationship forward in 2012. This was the common theme in all my 4 meetings with H.E. Mr Zhou Yongkang, Member of the Politburo Standing Committee, H.E. Mr Dai Bingguo, State Councillor, H.E. Mr Yang Jiechi, Foreign Minister and H.E.Mr Wang Jiarui, Minister, International Dept.

India and China are two large Asian developing countries which are also neighbours. Hence we have significant opportunities and challenges that we can address. I proposed that we designate 2012 as the ‘Year of India-China Friendship and Cooperation’.

I am happy to inform you that all my Chinese interlocutors readily responded positively to this suggestion. We have now requested our officials to work out the modalities for implementation.

In this context I have invited my counterpart Foreign Minister Yang Jiechi to visit India so as to maintain momentum of high level interactions. He has gladly accepted. We hope it will be possible for him to visit India before the BRICS Summit in which President Hu Jintao will participate.

On the bilateral front, we have discussed our growing trade relationship. We are confident in our reaching the goal of 100 billion US dollars by 2015. I have highlighted the need for initiating measures to balance our trade relations. The prowess of Indian companies in software and pharmaceuticals is well known. I expressed the hope that market access will be provided for them to grow in China. Similarly, investment from China in the infrastructure sector in India would be welcome.

We also reviewed the ‘outstanding’ issues in our bilateral relations and agreed that while we work to resolve them, we should not let them adversely affect our growing cooperation in other areas. Specifically, we have agreed that the newly established working mechanism for consultation and coordination in border affairs will have its first meeting at an early date.

The need for increase in people-to-people interaction was strongly emphasized since the total number of visitors from our two countries with a combined population of more than 2 billion is less than a million.
As our business and people-to-people interaction grow, there will also be issues which need to be attended too. One such instance relates to the two Indian traders who were illegally detained in Yiwu and are currently involved in resolving their commercial dispute with Chinese traders.

This morning they met me and expressed a desire to clear their name and return to India as early as possible. I empathasized with them regarding their traumatic experience and have raised the matter with my Chinese counterpart. The Indian Mission will continue to provide all assistance in resolving the issue.

As representatives of the two largest developing countries, we discussed a variety of global issues which have an impact on our development process. These include matters relating to cooperation in the G-20 fora, climate change negotiations, WTO discussions as well as the impact of global economic crisis.

In short, today has been for me a very satisfying day as it is the launch of a process of engagement with our Chinese friends regarding the way forward in 2012 across a variety of issues. The opening of the new Chancery is reflective of the growing positive trajectory of our bilateral engagement with China. I go back with a clear understanding of how India and China intend to proceed ahead during the year. Today's heavy schedule was satisfying not only for the accomplishment of a day's work but also on account of the setting of the agenda for India-China relations for the year ahead.
324. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the visit of Minister of Foreign Affairs of China.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen and thank you for coming. We thought we will try and explain to you the events of the last 24 hours regarding the visit of the Chinese Foreign Minister to Delhi.

As you know, the External Affairs Minister Mr. Krishna has had broad-ranging and expansive discussions with the visiting Chinese Foreign Minister Mr. Yang Jiechi. These discussions were part of the mechanism of annual meetings of Foreign Ministers and they spanned the entire spectrum of issues in India-China relations. In addition, there was also a detailed exchange of views on the forthcoming BRICS Summit both relating to the substantive outcome of the summit and the logistical arrangements for the summit.

You are aware that India and China are working towards ensuring that 2012 is the year of India-China friendship and cooperation. We hope to announce in due course a schedule of activities for this year. Of broad interest to you would be exchanges of journalists and the possible establishment of a Media Forum which will facilitate regular interaction between media of both countries. In addition it is also expected that the Spokespersons of the two Foreign Ministries will have regular exchange of visits. And here comes the more interesting part. The Chinese Foreign Minister conveyed that China will be willing to provide landing rights for ZeeTV in China.

Issues related to bilateral trade and mutual desire to expand trade with the goal of touching a $ 100 billion in 2015 were raised. In this context the External Affairs Minister said that there was a need to balance bilateral trade, and he suggested that information technology and pharmaceuticals are major areas where Indian companies could benefit from a level-playing field. The Chinese Foreign Minister took serious note of this and assured that it is their desire to work hard to increase imports of competitive Indian goods to China. In this context he suggested greater Indian participation in trade fairs in China. In order to provide impetus to fast-expanding economic cooperation between India and China, the two Ministers agreed that the CEO’s Forum will meet at an early date.

Foreign Minister Yang requested participation by the Government of India and business persons in the BOAO Forum for Asia which will take place in April 2012 in Hainan. External Affairs Minister conveyed that the Government of India will be represented by the Deputy Chairperson of the Planning Commission Mr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia.
While discussing India-China boundary questions it was agreed that the Working Mechanism on Consultation and Cooperation on India-China Border Affairs, which was established during the 15th meeting of the Special Representatives, would have its first meeting in Beijing next week.

There is already growing interaction at the State Government level with Chief Ministers of various Indian States undertaking visits to China and Provincial Leaders from China visiting India. The desire to enhance cooperation to local Governments was expressed, that is at the level of cities; and both sides expressed the desire to carry this forward. It was agreed to negotiate and conclude an agreement to this effect between the Ministry of External Affairs of India and the China International Friendship Cities Association. In the first instance, it will aim at promoting exchanges between Mumbai and Shanghai and Bengaluru and Kunming.

India and China have agreed to establish and institutionalize a maritime dialogue between the two countries. Both India and China are maritime nations with long coastlines and active navies. The dialogue will aim at promoting cooperation and coordination between the two countries. It is expected to be led by the Ministry of External Affairs on the Indian side and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the Chinese side. The details are to be worked out.

And finally on the BRICS Summit, as you know India and China have similar views on many financial and economic issues and it was agreed that our officials would be in touch to flesh these out and reflect them in the forthcoming outcome document of the summit.

That is all that I have in terms of opening remarks. I have here with me Joint Secretary (East Asia) Mr. Gautam Bambawale who will answer any question that you may have on specific issues which are covered in this statement or any other issues that you may like to ask. Thank you very much.

Question: Sir, Would you like to say something in Hindi about the Zee TV being available in China. (free translation from the Hindi text)

Joint Secretary (East Asia) (Shri Gautam Bambawale): In the talks held between our EAM and the Chinese Foreign Minister this morning, the latter said that the long pending question of landing rights for the Zee TV which was pending for quite sometime, have been accorded to Zee TV and this channel will now be available to the people in China. (Free translation from the Hindi text)

Question: Do you have any more details on what is discussed regarding the BRICS summit? Also, how much of an issue is Euro zone crisis like (inaudible)... and was there discussion of a South Bank among the common ground on financial and economic issues?
Official Spokesperson: On the BRICS Summit, basically this was only a discussion which China, although we are also discussing separately with various other countries. There are several suggestions like joint economic reports, and there was also talk about a possible South-South Bank, etc. These are all issues which are being considered right now. What I would suggest is that we would have perhaps next week a much more detailed presentation to you on the issues that the BRICS Summit is confronting both logistical and substantive, and that would give you a broader idea of where we stand in terms of all our partners in the BRICS rather than with one country or the other.

Question: Mr. Bambawale, can you give us some details of what has happened so far as the border talks are concerned till now? Secondly, what is going to happen in the next week’s meeting in Beijing?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): The two Ministers discussed for a brief while the boundary question between India and China. As you know, this issue was mainly discussed in the framework of the Special Representatives of India and China. The 15th Meeting of the Special Representatives took place in Delhi in middle of January. During that meeting of course there was an agreement signed for establishing a Working Mechanism. As my colleague just mentioned to you, the first meeting of this Working Mechanism will take place in Beijing next week. The main objectives of the Working Mechanism will be to ensure that peace and tranquility will continue to be maintained in the India-China border areas, and that the two countries will move forward in this question of the maintenance of peace and tranquility.

Question: I believe the India-China Joint Working Group on Counterterrorism is also meeting today. Is that right?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Yes, that is absolutely correct, it is meeting today. In fact the meeting will continue in a few minutes from now. So we do not really have a read-out on what happened in that meeting right now.

Question: What are the agencies or who is it that is involved in these discussions?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): I can tell you that it is an inter-governmental meeting on both sides. It is led on the Indian side by Additional Secretary for Counterterrorism and Political Affairs in the Ministry of External Affairs of India and on the Chinese side it is led by their Director-General for External Security in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of China.

Question: Talking about the idea of a South-South Bank, did the proposal emanate from Indian side? And what did China bring to the table as far as the BRICS Summit is concerned?
Official Spokesperson: As I said, let us wait on this till we discuss this in the context of the BRICS briefing and we will try and explain to you what the contours of this discussion are.

Question: The Chinese President is coming for the BRICS Summit. Will he stay back? Will there be a bilateral also?

Official Spokesperson: Our understanding is that all those who are coming for the BRICS Summit will also have bilateral interactions with our Prime Minister.

Question: Can you tell us something more about this Maritime Dialogue which you have mentioned?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me just say that it was a suggestion from the Chinese side. As you know and as the Joint Secretary (External Publicity) mentioned, both India and China are major maritime nations, we have long coastlines, we have active navies. So, both of us felt that it would be useful to have a dialogue on maritime issues. I am afraid I do not have any more details about what will be discussed, who will lead it, who will participate in it. That is still to be worked out. But we are hoping that it will be worked out fairly soon.

Question: Sir, as far as the Tibetan question is concerned, did it come up during the discussions today, especially regarding security for Hu Jintao when he comes here later this month? What kind of apprehensions do they have and what kind of assurances have we given them, if we have?

Official Spokesperson: Let me try and tell you for the BRICS Summit we had a discussion maybe a few days ago on logistical arrangements and on that occasion there was a discussion on all aspects including security for all participants not only from China but from other countries as well. We have already explained to all the participants the arrangements that are being put in place. As regards today, there was a discussion not on the specifics of security arrangements but on the need to ensure that the BRICS Summit is a success in the sense that there would not be any untoward incident there, and that is a normal concern of all participants in any summit meeting. With regard to Tibet, I cannot recollect any major discussion on that.

Question: Actually there are reports from Arunachal Pradesh today that the Brahmaputra river has dried up there and there are apprehensions that it might be due to diversion of water by China.

Joint Secretary (East Asia): On the question of diversion of water let me say that India and China have had many exchanges on this subject including at the highest levels, between the Prime Ministers of the two countries. The Chinese side has on many occasions told us that they will not do anything on trans-border rivers which will hurt the interests of the lower riparian countries like India. Our own look into this whole question has also led us to believe that what the Chinese are telling us is correct. So, we have not just taken them at face value, we have also tried to verify this fact.

Question: There has been some talk of BRICS putting up a consensus candidate for the President ship of the World Bank when the American retires in June this year, and the Chinese Foreign Minister was supposed to discuss it with our Foreign Minister. Did that figure in today's talks?

Official Spokesperson: I have not heard of this discussion figuring today in our talks. The talks were only on the outcome document of the BRICS. As I said, this is only a bilateral discussion between China and India, but this is a multilateral forum. And let me again reiterate, we will try and give you a perspective of how all other countries are approaching the BRICS Summit. That will give you perhaps a better flavor of where we are on the substance of it.

Question: I have a slightly different question. There was this report today I think in the Indian Express about this Chinese youth delegation which is in town and apparently the Government fixed up a meeting with the Chief Election Commissioner and with the NHRC for them. Is that true that they did not want to meet either of them? Why were those meetings fixed? This is China. Elections! Human rights!

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me just say that the exchange of youth delegations between India and China flows of course from an agreement that took place in December 2010 when Premier Wen Jiabao of China visited India. But the specifics of it are not dealt with by us; they are dealt with by the Ministry of Youth Affairs and Sports. So, maybe you could direct your questions to them or to the Chinese Embassy. I am afraid I do not know anything about this.

Question: This exchange between Mumbai and Shanghai, and Bengaluru and Kunming you are talking about, is it under this Sister City concept or what is it exactly?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): One of the problems we are facing is that the Chinese have a very active system of Sister Cities and even Sister Provinces or States. But many of our cities, especially the smaller ones, do not have the financial resources to implement such agreements. So, what we are trying to do is to encourage such agreements and such exchanges at a decentralized level. The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India will enter into an agreement with this organization from China that we spoke about to put in place the wherewithal for having such sister city exchanges between India and China. That is what we are trying to do.

Question: Two days ago there was a report that was released by a group of independent experts in which one of the suggestions, proposals that was made was India should react aggressively to insurgency in China in case of a major offensive by China. It was released in the presence of the National Security Advisor and two former National Security Advisors. I would like a comment whether the Indian Government endorses this view, and if not then why was the Cabinet Minister rank official Mr. Nandan Nilekani ... (inaudible)...

Official Spokesperson: The question that you ask is way above my pay grade, I must say that. You may like to ask this question to those who were present rather than to us because I do not know whether there was anybody associated with the Ministry of External Affairs who was on the dais there. So, I would suggest that there are avenues available for all of you to ask these questions to the people concerned.

Question: Was Arunachal Pradesh raised at all? And also Chinese have been talking about evidence that they have that the Dalai Lama and the Tibet Youth Congress are involved in instigating self-immolation in Tibet? Was that discussed at all?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): A very short and sweet answer, no.

Question: We are at a time when two Italian Marines are in the dock and are accused of murdering two Indian fishermen. Today it was the second item on the agenda. The Union Cabinet has cleared an agreement between India and Italy for cultural cooperation. So, tell me is it the right time to have done such a thing?

Official Spokesperson: Again I think the wrong question addressed to the wrong person on this.

Question: Sir it is related to the ... (inaudible)... Maldives. ... (inaudible)...

Official Spokesperson: I do not have the read-out on the developments which are perhaps under way there. But let me try and provide to you the context of our engagement with Maldives. Foreign Secretary, as you know, was there and the idea was to facilitate among Maldivian parties their next steps in trying to resolve the current crisis. My understanding is that the issues that remain contentious on the table at this stage are the dates of the election. There are some who wanted a date announced prior to the meeting of the Majlis and there were others who insist that this should be discussed in the Majlis. On all other points there has been by and large agreement among the parties involved. As far as we as India are concerned, we are okay if this is discussed inside the Majlis or in any other forum that they want to discuss. That is the contentious issue and that is what is resulting in perhaps the stalemate regarding the Majlis..

Question: On the Indian fishermen apprehended by the Maldives Naval Force.
Official Spokesperson: Yes, we have received information that there were eleven Indian fishermen who are supposedly detained by the Maldivian Navy. Our High Commission has taken this up with the Maldivian authorities. We will try and have a swift and quick resolution to this issue.

Thank you very much.

325. Response of the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs to recent developments in South China Sea.

New Delhi, May 10, 2012.

In response to a media query on recent developments in South China Sea the Official Spokesperson said:

"We have been following with concern recent developments involving China and the Philippines in the South China Sea. Maintenance of peace and security in the region is of vital interest to the international community. India urges both countries to exercise restraint and resolve the issue diplomatically according to principles of international law."

(The spokesperson was referring to certain territorial claims and counter claims by China on the one hand and Philippines and Vietnam on the other in the South China Sea.)

The answers given by Minister of Petroleum and Natural Gas in the Rajya Sabha on May 15, 2012 to a question regarding Postponement of Production of Crude oil by OVL from South China sea are relevant:

The Minister of State for Petroleum and Natural Gas Shri R.P.N. Singh informed the Rajya Sabha in written reply today that efforts of ONGC Videsh Ltd (OVL) to drill a well in Block 128 in Vietnam was not successful due to severe logistic constraints in anchoring the rig on a hard sea bottom at the proposed drilling location. OVL had acquired two offshore exploration Blocks (i.e. 127 & 128) Vietnam as Operator with 100% PI under Production Sharing Contracts (PSCs) with effect from 16th June 2006. A well was drilled in Block 127 in 2009 and no hydrocarbon was found. After fulfillment of PSC obligations, the Block was relinquished.

He also said that OVL acquired Block 6.1 in Vietnam offshore in May, 1988 and holds 45% Participating Interest (PI). OVL’s share of production in financial year 2011-12 was 2.023 Billion Cubic Metre (BCM) of gas and 0.036 MMT of Condensate.

In reply to another query, the Minister explained that sovereignty over areas of the South China Sea is disputed between many countries in the region. India is not a party to this dispute. As two developing countries with growing energy needs, India and Vietnam have been cooperating in the oil and gas sector to enhance their energy security. China, which is a party to the South China Sea dispute, has raised its concerns on India’s hydrocarbon exploration projects in the South China Sea off the coast of Vietnam. Government of India has clearly conveyed that such activity by Indian companies is purely commercial in nature and that sovereignty issues must be resolved peacefully by the countries which are parties to the dispute in accordance with the international law and practice.

New Delhi, May 16, 2012.

India and China today held discussions and shared their experiences in the areas of civil services, capacity building, health care of Central Government employees, public service delivery, pension benefits and public sector reforms. Both the sides also adopted the Plan of Action for exchange of cooperation. A five member Chinese delegation headed by Mr Yin Weimin, Minister of Human Resources and Social Security met the Minister of State in the Prime Minister’s Office and Minister of Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions Shri V. Narayanasamy here and exchanged the views on relevant subjects.

Earlier, both India and China had signed the Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on cooperation in the field of Civil Services, Personnel Management and Public Administration on 27th May, 2010. Under the MoU, the following areas of interest have been identified for cooperation like capacity building and skills upgradation, Improved systems of Public Service Delivery, Human Resource Development-civil services, Human Resource Management in Public Sector and Public Sector reform. An Indian delegation headed by Joint Secretary, Department of Administrative Reforms and Public Grievances visited China in February this year to discuss implementation of the MoU. The Chinese side invited Shri Narayanasamy to visit China in the latter half of this year to carry forward the areas of cooperation.

Beijing, June 6, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends. I welcome you to this interaction with the External Affairs Minister, Shri S.M. Krishna. The External Affairs Minister will make opening remarks and then he will be willing to answer a few questions from you.

With that, I invite the External Affairs Minister to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): Thank you, friends.

I have come to Beijing to participate in the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation’s meeting. I utilized this opportunity of calling on Vice Premier Li Keqiang who, as you all know, is set to assume higher responsibilities. The primary focus of our discussions was the future of our growing bilateral relations.

I conveyed to Vice Premier Li that India attaches the utmost importance and high priority in our foreign policy formulations, our cooperative partnership with China. We have a strategic relationship with this country. And it is the desire of the Government of India and the people of India that we would like to forge this relationship, the bonds much stronger.

I indicated India’s desire to be a full-fledged member of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation. And it was indeed very heartening to hear from Vice Premier Li that the modalities of admitting new members are being worked out, the process is on.

I also indicated to Vice Premier Li, considering the fact that he is going to be one of the most important persons who is going to decide the economic destiny of this country once he assumes the mantle which he is supposed to, and as a result of that I conveyed to him that India’s continued interest in China’s bilateral relationship and our economic relationship.

I conveyed to him that India is going through for a massive expansion of our infrastructure development. And we were willing to create a level-playing field and total transparency in terms of international bidding evaluation, and then ultimately decision-making. This was to convey to Vice Premier Li that the whole process is open, fair and that it could be very beneficial for all Chinese companies to participate in this.

As economic and trade relationship has been a driver of our relationship over the past decade, we discussed our growing economic relations. I conveyed our desire for greater trade and investment with China. At the same time I did convey to Vice Premier Li that there has to be a balanced growth of trade, and our concern regarding the trade deficit was given ample expression to.

Vice Premier Li was positive in his response. He said that the Chinese Government is encouraging Chinese companies to invest in India, especially in infrastructure. He agreed that for trade to be sustainable it has to be balanced. While the Government-to-Government interaction on the political front, on the economic front, on the cultural front is robust, both of us agreed that we need to continue our efforts. You know that 2012 is the Year of Friendship and Cooperation between our two countries.

India will encourage greater tourist flows and student exchanges. Following my meeting today with Vice Premier Li, I am confident that India-China relations will continue their current upward trajectory under the ... (Inaudible)... leadership of China which will be in place later this year and early next year.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: Any of you have any questions?

Question: You mentioned that modalities are being worked out in terms of membership. Was there any timeframe discussed? Earlier the Chinese Vice Foreign Minister said that they wanted Observer countries to work hard. So, ... (Inaudible)... what it is that needs to be done.

External Affairs Minister: We have been coming to SCO since 2005 as Observers, and we have made known our seriousness in our association with this very important grouping. And India’s track record, when we discussed this with reference to other groupings is well-known. As a result of that, from my position of evolving a consensus, I think we have moved in a more positive direction of finalizing the modalities, the terms and conditions under which new members could be entertained. And we are looking forward to that, we are waiting.

Question: I think the Chinese Vice Foreign Minister who briefed the media said that actually the onus is on the Observer states. The words that he used were that these states need to work hard to comply with these modalities. That is you are talking about.

External Affairs Minister: We are working indeed very hard to comply with the modalities. We have shown our seriousness. Otherwise, nobody would be coming to attend these meetings since 2005. And this is my third meeting as Foreign Minister of a huge country like India. And when India comes into an association or a grouping, it comes with a lot of strength, a lot of positives on its side. I think that will have to be evaluated.

Question: Isn’t it something that despite the fact that the Russian Foreign Minister went on record several times, even in the Foreign Ministers’ meeting that was held last month, that India, of course he was naming Pakistan as well should be the members, the sense one gets is that it is China that has reservations about it.

External Affairs Minister: Today I spoke to the Vice Premier who is going to assume greater responsibilities, as all of us know, and I think what I say is the latest position of the Chinese side.

Question: Just a clarification. Did we express our willingness to join the SCO this year or have we been asking for it for some years now?

External Affairs Minister: We are prepared, we are ready, we have been asking for it. Well, sometimes things move slowly. But I am glad I get the total sense that it is moving.

Question: I think in 2009 or 2010, Russia almost publicly said that it wanted India. So, why is it taking such a long time?

External Affairs Minister: I could not answer that particular question.

Question: Sir, this was your first meeting with China’s future Premier, and you say that after talks with him your sense is that the trajectory of India-China relations is going to be on an upstream. My questions is, what did he convey to you about India-China relations, what is his assessment and what is the way forward according to India? Secondly, were global issues like Iran and Afghanistan discussed in your talks?

External Affairs Minister: We discussed on the bigger picture, the vision that the Vice Premier has for India-China relationship, and what he feels and what he believes to be the agenda for the next decade. I think it was something like a peep into the future with the Vice Premier being the Head of the Government here in the policy-making process. That way I feel very encouraged. I invited him to come to India. He was telling me that he was in India in 1985 perhaps as a youth communist activist, and he has not been in India since 1985. Well, India is not the same as it was in 1985. So, I am looking forward to his visit to India at a time convenient to him.

Question: So, none of the global issues were discussed.

External Affairs Minister: No, we did not. We looked at the bigger picture, we looked at the vision, we looked at the future of the relationship.

Question: Sir, have the family or the traders gotten in touch with you recently during this current trip seeking help, and was that raised? And, did India raise any concerns on human rights issues vis-à-vis the Tibetan self immolations?
External Affairs Minister: I had a good meeting with the two traders. They conveyed the position as they see it. Then I did tell them that tomorrow I am going to be meeting the distinguished Foreign Minister and I certainly will take up this issue with him. As regards your second question, I said that we looked at the larger picture. We did not talk about other issues.

Question: There is a report that India and US are going to find the remains of the World War II personnel in the North-East region. Is it true?

Official Spokesperson: If I can answer that, this is a request that has been made previously. The US Government has in 2006 and onwards made this request. They sent teams there and at that stage they did not find anything. They have since then raised this again. This is a humanitarian issue, and we have agreed to deal with it in a humanitarian measure. This is being done not only in India. These are remains of World War II pilots who may have lost their lives there. This is their perception and we welcome this and we are willing to assist in any way. This is not a new request, so let us not take it as a new request.

Question: There is a lot of interest on the US’s pivot to Asia, especially after the announcement in Singapore that they are boosting their deployments in the Pacific vis-à-vis the Atlantic, there is a lot of interest in China on what role India would or would not play in this US’s pivot to Asia. So, what would be your message to the Chinese at a time when this has become of an issue of concern to Beijing, in terms of India’s role in this?

External Affairs Minister: India’s position is I think very clear that these are all international waterways to increase trade amongst nations, and hence we will have to look at it from that angle. We have to strengthen that angle, and India is willing to do with other countries so that the trade relations will get a boost through these waterways.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.
328. Statement by Foreign Secretary on Prime Minister’s Meeting with Chinese Prime Minister in Rio de Janeiro on sidelines of Rio+20 Summit.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): I thought I will just tell you that PM and Prime Minister Wen Jiabao of China had a good meeting for over 40 minutes during which they reviewed bilateral relations and also the cooperation we have in multilateral fora, this particular conference being an example of that.

The Conference comes after the G20 Conference where again both in the conference itself as well as in the BRICS format India and China have had a high degree of collaboration in arriving at joint positions and in advancing our common agenda.

Prime Minister Wen Jiabao in fact noted that this meeting with PM was the thirteenth the two Prime Ministers are having, and that their meetings have in fact taken forward the agenda both bilaterally and in terms of the international cooperation that we have.

On the bilateral relations, it was agreed that the two sides would continue close political dialogue at the political level as well as among the sectoral level among officials.

As far as the boundary question is concerned there was a reference made to it, and it was decided that the Special Representatives would work for preparing the joint record of their work so far, which was already announced in January, and also give directions for the future coordination between us.

Both sides agreed that the joint mechanism which has been set up for handling boundary related issues, its first meeting which took place in Beijing a few weeks ago was a very positive step. PM recalled that in fact the joint mechanism was set up at the suggestion of Prime Minister Wen Jiabao in December 2010 when he had come to India.

The two Prime Ministers also said that the Defence and Strategic Dialogue between our two countries should be continued and maintained at the level it is, and stepped up. PM noted that our Naval ships were in fact in China just a few days ago and this is another example of our continuing cooperation.

As far as bilateral trade and economic relations are concerned, both Prime Ministers agreed that the target of 100 billion dollars in trade by 2015, which was set up a few years ago, is in fact on track, and in fact we are moving in that direction.
Prime Minister raised the issue of Indian trade deficit and the Chinese agreed to work with India in addressing the fact that India has a large trade deficit. They mentioned in fact specifically that they are arranging trade missions to India to improve access of Indian exports into the Chinese market. They are organizing commodity fairs. And they noted for example one of the changes which has happened recently is that rice exports from India to China will now be commencing.

Both sides also felt that improving investment would be one way of dealing with the trade deficit issue, particularly if there were a large flow of Chinese investments into India. Prime Minister mentioned in particular that Chinese investment in the infrastructure sector would be particularly welcome. And Prime Minister Wen Jiabao mentioned that we both have complementary strengths and certainly infrastructure is one of those areas where Chinese companies would be able to do good business in India. Both sides also welcomed the CEOs’ Forum which has been set up between the two countries.

Prime Minister raised also the issue of trans-border rivers and mentioned it saying that as a lower riparian we appreciate the fact that the Chinese have agreed to set up the mechanism for transfer of information, and we would like this to continue so that there is a greater confidence in our country. The Chinese agreed, and in fact they said they would agree to strengthen the communication with the Indian side on this issue as well as on the trade issue.

Finally the two Prime Minister’s also emphasized the importance of people-to-people contacts. The Chinese, as you know, had received a very large Youth Delegation from India, and we have similarly opened up access to Youth Delegations. But in addition it was felt there was scope for academics, media and other sections of civil society to engage with each other between India and China.

So, broadly this was the theme. It was a long meeting, very very constructive, held in a very cordial atmosphere, and as I said, dealt with all the issues.
329. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the 9th Session of India-China Joint Economic Group.

New Delhi, August 25, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma, will meet Chinese Commerce Minister Mr. Chen Deming here on Monday for the 9th session of India-China Joint Economic Group (JEG).

The Indian side led by Minister Shri Sharma is likely to raise the issue of growing trade deficit. The issues related to market access in IT and ITES and Indian agricultural products are also likely to be raised. Export of pharmaceutical products, diamonds and export of sea food to China are also likely to be discussed. Investment related issues and import of Indian films by Chinese side are also likely to come up for discussion. The Chinese side is likely to bring to the fore the ways to strengthen cooperation in trade remedies and service trade. The border trade issues between India and China, and modes to improve investment and operation environment for Chinese enterprises in India are also likely to be put to discussion.

The Indian side led by Shri Sharma would include Commerce Secretary Shri S R Rao, Shri Saurabh Chandra, Secretary, Department of Industrial Policy and Promotion and senior officers from various departments of the government. On the other hand, the Chinese side led by Mr. Deming would include Chinese Ambassador to India, Mr. Zhang Yan, and other senior members from Chinese government.

It was in December 1988 during the visit of the then Prime Minister of India Shri Rajiv Gandhi to Beijing, that a Joint Group on Economic Relations, Trade, Science & Technology (JEG) with the Commerce Ministers as the Chairman on the Indian side and the Minister for Foreign Economic Relations and Trade as the Chairman on the Chinese side was formed. The first meeting of the JEG was held in New Delhi from September 18-20, 1989. The eighth session of India-China JEG was held in Beijing on January 19, 2010.

The total bilateral trade between India and China for the financial year 2011-12, stood at USD 75457.42 million as compared to USD 59000.36 million during 2010-11. During FY 2011-12, the exports stood at USD 17902.98 million while the imports stood at USD 57554.44 million. The provisional trade deficit for 2011-12 stood at USD 39,651.46 million.
330. Press Release on Cooperation between India and China on strengthening of Tourism.

New Delhi, September 2, 2012.

India and China have expressed their willingness to strengthen bilateral tourism cooperation. This was decided at a meeting between Mr. Zhu Shanzhong, Vice Chairman of China National Tourism Administration and Shri Girish Shankar, Addl. Secretary, Ministry of Tourism in New Delhi today.

It was also decided that exchange visit of students and faculty from Hotel Management Institutes between the two countries which started in September 2007 may be continued on regular basis. Both the sides were of the opinion that Faculty exchange programmes should be organized between the Human Resource Development Institutes in India and China. It was also decided that a special programme can be organized wherein the HRD experts from India and China can visit some of the Institutes in both countries and interact with the teaching faculty through conferences and seminars. Tour Operators and Travel Agents of both the countries may interact with each other in order to promote two way tourism between India and China. The possibilities for promoting more package tours in either of the countries could also be explored by the travel trade of the two countries. Both the countries would like to exchange relevant information/statistics with regard to tourist arrivals, targets and projection, infrastructure facilities, etc. Now that Hotels and Tourism sector has been opened for Foreign Direct Investment up to 100% on automatic routes, Chinese investment in tourism infrastructure in India could be one of the major areas of cooperation.

It may be recalled that a MoU was signed on December 08, 2002 between the Ministry of Tourism and National Tourism Administration of the People’s Republic of China on the implementation plan for organized group travel by Chinese citizens to India. In addition, China has accorded ‘Approved Destination Status’ to India to enable Chinese Travel Agencies to organize the outbound travel groups of Chinese citizens to India.

The Chinese delegation is on a visit to India under Ministry of External Affairs Distinguished Visitor’s Programme (DVP) for China. Under this programme MEA invites provincial leaders and influential opinion makers from China to visit India and get firsthand experience of recent developments in India.

New Delhi, September 4, 2012.

India and China today reached consensus on a wide range of issues relating to defence and military exchanges and cooperation to be conducted this year and beyond. At the 90 minute delegation level meeting between the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony and the visiting Defence Minister of China General Liang Guanglie here in South Block, it was agreed by the two sides to conduct the next round of Joint Military Exercises at the earliest.

They also agreed to strengthen border security cooperation between the border troops of the two sides so as to enhance and maintain peace and tranquility in the India-China border areas.

The two sides proclaimed their decision to work together to maintain peace and stability of the Asia-Pacific region, promote port calls by naval ships of the two sides and conduct joint maritime search and rescue exercises. The two sides decided to further enhance and strengthen cooperation between the naval forces of both sides in counter piracy operations in the Gulf of Aden and off the coast of Somalia.

The Chinese side invited the Shri Antony to visit China in 2013. Shri Antony thanked General Liang for the invitation and conveyed that the timing of his visit could be settled through diplomatic channels. 333. Speech by Foreign Secretary at the inauguration of the new Chancery Building of Consulate General of India, Hong Kong

Hong Kong, October 24, 2012.

Ambassador Jaishankar,
Consul General Dharmendra,
Excellencies,
Ladies and gentlemen,

1. I am very happy to be with all of you today to inaugurate the new Chancery premises of the Consulate General of India in Hong Kong. Doing so on the auspicious occasion of Vijaya Dashmi or Dussehra makes this occasion even more rewarding. For me this is the first visit. I have taken advantage of the opportunity of this inauguration to come to this great city and Special Administrative Region of China; but my presence underlines the importance we attach to putting in place proper infrastructure for our Missions abroad which now number over 175. This also reflects the priority to our engagement with the world which is increasingly important for our national development.

2. I am happy our new Chancery in Hong Kong reflects the India of the 21st Century. We have designed it to be aesthetic but functional, environmentally friendly but efficient. The refurbished Consular section has been constructed with particular care, so as to ensure that our services are more streamlined. We look forward to your feedback on this aspect of these new premises. I know that the Consulate has a lot of work, as Missions are usually judged first of all by the efficiency of Consular services.

3. Ladies and gentlemen, the Indian community in Hong Kong is one of the oldest in the world. Our links to Hong Kong date back 150 years. In 1845, the Indian population in Hong Kong numbered 362 persons. Today that figure has touched 40,000. You have also been instrumental in the emergence of Hong Kong as a global hub of finance and trade. You are part of a larger diaspora of 25 million which is important for India as you provide our country a national global network. This is of significance for our position in the world, our trade and economy and above all for culture. Many of you are citizens of India while some have adopted this place as your home. You are well integrated and live up to Nehru’s exhortation to persons of Indian origin to be loyal to the country of adoption, but to keep a place in their hearts for India! I am delighted that four of you received the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman last year. Since so many of our PIOs are high achievers, selecting the awardees is no easy task. I am proud that the choice last year reflected India’s unity in diversity, with Mr. Harilela, Mr. Shroff, Mr. Arunachalam and Mr. Banga being selected.
4. India places importance on its ties with Hong Kong, which is one of our most important trade partners. The then Chief Executive of Hong Kong visited us in India last year to further enhance our relations. In turn, I was keen to visit this Special Administrative Region of China to signal our desire to expand and deepen this partnership. I am here to a place connected with our past, important for our present and I believe critical for our future. Hong Kong University, the Ruttonji hospital, and the Star Ferry, started in the past, but are the living present.

5. And what of the future. We are growing even with slowdown, one of the fastest in the world. And our integration is intensifying India’s engagement with the rest of the world. This process has moved into a higher gear over the past few years. From 20% of a GDP of $400 billion two decades ago, to 45% of a GDP of 2 trillion today. Doubtlessly, this interaction is aimed at furthering our basic national goal of rapid and inclusive economic growth. And we will continue to grow and expand our presence and our influence. And obviously we will continue to look to placed like HK SAR, and to you in this process. I know many of you are impatient with our pace. But things are on track, reforms are continuing. I am confident that Hong Kong will play an important role in achieving our economic objectives. That is why we are keen to further upgrade our interaction with the place many of you call home. Our bilateral trade grew 23% last year to reach $23 billion and there is more to come. I am happy to hear that work on a DTAA is at an advanced stage.

6. We meet at a time of some tension – but we feel that we can contribute to an architecture of stability in Asia. An architecture which enables all of us to grow and in which India and China can take forward complementarity in our relationship. We maintain the closest possible relations with Japan, Korea and China and want to see peace and progress in East Asia. Hong Kong with its extraordinary infrastructure is a model for creating an economic future in which all can benefit. We cannot produce as many millionaires as Hong Kong but you are an example of what prosperity looks like – even in a crowded, ancient land!

7. As Indians and people of Indian origin residing here in Hong Kong I urge all of you to continue contributing to the India-Hong Kong relationship so that it flowers and grows. I am sure these new premises of the Indian Consulate General in Hong Kong will also aid in this effort.

8. Thank you for being here this evening. Jai Hind and long live the friendship between HKSAR and India and between China and India.

334. Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary on Prime Minister’s meeting with the Chinese Prime Minister Wen Jiabao on the sideline of the ASEAN Summit.

Phnom Penh, November 19, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends and thank you very much for coming. As you are aware, Prime Minister met this morning with Prime Minister Wen Jiabao of China, and I have requested Foreign Secretary to brief you about that meeting.

We will separately have a briefing in the afternoon at 6 pm on the Indo-ASEAN Summit and the bilateral meetings in the afternoon.

With that I request the Foreign Secretary to make his opening remarks on the meeting between Prime Minister and the Prime Minister of China.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Prime Minister and Prime Minister Wen Jiabao had a very fruitful and detailed meeting this morning. Prime Minister was accompanied by Commerce and Industries Minister Shri Anand Sharma, who I think has briefed you while we were heading here on the plane, and National Security Advisor, Principal Secretary to PM, and other senior officials including myself.

Prime Minister Wen Jiabao had with him both Foreign Minister Yang Jiechi and the Commerce Minister, and a large number of senior officials. In his remarks, the Prime Minister of China said that in eight years this was his fourteenth meeting with the Prime Minister, and that he was very happy that the two Prime Ministers had been able to develop an equation and a system of working together. He said it was probably the last time he would be meeting PM during his tenure.

Prime Minister Wen Jiabao said it was a remarkable fact that two ancient civilizations and countries with large populations, countries like India and China were set on the path of revitalization at the same time.

Speaking on the bilateral relationship he said, reflecting on these eight years and what had been done, that we have built up a strategic and cooperative partnership. On the boundary question we have continued an active dialogue between the Special Representatives. And meanwhile, even though the dialogue has not resolved all our differences, we have set in place a joint mechanism to ensure peace and tranquility on the border.

In terms of trade, there had been a very rapid build up in the relationship between the two countries. He also referred to people-to-people contacts and said that overall these important achievements in the bilateral relations had brought benefits to our peoples bilaterally and added to global peace and prosperity. He again said that it was a memorable experience to work with Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. He concluded that the new leadership of China will give great importance to the relationship with India and it is recognized that it is important for us to work together.

The overall perspective of the discussions between the two Prime Ministers was that there is enough space for both China and India to develop and side by side they can expand cooperation and build new areas of cooperation. Prime Minister Wen Jiabao mentioned this and said these were the guiding principles which led his country in its approach to India.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh endorsed the views of the Prime Minister of China. He referred to the large number of meetings which he had had with Prime Minister Wen Jiabao. Then he noted that in this year, over the last one year, the Foreign Ministers of the two countries have met four times. He also noted that we had received the Commerce Minister of China in India in August, and the Defence Minister in the month of September. He referred to this as part of the elaborate dialogue architecture which is in existence between our two countries.

Further, PM added that this dialogue architecture has now taken into its ambit new areas. For example, in the foreign affairs domain we are holding a large number of regional dialogues including on areas like West Asia and Central Asia. We are also engaging in a dialogue on maritime security.

The economic engagement was given a great deal of importance by the Prime Minister in his remarks. He noted that we would be having the Strategic Economic Dialogue at the end of November. This is a dialogue which is between two teams led by the Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission on our side and the Head of the National Development and Reform Commission on the Chinese side. The Chinese Prime Minister noted that a very large delegation, including business persons and others, economic specialists, would be accompanying the leader of their delegation on their visit to India.

It was also noted by the two Prime Ministers that on global issues there had been a great deal of dialogue and working together in international fora. Our Prime Minister mentioned in particular the extent of our convergence in fora like the G20, the BRICS, and on the issue of climate change. Subsequently Prime Minister spoke further on the bilateral economic cooperation, which he said he is committed to working to achieve its full potential.

As regards Indian exports, Prime Minister emphasized the need for greater market access for Indian exports particularly in areas such as services, IT and pharma. Prime Minister also welcomed Chinese investment in the infrastructure sector, which he said would help to create employment and would also help in bridging the trade deficit between our two countries.
In reference to people-to-people contacts, emphasis was placed on science and technology, the Chinese contribution to the Nalanda University revival and on the encyclopedia of culture which is an ongoing work between the two countries.

The two leaders also shared views on the East Asia Summit which is coming up in front of us. They shared the importance of using the EAS as a forum for accelerating economic development and enhancing economic interests of all the countries. In this spirit they felt the leaders can address all issues and build bridges of cooperation.

Question: Both India and China and large importers of commodities like crude oil and fertilizers. Our import itself has a significant impact on global prices of these commodities which adversely affect both the countries. So, was there any discussion on the timing of both the countries entering the world markets so that we do not disturb the prices to our own detriment?

Foreign Secretary: No, this was not discussed specifically during this dialogue between the two Prime Ministers. But the subject of energy is one of the issues in the Strategic Economic Dialogue at the end of the month. It was not discussed today.

Question: Just to understand one issue about this market access, there are some specific issues like this clinical trial which China does not accept for medicines which are done elsewhere and IT as well. Why is it taking so long to get into the issue and address specifics? Every time we hear this kind of issues and greater market access.

Foreign Secretary: This is being discussed, as you know, between the concerned experts and officials in the Commerce Ministries and in the dialogue between our two countries. The Prime Minister of China did say that he was looking forward to a gradual balancing of trade as a group and that they were cognizant of India’s particular interests in these areas. But on the specifics of where the dialogue is now and what we need to do, that was actually not discussed today. That is part of an ongoing dialogue between us. But he did recognize the need for balance in trade, and he said this would be developed gradually.

Question: Was South China Sea or the code of conduct that the ASEAN nations and China are discussing for South China Sea come for discussion? Did East China Sea issue between China and Japan come up for discussion?

Foreign Secretary: Not in today’s meeting between the two countries.

Question: Any measures discussed on increasing the exports to China?

Foreign Secretary: Yes. As I have been saying, Prime Minister mentioned the need for actions and this was the previous question also. This has been the subject of many discussions in the past. So, it is recognized that this is a very high priority for India. Prime Minister mentioned specifically, as I said, the area of services and pharmaceuticals but spoke in terms of the need for greater market access for Indian companies. He highlighted these two areas but spoke in terms of a need for accelerating Indian exports to China.

Question: A related question, Sir. The BRICS report on a single currency has been sort of prepared and India was chairing that task force. Did this come up at all? Is that something that we can see being discussed in the Strategic Economic Dialogue?

Foreign Secretary: No, this did not come up specifically today. BRICS was mentioned as one of those fora which help highlight the degree of commonality of interest between India and China on certain global issues. That was the framework in which it was mentioned. The specific issues under BRICS Programme of Action, which were decided during the Delhi Summit in March, were not discussed today. That will continue through a series of meetings which are being arranged. Of course, the Strategic Economic Dialogue would be one area because there would be experts in that particular field participating in it. But the BRICS itself, the mechanism, has a series of steps and dialogue mechanisms under which this subject would be discussed.

Question: Could we, therefore, say that there is progress on deciding on what happens to the single currency formulation?

Foreign Secretary: I would not like to characterize anything on that since I am not actually addressing the BRICS issue just now.

Question: Did they touch upon the possibility of Mr. Menon visiting Beijing for one last border talks? Could you refresh us about what happened to the hotline proposal between the two PMs?

Foreign Secretary: I would start with the second because that was not actually discussed today, that is being worked upon by the two Governments. Yes, the subject of the NSA visiting Beijing very soon was mentioned at the end. He mentioned it in the context of the ongoing dialogues between the two countries and immediately after the Strategic Economic Dialogue, which would be end of November sometime. We would be finalizing the dates for the NSA visit to Beijing.

Question: Will the Strategic Economic Dialogue end of November be in New Delhi?

Foreign Secretary: Yes, in New Delhi.

Question: What are the new areas of cooperation that the two countries are looking at? There is room for new areas of cooperation. So, what are those new areas?
Foreign Secretary: There is a whole mechanism under which we have been talking about cooperation. I mentioned a few. Those are in science and technology, there are also areas of opening up dialogues like in maritime security which we have not done before. We are having a series of youth exchanges. Right now in fact there is a group of a hundred Chinese young people who have come to India for a visit. So, in a number of such areas we are exploring cooperation which has not been tried out at this level before. We also have a regular programme now, which is not new but it is being expanded, of having visits from regional leaders. For example, we have had Provincial Heads of Government from China visit India. And as you are aware, we have had Chief Ministers of all Indian States going to China. It is a joint enterprise. This was not discussed today but what they emphasized was that the kinds of areas which are identified by the officials in various Ministries that these must be taken forward.

Question: You have mentioned that there was discussion on Central Asia and West Asia. Did the two leaders take cognizance of the latest strikes in Ghaza by Israel?

Foreign Secretary: Let me just clarify. What the Prime Ministers were referring to was really a reflection on the previous question, the new areas of cooperation that we have started building up between the Governments as a whole. The dialogues on Central Asia, West Asia which I had referred to in my opening remarks are at the level of the two Foreign Ministries. We have the specialists who deal with them either in Beijing or in Delhi. We set up these dialogues for a greater exchange of our perspectives. That is the level at which these dialogues are taking place. Within that framework, of course we would be discussing issues like the current situation in West Asia. But the two Prime Ministers just endorsed the need for pursuing these various frameworks of conversations between us.

Question: My paper also comes out from Patna. Can you just enlighten me on the status of the Nalanda University?

Foreign Secretary: That would require a briefing of its own because it is a very large project. But just let me put it this way that a number of countries have expressed their interest in collaborating with us. The main task of developing the university of course will be for us in India to handle. We have in fact in the Ministry of External Affairs right now an officer who deals with specifically the Nalanda University project. And we are collaborating very closely with the Government of Bihar in the development. The foreign participation has come from China, from Singapore, from Japan, and Cambodia. There is some interest being expressed by other countries which are not specifically members of the Nalanda Project but are interested in the idea including Sri Lanka and Myanmar.

Question: Sir, with the developments in Gaza fast turning into a major international crisis, could you tell us how India responds to the developments?
Foreign Secretary: I think we have issued a statement which clarifies the response. I think that was issued by my colleague last night. I think that sums up our position. As you are aware, a few days ago, since we are currently holding the Presidency of the Security Council, our Permanent Representative had convened a meeting of the Security Council to focus attention on the issue, on the need for prevention of any escalation of the dispute, and a resumption of dialogue. I think that is really the immediate task we are faced with.

Question: Sir, my question is once again on the South China Sea issue which seems to have completely overshadowed the talks here at ASEAN. What is the expectation that India has in terms of this issue coming up at the Summit-level talks or the Retreat where the leaders will meet tomorrow?

Foreign Secretary: The leaders can discuss any issue they wish, that is typical of any Retreat. I think from our perspective on the East Asia Summit, PM has emphasized that the East Asia Summit is important as a forum for accelerating economic development and enhancing the economic interests of both of our countries. Obviously when the leaders meet they would take up issues which are of immediate concern. But these issues should be discussed in the light of the need for EAS to have this overriding priority of building up bridges of cooperation among the various countries. That is what was actually discussed. Now what will happen at the EAS is in the realm of speculation. I would not like to go there, but just would remind you that our position always has been that we support the efforts to arrive at the code of conduct and to firm up measures by which the South China Sea would be an area of cooperation.

Question: Was there any mention of defence exchanges between the two countries?

Foreign Secretary: Not beyond the fact that the PM referred to the visit of the Defence Minister of China, and he also added that in that context there had been a number of defence exchanges between our two countries which are very important for maintaining the sense of tranquility and cooperation between the two countries. That was it.

Question: Was the issue of launching RCEP discussed by our Prime Minister with Wen Jiabao?

Foreign Secretary: No, that did not come up specifically.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much. We come to the end of this briefing.
 Remarks by Foreign Secretary at the Second India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue.

 New Delhi, November 26, 2012.

Your Excellency Mr. Zhang Ping, Chairman, National Development and Reform Commission of China,

Your Excellency Mr. Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission of India,

Ladies and Gentlemen.

I am extremely happy to represent the Ministry of External Affairs of India at this 2nd meeting of the Strategic Economic Dialogue between India and China. Let me reiterate the importance that the Government of India places on this channel of communication between our two countries. We are of the view that our discussions in this format will lead to many collaborative projects in the economic sphere.

India places priority on its relations with China. We have established a Strategic and Cooperative Partnership between our two countries. More importantly, our relations have transcended the purely bilateral aspects and taken on a global nature. When Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh made an official visit to China in January 2008, our two Governments issued a Shared Vision for the 21st Century which states that “both India and China bear a significant historical responsibility to ensure comprehensive, balanced and sustainable economic and social development of the two countries and to promote peace and development in Asia and the world as a whole”. Prime Minister has stated on several occasions that there is sufficient space in the world for the simultaneous development of India and China, as well as other developing nations. Premier Wen has added that as we advance economically, there is great scope for cooperation between our countries. We, in India, are confident that this Strategic Economic Dialogue will be significant in enabling both our Governments to identify these areas of joint activity.

I have been tasked with looking at some aspects of our global and regional cooperation. So let me address these themes briefly.

Your Excellency Chairman of NDRC referred to our cooperation on global governance. Over the past two years while India has been a non-permanent member of the United Nations Security Council, we have seen that our approaches to many international issues are broadly similar. This has led to excellent interaction between our representatives at the UN in New York. We do feel that this experience would reinforce the Chinese support for a larger role for India in the UN and we expect Chinese support for India’s Permanent Membership of the UN Security Council.
India and China have worked closely together in global climate change negotiations, both bilaterally as well as within the BASIC framework. Our common positions made a difference at the 2009 Copenhagen Summit and our effective cooperation continues till this date.

The BRICS framework has emerged as a significant grouping of which both India and China are important members. We were delighted to host the 4th BRICS Summit earlier this year at New Delhi which was attended by President Hu Jintao. Multilaterally, India and China also work together within the G-20, in world trade negotiations and in the reform of international financial institutions. The Deputy Chairman has given us the broad outline of what has been done already in these forums by our two countries.

India and China work together within the East Asia Summit process. Our Prime Ministers had an excellent meeting at Phnom Penh late last week where they discussed issues covering bilateral cooperation and also issues at the most recent East Asia Summit meeting. I avail of this opportunity to reiterate the importance that India attaches to its Look East Policy of which China is an integral part.

We are also happy that we have commenced dialogues between our capitals on regional subjects such as West Asia, Central Asia, Africa and on United Nations issues. We believe the time is right for India and China to commence an exchange of views on other regions including Afghanistan which is in a stage of transition.

As our economies continue to grow and our geopolitical significance increases, we in India look forward to further expanding our exchanges with China on the entire gamut of global issues. I am particularly happy we have detailed exchanges on energy - This has both bilateral and global aspects. Just to mention one possibility. Let us note that Chinese oil production stands at 6 times that of India. One oil field Daiquing produces more than all Indian oil fields put together. It is time for us to “learn from Daiquing”.

We in the Ministry of External Affairs are happy to provide the Indian Secretariat for this SED. We look forward to hearing of productive interaction in the economic relationship which sustains our overall bilateral ties.

I thank you for your attention.
Agreed Minutes of the 2nd India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue.

New Delhi, November 26, 2012.

1. The 2nd India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue (hereinafter referred to as ‘the Dialogue’) took place in New Delhi on 26 November, 2012. The Indian side was led by H.E. Mr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission, Republic of India and the Chinese side was led by H.E. Mr. Zhang Ping, Chairman, National Development and Reform Commission, People’s Republic of China (hereinafter referred to as the ‘two sides’).

2. Established during the visit to India of H.E. Mr. Wen Jiabao, Premier of the State Council of the People’s Republic of China in December 2010, the Dialogue is aimed at improving macro-economic policy coordination, promoting exchanges on economic issues and enhancing India-China economic cooperation. The 1st Dialogue had been successfully held at Beijing in September 2011 where the two sides agreed to constitute five Working Groups on policy coordination, infrastructure, energy, environment protection and high-technology. A working level delegation from China visited New Delhi in March 2012 following which the five Working Groups met in Beijing in the months of August and September 2012. This preparatory work has contributed immensely to the successful deliberations in and outcomes of the 2nd Dialogue.

3. During the 2nd meeting of the Dialogue, the two sides discussed a wide range of topics including greater cooperation at the global level, strengthening communication on macro-economic policies, deepening and expanding trade and investment and promoting bilateral cooperation in the financial and infrastructure sectors. The proposals and recommendations made by the five Working Groups were considered during the 2nd Dialogue and directions given for their future activities.

1. The two sides agreed that in the current global economic situation it was important to raise the level of economic engagement between India and China. The two sides agreed on the following:

(i) Cooperation at the global level: Exchanging views on current global economic and developmental challenges, the two sides recognized that as major developing economies, they needed to maintain close coordination and communication to pursue their common interests. Among them is the reform of international monetary and financial systems, stabilizing the volatility in global commodity markets, working towards sustainable development and climate change goals, and ensuring food and energy security. Both sides believe that the ongoing and future cooperation on existing and upcoming issues will greatly enhance mutual trust and expand common interests.

(ii) Strengthening communication on macroeconomic policies: Following detailed discussions on the global and national economic situations, the two sides agreed that development growth trends globally have weakened as a result of a number of factors since the onset of the global financial crisis. This included weakening demand in the developed markets, the ongoing Eurozone crisis, lower business confidence, and growing inflationary trends. Both sides seek to maintain continued economic growth while adjusting manufacturing and services, upgrading levels of technologies and skills, while developing the hard and soft infrastructure for encouraging economic growth. The two sides agreed that they would regularly conduct joint studies on issues of mutual interest, focusing on benefits of best practices and information exchanges.

(iii) Deepening and expanding trade and investment: With a view to promoting greater economic and commercial engagement, both sides recognized the need to explore potential synergies in areas where the two sides have mutual complementarities, improve trade and investment environments, work towards removing market barriers, enhance cooperation in project contracting, deepen business to business exchanges, improve transportation links, encourage greater bilateral investment and work towards achieving a more balanced and sustainable bilateral trade.

(iv) Expanding cooperation in the financial and infrastructure sectors: Both sides have agreed to intensify the cooperation in the financial sector by encouraging financial institutions of the two countries to set up operations in either country to support enterprises of the two countries to establish / expand commercial operations. Both sides agree to undertake studies in related areas including innovative financial methods to support the requirements of priority sectors particularly the infrastructure sector having significant scope for furthering economic development.

2. The main outcomes of the five Working Groups are as follows:

(a) In the Policy Coordination Working Group, both sides discussed plan priorities and ways and means of achieving plan targets recently unveiled in their 12th Five Year Plans. They exchanged views on skills development and industrial park development. The two sides also submitted assessment reports on the investment environments in each other’s country based on the experiences of the enterprises of the two countries and discussed possible solutions to improve the investment environment.
The two sides have also agreed to carry out joint studies on planning cooperation and skills development for employability, and entered into related MoUs.

(b) In the Infrastructure Working Group, with its focus on enhancing railway cooperation, both sides exchanged views on the broad policies and plans for railway development in each other's country. The two sides also discussed high-speed rail development programme, heavy haul and station development and entered into a MoU to exchange views and other related information in these areas.

(c) In the Energy Working Group, both sides briefed each other on the development of the power sector in the two countries, the ongoing cooperation in the power equipment sector, opportunities and challenges in the wind energy sector, the possibility of Chinese power equipment manufacturers setting up service centres in India and relevant policy environment to support the ongoing cooperation, and reviewed the small hydro power workshop that was successfully held in Beijing in October 2012.

(d) In the Environmental Protection Working Group, the two sides agreed to enhance cooperation in the implementation of energy efficiency projects through energy service companies (ESCOs), encouraging visits to industrial and manufacturing centres excelling in energy efficient initiatives, cooperate and jointly develop testing protocols and standards and have entered into a related MoU. The two sides also exchanged views on enhancing cooperation in water-saving technologies covering the areas of waste water recycling and water-efficient irrigation systems.

(e) In the Hi-Technology Working Group, the two sides agreed to enhance cooperation in the Information Technology and Information Technology Enabled Services (IT/ITES). Both sides also agreed to carry out/support joint studies to better understand the IT/ITES markets of each country and have entered into a related MoU in this area. The two sides also reached a consensus to explore the possibility of working together for developing common standards for digital TV, audio and video codec standards and mobile communication technology.

4. The following Memorandums of Understanding were signed by the two sides in the presence of the delegation leaders:

(d) Memorandum of Understanding between the National Association of Software and Services Companies (NASSCOM), India and the China Software Industry Association (CSIA) on Enhancing Cooperation in the IT/ITES Sector.

5. The two sides agreed that the 3rd India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue will be convened in China in 2013. They also agreed that prior to the 3rd Dialogue, the Working Groups would meet to implement the consensus and decisions agreed to by the two sides at the 2nd Strategic Economic Dialogue.

Done at New Delhi on 26 November 2012 in two originals.

Second Meeting of the Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs.

New Delhi, November 30, 2012.

1. The 2nd meeting of the Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on India-China Border Affairs was held at New Delhi on 29-30 November, 2012. The Indian delegation was lead by Shri Gautam Bambawale, Joint Secretary (East Asia) and comprised of representatives of the Ministries of External Affairs, Defence and Home Affairs as well as members of the Indian Army and the Indo-Tibetan Border Police. The Chinese delegation was lead by Ambassador Ms. Wang Xiaodu, Special Representative, Department of Boundary and Oceanic Affairs, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and comprised of representatives of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and National Defence of the People’s Republic of China. The Chinese delegation called on Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai.

2. The discussions took place in a cordial, constructive and cooperative atmosphere. The two delegations reviewed developments in the India-China border areas since the 1st meeting of the Mechanism and acknowledged with satisfaction that peace and tranquillity continued to be maintained due to the efforts of both sides. The two delegations also exchanged ideas on additional measures for maintaining peace and tranquillity as well as further steps to build greater trust and confidence between the two sides.

3. The two delegations welcomed the recent liberalization of border trade across Nathu La, which has led to a significant increase in the volume of trade. They continued their discussions on introducing additional routes for the Kailash Manasarovar Yatra.

4. The 3rd meeting of the Working Mechanism will be held in China at a mutually convenient time.
COOK ISLANDS

338. Press Release of the Ministry of External Affairs on the establishment of Diplomatic Relations with Niue, a Pacific Island country.

New Delhi, September 4, 2012.

Minister of State for External Affairs Shri E Ahamed, and Prime Minister of Niue H. E. Toke Talagi signed a Joint Communiqué on the establishment of Diplomatic Relations between India and Niue, at Cook Islands, on 30 August, 2012.

Niue is a Pacific island country, which is a member of regional bodies such as the Pacific Island Forum and the Pacific Community and also of UNESCO, WTO and FAO.

India has been closely engaged in assisting in the development aspirations of the island countries of the Pacific. India’s participation as a Dialogue Partner of the Pacific Island Forum (a regional grouping of Pacific Island countries), since 2002, has deepened our cooperative relations with all countries in the region.
INDONESIA

339. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Defence after a week-long joint exercises between Indian and Indonesian troops to combat terrorism.

New Delhi, March 1, 2012.

The Armies of India and Indonesia concluded a week-long joint military exercise today. The operational part of the first-ever platoon-level joint training exercise, Exercise 'Garuda Shakti', was conducted at the Indian Army's elite 'Counter Insurgency and Jungle Warfare School' (CIJ WS), Vairengte in Mizoram.

Training together to counter the scourge of insurgency in various contemporary scenarios including jungle warfare, Chakravyuh, the three-day outdoor validation exercise, tested the weeklong training, imparted at various Counter Insurgency (CI) modules and at the plethora of firing ranges in the guerrilla warfare school. Chakravyuh ended with the busting of a simulated insurgent hideout in Mizoram's Lushai Hills, in the wee hours today, after a grueling nightlong march.

The Indonesian National Army (Tentara Nasional Indonesia-Angkatan Darat, TNI-AD, in short) troops led by Lt Col Gatot Heru Puana of KOSTRAD (Indonesian Army's Strategic Reserve Command) belonging to the 13th Infantry Brigade comprised of five officers, six Non-Commissioned Officers and 14 Privates. Troops from the 19th Madras Infantry Battalion, of 21 Mountain Division under Eastern Command, currently deployed in CI operations in the northeast sector, comprised the Indian side.

"They are very sincere, devoted, well-prepared and eager to learn," said CIJ WS Commandant, Maj Gen AK Sen, talking about the Indonesian troops while observing from close quarters the 'slithering' and 'special heliborne operations' from an IAF Mi-17 flown in from nearby Kumbhirgram airbase in Silchar, Assam. "The visiting troops were put through a rigorous initiation process, and they fared as good as their Indian counterparts," he added.

The exercise which began on February 20, is aimed at building closer military-to-military ties, among its many other objectives. "This training has actually helped us to know each other's procedure and drills including firing tactics," said Gen Sen, adding that the firing ranges at CIJ WS particularly interested the Indonesian troops, just as they did to the Bangladeshi, Polish and Israeli troops who trained here in the recent past.

CIJ WS Vairengte has over 13 different types of firing ranges catering to every conceivable indoor and outdoor scenario, ranging from urban, semi-urban to rural settings. Bringing in realism in training, Infantry Weapons Effect Simulation System (IWESS) and Small Arms Training Simulators (SATS) are also extensively used. The landscape and the inimitable replicated settings here in CIJ W make it the most preferred destination to train for several armies of the world.

For proper assimilation of the nuances in CIJ W operations for the Indonesian troops, all training and attack drills were coordinated by having two mixed platoons (comprising around 30 soldiers each) of KOSTRAD soldiers and the Indian Infantry troops, overseen by senior military observers.

Praising the professionalism of the Indian Infantry soldiers, the leader of the Indonesian troops, Col Gatot observed that the Indian troops are very well equipped to fight the insurgents. While finding some of the training tactics very similar, he said that the concept of ‘Buddy’ system was something they would like to emulate. “Back home we operate in big groups,” he says.

A conglomeration of more than 17,500 islands on either side of the equator, the Indonesian Republic whose national fabric represents ‘Unity in Diversity’ as much as it is avowed here in India, has also been besieged with terror-related attacks in recent times. “Our counter-insurgency related operations are mostly in the border areas,” the Colonel apprised, adding that the training would come in good stead upon their return.

(The formal closing of ‘Ex-Garuda Shakti’ took place the next day, with both sides exchanging feedback and mementoes, and rounding off with a military-style campfire with gourmet meals, comprising both Indian and Indonesian delicacies, including cultural exchanges.)
Joint Media Interaction of External Affairs Minister of India and Foreign Minister of Indonesia.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen of the media. I welcome you to this interaction.

As is usual, we will begin with brief opening remarks by the two Ministers. I will now request the External Affairs Minister of India to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister of India (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Dr. Marty Natalegawa, Hon. Minister of Foreign Affairs of Indonesia, friends from media:

Today Foreign Minister Dr. Marty and I co-chaired the fourth meeting of the India-Indonesia Joint Commission. Prior to the Joint Commission Meeting, Foreign Minister Dr. Marty and I had very useful discussions on the current status of our bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and international issues.

The Joint Commission meeting today enabled us to review the progress made on various areas of cooperation agreed during its last meeting and also those identified during the State visit of President Yudhoyono to India in January 2011. We have also identified specific areas in which both countries would be working together to take the relationship to the next high level. The deliberations took place in a constructive and friendly atmosphere reflecting the state of our bilateral relationship.

India and Indonesia enjoy an excellent relationship which rests on the solid foundation of our historical and cultural linkages. We have much in common as two developing countries facing quite similar challenges.

We became strategic partners in 2005. Indonesia is an important partner for us in our pursuit of 'Look East policy'. Our trade has expanded rapidly and has now touched 20 billion US Dollars. We are confident of achieving the target of 25 billion US dollars by 2015. Indian investment in Indonesia is rising. We are also cooperating in several other sectors including energy, oil and gas, coal, marine and fisheries, agriculture, science and technology, education, culture, defence and counterterrorism.

As large pluralistic democracies we have a stake in each other's progress and prosperity. We would like our relationship to be reflective of the strategic nature of our partnership. Dr. Marty and I have agreed to work towards this objective.

I have conveyed to Foreign Minister Dr. Marty that we look forward to the visit of his Excellency Mr. Yudhoyono, President of Indonesia to India in December this year for the India-ASEAN Commemorative Summit.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: I would now request the Foreign Minister of Indonesia to make his opening remarks.

Foreign Minister of Indonesia (Dr. R.M. Marty M. Natalegawa): Thank you very much. Once again on behalf of all my delegation and before distinguished members of the media I would like to put on record how delighted we are, how pleased we are, and how thankful we are that today we have been able to have this fourth meeting of the Joint Commission between India and Indonesia.

Excellency the Minister has described how I will describe the state of Indonesia-India relations. They are robust, they are strong, they are very friendly and very positive as well. But most of all, during the discussion that we have had throughout this morning and just now, we resolved, we reiterated to really translate and reflect the fact that our two countries now, ever since 2005, have announced that we have a strategic relationship between our two countries.

Just now during the course of our discussion within the Joint Commission, we reviewed where we are in our bilateral relations, trade and investment, people-to-people relations, education, research and development, food security, energy security and many other areas, to ensure that we are where we should be in terms of our bilateral relations. I must say that having gone through that exercise both ourselves and before hand our senior officials, it is quite fair to say that we are on track to further deliver strengthening of bilateral relations.

This is going to be another special year in India-Indonesia relations coming from the special one that we had last year when President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono was of course in India last January 2011. This year, as the Minister has said, President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono will once again be in India on the occasion of the ASEAN-India Commemorative Summit reflecting once again how strong and how solid our bilateral relations are.

What I would like to further add to what the Minister has said is what we have discussed throughout, it is quite clear that the importance of our relations is not only bilateral but because of its impact on the region and indeed beyond. India and Indonesia have enjoyed close relations practically ever since our Independence, even before our respective independence. That is how far our relations go back. Yet, in the decades every since, whatever international issues that we face - whether it be colonial... (Inaudible)..., whether it be development challenges - India and Indonesia are always speaking with one voice.

As India prospers, as India develops, as also Indonesia prospers and develops, we find ourselves now not only fellow members of important organizations and forums such as the Non-Aligned Movement, the United Nations, but also the G20 group of nations. So, this is evidence of how our all respective national developments be made stronger through bilateral cooperation, is finding its expressions and many other forums regionally and globally.

I am so delighted that today we are able to inject further momentum in the promotion of our bilateral relations. Of course, Indonesia will have the honour of hosting the next Joint Commission between Indonesia and India, and I look forward to working closely with my colleague to find when is the most appropriate time for that to take place.

Until then, we resolved just now to have a regular and more systematic way of measuring progress in our two countries’ relations, some kind of a scorecard where we can regularly in a very clear way identify progress and even not least identify where challenges remain so we can address those challenges and allow our relations to fully blossom and develop.

Thank you once again, Excellency, for your hospitality for your delegation’s cooperation on behalf of all my delegates who are here in Delhi.

Thank you very much.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to take a couple of questions.

Question (Ms Parul Chandra, The Asian Age): My question is for both the Ministers. First to the Indonesian Foreign Minister. There is growing assertiveness by China in the South China Sea. Do you think that ASEAN can play any role in checking this growing assertiveness given that its member countries themselves are divided on the issue?

And to Mr. Krishna, there is a lot of … (Unclear)... among Southeast Asian nations again on the South China Sea, particularly because China has been needling many countries including India. Your comments on that.

Foreign Minister of Indonesia: Thank you very much for that question. If I may just a little bit broaden the nature of the issue beyond the South China Sea, it is a fact of life, a fact of the region, that we have countries in the region that are rising, that are emerging - your China, your India, ASEAN itself, and others. So, change and dynamism is inherent. It is a fact of life and it is something that we must not fight over or try to deny.

What we need and what we have been doing over the years through an ASEAN led, ASEAN centrality architecture-building, is to ensure that such dynamics and such developments materialize in a manner that is at the same time conducive to the region’s peace and stability. In other words there is absolutely nothing inevitable about some kind of a return to cold war type of divisions for our region. So, I think that is the kind of mindset that we are approaching the entire regional architecture situation in our neighbourhood.

It is possible to have common security, common stability, and common prosperity, a win-win type of outlook. Within that context of course we have the specific challenge of the South China Sea. This is again a fact of life. It is a fact that there are countries in the region, some in ASEAN and some outside ASEAN, that have conflicting issues and jurisdictional claims on the South China Sea. Yet, even on this very difficult issue we have actually a diplomatic track to resolve them, to manage it. We have the ASEAN-China track to address the issues, and we have made actually significant progress over the recent years. Last year, after some eight years of negotiations, we have concluded the so-called guidelines to the declaration of conduct. Now we are very much intensively involved in the formulation of what is called the Code of Conduct on the South China Sea.

Yes, the last ASEAN Foreign Ministers’ meeting was especially difficult because we were not able to come to a consensus on how to describe certain developments that have recently taken place. But that notwithstanding, insofar as the approach is concerned we remain one, viz., we need to quickly get the Code of Conduct legalised. As you may be aware, over the past week or so Indonesia has been engaged in an intensive round of diplomatic efforts to regroup ASEAN to ensure that we are back to where we should be and that we are now in a position to once again press on for the legalization of the Code of Conduct.

If anything, the most recent episodes simply provide a reminder that we do actually need a Code of Conduct for the South China Sea, some kind of a rule of the road type of regime so that the potential for conflict in the region can be managed, and better still the potential for conflict can be resolved and that the countries of the region can continue to enjoy and continue to enjoy the peace dividend that all of us have enjoyed for many decades now, thanks to the Asia-Pacific’s benign environment that allows all of us to concentrate on economic development rather than any other lesser pursuits.

External Affairs Minister: India has made its position very clear on South China Sea on several occasions in the recent past. We did discuss the South China Sea issue and we have been following developments in respect of South China Sea. India supports freedom of navigation and access to resources in accordance with principles of international law. It is our earnest desire that these principles should be respected by all. We urge the parties concerned to engage in discussions to address this issue and hope that progress would be made on this important matter with respect to implementation of guidelines to the 2002 declaration of the Code of Conduct on South China Sea.
Question (Ms Devirupa Mitra): This question is for Mr. Krishna. Sir, the Government of India has been repeatedly asking Colombo for the release of the 23 Indian fishermen. But five days later, there is still no sign of their coming back. Can you give any assurance that they will be returning to India soon?

External Affairs Minister: I am happy to inform you that the 23 Indian fishermen have been released a short while back. I thank the Sri Lankan Government for this humanitarian gesture. I have instructed our High Commissioner in Colombo to make all necessary arrangements for the fishermen to be brought back to India and to their respective places.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen. We come to the end of this interaction.

341. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Defence on the Indo-Japan Coast Guard Meeting and the conclusion of Combined Exercises.

New Delhi, January 30, 2012.

The visit of a high level Japanese delegation led by Admiral Hisayasu Suzuki, the Commandant, Japan Coast Guard (JCG), for the XI High Level Meeting and Combined Exercises with the Indian Coast Guard (ICG) concluded today. The five-day visit, was in pursuance of the Memorandum of Cooperation (MoC), signed between the two Coast Guards on 24 November 2006, which stipulates that the heads of the two organizations meet alternately in India and Japan, to discuss maritime issues of mutual concerns and formulate a cooperative approach to address these.

The Memorandum of Cooperation between the two Coast Guards encompasses issues of maritime search and rescue, combating marine pollution, technical assistance for responding to natural disasters and exchange of information regarding crimes at sea, including smuggling and illicit trafficking.

The first ICG-JCG combined exercises were carried out in November 2000 off Chennai, in which one JCG ship participated and was overseen by a high level delegation of JCG, led by the then Commandant of JCG. This also laid the foundation for development of close interaction between the two organisations that included regular visits and exercises, sharing of information and expertise and training visits.

During the 11th ICG-JCG High Level discussions, it was mutually agreed to strengthen the cooperation on evolving collaborative approach, in addressing a spectrum of maritime issues concerning safety and security. The visit was also very significant in providing renewed impetus to strong ties that exist between the two Coast Guards as the Japan Coast Guard Ship has visited India, after a gap of six years, for the combined exercises with the ICG off Chennai.

A delegation from the Information Sharing Centre, Singapore established under the Regional Cooperation Agreement on Combating Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in Asia (ReCAAP) also participated in the exercise. This was significant in furthering the interaction among the participating agencies on anti-piracy issues.
342. Press Releases of the Ministry of External Affairs on India - Japan Foreign Office Consultations.

Foreign Office Consultations between India and Japan were held in New Delhi on 24 February 2012. The Indian side was led by Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai and the Japanese side by Deputy Foreign Minister Mr. Koro Bessho. The Consultations were held in a friendly and forward-looking manner, in keeping with the India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership.

2. The two sides reviewed recent developments in bilateral relations since the last Annual Summit held in New Delhi on 28 December 2011 and expressed satisfaction with the further strengthening of India-Japan relations. Discussions on bilateral relations covered areas of cooperation in the political, strategic, security, economic and cultural fields.

3. The Japanese side looked forward to PM’s visit to Japan this year for the Annual Summit. The Indian side invited the Japanese Foreign Minister to visit India for the India-Japan Strategic Dialogue and the newly-established Ministerial-level Economic Dialogue. The dates for these visits will be worked out through diplomatic channels.

4. Both sides reviewed the progress of flagship projects, including the Western Dedicated Freight Corridor, the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor and the new Chennai-Bengaluru Industrial Corridor. They also discussed the calendar of commemorative events being held in both India and Japan throughout this year to mark the 60th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Japan.

5. There was an extensive exchange of views on regional and global issues of shared interest and concern, including UN reform, climate change, the East Asia Summit, the situation in Afghanistan, Iran, Middle East, and the Maldives, among others.

6. Japanese Deputy Foreign Minister Mr. Koro Bessho also called on the National Security Adviser.
343. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the Trilateral Talks with the delegations from Japan and the United States.

New Delhi, March 2, 2012.

Shri Anand Sharma met with the delegates of the United States & Japan on a trilateral dialogue, here today. Addressing the delegated Shri Sharma said, “It is indeed befitting that such a dialogue should take place given that the three countries are vibrant democracies and leading economies in the Asia-Pacific region. The changing contours of global economic architecture have made such a dialogue even more opportune & necessary.” In the emerging paradigm, India views its relationship with both US & Japan that transcends trade related relationship to a long term technology, innovation & investment relationship.”

The Indian Commerce Minister while addressing the delegates said, Ensuing long term energy security and development of green and sustainable technologies for the future should be an area of high priority. Minister later added that collaboration in agro-processing, pharmaceuticals would be essential for the larger objective of ensuring global food security and health security.

Minister Sharma while commenting on the Pakistan initiative to shift to negative list said, “Our immediate neighborhoods have given a positive movement on the economic side with Pakistan.” The delegation expressed appreciation for normalization process in the economic relations of the two neighbors.

Delegation comprised of Mr. Richard Armitage, President, Armitage International LC (Co-Chair), Mr. Tim Adams, Managing Director, The Lindsey Group, Mr. Michael Green, Senior Advisor and J apan chair, CSIS, Mr Karl Inderfurth, Mr. Roger Rose, Lockheed Martin, Mr. Torkel Patterson, President, US - J apan MAGLEV, LLC & Nicholas Szechenyi, Senior Fellow & Deputy Director, J apan chair, CSIS.

The J apan delegation comprised of Mr. Yoshiyuki Kasai, Chairman, Central J apan Railway Company (CO-Chair), Mr. Yorihiko Kojima, Chairman, Mitsubishi Corporation, Teruaki Masumoto, Executive Advisor, Tokyo Electric Power Company, Mr. Kazuo Tsukuda, Chairman Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, Mr. Tomohiko Taniguchi, Senior Advisor, Central J apan Railway Company. From India side the Dialogue is Co-Chaired by Shri Tarun Das.
344. Statement of the External Affairs Minister at the Joint Press Interaction during the Visit of Foreign Minister of Japan.

New Delhi, April 30, 2012.

Your Excellency Foreign Minister Gemba
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media.

Foreign Minister Gemba and I have held the 6th India – Japan Strategic Dialogue earlier this morning. We have also had discussions, along with our distinguished delegations, in the 1st Ministerial-level Economic Dialogue between our countries.

In the course of the Strategic Dialogue, we reviewed political and security cooperation between our nations. We expressed satisfaction that the India – Japan Strategic & Global Partnership is stronger than ever before.

We agreed to launch two new dialogue mechanisms between the two Foreign Ministries. The first is a cyber security dialogue; the second a maritime dialogue, both of which will be at the level of officials. They will further deepen our relations.

We look forward to the first naval exercise later this year between the Indian Navy and the Japanese Maritime Self Defence Force.

We discussed ways of furthering our cooperation in the field of rare earths. After today's discussions, I am convinced that we are close to take-off stage in this important area of our bilateral cooperation.

We also discussed the possibility of civil nuclear cooperation between our countries. We have instructed our negotiators on the way forward.

In our Economic Dialogue, which will continue after this press interaction, we discussed the entire gamut of issues in which our two countries cooperate. In particular, we agreed on how to accelerate cooperation in the flagship DMIC or Delhi – Mumbai Industrial Corridor project.

We also had a preliminary exchange of ideas on the Chennai – Bengaluru Corridor which had been initiated by our Prime Ministers at their meeting last December. We have agreed that Japan will assist in chalking out a Comprehensive Master Plan for the project.

We also discussed cooperation in the railways sector including the ongoing Dedicated Freight Corridor project as well as the possibility of India obtaining High Speed Rail technology from Japan.

Overall, we have had excellent discussions during the course of the morning which we are confident will take the India – Japan Strategic Partnership forward.

I thank you for your attention.

New Delhi, April 30, 2012.

The 2nd India-Japan Ministerial Business-Government Policy Dialogue was held in New Delhi, India on 30th April 2012 and was co-chaired by H.E. Anand Sharma, Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles of India and H.E. Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan. The Policy Dialogue was attended by senior government officials and leaders of business organizations from both the countries. The dialogue discussed issues for moving forward on investments and sustainable development with a thrust on innovation and introduction of cutting edge technology in manufacturing and infrastructure development in the country.

Based on the leaders’ summit last year, H.E. Anand Sharma, Minister of Commerce and Industry of India and H.E. Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan acknowledged the progress of discussion on the equity participation in DMIC Development Corporation to the extent of 26% subject to the approval of the Government of India. Minister Sharma confirmed that the GOI will initiate required procedures for necessary approvals. The two Ministers welcomed the cooperation of the government and private sectors of the two countries to realize the vision of DMIC.

In this context, the two Ministers shared the importance of the relaxation of capital regulations in the course of implementation of the DMIC project. Further, the two Ministers expressed their satisfaction at the progress made in the seawater desalination project at Dahej, Gujarat. Both Ministers also shared the importance of implementing NEDO’s demonstration of the technologies for stable power supply based on a combined use of large-scale photovoltaic power generation and micro-grid in Neemrana Industrial Park in Rajasthan. The two Ministers set up Smart Community Working Group under Indo-Japan Task Force on DMIC to accelerate the implementation of the smart community projects. They also recognized the need to promote smart community pilot projects and the early bird projects for demonstration of the cutting-edge technologies. In addition to these projects, both Ministers welcomed the formulation of a list of projects by JICA to be jointly developed by both countries by the next leaders’ summit scheduled in this fall.

The two Ministers confirmed the importance of cooperating in infrastructure development in the areas along the Chennai-Bengaluru Industrial Corridor including the preparation of a Comprehensive Integrated Master Plan of this region which was decided between the two Prime Ministers in December 2011. The two Ministers shared the views on the importance of further promoting investments and supporting industries in the region through improving infrastructure such as ports, industrial parks and their surrounding facilities in Ennore, Chennai and the adjoining areas and stable power supply.

The two Ministers welcomed the measures taken by the Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO) for assisting Japanese companies in investing in India. These include establishment of a Business Support Center in Chennai and support for Japanese companies to start business activities in special industrial parks for Japanese companies engaged in manufacturing in Neemrana in the state of Rajasthan and in the state of Gujarat.

H.E. Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan appreciated the efforts of the Government of India in formulating the “National Manufacturing Policy” in the context of the comprehensive and inclusive development of Indian economy, creation and development of innovation ecosystems, introduction of cutting edge technology, creation of employment opportunities and improvement of infrastructure in India. Minister Edano proposed to set up a working group, in cooperation with JETRO, to discuss cooperation in implementation of the National Manufacturing Policy and the establishment of National Investment and Manufacturing Zone with a thrust on skill development.

The two Ministers confirmed that both countries would hold discussions to facilitate investment and to address various issues raised in this policy dialogue by the annual Summit meeting to be scheduled this year, by utilizing forums such as DMIC Task Force at the vice ministerial level, the Working Group between the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan and the Ministry of Industry of Tamil Nadu, and Smart Community Working Group. The two Ministers confirmed that the 3rd Ministerial India-Japan Ministerial Business-Government Policy Dialogue would be held in Tokyo on a date mutually convenient to both sides.
New Delhi, April 30, 2012.

H.E. Dr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission of India and H.E. Mr. Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan held the 5th meeting of the India-Japan Energy Dialogue on April 30, 2012 in New Delhi. Senior officials of the relevant ministries and departments of both countries participated in the discussions. The two sides welcomed the progress achieved so far in the four previous rounds of the Energy Dialogue and in the deliberations of the various Working Groups. They appreciated the sector-specific discussions by experts of both India and Japan and the progress made in various areas of cooperation.

2. The two sides reached a common recognition that it is important for the two countries to cooperate with each other in the energy efficiency and conservation sector, and welcomed that the meeting of “Energy Efficiency and Conservation Working Group” under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue was held in India in January 2012.

3. The two sides decided at this meeting to intensify cooperation in energy efficiency and conservation sector as well as environmental issues. They welcomed the ongoing cooperation for energy conservation by the Energy Conservation Center, Japan (ECCJ) with the Petroleum Conservation Research Association (PCRA) and Bureau of Energy Efficiency (BEE). They appreciated the development and dissemination of energy conservation audit manual for high energy-consuming industries such as the textile industry and the iron and steel industry through dispatch of experts and training of accepted trainees. Furthermore, they confirmed the need to expand the process of consultation between the public and private sectors to strengthen the bilateral cooperation in the energy sector, mainly in energy efficiency and conservation as well as environmental issues. They also confirmed the need to continue the study that was conducted in 2011 concerning the list of Japan’s energy-saving and environmental technologies to be supported for enhanced use of energy-saving technologies in the Indian iron and steel industry.

4. The two sides decided to consider the possibility of further cooperation in the establishment of statistics database in the sector concerned, including high energy-consuming industries where energy consumption have been growing in India in recent years. Additionally, taking into consideration that the energy demand in the transport sector is increasing in proportion to the economic growth in India, they decided that they will discuss the possibility of cooperation in the said sector. They also decided to cooperate for promotion of energy conservation in local and small-to-medium businesses. They also reconfirmed the importance of the Regional Energy Efficiency Center (REEC) projects in promoting working-level energy conservation in India. They decided to explore the possibility of establishment of a 2nd REEC in India.

5. DThe two ministers welcomed that the coke dry quenching equipment
(CDQ) demonstration project and diesel generator fuel-switching demonstration project equipment by New Energy and Industrial Technology Development Organization (NEDO) were completed in 2011.

6. The two sides shared the recognition that it is important and useful to closely cooperate in the development of infrastructure in the sector of electricity and energy such as deployment of highly efficient coal-fired power generation, pumped-storage power generation and power transmission systems, in order to cope with a rapid increase of electricity demand in India and promote sustainable economic growth with consideration given to environmental issues. They welcomed the progress of the project for advising the renovation of equipment and facilities of thermal power plants, which includes surveys that have been done at four sites to date with the aim of efficiency improvement of coal-fired power plants and environmental improvement in India. They also welcomed the training activities for transfer of Clean Coal Technology (CCT) which have continued since the year 2001, and that a total of 136 Indian trainees had been trained in Japan by 2011.

7. The two sides welcomed that the model project by NEDO to reduce ash content in Indian coal by using efficient coal preparation technology is advancing well on a commercial scale. They expressed the hope that the model project will be completed by 2012 and this technology will come into wider use based on the outcome of the project.

8. The two sides confirmed that it is important for the two countries to cooperate with each other in the renewable energy sector, and welcomed that the meeting of “Renewable Energy Working Group” under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue was held in India in January 2012.

9. The two sides welcomed the progress of the “Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor Smart Community Initiative” to develop next-generation energy infrastructure in an integrated manner by making use of Japan’s environmental and IT technologies such as photovoltaic power generation, smart grid, smart urban traffic system, water control, recycling and treatment and others which are also important from an energy point of view. The two sides will explore possibilities of making these technologies come into wide use in India. They also welcomed the “National Solar Mission” that is mainly aimed at establishing photovoltaic power generation facilities with a total capacity of 22 GW by 2022, and decided they will discuss the possibility of contribution by Japan’s technologies and products.
10. Considering the big share of India and Japan in the world’s demand of LNG, the two sides confirmed that the two countries could play an important role in expanding the market in the future, while ensuring the stability and transparency of the market. They confirmed they will work on methane hydrates.

11. The two sides reiterated the importance of civil nuclear cooperation between the two countries. They affirmed the need to cooperate to enhance nuclear safety based on the experience and the lessons learned from the accident at TEPCO’s Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station.

12. The two sides confirmed the need to promote industrial cooperation between the two countries to expand bilateral energy cooperation on a commercial basis. From this point of view, they welcomed that the 4th India-Japan Energy Forum was held in India in January 2012.

13. The two sides recognized that the reinforcement of energy security in the East Asian region is the highest priority issue in this region. Based on this recognition, they decided that it is important to promote measures for reinforcement of energy cooperation in East Asia with the Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA) as the central organization as decided at the East Asia Summit (EAS) Energy Ministers’ Meeting held in September 2011. They confirmed that the two countries will exercise leadership in the East Asian region and positively support ERIA to encourage the introduction of clean coal technology (CCT) in India and have ERIA start research activities to create East Asian electricity networks.

14. The two sides stressed that the bilateral cooperation in the framework of India-Japan Energy Dialogue should not be limited to the above-mentioned activities, and such cooperation should be further deepened. They decided to hold the sixth India-Japan Energy Dialogue in Japan in the latter part of 2012.
Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the meeting between Minister Anand Sharma and the Japanese Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry.

New Delhi, August 30, 2012.

ASEAN Plus FTA Partners Discuss Roadmap for Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce, Industry & Textiles today met Mr Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI) of Japan on the sidelines of 44th ASEAN Economic Ministers (AEM) meeting and related meetings at Siem Reap, Cambodia. The issues of Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor project and the preliminary study for the Chennai-Bangalore Industrial Corridor were discussed. Shri Sharma briefed his counterpart on the National Investment & Manufacturing Zones and sought Japan's support for creating the infrastructure in the notified zones. The modalities of release of fund of USD 4.5 billion were also deliberated upon. The Japanese concern on relaxation of capital regulations was also discussed and Shri Sharma conveyed the significant progress made on the issue. Both the leaders took note of the growing bilateral trade and hoped to achieve trade target of USD 25 billion by 2015. Japan thanked India for support in the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership.

The Indian Minister also attended ASEAN plus FTA Partners Consultations. After detailed deliberations it was decided to recommend the guiding principles and objectives for negotiating the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) for considerations of leaders during the East Asia Summit in November 2012. RCEP envisages comprehensive economic cooperation amongst ASEAN member states and FTA partners. The roadmap to RCEP negotiations and guiding approaches for the organization of negotiations were also discussed during the meeting. The meeting took note of the progress in the RCEP working groups. Shri Sharma requested for expeditious work in the working groups on trade in services and investments to ensure finalization of templates and modalities before launching the RCEP as a single undertaking.

Minister Sharma attended the East Asia Summit (EAS) Economic Ministers Meeting. Updates of Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA) activities and current regional and global developments were discussed during the meeting. Shri Sharma called upon all the members for early conclusion of Doha Round of negotiations in WTO. He explained that early conclusion of Doha Round would greatly assist in bringing out the world economy out of recession and will help in a balanced economic development across the world.

Bark Tae Ho. Issues of Korean investments in India, bilateral trade and national manufacturing policy of India were discussed. Shri Sharma requested his counterpart to explore the possibilities of investment in infrastructure projects in India and assured all necessary support for the same. Shri Sharma also invited Korea to participate in establishment of electronics hardware industry in India, particularly Chip manufacturing units. The details of the proposed visit of Shri Sharma to Korea in November 2012 were also discussed. Shri Sharma informed Korean Minister that he would come with a high level business delegation and officials dealing with certification of export of agricultural products.

The Indian Minister also had bilateral meeting with his counterpart from Cambodia in the evening and discussed various issues of mutual interest. There is considerable potential to increase bilateral trade and investment between both countries. Shri Sharma expressed India’s willingness to assist Cambodia in the fields of agro-processing, textiles, silk and skill-development.

Tokyo, October 10, 2012.

- H.E. Mr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission of India and H.E. Mr. Yukio Edano, Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan held the 6th meeting of the India-Japan Energy Dialogue on October 10, 2012 in Tokyo.
- Senior officials of the relevant ministries and departments of both sides participated in the discussions. Both sides welcomed the progress achieved so far in the previous five rounds of the Energy Dialogue and in the deliberations of the various Working Groups. They appreciated the sector-specific discussions by experts of both sides and the progress made in various areas of cooperation.
- During the dialogue, both sides reaffirmed that it is important to hold the ministerial-level India-Japan Energy Dialogues annually, and shared the recognition that the issues of energy security and global environment are high priority challenges requiring continuous and effective action. In particular, to overcome challenges such as the global-scale changes in the energy demand structure seen in recent years and soaring energy prices, both sides confirmed to strengthen consumer-producer dialogue on LNG and deepen cooperation in energy conservation and renewable energy sectors. In addition, both sides decided to strengthen programs to further disseminate and expand model business projects that have thus far been implemented by the two sides, and to enhance cooperation in upstream development of petroleum and natural gas.
- The two sides recognized the need to promote industrial cooperation to expand bilateral energy cooperation on a commercial basis. From this point of view, they reiterated the importance of India-Japan Energy Forum and regular inputs from the forum to the dialogue. Both sides discussed to explore way forward to showcase Japanese technology in energy sector for wider dissemination in India.
- The two sides engaged in discussions in the following areas:

- Both sides reached a common recognition that it is important for them to cooperate with each other in the energy efficiency and conservation sector, and welcomed that the meeting of Energy Efficiency and Conservation Working Group under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue was held in Japan on October 9, 2012.
• Both sides decided to strengthen their cooperation concerning energy conservation and environmental issues. Progress in cooperation among the Petroleum Conservation Research Association (PCRA), the Bureau of Energy Efficiency and the Energy Conservation Centre of Japan (ECCJ) was welcomed. Both sides welcomed the enhancement of the capabilities of regional State-Designated Agencies (SDA) to execute the Energy Conservation Act, and the development of guides for dissemination of the Total Energy Management Systems in small-to-medium enterprises (SMEs) through the dispatch of experts and the acceptance of trainees. They also welcomed the implementation of cooperation to develop and spread the energy conservation audit manual in the textile industry, as well as of cooperation toward developing similar manuals for use by other industries that consume large amounts of energy. Both sides confirmed to continue the training and capacity building program further for SDAs, SMEs and energy managers and energy auditors.

• The two sides reconfirmed the importance of the projects carried out by the Regional Energy Efficiency Center (REEC) set up in Chennai with technical assistance from the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry (METI) in promoting energy conservation at the working level in India. In addition, they welcomed the training of trainers at the Dr. Ambedkar Institute of Productivity for hands-on training of energy-using equipment such as furnaces, motors, compressors, etc. which is being implemented as part of the capacity-building project by New Energy and Industrial Technology Development Organization (NEDO). They also welcomed the fact that the facility continues to be utilized, with the Government of India taking the lead in implementing training for over 120 people. The Indian side sought Japan’s further technical support for other REECs to be established by India.

• Both sides welcomed the progress made in the demonstration project for a sinter cooler waste heat recovery system, currently being implemented by NEDO based on the energy conservation cooperation of industries that consume large amounts of energy. They also welcomed the achievements of the demonstration project utilizing a coke dry quenching facility, and the demonstration project for fuel conversion using a diesel generator facility, both of which were implemented by NEDO, and confirmed their continued cooperation in promoting those projects. Moreover, recognizing the need to strengthen bilateral relationship in the energy sector, focusing on energy conservation and environmental issues, and to expand the consultation process between the government and the private sector, both sides confirmed continued cooperation.

• Both sides decided to study the possibility of further cooperation in establishing statistics in the sectors in India where consumption of energy has been growing in recent years, including SMEs. In addition, based on the fact that demand for energy is increasing in the transport sector in line with India’s
Based on the Joint Statement issued at the 2nd India-Japan Energy Dialogue, both sides welcomed the fact that The Energy and Resources Institute (TERI) and the Institute of Energy Economics, Japan (IEEJ) have implemented joint surveys and studies relating to the possibility of energy conservation centering on India’s industrial sector, as well as the establishment of necessary statistical data and the establishment of energy conservation goals. The Indian side sought finalization of work program under TERI-IEEJ cooperative project through discussion on specific terms of reference (ToR) or report which defines the basis and benefits of the study. The Indian side also sought further details about the design and implementation process of the Bilateral Offset Credit Mechanism (BOCM) which was earlier proposed by METI.

Both sides confirmed the need for expanding the consultation process involving both the private and public sectors in order to strengthen bilateral cooperation in the energy sector focusing on energy conservation. Moreover, they welcomed continuation of the studies in 2012 regarding creation of a list of Japan’s energy-saving and environmental technologies for enhancement of energy-saving in the Indian iron and steel industry that started in 2011.

Japan commended India’s initiatives to promote energy conservation such as the introduction of Perform, Achieve and Trade (PAT) scheme. To realize the effective and efficient implementation and management of these initiatives, both sides recognized the importance of mutual cooperation, and confirmed to share information and exchange views on a regular basis through such measures as Energy Efficiency and Conservation Working Group and various research projects.

Both sides confirmed the importance of conducting vigorous activities under the International Partnership for Energy Efficiency Cooperation (IPEEC) framework. In this light, they praised the activities of Global Superior Energy Performance Partnership (GSEP) with the aim of promoting best practices and spreading high-efficient and low-carbon technologies in the industrial sectors (steel, cement and power) under public-private partnership. Both sides will continue to collaborate and aim to further expand its activities.

Both sides concluded that bilateral cooperation is important in the renewable energy sector. They welcomed the fact that a meeting of the Working Group on Renewable Energy, established under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue framework, was held on October 9, 2012 in Tokyo.

Both sides welcomed the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor (DMIC) Smart Community Project that utilizes Japan’s environmental system technologies... and IT technologies such as solar power, smart grids, smart urban transportation, as well as water management, recycling and treatment, to uniformly develop next-generation energy infrastructure, noting that it is important from an energy perspective. Both sides welcomed the MoU for demonstration of large-scale photovoltaic power generation using state-of-art photovoltaic modules and of micro-grid system for providing clean and stable electricity and minimizing diesel consumption in Neemrana Industrial Park in the state of Rajasthan signed among the Department of Economic Affairs, Ministry of Finance, Ministry of New and Renewable Energy and the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor Development Corporation (DMICDC) and NEDO following which a 5 MW solar Photovoltaic plant under NTPC Vidyut Vyapar Nigam Limited (NVVN) has been allotted for development. They confirmed that they would implement further cooperation, so that the demonstration project of 6MW in total to be implemented by NEDO could be initiated smoothly. The two sides will study ways to disseminate these technologies widely throughout India. Both sides confirmed that they would cooperate with each other for the preparation of NEDO’s demonstration project for introducing a photovoltaic system, lithium ion batteries and energy management system into telecommunication towers in India. Both sides welcomed the National Solar Mission launched by the Government of India, focusing on building a system for generating 22GW of solar energy by the year 2022, and decided to study the possibility of contribution to be made by technologies and products from Japan. Both sides also welcomed the feasibility study in the form of joint study program towards electrification of non-electrified areas by introducing micro hydroelectric generation facilities, which will be conducted in states such as Uttarakhand.

Cooperation in electricity

- Both sides concluded that bilateral cooperation is important in the electricity sector. They welcomed the fact that a meeting of the Working Group on Electricity, established under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue framework, was held on October 9, 2012 in Tokyo.

- Both sides shared a common recognition that it is important and beneficial to closely collaborate in the development of infrastructure in the electricity and energy sector such as deployment of high-efficiency coal-fired power generation and development of pumped-storage power generation, as well as electrical power transmission and distribution systems in order to meet the rapid increase in power demand, and promote sustainable economic growth taking environmental issues into consideration. Both sides welcomed the satisfactory progress of the project by J COAL for advising the renovation of equipment and facilities of coal fired-power plants, of which three sites (Wanakbori, Gujarat, Dr. Narla Tata Rao, Andhra Pradesh and Kahalgaon, Bihar) have been completed and four more sites (Badarpur, NCT Delhi, Unchahar, Uttar Pradesh, Durgapur, West Bengal and Dr. Narla Tata Rao, Andhra Pradesh) will be done before the end of this fiscal year, in order to improve the efficiency of the plants and environment in India. Both sides also welcomed the mutual cooperative efforts for the transfer of clean coal technology, which has been continuously under way since the fiscal year 2001, through the invitation of Indian experts to Japan and the dispatch of Japanese experts to India. Both sides confirmed to consider the possibility of cooperation for the development of an integrated gasification combined cycle (IGCC) in India.

- Both sides concluded that bilateral cooperation is important in the coal sector. They welcomed the fact that a meeting of the Working Group on Coal, established under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue framework, was held on October 9, 2012 in Tokyo.
- Both sides expressed their strong expectation that the commercial-scale demonstration project by NEDO aiming to reduce ash content of coal in India using high-efficient coal washery technology at Angul, Talcher, Odisha would be completed by early 2013, and the technology would be widely deployed in India. Both sides welcomed the efforts for renewal of the MOU among Department of Economic Affairs, Ministry of Finance and Ministry of Coal, India, NEDO and M/s Monnet Ispat Ltd. for the project.
- Both sides welcomed the launch of a feasibility study by NEDO concerning a project that combines Upgraded Brown Coal (UBC) technologies using Indian lignite with Ultra Super Critical (USC) coal power generation technologies.

- Both sides concluded that bilateral cooperation is important in the petroleum and natural gas sectors, and welcomed the fact that a meeting of the Petroleum and Natural Gas Working Group, established under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue framework, was held on October 9, 2012 in Tokyo.
- Both sides confirmed that Japan, the world’s largest consumer of LNG, and India, a country where large increases in consumption are anticipated in the future, would cooperate inter alia, through participation in LNG Producer-Consumer Conference, to ensure the stable and low-cost supply of LNG. In addition, they confirmed that they would start a joint study on “Pricing of LNG in the Asia Pacific market.”
- Both sides confirmed that they would strengthen their cooperative relationship relating to upstream development of petroleum and natural gas. Both sides confirmed to explore possibilities of collaboration in exploration and production activities in India and in third countries.
- Both sides also confirmed to continue cooperation in the study of Indian off-shore seismic data and delineation of gas hydrates area, and to explore further cooperation in gas hydrate research and development. Both sides confirmed to continue to collaborate and jointly work in the field of fuel conservation. In this regard, both sides also confirmed to consider the extension of the existing MoU between PCRA and ECCJ. Regarding the continuation of the existing collaboration between PPAC and IEEJ, the Indian side proposed a joint study on "Unbundling of gas markets in India." Cooperation in nuclear energy

- Both sides concluded that bilateral cooperation is important in the nuclear power sector, and welcomed the fact that a meeting of the Nuclear Energy Working Group, established under the India-Japan Energy Dialogue framework, was held on October 9, 2012 in Tokyo. The Indian side made a presentation on India’s plan for expanding nuclear energy generation in the coming years.

- Both sides reconfirmed the importance of civil nuclear cooperation between the two countries. Based on the experience of the accident at the Fukushima Nuclear Power Station of Tokyo Electric Power Company (TEPCO) and the lessons learned from it, both sides confirmed the need to cooperate in enhancing the safety of nuclear power plants.

- Both sides recognized that the reinforcement of energy security in East Asia is one of the highest priority issues in the region. In this context, they welcomed the outcome of the Sixth East Asian Summit Energy Ministers Meeting in September 2012, including commencement of new studies by Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA) on energy outlooks for medium-to-long term and strategic usage of coal through Clean Coal Technologies. They confirmed that the two sides will exercise leadership in achieving secure and sustainable energy future in East Asian region.

- Both sides stressed that the bilateral cooperation in the framework of India-Japan Energy Dialogue should not be limited to the above-mentioned activities, and such cooperation should be further deepened. They decided to hold the 7th India-Japan Energy Dialogue in India at a mutually convenient time in 2013.

New Delhi, October 22, 2012.

The 2nd India-Japan 2+2 Dialogue was held in Tokyo on October 22, 2012. The Indian delegation was led by Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai and Defence Secretary Shri Shashi Kant Sharma. The Japanese delegation was led by Deputy Foreign Minister Mr. Akitaka Saiki and Administrative Vice Defence Minister Mr. Hironori Kanazawa.

These 2+2 consultations at Senior Official level are mandated by the Action Plan to Advance Security Cooperation concluded between the two countries in December 2009. These consultations build on the last round of the 2+2 Dialogue held at New Delhi in June 2010.

The two sides briefed the other on their respective defence and security policies in the background of each country’s security environment.

In this context, they reviewed bilateral security and defence cooperation and discussed ways of further expanding such ties. The two delegations also exchanged views on maritime, cyber and outer space security. They agreed to an early meeting of the new India-Japan Cyber Security Dialogue.

They also discussed the regional and international security situation.

The next round of the India-Japan 2+2 Dialogue will be held at New Delhi at a mutually convenient date.

New Delhi, November 15, 2012.

Japanese Prime Minister H. E. Mr. Yoshihiko Noda telephoned Prime Minister earlier today in the context of the fast paced political developments in Japan. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the fact that the India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership is stronger than ever before. Keeping in view that the dissolution of the Japanese Lower House of Parliament would be announced on November 16, 2012, it was felt that the visit to Japan of the Prime Minister of India can take place at a later date.

Reviewing bilateral relations, the two Prime Ministers also welcomed the conclusion of the Agreement between India and Japan on Social Security as well as the Memorandum on Cooperation in the Rare Earths Industry in India and looked forward to early signing of these two documents.

The two Prime Ministers reiterated their desire to maintain the schedule of Annual Summits and agreed that fresh dates for the visit of Prime Minister to Japan will be discussed through diplomatic channels.

Inaugural Address by External Affairs Minister at the International Conference on the Changing Paradigm of India-Japan Relations organized by ICRIER.

New Delhi, December 17, 2012.

Good morning to all of you

It's good to be here for the 60th anniversary of India-Japan diplomatic relations and be here as democracy reaffirms itself after the general elections in Japan. We hope that the bipartisan support will take India-Japan relationship to even greater heights.

It's an honor to be here this morning with the ICRIER Chairperson Dr. Isher Judge Ahluwalia, Mr. Yuji Takagi, President of the Sasakawa Peace Foundation, H.E. Mr. Takeshi Yagi, Ambassador of Japan to India, and all of you distinguished ladies and gentlemen.

Many years ago I read a novel that some of you must have come across, though I haven't seen this novel for a long time. The novel was called The Wind Cannot Read and had a little Japanese poem. It was translated as: "Do not pluck flowers but the wind cannot read." It was a very poignant tale about a Japanese girl who goes through a traumatic experience during the war, personal relationships. I heard his Excellency speak and I thought that perhaps the biggest challenge in today's 60th anniversary on our relations is to get the wind to read.

We have to understand the signals emerging in our region, in our relationship between Japan and India and indeed the signals that are being given by the whole world. I think a gathering as distinguished as this has great expertise in studying our relationship. I am familiar with statistics but will not try to impress you with statistics at any length. But to actually look at the conceptual understanding of where we are and where we can go in India-Japan relations.

Your conference on the changing paradigm of India-Japan relations intrigues me. I think the paradigm has already changed, now the important thing is to take advantage of the changed paradigm and take it to the logical conclusion. I think the paradigm has changed over the past half a century several times over. We had a paradigm at the time of our independence, in particular immediately after our independence when we strove to give Japan a place in the post-war community of nations. In Japan's ability to reassert its sovereign authority and independence, I believe, a significant signal to that effect was given by the judgment of the Indian Judge, Justice Pal, at the military tribunal. Justice Pal, in a very dramatic manner dissented with the version of all the other judges to stand by a spirited defense of Japan's right to reassert itself and to claim its place under the sun.
And, I think the paradigm shifted again, when Mr. Rajiv Gandhi visited Japan and sought to reach out in a very special sort of way in the emerging global scenario.

It changed once again when we decided to go for the nuclear program and the steps that we took were unacceptable to Japan at that time and for good reason because of Japan's own traumatic experience and its principled position on nuclear policy.

The paradigm shifted again, and I believe the paradigm finally shifted once more, when the emerging reality of the world beyond the Cold War and the collapse of the Soviet Union gave countries a new opportunity to rediscover each other and so did Japan and India.

Sometimes people think that this new paradigm is only a temporary unstable paradigm which will change with changing power situations and political situations vis-à-vis China. The emergence of China in the 21st century and the reality of an assertive China in South and Southeast Asia, I think, are matters which have already been factored in the changing paradigm of relations between India and Japan.

Undoubtedly the world is a dynamic and things will change from time to time, challenges will arise time to time, but the emerging stable paradigm that we have become familiar with in contemporary India-Japan relations will be able to withstand these.

If I am not wrong India was the first recipient of Japan's ODA, and that's been a very significant engagement. Not just between the governments. Rather the projects have led to a greater understanding and association between the peoples of Japan and India.

Moving on to trade and investment, and I do believe, there wouldn't be a greater assertion of success of how we can work together, than the study of the arrival in India of Suzuki with Maruti and how with that partnership has evolved the India-Japan relationship itself. How that car became for India and Japan a milestone in itself. The point really is that there was so much that we have learnt about each other, when we worked together on that car that it will remain, I believe, a symbol of something special that we have shared with each other. What we have shared with each other is not simply a new little attractive car on the streets of our cities in India, but I think it was also symbol of the emerging middle class in India. The Maruti car became the beginning of a revolution that you see today in the streets of our country.

I do believe that statistics alone do not define our relationship but actual symbols of our substantial relationship are what show the evolving growth towards the new paradigm in India-Japan relations.
Today once again the one thing that we should flag for the future is our collaboration in the Delhi-Mumbai industrial corridor, the western dedicated freight corridor and the Chennai-Bengaluru corridor.

Most people see these projects in economic terms - the intricacies of insurance, finance and various other dimensions of the comprehensive economic partnership agreement that we entered into in 2011. But, I believe, one very significant dimension that we haven't fully realized yet and that is the dimension which will come with greater interface between the people of India and Japan.

With these projects we will have many more institutions where people from both the countries will contribute, discover each other and add value to each other's life. It would be perhaps music or would be performing arts, it would perhaps be in terms of education perhaps at the level of schools and not just the level of universities and in areas we can't even imagine. But with these interactions will emerge and evolve a new understanding.

Looking at our relationship I am reminded of your Kurosawas's famous film The Third Man where the same facts can be seen by different people with different perceptions differently. The important thing therefore is that we must be willing to understand things that the dynamics of our relationship will be perceived from different point of views from time to time. So long the convergent cohesive picture is intact this should not be a point of concern.

And, this is really what, I believe, you conference will attempt to do. To understand the strands and see if we can bring them together more effectively.

We have just been told about the vast investment of Japan in our country but I believe it is only 1 percent of the outward flow from Japan. We are looking at something greater and more substantive as we make a FDI friendly atmosphere in our country. Many years ago, one used to hear a lot about Japanese cities, and I say this as we have among us Dr. Isher Ahluwalia, whose interest in modern cities and modern urban spaces is legendary. I am looking forward to the day when her book on how to reorganize modern spaces, make them effective, make them creative, make them user friendly and make them participatory and yet get rid of all the unwelcome attributes that we have become accustomed to in recent times. And, that's where there is a great potential to develop relations vis-à-vis Japan.

I would certainly advocate strongly a Japanese city. You know, we have traditionally known China towns in our country but we have not yet known Japanese cities in our country and I think we'll be enriched greatly if we have something like this in our country. There are other countries in the ASEAN region doing this. Indian Prime Minister went to Malaysia, a little more than a year ago, and inaugurated little India. Similarly it would be wonderful if we had a Japanese city where you could lose yourself in the ambience of Japanese culture.
and presence of Japan without really having to get on to a plane and take a long flight to get to Japan.

I know there were some important issues related to municipal laws, labor laws in this regard and Japan had difficulty negotiating it, but all that would fall in place. If I may be allowed to give you a tip on how to succeed in India - we have learnt a lot from Japan but the way to succeed in India is to not expect answers to all the questions in one meeting. But to take a few answers and move forward. The others just follow naturally without one even having to ask those questions.

I go back to Maruti-Suzuki and say that we have learnt a lot about Japanese management styles which is akin to our understanding of equality in dealing with people. We took it from the historical Indian way of life and combined them with some modern socialistic theories and we try to bring about equal behavior and outreach in our management techniques. These may be different from the management techniques that you see in the West but between India and Japan, I think, we have some remarkable uncanny similarities in our management techniques and this is why we get along very well with Japanese technicians and managers. It's just a matter of keeping these two things together to bring about a successful formula.

We would like to re emphasize that our look east policy is in its third phase now. We started to emphasize on our look east policy in the early 1990s. We went into our second phase in the latter half of 1990s and now we are into the 3rd phase and we are full dialogue partners and make fully participative contribution to ASEAN, to the East Asia Summit as well as many other multilateral forums.

I think greater significance of Japan comes with the further linkage we look forward to the Asia Pacific. I think that’s the linkage that our closer collaboration will throw up to us and I think that will be very promising.

I think we are developing an interesting defense collaboration and cooperation, a joint exercise for our navy for instance and exchanges that we have done will continue to grow. I do believe that this is a very valuable relationship, a very valuable friendship which has historical strands, disagreements which we were able to overcome because of the strong bonds that we have and there are features in our relationship that be cannot have preconceived notions of what relationships will be between two sovereign countries. I think there are many-many features of our relationship that defy standard features of good relations and there are many features that prove that we can overcome difficult times and there are many-many dimensions of our relationship that point to India and Japan having a very significant role and a significant take away from the concept of Asia as the focal point of 21st century.

I believe our relationship with Japan, is a relationship that stands by itself, a relationship that contributes in a major way to how Asia of the 21st century will be.
With these few words, ladies and gentlemen I hope you have a very-very good time at this interesting conference and I look forward to a record of your deliberations as a take away from the convergence of so many experienced minds.

Thank you very much.

Expression of concern by Government of India on the launch of rocket by the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.

New Delhi, April 13, 2012.

India notes with serious concern the attempted launch of a rocket by the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) which violates United Nations Security Council Resolution 1874 and adversely impacts peace and stability in the Korean peninsula. India calls on DPRK not to undertake actions in violation of UNSC Resolutions 354. Statement by the Ministry of External Affairs expressing concern at the launch of rocket by Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

New Delhi, December 12, 2012.

India expresses its concern at the launch of a rocket by the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) in violation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1874. This unwarranted action by the Government of DPRK has adversely impacted peace and stability in the Korean Peninsula. India calls on DPRK to refrain from such actions.

The Spokesman was referring to the launch of a rocket by North Korea which was regarded as a major setback in international relations. Thought to be a thinly veiled ballistic missile test, the rocket was trotted out soon after a food aid deal was announced, and immediately put this deal in jeopardy. In general, the ability for a country to launch a satellite into space is regarded a clear sign that it could deliver a nuclear payload to any country on the planet. Previously, it was thought that North Korea's best rockets might only be able to reach states such as California, Oregon, and Washington, but a rocket capable of orbiting a satellite indicates a much longer range for other payloads. South Korea and Japan vowed to shoot down any rockets that go over their territory, and the launch might also serve as a real-time test of US ballistic missile defense capabilities. In the past, North Korea had launched rockets as tests of short and medium range missiles, and to provoke its neighbors. Simultaneously with this launch, there are indications that a nuclear test was being planned.

(For briefing on Nuclear Security Summit please see Document No. 061)

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, and thank you for being present at this briefing.

As we have informed you, this briefing will be related to the Prime Minister's visit to South Korea. Foreign Secretary will make his opening remarks. Along with him is Secretary (East) on his right. In case you have any questions related to that visit, Secretary (East) will handle it.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you. Sorry for being a little late. We had not realized that like many buildings this one is also in a permanent state of repair and we had to find our way around from a very complicated route back here. That is just by way of apology for being a few minutes late.

The Prime Minister will be visiting the Republic of Korea from March 24th to 27th. This will encompass two important engagements. Prime Minister will, at the invitation of President Lee Myung-bak, be on an official visit to South Korea on the 24th and the 25th. He will then attend the second Nuclear Security Summit in Seoul on the 26th and 27th of March 2012.

The visit to South Korea is the second bilateral visit by a Prime Minister of India, the last being in 1993 when Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao had gone to South Korea. President Lee Myung-bak had visited India on a State visit as the Chief Guest for the Republic Day in 2010, and our President had visited ROK in July 2011.

The elements of the official programme include a wreath laying ceremony at the Memorial Tower in the morning of March 25. This will be followed by an official welcoming ceremony at the Blue House, which is the official residence of the President of the ROK. PM will hold discussions with President Lee both in restricted and delegation-level formats. A bilateral agreement on Simplification of Visas will be signed, and thereafter a Joint Statement will be issued. On March 26, in the morning, there will be an interaction with leading CEOs of Korean corporations. At least that has been scheduled.
India and South Korea have a Strategic Partnership since 2010. The architecture of bilateral political discussions is well established. The two Foreign Ministers co-chair a Joint Commission. The last meeting of this Joint Commission was held in June 2010. The next is expected later this year. There is also a Foreign Policy and Security Dialogue, which is handled by my colleague Secretary (East) and the Vice Foreign Minister of ROK, in which they discuss overarching regional matters as well as economic and security issues.

Our economic relationship anchors our strong ties. Bilateral trade has picked up considerably since the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) between India and ROK came into effect in January 2010. In the last two years, bilateral trade has grown 65 per cent to reach 20.5 billion dollars last year. We have established a target of 30 billion dollars by 2014, which we believe is achievable. Over 300 South Korean companies are present in India, with actual investments worth 2.3 billion dollars. Indian investment in Korea is also substantial with Tata Motors and the Mahindra Group having made important strategic investments in that country.

Bilateral cooperation in other spheres continues to move ahead. A joint fund for science and technology collaboration amounting to US$ 10 million has been established to finance joint research between our scientists. An MoU for cooperation in space activities was concluded in 2010. The agreement on civil nuclear cooperation is progressing steadily. The Republic of Korea is active in India’s defence equipment market. Later this year, we expect a visit by the Defence Minister of ROK to India.

Parliamentary exchanges have also been robust. The Speaker of the Lok Sabha and the Speaker of the Korean National assembly have exchanged visits in 2011. Cultural exchanges are progressing well. The ICCR established an Indian Cultural Center in Seoul in 2011, and a Korean Cultural Center is expected to be inaugurated later this year in our country.

The Prime Minister’s visit aims to give depth and greater meaning to our Strategic Partnership and to the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, strengthen people-to-people contacts between our two countries, strengthen cooperation in the field of science and technology, and also coordinate our thinking on matters relating to regional security and international events.

Following the bilateral component of the visit, PM will attend the Second Nuclear Security Summit on the 26th and 27th of March. (For briefing Nuclear Security Summit please see Document No. 0.61)

Question: Is there a proposal for having an annual dialogue with South Korea on the lines that we have with Japan, Russia and others? Also, what explains the long interregnum between the two visits of the Prime Minister to Seoul? This is happening after almost two decades.

Secretary (East): We have a very strong institutional mechanism of dialogue with Korea. This covers meeting at the Ministerial level between the Foreign Ministers, between the Defence Ministers, between the Commerce and Industry Ministers. It is also at official level on various subjects, and this takes place all through the year. We have a very strong multifaceted relationship with South Korea. We have had regular high-level visits from both sides. We have had President’s of Korea visiting India. Their three Presidents have come to India and our two Presidents have visited Korea, both President Kalam and President Patil. And PM had visited Korea in 1993 and is now visiting again.

Question: What is this annual dialogue?

Secretary (East): For all practical purposes we have an annual dialogue. There is a dialogue at the level of the Foreign Office, which is at the Joint Secretary level. There is a dialogue at the level of Secretary. There is a Joint Commission at the level of the Minister.

Question: But there is no proposal to convert it into an institutionalized mechanism.

Secretary (East): This is an institutionalized mechanism. Foreign Office Cooperation Dialogue, Foreign Office Consultations, the Strategic Dialogue, and the Joint Commission are institutional mechanisms.

Question: I would like to ask about North Korea. Will the North Korea issue be discussed by our Prime Minister with the South Korean President? What is Indian Government’s position on the North Korean plan to launch a satellite?

Foreign Secretary: I will ask my colleague here to answer that because he deals with the two Koreas. But I would just like to underline the very great importance India attaches to issues of security and disarmament.

Secretary (East): The issue of the satellite launch has come to our notice. We feel that nothing should be done which increases tension in the region and goes against UNSC resolutions, especially UNSC 1874.

Question: So far the focus is only on highly enriched uranium and plutonium. Other radioactive substances like radioisotopes, will they also be covered?

Foreign Secretary: They are covered as part of the discussions but the focus, as I said, is on the threat from nuclear terrorism and what is assessed as the principal source of danger. But the question of isotopes and their use is a part of the discussion. In fact even in Delhi there was a fairly robust discussion on this and on one particular paragraph there was some disagreement. That has been sorted out. I think there is not going to be very much discussion on the isotope issue in Korea. But one does not know. When we will reach there we will know. But it has been discussed.
356. Statement by the Prime Minister prior to his departure for the Republic of Korea for an Official visit and to attend the Nuclear Security Summit.

New Delhi, March 23, 2012.

At the invitation of President Lee Myung-bak of the Republic of Korea, I leave tomorrow for Seoul to attend the 2012 Seoul Nuclear Security Summit and to pay an Official Visit to the Republic of Korea.

The Seoul Nuclear Security Summit follows the first Nuclear Security Summit convened by President Barack Obama in Washington in April 2010 to focus attention of countries with considerable nuclear capabilities on the threat posed by nuclear terrorism. This remains a continuing concern. India has been an active participant in carrying forward the Nuclear Security Summit initiative, and has also hosted a Sherpa meeting in January 2012 in New Delhi.

India is expanding its nuclear power programme to diversify its energy mix and enhance energy security. In order to retain public support for harnessing the benefits of nuclear energy, we must be able to assure them of the highest levels of nuclear security and safety. This is even more important after the Fukushima accident in Japan last year.

I expect the Seoul Summit to review actions that countries have taken to strengthen nuclear security since we last met in Washington, and recommend further steps to enhance the global nuclear security architecture. India has prepared a national report which will be shared during the Summit. I will highlight the high priority we attach to nuclear security, safety and non-proliferation, and our impeccable record in this regard. I also intend to underline India's continuing support for a world free of nuclear weapons.

In addition, my visit will provide the opportunity to exchange views with a number of world leaders who will be attending the Nuclear Security Summit.

I look forward to my bilateral meeting with President Lee to undertake a comprehensive review of our relations with the Republic of Korea, and identify new steps for the future. The Republic of Korea is a Strategic Partner and an important pillar of our 'Look East' policy. We have a vibrant trade and investment relationship. Our partnership in science & technology, education and energy holds enormous promise.

As members of various multilateral forums such as the East Asia Summit and G-20, our two countries have shared interests on a range of emerging political, security and economic issues. I will use my meeting with President Lee to exchange views on important regional and international developments. I also look forward to meeting leading Korean business leaders, who play a key role in bringing our two countries together.
Interview of the Prime Minister to a Korean Daily, JoongAng Ilbo.

India had adopted the socialist pattern of economy after getting independence. It finally opened the doors to its huge market in 1991 when Singh became the Finance Minister and by doing so strengthened the competitiveness of the nation. Since 2004, as the Prime Minister of India, Singh has been crafting the economic development policy of the country with a human face. India, in the last decade, has been one of the fastest-growing economies in the world after China, with average annual growth rates of 6%. Inspired by his leadership, the JoongAng Ilbo requested an interview with Manmohan Singh who is visiting Seoul on 24-27 March 2012 for the Nuclear Security Summit and bilateral Summit.]

JoongAng Ilbo: You must have faced strong resistance when you tried to carry out economic reforms. How could you break through the resistance and what was the toughest?

Prime Minister: In human affairs, the status quo has a great appeal because it is rooted in reality. Therefore, whenever you want to change things, move away from status quo, there is resistance. But I have great faith in the people of our country. It is because of the support of the people that we were able to get the country out of a deep economic crisis that it was in 1991. And since 1991, there are several parties which have ruled our country and it is a tribute to our leadership that this change in political leadership has not affected the process of economic reform so that underlying there is a great national consensus in favour of the reform, in favour of the liberalization process.

(Congress is the ruling party in the parliamentary system of India with a coalition government of many parties. Manmohan Singh belongs to the Congress party. He has a Master's degree and doctorate in economics from Cambridge and Oxford University respectively.)

JoongAng Ilbo: Sonia Gandhi (66) heads the Congress party. How do you maintain such cordial relations with the one from different religion and region and gender for 8 years?
Prime Minister: "Our historical experience has forged a national narrative that is marked by a respect for plurality and diversity. We regard these as strengths rather than limitations. The founding fathers of our nation laid down certain fundamental principles which made us seek our economic and social salvation within the framework of a pluralistic democracy wedded to the rule of law".

JoongAng Ilbo: What is your image of the past, present and future of Korea?

Prime Minister: The Republic of Korea's transformation and its emergence as a vibrant democracy, one of the fastest growing economies in the world and a powerhouse of innovation in just two generations is an inspiration for the whole of Asia. I am aware of the odds you fought against and the sacrifice you made in the early years of building your nation to gain your prestige and position you enjoy today. It is a reflection of your enlightened leadership and the resolve of the South Korean people. The Republic of Korea is a factor for peace, stability and prosperity in East Asia.

(The editor conveyed the message of President Lee Myung Bak to the Prime Minister before starting the interview. PM Singh said "I have great admiration for President Lee. We had the privilege of having the President as our Chief Guest on our Republic Day in 2010.

JoongAng Ilbo: What would be the topic that you would like to bring up the most when you meet President Lee at the Nuclear Security Summit in Seoul?

Prime Minister: We will talk about giving depth and greater meaning to our Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, strengthen people-to-people contacts between our two countries, strengthen cooperation in the field of science and technology, and also coordinate our thinking in matters relating to regional security, international events, and since this is an occasion which coincides with Nuclear Security Summit, we can work together to promote nuclear security and safety in this world that we live in.

JoongAng Ilbo: Do you think that USA is keeping China in check? Have you faced situations where you were forced to choose between China and USA?

Prime Minister: China is our largest neighbor with which we share a long border. It is also our biggest trading partner in goods. With USA, our relations have been transformed in 2005. Three million people of Indian origin live and work in the US. The country is also India's largest business partner. Our aim is to have cooperative ties with both China and USA. It is not zero-sum game. I do not think that large and dynamic countries like China can be contained.

JoongAng Ilbo: Recently, Wall Street Journal opined that India's bureaucratic red tape and corruption have been discouraging foreign investment. Korean steel company POSCO's project in Orissa is still pending.
Prime Minister: Outside observers often tend to take a narrow view of our economic policies. India is a far more open economy today than it was earlier. We are governed by the rule of law, and as a functioning democracy, we need to be mindful of the concerns and sensitivities of all sections and stakeholders and take their interests into account. It is my sincere hope that the issues pertaining to the POSCO project would be resolved soon to the satisfaction of all parties. Over 300 South Korean companies are present in India. We plan to invest one trillion dollars in infrastructure development in areas like highways, airports, power plants, mass transport systems and so on in next five years. We would like to see more South Korean companies come to India and take advantage of our youthful and skilled labor force. Opportunities in India are wide open.

(Indian government officials point out that the country has a 300 million middle class with excellent purchasing power in its 1.2 billion population. As such India is a big market though the rich-poor gap exists. 50-70% of home appliances market in India is dominated by Samsung and LG. Hyundai occupies 20% of small car market, after Suzuki which has 50% share.

Our editor found Dr. Singh a humble man, who described himself as an "extinguished economist". He is a statesman who has gone through all kinds of ups and downs. His eyes, visible through the horn-rimmed glasses were gentle and the light of wisdom was shining.)

Statement by the Prime Minister to the media during his official bilateral visit to Republic of Korea.

"I am delighted to be on an official bilateral visit to the Republic of Korea. President Lee and I have just concluded our talks aimed at adding momentum and substance to our Strategic Partnership. Ours is a partnership built on shared values that provide a firm foundation for further development. President Lee has made an outstanding contribution to give added meaning and substance to our strategic partnership and I thank H.E. President Lee for that contribution.

In our discussions today, President Lee and I agreed that our strong economic ties are fundamental to our growing interaction. Bilateral trade has risen by 65% over the past two years since the implementation of our Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement. We have therefore set a new target of US $ 40 billion by 2015. We also agreed to accelerate work in progress to upgrade the Agreement and make it more ambitious.

I invited Korean firms to invest in India in a big way. Companies such as LG, Hyundai and Samsung are already household names in India. We would like to see small and medium sized Korean companies also making India a base for their manufacturing. I informed President Lee that India is making a huge effort in upgrading our physical infrastructure. We want Korean companies to help us realize this objective and benefit from the opportunities provided by this.

The Agreement just signed on simplifying visa procedures will make travel easier for business persons.

I felicitated President Lee and the people of the Republic of Korea for hosting yet another important multilateral meeting, the Nuclear Security Summit, here in Seoul. I requested him for Korea's support to India's quest to join international regimes such as the Nuclear Suppliers Group, the Missile Technology Control Group, the Australia Group and the Wassenaar Arrangement.

We agreed to expand our political and security cooperation. With this objective in mind, I informed President Lee of India's decision to position a Defence Attaché at our Embassy here in Seoul before the end of the year.

We discussed ways and means to enhance cooperation between our scientists and technicians, including how to operationalize a joint Science and Technology Fund of US $ 10 million. India has also offered to launch Korean satellites on Indian space launch vehicles.

2013 will mark the 40th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations..." between India and the Republic of Korea. We agreed to celebrate this year in a befitting manner.

On regional issues, we agreed to enhance our cooperation and coordination, including in the East Asia Summit process. I informed President Lee of the developments in the re-establishment of the Nalanda University and looked forward to Korean participation in this effort.

We also discussed ways to increase our coordination on global issues including in the G-20 and at the United Nations.

I am extremely pleased with the outcome of my discussions with President Lee this morning. I believe we have laid the foundation for a firm partnership for the coming years between our two great countries.

I have invited President Lee to visit India. Thank you very much."
359. India - Republic of Korea Joint Statement issued at the conclusion of Prime Minister’s visit to Seoul: “Deepening the Strategic Partnership”

1. The Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh paid an Official Visit to the Republic of Korea (ROK), at the invitation of President Lee Myung-bak, on 25 March 2012. The Prime Minister of India, his spouse Shrimati Gursharan Kaur and the accompanying delegation were received with great warmth and accorded a ceremonial welcome at the Blue House. Prime Minister Singh held a restricted summit meeting with President Lee, followed by delegation level talks. Thereafter, a luncheon banquet was hosted by President Lee in honour of the visiting dignitary and his delegation.

2. During the summit meeting, Prime Minister Singh and President Lee conducted a thorough review of and hailed the multifaceted bilateral relationship, which has rapidly acquired greater depth and vitality since its elevation to a Strategic Partnership during the landmark State visit to India of President Lee in January 2010. They agreed that the State visit of President Shrimati Pratibha DeviSingh Patil to the Republic of Korea in July 2011, had imparted further momentum to the engagement and dialogue process between the two countries. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at regular high-level exchanges, steadily growing economic, trade, security and cultural ties, as well as robust people-to-people exchanges. They examined ways to further enhance ties, underscoring the mutual convergence of interests and outlook between these two democracies of Asia.

3. The two leaders also held wide-ranging discussions on regional, international and multilateral issues. It was noted that India - Republic of Korea relations were of mutual advantage and were conducive to peace, progress and stability in our respective regions, in the whole of Asia and even beyond.

Strengthening Political and Security Cooperation

4. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee, appreciating the role of the India-ROK Joint Commission (JCM) co-chaired by the Foreign Minister and External Affairs Minister of the two countries, reaffirmed that the Commission meet every year, alternately in Seoul and New Delhi. It was also decided that the seventh meeting of the Joint Commission will be held in New Delhi at the earliest date this year.

5. The two leaders shared the view that the Foreign Policy & Security Dialogue (FPSD) at the level of Vice Foreign Minister, MOFAT and Secretary (East), MEA was a useful instrument to exchange views and harmonize positions on a vast variety of bilateral, regional and international issues. It was agreed to hold the next meeting of the FPSD soon within this year in New Delhi.

6. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the strengthening bilateral cooperation in the areas of defense and security. Prime Minister Singh conveyed India's decision to set up a defense wing at the Embassy of India, Seoul within this year, which was welcomed by President Lee.

7. The two sides exchanged views on the prevailing complex security situation and underlined the need to actively pursue consultations and cooperation in the field of maritime safety and security both bilaterally and in association with other countries of the region.

8. The ROK side recalled the timely and useful visit of Defense Minister A K Antony in September 2010, which provided an excellent opportunity for both sides to exchange views on the entire range of defense and security issues. It was agreed that the Defense Minister of ROK would pay a return visit to India later this year.

9. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee also agreed to continue high-level exchanges between the defense establishments of both sides, undertake activities as mutually agreed for deepening bilateral defense relations and to explore the possibilities of joint ventures in research & development and manufacture of military equipment, including through the transfer of technology and co-production. President Lee underscored that the ROK side wanted to increase cooperation with India in military and defense industry including, inter alia, naval ships, aircrafts, and ship-building.

Expanding Economic and Trade Cooperation

10. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee noted with satisfaction that bilateral trade had increased by around 70 percent in two years since the entry into force of the India - ROK Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) on 1 January, 2010, crossing the $ 20 billion mark in 2011. A Joint Committee has already been instituted at the level of Trade/Commerce Ministers to regularly review the working of CEPA and upgrade it as and when required. The first meeting of the Joint Committee had taken place in New Delhi on 20th January 2011. It was agreed to have the second Ministerial Committee meeting in Seoul this year.

11. The two leaders agreed to set a new bilateral trade target of US $ 40 billion by 2015. Prime Minister Singh underlined the desirability of balanced trade relations, which would facilitate a robust growth rate in the long term. It was agreed that both sides would explore constructive and forward looking ways to facilitate greater market access to each other's products and services. Prime Minister Singh reiterated that the Indian side was hopeful of providing ROK with pharmaceutical and agricultural products, as well as, IT enabled services.

12. Prime Minister Singh apprised his host of India's efforts to strengthen the national infrastructure and plans to invest $1 trillion in infrastructure development between 2012-17. Noting the enviable track record of Korean companies in successfully executing infrastructure projects all over the globe, Prime Minister Singh invited them to actively participate in the construction projects for highways, ports, airports, metros and power plants being regularly launched in India. Prime Minister Singh pointed out that India followed a transparent and competitive bidding process, which was open to qualified companies from all countries.

13. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee welcomed the growing presence and investments of Korean companies in India and those of Indian companies in ROK, which had been stimulated by the bilateral CEPA. They also agreed to explore new possibilities for joint investment in third countries. The two leaders also reaffirmed the importance of implementing the POSCO project in the State of Odisha.

14. The two leaders welcomed the steady growth in travel between the two countries, reflective of enhanced business and people to people exchanges. They agreed to increase mutual efforts to further improve air connectivity between the two countries. It was also agreed to hold the next round of civil aviation talks at an early date, to examine various proposals on the table, including the increase of the capacity entitlements for the air carriers of the two countries, in a constructive and forward-looking spirit.

Enhancing Science and Technology Cooperation

15. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee welcomed the upgrading of the Joint Committee on Science and Technology to the ministerial level as a foundation for common growth. They noted that the $10 million joint R&D fund is being actively utilized for joint research projects, human resources exchanges, workshops, and other science and technology cooperation programs.

16. Both leaders pledged to enhance cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space as envisaged in the MOU on cooperation between the Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) and the Korea Aerospace Research Institute (KARI). The leaders noted that the technical experts from both sides met in Bangalore, India, in March 2011 and identified priority areas of cooperation. The Korean side welcomed India's participation in the ROK's international open bidding for launching Korean satellites. The two leaders proposed that the concerned agencies of both countries study the possible cooperation in future space activities including launching a nano-satellite developed by Korean students on an Indian launch vehicle.
17. Both leaders expressed satisfaction at the conclusion of a bilateral civil nuclear cooperation agreement during the State visit of the President of India to ROK in July 2011. Recognizing the criticality of non-polluting nuclear energy in the economic development of countries, they agreed to discuss specific items of cooperation with the ongoing review of the safety and security aspects of operating nuclear plants. President Lee requested that the Indian Government allocate a site for Korean nuclear reactors.

Promoting Culture, Education and People-to-People Exchanges

18. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the successful organization of reciprocal year-long cultural festivals in both countries during 2011. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee, decided that the 40th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between ROK and India in 2013, be celebrated in a befitting manner. Both sides will consult each other in developing a suitable calendar of events. President Lee welcomed the opening of an Indian Cultural Centre in Seoul in July 2011 and conveyed that the Korean Cultural Centre would be operational in New Delhi in the course of the year. Prime Minister Singh noted that the initiative would help the Indian people become more interested in the rich Korean culture and tradition.

19. The two leaders welcomed the growing educational and academic exchanges between the two countries. They agreed to promote tie-ups and exchanges between educational institutions of the two countries, with a view to increasing student exchanges in various areas including language, information technology, and science.

20. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee expressed a strong desire to see greater parliamentary exchanges between the two countries, which are amongst the two most vibrant democracies in the world.

21. Recognizing the critical role of the media in informing and shaping public opinion in democratic nations, Prime Minister Singh and President Lee also welcomed the MOU on media exchanges, concluded in July 2011 in Seoul. It was noted that the two countries would exchange media delegation in the second half of this year. They also agreed to facilitate institutional tie-ups between media organizations of both countries to promote further exchange of content and journalists.

Furthering Cooperation in the International Arena

22. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee exchanged views on the global economic and financial situation, which continues to be very difficult. They reiterated the pressing need for all countries and international financial institutions to work in tandem in order to overcome the crisis affecting each and every nation. They agreed to step up consultations including those in the G20 process to enhance transparency and cooperation in both regional and global economic structures.

23. The two leaders also recognized the need for comprehensive UN reforms including Security Council expansion to make the body even more representative and effective. Prime Minister Singh emphasized India’s aspirations for a greater role in the reformed UN Security Council. Both sides commended each other’s roles and constructive contributions in promoting global peace, security and prosperity.

24. The two leaders exchanged views on the situation in their respective regions, as well as the Gulf, West Asia and North Africa, expressing concern at a number of flashpoints that could endanger peace and security in Asia and beyond. They underlined their strong commitment to the peaceful settlement of issues, without resorting to force or the threat of use of force.

25. The two leaders shared their views on the importance of maintaining peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula including its denuclearization. Noting North Korea’s announcement made on March 16, 2012 that it plans to launch the so-called “application satellite”, they urged that nothing should be done which increases tensions in the region and violates the relevant UN Security Council resolutions.

26. Prime Minister Singh and President Lee and expressed grave concern about the continued threat of terrorism and piracy, emanating from various quarters. The two leaders expressed the hope that the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism, which was under consideration at the UN, would be adopted soon. The two leaders pledged to enhance mutual cooperation including through information sharing.

27. The two leaders reiterated their common commitment to nuclear disarmament and the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery. They attached importance to the Seoul Nuclear Security Summit in strengthening international efforts to address the challenge of nuclear terrorism. The Republic of Korea welcomed India’s intention for future membership and active participation in the multilateral export control regimes with the objective of strengthening the international non-proliferation regime.

28. The two leaders agreed to expand cooperation and coordination between their countries within the East Asia Summit (EAS), which they acknowledged should continue to remain an ASEAN-led, open, transparent and inclusive structure. They welcomed the inclusion of the United States and the Russian Federation in the EAS.

29. The two leaders welcomed the commencement of a Trilateral India-ROK-
Japan dialogue amongst think-tanks of the three countries, the first of which will be held in Delhi in 2012.

30. Prime Minister Singh informed President Lee of the rapid progress in the establishment of the new Nalanda University as a symbol of excellence in learning in a resurgent Asia. President Lee stated that ROK welcomed the progress in re-establishing this premier educational institution and would examine possible ways to contribute.

31. The two leaders welcomed the signing of the following agreement and MOU:

(i) Agreement on Simplification of Visa Procedures
(ii) MOU on Cooperation between KNDA (Korea National Diplomatic Academy) and FSI (Foreign Service Institute)

32. The two leaders welcomed regular bilateral high level visits, which have become a hallmark of the relationship and observed that the Official visit of the Prime Minister of India to the Republic of Korea would contribute immeasurably to deepening and expanding the Strategic Partnership between the two countries.

33. On behalf of the Government and the people of India, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh expressed gratitude to President Mr. Lee Myung-bak and the friendly people of the Republic of Korea for the warm and gracious hospitality accorded to him and his delegation. Prime Minister Singh extended a cordial invitation to the President of ROK to visit India at a mutually convenient time. The invitation was accepted with appreciation.
360. Media Briefing by Secretary (East) on Prime Minister's ongoing visit to Republic of Korea

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): The briefing will cover the events of this morning, that is, basically the bilateral part of the visit so far.

We have here with us Secretary (East) Mr. Sanjay Singh, who will make some opening remarks. In case you have any questions or clarifications after that, we have a team of other colleagues who will assist the Secretary in his responses. I do not need to perhaps introduce the gentleman on my left. All of you are aware of Ambassador Vishnu Prakash.

You know him much better than I do because you have worked with him for several years. To Secretary (East)'s left is Mr. Pankaj Pachauri, Communications Advisor to the Prime Minister. To his left is Mr. Gautam Bambawale, Joint Secretary (East Asia).

Without further ado, I will ask Secretary (East) to make his brief opening remarks, and then we will follow up with responses to any questions that you may have.

Secretary (East) (Shri Sanjay Singh): Good afternoon everybody.

We have already given you a pretty extensive briefing in Delhi. Today, PM's statement to the press was very extensive. I suppose all of you have got that. You will get the Joint Statement. What I would be doing is basically going over the ground which has already been trodden. But I think it will be useful for those who have not been there in the morning session or have missed out one or the other part of the proceedings of the morning. We will go through it and then we will try and field questions, as the case may be, if there are any.

Let us just put it in context. Prime Minister arrived, you have all arrived with him in the same plane, on a three-day bilateral visit to South Korea from 24th to 26th March. He had earlier visited Korea in November 2010, for the G20 Summit. President Lee was the Chief Guest at the Republic Day in January 2010 during which visit our bilateral partnership was elevated to a strategic relationship. Hon. President visited Korea in July 2011. To put it in context, we have had a number of bilateral visits in a very short space of time which is indicative of the growing strength of our bilateral relations.

Today, Prime Minister had his summit meeting with President Lee. Most of you were in the Blue House to attend the media event and have got a flavor of the conversation and the feel for the atmospherics. To give you a quick overview, Prime Minister paid homage at the Memorial Tower along with Shrimati Gursharan Kaur and members of the delegation in the morning. He was next accorded a warm ceremonial welcome at the Blue House and presented with a Guard of Honour. It was a very colourful ceremony in true Korean style. Large number of Korean and Indian children were present during the ceremony. They greeted and cheered both leaders who spent a few minutes conversing with them. Our Korean friends very thoughtfully arranged a short tour for the Indian kids of the Blue House.

The two leaders held a restricted meeting which was followed by delegation-level talks. The talks were wide-ranging and covered the whole gamut of bilateral, regional and international issues of common interest. PM and President expressed great satisfaction at the momentum in bilateral relations in recent years and their all-round expansion including in areas like trade investment, S&T, space, education, defence, security, culture, and people-to-people relations.

Consequent to the operationalisation of Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) in January, 2010, bilateral trade has grown over 65 per cent in the last two years grossing the 20 billion mark by the end of 2011. There is considerable untapped potential given that Republic of Korea is among the fastest growing OECD countries, and India is the second fastest growing major economy in the world. The two leaders agreed to enhance the trade target to 40 billion dollars by 2015. Considerable investments have been flowing in both directions. South Korean companies have obtained success in India and so have Indian companies in Korea.

Prime Minister said he would like to see a bigger presence of Korean companies in India including in the area of infrastructure development. The Korean companies have known strength in infrastructure and in specific areas of manufacturing, as you know. PM will be interacting with Korean CEOs tomorrow with this objective.

An important agreement on visa simplification was signed in the presence of both leaders. It envisages long-term multiple entry visas and other visas which would spur greater contacts, travel and engagement.

Both sides also agreed to continue regular high-level exchanges in the coming months. We expect the visits of Republic of Korea's Defence and Foreign Ministers to India. When the Foreign Minister would visit India, we would also have the meeting of the Joint Commission. The Commerce and Industry Minister of India is also expected to visit Korea for the next round of the Joint Committee Meeting to review implementation of the CEPA.

While close to about a 100,000 Indians and Koreans each traveled in both directions last year, India and Korea would work towards enhancing air connectivity to boost business and tourist traffic. Presently some 2,000 Korean students including school-going students study in India and an increasing number of Indian scholars are heading to South Korea to study science subjects. Both sides have pledged to promote educational exchange and explore more institutional tie-ups. We also have considerable cooperation in the sector of science and technology for which a fund of ten million dollars has been earmarked by both countries.

An MoU on cooperation between the Foreign Service Institute and Korean National Diplomatic Academy to explore possibilities of exchanging faculty, trainee, and best practices was concluded. The Ambassadors signed the MoU day before yesterday. For the first time we would be sending some young diplomats for an exposure to RoK later this year.

President Lee and Prime Minister noted a marked convergence of outlook on a variety of issues. They agreed that both countries would keep in close touch bilaterally as well as at international fora to regularly exchange views and coordinate positions. Both countries are welcoming of the positive role and contribution made by each other in promoting peace, stability and prosperity in our respective regions, Asia and beyond.

Prime Minister was received with exceptional warmth and courtesy, which is reflective of our excellent ties and the esteem that Prime Minister has been personally held here in the Republic of Korea. His visit has been instrumental in greatly consolidating the process of bilateral engagement and in deepening our strategic partnership. I thank you.

Question: Prime Minister in his opening address said that he has requested South Korean President to support India in the NSG, MTCR, and Australia Group. What was South Korean President's response to that?

Secretary (East): Prime Minister's request was noted. This is a process, as you know, which is ongoing and India is making considerable progress in that.

Question: South Korean President referred to India's concerns about North Korea launching its rocket or rather satellite on April 15th. Could you cast some light on that? Secondly, when you talk about the strategic relations with South Korea, is China a factor in the equation? The reason why you want better strategic relations with South Korea?

Secretary (East): Firstly, we had already pointed out that nothing should be done which increases tensions in this region and goes against UNSC resolutions. We have already made that statement. I think that is what perhaps the President was referring to. I must emphasise that our relations with every country stand on their own merit and are not predicated on our relations with any other country. We have excellent relations with both, our neighbor China, and with South Korea.

Question: Did the South Korean side enquire about the POSCO project? Did POSCO project come up for discussion?
Secretary (East): Not extensively. We expressed that there is progress in the implementation of the POSCO project. Both sides attach importance to it. A number of governmental clearances, etc., have been done. The State Government of Odisha is making progress in acquiring the land. There are certain legal issues involved. These are being attended to. We hope that there is progress in the near future.

Question: I will like to know two things. There has been reports in South Korean Papers Since Korea has advanced technology in shipbuilding... and also possible that India may need South Korean help in technology in civil nuclear reactors safety. I would like to know if there has been any discussion about this. The other thing is that in the Joint Statement the Korean President has said that since the signing of the CEPA there has been an increase of 65% in trade. Our Prime Minister has said 70%. What is the correct figure. (unofficial translation from the Hindi text)

Secretary (East): It is a question of statistics. A point here and there makes all the difference. PM said it has increased more than 65%. Whether it is 65% or 70%, there has been substantial increase. It is a question of understanding. The increase is about that. Both are correct. There has been substantial increase and it is due to CEPA.

South Korea has made substantial progress in civil nuclear field. As far as I know they get 45 percent power from nuclear energy. They have a particular reactor with a capacity of 14MWe, which is one of the most advanced in the world. We want to increase cooperation with them. Last year in July when the Hon'ble President visited New Delhi, we had entered into a cooperation agreement with them, which had many elements. (unofficial translation from Hindi text)

Question: The Prime Minister has invited South Korea to use Indian launch vehicles for launch of their satellites. Is there anything specific on the agenda? Have they approached us with any specific launch request now?

Secretary (East): South Korea has a programme to launch satellites. We have a launch vehicle. I think it is a win-win, it is in mutual interest that we have cooperation in this sector and I think we can both use our capabilities to mutual advantage.

Question: Any specific launch the South Koreans have approached us with?

Secretary (East): We have cooperation in the sector of space. We signed this agreement in 2010 when President Lee visited India as a Chief Guest at the Republic Day. And this has all these areas of cooperation.

Question: The Prime Minister announced that a Defence Attache will be positioned in Seoul shortly. You have also talked about the possibility of the Defence Minister visiting India. How do you see this increased cooperation panning out? Are you going to see more exercises, more visits, more cooperation maybe at the manufacturing level during the new DPP we have? How is that procedure spanning out?

Secretary (East): Cooperation in the field of defence and security covers various aspects. One is personnel, that is human resources, capacity-building, training, exchanges of views and doctrines. The second aspect is defence production. South Korea has developed considerable prowess in defence production. We too have our own domestic strengths. I think we feel that time has come that we can cooperate with each other towards fulfilling our own requirements. And I think again this is another area with the new economic cooperation that is going on with us knowing more about South Korean companies and South Korea knowing more about Indian companies, this is a natural outcome of the process and creation of the strategic partnership.

Question: Did President Lee share his assessment of how DPRK will handle its transition under its new ruler Kim? Was this a topic for discussion at all?

Secretary (East): There were discussions regarding various regional countries. He did mention that there has been a change in the leadership in DPRK and that they would be watching how it performs in due course.

Question: Are South Korean nuclear power companies showing interest in investing in India’s nuclear power sector?

Secretary (East): I would not know specifically but I hope they do.

Would you like to say a few words before we close the thing, Ambassador sahib, for old time sake?

Ambassador to ROK (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. It is such a delight to be talking to you again in my new incarnation. As the Secretary mentioned, this has been an excellent visit. Both sides have recognized that this establishes a new landmark in expanding our relations. The relationship is becoming truly multifaceted because it is anchored on the economic and commercial relationship which is blossoming. But also the other facets of the relationship are acquiring great salience, some of which the Secretary alluded to. They include, as he said, given the fact that we have a broad convergence of interests and outlook in respect of our respective regions, in Asia and beyond. We have been working well together at the international fora. Specifically when we talk of bilateral relationship, when we talk of security, when we talk of defence, when we talk of people-to-people, energy, civil aviation.
For example the President mentioned that last year 15 million Koreans had travelled abroad. It is a small country geographically speaking and population wise of 49 million people. Given the fact that India is seen as a spiritual home by something like 25 per cent of the Buddhist population of this country, and given the fact that we are two large and two ancient civilizations with a very robust economic and commercial relationship, I think we are really scratching the surface at the moment when we talk of say 100,000 people travelling in both directions.

I think we have attained a critical mass. I think that there is tremendous goodwill and genuine interest towards each other which is factored on realities. As the Secretary mentioned, we are two fast-growing economies in the world. Today we are the third and the fourth largest economies in Asia. They are very enamoured of the fact that India offers a huge market of something like 300 million strong middle class. So, I guess we have genuine synergy. Prime Minister mentioned to President Lee Myung-bak that India and Korea are natural partners. I think that said it all. Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you.
361. Address by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to the Chief Executives of the Korean Business and Industry.

"It is a great pleasure for me to meet with you this morning. I would like to thank the leading Korean chambers of commerce and industry for organizing this interaction during my official visit to this beautiful country.

We in India admire the Korean people for the great economic and social progress they have registered. Despite the downturn in the global economy, Korea has sustained one of the highest growth rates among the OECD countries. These achievements are due to the determination, solid hard work and spirit of enterprise of the Korean people.

India too is one of the fastest growing major economies of the world. Despite the adverse international environment, we have managed to maintain a growth rate of 7% per annum in the last few years. I am confident that the strong fundamentals of our economy will help us return to a sustained growth path of about 8-10% per annum in the coming years.

Firstly, our domestic savings rate is about 33 - 35% of our GDP and growing.

Secondly, India has a very young population and over half of the working population is in its twenties.

Thirdly, over the past few years we have invested heavily in education, health and agriculture to give a new deal to rural India. Our rural markets are now booming and the middle class is growing rapidly.

Fourthly, we have been undertaking a huge expansion in our higher education and skill development infrastructure of ports, airports, railways, energy and roads. India is poised to continue to be a frontline player in the global knowledge economy.

Fifthly, we have very ambitious plans for the development of our physical infrastructure. We are planning to secure investment of almost US Dollar one trillion in the next 5 years in new projects in highways, power plants, mass transport systems, ports and airports. This will be achieved through both public and private investment and Public-Private Partnerships.

Sixthly, we are determined to pursue a strategy of green growth. We are committed to increasing energy efficiency and the share of renewables, including solar and nuclear power, in our energy mix. There will be large business opportunities and I am aware of Korean capabilities in environmentally friendly technologies.
Korean companies have always recognized these strengths and competitive advantages of the Indian economy. They were among the early investors to look at India as a strategic investment destination. Korean giants like LG and Samsung are household names in India. Hyundai has a 25% market share in India’s domestic passenger car industry.

I recognize that sometimes our processes can be slow but there are effective mechanisms for resolution of problems and differences and a strong rule of law. The government is keen to move forward with the POSCO project and there is some progress in this regard. I believe that India is a stable and profitable long term investment opportunity.

Investment from Korea is a priority for India. We will take pro-active steps to address investor grievances and improve the business climate in the country. Many States of our Union have been actively encouraging foreign investment and we will support these efforts. I urge Korean industry to have faith in India.

After the implementation of our bilateral Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) on 1 January 2010, our bilateral trade has surged by roughly 65% in two years and reached a turnover of 20.6 billion US Dollars in 2011. However, it is still below its huge untapped potential. Therefore, President Lee and I decided yesterday to revise the bilateral trade target to 40 billion US Dollars by 2015. This is a challenge as well as an opportunity that we must both seize together. I look forward to hearing your views.

Thank you."
362. Speech by the Prime Minister at the Banquet hosted by the President of the Republic of Korea.

Your Excellency, President Lee Myung-bak, Madam Kim Yoon-ok,

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I would like to express my deep debt to President Lee and the gracious First Lady Madam Kim for hosting us today. I thank you for the warmth of your welcome and the cordiality of your reception.

Excellency,

We in India regard you as a great supporter of a strong India-Korea partnership. It was during your historic visit to India in 2010 that we upgraded our relations to the level of a Strategic Partnership.

We admire the way you have steered the Korean economy through the global economic downturn.

Excellency,

Links between India and Korea go back thousands of years. Lord Buddha's abiding message of peace resonates among both our peoples. We know of the legend that a Princess from Ayodhya traveled here to marry King Kim Suro. I thank you for installing a bust of India's great poet, Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, who called your nation the 'Lamp of the East', in Seoul.

We have watched with great admiration the transformation of Korea into a developed economy. The people of India admire the determination, capacity for hard work and the spirit of enterprise that characterize Korean people.

Korean companies were among the first to respond confidence in India after we opened our economy in 1991. Many Korean brands are household names in India.

There is nevertheless immense potential for further economic cooperation between our two countries.

Excellency, India looks forward to strengthening political and security cooperation with the Republic of Korea. We welcome Korea's growing role in international affairs and we see it as a positive factor for peace and stability. I recall Korea's excellent chairmanship of the Group of 20 Summit last year. We look to Korea's leadership to strengthen international cooperation on matters of nuclear security at the forthcoming Summit.

I am confident that under your inspiring leadership, Mr. President, relations between India and Korea will blossom even further in the years that lie ahead.

Ladies and gentlemen,

May I invite you to join me in raising a toast:

- To the continued good health and well being of President Lee and Madam Kim,
- To an enhanced and expanded Strategic Partnership between India and the Republic of Korea,
- To everlasting friendship between the Indian and the Korean people.

New Delhi, June 28, 2012.

The 2nd India - Republic of Korea (ROK) Foreign Policy and Security Dialogue was held in New Delhi today. The Indian side was led by Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East), Ministry of External Affairs and the Korean side by Mr. Ahn Ho-young, First Vice Minister, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade.

The Dialogue provided an opportunity for the two sides to evaluate the progress in and expansion of the India - ROK Strategic Partnership over the past year. Both sides agreed that the Official Visit to the ROK by the Prime Minister of India earlier in March had provided greater momentum and thrust to their ties.

The two sides reviewed the status of bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and global issues of interest including the situation on the Korean Peninsula. The Minister of National Defence and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of ROK are likely to visit India later this year.

India and the ROK will accelerate work on upgrading the India - ROK Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) with a view to ensuring that it reflects current realities. It was noted with satisfaction that in the two years since the implementation of CEPA, bilateral trade has surged by 70% to US $ 20.5 billion in calendar 2011. The two sides welcomed recent progress in the implementation of the POSCO project in eastern India. In view of the large Korean business presence in Tamil Nadu, the ROK expressed interest in opening a new Consulate General in Chennai.

The Korean side welcomed India’s decision to open a new Defence Attache’s Office at its Embassy in Seoul before the end of the year. Both sides agreed that the joint naval exercises between the Navies of the two countries recently held off the coast of the ROK had proved useful.

Enhancement of cooperation in the field of Science & Technology was also discussed. In this context, the two sides decided to encourage enhanced engagement in civil nuclear energy cooperation as well as space activities including the launch of Korean satellites by India.

The two sides exchanged views on the Asia-Pacific region including enhanced cooperation and coordination between them. They agreed to work closely together in the East Asia Summit as well as in the ASEAN Regional Forum and the ADMM Plus. Both sides held the common view that regional institutions must be open, inclusive and transparent.

The leader of the ROK delegation called on Minister of State for External Affairs Shri E. Ahamed.
The two sides agreed to hold their 3rd Foreign Policy and Security Dialogue in Seoul at a mutually convenient, early date.

364. First Foreign Office Consultations between India and Lao People's Democratic Republic.

Vientiane, May 2, 2012.

India and Lao People's Democratic Republic held their First Foreign Office Consultations in Vientiane on May 2, 2012. The Indian side was led by Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East). The Laotian side was led by Mr. Bouonkeut Sangsomsak, Vice Minister in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Lao PDR.

2. The Foreign Office Consultations reviewed the entire gamut of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction at the strengthening of ties between the two countries, especially cooperation in capacity building and developmental projects. The two sides also exchanged views on regional and global issues, including India's partnership with ASEAN in the context of India's 'Look East' policy, the 20th anniversary of India's dialogue partnership with ASEAN and 10th anniversary of the Summit level partnership with ASEAN and cooperation in regional and multilateral fora.

3. Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East) called on Dr. Thongloun Sisoulith, Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Lao PDR on May 2, 2012 and on the same day met with Mr. Alounkeo Kittikhoun, Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, dealing with ASEAN affairs.
MALAYSIA

365. Third Foreign Office Consultations between India and Malaysia.

The 3rd India-Malaysia Foreign Office Consultations were held today (March 12, 2012) in Putrajaya between Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and Mr. Tan Sri Dato' Mohd. Radzi bin Abdul Rahman, Secretary General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Malaysia. The two Secretaries held detailed discussions on all aspects of our bilateral relationship, and in particular on the follow up to the understanding and agreements reached at the 5th Joint Commission Meeting between the Foreign Ministers of the two countries which was held in Kuala Lumpur last May. They agreed that the India-Malaysia Strategic Partnership is an important component in the foreign policies of both countries and agreed to work together to deepen the partnership through implementation of the vision outlined by the two Prime Ministers in the Joint Statement issued in Kuala Lumpur on the 27th October, 2010. The two secretaries also discussed bilateral collaboration on India-ASEAN commemorative events.

2. Secretary (East) also called on Hon’ble Senator Kohillan Pillay, the Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs of Malaysia.

New Delhi, September 26, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles, Shri Anand Sharma informed here today that India's bilateral trade with Malaysia stood at nearly USD 13 billion last year registering a growth of 34% over the previous year. Addressing the members of India-Malaysia CEO Forum, Shri Sharma said, "while we had set a trade target of US$ 15 billion by 2015, I am confident that we will be able to achieve this target definitely by 2013 if not this year. I will be proposing to my counterpart Minister Mustapa Mohamed that we revise this target upwards."

Recalling his visits to Malaysia in July 2010 and February 2011, Shri Sharma said that he had sought investment from Khazanah Nasional Berhad (Government of Malaysia's strategic investment fund) into Indian infrastructure sector through a collaborative venture with IDFC. Shri Sharma informed that a SPV has been created between Khazanah and a subsidiary of IDFC with an equity base of Rs. 830 crores for financing the national highway construction projects.

The Minister said that during his visits, he identified priority sectors of engagement including Roads & highways, Railways, Airports, IT &ITES, Biotechnology, Tourism, Health Services and JV projects in third countries. Subsequently, the two countries have entered into a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement which was signed in February 2011. The signing of this Agreement has provided considerable momentum to trade and investment on both sides.

Members and the Minister also expressed happiness on the robust investment front. Malaysian investment in India stands at US$ 7.8 billion while Indian investments in Malaysia are in the range of USD 3 billion. Indian investments in Malaysia are growing steadily. At present, there are more than 100 Indian companies including 61 Indian joint ventures operating in Malaysia. In the past three years alone, about USD 2 billion have been invested by our companies making it the 7th largest investor in Malaysia.

The India Malaysia CEO forum is co-chaired by Shri Malvinder Mohan Singh from India and Mr Tan Sri Krishnan Tan Boon Seng from Malaysia.
MONGOLIA

367. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the up-gradation and modernization Atal Bihari Vajpayee Centre for Excellence in Information & Communication Technology.

New Delhi, May 18, 2012.

Ministry of External Affairs has just completed a major upgradation and modernization of the Atal Bihari Vajpayee Centre for Excellence in Information & Communication Technology at Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia. A team of experts from the National Informatics Centre (NIC) recently visited Mongolia for this purpose.

2. It will be recollected that the Centre was established by the Government of India in 2003 with a Grant-in-Aid of USD 1 million. The Centre produces IT experts and helps develop software for Mongolia. It has become an important facilitator of communication between Ulaanbaatar and 21 regional centres. Members of Parliament utilize the Centre extensively to connect with their constituencies.

3. The AB Vajpayee Centre continues to be a shining example of India’s assistance to Mongolia.

368. Press Release on the visit of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Myanmar.

New Delhi, January 24, 2012.

The visiting Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, His Excellency Mr. Wunna Maung Lwin, called on the Prime Minister today. Later, delegation level talks were held between the External Affairs Minister and the Foreign Minister of Myanmar.

The two sides positively assessed the development in bilateral relations after the landmark State Visit of the President of Myanmar to India in October last year. Both sides discussed measures to enhance mutually beneficial cooperation, including in the areas of trade and commerce, security, agriculture, health, culture, science and technology, human resource development and capacity building. The Indian side reiterated its continued support for infrastructure development and cooperation projects for the benefit of the people of Myanmar. The two Foreign Ministers underlined the significance of such projects which could improve connectivity between India and the other countries of South East Asia through Myanmar.

India welcomed the steps being taken by the Government of Myanmar towards national reconciliation and democratic transition. India also expressed its support for Myanmar to continue playing its due role among the comity of nations.

New Delhi, January 25, 2012.

H.E. Mr. U Wunna Maung Lwin, Hon'ble Foreign Minister of Myanmar

Excellency Mr. U Zin Yaw, Ambassador of Myanmar to India

Senior officials of Myanmar and India

Ladies and gentlemen,

It is indeed a great pleasure to be with you today at this session of the Indian Council for World Affairs where His Excellency Mr. Wunna Maung Lwin, Foreign Minister of Myanmar will address us on a most topical issue, not only in India but the world over, relating to Myanmar’s transition to democracy.

Myanmar has undergone remarkable changes since general elections were held in November 2010 and a new civilian Government assumed office in March 2011. The Government led by President U Thein Sein has set a remarkable pace in initiating political reform and undertaking structured negotiations both with the opposition democratic groups and the ethnic ceasefire groups. The Government has shown welcome openness in its dialogue with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the National League for Democracy and in undertaking reform and offering amnesty to political prisoners. These steps have facilitated broader and all-inclusive participation in Myanmar politics. Likewise, the flexibility with which negotiations have been undertaken with the ethnic groups has enabled preliminary peace agreements with some of the most intransigent groups. Along with these steps, the Government has also intensified its engagement with the outside world by stepping up the level and frequency of its global interactions. Our congratulations are also due to the Government of Myanmar for Myanmar’s assumption of the Chair of ASEAN in 2014.

With the clearing of the political arena, the stage is now set for developmental activity in the remote areas of the country where the ethnic groups are in majority. We in India are hopeful that this will also accelerate the process of development in the areas bordering India, thus benefiting people of both countries. We are doing our part in this exercise through the implementation of projects promoting connectivity and development particularly in the Rakhine and Chin States and the Sagaing Division of Myanmar. The Kaladan Multimodal Transit Transport Project, once complete, will undoubtedly transform trade and commerce in the Rakhine and Chin States as well as the North Eastern States of India. It will also boost investment and tourism in these States. Similarly, the Rhi-Tiddim project and other small road projects we hope to undertake in the States of Myanmar bordering India should boost the economy of these States through greater connectivity and development.

The new Myanmar leadership has also emphasized the urgent need for economic and monetary policy reform in order to usher in a facilitatory environment for trade, commerce and investment. Indian industry has been studying prospects in Myanmar - we had a resounding response to the Enterprise India Show held in Yangon in November 2011 and many Indian companies have carried out follow-up visits to ascertain investment and business opportunities in a range of sectors. We are also looking at ways of boosting land, air and sea connectivity between our countries. Once these economic and monetary policy reforms are put in place, I have no doubt that Indian companies will invest in a substantial manner to lasting and mutual benefit. We will also be focusing our energies on the mutually agreed target of doubling of bilateral trade to USD 3 billion by 2015.

In sum, the recent positive developments in Myanmar have infused fresh momentum into the already cordial and friendly ties between India and Myanmar. I have no doubt that as Myanmar continues on the new path charted out by its leaders, the political, economic and commercial relations between our two countries will only deepen further.

I now look forward to hearing from the Hon'ble Foreign Minister his views on the developments that have already taken place in Myanmar and his vision for its future.

Thank you.
370. Press Release regarding provision by India of assistance of agricultural machinery and equipment worth $10 million to Myanmar.

   Yangon, March 9, 2012.

   Government of India had announced an assistance of US $10 million for supply of agricultural machinery and implements to Myanmar.

   2. Following up on this announcement, 224 state-of-the-art tractors, 26 harvesters, 156 power tillers and related agricultural implements have been handed over to the Government of Myanmar. Totally, 300 tractors, 150 combine harvesters, 288 power tillers and 775 implements have been gifted to Myanmar. These are being distributed to farmers in various regions and states as per the priorities of the Myanmar Government.

   3. In a ceremony held in Yangon today, H.E. Mr Ranjan Mathai, Foreign Secretary of India, handed over the machinery to the Ministry of Industry of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar. H.E. U Soe Thane, Minister of Industry of Myanmar, H.E. U Myo Aung, Deputy Minister for Industry, and Ministry officials were present on the occasion. H.E. Dr V.S. Seshadri, Ambassador of India to Myanmar and senior officials from the Ministry of External Affairs of India were also present.

   4. Agriculture is a priority area of Government of India’s assistance programme in Myanmar. Apart from the supply of this machinery and implements, support is being extended by way of education and training in the agricultural as well as livestock and fisheries sector. Setting up of 10 disaster proof rice silos in the cyclone prone delta region was also undertaken under Indian assistance of US $2 million in 2011.

New Delhi, April 3, 2012.

In response to a media question regarding by-elections in Myanmar the Official Spokesperson said that:

"We welcome the successful conduct of by-elections in Myanmar on April 1, 2012. The results that have been officially announced so far show that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi has led the National League of Democracy (NLD) to a landslide victory. The NLD won all 40 of the seats declared so far out of the 45 for which the by elections are being held. We extend our heartiest congratulations to Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the National League for Democracy. These elections represent a major milestone in Myanmar’s transition towards multiparty democracy.

At the invitation of the Government of Myanmar, India had sent senior officials from the Election Commission and journalists from the official media as observers for the by-elections. Our Ambassador to Myanmar also observed the elections in the Yangon region. We congratulate the Myanmar Election Commission and the Government and people of Myanmar on the peaceful and smooth manner in which elections appear to have been held.

Our relationship with Myanmar has been enhanced in recent months by the visits to India of the President of Myanmar, the Foreign Minister, and a high level parliamentary delegation led by the Speaker of the Lower House of Myanmar Parliament. As a close and friendly neighbour, India remains committed to extending all possible assistance and support to the process of national reconciliation and the further strengthening of democracy in Myanmar".
372. Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary on Prime Minister’s State Visit to Myanmar.

New Delhi, May 25, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends. Thank you all for coming for this briefing.

As we have announced, Foreign Secretary will brief us on the Prime Minister's visit to Myanmar. He will begin, as usual, with his opening remarks which will be followed by a question and answer session. For the question and answer session I would request you to initially focus all your questions on Myanmar. After they are finished, Foreign Secretary has agreed that he will take a few more questions on any other topic that you may want to focus on.

I just wanted to make a small announcement. Those of you who may want to know, from today onwards all our briefing sessions would also be web cast live, and they are available on You Tube as soon as you go back. So, if you want to check anything, you are always welcome to do so.

With that, we will begin the interaction. Foreign Secretary.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you.

At the invitation of the President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, the Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh accompanied by Shrimati Gursharan Kaur will pay a state visit to Myanmar from the 27th to the 29th of May. He will be accompanied by Shri S.M. Krishna, Minister of External Affairs, and senior officials. A delegation of Indian CEOs will also visit Myanmar at the same time.

The visit to Myanmar by the Prime Minister will be the first by an Indian Prime Minister in 25 years. The last visit was by the then Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi in December, 1987.

This visit follows the very successful state visit of the President of Myanmar U Thein Sein to India in October last year. The visit comes at a time when Myanmar is undergoing rapid transformation.

The visit of the Prime Minister will enable us to build on the new foundations of our multifaceted relationship which was laid during the state visit of the President last year. And we seek to leverage this to secure a stronger and mutually beneficial relationship with a neighbouring country that is integral to India’s Look East Policy. Considerable progress has been made in implementing decisions and agreements emanating from the President’s visit in October, 2011.

This visit will provide us an opportunity to review that progress and to discuss new initiatives that we would be taking in the furtherance of our relations. The new political environment in Myanmar also provides fresh opportunities to take our bilateral relationship to a new plane.

The visit thus provides an opportunity to enrich the substance of our relations both qualitatively and in scope and lays down a long-term vision and roadmap for a mutually reinforcing bilateral cooperation in a wide range of areas including security, connectivity, infrastructure development, trade and investment promotion, capacity-building and human resource development, culture and people-to-people contacts, and academic exchanges. We hope to sign a number of agreements and MoUs to further strengthen our bilateral cooperation.

Coming to the programme, the main engagements include discussions with President Thein Sein in Nay Pyi Taw on bilateral, regional and other issues of mutual interest, and signing of the various agreements and MoUs, to which I referred. The President will host a banquet in honour of the Prime Minister of India on the 28th.

Apart from the official engagements in Nay Pyi Taw, the Prime Minister will also visit Yangon where he is expected to meet Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, the Chairperson of the National League for Democracy, and other prominent personalities.

During his visit, Prime Minister will also deliver a public address on the theme "India and Myanmar: A Partnership for Progress and Regional Development", at a function organized by the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry, and the Myanmar Development Resource Institute. There will also be interactions between the business delegations of the two sides.

The Prime Minister would also visit the historic Shwedagon Pagoda and the Mazar of the Last Mughal Emperor of India Bahadur Shah Zafar, which is in Yangon. He would also have a separate interaction with the Indian community in Myanmar.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: The floor is now open for questions. All questions focused on Myanmar first, please.

Question: Mr. Mathai, the Prime Minister is going to visit Bahadur Shah Zafar's Mazar. I was there a few years ago and it was in a state of neglect. In any case, what is Bahadur Shah's remains doing in Yangon? The ideal place should be the Red Fort in Delhi. And in November this year, it will be 150 years since he was buried there. When he goes to Myanmar, would the Prime Minister consider taking up this question with the President of Myanmar of bringing the remains to India and burying them in the Red Fort?
Secondly, there are half a million stateless Indians in Myanmar. What is the latest about their fate or status?

Foreign Secretary: First let me say that the Mazar and this site where the tomb of the last Mughal Emperor in Yangon has been substantially upgraded. It has been given a major facelift with our assistance over the last few years. We continue to support the maintenance and the upgradation of the facilities for tourists and visitors to come and pay their respects over there. That process is ongoing and we will continue to contribute to the dignified maintenance of the Mazar.

As to the question of whether the remains should be brought back to India or not, that is not an issue which we have put on the agenda right now. It is an interesting suggestion you make and we will certainly take it on board. It would require a certain amount of consultations here before we actually make the suggestion to the Myanmar side.

As regards the people of Indian origin, you are quite right, this is a very large community. A significant number of them were in fact without any kind of citizenship documents. Over the last six or seven years, a large number have started receiving citizenship certificates. I do not have these statistics immediately. I do not know but we can certainly get them for you before we leave.

Joint Secretary (BSM) (Shri Harsh Vardhan Shringla): Of course, Foreign Secretary has already clarified on the Mazar and Bahadur Shah Zafar's body being interred there. But the fact of the matter is that he is also regarded in many senses as a Sufi saint in Myanmar and he has a large following and there are many issues associated with this.

With regard to stateless persons, as Foreign Secretary has pointed out, a good majority have received identification cards and citizenship certificates. But obviously there is a certain number that have to be accommodated and we are working on that with the Government of Myanmar.

Question: Mr. Mathai, Myanmar has recently, without informing India, entered into an agreement with the Naga outfit NSCN (K). What is India’s reaction to it? Secondly, have we solved the pending issue of Rupee trade? FICCI has also today issued a press release about it. Can you tell us about these two issues?

Foreign Secretary: The agreement with the Naga groups is part of the Government of Myanmar's efforts to sign what they call peace accords with various ethnic groups and communities in its own country. Obviously, any issue involving Indian groups would be discussed with them and we have a forum for discussion of this issue between security officials of both sides, both at the level of the Home Secretary and his counterpart in Myanmar as also between the two Armies. Very recently we have had a meeting of what is called the Regional Border Committee where this subject was discussed.

As regards the issue of Rupee trade, I am not exactly familiar with the issue you are raising. What I do know is that Myanmar has been undertaking a considerable amount of reforms of its own currency management. On the 1st of April, they introduced what is called a Managed Currency Exchange Rate Regime in which they have fixed the rate of the Myanmar Kyat to the dollar as 820 plus or minus two per cent, which is nearly the same as the market rate. Earlier the difference between the official rate and the market rate was extremely exaggerated. So, this is part of their currency reform process which is under way. But we need to look at it.

Harsh, have you heard from FICCI on this?

Joint Secretary (BSM): On the currency issue we had a Banking Delegation that visited Myanmar. I think both sides are now examining the possibility of trading in each other's currency and trading through the ACU mechanism. I think there are some fairly advanced talks going on about how we can address some of the issues that could come in the way of normal trade, and therefore, facilitate greater trade and economic cooperation and particularly the banking channels. I think this is an important area and perhaps during the visit also this would be something that will be discussed.

Foreign Secretary: In general, there has been a problem regarding the lack of banking channels to facilitate direct trade between India and Myanmar. As a result, a lot of our trade used to be actually serviced through banks in third countries. That is the issue which we have been addressing. In that context the concept of the ACU mechanism as a clearing house for dealing with the trade accounts has now been brought on to the agenda. Perhaps that is what the FICCI was referring to. That would amount to the adjustment between the Reserve Bank of India and the Central Bank of Myanmar. But as I said, this is a matter on which discussions have only just been recently initiated; we are not at any conclusion.

Official Spokesperson: Before I give the floor to the next person, could you please limit your questions to one each because there is a large number on my list?

Question: Are we going to sign the Imphal-Mandalay bus link pact during the talks? And in the area of energy cooperation, what new initiatives are on the agenda?

Foreign Secretary: The Imphal-Mandalay bus service was an initiative which we took forward, and it was discussed at considerable length. A delegation from our Ministry of Road Transport and Highways along with other Ministries had in fact visited Myanmar earlier this month. An MoU has been finalized for this bus service. We have been told that the procedures on Myanmar side for getting their Cabinet approval are not quite completed yet. So, we are still awaiting the final outcome of that. In the Joint Statement which we are preparing, we would certainly be highlighting the common interest of both countries to introduce this bus service. It is going to be stated as a matter of something which both Governments intend to take forward. Whether the actual MoU will be ready later today or tomorrow, we will have to await the conclusions of their Cabinet.

The second question was about hydrocarbons. I would just like to say, yes, there is a company called Jubilant Energy which has been awarded an onshore block in Central Myanmar on the basis of a global tender in 2011. We will be emphasizing and flagging our interest in our companies getting more opportunities in Myanmar both onshore where there are some blocks which are going to be put out, as well as offshore which is more gas related.

Question: Mr. Mathai, you must have seen reports for years that Myanmar is secretly pursuing its nuclear programme. What are our concerns or what is our position on that? Will this be taken up at all during this meeting? Also, there have been reports that after the A.Q. Khan network was exposed, Pakistan had sent four of its nuclear scientists to Central Myanmar. Can you just give a brief on that?

Foreign Secretary: I am not familiar with the specific report you are referring to, but what I do know is that in the discussions with the Koreans the Myanmar authorities recently did say that they have no intentions of carrying on any programme in the nuclear field. Other than that, it is not on our bilateral agenda. It is not a subject we have discussed with them. We, of course, have been extending cooperation to Myanmar in other fields of technical cooperation and science and technology. But this particular issue, no, we have not discussed it.

Question: Sir, as you mentioned, there have been several political changes in Myanmar recently. How much does India regard the opening up of Myanmar as a vindication of its own engagement policy?

Foreign Secretary: I think it certainly is a vindication of our policy of engagement that we have been able to keep a good dialogue with the Myanmar Government. The President, when he came to India last October, had in fact spelt out his vision for opening up further, and this has now accelerated after the National League for Democracy participated in the elections which were held on the 1st of April. So, this is a welcome trend. Let me just add here that last December the Speaker of the Myanmar Lower House of Parliament - which is called the Pyithu Hluttaw - Mr. U Shwe Mann came to India after the President's visit and held discussions regarding democratization. The aim of his visit was to study Parliamentary practices and see whether we could cooperate in the field of greater capacity-building, best practices and so on. Those discussions have now concretised in the form of a decision for delegations of the Myanmar Parliament which would include both Parliamentarians and legislative officials to come to India. We are going to get eight batches of ten each starting from July this year. We will be providing that training with the kind courtesy of our Lok Sabha Secretariat and the Rajya Sabha Secretariat.

Question: Sir, what are our concerns about the security matters in the sense that the Myanmar land and other things being used by the insurgents in the North East? What kind of focus would be there so far as the security matters are concerned?

Foreign Secretary: I think the aim would be to strengthen the mechanisms which already exist for security cooperation along our common borders. I mentioned to you the dialogues which we already had, which are at the national level between the Home Secretary and the Deputy Home Minister, between the Army, that is the Myanmar Commander of the North West region and on our side it is the GOC of the 3 Corps based in Dimapur. We have what is called the Regional Border Committee. There are also below that a number of Border Committees between the two armies which do meet. We will be emphasizing once again in our discussions that it is in our common interest to make sure that the border remains peaceful, that the border management is actually taken up on a more professional basis, and that we must ensure that the insurgent groups who had been taking shelter would not be in a position to do so. I think that discussion certainly will be held.

Question: Sir, this is a question regarding the Kaladan Multimodal Project. In 2008 we have signed this project. We believe there is some roadblock. It is not progressing as it should have because some local insurgent groups or some locals in the name of human rights activists are opposing dredging the river or building up this new road. So, what is the status of this project?

Foreign Secretary: This project, in fact, is a project being undertaken in an area where there is very little actual development. So, it has to face a number of logistical and infrastructural challenges. But actually the work on the port and the inland waterway component on the Kaladan river, that is from Sittwe upwards, is in fact progressing as per schedule and we expect it to be completed by June 2013. The road component is the one where, you are quite right, there has been some delay. The real reason for that is the road component now starts further downstream than originally anticipated. Originally the landing point was supposed to be further up the river. Now it has come down a little bit. So, the entire road...
alignment, there is a completely new concept of where the road will start and end. A detailed project report is under way. We expect that in six months we should be able to start work on the road itself. This road will come from that landing point in Myanmar to South Mizoram. Just a few weeks ago, I myself went to Mizoram and a team of officials including the Joint Secretary actually flew down to the point in the border where there is no road at the moment, so that the engineering teams of the two sides discuss how the road coming in from Myanmar and the road from southern Mizoram coming up into the rest of the State would be compatible. So, we expect that road component to be completed by 2014. We think it will be on track.

Question: Sir, one clarification. The Imphal-Mandalay bus service, is this a new project or is it an old project being revived? And where will the Prime Minister meet Aung San Suu Kyi?

Foreign Secretary: It is a completely new project. It is an initiative which we took not so long ago, which is why, as I said, there is a lot of inter-Ministerial coordination which had to be done on both sides. That is why on the Myanmar side there has been some consideration of how to bring this all together. So, it is a completely new project and a new idea.

The Prime Minister will be meeting Aung San Suu Kyi in the Sedona Hotel where he will stay, on the 29th.

Question: When the PM meets Aung San Suu Kyi, will there be an attempt to try to explain to her why we turned our back on democracy in Myanmar for so long?

Foreign Secretary: As soon as his meeting is over I will tell you.

Question: You talked about security committees that we have on the border and that is only limited to information exchange. Are we going to take up coordinated action as well?

Foreign Secretary: First of all, it is not just information exchange. Information exchange is very critical. Particularly if you use the word information in a different sense of intelligence, it is quite critical. Yes. But we also do discuss coordinated patrolling, or at least when information exchange takes particular importance when you know when the other side is taking a certain action so that you make sure that there is no slipping across the border at that particular time. So, that is a kind of coordinated action that we do take from time to time.

Question: You have talked about Kaladan project. Could you give us the status of the other important Indian projects?

Foreign Secretary: Thank you. We are working basically on projects related to connectivity. We have built a road from Tamu to Kaleva some years ago. There is a proposal now that we should extend that road further down to a place called Yargyi. Then this could become a part of what is called the trilateral highway which would link India to Thailand through Myanmar. That is one of the projects which we will be discussing with the Myanmar side. There may be some upgradation of the road which might be required, bridges etc., that we will do. Another set of projects which we will be talking to the Myanmar side about - there is no finality but as soon as the leaders meet and discuss it, we will flesh it out - is for the border regions development projects. We have had such small development projects in other countries and we would support them in these bordering regions also which is building of small bridges, building of schools, building of clinics. That is a second set of projects.

Now if I can leave the border a bit and come to other areas, we are working on a plan to develop the Myanmar Institute of Information Technology (MIIT) and we have had the benefit of the advice of Mr. Ramadorai of TCS in designing this. We will be working on a project for Agricultural Centre and Research Extension (ACARE). That is another one which we are building. We will be setting this up. We plan also separately to set up a Rice Bio Park. These are some of the projects which we will undertake. But the largest I think would be in the general area, which is not a single project but is in the field of capacity-building, training students. We will be expanding our programmes for those. The details will be known as soon as the visit is over.

Question: India’s position regarding Myanmar, the consistent Indian engagement with Myanmar has been vindicated that India has taken an independent decision regarding the engagement with the junta of Myanmar. But people start drawing parallels that if India’s foreign policy could succeed in Myanmar, cannot it succeed in Iran also?

Foreign Secretary: I will stick with Myanmar, it’s easy.

I think we always approached the issue of Myanmar keeping in mind that it is a neighbour. When you are a neighbouring country you do not have the choice of a policy and engagement. You remain engaged irrespective of the situation. We have also always felt that Myanmar is a country with whom we have traditionally had good relations, and we have also felt that the Myanmar Governments right through their history have wanted to maintain a friendly relationship with India. It goes back to the time when Mr. Nehru and Aung San had their exchanges. Even before Independence Aung San stopped in Delhi on the way to the UK when the Independence negotiations were under way. Subsequently with Prime Minister U Nu and Mr. Nehru this relationship was maintained. With General Ne Win, even after the difficulties in the mid 1960s he paid a number of visits to India, maintained close relations with the Government of Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
So, this relationship has continued through history. So, this is a matter on which we were very consistent. We may have had differences but we wanted always to be able to continue a dialogue as friendly, constructive partners. I think that has been vindicated.

Question: Sir, these road projects, do they also include any work on the Stilwell road?

Foreign Secretary: As of now, no.

Question: Any reason why?

Foreign Secretary: Because we are building the roads where the priorities of Myanmar and India both are.

Question: In terms of the counter-insurgency training, India of course had offered seats for training in NDA, and I believe Myanmar also wanted some seats in the Jungle Warfare Centre at Mizoram. Can you just give us an idea about the kind of strength of the soldiers who might already be on board with the counter-insurgency training or what are we looking at?

Foreign Secretary: I do not have the details. We will come back to you on that specifically. But whenever they put forward a request for training we have generally accommodated it. So, I do not think there would be anything pending from our side.

Question: Just how many border trading points exist? Are there plans to open new ones?

Joint Secretary (BSM): Currently there are two border points - one of course is Moreh-Tamu, and the other is Rhi-Zowkhatar in Mizoram. There are plans. We are talking about opening up border haats that would help border communities in trading as well as in increasing their own economic activity, and that is under active examination.

Question: Sir, other than the training aspect, is there any idea of sort of defence collaboration with Myanmar or supplying them with weaponry or any such thing to assist us along the borders and so on?

Foreign Secretary: Training is part of the defence cooperation and it is a part of our capacity-building in Myanmar, and that continues. The supply of some military equipment has been going on, which is not related to the political calendar. That is just continuing at its own level. That is not related to this visit. But yes, there is some military equipment being supplied.

Question: Could you tell me why Prime Minister will meet Aung San Suu Kyi in his hotel instead of visiting her residence?
Foreign Secretary: That was decided by the protocol teams who worked together.

Question: Sir, India has helped in the restoration of the Ananda temple in Myanmar. Is there any cultural cooperation of that kind which will be followed up?

Foreign Secretary: Thank you for mentioning it and I apologise for not mentioning it among the projects which I was asked.

Yes, our Archaeological Survey of India is in fact assisting with the renovation of the Ananda Temple in Bagan. We are going to sign a cultural exchange programme which has a number of components for further cultural cooperation. We are also thinking of moving a little outside the mainstream of the typical cultural programmes to have engagement with the think tanks of Myanmar both with our Indian Council of World Affairs and the IDSA. So, in a number of fields we will be taking initiatives in the field of culture.

Question: Sir, you have said there will be a high-powered delegation of CEOs that will accompany the PM’s delegation. I would like to know what the specific areas are in which Myanmar is seeking investments from India, and what are the specific areas in which India wants to invest in Myanmar?

Foreign Secretary: Myanmar economy has so much potential for development that we feel the scope for cooperation is in virtually all fields of industry - agro-based industries, resource-based industries, information technology, communications, hydrocarbons, transport. Let me just tell you some of the CEOs who will be visiting Myanmar. They include the Chairman of Bharti Enterprises Mr. Sunil Bharti Mittal; Mr. Rajyavardhan Kanoria, Chairman and Managing Director of Kanoria Chemicals; Mr. Ravi Ruia, Vice-Chairman of the Essar Group; Mr. T.C.A. Ranganathan, Chairman and Managing Director of Export-Import Bank; Mr. Naveen Jindal, Jindal Steel Power; Mr. Hari Bhartia of Jindal which I mentioned earlier in the context of oil and gas; Mr. Ajay Khandelwal also of Jindal Energy; Mr. Sanjay Kirloskar of the Kirloskar Brothers who have been working on pumps and other things like that; Mr. Atul Punj, Chairman of Punj Lloyd, which is in fact undertaking work on a pipeline being built from Myanmar to China; Mr. Shiv Khemka of the Sun Group; Mr. Muthuraman, Chairman of Tata International; Mr. Venu Srinivasan of TVS Motor; Mr. Ravi Kant Ailawadi of Vihaan Networks Limited. Vihaan Networks Limited is doing solar powered transmission towers for the telecom industry. They have already won a contract of five million from the postal department of Myanmar and there is potential for more. This is the list of the delegation, I would say that in almost all fields of industry.

When I went there earlier in March we handed over some agricultural equipment which we have donated. The Minister for Industry told us that there is huge scope for the export of Indian tractors, Indian power tillers, Indian agricultural machinery because Myanmar agriculture is in fact in a state of development and modernization. One of the areas where we expect to be involved is in upgradation of their irrigation systems also, through a line of credit which we had announced last October.

In another sense, just to give you some perspective on the importance of Myanmar's agricultural potential, we buy an enormous quantity of pulses from Myanmar. In fact, it is I think item No.1 or No.2 among the suppliers of this particular commodity to India. As I said, oil and gas they have already proven results. But there are a large number of other minerals in which Myanmar is believed to be extremely rich. We are happy to share our experience and help Myanmar develop them. I think from their perspective they are already selling three times as much as they buy. So, they have not prioritized. The $ 1.2 billion trade is $900 million coming to India and $300 million going from India. So, this is obviously something which the Myanmar side is quite happy with. But they do see prospects of greater exchanges with India particularly along, as I said, in the North East, in the border regions as well as in all these other areas where we have an interest.

Official Spokesperson: We have completed most of the questions on Myanmar. Foreign Secretary has to leave in a few minutes but he has agreed to respond to a few questions on issues other than Myanmar.

Question: Sir, can you give us the status of the missing Indian trader in China?

Foreign Secretary: I was told he is back in India or he should be landing any time now.

Question: Two basic questions on Nepal. How does India see Nepal's current political developments? Nepali parties have just three days to promulgate a new Constitution. If they fail, there are fears of a serious crisis in Nepal. Is India concerned? Though it is an internal matter of Nepal, being a friendly neighbouring country which has a great influence on Nepal polity, do you see some India's role in helping Nepal to avert this crisis?

Foreign Secretary: We are obviously watching the situation with great interest and we receive regular reports on the developments. But India firmly believes that the Constitution-making process for the establishment of a stable, democratic and prosperous Nepal must remain Nepali-led and Nepali-driven. We wish the parties well in the process of completing the negotiations in the two days which are remaining, and we will extend support for the success of the political process in accordance with the wishes of the people of Nepal. For the moment, that is all we are saying.

Question: There are reports from Islamabad that the visa relaxation agreement has been put on hold. Do you have any information on this?
Foreign Secretary: The talks between our Home Secretary and the Pakistan Interior Secretary are still under way. We had gone there prepared to sign this agreement in accordance with what had been decided when President Zardari and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had met on the 8th of April. We have also received this report that the Pakistani side referred to some delays in their procedures as also the desire of their Interior Minister to have a political level participation at the signing. That is where the situation is. But we had gone there fully prepared to sign this agreement.

Question: There were some reports about the invitation to the Home Minister and because he put on hold that invitation they were not willing to sign the visa agreement.

Foreign Secretary: He had invited our Home Minister to visit Pakistan, and our Home Minister had replied saying that he would come as soon as it was convenient. But the visa agreement had to go ahead because it was ready in any case. It had been negotiated and finalized. And both sides attach great importance to having this visa agreement signed. So, we had gone there fully prepared to sign it.

Question: Sir, there are reports that Iran's Foreign Minister Mr. Salehi is visiting India next week. Just wanted to check on his agenda and the dates of visit.

Foreign Secretary: Mr. Salehi is scheduled to come here on the 31st of May. He is coming as a Special Envoy of President Ahmadinejad to deliver a personal invitation to the Prime Minister to attend the Non-Aligned Summit which will take place in the end of August in Tehran. On the 31st he will have a meeting over lunch with the External Affairs Minister. On the 1st morning he will meet the Prime Minister and then he is leaving immediately thereafter.

Question: Day before yesterday India signed the TAPI agreement. Interestingly it was signed by the Chairperson of GAIL, and though the Oil Minister was present, his signature was not there. So, there are two concerns. The pipeline passes through areas which could be proven hostile to India in some future time. The details are very hazy right now about the actual agreement signed. Can you share with us some details?

Foreign Secretary: What has been signed is a gas sales and purchase agreement, which is why it is signed by the gas companies between themselves. It is a decision on the willingness to purchase gas, and the arrangements for its transit fees and so on. During the course of the negotiations, while discussing this project, the Afghan authorities, the Turkmen authorities and the Pakistani authorities had all addressed this issue of security, and it has been decided jointly by all the countries to go ahead on the basis of what has been decided so far.
As regards the details of the project, we will be happy to give it to you as soon as our team comes back.

Question: Sir, first of all there appears to be continuing support to what remains of the Khalistan militancy because there just appears to be evidence from people here from the Khalistan Zindabad Force who have been arrested, that they were trained in Lahore. Now you will have continuing meetings with your counterparts from across the border. Are you going to bring this up in subsequent meetings? And is there any additional evidence that you are going to give Pakistan on Hafiz Saeed?

Foreign Secretary: The Home Secretaries’ discussions have almost concluded and certainly the issues both relating to continuing support to any militants as well as the further evidence on Saeed were actually discussed between the two sides.

Question: Sir, we have been following the story of Kairi Shepherd, a thirty year old woman who was adopted when she was three months old. Just wanted to know what the Government is contemplating on doing in this case. Has our Consul gotten in touch with Kairi? Also, the US Emigration Department Spokesperson has said that the ball is in India’s court and that unless and until travel documents are issued by India, she cannot really be sent to India.

Foreign Secretary: I will start with a counter question. Have you been able to speak to her? A number of attempts were made in the United States and we were told that some third parties had been in fact passing on the messages to you. So, if you have, please do give us the telephone number on which you contacted her.

Question: ... (Inaudible)...

Foreign Secretary: We did make a number of efforts through our Consulate in San Francisco. But we do not wish to comment on the internal judicial processes of other countries. But certainly as EAM has already said it is a tragic humanitarian case which should be treated by the United States where she is resident, with utmost compassion and the spirit of natural justice. If the reports which were mentioned in the media are true, deportation of a person with serious illnesses and who knows no home outside the US would compound the tragedy further.

Let me just add here that our Consul-General in San Francisco has been making strenuous efforts to ascertain the full facts of the case. He has written to the relevant US authorities, that is the State Department’s Office of Foreign Missions as well as the Immigration and Customs Enforcement Authorities, for information relating to the case. Neither of these Departments has been able to give him any information so far, nor have they made any request to our side.
Question: Sir, just a correction. We could not speak to her, we could not get in touch with her. It was just a statement.

Foreign Secretary: Thank you for that correction because your colleague was very insistent that it was the other way round.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much. With that we come to the end of this interaction.
373. Statement by Prime Minister prior to his departure for Myanmar.

New Delhi, May 27, 2012.

I will be visiting Myanmar from 27 to 29 May 2012 at the invitation of the President of Myanmar, His Excellency U Thein Sein.

This will be my first visit to Myanmar. It will also be the first visit by an Indian Prime Minister to Myanmar after a gap of 25 years.

India attaches the highest importance to its relations with Myanmar, which is a close friend and neighbour. Recent years have witnessed significant strengthening and expansion of our bilateral relations. My visit to Myanmar will provide an opportunity to review the progress in the implementation of decisions taken during the highly successful State Visit of the President of Myanmar to India in October last year. We will also consider new initiatives and define a roadmap for the further development of our cooperation in the years ahead.

Stronger trade and investment links, development of border areas, improving connectivity between our two countries and building capacity and human resources are areas that I hope to focus on during my visit. We also hope to sign a number of Agreements/MOUs to further strengthen our bilateral cooperation in these areas, besides promoting people-to-people contacts.

India welcomes Myanmar's transition to democratic governance and the steps taken by the Government of Myanmar towards a more broad based and inclusive reconciliation process. We stand ready to share our democratic experiences with Myanmar.

In Yangon, I will have an opportunity to meet Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. I also look forward to addressing a cross-section of Myanmar society and interact with the Indian and Indian-origin community.

Our shared history and culture provides a strong basis for the enhancement of contacts between the people of our two countries. I look forward to visiting the historic Shwedagon Pagoda, a testament to 2600 years of Buddhist heritage, and the Mazar of the last Emperor of India, Bahadur Shah Zafar, in Yangon.

We remain committed to a close, cooperative and mutually beneficial partnership with the Government and people of Myanmar.

Joint Statement issued at the end of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh’s visit to Myanmar.

1. The Prime Minister of the Republic of India, Dr Manmohan Singh, is paying a State visit to the Republic of the Union of Myanmar from May 27 to 29, 2012 at the invitation of the President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, U Thein Sein. He is accompanied by his wife Shrimati Gursharan Kaur.

2. The Prime Minister was accorded a ceremonial welcome in Nay Pyi Taw and the President of Myanmar hosted a Banquet in his honour.

3. The visit of the Prime Minister the first after 25 years is a historic milestone in the relations between India and Myanmar.

4. The two leaders held a restricted meeting, followed by delegation level talks on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. The talks were held in a warm, cordial and constructive atmosphere reflecting the close and friendly relations between the two neighbouring countries and peoples.

5. During the official talks, the Prime Minister of India was assisted by the External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna, National Security Adviser Shri S Menon, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister Shri Pulok Chatterji, Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai, Ambassador of India to Myanmar Dr V.S. Seshadri and other senior officials.

6. The President of Myanmar was assisted by U Wunna Maung Lwin, Union Minister for Foreign Affairs and other Union Ministers and the Myanmar Ambassador to India U Zin Zaw and Senior Government Officials.

7. The Prime Minister of India and the President of Myanmar comprehensively reviewed the multifaceted bilateral relationship and took stock of developments since the very successful State visit of President U Thein Sein to India in October 2011. They expressed satisfaction at the ongoing official exchanges and the growing economic, trade and cultural ties, as well as people-to-people exchanges.

8. The two leaders agreed on a vision for the future in the pursuit of the common good - bilaterally, regionally and globally. They agreed to cooperate in the areas such as border area development, transportation, connectivity, agriculture, trade and investment, promotion of friendly exchanges and human resource development. They recognized that peace and stability in the region is necessary for development and well-being of the people of their respective countries. In this context, they emphasized the importance of close cooperation between India and Myanmar and the need to effectively harness their respective resources for the good of the peoples of the two countries.
9. The Prime Minister of India congratulated the President of Myanmar on the path breaking reform measures taken by the Government of Myanmar towards greater democratisation and national reconciliation. He commended the on-going efforts at political, economic and social reform, which included negotiation of preliminary peace agreements with several ethnic groups as well as dialogue with various democratic political parties including the National League for Democracy led by Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. He also expressed appreciation for the free, fair and peaceful conduct of the recent by-elections.

10. The Prime Minister of India reiterated India's readiness to extend all necessary assistance in accelerating the country's democratic transition and developing the capacity of democratic institutions such as the Parliament, National Human Rights Commission and the Media. Recalling the very successful visit of a Parliamentary delegation led by Thura U Shwe Mann, Speaker of Pyithu Hluttaw, to India in December 2011, the Prime Minister conveyed India's readiness to undertake training programmes for Myanmar Parliamentarians and staff.

11. The following instruments for enhancing bilateral cooperation were signed during the visit:

(i) Memorandum of Understanding regarding US$ 500 million Line of Credit
(ii) Air Services Agreement between India and Myanmar
(iii) Memorandum of Understanding on the India-Myanmar Border Area Development
(iv) Memorandum of Understanding on Establishment of Joint Trade and Investment Forum
(v) Memorandum of Understanding on the Establishment of the Advance Centre for Agriculture Research and Education (ACARE)
(vi) Memorandum of Understanding on Establishment of Rice Bio Park at the Department of Agricultural Research in Nay Pyi Taw
(vii) Memorandum of Understanding towards setting up of Myanmar Institute of Information Technology
(viii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation between Dagon University and Calcutta University
(ix) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation between Myanmar Institute of Strategic and International Studies and Indian Council of World Affairs.
(x) Agreement on Cooperation between Myanmar Institute of Strategic and
12. The two leaders underscored that bilateral relations between India and Myanmar are rooted in shared history and geography, culture and civilization. Welcoming that the range and frequency of engagement between the two countries had intensified significantly since Myanmar’s transition towards a more democratic form of Government in March 2011, they committed to further enhancing these exchanges so as to take bilateral cooperation to a higher level. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the recent successful visits from Myanmar including that of the Foreign Minister of Myanmar U Wunna Maung Lwin in January 2012; the Minister of Construction of Myanmar U Khin Maung Myint in February 2012; and from India including the visit of the Minister for Water Resources and Parliamentary Affairs of India Mr. P.K. Bansal to Myanmar in February 2012. The two sides agreed to continue with the frequent exchanges of visits at the leadership level.

13. Both leaders reaffirmed their shared commitment to fight the scourge of terrorism and insurgent activity in all its forms and manifestations. Both of them emphasized the need for enhanced cooperation between security forces and border guarding agencies for securing peace, security and stability in the border areas, which was crucial for overall development. In this context, the two leaders welcomed the holding of the first meeting of the bilateral Regional Border Committee whose deliberations were useful in promoting such cooperation and understanding for better border management. Both leaders reiterated the assurance that territories of either country would not be allowed to be used for activities inimical to the other, including for training, sanctuary and other operations by terrorist and insurgent organisations and their operatives.

14. Both leaders also alluded to the importance of sound border management as an intrinsic part of maintaining border security. In this context, they directed that the respective Survey Departments should inspect and maintain boundary pillars in a systematic manner. They also directed the respective Heads of Survey Department to finalise dates for an early joint inspection of the sectors jointly identified at the 17th National Level Meeting.

Connectivity

15. The two leaders emphasised the importance of enhancing connectivity between the two countries as a means of promoting commercial, cultural, touristic and other exchanges between the peoples of the two countries. They expressed satisfaction at the steady progress being made on the Kaladan Multi-modal Transit Transport Project. They welcomed the finalisation of the site of the Land
Customs Station at Zorinpui (Mizoram) following joint inspection by Indian and Myanmar delegations in April 2012. It was noted that the project would enhance bilateral trade, people to people contact and contribute to the development and prosperity of the people living in the 'land locked' North Eastern region of India.

16. The Prime Minister of India announced that India would undertake the task of repair/ upgradation of 71 bridges on the Tamu- Kalewa friendship Road. The two leaders decided that India would undertake the upgradation of the Kalewa-Yargyi road segment to highway standard while Myanmar would undertake that of upgradation of the Yargyi-Monywa stretch to highway standard by 2016. This project would help in establishing trilateral connectivity from Moreh in India to Mae Sot in Thailand via Myanmar. The two leaders welcomed the revival of the Joint Task Force on the Trilateral Highway between India-Myanmar-Thailand. It was agreed that efforts would be made to establish seamless trilateral connectivity by 2016.

17. Taking into account the importance of enabling people-to-people contacts, the two sides agreed to launch a trans-border bus service from Imphal, India to Mandalay. The two leaders directed the concerned officials from both sides to finalise all modalities to enable its early operationalisation.

18. They also welcomed the signing of the new Air Service agreement which would enhance direct air connectivity and facilitate easy business interaction, tourism and people-to people exchanges.

19. The two leaders decided to constitute a Joint Working Group to determine the technical and commercial feasibility of cross-border rail links and the commercial feasibility of direct shipping links between the two countries.

20. The two sides also discussed the possibility of Indian participation in development of key infrastructure projects, like Dawei port in Myanmar.

Development Cooperation

21. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the growing dimension of development cooperation between the two countries which is being financed under grants and concessional loans amounting to US$ 1.2 billion till date. Taking stock of ongoing projects in the areas of infrastructure, agriculture, human resource development, industrial development, power, health etc., the two leaders agreed to identify more projects of benefit to the people of Myanmar in future.

22. Both leaders welcomed the signing of the MoU on the US $ 500 million Line of Credit extended by India to the Government of Myanmar which would pave the way for its early operationalisation. The Line of Credit will be utilised in the infrastructure development projects, including in the fields of Agriculture and Irrigation, Rail Transportation, and Electric Power in Myanmar.
Identifying the need for special focus on the development and prosperity of the people in bordering areas, the two leaders agreed to cooperate to bring about overall socio-economic development in the border areas by undertaking both infrastructure development and micro-economic projects, including upgradation of roads and construction of schools, health centres, bridges, agriculture and related training activities in the area in accordance with the MoU on India-Myanmar Border Area Development that was signed during the visit. The President of Myanmar also welcomed India's offer of assistance in production of large Cardamom in the Naga Self Administered zone.

Expressing their commitment to enhance cooperation in Science & Technology, the two leaders noted with satisfaction that the first meeting of the India-Myanmar Joint Working Group on Science and Technology was held on April 3, 2012. The Joint Working Group has identified some priority areas for future cooperation in the fields of agricultural biotechnology, post harvest technology, medical biotechnology, medical research and renewable energy. The two leaders welcomed these decisions and agreed that Myanmar would prepare specific proposals on some of its priority projects so that they can be taken forward for implementation.

Under a MoU signed during the visit, the two leaders decided to set up the Myanmar Institute of Information Technology with financial and technical assistance from India. The Indian Prime Minister announced continued technical and financial support for the India-Myanmar Centre for Enhancement of IT Skills in Yangon for a further 5 year period when it will also undergo a technology upgrade. The Indian Prime Minister announced a Fellowship for Myanmar Researchers to work in Indian Universities and Research Institutions, under which 10 slots would be allocated every year. Each Fellowship would be for 4-6 months duration in the areas of Atmospheric and Earth Sciences, Chemical Sciences, Engineering Sciences, Life Sciences, Medical Sciences, Mathematical and Computational Sciences and Physical Sciences.

The Prime Minister of India announced that in keeping with India's commitment to developing human resource capacity in Myanmar, the existing number of training slots for Myanmar, including under the Indian Economic and Technical Cooperation (ITEC) Programme, would be doubled from the current 250 to 500. The President of Myanmar welcomed this significant gesture.

The Myanmar President thanked the Indian side for its offer to train Myanmar diplomats in conference management and for the assistance in setting up language laboratories and conference rooms in Nay Pyi Taw and Yangon and e-research centre in Nay Pyi Taw for the Ministry of Foreign affairs.

The two sides also expressed their commitment to enhance cooperation in the area of Agriculture. The President of Myanmar thanked India for the agricultural machinery that had been gifted to Myanmar under a grant of US$ 10 million and conveyed that the machinery had been distributed to various locations of Myanmar and is being used for the benefit of Myanmar's farming community.

Under the MoU signed during the visit, the two leaders decided to establish the Advanced Centre for Agricultural Research and Education as a Centre for Excellence using cutting edge technology along with traditional knowledge and ecological conservation with financial and technical assistance from India. They also agreed to set up a Rice Bio Park within the Department of Agricultural Research, Yezin in Nay Pyi Taw in order to demonstrate available techniques of sustainable rice biomass utilisation. These two institutions together will provide technological and research inputs to the Myanmar farming, academic and business communities. The President of Myanmar also thanked the Prime Minister for India's support to the construction of a modern cyclone-proof rice silo within the Model Integrated Farm at Nay Pyi Taw.

29. The Myanmar side requested for India's assistance in arranging training programmes/ fellowships in the areas of dairy development, cattle breeding, vaccine technology and assistance in setting up a milk and milk product factory in Shan State. The Indian side agreed to consider the proposal favourably.

Trade and Investment

30. Alluding to the mutually agreed target of doubling the bilateral trade by 2015, both leaders emphasized that there is considerable untapped potential for greater trade and urged the business community to capitalize on this potential. Investments by Indian companies in areas like ports, highways, oil & gas, plantation, manufacturing, hospitality and ICT would be specifically encouraged. In this context, the two leaders underscored the importance of the newly created Trade and Investment Forum in enabling timely and accurate exchange of information and ideas.

31. They assured that both Governments would work to identify and remove various impediments to bilateral trade. In this context, they welcomed the establishment of a representative office of the United Bank of India in Yangon as a first step in facilitating business-friendly banking transactions between the two countries. The Myanmar side welcomed the proposals for the training of Myanmar officials in the Banking sector by Indian banks and for cooperation in the Agriculture Banking sector. Considering the vast potential for promoting trade between the two countries, both sides agreed that the Reserve Bank of India would sign an MoU with the Central Bank of Myanmar on currency arrangements between India and Myanmar in the near future. Further, the Reserve Bank of India would also conclude an MoU with the Central Bank of Myanmar to serve as a platform for an exchange of views on issues of mutual interest. The two sides agreed upon sharing of banking experiences and technical know-how from State Bank of India or any other bank as mutually agreed.

32. Both leaders urged the business community to enthusiastically participate in each other's trade fairs and also to share information on the prevailing trade and investment policies through organization of seminars and business related events in specific sectors of mutual interest. In this context, they welcomed the organization of the first Enterprise India Show in Yangon in November 2011 by CII and UMFFCCI and the decision taken to make it an annual event.

33. Taking into account the needs of communities residing near the border, the two leaders welcomed the decision to set up border haats along the border and the MOU agreed for this purpose. They also noted that the decision to upgrade banking infrastructure at border trade points would also facilitate greater trade between people living in these areas.

34. The two leaders directed that a bilateral Border Trade Committee should be set up to implement the earlier decision that meetings would be held regularly between the border trade officials and businessmen in Tamu-Moreh and Rhi-Zowkhathar.

Power and Energy

35. The two leaders emphasised the need for closer cooperation to further energy security. In this context, they welcomed the signing of the Production Sharing Contract between the Government of Myanmar and the Jubilant Energy of India. They encouraged investment by Indian companies in Myanmar oil and gas sector, including in available blocks that are being offered for investment which have good prospects. They also agreed to encourage investment by Indian companies in downstream projects in the petroleum industry.

36. The Myanmar President expressed his appreciation to India for undertaking the preparation of Detailed Project Reports of the Tamanthi and Shwezaye hydropower projects. Both leaders directed their respective officials to study the contents of the DPRs and finalise the future course of action, taking into account technical, commercial and socio-environmental considerations.

Culture and People to People Exchanges

37. The two leaders emphasized the centrality of culture in further deepening the close bonds between the peoples of India and Myanmar and expressed satisfaction with the signature of the Cultural Exchange Programme (CEP) for the period 2012-2015. It was noted that the CEP would also promote cultural exchanges between the North Eastern States of India and the bordering areas of Myanmar.

38. They also welcomed the preparations that have been made towards

39. The Myanmar side thanked India for its decision to gift a 16 feet sandstone replica of the Sarnath Buddha later in the year that will be installed in the precincts of the Shwedagon Pagoda. A smaller replica will be unveiled by the Prime Minister during his visit. The Myanmar side also conveyed its appreciation to India for the facilities and courtesies being extended to Myanmar pilgrims visiting India.

40. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the ongoing pace of work on the project for conservation and restoration of the Ananda Temple in Bagan, Myanmar by the Archaeological Survey of India which is expected to be completed over the next 2 years.

41. The two leaders also welcomed the formalization of contacts between Indian and Myanmar think tanks and academic institutions and urged scholars to participate actively and exchange views in academic events being held in either country.

42. The President of Myanmar welcomed the announcement made by the Prime Minister regarding the Government of India's support for setting up a school with technical assistance from India.

Regional and Multilateral

43. The two leaders discussed a broad range of regional and international issues of mutual interest. They agreed to continue their coordination on issues of common interest on the international agenda.

44. The two leaders emphasized the importance of close coordination towards the cause of regional cooperation. The Prime Minister of India extended his good wishes to Myanmar for a successful term as BIMSTEC Chair, including its proposal to host the next BIMSTEC Summit meeting. The two leaders looked forward to further intensification of ASEAN-India co-operation under Myanmar's chairmanship of ASEAN in 2014. The Prime Minister of India emphasised that Myanmar holds a significant place both in India's Look East Policy and in its collaboration with ASEAN countries under the Initiative for ASEAN Integration (IAI). The two leaders agreed to cooperate closely on activities related to the forthcoming ASEAN-India Commemorative Summit.

45. The Prime Minister of India thanked the President of Myanmar for the warm and gracious hospitality extended to him and the members of his delegation during their stay in Myanmar.
46. The Prime Minister invited the President of Myanmar to visit India on mutually convenient dates which will be decided through diplomatic channels. The President of Myanmar accepted the invitation.
375. Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary in Nay Pyi Taw on Prime Minister’s ongoing visit to Myanmar.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends and thank you very much for coming.

Foreign Secretary will make his opening remarks and then the floor will be open to any of you who may like to ask questions. Over to Foreign Secretary.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you.

I have not got a formal prepared statement. Akbar will be distributing the Joint Statement which the two Governments are issuing on the conclusion of this part of the programme of PM’s visit.

This morning, you might say, the official part of the programme starting in Nay Pyi Taw began with a ceremonial welcome. After that there was a Restricted Meeting between PM and President of Myanmar along with some of the Ministers and officials. This was followed by a meeting in larger format with a larger number of Ministers and officials on both sides. The discussions were an occasion for a comprehensive review of bilateral relations. What you will find in the Joint Statement is a plan of action for cooperation in all areas of our bilateral relations. I would mention the language we have used.

The two leaders agreed on a vision for the future in the pursuit of the common good - bilaterally, regionally and globally. They agreed to cooperate in the areas such as border area development, transportation, connectivity, agriculture, trade and investment, promotion of friendly exchanges and human resource development. They recognized that peace and stability in the region is necessary for the development and well-being of the people of their respective countries. In this context, they emphasized the importance of close cooperation between India and Myanmar.

The Prime Minister of India congratulated the President of Myanmar on the path-breaking reform measures taken by the Government of Myanmar towards greater democratisation and national reconciliation. He commended the ongoing efforts at political, economic and social reform, which included negotiation of preliminary peace agreements with several ethnic groups as well as dialogue with various democratic political parties including the National League for Democracy.

The Prime Minister then reiterated India’s readiness to extend all necessary assistance in this process. He recalled the successful visit of a Parliamentary Delegation led by the Speaker of India in December 2011, and India's readiness to undertake training programmes for Myanmar Parliamentarians and staff. I referred to that in my briefing before we came.

We had a number of agreements and memoranda of understanding which were concluded to enhance bilateral cooperation. I will list them. There was a Memorandum of Understanding regarding the operationalisation of the US $500 million Line of Credit. There was a Memorandum of Understanding on the Air Services Agreement between India and Myanmar. There was a Memorandum of Understanding on India-Myanmar Border Area Development. There was a Memorandum of Understanding on the Establishment of a Joint Trade and Investment Forum. There was an MoU on the establishment of the Advanced Centre for Agricultural Research and Education (ACARE). There was an MoU for establishment of a Rice Bio Park at the Model Integrated Farm here in Nay Pyi Taw, I do not know if any of you had time to go and visit it. There was an MoU on the setting up of Myanmar Institute of Information Technology. There was an MoU on cooperation between Kolkata University and Dagon University, which is also in Yangon. There was an MoU on cooperation between the Myanmar Institute of Strategic and International Studies and our ICWA. There was an agreement on cooperation between the Myanmar Institute of Strategic and International Studies and our IDSA. There was a cultural exchange programme for the period 2012 to 1215. And there was an MoU on establishment of Border Haats.

Among the subjects discussed, of particular importance was the security and counterterrorism. Both leaders reaffirmed their commitment to fight the scourge of terrorism and insurgent activity in all its forms and manifestations. They also agreed on linking the subject of security with border areas development and, as the Joint Statement says, identifying the need for special focus on the development and prosperity of people in the bordering areas. The two leaders agreed to cooperate by bringing about overall socioeconomic development in the border areas by undertaking both their infrastructure development as well as micro-economic projects, including upgradation of roads, construction of schools, health centres, bridges, agriculture, etc.

The second broad theme of the discussions was connectivity. Here I will refer to four or five different aspects of this broad issue of connectivity. The first was, we had referred to it before coming here, the Kaladan project which is an ongoing project. Both sides emphasized the importance of enhancing connectivity. And we welcome the finalization of the site of the Land Customs Station which will be on the Mizoram-Myanmar border. This project, once it is completed, would enhance bilateral trade, people-to-people contact, and contribute to the development and prosperity of the people living in that part of the Northeastern region which is somewhat land-locked.
There was also a reference to the upgradation of the Tamu-Kaleva-Yargyi road which will be part of the trilateral highway. In this context India is to undertake the repair and upgradation of 71 bridges on the Tamu-Kaleva Friendship Road which we had built some years earlier. The road segment itself would be brought up to highway standard on this stretch up to Yargyi. Beyond Yargyi the Myanmar side would undertake the upgradation of the road to a highway capacity. This will then establish connectivity from Moreh in India to Mae Sot in Thailand. Tentatively it is agreed that the trilateral connectivity should be completed by 2016, the target date.

There was also an agreement that we should launch a trans-border bus service from Imphal to Mandalay. The two leaders directed the concerned officials from both sides to finalize the modalities for its early operationalisation.

We are setting up a Joint Working Group to determine the technical and commercial feasibility of cross-border rail links as well as the feasibility of direct shipping links. This is a matter on which our Shipping Ministry and the shipping companies would get together with their Myanmar counterparts to consider whether there is feasibility for starting such a service.

Immediately there is a welcome of the new Air Services Agreement which is expected to enhance direct air connectivity and thus facilitate easy business interaction, tourism, and people-to-people exchanges.

The third broad theme, if I could mention, would be development cooperation. Here we will start with the Line of Credit. Both leaders, as I said, welcomed the signing of the 500 dollar Line of Credit. We had actually announced this last October. And then we had a further discussion and the Myanmar side wanted a specific template of how this would be actually operationalised. This has been completed. The Line of Credit will be utilized for infrastructure development projects including in the field of agriculture and irrigation. That is the first priority. The second will be rail transportation and electric power, but there would be other priorities which the Myanmar Government will decide.

In addition to this, I could mention the cooperation in the field of science and technology. The Indo-Myanmar Joint Working Group on Science and Technology was held in April, and they have identified priority areas such as agricultural biotech, post-harvest technology, biotechnology, medical research and renewable energy. The two leaders agreed that these decisions now must be taken forward.

One of the MoUs we signed was for setting up the Myanmar Institute of Information Technology. This will come up with financial and technical assistance from India. PM announced continued technical and financial support for the enhancement of IT skills over the next five years. The PM also announced fellowships for Myanmar researchers who work in Indian universities and research institutions, with ten slots being allocated every year. These fellowships would be in areas such as atmospheric and earth sciences, chemical sciences, engineering, life sciences, mathematics and physical sciences.

Under the rubric of the development cooperation programme, you are all aware we have what is called the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme. PM announced that the number of slots for training for Myanmar candidates would be increased from 250 to 500 per year, and the President of Myanmar welcomed this rather significant gesture.

Another broad area, of course in addition to the research side, would be agriculture. I have already referred to the Rice Bio Park, the Advanced Centre for Agricultural Research and Education, and the training of the scientists. The Myanmar side has also requested that the assistance in this regard be extended to animal husbandry and dairy, dairy in particular. They mentioned their plans for a dairy project in the Shan State which is on the other border, and the Indian side has agreed to consider this proposal favourably.

Coming to the fifth theme, you could say it would be trade and investment. A target has been set to double bilateral trade within the next three years, which we feel is feasible given the potential and the new links which are opening up. In addition, both leaders emphasized that there is considerable untapped potential. There are possibilities for investment by Indian companies in areas such as oil and gas, ports, plantations, manufacturing, hospitality, ICT, and these would be encouraged.

The two leaders underscored the importance of the newly created Trade and Investment Forum which will be led by the Commerce Ministers of the two sides to enable timely and accurate exchange of information and ideas. In this context they also welcomed the establishment of a representative office of the United Bank of India in Yangon which is the first step in establishing business friendly banking arrangements for the two countries.

The Myanmar side also welcomed the proposals for training of Myanmar officials in the banking sector and it was agreed that the RBI would sign an MoU with the Central Bank of Myanmar on currency arrangements between India and Myanmar.

As part of the trade and investment promotion, the activities which have already been undertaken include the Enterprise India show which we held in Yangon in 2011 between CII and the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry, and it has been decided to make this an annual event.

We have a number of business leaders who are in Nay Pyi Taw right now. They had a joint meeting arranged by, as I said, the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry and some Government Departments. Three agreements were signed during this business meeting. That was for an oil block to be explored by the Jubilant oil company, for setting up of a paper mill by the J K Group, and for setting up of a pump plant by the Kirloskar. Right now, even as we speak, the Indian business leaders are meeting President Thein Sein in the Presidential Palace and they are expected to meet PM a little later.

We mentioned before coming that part of the trade facilitation but more seen as a development of the border region, is the subject of Border Haats. It has been agreed to set up Border Haats along the border. There is an MoU which has been signed to facilitate this. Both leaders also felt that we will later have to upgrade the banking infrastructure along the border to improve trading.

The next big theme, if I could mention, was cooperation in the field of culture. There is a cultural exchange programme for the next three years which has been signed. This CEP would also promote cultural exchanges between the Northern States of India and the bordering areas of Myanmar. The two sides welcomed the preparations that have been made towards organizing the International Conference on Buddhist Heritage in Myanmar in December 2012, with the cooperation of Indian Council for Cultural Relations and the Ministry of Religious Affairs of Myanmar.

The Myanmar side expressed appreciation of India’s decision to gift a 16 foot sandstone replica of the Sarnath Buddha later in the year which will be installed in the precincts of the Shwedagon Pagoda in Yangon. The Prime Minister will be unveiling a smaller replica, just as a gesture, of the gift.

The Myanmar side also conveyed its appreciation to India for the facilities and courtesies being extended to Myanmar pilgrims when they visit India. We mentioned the ongoing conservation and restoration of the Ananda Temple in Bagan by the Archaeological Survey of India, and this is expected to be completed in the next two years.

There is a plan to set up an Indian school for the first time in Myanmar, first time meaning after a very long time. I do not know whether prior to 1962 there were any exclusive Indian schools, but our Indian community here has been expressing this need from time to time. It has been agreed that we would examine how this school would function. Within the rules of the Ministry of Education they have some other countries which have established schools already. We will work together with Myanmar authorities.

The last theme was the regional and multilateral cooperation. Both sides felt that there is already very close cooperation both regionally and in international fora. PM extended his good wishes to Myanmar for its successful term as the Chair of BIMSTEC, and looked forward to further intensification of the ASEAN-India cooperation. Myanmar takes the Chair of ASEAN from 2014.
PM invited President Thein Sein personally to attend the ASEAN-India Summit which will be held in December in India, and the President has accepted this invitation.

That is where I will stop.

Official Spokesperson: The floor is now open for questions.

Question: Sir, the Joint Statement will probably mention the issue of Imphal-Mandalay bus service, but the fact is that there is no agreement this time. Why do you think this is happening? Is it because of some ordinary delay on the part of Myanmar Cabinet or there is more to it? Also, Sir, could you give some insight into what exactly the talks were like on cooperation between the two countries in oil and natural gas sector? Was there any assurance from the Myanmar side about encouraging investments from Indian companies?

Foreign Secretary: On the bus service, quite frankly there isn’t a road which would permit that bus service to operate right now. When I talked about the road development, many of those segments which I was referring to were where there is no all-weather road yet, particularly in the stretch between Kaleva and Monywa. So, this requires first road construction to be completed before it is kept in mind. Further, the Myanmar side felt there were certain modalities which still need to be worked out. On our side we had only broad arrangements in mind, but the finer details of what kind of check-posts, what kind of arrangements on the border. So, they said the officials of the two sides should complete these formalities before the actual launch. The actual launch of the bus service, as I said, would require an all weather road to enable that bus to operate.

As regards oil and gas, yes, certainly the Myanmar President did welcome investment in the oil and gas sector. He said there are a large number of other companies from other countries also seeking to participate in the regular bids put out by the Myanmar authorities, and they would welcome Indian participation.

Question: Sir, is this the first time that an Indian company has gone in for exploration contract in Myanmar?

Foreign Secretary: No, actually the OVL, ONGC’s arm, is a partner in one of the fields already. Essar Oil and Gas is holding in the A1 and A2 Blocks in the Coastal area. But this Jubilant block is onshore.

Question: Sir, was Aung San Suu Kyi discussed in the meeting with the President? And, would you give more details about this onshore oil programme? What does it mean?

Foreign Secretary: Aung San Suu Kyi was not discussed as such, but the President mentioned that as part of the search for peace and stability in the country the Government had reached an agreement with the National League for Democracy and Aung San Suu Kyi, and this was part of the all-inclusive political process which the President believed was necessary for the country, and as a result of this inclusive process and this agreement she has been elected to Parliament and the Government looks forward to her participation in the Parliament. That was about it.

On the oil and gas, I will have to come back with little more specifics, but what I will say is that it is not a very major field, from what we understand from Jubilant, but it has a significant potential. It is onshore. They already have one Block in that area, and this addition will add to their capacity to develop the area if they strike oil.

Question: Where is it located?

Foreign Secretary: Can I come back to you later on that?

Question: It is close to Yangon, Sir.

Foreign Secretary: It is between Yangon and Nay Pyi Taw. That is broadly what I have, but we will get you some exact details.

Question: The Government might not say it in as many words, but there are of course a lot of strategists who are talking about the significance of the timing of when India is actively moving into Myanmar and investing, especially given the fact that China is becoming a little bit of a problem for the Government here. How would you respond to those who say that this is India now moving in trying to fill in a little bit of a gap that perhaps China would be forced to vacate because the Government feels that there is a bit of a chokehold there?

Foreign Secretary: I do not think our plans to visit Myanmar or the activities of the Indian business sector are driven by anything but our own considerations. The calendar is set by us based on our own requirements and our discussions with the Myanmar authorities. I do not think any other third party comes into that.

Question: Was the problem of insurgency along the border in the Northeastern States discussed? If so, what other joint plans have been agreed to?

Foreign Secretary: It was discussed in some detail. Prime Minister raised this issue in the context of our own security needs. President of Myanmar spoke of Myanmar's efforts to bring the border regions under complete control. As I said, he gave an exposition on the attempts of the Government to reach what are called peace accords with the various ethnic groups. And he reiterated once again that no Indian insurgent group or any anti-India forces would be allowed on Myanmar territory. He emphasized that Myanmar is engaged, as I said, in these efforts to reach peace agreements and is also undertaking security action as and when necessary. They have full understanding of our position and our requirements. The border development and security, both sides felt, must go together. But it was also felt that it is necessary to have effective intelligence sharing between the security forces of the two sides, and our armed forces must intensify their cooperation. That was the context in which it came.

Question: Sir, are you satisfied with the final outcome of the Prime Minister's visit, and do you expect something more from Myanmar Government?

Foreign Secretary: We are more than satisfied with the outcome of the visit. In fact, we are thinking that along with this Joint Statement we will prepare a set of what you can call deliverables which you will then be able to see a very successful outcome.

If I can just come back to the question on oil, the block is called PSC-1. It is on the Irrawaddy delta, and it is not far from Yangon. Our Ambassador who has just joined us will tell us the larger significance of this Block.

Indian Ambassador to Myanmar (Dr. Villur Sundararajan Seshadri): These are onshore blocks which were on offer last year. Some of our companies participated in the bidding. Jubilant was successful and they have been awarded this block. We expect that there will be more such blocks coming up in the future. This is what we hear. So, there are opportunities for Indian companies to participate in the oil and gas sector in Myanmar.

Foreign Secretary: I will just answer that question a little more in detail. It is generally believed that Myanmar's potential is under-explored, based on the fact that historically Myanmar was one of the first oil-producing countries in the entire region, from a historical perspective. So, we believe that the potential is very very large. And if you see the number of other countries who are beginning to show interest, and interestingly right through the most difficult days of sanctions, western oil companies did not leave this country. So, that is something to keep in mind. The potential, if it does come through and does emerge, would enable us to revive the ideas of closer energy links. We may recall there was even talk once of having a pipeline if there was enough gas say to be brought on to India. Right now there is a pipeline going to China. But if there are more gas fields which emerge, if there are more oilfields which emerge, some of these ideas could come back into the operational domain.

Question: Foreign Secretary, what is the message Prime Minister will be taking to Aung San Suu Kyi when he meets her tomorrow? Sometime ago Aung San Suu Kyi expressed disappointment in India's approach especially towards pushing for more political freedoms in this country. Is there anything he is going to say to her to make her think that perhaps that was not a ... (Inaudible)...
Foreign Secretary: I think the Prime Minister will say what he has in his mind. After he has finished, of course, I will be able to tell you indeed. But this much I could say that I think he would welcome the fact that she is playing now a larger role in the political life of this country, and we look forward to keeping in touch with her.

Question: Could you elaborate on the Border Haats and border area development programmes?

Foreign Secretary: On the border area development programmes, some months ago our Ambassador was actually taken by the Vice-President of this country to the Naga hills area and he accompanied the Vice-President. It was mentioned that there are large number of areas where there are small villages which are cut off, there are no roads, the road access is missing. When there is a road there is no bridge, when there is a road and a bridge and you reach the village there is no schools. Sometimes there is no clinic. So, some of these areas are where there has been trouble in the past which has now subsided. But the way forward is to develop small development projects in these areas. We felt this is an area in which we could cooperate. We have done it with other countries quite successfully, so, we would like to do this with Myanmar also.

Our armed forces also have a degree of cooperation which is not 100 per cent security-related. For example, they have been providing road-building equipment to the Myanmar Army to complete roads. They have been providing what are called bailey bridges for small spans. These programmes will also carry on together.

As regards the Border Haats, can you give us some details?

Joint Secretary (BSM) (Shri Harsh Vardhan Shringla): Actually, the idea of having Border Haats was discussed at the Joint Trade Committee which took place in New Delhi in September last year and both sides agreed on the utility of establishing Border Haats at various locations along the Myanmar border. The sense is that Border Haats at various locations would benefit people living in the area and would function on the lines of Border Haats that we have already established with Bangladesh. As you know, the two Border Haats on the Meghalaya-Bangladesh border are already operational. And the MoU that has been signed just a short while ago by the Foreign Secretary and the Deputy Minister of Commerce on the Myanmar side provides for the setting up of a Border Haat on a pilot basis in Pangsau in Arunachal Pradesh. And it also sets out the modalities for additional Border Haats that the two sides could mutually agree on. And as I said, it is very important for people living in those areas. There has been a long-standing requirement of the Northeastern States, and I think this will fulfill that requirement in terms of benefiting people along the borders.
Foreign Secretary: Just a month ago both of us had gone to Mizoram as part of the exercise to see the point at which the Land Customs station where the road from the Kaladan Project will come in. While I was there I called on the Chief Minister and he mentioned this again to me. He says, why cannot we have Border Haats, there are a lot of tribal areas, areas in the border regions where the people can very conveniently sell and buy local produce. That is generally the idea.

Question: Sir, you talked about cross-border rail links and feasibility of direct shipping links. By when can we expect this become a reality?

Foreign Secretary: This will depend on how the operators actually see the viability of the systems. On the cross-border rail for example, I will just mention some of the issues which come up. We have been using the broad gauge rail whereas they use metre gauge in Myanmar. So, are you going to have gauge conversion? Will you have double tracks? These are the kinds of issues which the two Railways have to sit down and talk to each other about. But the Myanmar Railways has been expressing interest in buying rolling-stock from us, in obtaining technical expertise from us. So, those are the kinds of areas we will be able to start very quickly. But actually building rail lines that link in, might take a longer time.

As far as shipping is concerned, I believe this is a question of someone taking the plunge first. Traditionally, in times gone by, there used to be regular shipping services from both Kolkata and Chennai to Yangon. It was quite a familiar thing. Today the shipping companies say they would like to see the volume of trade increase, whereas the traders say they want the shipping service to increase the trade volumes. So, it has to be broken somewhere, and I think we will. We will get our shipping companies to come and take further studies of this. But I cannot set a timeframe on it.

Question: Sir, while there is positive movement towards increasing and growing relations between India and Myanmar, is there a concern and skepticism with regard to the Junta on whether they are going to stay the course or turn their back again and close down on India? Also, does India keenly monitor the security scenario with regard to Aung San Suu Kyi? Is there any intelligence to that effect?

Foreign Secretary: All I can say is that through the history of our relations with independent Myanmar we have always found that every Government irrespective of its particular formation and its constitution etc., had an interest in keeping a good relationship with India. That has not changed, and I do not think it will change either. The position of Suu Kyi in this country, that is an internal matter of this country.
Question: Sir, could you elaborate on the MoU signed between Kolkata University and the Dagon University? ... (Inaudible)...

Foreign Secretary: I should have got the Vice-Chancellor, who is here, to answer that question.

It is broadly an enabling agreement which enables the two sides. What it says is, it promotes cooperation in the areas of exchange of faculty members, students, administrative managers and coordinators, academic materials and other information, joint research activities, participation in seminars and academic meetings, special short-term academic programmes, joint cultural programmes, and study tours for administrative managers and coordinators.

Question: Mr. Mathai, please correct me if I am wrong. I believe some time ago the Myanmar Army had asked for some hardware from the Indian Army. So far I think we are providing only non lethal equipment. Has there been any talk about that this time?

Foreign Secretary: This was not discussed on this occasion. There was no talk of it. But we have been cooperating with them, more with the Navy we have had regular cooperation.

Question: But this time there is no agreement on defence?

Foreign Secretary: On supplies of defence, no.

Question: I just wanted to find out about the air connectivity. What are the details on that?

Question: Will it be Air India?

Foreign Secretary: The air services agreement generally only lays out the possibilities, and it uses the word designated airline. Once there are permissions for designated airlines to fly, the authority in your country designates which airline has that right. What it does is, it gives the permission to designate more carriers. So, a larger number of airlines including the private sector should be able to come in. It increases the number of destinations. The most critical part is that for the first time it provides for what are called Fifth Freedom Rights, which means that you can land from India in Yangon and go on from there to Bangkok and pick up passengers in Yangon for the Bangkok sector also. The same would apply for the Myanmar airlines. If it were flying through India onwards somewhere, it would be allowed to pick up passengers. According to our airlines and our Civil Aviation Ministry, this for the first time really makes a difference. It makes the sector much more attractive for the private operators also. So, we think that with this the number of services should increase substantially.

376. Speech of Prime Minister at the State Banquet hosted by the President of Myanmar.

Your Excellency U Thein Sein, President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Daw Khin Khin Win,
Distinguished Guests,

I would like to thank President U Thein Sein for his warm words of welcome and the gracious hospitality extended to me and my delegation. We have been deeply touched by the warmth, affection and friendship of the people of Myanmar.

Excellency,

This is my first visit to your beautiful country and to this impressive capital. Our talks earlier today and the agreements that we have signed have put in place a roadmap for the rapid development of our relations in the years ahead. This will build on the firm foundations laid during your highly successful visit to India last year.

Excellency,

India and Myanmar are natural partners, linked by geography and history. Since time immemorial, trade, people and ideas have flowed between our lands. The teachings of Lord Buddha have inspired generations of scholars, monks, pilgrims and common people in both our countries for almost two millennia. I am keenly looking forward to visiting the Shwedagon Pagoda and the mausoleum of Emperor Bahadur Shah Zafar tomorrow to pay my respects to our shared heritage.

Excellency,

There are many areas where our two countries can enhance cooperation to our mutual benefit. With its unique geographic location, Myanmar can be a bridge linking South and South East Asia to East Asia. There is much untapped potential in our economic relationship. We need to promote more exchanges among our parliamentarians, academics, scientists, artists and intellectuals. There is so much we can rediscover and learn from each other's culture and society.

This year is the Twentieth Year of our partnership with ASEAN. We look forward to receiving Your Excellency for the Commemorative India-ASEAN Summit later this year.

Excellency,

The people of Myanmar have shown great vision in embarking on a journey of national reconciliation and transition. This has been made possible largely by Your Excellency's vision and statesmanship. The people of India stand ready to support your efforts to create a democratic, stable and prosperous Myanmar.

Excellency,

I would like to recall the words of our first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru on the occasion of Myanmar's independence in 1948:

"As in the past, so in the future, the people of India will stand shoulder to shoulder with the people of Burma, and whether we have to share good fortune or ill fortune, we shall share it together".

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to invite you to join me in raising a toast:

- To the good health and well being of His Excellency President U Thein Sein and Daw Khin Khin Win,
- To the progress and prosperity of the friendly people of Myanmar, and
- To the eternal bonds of friendship between India and Myanmar.

377. Statements to Media by Prime Minister of India, and Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.

Prime Minister of India (Dr. Manmohan Singh): Ladies and gentlemen, it has been a great honour and great privilege for me to have had this opportunity of interacting and meeting with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. We in India are very proud of our longstanding association with her and members of her family including her parents.

I sincerely hope that she will find it possible to visit India soon. In this context I have handed over to her the invitation letter to deliver the next Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Lecture which is a very prestigious lecture. Mrs. Sonia Gandhi has written an invitation letter to Madam to do us the honour to deliver this lecture in India.

Madam Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's life, her struggle, and her determination have inspired millions of people all over the world. Our sincere belief is that in the Process of National Reconciliation which has been launched by President Thein Sein, Madam Suu Kyi will play a defining role.

I conveyed to her our very best wishes for the success of the noble endeavour in which she and her colleagues are engaged.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi: It has been a great pleasure and a privilege to meet Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, and I very much appreciate the fact that he has made time to see me here in Rangoon in spite of a very heavy programme.

As you all know, India and Burma have been particularly close over the years not just because of our geographical positions but because we have shared deep ties of friendship for many many long years.

The struggle for India’s independence took place at the same time as the struggle for Burma's independence. My parents were great admirers of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and other Indian leaders, but we were particularly close to Panditji as I was taught to call him from a very young age.

I am very happy at the prospect of closer ties with India because I think we have much to learn from one another and we have much to contribute to peace and stability in this region, because our goals, our democratic goals, work on the basis of peace and stability, and these are what we shall aim towards.

I am very gratified by the invitation to deliver the Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Lecture, and I hope that I will be able to take up this invitation before too long.

More than that, I hope that there will be greater exchanges between our two peoples. As I said to the Prime Minister, true friendship between the countries can be based only on friendship between our peoples, and this is what I hope we will be able to achieve.

Thank you.
Prime Minister's address to think-tank's and business community at an event organized by Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry and the Myanmar Development Resource Institute in Yangon on India and Myanmar: A Partnership for Progress and Regional Development.

Distinguished Guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am extremely grateful to the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry and the Myanmar Development Resource Institute for inviting me to speak to this distinguished gathering.

I bring with me good wishes and greetings from the people of India to the people of Myanmar.

I have come after spending two days in the impressive and beautiful capital city of Naypyitaw. I am very happy with the discussions I have had with the leaders of Myanmar. President Thein Sein's visit to India last year heralded a new era of cooperation between our two countries. I found him to be a man of courage, vision and sincerity. The leadership of Myanmar has a great desire to expand and strengthen the traditionally friendly relations between our two countries. This is a sentiment we fully reciprocate from the Indian side.

Friends,

India and Myanmar share age old cultural and civilizational ties. Merchants, monks and maritime traders carried influences and traditions from one to the other. The large Indian origin community in Myanmar is an enduring bridge of friendship and cultural exchange between our peoples.

Our common Buddhist heritage is an even stronger spiritual bond among our peoples. This year marks the 2600th anniversary of the holy Shwedagon Pagoda. I will offer prayers there later this evening. We will make an offering of a 16 feet replica of the Sarnath Buddha on behalf of the people of India. We are also working with local authorities to help organize an international conference on Buddhist heritage in Myanmar later this year.

During our independence movements, our leaders shared ideas and thoughts on the freedom struggle. Mahatma Gandhi visited Myanmar a number of times and wrote in his autobiography how impressed he was by the freedom and energy of Myanmar women. Great leaders of India like Lokmanya Tilak and Netaji Subhash Chandra Bose were held for long periods in jails in Myanmar. The Indian National Army received a lot of support from the people of Myanmar.

Our first Prime Minister, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, respected and admired General Aung San and pledged India’s full support to Myanmar’s freedom. In the early years following independence, India and Myanmar were deeply sympathetic and supportive of each other.

Today, we again have an opportunity to work as equal partners to revive the ancient links between our two countries and rediscover the immense possibilities of cooperation that exist between our two countries.

We need to work with each other and with other countries of our region to build prosperity, promote openness of thought and facilitate trade and movement of goods, people and ideas.

Friends,

Myanmar is a critical partner in India’s "Look East" policy and is perfectly situated to play the role of an economic bridge between India and China and between South and South-East Asia.

We should work together to create a regional economy that can become a hub for trade, investment and communication in the region.

Better communication is the best way of promoting economic integration and there is much we can do to revive and build arteries of communication.

Our two Governments have agreed to cooperate in a number of road building projects. I hope that the very symbolic Trilateral Highway that will connect India, Myanmar and Thailand can be fully built by 2016.

India is implementing the Kaladan multimodal transport project that involves upgrading the Sittwe port and constructing a highway to connect the town of Paletwa in Chin state to the Indian border in Mizoram state. This flagship project will revitalize the economy of the area and link it with important commercial and shipping arteries. We hope to complete it by 2015.

Initiatives like BIMSTEC and Mekong Ganga Cooperation provide a platform for enhanced regional cooperation and connectivity.

Our two countries have also agreed to cooperate in the development of the border regions that link us.

The Government of Myanmar has invited us to assist in the development of two areas contiguous to our border, namely the Naga Self Administered Zone of the Sagaing Region and the Chin State. We hope to implement small development projects that have been successful elsewhere.
Yesterday we agreed to set up several border markets, beginning with the one at Pangsau, on the border of Arunachal Pradesh in India and Sagaing in Myanmar. We are working to develop border infrastructure, including the Rhi-Tiddim road that will enable greater cross-border links and trade between Mizoram and Chin state.

These efforts will give a boost to the local economies and provide livelihood opportunities. Trade will expand and be brought within the ambit of the law. These measures will also help curb the activities of insurgent groups and other criminal elements in these areas.

Indian industry is showing increasing interest in Myanmar. In order to exploit the full potential of our economic relationship, we need to facilitate trade and investment. Bilateral banking arrangements need to be established to ease financial transactions. I am glad that United Bank of India is in the process of opening its representative office in Myanmar.

I am confident that we can surpass our total trade target of US $3 billion by the year 2015. But we need to diversify our trade basket. India can import more agricultural produce, coal and other minerals and export heavy industrial items, chemicals, pharmaceuticals and textiles.

To jumpstart commercial transactions, India has offered a US$ 500 million Line of Credit to Myanmar for which an MOU was signed yesterday.

The energy sector is an area of great potential for Cooperation. There is a long historical association between the oil sectors of our two countries going back to the days of Burmah Shell. India’s known oil reserves in its North-East and the adjacent region of north and western Myanmar belong to the same geological terrain. We should upgrade our cooperation to a comprehensive energy partnership, which would include sharing of Indian expertise and capacity-building.

Human resource development is a vital component of our development programmes. I am happy to announce that we have decided to double the number of training slots for Myanmar under our technical assistance programme from 250 to 500 every year. Yesterday we also signed an agreement on the setting up of the Myanmar Institute of Information Technology, which will boost capacity in the ICT sector in Myanmar.

Friends,

Myanmar is entering a new phase in its nation building. As a close friend and well wisher, we will be happy to see Myanmar join the ranks of the economically dynamic and politically vibrant countries of South-East Asia.

The Government of India is ready to extend a hand of friendship to support Myanmar’s long term development priorities.

With this in mind and looking to the future, we are together identifying new areas of potential cooperation that will reflect our common vision of an expanded and strong multi-faceted partnership.

We could support capacity and institution building in areas relating to public administration. We were privileged to receive a parliamentary delegation from Myanmar led by the Speaker. We should encourage more such exchanges.

We will also expand people to people exchanges. To this end, we are exploring the idea of a Mandalay-Imphal bus service to facilitate travel for tourism, pilgrimage and medical consultation. To this end, we seek to strengthen link with all sections of society.

I am happy that our civil aviation authorities have agreed to enhance direct flights, including by private carriers, and grant fifth freedom rights. We will need a similar initiative to increase shipping links.

We have the responsibility of preserving our common historical heritage and promoting cultural exchanges, particularly among our youth. We are examining the idea of an India-Myanmar Foundation to promote educational, cultural and literary exchanges. I am also glad that the Archaeological Survey of India is restoring the Ananda Temple in Bagan, one of Myanmar’s cultural treasures.

We need to develop cooperation in social sectors like health and education. A beginning has been made through the upgradation projects underway in Yangon Children’s Hospital and Sittwe General Hospital.

The MoU signed between Calcutta and Dagon universities is a welcome development. In the past we have depended on western sources to learn about each other. We should pro-actively encourage direct intellectual exchanges among our civil societies and academia.

Agricultural cooperation is progressing well. We have yesterday signed an agreement for setting up an Advanced Center for Agricultural Research and Education near Naypyidaw. This center of excellence will focus on crops of interest to both countries including rice, pulses and oilseeds and promote overall food security.

We also need to expand our security cooperation that is vital not only to maintain peace along our land borders but also to protect maritime trade which we hope will open up through the sea route between Kolkata and Sittwe.

Enhanced cooperation in regional forums will be to our mutual benefit. We look forward to Myanmar taking leadership of regional groupings as it hosts the BIMSTEC Summit this year and the ASEAN Summit in 2014. We look forward to the honour of welcoming President Thein Sein in India for the India-ASEAN 20th year Commemorative Summit later this year.

Friends,

This morning, I had the privilege of meeting Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. We in India admire her for her courage, perseverance and sacrifice. She is a patriot and I hope that she will make important contributions to the processes of change and broader reconciliation that are now underway in this beautiful country. She is also an old friend of India. We are delighted that she has agreed to deliver the prestigious Nehru Memorial Lecture. We look forward to receiving her soon in her old home.

The people of India wish the people of Myanmar well as they undertake the tasks of building a representative democracy, reconciliation with all ethnic groups and economic and political reform. The path to democracy must necessarily evolve in the unique historical and political circumstances of Myanmar and be based on the native genius and traditions of its people.

Our experience in India has been that dialogue and peaceful negotiations are the best ways to bring about genuine reconciliation. I commend the efforts of the Government of Myanmar to achieve peaceful settlements with various ethnic groups. They should now embrace the democratic path fully and become active partners in the country's progress.

Friends,

The path of economic reform is often contentious and rarely painless. In the process of opening up, special measures need to be taken to help disadvantaged sections of society who are not yet empowered to benefit from the fruits of growth and globalization. The needs of local communities and people displaced by the processes of modernization should be taken on board. We should do nothing that threatens the environment or the delicate ecological balance that has sustained us for millennia.

Finally, the success of a nation depends in the end on the energy, creativity and spirit of adventure and enterprise of its people. It is only meaningful political and economic reform that can give each citizen the right and freedom of opportunity to realize his or her potential and seek a life of dignity and social and economic fulfillment. By empowering each individual citizen, we lay the foundations for building a peaceful, prosperous and confident nation.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I am very satisfied with my visit to Myanmar. I see great potential and promise in relations between our two countries and I look forward to working with the leadership and people of Myanmar to build an enduring partnership of friendship, cooperation and common prosperity between our two Countries.

Thank you.
Thank you, Mr. Secretary General, for convening the Meeting of Group of Friends on Myanmar.

Mr. Secretary General,

We fully share your assessment that the political landscape of Myanmar has been significantly transformed during the last one year. In October last year, we received President Thein Sein and were encouraged to hear of some of the plans of the government. We congratulated the government and people of Myanmar in April this year on the peaceful and smooth manner in which bye-elections were held. When our Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited Myanmar in May this year, he again conveyed our felicitations to the President of Myanmar on the reform measures taken by the Myanmar government towards greater democratization and national reconciliation. He also commended the efforts underway on political, economic and social reform that also included peace agreements with several groups and dialogue with various political parties including the National League for Democracy. The participation of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi in the Parliamentary process in recent months has made it more inclusive and it is very welcome that she has assumed chairmanship of the Rule of Law Committee of Myanmar Parliament.

As a close and friendly neighbour, India remains committed to extending all possible assistance and support to the process of national reconciliation and the further strengthening of democracy in Myanmar. We are facilitating Parliamentary exchanges between the two countries by sharing our experience. We have begun a program of introduction to and training on Parliamentary practices and procedures for members of the Myanmar Parliament and Parliamentary Secretariat officials. As many as 80 members will be covered by this program.

As Myanmar confronts multifarious challenges ahead the international community as a whole needs to extend all possible support to the efforts of the government in a spirit of trust and cooperation. The UN agencies and international financial institutions have the opportunity now where they could carry out the entire gamut of their developmental activities. We would also urge that unilateral sanctions should be immediately phased out so that Myanmar's economic development can be accelerated. India has consistently emphasized the path of engagement with Myanmar to encourage the advancement of national reconciliation as well socio-economic development.
We are working closely with Myanmar on various infrastructure and other development cooperation projects. We have given particularly attention to capacity building and Human Resource Development. We believe Myanmar could play a great role in expanding our engagement into ASEAN. We look forward to Myanmar's planned Chairmanship of ASEAN in 2014.

In respect of recent developments in Rakhine state, we have noted that the Government of Myanmar has taken steps towards restoration of law and order and ensuring peace and stability in the areas affected by the violence and in meeting the needs of relief and rehabilitation of all the affected communities. The government has also set up a 27 member Investigation Commission comprising people from different walks of life, including members of different religious faiths and political parties, to enquire into the real cause for incidents and to make recommendations. The Government of Myanmar has also demonstrated willingness to cooperate with the international community. We welcome these efforts. The Government of India has also extended assistance of US$ 200,000 towards immediate relief for all the affected. Representatives of all communities have benefitted from this assistance.

We believe that the Good Offices should continue in a manner that supplements and strengthens Myanmar's own efforts. We will continue to play a constructive role in this process in consultation with other like-minded countries.

Perhaps, time has also come for the Group to consider whether our Meeting should be with the participation of Myanmar. A dialogue on development which will bring in the presence of Myanmar may be the best way forward. I would therefore, join in the sentiments expressed by the Foreign Minister of Indonesia in regard to the annual resolution in the Third Committee.

Thank you.
380. Joint Press Statement on the Twelfth India-Myanmar Foreign Office Consultations.

New Delhi, November 5, 2012.

1. The Twelfth India-Myanmar Foreign Office Consultations were held in New Delhi on 5 November 2012. The Indian delegation was led by Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai and the Myanmar delegation was led by Deputy Foreign Minister U Thant Kyaw.

2. The Consultations were held in a warm and cordial atmosphere and both sides reviewed the entire gamut of bilateral relationship and discussed regional and international issues of mutual interest. The two sides expressed satisfaction over the deepening of the bilateral relations between India and Myanmar, which has rapidly grown and gained momentum, including though the exchange of high level visits in the past year.

3. The two sides reviewed and positively assessed the implementation of the decisions during the visits of the President of Myanmar to India in October 2011 and that of the Prime Minister of India to Myanmar in May 2012. In this context, it was noted that significant progress has been achieved in taking forward the initiatives related to enhancing connectivity through land, sea and air; promoting bilateral cooperation and exchanges in the areas of security, trade and commerce, banking, agriculture, health, science and technology, information technology, culture; infrastructure development; capacity building and human resource development; organization of training for the Myanmar Parliamentarians and Parliamentary staff in India; and promotion of people to people contacts, among others.

4. It was agreed that the next round of Foreign Office Consultations would be held in Myanmar in 2013 at mutually convenient dates to be decided through diplomatic channels.

New Delhi, November 12, 2012.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, Chairperson of the National League of Democracy of Myanmar, would be visiting India from November 13-18, 2012. She is scheduled to deliver the Nehru Memorial Lecture on the occasion of the birth Anniversary of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru on November 14, 2012. It would be recalled Daw Aung San Suu Kyi had accepted the invitation from Smt. Sonia Gandhi in her capacity as Chairperson of Nehru Memorial Fund to deliver the Nehru Memorial Lecture when she met the Prime Minister during his visit to Myanmar in May 2012.

During her visit, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi is scheduled to call on the Vice President, Prime Minister, Speaker of the Lok Sabha and External Affairs Minister. She will pay tributes at the Samadhis of Mahatma Gandhi and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in New Delhi. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi will visit her alma mater, Lady Sri Ram College, where she will interact with the faculty and students and also visit The Energy and Resources Institute (TERI) in Gurgaon. Besides her engagements in Delhi, she will be travelling to Bangalore where she will visit the Indian Institute of Science and the Infosys Campus. She is also scheduled to tour rural areas in Andhra Pradesh to gain a firsthand impression of the rural development and women’s empowerment programmes being undertaken in India.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi spent several years in India during her early days when her mother Daw Khin Yi was Ambassador to India. She also spent some time as a Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Study in Shimla in 1987.

The close and friendly relations between India and Myanmar have been strengthened in the recent past through exchanges of high level visits, including the State visits of the President of Myanmar to India in October 2011 and the Prime Minister of India to Myanmar in May 2012. The visit of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi would be part of our ongoing engagement with the democratic and multi-party polity in Myanmar. It would provide opportunity to exchange views on all matters of mutual interest with a view to building upon the positive momentum in India-Myanmar relations.
Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends and thank you very much for coming to this interaction. I have one announcement to make and then take any questions that you might have.

The External Affairs Minister, Shri Salman Khurshid, is to visit Myanmar from 14th to 16th of December. This is the External Affairs Minister's first bilateral trip abroad.

During his visit to Myanmar he will have discussions with his Myanmarese counterpart U Wunna Maung Lwin. He will also call on the President of Myanmar. As you are perhaps aware, President Thein Sein is likely to visit New Delhi for the ASEAN-India Commemorative Summit on the 20th of December. So, External Affairs Minister's visit is a precursor to those discussions. This part will be in Nay Pyi Taw which is the capital. In addition, External Affairs Minister will also visit Yangon where he is scheduled to inaugurate the International Buddhist Conference.

If you would recollect, when Prime Minister visited Myanmar he had indicated that India would present a Sarnath Buddha statue. That statue has now been sent to Myanmar and it would be formally inaugurated at the Shwedagon Pagoda on 16th.

Apart from this, we are still working on his schedule and he is likely to meet various other interlocutors. We hope to finalize that by the time he leaves.

His visit will also include a trip to the Anandi Temple which is being restored with the assistance of the Archaeological Survey of India.

The visit of the External Affairs Minister to our neighbouring country re-emphasizes the importance we place on relations with our neighbours, also that it is located as part of our Look East Policy indicates the importance that we are providing to our Look East Policy.

[That is the only announcement I have. If you have any questions on any issue, I will be willing to provide responses.]

Question: Is the EAM going to meet Aung San Suu Kyi?

Official Spokesperson: As I said, we are working on his programme in Yangon.
His programme in Yangon is structured around his visit for the opening of the International Buddhist Conference. And it is our intention that a request will be made to meet Daw Aung San Suu Kyi while he is there.
NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, September 24, 2012.

• India and New Zealand held Foreign Office Consultations in Wellington in the forenoon of September 24, 2012. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs and the New Zealand delegation was led by Mr. John Allen, Chief Executive and Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Government of New Zealand.

• During the talks the two delegations discussed bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and global issues. Relations between the two countries in the areas of trade and investment, education, science and technology, cultural affairs, and people to people cooperation were among the topics on which there was an exchange of views. The discussions explored the potential for enhancing bilateral cooperation and implementing decisions taken during Prime Minister John Key’s visit to India in June 2011. They also discussed cooperation between India and New Zealand in multilateral fora.

• Prior to the consultations, Mr Sanjay Singh called on Hon Murray McCully, Minister of Foreign Affairs of New Zealand.

SINGAPORE

New Delhi, May 8, 2012.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Minister for Foreign Affairs Mr. K Shanmugam, Friends from the Media:

Minister Shanmugam and I jointly co-chaired the Second Meeting of the India-Singapore Joint Ministerial Committee for Bilateral Cooperation.

India-Singapore bilateral relations are broad-based and multi-faceted, underpinned by convergence of political, economic and strategic interests. In the Meeting, both sides expressed the common desire to seek new areas of cooperation that would take the partnership to an even higher level.

We noted that India-Singapore ties were buttressed by a healthy exchange of visits between leaders and officials, who embraced a shared vision of the value and importance of the relationship. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited Singapore in November 2011. We look forward to the successful visit of Singapore Prime Minister Mr. Lee Hsien Loong to India in July 2012.

Both sides expressed satisfaction at the excellent state of bilateral economic relations, including the growing flow of investments between the two countries. We look forward to an early conclusion of the 2nd Review of the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA), which has emerged as a cornerstone of our bilateral economic relationship since its signing in 2005.

We reviewed our bilateral defence cooperation, which is wide and intensive. We discussed cooperation in the areas of science and technology, education including skills development and training, culture, among others. In the field of skills education and training we noted the potential that exist for mutually beneficial cooperation. Our Ministry of Labour and Singapore Ministry of Education have had detailed discussions on specific areas of cooperation. The Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi is also developing specific projects for a world-class skills training centre.

Friends, we discussed India’s engagement with the ASEAN, which is one of the cornerstone of our foreign policy and the key pillar of our Look East Policy. Both sides look forward to the ASEAN-India Commemorative Summit in New Delhi in December 2012.

We also had detailed discussions on the regional situation and the major developments therein.
The two sides had very fruitful discussions on various aspects of our bilateral relations in today's meeting of the Joint Ministerial Committee.

Thank you.

Minister for Foreign Affairs of Singapore (Mr. K. Shanmugam):

... (Inaudible)... I will just make some brief additional remarks first of course to express our deepest appreciation to Your Excellency and the Ministry of External Affairs of India for hosting us and hosting this Joint Ministerial Committee, the second meeting that we have had, and the excellent hospitality and arrangements that have been made for me and my delegation. This is obviously not my first visit to India but my first visit as Foreign Minister. The JMC is a unique platform for us to discuss a wide range of issues both between our officials and at the Ministerial level. It is a platform very frankly to share views and to deepen and strengthen the relationship and to take it further. And this JMC has been extremely fruitful in that context.

As Your Excellency has remarked, India and Singapore enjoy very longstanding relationship underpinned by strong political relationship, strong economic relationship, strong strategic relationship.

Your Hon. Prime Minister visited us late last year. Our Prime Minister will visit this year. Below the Prime Ministerial level, of course we have had very substantive Ministerial visits. Your Excellency visited us earlier this year, and other Ministers frequently visit each other as well.

On economic ties, as Your Excellency has remarked, after CECA has been signed, really the economic and trade relationship has taken off in a very substantive way. Bilateral trade now stands at something in the order of 35 billion dollars. I think Singapore now is the largest trading partner of India from ASEAN, and India's FDI into Singapore as well as Singapore's FDI into India are both growing very substantively. I think Singapore is now the largest source of FDI into India other than Mauritius, whereas India is the eighth largest source country for us.

So, both sides are benefiting, and in that context I think quick and expeditious conclusion to the review of the CECA that our two countries are undertaking will benefit both sides very substantively.

Your Excellency has mentioned defence, I entirely concur, is a key pillar of our relationship. In terms of the other areas, the JMC explored a number of areas that are of mutual interest and benefit to both of us.

Your Excellency mentioned education. We are very keen to work with India in this area because everyone knows India has a demographic dividend, and that it will be extremely helpful for India and the world and ASEAN for the young population to have the necessary skills and we will be happy to share our experiences in that context. And we hope that an MoU can be signed when our Prime Minister visits to seal that aspect of the partnership.

If I may in addition mention the technical assistance that we are both hoping to combine together and provide to third countries, Your Excellency mentioned that. We could also I think strengthen even further the very strong connectivity that our two countries have, we talked about that. Today we have close to 200 flights between India and Singapore. And the passenger traffic has been growing very significantly. Grew eight per cent last year, grew forty per cent in the first five months of this year. I think there is more we can do to strengthen that. If we improve further the connectivity, the greater the flow of people between Singapore and India, and that will benefit both sides.

I am looking forward to visiting both Assam and Gujarat. On Assam, as I told Your Excellency, it is part of our own Look East Policy to complement your Look East Policy. I look forward to my visits.

Thank you, Your Excellency.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to respond to one question each.

Question (Ms. Chhavi, Channel News Asia): My question is to the Singapore Minister. Sir, I would like to know given the recent developments in India, a slowing economy and also retroactive tax proposal, has that impacted the investor confidence in some way in Singapore?

Minister for Foreign Affairs of Singapore: I think if we ever take these things in context, you talk about a slowing economy here, you are talking about slowing from eight per cent to seven per cent or something slightly under seven per cent. But if you compare that with what the rest of the world is doing, I think not many people will consider that a slowing economy. We are talking about a very substantive economy growing at seven per cent or so. There are tremendous opportunities. Singapore's position has always been that we look at the Government as facilitators. We facilitate trade, we facilitate investment. We see plenty of opportunities both ways, which is why we are suggesting that the review of the CECA be expedited. And the results of that, since we signed the CECA in 2005, the growth in trade, the growth in investments, is there for all to see. And both sides have benefited. Of course, investors look for certainty, they look for the right framework because capital can go to many places in the world.

And whether there is a specific legislative framework is accommodative or less accommodative is a matter for the Indian Government to work out together with the investors. We as friends can offer some pills on the side. But really investors will work out for themselves how best to work in any particular environment.

Question (Mr. Dipanshu, Doordarshan): A question to Mr. Krishna. Sir, it is not related to this. Today the Supreme Court has directed the Centre to eliminate Haj subsidy over a period of ten years. What is your comment on this?

External Affairs Minister: I have just heard about the decision of the Supreme Court. I have not looked into the details of the judgment. Once we get the judgment, then perhaps that would be the time when I can react. I am afraid you will have to wait till I go through the essence of the judgment.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much ladies and gentlemen. With that we come to the end of this interaction.

386. Prime Minister’s press statement at the media event during the State visit of Prime Minister of Singapore.

New Delhi, July 11, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Lee,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the media.

It is indeed an honour for me to welcome Prime Minister Lee to India on his State visit. He had last visited India in 2005, when we had signed the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement, which was the first agreement of its kind that India had signed with any other country.

Singapore is a close friend and valued regional partner for India. Our relations are broad-based and multi-faceted. They are underpinned by a confluence of interests spanning political, economic, cultural, defence and security issues. Apart from regular high-level exchanges of visits and an architecture of productive dialogue mechanisms, our friendship is nourished by a vibrant people-to-people relationship.

Prime Minister Lee and I had very fruitful discussions today on all issues of India-Singapore bilateral relations. We both agreed that while we have made good all-round progress in many areas of our relations, we can and we should do much more together.

Singapore is not only our foremost trading partner in ASEAN, but also a major source of FDI inflows into India. I welcomed additional Singapore investment into India, particularly in the infrastructure sector, where Singapore has great expertise. We agreed to expedite the conclusion of the ongoing second Review of the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement that would further facilitate trade in goods, services and investment.

In this context, I assured Prime Minister Lee of India’s commitment to reinforce its status as an investment-friendly country and expressed my hope that Singapore companies would look at India as a valued investment destination in the current scenario.

We discussed cooperation in functional areas, including education and skills development. Singapore is a world leader and has developed excellent institutions in this area. The Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Vocational Education and Skills Development which we signed today would provide the framework for cooperation in this very important field. A specific cooperative project on skills training in Delhi is also getting underway.

Prime Minister Lee and I have decided to step up bilateral cooperation and exchanges in the fields of defence and security. To this end, we have just signed a Memorandum of Understanding to renew the bilateral arrangement between our Air Forces on joint training and exercises.

Singapore and India share values of democracy, pluralism and secularism and this gives both our countries convergent perspectives on many regional and international developments. We also work closely together in a number of regional mechanisms, such as the East Asia Summit, ASEAN and the ASEAN Regional Forum. We share similar views on building an open and inclusive architecture of regional cooperation in Asia, which enhances trust and confidence. We discussed the global economic situation and agreed on the need for more concerted international action.

Prime Minister Lee's visit is a milestone in our relations. Later this year, India will host the India-ASEAN Commemorative Summit to celebrate the 20th anniversary of our Dialogue Partnership with ASEAN. I am delighted that Prime Minister Lee has agreed to visit us again on that occasion. I thank you for your attention.

388. Speech of Prime Minister at the banquet hosted in honour of the Prime Minister of Singapore.

New Delhi, July 11, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Lee,
Madam Lee,
Distinguished guests from Singapore,
Ladies and gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure tonight to extend a very warm welcome to Prime Minister Lee and Mrs. Lee on their State Visit to India. We deeply value Prime Minister Lee’s friendship. His personal commitment and contribution to building a strong and enduring relationship between India and Singapore has been truly inspiring.

Our first Prime Minister, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, presciently described Singapore in 1946 as a great cosmopolitan city where Asian unity would be forged. It was therefore only fitting that India’s quest for a more substantive engagement with South East Asia and East Asia began in Singapore. The support and wise counsel that we received from Singapore’s leaders during the initial steps in our Look East Policy is something that we still recall with great warmth.

The first Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement signed by India with any country was with Singapore during Your Excellency’s last visit to India. In many ways, India’s relationship with Singapore has been an exemplar for our engagement in the region.

Excellency,

The people of India hold you in high esteem as the worthy leader of a nation of competent, industrious and disciplined people. Singapore has been fortunate to have visionary and energetic leaders who have worked against the odds to build a model nation state. By building and preserving social harmony, stability and growth, they have made the Singapore experience into a brand worthy of emulation around the world, especially by developing countries.

Your Excellency,

India’s relations with Singapore are rooted in history, driven by the present and inspired by the promise of an even brighter future. Ours is a very special friendship and we are witnessing an extremely dynamic and productive phase in our bilateral relationship. Political and security cooperation, defence ties, economic and financial cooperation and strong cultural linkages underpin our relations. We enjoy convergent perspectives on many international and regional developments.
Singapore has also generously embraced a large Indian community and encouraged them to flourish and prosper as proud citizens of Singapore. Today, India renews its own welcome to Singapore to come to India and take advantage of the many opportunities that our country to offer. I have no doubt that, in the years ahead, our two countries will build ever-deeper connections to the benefit of both our peoples.

Excellencies,

Ladies and gentlemen,

May I now invite you to join me in a toast:

- to the good health and personal well-being of Prime Minister Lee and Madam Lee;
- to the happiness and prosperity of the people of Singapore; and
- to everlasting friendship between India and Singapore.
389. Address by Minister of State E. Ahamed at the Business Luncheon Meeting by the FICCI during the visit of Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong.

New Delhi, July 12, 2012.

Honorable Prime Minister of Singapore Lee Hsien Loong

Honorable Minister of Education of Singapore Heng Swee Keat

Distinguished members of the Singapore Delegation

Distinguished Representatives of trade bodies i.e. Shri Kanoria, President FICCI, Shri Adi Godrej, President CII and Shri Dilip Modi, Vice President ASSOCHAM,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is my great pleasure to welcome here our distinguished guest honorable Prime Minister of Singapore Lee Hsien Loong. I would also like to express my thanks to ASSOCHAM, FICCI and CII to give me an opportunity to address this august gathering.

Excellency,

Your visit to India, after a very successful visit of our Prime Minister to your country in November last year, comes at a very important juncture in the development of our bilateral relations. It provides yet another opportunity for the leadership of the two countries to review progress and give new direction to our relations.

India's relations with Singapore over the last two decades have evolved into a strong partnership that is underpinned by a strong convergence of economic, commercial and strategic interests. Since the signing of the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement, CECA, in 2005, bilateral trade and investment have increased substantially. From a level of US$ 8.7 billion in 2005-2006 the trade turnover has touched US$ 21.81 billion in 2011-2012. Singapore is not only our leading trade partner in the ASEAN, but also a major source of FDI inflows into India. In fact Singapore is the second largest investor in India. Cumulative FDI from Singapore to India has increased from US$1.3 billion in 2005-2006 to US$ 17.15 billion in March 2012. Similarly FDI from India to Singapore has increased form US $ 3.1 billion to US$ 23.42 billion between 2004-2005 to 2011-2012. I am also confident that the conclusion of the ongoing 2nd review of CECA would further strengthen the commercial ties between our two countries.

On account of Singapore's strategic location, easy connectivity with many Indian cities and business friendly environment, Singapore has also emerged as a preferred financial and logistical hub for Indian companies. Aside from language, the two countries share similar legal and contractual systems. This has encouraged not only businesses but many Indian professionals to work in Singapore, both in services and in manufacturing sectors. Today we have presence of more than 3000 Indian companies in Singapore.

Our trade bodies, CII, FICCI and ASSOCHAM have played important role in the growth of India-Singapore trade and commerce. I would urge the representatives of these trade bodies and also other industry associations to work with their Singaporean counterparts to further enhance our bilateral economic ties and Singapore investment into India. This would serve both our economies, particularly as the global economy is passing through a difficult phase presently.

We are also looking to Singapore to participate in major upcoming infrastructure projects in India like the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor.

Our bilateral relations have many more dimensions than the commercial and economic relations. We have a framework agreement in place for cooperation in the field of Personnel Management and Public Administration and Cooperation in the fields of Arts, Heritage and Archives. We also have a very robust framework for Defence Cooperation under the Defence Cooperation Agreement signed in 2003.

The Community of Indian origin in Singapore comprises about 9% of the total population; out of these about 300,000 are Indian passport holders. The Indian Community has contributed significantly to the growth and development of their adopted home, Singapore. It has also acted as a strong bridge of mutual understanding and friendship. We have also introduced Visa on Arrival facility for the tourists from Singapore since 2010.

Excellency,

Singapore's own transformation in a relatively short span of time has become a model for growth and development of many developing countries. Singapore's experience in urban management and planning provides an excellent model for the growth of Indian cities and metropolis. Singapore is fast emerging as a knowledge-based economy driven by its excellent education system including skills development.

An MOU on Cooperation in Vocational Education and Skills Development is being signed today between the Ministry of Labour from the Indian side and the Singapore Ministry of Education. This will provide a very good framework for replicating Singapore's experience in skills development in India by providing an enabling framework of cooperation. Similarly Government of Delhi is concluding an agreement to set up an International Skills Training Centre in Delhi in cooperation with the Institute of Technical Education and Ministry of Education of Singapore. I would also urge the Indian industry represented here today, ASSOCHAM, CII and FICCI to involve themselves in the curriculum development of this prestigious and ambitious project so that this can become an important input to our own growth story.

Excellency,

The Singapore leadership has played an important role in the evolution of India’s Look East Policy. India’s engagement with ASEAN is an important pillar of our Look East policy. We greatly value Singapore’s support in this engagement. As part of the 20th anniversary of India’s engagement with ASEAN, both CII and FICCI are involved in various events connected with the celebrations. We would be holding a Commemorative Summit in December this year and we eagerly look forward to Your Excellency’s participation at the Summit.

Thank You.
THAILAND

390. Statement by the Prime Minister to the media during the visit of Prime Minister of Thailand.

New Delhi, January 25, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra,
Ladies and Gentleman of the media.

I am very happy to welcome Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra to India. We are honoured that Prime Shinawatra accepted our invitation to be the Chief Guest at our Republic Day celebrations.

Prime Minster Shinawatra won a triumphant victory in the recent elections in Thailand and has given new hope for democracy in the region and beyond.

Thailand is a close friend and a valued regional partner for India. We share civilizational links with Thailand, and we are maritime neighbours. Developing close relations with Thailand is an important component of our 'Look East' Policy. Strong India-Thailand relations contribute to peace, prosperity and stability in the region.

The Prime Minister and I have had very cordial and purposeful discussions. We are both agreed that while we have made good all-round progress in many areas of our relations, we can and should do much more together. There is political will on both sides, there is cultural affinity and there is also immense goodwill at the people's level.

We have agreed to expedite the conclusion of negotiations on a bilateral Free Trade Agreement that would include goods, services and investment. Today, we have signed the 2nd Protocol to amend the Framework Agreement for Establishing a Free Trade Area. We have also concluded a revised Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement. I conveyed to the Prime Minister that we welcome more Thai investment into India, especially in the manufacturing, infrastructure and services sectors.

We see Thailand as playing a positive role in our efforts to develop our Northeastern States and improve connectivity with the ASEAN region. We have agreed to intensify progress on connectivity projects such as the India-Myanmar-Thailand trilateral highway. We have specifically decided to set up a joint working group on infrastructure and connectivity. We have agreed to encourage our energy and infrastructure companies to work together including in third countries.

The Prime Minister and I have decided to step up bilateral cooperation and exchanges in the fields of defence, counter-terrorism and security. We have signed a bilateral Memorandum of Understanding on Defence Cooperation. I underlined to Prime Minister Shinawatra the need to put in place a bilateral legal framework to deal with non-state actors and subversive elements that pose a common threat to both our societies. In this context we have concluded an Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons.

People-to-people exchanges are the foundation of our relations. We have identified areas of cooperation in culture, science and technology, education, renewable energy, water resource management and consular matters to facilitate mutually beneficial interaction between the citizens of India and Thailand.

India and Thailand work together in a number of regional mechanisms such as the East Asia Summit, ASEAN, the ASEAN Regional Forum, BIMSTEC and the Mekong Ganga Cooperation initiative. We share similar views on building an open and inclusive architecture of regional cooperation in Asia which enhances trust and confidence.

I invited Prime Minister Shinawatra for the India-ASEAN Commemorative Summit that we will be hosting for the first time in December this year to celebrate the 20th anniversary of our Dialogue Partnership with the ASEAN.

I am confident that Prime Minister Shinawatra’s visit, which coincides with the 65th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Thailand, will be a historic milestone in our relations.

I thank you.
Joint Statement by India and Thailand on the State Visit of Prime Minister of Thailand Yingluck Shinawatra to India

New Delhi, January 25, 2012.

1. H.E. Ms. Yingluck Shinawatra, Prime Minister of Thailand, paid a State visit to India from January 24-26, 2012 as the Chief Guest for India's Republic Day celebrations. On her first visit to India, at the invitation of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, she was accompanied by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Defence, Commerce, Industry and Information & Communication Technology; senior government officials, and a business delegation.

2. During the visit, PM Shinawatra called on Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, the President of India, and Shri Hamid Ansari, the Vice-President of India. She also held talks with Dr. Manmohan Singh, who hosted a banquet in her honour. Shri S.M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister called on the Thai PM. PM Shinawatra also attended a business luncheon hosted by (CII/FICCI/ASSOCHAM) chambers of commerce.

3. The two Prime Ministers held wide-ranging discussions on bilateral, regional and multilateral issues, and reviewed the outcome of the 6th Joint Commission Meeting held in New Delhi on December 27, 2011 co-chaired by the Minister of External Affairs of India and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Thailand.

4. Both sides noted that the visit coincides with the 65th anniversary of establishment of bilateral diplomatic relations, as well as 20 years of India's enhanced engagement with ASEAN. They noted with satisfaction that India and Thailand have, over the past decades, developed a strong and mutually beneficial cooperation at both bilateral and regional levels, and have played an important role in fostering regional frameworks which have contributed to peace, social and economic development, and infrastructural linkages between India and Southeast Asia. Given the progress in the relationship, both sides expressed the desire to work together towards elevating the bilateral relations to strategic partnership for mutual benefit.

5. The Prime Minister of India once again conveyed deep condolences to the Thai Prime Minister on losses suffered during the recent devastating floods in Thailand, and offered to support reconstruction and recovery effort as required. The Thai Prime Minister expressed deep appreciation for the financial assistance provided by India. Both sides agreed to explore the possibility of cooperation in water management and flood prevention.

ECONOMIC RELATIONS

6. Both sides noted that South East Asia has grown significantly in terms of economic influence, and its dynamism continues to play an important role in global economic growth. Both leaders noted that Thailand and India have led efforts to integrate economies of the region.

7. To strengthen economic links between the two countries, both sides reaffirmed their resolve to conclude the bilateral Comprehensive Agreement on Trade in Goods, Services, and Investments by mid-2012, to further enhance economic links and between the two countries. The 2nd Protocol signed during the visit to amend the Framework Agreement for Establishing Free Trade Area would provide further boost to bilateral trade in immediate terms.

8. To further create a supportive atmosphere for the bilateral and regional comprehensive economic cooperation, the two leaders also agreed that ASEAN and India should conclude their regional Trade in Services and Investment Agreements by 2012.

9. The Prime Minister of India welcomed Thai investments into India into sectors such as infrastructure development including ports and highways, computer hardware, automobile components and parts, food processing and power generation, as well as tourism and hospitality facilities in the Buddhist circuit. The Thai Prime Minister invited Indian investments to Thailand in information technology, manufacturing, electronics and automotive industry. Both sides looked forward to the establishment of a forum comprising senior representatives of business enterprises of both countries to promote expansion of bilateral business ties.

10. The two sides agreed to explore possibilities of collaboration between their respective oil and gas companies in Exploration and Production (E&P) opportunities in Thailand and India, as well as in third countries.

SECURITY AND DEFENCE

11. Both sides noted that the increasing menace of terrorists, criminals, arms and drug traffickers trying to use this region for their nefarious activities provided an added urgency to strengthen cooperation in security and intelligence exchange. The 6th meeting of the Joint Working Group on Security Cooperation held in New Delhi on May 25-26, 2011 provided an opportunity to discuss these challenges in a comprehensive manner. It was agreed that a five-year Joint Working Programme on specific elements of cooperation would be finalized urgently.

12. The two leaders unequivocally condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and stressed that there could be no justification whatsoever for any act of terrorism. Recognizing the common threats to national security from transnational crimes, including international terrorism, the two Prime Ministers resolved to significantly enhance bilateral cooperation in combating terrorism, including in restricting transnational movement and unauthorized stay of known terrorists in each other’s countries. The two leaders resolved to commit their countries to improve sharing of intelligence, the development of more effective counter-terrorism policies, enhance liaison between law enforcement agencies, provide assistance in the areas of border and immigration control to stem the flow of terrorist related material, money and people and specific measures against transnational crimes, through the already existing mechanisms between Thailand and India.

13. Such cooperation will also complement regional efforts as declared in the ASEAN-India Joint Declaration for Cooperation in Combating international Terrorism.

14. The two sides shared the view that, Thailand and India being maritime neighbours, defence cooperation would be mutually beneficial in addressing shared challenges and concerns. In this regard, the two sides expressed satisfaction that the inaugural meeting of the bilateral Defence Dialogue held in New Delhi on December 23, 2011, had enabled a comprehensive review of various elements of defence cooperation and its future course. The MoU on Defence Cooperation signed during the visit would help both sides to further streamline and facilitate this process on matters of mutual concern. The two sides noted the ongoing cooperation between both Navies in the conduct of coordinated patrols and agreed that such measures of cooperation should continue.

15. The two sides will also expedite the ongoing negotiations on Bilateral Extradition Treaty and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty on Civil and Commercial Matters.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

16. Both sides agreed on the need for concerted collaboration in domains of creativity, innovation and research and development, in order to transform their economies into knowledge based ones. In this regard, enhanced cooperation on science and technology, information and communications technology, agricultural science, natural resource management, biotechnology, and marine & space sciences should be further pursued through existing mechanisms and future arrangements to be mutually agreed upon.

CULTURE, EDUCATION, AND PEOPLE-TO-PEOPLE EXCHANGES

17. The two leaders agreed to deepen cultural and historical ties between the two countries by promoting diverse cultural exchanges to build a lasting understanding between the peoples of the two countries.

18. In order to accelerate people-to-people contact in cultural and other fields benefiting both societies, both sides agreed to work together towards setting up an "India-Thailand Foundation". Both sides also agreed to consider possibilities of audio-visual co-production.

19. The two sides welcomed the formation of the India-Thailand Parliamentary Friendship Group in the Indian Parliament that would facilitate parliamentary exchanges with its counterpart group in Thailand's National Assembly and agreed to intensify the exchange of parliamentary delegations between the two countries.

20. Recognizing that education is another important area of cooperation, the two leaders welcomed the progress made towards the revival of the Nalanda University, to be a leading regional academic institution as endorsed during the East Asia Summit. The Prime Minister of India thanked the Prime Minister of Thailand for pledging USD 100,000 to the University, with further contributions to be made by Thai private sector.

21. Both sides expressed satisfaction at the greater flow of tourists and visitors between the two countries. To address issues related to travel, visa facilitation, employment, and safety of tourists, both leaders welcomed the setting up of an ad hoc Joint Working Group on all visa and consular matters which will meet at regular intervals.

22. The Indian side welcomed Thailand's participation as Partner Country in the Surajkund Crafts Mela 2012 at Faridabad between 1 - 15 February 2012 by sending a Thai cultural and crafts demonstration troupe.

REGIONAL COOPERATION AND CONNECTIVITY

23. Both sides expressed their desire to further enhance their valued partnership and cooperation in the context of India - ASEAN relations. Both Prime Ministers supported the formation of the ASEAN Community by 2015 as an important step towards greater integration and prosperity in Southeast Asia. The Thai Prime Minister supported India's engagement with ASEAN, and viewed that India's role will be important for ASEAN's continued dynamism, security, and prosperity beyond 2015.

24. In this connection, the two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their full support for the work of ASEAN-India Eminent Persons Group to take stock and chart the future direction of the Dialogue relations so as to further realize the full potential of ASEAN-India partnership in the next decade.

25. Both leaders underlined the importance of the East Asia Summit as a platform for greater integration and cooperation, and, in the long term, achieving an East Asia Community of peace prosperity, and security.

26. Both leaders looked forward to the India - ASEAN Commemorative Summit in December 2012 hosted by India. In the run up to the Commemorative Summit, India will host a number of events such as the India-ASEAN Car Rally, a sailing ship expedition along the monsoon trade winds route, the 4th edition of Delhi Dialogue, the ASEAN-India Business Fair, Ministerial level meetings and cultural activities throughout the year. Thailand will support these initiatives and events through its active participation.

27. The two leaders reaffirmed the importance that both countries attached to the BIMSTEC as a link between South and South-East Asia. The two sides also agreed to synergize their development projects and capacity building in lower Mekong region through the Mekong-Ganga Cooperation (MGC) initiative which could take the lead in reinvigorating this grouping.

28. Both leaders shared the view that the close cooperation on enhancing connectivity was a common theme in existing regional cooperation platforms, and agreed to focus on developing road and shipping infrastructure which will establish in the future, an economic corridor linking India with Thailand and Southeast Asia. To this end, the two sides announced setting up of a joint working group on infrastructure and connectivity to help expedite various development initiatives in these fields in both countries as well as in third countries. They agreed that the work of the Group could also aid regional connectivity efforts such as the India-Myanmar-Thailand Trilateral Highway.

MULTILATERAL COOPERATION

29. The two sides agreed to enhance cooperation in the United Nations and other international fora on matters of mutual interest. The two leaders reiterated strong support for the ongoing reform of the United Nations and its principal organs with a view to making the United Nations more democratic, transparent and efficient so that it can deal more effectively with the myriad challenges of the contemporary world. They emphasized the importance of an early reform of the United Nations Security Council so that it reflects the contemporary realities and functions in a more accountable, representative and effective manner.

30. The Thai side acknowledged India's credentials for permanent membership of the UN Security Council, and commended India's active role and continued constructive contributions in the field of global security.

31. The following agreements were signed during the visit:

(1) Treaty on Transfer of Sentenced Persons
(2) Memorandum of Understanding on Defence Cooperation
(3) The 2nd Protocol to amend the Framework Agreement for Establishing Free Trade Area between Thailand and India
(4) Programme of Cooperation in Science & Technology
(5) Cultural Exchange Programme for 2012-14
(6) MoU between Chulalongkorn University and ICCR for setting up a Chair at the India Studies Centre of the University.

32. The Prime Minister of Thailand expressed her gratitude to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and to the people of India for the warm welcome and hospitality that had been extended to her and to the members of her delegation on her State visit. She extended an invitation to Prime Minister of India to visit Thailand, which he gladly accepted.
Banquet Speech by PM during State Visit of Prime Minister of Thailand.

New Delhi, January 25, 2012.

Your Excellency Madame Prime Minister,

Distinguished guests,

Ladies and gentlemen,

It is my privilege to welcome Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra on her first State visit to India as the Chief Guest for our Republic Day celebrations.

Excellency,

Your struggles and achievements have caught the imagination of the people all over the world. You are a source of inspiration for all freedom loving people. You represent the new dynamic face of Asia, and Asia is fortunate to have a democrat and leader like you.

As Thailand's first woman Prime Minister and one of its youngest you have an onerous responsibility to lead your country at a critical time of its history. Your leadership during the recent floods has earned you admiration among all sections of people. We salute the resolve of the Thai people in combating these floods and their determination to resume normal life again.

Madame Prime Minister,

Your visit coincides with the 65th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between our two countries. Yet links between the peoples of India and Thailand go back thousands of years. The abiding message of Lord Buddha inspired generations of scholars, monks, pilgrims and common people in our countries.

Today, as democratic and pluralistic nations, both our countries share common values and aspirations. We aspire for higher growth, an inclusive society, sustainable development and an external environment which facilitates our national development.

We in India admire and applaud Thailand's many strengths. Your success in ensuring food security, establishing a strong and competitive manufacturing industry and in setting global benchmarks in tourism are worthy of emulation.

India sees Thailand as its natural partner. Our complementary strengths provide us with a solid foundation for intensifying economic and commercial links. We welcome Thai companies to take full advantage of opportunities opening up in India. It is heartening to note the increasing exchanges of students, scholars, academics, and tourists between our two countries.

Excellency,

As maritime neighbours, both India and Thailand face common security threats from emerging non-traditional challenges such as terrorism, security of sea lanes of communication and piracy. We are expanding our cooperation in dealing with them.

Today, Asia is in the midst of an economic resurgence. Both India and Thailand are in a position to play a key role in shaping the future of Asia. India’s ‘Look East’ policy and Thailand’s Look West policy compliment and reinforce each other as we both seek to broaden the horizons of our cooperation with our neighbours.

We thank Thailand for supporting the ASEAN’s dialogue partnership with India. In the years ahead we will work with Thailand to enhance connectivity over land, sea and air between India and South East Asia and forge a strong partnership between our countries.

Excellencies,

Ladies and gentlemen,

May I invite you to join me in raising a toast to:

• The good health and well being of Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra,
• The prosperity and happiness of the Thai people, and
• The lasting bonds of friendship between India and Thailand.

393. Remarks by Minister of State E. Ahamed at Business Meeting with the Prime Minister of Thailand.

New Delhi, January 25, 2012.

Her Excellency Ms Yingluck Shinawatra, Hon'ble Prime Minister of Thailand

Members of Thai Delegation

Shri Anand Sharma, Honorable Minister of Commerce and Industry, Government of India

Members of CII, FICCI and Assocham

Ladies and gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to be present here today at the business luncheon organized by FICCI, CII & Assocham. We are very happy to have Prime Minister of Thailand, Her Excellency Yingluck Shinawatra, as our honoured Chief Guest for our Republic Day ceremony.

India and Thailand are close friends who enjoy a mutually rewarding and enriching relationship based on multidimensional commonalities, including shared geographical space. We have built a strong structure of cooperation in many spheres of activity, including agriculture, industry, science and technology, education and cultural exchanges.

Excellency

Your visit as Chief Guest for Republic Day celebrations will set a new dimension to our close partnership.

Excellency

Our relations are excellent and stable but we want to do better. We are keen to give contemporary content to our age-old links in all areas of mutual benefit. The presence of large number of Thai and India businesspersons here today is an indication of the strong interest of both countries to explore and exploit the potential that exists for mutually beneficial partnerships.

Economic and commercial linkages form an important aspect of India’s partnership with Thailand. I am happy that the business communities of our two nations are looking to expand their trade and investment ties into newer and diversified areas such as food processing, infrastructure, hospitality and manufacturing sectors. We welcome the growing engagement and we are working to build upon it.

Our bilateral trade and investments are growing rapidly. Bilateral trade has multiplied more than six times since 2000 to cross US $ 8 billion. The year 2011 saw trade rebounding to US$ 8.19 billion. The India-ASEAN FTA on goods, in force since January 2010 and the comprehensive bilateral FTA being negotiated will further contribute to healthy trade figures. We’ve set for ourselves the target of doubling it by 2014. There is considerable anticipation among the business communities on both sides to make these Agreements broad-based and to include in its ambit services and investments.

The growing investment by Indian and Thai companies in each others’ businesses is another indicator of the realization of the existing and rapidly growing business opportunities. Indian FDI into Thailand is estimated to be around $US 2 billion since 1970s whereas Thailand’s FDI in India is approximately $US 91.4 million since 2000. Complementary strengths of our industry make us natural partners and the advantages of geography only reinforce this relationship. We are keen to have more Thai companies participate in India’s growth story, in particular in infrastructure sector, pharmaceuticals, food processing, automobiles, information technology hospitality sectors, chemicals and allied industry.

The field of infrastructure is an area of high priority for India. India today, along with international partners, is developing its road network, airports, ports, railways and power grids. The challenge of overcoming the bottleneck of infrastructure deficiencies is being turned into a great business opportunity. We look forward to partnership from Thai companies in this sector as the next 5 years will see investments of over US$ 1 trillion in this critical sector. Investment is also needed in the agro-processing sector to curb post-harvest wastage, which is unacceptably high (30-35% of total produce). Thai investors with their strengths in food processing would be welcome in developing cold-chains, warehouses etc. 100% FDI is allowed in this sector. We expect investments of US$ 200 billion in this sector and growth of 20% in the next five years.

We emphasize our connectivity with ASEAN in our ‘Look East Policy’, as we have maritime boundaries with Thailand, which we want to develop in the future. A trilateral highway project linking India, Myanmar and Thailand is also under active consideration. This land connectively would provide immense boost to India’s trade with Thailand and the region.

Excellency

Let me conclude by saying that India is committed to building ever closer links with Thailand which is our extended neighbourhood. We are working closely with Thailand on a bilateral level as also in the context of regional cooperation frameworks. I am confident that the partnership will continue to grow stronger over the coming years and decades.

Thank you.

Her Excellency Sheikha Lubna, Minister of Foreign Trade of the United Arab Emirates,

My colleague Ministers from Arab countries,

His Excellency, Ambassador Ahmed bin Heili, Deputy Secretary General, League of Arab States,

Mr. Mohammed Al Alromaithy, Chairman of the Abu Dhabi Chamber of Commerce & Industry,

Ms. Naina Lal Kidwai, Senior Vice President of Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry,

Mr. Adnan Kassar, President, General Union of Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture,

Mr. Hamdi Al Tabbah, Chairman of the Federation of Arab Businessmen, Participating industry and business leaders from India and the Arab world, Ambassadors, other representatives and distinguished guests

It is a great pleasure for me to be present at this important and prestigious event, a meeting of friends from India and the Arab world and to sit, discuss and contribute towards mutual development of the people of the whole region through further strengthening of trade and investment opportunities.

The bedrock of India-Arab relations is embedded in antiquity, with evidence of historic, cultural and civilizational ties binding our regions dating back to the early years of recorded history. Legends abound with the adventures of Indian and Arab seafarers in times prior to our emergence as nation states. There is evidence of trade links between the Harappan civilization in India and that of Dilmun in the Gulf. Indian and Arab traders succeeded in building trade and commercial linkages between the two regions which have grown from strength to strength.

It was with the intention to further add momentum to the India-Arab relationship that the Government of India and the League of Arab States established this forum in 2008 to identify the sectors which need investment for development. Through the two editions held in 2008 and 2010 at New Delhi, with the active participation of government and business leaders, trading communities and financial sectors, several projects have already been established. Trade between India and the Arab world, which stood at US$114 billion in 2008-09, has steadily increased to reach US$144 billion in 2010-11. Of this, India-UAE trade alone accounts for US$67 billion, i.e. more than 46%, and it is, therefore, quite appropriate that Abu Dhabi is host to the third edition of this prestigious conference. I thank the Government of the United Arab Emirates, His Highness Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Minister of Foreign Affairs for this gesture and for his gracious and generous hospitality.

Distinguished guests,

Government of India has always extended the benefits it had achieved through skill and knowledge development to Arab countries through its programme of educational scholarships, manpower training, transfer of technology etc. It has established several development projects in the area of small and medium enterprises. Government of India has also extended concessional financial assistance and grants for utilization for execution of industrial projects.

India is, as you are aware, one of the fastest growing major economies of the world. Despite the adverse international environment, India has managed to maintain a growth rate of over 7% per annum. We are confident that the strong fundamentals of its economy will help India return to a sustained growth path of about 8-10% per annum in the coming years on account of the following reasons:

• We have robust economic indicators including high domestic saving rate; increasing direct and indirect tax revenues; high agricultural growth; a strong manufacturing base and a booming service sector spearheaded by the information and communication technology sector.

• India has a very young population and over half of the working population is in its twenties.

• Over the past few years, we have invested heavily in education, health and agriculture to give a new deal to rural India. Our rural markets are now booming and the middle class is growing rapidly.

• India is poised to continue to be a frontline player in the global knowledge economy.

• We have very ambitious plans for the development of our infrastructure. We are planning to secure investment of almost $1 trillion in the next 5 years in new projects in highways, power plants, mass transport systems, ports and airports. This will be achieved through both public and private investment and Public-Private Partnerships.

• We are determined to pursue a strategy of green growth. We are committed to increasing energy efficiency and the share of renewables, including solar and nuclear power, in our energy mix.
This makes India one the most attractive destinations for foreign direct investments. India invites our longstanding friends from the Arab world to participate in India’s growth story which would be mutually beneficial.

The Arab world has been home to millions of Indians, who have been earning a living and, at the same time, contributing their share through hard work and dedication in developing the respective economies. This is a fine example of mutual growth. We see here business leaders from India who have succeeded in establishing their presence in the Arab world over several decades and who have acted as goodwill envoys between India and the Arab countries. I wish them all well and say India is proud of their achievements, which could be emulated by others. The Abu Dhabi Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry have made this congregation of Indian and Arab business leaders possible and I must congratulate them for the success of this prestigious event.

In this day of an inter-dependent world, no country can remain unaffected by a crisis in another part of the world, as has been witnessed in the last few years by the global economic downturn. This is true for India as well as the Arab world.

It would be a remiss if I do not mention the recent winds of change which swept through several Arab countries. Continued peace and stability in the region is of interest to all of us. We support addressing of all issues through peaceful dialogue and negotiations with countries being free to determine their own pathways to national development.

Coming back to the Conference, the focus this year is on investment projects which could be identified in the development of Small and Medium Enterprises; infrastructure facilities such as rail, road, airport, ports, power, water etc.; real estate business; healthcare; tourism; transportation; education & human resource development; IT & IT-enabled services; chemicals & petrochemicals; minerals and metals; oil and gas. There is a tremendous need for development of these sectors both in India, with its vast population to cater to and the Arab world.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, we shall have the pleasure of listening to experts from the above fields during the different sessions today and tomorrow and there will be opportunities for business delegations and project companies to interact and identity future projects.

I take this opportunity to wish all success to the participants of this Conference. I am sure India and the Arab world would find the Conference of immense value in devising ways and means to ensure a better tomorrow for our peoples.

India’s ‘Connect Central Asia’ Policy
Excellency Madame Roza Otunbaeva, Excellency Madame Dinara Kemelova, Deputy Foreign Minister of Kyrgyz Republic, Distinguished scholars and academics from Central Asia and India,
Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen

It is an honour and privilege for me to speak to such a distinguished audience of scholars, experts and business leaders, in the beautiful city of Bishkek. I congratulate the Indian Council of World Affairs on putting together this pioneering dialogue forum and thank our friends in the Kyrgyz Republic for being gracious enough to host this event with so much aplomb and enthusiasm. We have had many events in India where we have welcomed scholars from Central Asia, but this is the first instance, where we have reached out to Central Asia’s intellectuals and opinion leaders in their own home, bringing to the table the rich knowledge and experience of India’s scholars and business persons.

Today’s event is also a fitting celebration of the two decades of India’s diplomatic relations with the Kyrgyz Republic, which has been our valued friend in Central Asia, and with which we now share a special bond after the recent bold experiment in parliamentary democracy.

In my remarks, I will dwell upon India’s vision of its role in Central Asia. Today, India is reconnecting with this neighbourhood, with which we are bound by the silken bonds of centuries of common history.

Central Asia, over the last two decades in general and recently in particular, is witnessing an unprecedented integration into the global economic and political mainstream. We, in India, rejoice in this trend of the expanding influence of Central Asia, particularly on the world energy scene. We recognise Central Asian countries as close political partners in our ‘extended neighbourhood’, a precept which has become a key element of our foreign policy.

Our civilisational bonds with Central Asian countries have been translated into warm and friendly relations, with India being among the first countries to open diplomatic missions in all the five capitals. We have had a robust exchange of visits of our leaders, and have signed numerous cooperation agreements. Our policy has been marked by deepening relationships based on political, economic and technical cooperation as a partner, rather than a mere contender for the region’s vast oil and gas resources. We have shared our experiences and expertise, built capacity and focused on training through our ITEC and other assistance programmes.

India's cultural heritage is deeply rooted in the Eurasian past. Indian traders and travelers had actively traded along the Silk Route and Buddhism had flourished across the vast Eurasian steppe. History is full of friendly interactions between India and Central Asia, through movement of people, goods and ideas, including spiritual interfaces that enriched us both. The fondness for Indian culture is expressed in Central Asia’s deep interest in Indian cinema, music, and art. This interest intensified further in Soviet times.

However, in the last few decades, we have been struggling to build economic links that match our political and cultural interaction. Our trade with the whole region is at a relatively low level of around 500 million US dollars. We face some natural obstacles like limited land connectivity and the limited size of the Central Asian markets. India has thus not seen the sort of commercial interaction in Central Asia, which we saw in Southeast Asia, East Asia and West Asia. This has led to a joint quest for innovative answers, some of which we look upon this dialogue to throw up.

India is now looking intently at the region through the framework of its ‘Connect Central Asia’ policy, which is based on pro-active political, economic and people-to-people engagement with Central Asian countries, both individually and collectively.

I believe that India’s active presence in the region will contribute to stability and development in the entire Central and South Asia region. In this analysis, we must factor in the regional situation and especially the challenge of rebuilding the Afghan nation. A cooperative approach for embedding Afghanistan into a more meaningful regional economic and security framework, would have benefits for the entire region. One way is to work towards converting Afghanistan into a hub for trade and energy, connecting Central and South Asia. The landmark agreement for the construction of the TAPI (Turkmenistan-Afghanistan-Pakistan-India) pipeline has put the spotlight on the importance of Central Asia for India’s future energy plans. It would also greatly benefit Afghanistan.

Central Asian countries could also gain from the techno-economic potential of India, which could be accessed in cooperative, mutually beneficial partnerships. Central Asia’s desire for diversifying hydro-power and energy export routes would correspond with India’s quest for diversifying imports. India will be keen to invest in setting up downstream production facilities, instead of exporting raw materials out of the region through expensive pipelines. The approach could differ from those seeking exclusively to pump out Central Asia’s riches.

It is also important to remember that India has never been prescriptive in its political approach. We represent our unique liberal democratic values, particularly in the Asian context. We believe in a nation-building model based on participatory democracy, economic growth, building civil societies, pluralistic structures, ethno-religious harmony and the rule of law.

Against this backdrop, let me outline some of the elements of India’s ‘Connect Central Asia’ policy, which is a broad-based approach, including political, security, economic and cultural connections:

1. We will continue to build on our strong political relations through the exchange of high level visits. Our leaders will continue to interact closely both in bilateral and multilateral fora.

2. We will strengthen our strategic and security cooperation. We already have strategic partnerships in place with some Central Asian countries. In focus will be military training, joint research, counter-terrorism coordination and close consultations on Afghanistan.

3. We will step up multilateral engagement with Central Asian partners using the synergy of joint efforts through existing fora like the SCO, Eurasian Economic Community (EEC) and the Custom Union. India has already proposed a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement to integrate its markets with the unifying Eurasian space.

4. India looks to Central Asia as a long term partner in energy, and natural resources. Central Asia possesses large cultivable tracts of land and we see potential for India to cooperate in production of profitable crops with value addition.

5. The medical field is another area that offers huge potential for cooperation. We are ready to extend cooperation by setting up civil hospitals/clinics in Central Asia.

6. India’s higher education system delivers at a fraction of the fees charged by Western universities. Keeping this in mind, India would like to assist in the setting up of a Central Asian University in Bishkek that could come up as a centre of excellence to impart world class education in areas like IT, management, philosophy and languages.

7. We are working on setting up a Central Asian e-network with its hub in India, to deliver, tele-education and tele-medicine connectivity, linking all the five Central Asian States.

8. Our companies can showcase India’s capability in the construction sector and build world class structures at competitive rates. Central Asian countries, especially Kazakhstan, have almost limitless reserves of iron ore and coal, as well as abundant cheap electricity. India can help set up several medium size steel rolling mills, producing its requirement of specific products.
9. As for land connectivity, we have reactivated the International North-South Transport Corridor (INSTC). We need to join our efforts to discuss ways to bridge the missing links in the Corridor at the earliest and also work on other connecting spurs along the route.

10. Absence of a viable banking infrastructure in the region is a major barrier to trade and investment. Indian banks can expand their presence if they see a favourable policy environment.

11. We will jointly work to improve air connectivity between our countries. India is one of the biggest markets for outbound travelers estimated at USD 21 billion in 2011. Many countries have opened tourist offices in India to woo Indian tourists. Central Asian countries could emerge as attractive holiday destinations for tourists and even for the Indian film industry which likes to depict exotic foreign locales in its films.

12. Connections between our peoples are the most vital linkages to sustain our deep engagement. I would particularly like to emphasise exchanges between youth and the future leaders of India and Central Asia. We already have a robust exchange of students. We will encourage regular exchanges of scholars, academics, civil society and youth delegations to gain deeper insights into each other's cultures.

India thus stands ready for a deep, meaningful and sustained engagement with Central Asia. We need our Central Asian friends to create favourable visa conditions to accept India's benign presence. Perhaps the governments of all the five states will agree to simplify these procedures.

India’s Connect Central Asia Policy will be consonant with our overall policy of deepening engagement in Eurasia, our policy of strengthening relations with China, with Pakistan, and building on our traditional relationship with Russia. We hope that our membership in numerous regional forums including at the SCO, would bolster India’s renewed linkages with the region.

Collectively, we must also think about creating a cooperative security structure for maintaining peace in Asia. Our policy of peaceful coexistence and of playing a constructive and meaningful role in the United Nations (now also as a non-permanent member of the UN Security Council) will drive us to work with a deep sense of responsibility on all global issues. India’s engagement in Central Asia, therefore, must be seen in the context of a quest for a world order which is multipolar.

With these remarks, I invite the galaxy of experts and thinkers present here to take the stage and deliberate more on some of these ideas. I wish the seminar all success.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by congratulating you on presiding over this High Level Meeting on peace and security in West Asia and North Africa. I also want to thank the UN Secretary General and the Secretary General of the League of States for their valuable statements.

2. Mr. President, developments in West Asia and North Africa have played a major role in shaping the history of the world since ancient times. The region has been the birthplace of major religions of the world and of great civilizations. By virtue of the genius of its peoples, its strategic location and its natural resources, the region has been a focus of considerable interest internationally. It is, therefore, not surprising that the momentous transformation in several countries of the region since late 2010 has been of great interest to the world at large. It has been a general aspiration that these transformations should be peaceful and lead to inclusive and democratic outcomes within these countries.

3. The League of Arab States, as the most important regional organization predating the United Nations, has played a significant role in the unfolding of events in the region, and guided the involvement of the international community in these events. Chapter VIII of the UN Charter recognizes the importance of the regional organizations and their role in matters related to the maintenance of international peace and security. The Charter also provides a broad framework for this Council's cooperation with the regional organizations, while clearly stating the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security.

4. The cooperation between the Arab League and the United Nations started in early 1950's. Both organizations have benefited from the convergence of objectives to maintain international peace and security, despite occasional differences. Enhanced partnership between UN agencies and the Arab League at institutional level in the fields of human development, capacity building, and empowerment of women and youth have been of great benefit for the countries of the region. There is a need now for further strengthening the existing cooperation to help the countries in the region in meeting the aspirations of their people for playing a greater role in shaping their destiny. India stands ready to cooperate in this regard.

5. Mr. President, it is important to underline here that this Council's cooperation with regional organizations, particularly with the League of Arab States should avoid selectivity. Also, cooperation with one regional organization should not come at the cost of another. The objective of peaceful resolution of conflicts should determine the actions of the Security Council. All UN activities, including its cooperation with regional organizations, should be consistent with the provisions of the UN Charter.

Both organizations should use all tools of diplomacy to assist the concerned countries in transiting to an inclusive and participatory polity while maintaining social stability and cohesion. The cooperation should encompass all relevant issues related to international peace and security, particularly the fight against terrorism. The principles of national sovereignty, political independence, unity and territorial integrity must be respected. It is also important that peculiarities of each situation are kept in mind.

6. Mr. President, if there is one issue that requires immediate attention of both the United Nations and the League of Arab States, it is the Arab-Israeli conflict, including the Israeli-Palestinian issue. This issue cannot be ignored while we focus on recent developments in the region. There can be no durable peace in West Asia without a just and comprehensive settlement, based on the realization by the Palestinian people of their inalienable right to a state of their own with internationally recognized borders, living side by side and in peace and security with Israel. We, therefore, urge this Council as well as the Arab League to urgently facilitate the resumption of the Middle East Peace Process.

7. Mr. President, the League of Arab States has been playing an important role in resolving the Syrian crisis. We fully support the peaceful resolution of the conflict through a Syrian-led inclusive political process, based on firm rejection of any military intervention. We urge all sides, Syrian and foreign, to cooperate with Joint Special Representative Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi in good faith so that the Syrian crisis can be resolved without any further bloodshed.

I thank you.
Address by the Vice President at the inauguration of the Seminar organized by the Centre for Research in Rural and Industrial Development (CRRID) on Central Asia.

Chandigarh, October 17, 2012.

"I came to the Centre for Research in Rural and Industrial Development (CRRID) almost five years back to deliver the Haksar Memorial Lecture. I am therefore happy to be on familiar territory once again, to share my thoughts on a subject of considerable importance.

A gathering of scholars to discuss Central Asia is relevant for more than one reason. The region is in our proximate neighbourhood and is therefore of geopolitical salience. The surprising thing is that we do not know enough about it.

Historically speaking, the geographical term ‘Central Asia’ came into the vocabulary of European scholars and governments only in the middle of the 19th century. In the year 1900 the famous Russian historian Victor Barthold could find little about the recorded history of the area before the Arab conquest of 7th-8th centuries. A seminar organized by the Embassy of India, Tashkent in March 2000 sought to collate available information, mainly archaeological, on the relations between India and Central Asia in the pre-Islamic period. On the other hand, we do have sufficient evidence of conquerors and conquests, of movement of people, and of trade in the medieval and pre-modern periods. The National Archives of India have recently published an interesting travelogue of Munshi Mohan Lal who accompanied the British envoy Alexander Burns to Turkistan in 1831 on what was called ‘a knowledge-gathering’ exercise. Burn’s own account, of course, remains a classic.

In more recent times, both Czarist Russia and the Soviet Union kept it a virtually ‘closed’ region. This changed with the demise of the Soviet state and the emergence of the five republics, the so-called ‘stans’, as independent entities, eager to retrieve their cultural identities, benefit from their economic resources, and play a role on the world stage. By the same token the geo-political space, and its accompanying benefits, vacated by the erstwhile Soviet Union, was sought to be taken by others.

CRRID is therefore to be complemented for undertaking this initiative of seeking perspectives on the potential for cooperation between Central and South Asia for peace, security and development.

My impression is that different aspects of modern Central Asia are being studied in different research institutions in the country and the need of the hour is to enhance coordination and cooperation amongst them to avoid overlapping, ensure better utilization of available resources and, eventually, more meaningful inputs."
for our foreign policy objectives. Greater attention also needs to be devoted to language skills and the study of social impulses in individual societies. Diligent field work is essential for both and must be undertaken.

This audience knows well that foreign policy formulation rarely begins with a clean slate. Its building blocks, instead, consist of ground realities. Aspirations and objectives help give it shape; the baggage of the past is sought to be avoided but is rarely achieved comprehensively. Success thus lies, as Henry Kissinger put it, in ‘patient accumulation of partial successes.’ It is thus evident that the new ground realities in the post-Soviet period called for a redefining of India’s strategic interests in the region. Our primary interest was stability in the region. The task of diplomacy was to build new relationships and protect and enhance economic and commercial interests. We were successful in the first and are still struggling with the second.

Culturally, and apart from historical linkages and affinities, the access given to India during Soviet times through the establishment of a consulate general in Tashkent, allowed us to promote educational and commercial exchanges with Uzbekistan.

Over the past two decades and despite being land locked, Central Asia emerged as one of the fastest growing regions in the world, and has displayed considerable development potential. It is resource rich in terms of oil, gas, gold, cotton, rare-earths, has relatively advanced infrastructure and human capital, and enjoys the benefit of a strategic location between Asia and Europe. Many of the Central Asian Republics have embarked on market-oriented economic reforms to boost private sector competitiveness and economic performance. As a result, leading and aspiring powers are active in the region in quest of natural resources, energy pipelines and transit routes leading to wide ranging geopolitical considerations pertaining to security, prevention of drug and arms smuggling, and countering terrorism and fundamentalism.

India’s own approach to the region has evolved over these twenty years and has recently been spelt out in its “Connect Central Asia” Policy. This is focused on identification and furtherance of mutually beneficial interests, development of access routes and options, sharing of developmental experience in nation building, offering economic and technical assistance, and furtherance of cultural and educational cooperation.

Pursuant to it, we have entered into Strategic Partnership agreements with three of the five Central Asian Republics – Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan and Tajikistan and have increased co-operation and dialogue between specialized security agencies and the defence forces.

Furtherance of trade and economic co-operation with the region, beginning with Afghanistan, hinges on connectivity which in turn, is intrinsically dependent on access-route options and its policy and practical implications. The easiest route, through Pakistan and Afghanistan, appears totally dependent on a good mix of human wisdom and divine intervention; both seem elusive in the foreseeable future! A second point of access, through Iran and Afghanistan, is a real possibility and appears now to take shape through the proposed development of the Chabahar port and the completion of the Zaranj-Delaram highway. A variant of this for Central Asian states, dependent on the upgrading of railway network in Iran, could be the Iran-Turkmenistan route. Both would require fine tuning of policy and longer term financial commitments. Other options, through China or Russia, would be grossly uneconomical.

Other elements of the twelve-point ‘Connect Central Asia’ Policy are in various stages of initiative and implementation and have evoked positive responses from the Central Asian States. The emphasis on our political approach being non-prescriptive, while holding on to our own value system, is timely.

No discussion on Central Asia and its immediate neighbourhood would be complete without taking on board the challenges arising out of the situation in Afghanistan. The lesson of history is that hegemonic prescriptions do not sustain themselves and result in greater chaos. The entire region would therefore benefit if realistic alternatives are thought of and Afghanistan drawn into a cooperative regional economic and security framework so that nation-building there could proceed based on economic development, social harmony, rule of law and participatory democracy in consonance with the wishes of the Afghan people. Such an approach should be underwritten by the United Nations and all interested powers.

Though India is not part of any regional grouping so far, our role in regional fora like the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) & Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia (CICA) would serve to strengthen India’s renewed links with the region. India’s engagement in Central Asia is also part of our belief in a multi-polar world.

The world of tomorrow cannot and must not be visualized on the patterns of a past that resulted in misery and bloodshed. India wishes to eschew archaic concepts of Great Game and Grand Chessboard and, instead, be a partner for peace, stability and economic development in the region. India also hopes that the people of Central Asia do not give quarter to fundamentalism and religious extremism in their respective societies since these trends are disruptive and hamper progress.

I wish the Seminar success in its deliberations and thank the CRRID for inviting me today.”
AZERBAIJAN

New Delhi, April 17, 2002.

The 2nd Session of the India - Azerbaijan Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade (IGC), Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation was held in Baku, was co-chaired by Mr. Jyotiraditya M. Scindia, Minister of State for Commerce & Industry, Government of India and Mr. Huseynzulu Baghirov, Minister of Ecology and Natural Resources of Republic of Azerbaijan. Shri Scindia stressed necessity of establishing the International North-South transport corridor (INSTC) to improve the connectivity problems between the two nations and called for joint efforts towards identifying issues and impediments in the smooth functioning of the Corridor. The Minister added that the development would lead to saving in transportation costs and time. He also advocated early finalization of a Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement (BIPPA) and the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) between the two countries to encourage investment flows and elevate investor's confidence. A Protocol signed at the end of the meeting identified key areas of cooperation such as pharmaceuticals, energy, transport, agriculture and IT sectors and also suggested steps to overcome the existing barriers. It also recommended specific measures like finalisation and implementation of agreements to give a legal basis and provide comfort to the economic and financial relationship.

Shri Scindia emphasized the need to establish closer institutional linkages between investment promotion agencies in Azerbaijan and India in order to promote two way investment which is currently is at a modest level. He specifically enumerated the sectors, such as, Petroleum, Information Technology, Food Processing, Pharmaceuticals, as having the maximum potential.

During his stay in Baku, Shri Scindia called on the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan Mr. Ilham Heydaroglu Aliyev and the two leaders discussed the overall bilateral relations. Both leaders felt that the current economic engagements are not enough to justify the potential that exists between the two countries. The President of Azerbaijan said that his country attaches significant importance to bilateral particularly economic relationship with India, and hoped that within next year or two; there will be substantial increase in bilateral trade and investment. President Aliyev lauded India’s achievement in the IT sector and expressed his desire to use Indian expertise in this area. The Azeri President also commended India’s achievements in the Space science and identified this as another hi-tech sector for cooperation. He invited Indian companies and skilled workers for civil construction work being undertaken in Azerbaijan to improve its infrastructure. MoS, in his response, spoke about several complementaries between the two economies and needs to exploit the same for the mutual benefit. He also conveyed to the Azeri President, India’s keen desire to participate in the exploration and development of Oil and Gas field in Azerbaijan and usage of BTC pipeline for evacuation of oil to meet India’s energy security needs. While emphasizing the need for more people to people contact, the MoS brought to the notice of the Azeri President issues related to Visas for the Indian businesses.

MoS Commerce & Industry also met Mr. Shahin Mustafayev, Minister of Economic Development of the Republic of Azerbaijan and exchanged views on issues for promotion of economic relations between the two countries. Mr. Mustafayev informed the Indian Minister about the steps taken by Azeri Government to step up the growth of its economy and, its efforts to reduce dependence on Petroleum thereby making it broader based which has already started showing the positive results.
BAHRAIN

400. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on widespread civil disturbances in Bahrain.

New Delhi, April 13, 2012.

In response to a media question regarding an incident in Bahrain the Official Spokesperson said: “We have seen reports in the media of a bomb attack on April 09 at Al Eker in Bahrain resulting in serious injuries. We condemn such acts of violence. Our Embassy in Manama, Bahrain is closely monitoring the situation and has conveyed that all Indians in Bahrain are safe.”

The spokesperson was referring to widespread anti-government civil unrest in the wake of pro-democracy protests marches in the capital city of Manama.

New Delhi, June 1, 2012.

His Royal Highness Shaikh Salman bin Hamad Al Khalifa, Crown Prince and Deputy Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces of Kingdom of Bahrain paid an official visit to India on May 30-31, 2012 at the invitation of Hon'ble Vice-President of India. A high level official and business delegation accompanied the Crown Prince. He visited Mumbai and New Delhi.

2. In Mumbai, the Crown Prince met with the Governor of Maharashtra. He also met with some of the captains of the Indian industry. During his stay in New Delhi, the Crown Prince called on the Hon'ble President and met with the Hon'ble Vice President, the Prime Minister and the Minister for External Affairs. A Banquet dinner was hosted by the Vice-President in honour of the visiting dignitary at the Hyderabad House.

3. Our common civilizational links, close and friendly bilateral ties were recalled during the visit. The need to further strengthen this relationship by developing synergies and integrating the comparative advantages of the two economies with a view to raise the trade to a higher level and enhance Indian investments in Bahrain and Bahraini investments in India was recognized by the two sides. The Crown Prince and the business delegation held business meetings in Mumbai and Delhi which will provide a new impetus to bilateral business ties. The following Agreement/ Memorandum of Understanding were signed.

(i) Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Kingdom of Bahrain for Exchange of Information with respect to Taxes.

(ii) Memorandum of Understanding between Government of the Republic of India and Government of the Kingdom of Bahrain on Cooperation in the Field Of Information and Communication Technology.

4. Both sides agreed on the importance of maintaining high-level contacts and increase the frequency of interactions in order to broaden and deepen bilateral ties. The Indian leadership expressed its appreciation to the HRH the Crown Prince and the Kingdom of Bahrain in ensuring the safety and well-being of the Indian community in Bahrain. Issues of mutual concern in the region were discussed and the importance attached by India to peace and stability in the entire region was emphasized. Both sides also underlined the need to resolve all differences through peaceful dialogue and without recourse to violence.

5. His Royal Highness the Crown Prince of the Kingdom of Bahrain thanked the President, the Vice-President and the Prime Minister and the External Affairs Minister for the warm reception and gracious hospitality accorded to him and his delegation.

In response to a media query on the series of bomb blasts in Bahrain, the Official Spokesman said: "We have seen reports of series of bomb blasts in Bahrain this morning. We have also been informed that one Indian has been killed and another injured in the blasts. We strongly condemn the violence. We conveyed our serious concern to the authorities in Bahrain. We hope, and are confident, that the authorities in Bahrain will ensure security to our citizens living and working in Bahrain."
EGYPT

Cairo, March 3, 2012.

H.E. Dr. Shaker Abdel Hameed, Minister of Culture, Arab Republic of Egypt; Ambassador Swaminathan; Distinguished Members in the Audience and Representatives of Young India

I am delighted to be here in Egypt. When I entered the hallowed district of Al Azhar, where the House of Poetry is located, I realized why Cairo is referred to as “Umm Al Duniya”, the mother of the world. This is the city that gave birth to so many luminaries of poetry. The House of Poetry, a heritage building, is indeed an appropriate place to nurture that legacy.

I also come from an ancient land where we value such a heritage. Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, one of India’s greatest sons, is remembered 70 years after his death, not only for his lyrical poetry, his melodious songs, his marvelous dance dramas but also his path breaking ideas as an educationist. Most importantly, Gurudev Tagore’s humanist philosophy believed in the essential oneness of humanity.

As we strive to preserve our distinct identities as individuals, groups, communities and nations, it is important to recognize and celebrate our commonalities. I quote these celebrated lines from the Gitanjali:

Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high;
Where knowledge is free;
Where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls;
Where words come out from the depth of truth;
Where tireless striving stretches its arms towards perfection;
Where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit;
Where the mind is led forward by thee into ever-widening thought and action
Into that heaven of freedom, my Father, let my country awake.
As Ambassador Swaminathan has said Gurudev Tagore visited Egypt twice, first as a 17 year old in 1878 and later as a mature poet philosopher in 1926.

There is an interesting anecdote from his second visit to Cairo in 1926. On 28 November, 1926 he was invited to the great Egyptian poet Ahmed Shawqi’s house for a lecture. Many political leaders attended the lecture. In fact, the Parliament session which was to begin at 5 P.M was postponed by an hour to accommodate this function.

Tagore wrote in his travelogue, “I was told that this was unprecedented and that this it could not have been done for anyone else. This was indeed a novel way to show me their respect. I said this was homage paid to knowledge by politics. This was possible only in the East.”

I am conscious as I stand in the House of Poetry that for the second time Tagore has been greatly honoured in this country. It is befitting that this is taking place during the observance of 150th birth anniversary celebrations of Gurudev Tagore in Egypt. It is also a testimony of the great friendship enjoyed between India and Egypt.

I am happy to note that the Indian Council for Cultural Relations, which commissioned this portrait, earned the distinction of making this unique and lasting contribution to the House of Poetry. I am confident that we would have more such cultural exchanges between our two peoples, which would further strengthen our bonds of friendship.

Thank You.
404. Media Statement by External Affairs Minister at the Joint Press Conference following the 6th India-Egypt Joint Commission Meeting.

Cairo, March 4, 2012.

Your Excellency Mr. Mohamed Kamel Amr, Foreign Minister of Egypt

Distinguished representatives of Media,

I am delighted to be here in Cairo; this is my first visit to Egypt. Since my arrival, I have had the opportunity to meet His Excellency Field Marshal Mohamed Hussein Tantawi, Chairman, Supreme Council of Armed Forces and His Excellency Dr. Kamal El Ganzoury, Prime Minister.

I have just concluded very useful and productive discussions with Foreign Minister Kamel Amr and co-chaired with him the sixth session of Egypt-India Joint Commission Meeting.

We reviewed the entire gamut of our bilateral relations during the just concluded Joint Commission Meeting. Foreign Minister Kamel Amr and I accepted the recommendations of four sub-committees on Trade & Economic Co-operation, Scientific & Technical Co-operation, Cultural Co-operation and Information Technology on strengthening bilateral relations in these sectors.

We also signed four documents including an MoU on Cooperation in the field of Environment Protection, Cultural Exchange Programme for the years 2012-15, Work Plan for Agricultural Cooperation between Indian Council of Agricultural Research and Agricultural Research Centre of Egypt for the year 2012-13 and a MoU between Egyptian Organisation for Standardisation and Bureau of Indian Standards.

Yesterday, Egyptian Minister of Culture and I unveiled a portrait of Rabindranath Tagore, renowned litterateur and the first Asian to receive the Nobel Prize in Literature, at the House of Poetry. I was very happy to know that Tagore is the first non-Arab poet whose portrait has been installed at the House of Poetry.

This morning the Prime Minister of Egypt suggested that a multisectoral Indian delegation with representatives from both private and public sectors visit Egypt to focus on concrete areas of economic cooperation. I have welcomed this proposal and requested the Egyptian side to identify specific sectors of their interest so that we can take the proposal forward. We hope that this delegation will visit Egypt shortly for focussed and productive discussions.

I also met His Excellency Dr. Nabil El Araby Secretary General of League of Arab States. India and Arab League has been holding regular political consultations since the signing of a Memorandum of Cooperation in 2008. The first meeting of the High Level Joint Committee of Arab-India Cooperation Forum was held in Cairo last week.
Central and West Asia 1269

India has a robust cooperation arrangement with Arab countries and particularly with Arab League. Arab world and India share civilisational links, common cultural values and political beliefs and enjoy strong economic ties. With these activities, we propose to strengthen India-Arab cooperation further.

India-Egypt relations are over five millennium years old. In modern times, our relations were soundly founded on shared ideology and common beliefs. India has always viewed Egypt as a stabilising factor in the region and in the world.
Egypt has consistently played a vital role in the Non-Aligned Movement and championed the cause of the developing world. Our bilateral relations constitute a factor of peace and stability in international relations.

The leaderships of our two countries maintain close contact through regular Ministerial visits and exchanges at the highest level. Prime Minister Dr.
Manmohan Singh’s visit in 2009 for the NAM summit was followed by visits of a number of Ministerial delegations to Egypt. Our bilateral trade of 3 billion US Dollars last year is promising to grow in the coming years. Indian investment of 2.5 billion dollars is generating employment for 30,000 Egyptians. None of the Indian companies who had invested in Egypt have left the country after the Revolution. In fact, one more Indian factory has been established in Ain Sukhna.

I thanked Foreign Minister Mohamed Kamel Amr for the warm hospitality extended to me and my delegation. I also take this opportunity to wish Egypt success in all its endeavours.

Thank you.
405. Response of Official Spokesperson to a question on Presidential election in Egypt.

Egypt, June 25, 2012.

Egypt has successfully conducted its presidential elections. We respect and welcome the verdict of the people of Egypt and extend our congratulations to them and President-elect Dr. Mohamed Morsi. We wish the new President all success and reiterate our readiness for enhancing bilateral co-operation.

India and Egypt today signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) in New Delhi, to establish an institutional framework for their ongoing cooperation in the field of election management and administration.

The MOU was signed by the Chief Election Commissioner of India, Shri V.S. Sampath and the Secretary General of the Supreme Presidential Election Committee of Egypt, Justice Hatem Bagato. Election Commissioners, Shri H. S. Brahma and Dr. S.N.A. Zaidi, diplomats and senior officials of the Election Commission of India and Government of India were present at the signing ceremony.

The major aims of MoU are: promotion of exchanges of knowledge and experience in the field of organizational and technical development, with a view to strengthening the administration of electoral processes; exchange of information, material, expertise and technical know how relating to electoral processes and systems; training of personnel and development of human resources, and organizational development and capacity building.

Shri H.S. Brahma, Election Commissioner, in his welcome address, commended the recent rapid strides in election management and administration made by Egypt and expressed confidence that the MoU would pave the way for effective cooperation between the two institutions and will benefit other countries as well.

Shri Sampath expressed the confidence that the MoU would facilitate sharing of best practices, skills and experiences between the two institutions for mutual benefit. He described the MoU as an extremely suitable mechanism for strengthening and carrying forward mutual collaboration in electoral management and administration. He commended the Egyptian Committee for the competence with which the recent Presidential election in Egypt was conducted in the most challenging circumstances. He also offered the Egyptian side to send nominations of its election officials to participate in a special international training course for mid-career election officials which the ECI will organize from 8th to 20th October, 2012 under the ITEC programme of the Government of India.

Justice Bagato stated that India is one of the first countries with which Egypt is seeking to establish sound and comprehensive cooperation in the field of electoral management. He also stated that this MoU is a first step in mutual cooperation and is another building block in the longstanding relations between Egypt and India and it will serve as a framework, setting guidelines on how to maximize the benefits that both sides can get from such collaboration.

Election Commission of India has so far signed thirteen MOUs with Election Management Bodies and international organizations across the world. India and Egypt are already collaborating in the areas of Electronic Voting, Voters Education and Election Tracking Technology. At the request of the Egyptian delegation, they were also given a detailed briefing and demonstration in the ECI, on the working of the Electronic Voting Machine.

407. Joint Media Interaction of External Affairs Minister of India and Foreign Minister of Iran. New Delhi,

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): I welcome you to this media interaction. As is usual we will begin with opening remarks by the two Ministers, following which they have agreed to reply to a few questions. I request Shri S.M Krishna, the External Affairs Minister of India to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Foreign Minister Dr. Ali Akbar Salehi, friends from the media:
I have just had an opportunity to interact with His Excellency Dr. Ali Akbar Salehi, the distinguished Foreign Minister of the Islamic Republic of Iran.
Dr. Salehi is on his first official visit to India. However, such are our cultural, linguistic and civilisational links that it is a widely held belief amongst us that no Iranian can be a stranger in India just as no Indian can be a stranger in Iran. Our monuments, language, cuisine and literature are all evidence of our rich shared heritage.

As you are aware, Iran is set to assume the Chairmanship of the Non-Aligned Movement in August this year. We deeply appreciate the gesture of President Ahamedinejad for deputing His Excellency Dr. Salehi as his Special Envoy to deliver the invitation to Hon. Prime Minister of India to attend the 16th NAM Summit.

I have congratulated Dr. Salehi on Iran assuming this important responsibility later this year, and offered our best wishes for the success of the forthcoming NAM Summit.

India and Iran share the same neighbourhood. Iran is an important neighbour and a crucial trade partner for India, and also a major source of our energy supplies. It is also a gateway for India to Central Asia. India and Iran share an interest in the stability of Central Asia and the Gulf. We also face threats from terrorism and extremism. Dr. Salehi and I have, therefore, taken the opportunity to discuss all these and other issues of common interest. We intend to continue our discussions over lunch.

Dr. Salehi has also vast experience of nuclear issues. I conveyed my appreciation to him for his briefing on the recent discussions between Iran and the P5+1 in Baghdad. India has always held that the nuclear issue should be resolved through peaceful diplomacy, and the framework of the International Atomic Energy Agency provides the best forum to address the technical aspects of this issue.

Thank you.
Foreign Minister of Iran (Dr. Ali Akbar Salehi): Bismillah ir-Rahman ir-Rahim!

In the name of God, Excellency Mr. Minister my dear friend Mr. Krishna, it is indeed a matter of joy, pride and happiness for me to be in India. I do not feel I am in a strange country: I feel I am in my own country.

As was rightly put by His Excellency the Foreign Minister, and as has been very succinctly and vividly stated by Late Nehru, you can rarely find any two countries in the world that enjoy so much commonalities.

India and Iran enjoy a lot of commonalities culturally, linguistically, civilization-wise. And, therefore, the ground for the enhancement of our relationships in all domains is original. We intend, and this is the will of the officials of the two countries, to build a strong foundation on this background.

I am happy to be in India, and I am honoured to deliver the message of our President to His Excellency the Prime Minister of India, inviting him to attend the Non-Aligned Movement Summit which will be held in a few months from now, India being a forerunner and a founder of the Non-Aligned Movement, a movement that probably now has its most important, I would say, presence in offering a platform for most of the developing countries to reflect their views, to demand their rights in the international arena.

The Non-Aligned Movement is the united voice of 120 developing countries that can express themselves in a world where we see a lot of injustice, and we need a voice that would speak for justice, for fairness, and for equal sharing in the management of this world.

So, we discussed with His Excellency a number of issues of mutual interest. We will be continuing discussing the issues of mutual interest.

We decided to hold the 17th Joint Economic Commission soon in Tehran. Our trade with India stands now at about 16 billion dollars, but this is not proportionate to the potential of these two countries.

We are hoping and looking into ways and mechanisms of raising this level of trade between India and Iran. There is so much India can offer to Iran, and Iran I would like to stress here, is a reliable partner of India. It is a reliable source of energy for India. India is an emerging economic power, and its energy demand is ever-increasing. And they should look for resources that are reliable, and Iran is a reliable source for that matter.

Iran will remain a reliable partner for India. We have enjoyed in the past very good relationship. Our relationship now is very good and we hope that we enhance further this bilateral relationship.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to answer a few questions.
Question (Ms. Devi Rupa, New Indian Express): Sir, the question is to both the Ministers. The West Asian region has been currently the focus of intense global attention, but now its voice has not been heard so far. Do you think the Movement has any relevance at all? Do you think you can find a common voice on issues like Syria?

Foreign Minister of Iran: As I said, if you go through the history of development of NAM, NAM was developed in the early 60s when we had the two sources of power in the world - the West and the East. And there were countries that would have liked to be independent and not to be part of any of these two superpowers at the time. So, when they got together in Indonesia, they set out ten principles, and those principles still are valid and still are I think of importance. The importance of NAM for especially countries in West Asia, as I said, lies in the fact that it could constitute a proper platform for expressing the joint views of these countries. And it is a platform that also could be utilized, it was only for political purposes that it was introduced, but now it could look into other aspects of inter-relationships between the members of NAM, aspects of economic cooperation, aspects of trade cooperation, scientific cooperation, cultural cooperation. So, NAM I think, if it is given the proper attention and India as I said being one of the founders of NAM, could certainly boost these roles of NAM for the betterment and the enhancement of the prosperity of the people living in the countries that are members of the NAM.

External Affairs Minister: NAM has been a very relevant factor in the context of today's geopolitics. History has shown that Non-Alignment is an idea that evolves over a period of time depending upon the various currents and cross currents on a pan global scale. But, the idea does not fade. India is one of the chief movers and shakers of the Non-Aligned Movement right from the beginning of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Marshal Tito, and President Sukarno I think today we have gone a long way in strengthening the Non-Aligned Movement.

The world has changed and the challenges have grown more complex. And the systems of global governance whether in the UN or the international financial institutions, have not kept pace either with the growing interdependence of nations or with contemporary realities. Though we have a global economy of sorts, the global polity does not represent the hopes and fears and aspirations of the majority of the people in the world. The relevance of NAM is of greater value today than ever before.

Question (Mr. Ranjit, Navbharat Times): My question is addressed to Mr. Krishna. US has imposed unilateral sanctions on Iran. Is India respecting US sanctions by reducing oil imports from Iran?

External Affairs Minister: As regards the question of sanctions is concerned, let me say that the United Nations Security Council in its wisdom has passed Resolutions on the issue, and India has always abided by such Resolutions of the Security Council as a responsible member of the international community. As far as other sanctions, those decided either unilaterally or regionally, we are aware of such measures. In a globalised world such actions tend to impact on the market, and our commercial entities take these into account. Such measures should not impact on legitimate trade interests. With respect to our energy we are dependent on imports to meet the bulk of our requirement. Given our growing demand, it is natural for us to try and diversify our sources of imports of oil and gas to meet the objective of energy security. In this context, Iran is a key country for our energy needs and it remains an important source of oil for us.

Question (Ms Parul Chandra, The Asian Age): My question is for Dr. Salehi. There was this attack on an Israeli diplomat in New Delhi in February this year, and Israel accused Iran of being behind the attack. I would like to know your reaction to this. And will Iran cooperate with India in the ongoing probe into the attack?

Foreign Minister of Iran: Being a nation with 3000 years of written history, a nation that has introduced civilization into the world, good governance into the world, a nation that continued to produce so many poets, a nation that speaks of ethics and it has based all its life on ethics, we have been accused so many times over so many things. I was just joking with a friend that even the blame for the tsunami in Indonesia may be put on Iran. It was just a few months ago that there was another blame that Iran was intending to assassinate the Ambassador of Saudi Arabia in Washington. What happened? I would like to ask the press to go and see what happened to this accusation. So, we totally refute any action of this sort. We at the same time would like to put the record clear when the Israelis themselves, the Zionist regime, they expressed just a few days ago that they are introducing all these what they called these viruses, the computer viruses, into our industry, and they expressed as if it is a matter of pride, and the international community does not react. And when they assassinate our best scientists, our young scientists, they were in just the beginning of their career and having their young children now without fathers, and then they expressed very loudly that they were the ones who assassinated. It is them that the international community have to ask them who is the perpetrator, who is the assassin. They have given assassination a kind of legality when it comes to assassinating the Palestinians. So, we totally refute the allegation. And the world conscience knows, we do not need to really bother ourselves, the world conscience knows about the Zionist regime and how they do their business in the world. It is themselves that have to be answerable to all kinds of atrocities that have been committed against the Palestinian people.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen, we come to the end of this event.
408. Report regarding India allegedly banning U.S.-sanctioned Iranian ships from entering Indian waters.

New Delhi, July 31, 2012.

Government has seen media reports regarding India allegedly banning U.S.-sanctioned Iranian ships from entering Indian waters. These reports are incorrect. With the EU sanctions, which came into effect on July 1, 2012, some complications arose due to the non-availability of P&I club insurance to ships carrying Iranian crude oil. Consequently, a general exemption was granted by Government to foreign ships carrying Iranian crude oil on CIF basis to dock at Indian ports under certain conditions. Subsequently, the national insurance companies have agreed to extend insurance cover to Indian ships for transportation of Iranian crude to India. In view of this, the general exemption granted earlier to oil PSUs for carrying Iranian crude on CIF basis has been withdrawn. We understand that there are some issues yet to be resolved between the national insurance companies and the ship owners regarding the terms of the insurance cover to be provided to Indian ships for carrying Iranian crude oil to India. While the matter is being resolved, permission for ships carrying Iranian crude oil to India on CIF basis is being granted on a case by case basis on the request of oil PSUs.
409. Extracts from the Media Briefing by the Official Spokesperson regarding relations with Iran.

New Delhi, August 31, 2012.

Question: ... (Inaudible)... announcements that you made, but it is about the NAM Summit that just got over. Can you give a little bit of a read-out in terms of the bilateral meeting between the Prime Minister and the President of Iran?

Official Spokesperson: The meeting lasted for about an hour. This was the first meeting. A meeting followed later on between Prime Minister and the Supreme Leader. That meeting lasted for about forty minutes I think. Coming to the first meeting, there was a discussion on the NAM Summit because that was the principal reason for Prime Minister’s visit there. They discussed what were the challenges that are facing NAM and how India and Iran, which was to take over the Chairmanship of NAM, could coordinate on this. They also discussed at some length on the bilateral relations.

Prime Minister did mention that there was scope for increasing Indian exports to Iran, because at the current stage I think the imports from Iran to India are about nine billion dollars more than the exports from India. I think it is about 2.5 billion dollars exports from India and about 13 billion dollars or so imports to India from Iran. They also discussed in this context prospects of increasing the exports from India possibly including wheat exports. There was also a discussion to pursue the issue of Chabahar port both bilaterally and trilaterally with Afghanistan. In that context there were further discussions on infrastructure development projects that can be considered. There was also a discussion about the P5+1 engagement with Iran, and Prime Minister conveyed our position that we hope that this would lead to a successful outcome for peace and security in the region. These were broadly the issues that I can recollect from that meeting.

Question: What was the Iranian President’s response in terms of the nuclear issue, this P5+1 engagement?

Official Spokesperson: He gave an update of where the discussions were. You would appreciate we could not share that sort of an update of what was discussed between the two leaders on that.

Question: In this connection, has there been any decision on the Iranian offer of 100 million investment to India for Chabahar project? Also, as far as I understand, the EU sanctions on Iran put a cap of 20 million dollars per annum per company investment in Iran. This is a hundred million dollar project. Can you just throw some light on that?

Official Spokesperson: First of all I do not know which project you are talking of which is of 100 million dollars I think when the Foreign Secretary was here... last week he did mention that there are several options. We have not decided which of these options we would choose, if at all. There are several options based on what level of interest and what importance we have for each of these. These are only in the preliminary stage because we have just got that report by I think the Indian Ports Association. So, at this stage let us not talk of figures because there is no decision at all on this. They have appointed a Joint Working Group, as you are perhaps aware of. In three months’ time when the External Affairs Minister visits Tehran in November, we hope to have some movement on that between now and then. That is regarding the project.

Now, let me also clarify that I do not think there are any EU sanctions which lead to measures against third countries. To my knowledge, EU sanctions relate to import from Iran and not measures against for third countries. There are of course other measures imposed by other than the EU that have measures mentioned by you and we are well aware of this. Let me assure you that the Government of India will take all these into account when we finally decide on this. I do not want to get into further details on this. We will have occasion to share with you, if at all we opt for an option what it is and how this will play out. So, let us wait for a decision on this before we answer that.

Question: Was there any bilateral meeting with the President of Egypt? There was talk of a pull-aside meeting. What happened?

Official Spokesperson: I understand there was a short pull-aside meeting. We are not privy to the details. There was supposed to be a structured meeting. It did not happen because the President of Egypt and the Prime Minister of India were both on the podium at the time that this meeting was scheduled to be held in a more structured manner. However, they had occasion because they were in a room where only Heads of State and Government were there, before they came over to the main hall. Prime Minister did mention that he had a short discussion with the President of Egypt. I am not privy to those details. But it was not a structured meeting and there was nobody else available. So, at this stage we should leave it at that.

Question: ... (Inaudible)... the Iranian nuclear programme.

Official Spokesperson: I think we have made our position clear several times. I do not want to go into this because this is available on the record. Perhaps this is one of the few times maybe you have come here, so it is new to you. I think we have made our position very clear and I do not want to repeat that. Our votes in the IAEA are available to see on what is our position. To encapsulate it into a one-liner for you would be difficult. I would certainly advise you to have a look at some of our statements. I will certainly send you those statements so that you have a broader appreciation of our views on this whole issue.

Question: Sir, Defence Minister A.K. Anthony has given an assurance to the delegation led by Mr. Narayanasamy along with Tamil Nadu Members of Parliament that the moment the Prime Minister is back to India, the two military personnel will be sent back to Sri Lanka. What is the current situation?

Official Spokesperson: I must confess that I am not the right person to answer on an assurance that the Defence Minister has given because this is not the Ministry that can answer what the Defence Minister said. That said, it is just I think about two hours ago or two and a half hours ago that the Prime Minister came back. I do not know since then if there have been any developments. You said the moment this happens. I am afraid I cannot answer that question. However, if there is anything that we come to know of, we will certainly share it with you. At this stage, I am not aware of anything and certainly we are not the right Ministry.

I think this question was also asked a few days ago by you and the Foreign Secretary did reply that the Ministry of Defence is considering this issue and whatever is the decision of the Ministry of Defence on this matter, MEA will then pursue and take it further. That remains our position. I do not know of any further details in the last three hours which may have happened since the return of Prime Minister to Delhi.

Question: The Iranians have promised to send oil to India in fully insured ships belonging to Iran. When is this going start because only one ship has brought oil this month and it is charging 70 per cent more than what is the normal practice?

Official Spokesperson: I think we have traversed this a little earlier. There were issues relating to why Indian ships would not get reinsurance. And we have explained that since then there has been an agreement of reinsurance by an Indian insurance company also of specific insurance charges on oil from Iran. So, while that is an option, there are other options also which are available. This is for the oil companies to make that decision. It is not for the Ministry of External Affairs to make a decision either on it or to monitor which ship is bringing what oil. You would appreciate that while we look at the broader policy on this, and if there are any issues that have an impact, it will be brought to our notice both by the Ministry of Shipping and the Ministry of Finance. But at this stage, I am not aware that there has been a further dissonance since the last framework was put into place sometime ago.

IRAQ

410. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry growing bilateral relations with Iraq.

New Delhi, February 27, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma said that India is committed to deepen and elevate its relations with Iraq. He proposed during his meeting with the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Dr. Rowsch N Shaways, here today, that "the Joint Business Council between India-Iraq needs to be activated so that the interaction between businessmen of both the countries could be maintained regularly. The apex Chambers of Commerce should interact on regular basis for arranging Joint Business Meetings to boost the bilateral trade."

The visiting Deputy Prime Minister conveyed that India is the biggest importer of Iraqi oil and this is a firm foundation on which we can further build our economic engagement. He emphasized that there is a need to diversify the trade basket and proposed food, Construction, minerals, IT, pharmaceuticals, energy and Automobile as part of diversifying the existing trade basket. He invited Indian firms to Iraq either in JV or independently. "We are open in all formats and will welcome Indian participation in our reconstruction programme" the Deputy Prime Minister said.

Shri Sharma emphasized that India wants to partner with Iraq in all these areas. "We will be happy to see Indian Companies being encouraged in Iraq’s reconstruction programme and we will also point our companies in that direction" said the Indian Minister. He mentioned that for capacity building of Iraq India is annually providing 120 slots under the Indian Technical Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme to train Government of Iraq officials. Similarly, India is offering 50 scholarships to Iraqi students for higher studies in India under the ‘Cultural Exchange Programme Scholarship Scheme’ (CEP) and the ‘General Cultural Scholarships Scheme (GCSS)’ organizes by the Indian Council for Cultural Relations. The Indian Oil Corporation Limited (IOC) has been providing training in India to the Iraqi officials on various subjects related to downstream oil sector.

Indian Ambassador in Iraq informed the meeting that every day about 160 medical visas are issued to Iraqi citizens. The people to people contacts are developing fast as are also the academic linkages between the two countries particularly in the medical and engineering fields. India has become the most favourite destination for Iraqis for seeking quality medical treatment. More than 28000 Iraqis visited India in 2010 for medical treatment, education and tourism.

Both side agreed to revamp Indian presence in Baghdad International Trade
The Trade Minister of Iraq Dr. Kheer Allah Hassan Babkr who was attending the meeting said there should be no need of third party in India Iraq trade and Indian company should be able to deal directly with the players in Iraq. He singled out Government firms in the fields of Construction and Auto mobile which can deal with Indian firms directly.

Iraq is an important trading partner of India in West Asia. Bilateral trade has registered a 100% increase over the last five years. The total trade has increased from US$ 5.7 billion in 2006-07 to US$ 9.7 billion in 2010-11. The exports from India have gone up from US$ 203.99 million in 2006-07 to US$ 738.65 million in 2010-11. Similarly, imports from Iraq have gone up from US$ 5.5 billion in 2006-07 to US$ 9.0 billion 2010-11. The top five exportable items from India to Iraq are Manufactures of Metals, Electronic Goods, Rice-Basmati, Meat & Preparations, Machinery & Instruments etc. Similarly top five importable items from Iraq to India are Petroleum Crude & Products (99.88%) Fruits & Nuts Excl Cashew Nuts, Sulphr & Unrosted Iron Pyrts, Wool Raw, Organic Chemicals etc. Both the leaders agreed that the bilateral trade does not reflect the full potential and can be further exploited to mutual advantage of both the countries.
Thank you, Mr. President.

I would join other colleagues in thanking Ambassador Nester Osorio for presenting the 90-day report of the 1737 Committee. We commend his stewardship of the Committee and as also the professionalism with which the Committee has been implementing its mandate.

2. Mr. President, the Panel of Experts is mandated to assist the Committee in the implementation of the relevant resolution and has to work under the direction of the Committee. We appreciate the work, including outreach activities, that the Panel has been doing and encourage it to continue its work in strict compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council in an independent, objective, transparent and impartial manner. The Panel should also brief the Committee regularly on all its activities.

3. During the reporting period, the Panel has submitted several reports, including a quarterly update on the implementation reports of the Member States submitted during the period from 1 November 2011 to 31 January 2012. We thank the Panel for these reports, which we are carefully studying. In January this year, three members of the Panel visited India. They had a useful exchange of views with the concerned authorities in New Delhi.

4. Mr. President, India has consistently supported the right of all nations to peaceful uses of nuclear energy in accordance with relevant international treaties to which they are a party. Iran should fully cooperate with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to restore the confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear programme. In this connection, we welcome the recent exchanges between Iran and the IAEA. We hope that the outstanding technical issues concerning the Iranian nuclear programme will be resolved peacefully through Iran’s cooperation with the IAEA. We also welcome the decision to resume talks between the P5 + 1 and Iran. These talks should serve as an important confidence building measure and help avoid escalation of the situation.

5. Mr. President, India supports the full implementation of relevant resolutions of the Security Council concerning the Iranian nuclear issue. While implementing these resolutions, it is necessary that all efforts should be made so that legitimate trade and economic activities do not suffer.

6. In conclusion, Mr. President, we support the Chair’s intention to hold an open briefing along with the Coordinator of the Panel of Experts in April 2012 for interested member-states on implementation procedures. This briefing will also serve as a useful opportunity for the members of the Committee and the Panel to get views of the wider UN membership. I thank you.

ISRAEL

412. Press Release on the visit of Minister of External Affairs to the State of Israel.

New Delhi, January 10, 2012.

H.E. Mr. S.M. Krishna the Minister of External Affairs of India paid an official visit to Israel from January 9-10, 2012.

The Minister began his official program on 9th January by visiting the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial and Museum in Jerusalem which perpetuates and documents the Holocaust. He laid a wreath at the memorial in memory of the Holocaust victims.

On January 9, the Minister called on H.E. Shimon Peres, President of Israel and discussed bilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest. The two leaders discussed issues such as cooperation in science & technology, water management, agriculture and combating terrorism. They also discussed recent developments in South Asia and the Middle-East.

That evening, the Minister of External Affairs and Mr. Avigdor Liberman, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the State of Israel were Chief Guests at a reception hosted by the Ambassador of India. At the reception, the Minister launched celebrations of the 20th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. Among the invitees were representatives from the Parliament, Government, corporate sector, media, academia and Indian community.

On January 10, the Minister met H.E. Mr. Benjamin Netanyahu, Prime Minister, at a 90-minute breakfast meeting in the Prime Minister’s office. In this meeting, EAM and PM Netanyahu reviewed the bilateral relationship and charted out areas of cooperation for the future including energy, trade, agriculture and human resource development. They also had the opportunity to review regional and international developments of mutual interest.

EAM thereafter met Foreign Minister Liberman at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where the latter hosted a lunch in his honour. The two Ministers reviewed ongoing bilateral cooperation and identified areas of cooperation for the future. The delegation level discussions provide an opportunity for the two Ministers to discuss recent developments in the Middle-East and South Asia. The two Ministers signed an Agreement for Reciprocal Extradition of each other’s nationals; and an Agreement for Transfer of Sentenced Persons respectively. They also addressed the media at a joint media interaction.

Dr. Yuval Steinitz, Minister of Finance called on EAM. In this meeting, the two Ministers reviewed the economic and commercial cooperation between the two countries, including status of the Free Trade Agreement, the proposal for a Joint R&D Fund, and other initiatives.

The Minister visited the Indian Hospice in Jerusalem which dates back to the days of the revered Sufi saint Baba Farid. He announced a special grant of US$ 25,000 by the Government of India for setting up a Baba Farid Heritage Centre at the Indian Hospice.

The Minister visited the Cemetery for Indian Soldiers in Jerusalem which was used from July 1918 to June 1920 and contains graves of 79 Indian servicemen of the First World War. The Minister laid wreaths at the memorials for Indian Soldiers and signed the Visitors Book.
Remarks by External Affairs Minister at the reception to commemorate the 20th Anniversary of Establishment of Diplomatic Relations between India and Israel.

Tel Aviv, January 10, 2012.

His Excellency, Mr. Avigdor Liberman, Foreign Minister of Israel

Distinguished members of the Israeli Government,

Ladies & Gentlemen,

Allow me, distinguished Foreign Minister, to first thank you for the warm invitation extended to me to visit Israel and for the excellent arrangements that have been made for this visit. I am delighted to be here and look forward to discussing matters of mutual interest to our two countries.

It is a particular pleasure to be here today to launch the 20th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Israel. I would like to thank Foreign Minister Liberman and all members of this distinguished audience for being present with us on this historic occasion.

Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Twenty years may appear to be a short period but the impressive and multi-faceted development of our bilateral relationship shows how much can be achieved even in a few years given the necessary commitment and goodwill.

Impressive strides have been made in areas of critical importance to both our countries - from agriculture and water management to latest hi-tech applications in communications, health and energy. The reasons for this remarkable cooperation are not far to seek: both our countries share common democratic values which are demonstrated by an active and representative Parliament, a strong judiciary based on Common law principles and an independent media.

Both countries successfully focussed efforts on human resource development, particularly in scientific and technological fields. And India, like Israel, sets great store by innovation as a game changer to bring about radical and rapid change. If Israel is known as the Start-up Nation, then India too has declared the present decade as the Decade of Innovation.

Economic complementarities, which allow the remarkable R&D achievements of Israel to find full play in an open, democratic and growing economy like India, will further enhance the potential of this relationship.

Mr. Foreign Minister, you would agree that this cooperation would not have been possible if there did not exist a wealth of goodwill and cultural empathy between the people of our two countries, demonstrated most obviously by the large number of Israelis tourists visiting India today.

Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Indians and Israelis have shared the pain arising from loss of innocent lives in the dastardly act of terror in Mumbai in 2008 and are determined to fight the forces of terror together.

It is pertinent to note that Jewish people have been a part of the multi-religious and multi-ethnic mosaic of India for centuries. 70,000 of them who have migrated to Israel have not done so from any sense of persecution. They are, in fact, today a strong bridge between the two countries, participating in nation-building in Israel while holding fast to the cultural roots and traditions of the mother country.

In India we are fully engaged in meeting the challenges of poverty eradication and putting the country on the path of high, self-supporting, sustainable and inclusive long-term growth. We note with some sense of satisfaction that we have averaged over 6% growth over the last twenty years and have accelerated this to between 8-9% in the last five years. Despite the global economic downturn, the fundamentals of the Indian economy remain intact, and the growth story is poised to continue.

Yet, huge challenges need to be overcome if we have to sustain this high rate of growth. For instance, India needs world class infrastructure and that needs an investment estimated at 1 trillion US Dollars over the next five years. Not all of this investment can be funded domestically; despite the very high saving rate of 35%, and increasingly we have to look abroad for these resources.

Similarly, more than half of our population still depends on agriculture for its livelihood and upgradation of agricultural productivity, agricultural infrastructure and food processing facilities remain major requirements. To sustain our growth pattern, we need very significant energy inputs from abroad both from conventional energy resources and through new and renewable sources of energy.

Innovative solutions are needed to solve problems related to people’s health, rural communications, agriculture and animal husbandry, green energy, health delivery systems and so on.

India’s integration with the global economy - about 40% of our GDP is today related to external economy - allows us to create opportunities for trade and investment with countries like Israel to meet the challenges that I have outlined.

Excellency, There is ample potential to multiply the bilateral trade figure of 5 billion dollars that we have achieved last year as well as to increase the level of investment between the two countries. The Free Trade Agreement now under negotiation is clearly a step in the right direction. It will give a boost to our economic and commercial ties. Mr. Foreign Minister, I would urge that both our countries, even as we celebrate 20 years of diplomatic relations in 2012, should already be planning ahead for a long and fruitful partnership. I am aware that our Embassy has planned out several events, just as your Embassy has in India, for the coming year. These events aim to intensify our political engagement in several spheres, give further impetus to economic cooperation, infrastructure building and a partnership in innovation.

Particular focus will continue to be on strengthening people-to-people links through a colourful cultural festival and tourism promotion. In all these efforts, we look forward to receiving the full cooperation of our Israeli partners as in the past.

I, once again, take this opportunity to reiterate India’s commitment to usher in a comprehensive and long-term partnership with Israel in diverse areas for the mutual benefit of our people.

Thank you.
Press Release on the visit of Minister of External Affairs to the State of Israel.

New Delhi, January 10, 2012.

H.E. Mr. S.M. Krishna the Minister of External Affairs of India paid an official visit to Israel from January 9-10, 2012.

The Minister began his official program on 9th January by visiting the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial and Museum in Jerusalem which perpetuates and documents the Holocaust. He laid a wreath at the memorial in memory of the Holocaust victims.

On January 9, the Minister called on H.E. Shimon Peres, President of Israel and discussed bilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest. The two leaders discussed issues such as cooperation in science & technology, water management, agriculture and combating terrorism. They also discussed recent developments in South Asia and the Middle-East.

That evening, the Minister of External Affairs and Mr. Avigdor Liberman, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the State of Israel were Chief Guests at a reception hosted by the Ambassador of India. At the reception, the Minister launched celebrations of the 20th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. Among the invitees were representatives from the Parliament, Government, corporate sector, media, academia and Indian community.

On January 10, the Minister met H.E. Mr. Benjamin Netanyahu, Prime Minister, at a 90-minute breakfast meeting in the Prime Minister’s office. In this meeting, EAM and PM Netanyahu reviewed the bilateral relationship and charted out areas of cooperation for the future including energy, trade, agriculture and human resource development. They also had the opportunity to review regional and international developments of mutual interest.

EAM thereafter met Foreign Minister Liberman at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where the latter hosted a lunch in his honour. The two Ministers reviewed ongoing bilateral cooperation and identified areas of cooperation for the future. The delegation level discussions provide an opportunity for the two Ministers to discuss recent developments in the Middle-East and South Asia. The two Ministers signed an Agreement for Reciprocal Extradition of each other's nationals; and an Agreement for Transfer of Sentenced Persons respectively. They also addressed the media at a joint media interaction.

Dr. Yuval Steinitz, Minister of Finance called on EAM. In this meeting, the two Ministers reviewed the economic and commercial cooperation between the two countries, including status of the Free Trade Agreement, the proposal for a Joint R&D Fund, and other initiatives.
The Minister visited the Indian Hospice in Jerusalem which dates back to the days of the revered Sufi saint Baba Farid. He announced a special grant of US$ 25,000 by the Government of India for setting up a Baba Farid Heritage Centre at the Indian Hospice.

The Minister visited the Cemetery for Indian Soldiers in Jerusalem which was used from July 1918 to June 1920 and contains graves of 79 Indian servicemen of the First World War. The Minister laid wreaths at the memorials for Indian Soldiers and signed the Visitors Book.
415. Statement of External Affairs Minister on the incident in New Delhi involving Israeli mission personnel.

New Delhi, February 13, 2012.

We have just received information about an unfortunate incident that took place a little while earlier in which a staff member's family of the Israeli establishment in Delhi has been injured. She has been rushed to the hospital and we are awaiting further information about the well being of the victim. In the meanwhile, India very strongly condemns such incidents and it is going to be fully investigated and the culprits will be brought to justice at the earliest. I have just spoken to the Israeli Foreign Minister and I have reassured the Israeli Foreign Minister that the law of the land will take its course. The investigation has already started and we will continue with it and then keep him posted as and when we get progress report of the investigation. Thank You.

According to media reports there was attempted assassination of an Israeli diplomat in New Delhi. Tal Yehoshua Koren, an embassy official, also the wife of Israel's defence attaché, sustained serious injuries when a bomb fixed to her Innova car went off at 3.15 p.m., less than 500 metres from Prime Minister official residence. Ms. Koren was on her way to pick up her children from school. The reports said she was travelling on the back seat, sustained serious injuries as the blast ripped through the vehicle’s metal body. Her driver was also injured. Delhi Police Commissioner B.K. Gupta quoted eyewitnesses to confirm that “a device had been affixed to the vehicle by a motorcyclist” who passed the car.
LIBYA

416. Press Release on India’s humanitarian assistance to Libya.

New Delhi, January 31, 2012.

The Government of India’s humanitarian assistance consisting of life saving medicines and medical equipment worth US $ 1 million (approximate) was handed over to the National Transitional Council of Libya, in Tripoli, on January 30, 2012 by Shri Rajeev Shahare, Joint Secretary (West Asia & North Africa) in the Ministry of External Affairs.

The National Transitional Council had earlier in Benghazi provided a list of life savings drugs to the Government of India and these medicines were selected as per the requirements of Libya.

It may be mentioned that Government of India had provided assistance worth US $ 1 million in cash earlier to the National Transitional Council through the United Nation’s Office of Commissioner for Humanitarian Aid in New York. The Government of India has been supportive of the people of Libya and has interacted with the National Transitional Council in London, Istanbul and Paris meeting including in the United Nations.

The interim Government of National Transitional Council has been considering sending injured Libyan nationals for their medical treatment to India. Indian authorities welcome this and are looking forward to receive injured Libyan patients in India. In this regard a Libyan delegation has already visited India in December 2011 to tie up treatment of injured Libyan patients in reputed hospitals.

The Government of India is also arranging to send a team of ‘Jaipur Foot’ to Tripoli. The team would be providing prostheses (artificial limbs) to the injured Libyans and would set up a centre in Libya and provide readymade artificial limbs to injured Libyan patients.

PALESTINE

417. Intervention by Minister of State E. Ahamed at the Ministerial Meeting of the NAM Committee on Palestine at Sharm El Sheikh.

Sharm El Sheikh, May 9, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

Thank you very much for this opportunity to address this committee.

I recall that this Committee started its work following a decision taken at the Non-Aligned Movement held in New Delhi in 1983.

India’s deep association with and continuing commitment to Palestine is rooted in our struggle for independence. It has been a central feature of India’s foreign policy even before we achieved independence in 1947.

India has consistently and strongly supported the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace Initiative, the Quartet Roadmap and relevant UN Security Council Resolutions.

We commend the state building efforts of the Palestinian National Authority and their determination for achieving statehood.

Mr. Chairman,

We are concerned at the situation of political prisoners. The expansion of illegal settlement activity is a matter of great concern.

Our Committee and the international community have been making decisions, but the situation remains very difficult and unresolved. We need to think how we can get these decisions implemented.

Mr. Chairman,

Last year, Palestine filed an application for its full membership to the United Nations.

Our Prime Minister, in his speech at the UN General Assembly in September last year, said that India looks forward to welcoming Palestine as an equal member of the United Nations.

We extended our support to the admission of Palestine to UNESCO. We consider it an important step forward towards Palestine joining as a full member of the United Nations.
We have noted Palestine’s proposal made here to approach the UN General Assembly for recognizing its Statehood and upgrading their status. This will have our strong support.

I have had a personal rapport with the Palestinian leadership. I met President Arafat just before his death. In fact, I was the last foreign leader to meet him. I am aware how difficult situation he was facing at that time and the sufferings of his people.

The aspirations of the independence of the Palestinian people have not been achieved so far. Nothing seems to be moving and the settlement activity continues unabated.

President Abbas is facing a very difficult situation and is seeking support from the international community. I personally feel that we should utilize our collective wisdom and work towards implementation of some of the ideas proposed here. Hon’ble Foreign Minister of Indonesia has made certain proposals. We need to see how best the Committee can cooperate in moving forward with this process.

Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, I wish to avail this opportunity to renew India’s commitment to the work of this Committee, confident that under your guidance, we would contribute in ever-larger measure to the work of the Movement in support of the Palestinian people.
418. Media Statement of Prime Minister during the State Visit of President of Palestine to India.

New Delhi, September 11, 2012.

Your Excellency, President Mahmoud Abbas, President of the Palestinian National Authority,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

It is an honour for me to welcome President Mahmoud Abbas on his State Visit to India. He is no stranger to India and, indeed, we regard him as a very special friend.

President Abbas and I have held useful discussions aimed at further expanding and strengthening the India-Palestine partnership, which is rooted in history and flows from our national ethos.

Support for the Palestinian cause has been a cornerstone of India’s foreign policy. During our meeting, I reiterated India’s firm support for the struggle of the Palestinian people to achieve a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel.

India had played an active role in supporting the efforts of the State of Palestine to secure full membership status at UNESCO. We will continue to support Palestine’s bid for full and equal membership of the United Nations.

We also look forward to early resumption of peace talks between the Palestinians and Israelis leading to a comprehensive resolution between the two sides.

Bilaterally, India will continue to support the development and nation-building efforts of Palestine. The MOUs signed today are indicative of our commitment to contribute in the areas of Information & Communication Technology, vocational training and education.

The Government of India will also contribute US Dollar 10 million to Palestine’s budget for this year to help address its financial requirements.

Later today, President Abbas will inaugurate the new Palestinian Embassy building, which has been built with Indian support. The building is a symbol of the enduring friendship between our two countries and peoples.

President Abbas and I also exchanged views on regional developments, particularly the developments in the West Asian and the Gulf region. There is a great degree of similarity in our views. We both agree that the developments in the region must be addressed through political dialogue and peaceful means without recourse to violence and outside interference, while taking into account the legitimate aspirations of all people.

I look forward to working together with President Abbas to further carry forward our special bilateral relations.
419. Response of Official Spokesperson to a media question on violence in Gaza.

New Delhi, November 18, 2012.

In response to a media query regarding violence in Gaza the Official Spokesperson said:"

We are deeply concerned at the steep escalation of violence between Israel and Palestine, focused around Gaza, that threatens the peace and security of that region.

It is, therefore, imperative that the situation be de-escalated urgently as the region is already undergoing turmoil. We urge both sides to exercise maximum restraint and avoid taking any action that may further exacerbate the situation. It may be mentioned that an emergency meeting on Palestine was held at the UN Security Council on November 14 under India’s Presidency to send a strong message from the Council to those concerned to de-escalate the situation and to stop the violence immediately.

It is also necessary that direct talks begin without any further delay between Israel and the Palestinian Authority leading to a comprehensive resolution of the Palestinian situation."

420. Speech by Minister of State E. Ahamed on the occasion of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People organized by Indian Council of World Affairs.

New Delhi, December 6, 2012.

Your Excellency, Mr. Adli Hassan Shaban Sadeq,
Ambassador of Palestine in India;
Your Excellency, Dr. Ahmed Salem Saleh Al-Wahishi, Chief Representative, League of Arab States Mission;
Ms. Lisa Grande,
UN Resident Coordinator;
Director General of the Indian Council of World Affairs Shri Rajiv K. Bhatia;
Excellencies,
distinguished invitees;
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I feel honoured to be here today amidst this august gathering to mark the important occasion of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. All of us present here, representing a wide cross-section of countries, in our own ways are here to express our solidarity with the people of Palestine in their struggle for their legitimate rights.

At this juncture, allow me to extend heartfelt congratulations to the people of Palestine and its leadership for obtaining the ‘Non-Member Observer State’ status in the UN General Assembly. India, which has always played a proactive role in garnering support for the Palestinian cause in multilateral fora, co-sponsored this resolution on enhancing Palestine’s status in the UNGA. It is a decisive achievement for Palestine in the history of its long and arduous struggle to reach its final goal of an independent and viable Palestinian State. However, the journey doesn’t end here. We will continue to support Palestine’s bid for full and equal membership of the United Nations. India had also played an active role in supporting the efforts of the State of Palestine to secure full membership status at UNESCO.

India reiterates its unwavering support to the Palestinian cause at every available opportunity and forum. Hon’ble Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh in his message on the occasion of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian people, organized by the UN on 29 November 2012, reiterated India’s strong and unwavering support to the Palestinian cause. It is a matter of great honour that our Prime Minister’s message was given pride of place and was the first to be read out in the UNGA among the messages from Heads of Governments. It would be a remiss if I do not mention the recent events in Gaza that led to death of more than 150 Palestinians including innocent children and women, with injuries to more than 1200 people. We categorically condemn the violence in Gaza and I have no hesitation in saying that disproportionate use of force is completely unacceptable. India, jointly with Brazil and South Africa, has also expressed the strongest condemnation of violence between Israel and Palestine and urged the need to lift the blockage in Gaza which continues to worsen the already dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation in Gaza.

Excellencies,

We have also chaired and proactively participated as member in the discussions on the violence in Gaza in the UN Security Council under India’s presidency.

The ceasefire reached between Israel and Gaza is welcome and we hope that both the parties shall remain committed to the terms of the ceasefire.

Excellencies,

Indians have always placed Palestinian close to their hearts. Even before Independence, India had demonstrated its solidarity with the Palestinian people and had looked forward to the emergence of an independent democratic state in Palestine in which the rights of all communities would be protected.

India was the first non-Arab State to recognize the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people in 1975 and in 1988 became one of the first countries to recognize the State of Palestine. India opened a Representative Office in Palestine in 1996 following the establishment of the Palestinian National Authority.

Excellencies,

Since the opening of the Representative Office, India has also extended material assistance to the Palestinian National Authority and has been a partner in the socio-economic development of Palestine in its quest for a life of dignity and self reliance and a future full of promises. Our assistance has been for humanitarian relief, development projects, establishment of educational and training facilities, budgetary support etc. India has been involved with training a large number of Palestinian officials from economic, industrial and financial sectors and special courses for Palestinian diplomats have been conducted at our Foreign Service Institute.

I also fondly recall my visit to Ramallah on September 17, 2004 when I had an honour of meeting the undisputed leader of the Palestinian People Yasir Arafat. That was the time when he was under siege and was confined to his compound in Ramallah. During that visit I also took with me a consignment of medicine and 50 specially built vehicles. President Arafat was very overwhelmed while receiving me and was thankful for the Government of India to send me at a time when no one was with him. I spent one full day with him and also offered Friday prayers with him at Muqata led by Grand Imam of Al Aqsa Mosque. It was a very emotional visit for me which I can’t forget to this day. Sadly President Arafat passed away after few months only. However our friendship with the Palestinian people has continued.

During the recent visit of Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas to India in September this year, we pledged an amount of US$ 10 million as budgetary support to Palestine, and signed three agreements for cooperation in the fields of information and communication technology, vocational training and construction of schools in Palestine. India also contributes US$ 1 million annually to United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East, UNRWA in addition to Indian’s generous support at various Donor conferences for the Palestinian people. Jointly with Brazil and South Africa as partners in IBSA, India is implementing developmental projects in Palestine.

I am happy to note that the Palestinian Embassy has started functioning from its new Building in Chanakyapuri, which was built as a gift of the government and people of India to the Palestinian people. The building was formally inaugurated by President Mahmoud Abbas and former External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna during President Abbas’ visit to India on September 11, 2012. We will continue to support the development and nation-building efforts of Palestine.

Excellencies,

In line with our support for United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, India supports a negotiated solution resulting in a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine living within secure and recognized borders with East Jerusalem as its Capital, side by side and at peace with Israel as endorsed in the Quartet Roadmap and United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1397 & 1515.

India has supported the Arab Peace Plan, which calls for withdrawal of Israel to pre-1967 borders, along with recognition of Israel and the establishment of the State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital.

India had welcomed the ‘direct talks’ between Israel and Palestine. However the continued stalemate in the situation and hardening of positions is a matter of concern. We are hopeful of resumption of ‘direct talks’ leading to final resolution of the conflict. However it should be noted that the settlement activities by Israel in the occupied Palestinian territories are not serving the cause of peace. We have called for an end to these Israeli settlements activities and will continue to do so in light of recent announcement by Israel to expand these settlements. in the occupied Palestinian territories. We also urge for an early and significant easing of restrictions on the free movement of persons and goods within Palestine.

Excellencies,

Let me take this opportunity to re-affirm India’s consistent and unwavering support to the friendly people of Palestine and reiterate India’s belief that a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region can be achieved through negotiations and dialogue so that a sovereign, independent, viable State of Palestine living side by side within secured borders, with the State of Israel, becomes a reality.

I thank the Indian Council for World Affairs for organizing this important event.

The 9th Meeting of the India-Saudi Arabia Joint Commission on Technical and Economic Cooperation (JCM) was held in New Delhi on January 4-5, 2012. Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Hon’ble Finance Minister and H. E. Dr. Tawfiq bin Fowzan Al-Rabiah, Minister of Commerce and Industry of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia co-chaired the JCM. H.E. Dr. Al-Rabiah was accompanied by H. E. Mr. Abdullah A. Al Hamoudi, Deputy Minister for Foreign Trade, a 36-member Official Delegation and 40 member Business Delegation.

The visiting dignitary called on Hon’ble Prime Minister and Shri S.M. Krishna, Hon’ble Minister External Affairs. He also met Shri Anand Sharma, Hon’ble Minister of Commerce & Industry and Shri S. Jaipal Reddy, Hon’ble Minister of Petroleum & Natural Gas.

The 9th Meeting of the JCM took stock of the progress made since the “Riyadh Declaration 2010” signed during the visit of Hon’ble Prime Minister to Riyadh. The discussions of the JCM were held in three bilateral Sub Committees dealing with (i) economic and commercial, (ii) Education and Science & technology and (iii) Consular and community affairs. Agreed Minutes of the 9th JCM which provide the contours of future action plans for mutually beneficial bilateral cooperation were signed by the Heads of delegations at the end of the JCM.

Both sides noted that while the trade between the two countries was growing rapidly, cooperation in investments needed to be raised to make it commensurate with that of bilateral trade. The two sides propose to work towards this objective.

Press Release of the Ministry of Defence on the agreement to set up a India - Saudi Arabia Joint Commission on Defence Cooperation.

New Delhi, February 15, 2012.

To give a boost to the defence ties between the two countries, India and Saudi Arabia have decided to set up a Joint Committee on Defence Cooperation to work out the contours of the relationship. The decision was taken at the delegation level talks between the two countries in Riyadh on Tuesday.

The Indian delegation was led by the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony and the Saudi delegation by his counterpart Prince Salman Bin Abdul Aziz Al Saud. The Saudi Deputy Minister of Defence Prince Khalid Bin Sultan and senior functionaries of the Saudi Military organisations also attended the meeting. The Indian delegation included the Defence Secretary Shri Shashi Kant Sharma, the Indian Ambassador Shri Hamid Ali Rao, Vice-Chief of Army Staff Lt Gen SK Singh, Deputy Chief of Naval Staff Vice Admiral Satish Soni and Air Vice Marshal MR Pawar.

The proposed Committee will evolve plans for cooperation in numerous areas including signing of an MoU on defence cooperation, high level reciprocal visits at all levels- political, official and Services, ship visits and conducting Passage Exercises during such visits. The Committee will also explore the possibility of signing an MoU on cooperation in hydrography, increased participation in training programmes on both sides and examine the possibility of cooperation in defence industries. Shri Antony’s suggestion for the visit of a delegation from Saudi Arabia to see our defence production facilities in near future was accepted by Prince Salman. The latter also accepted an invitation from Shri Antony to visit India later this year.

Expressing concern at the spread of piracy in the Indian Ocean Region, Shri Antony’s suggestion that the navies of the two countries could explore practical cooperation in the fight against piracy and an active role of the Royal Saudi Navy in the Indian Ocean Naval Symposium (IONS) construct were readily accepted by Prince Salman.

Reviewing the security situation in the Gulf Region, the two sides agreed that all issues need to be settled through peaceful dialogue.

Earlier, on his arrival at the Defence Ministry Headquarters in Riyadh, Shri Antony was presented an Inter-Services Guard of Honour. Prince Khalid also hosted a lunch in honour of the visiting delegation.

New Delhi, March 30, 2012.

Your Excellency Dr. Yousef Terad Al Saadon, Excellency the Ambassador of Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, Excellency Dr. Adnan Mohammad Al Wazzan,
Distinguished members of the Saudi Youth Delegation,
Members of the Media,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me immense pleasure to welcome all of you in New Delhi.

I congratulate the Saudi Ministry of Foreign Affairs for this excellent initiative to establish India-Saudi Arabia Youth Forum to enable the youth to learn from each others’ cultures and further strengthen our friendly relations.

I hope that you have enjoyed your stay in India and you have had an opportunity to explore India and interact with its people and get a flavor of our culture and its diversity.

India and Saudi Arabia enjoy a unique relationship shaped by a common economic and socio-cultural history, extensive people-to-people contacts and robust trade that go back to many centuries. Today also Saudi Arabia is home to 1.8 million strong Indian Community. The community has not only excelled in all walks of life, profession and businesses but also has contributed immensely to the development and growth of the Kingdom. Each year more than 170,000 Indian visit the Kingdom for performing Hajj and many more visit to perform Umrah. These interactions have left strong influences on the cultures of both the countries.

In 1932, when His Majesty King Abdul Aziz Al Saud unified the Arabian Peninsula and established the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (KSA), Pundit Jawaharlal Nehru was full of praise for the King for his courage and statesmanship in unifying the Peninsula.

India became independent in 1947 and adopted a Constitution in 1950. In May 1955, His Royal Highness Crown Prince Faisal bin Abdul Aziz, who was also the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Saudi Arabia, came to New Delhi laying the foundation for our bilateral relations in the post war period.

Soon after that, His Majesty King Saud bin Abdul Aziz Al-Saud paid a 17-day long visit to India - the first ever visit by a Head of State of either country to the other. During the historic visit His Majesty King Saud toured a number of Indian cities including New Delhi, Mumbai, Hyderabad, Mysore, Simla, Agra, Aligarh and Varanasi, many more than this youth delegation has visited.
In 1956 when our Prime Minister, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru visited the Kingdom he was not only received with warmth and fervour, but was given the unique honour of addressing a public gathering at a football stadium in Jeddah, a distinction which has not been accorded to any other visiting leader.

A new beginning in our bilateral partnership was the landmark visit of His Royal Majesty King Abdullah, the Custodian of the two Holy Mosques of Makkah and Madinah, to India in January 2006. His Majesty termed India as his “Second Home”. The participation of His Majesty as the Chief Guest at our Republic Day celebrations was a matter of deep honour for the people of India. The visit opened a new chapter in our bilateral relations and the 2006 ‘Delhi Declaration’ signed by His Majesty the King and our Hon’ble Prime Minister enshrines our shared vision for a new relationship.

The momentum generated by the extensive bilateral interactions after His Majesty’s visit culminated in the historic visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Saudi Arabia in February 2010. In keeping with the new global realities and unfolding opportunities of the 21st century, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and His Majesty King Abdullah signed the “Riyadh Declaration” which among other things recognized the importance of the youth in strengthening the relations between our countries. Your visit today is actually the result of their wisdom and foresight.

The youth is the most powerful resource on the earth. Nations must empower their youths through value-based education and leadership so that they build their world and plan their future by themselves in which they can live in peace and enjoy the fruits of progress and prosperity. Today, both India and Saudi Arabia have more than 50% population under the age of 30 years. Youth is the force of change and in both the countries the youth is responding positively to the global challenges both in the social and economical fields. Interactions between the Youth of both the countries will certainly chart a new path in the relations between our two great nations.

All of you have heard the words of wisdom of Khalil Jibran. What did he say about youth? - “Youth is a beautiful dream, on whose brightness books shed a blinding dust. Will the day ever come when the wise link the joy of knowledge to youth’s dream? Will the day ever come when Nature becomes the teacher of man, humanity his book and life his school? Youth’s joyous purpose cannot be fulfilled until that day comes. Too slow is our march toward spiritual elevation, because we make so little use of youth’s ardor.” I hope that the visit of this youth delegation is an answer to Khalil Jibran.

Thank you.
Press Release on the visit of Saudi Youth Delegation led by Deputy Foreign Minister of Saudi Arabia Dr. Yousef Terad Al Saadon to India.

New Delhi, March 30, 2012.

Speaking at a valedictory function in New Delhi today, the Deputy Foreign Minister of Saudi Arabia Dr. Yousef Terad Al Saadon said he was, “carrying a message that calls for friendship, dialogue and building mutual understanding between cultures - an understanding that promotes respects for all cultures and appreciates diversity as a source of enrichment”. Shri E. Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs, recalled the successful visits of His Majesty King Abdullah to Delhi in 2006 when he was the honoured Chief Guest of Republic Day parade and visit of Prime Minister to Riyadh in 2010 when the two countries embarked on a strategic partnership.

2. The remarks came at the end of a path-breaking ten day visit by a Saudi youth delegation and in the context of the establishment of the India-Saudi Youth Forum. The Forum, established in fulfillment of the mandate given by the leadership of India and Saudi Arabia in 2010 and embodied in the Riyadh Declaration, is aimed to strengthen bonds of friendship and foster exchanges between youth India and Saudi Arabia. The Forum also fits into the initiative of His Majesty the King of Saudi Arabia encouraging youth of the country to understand and appreciate different religions and cultures of the world.

3. Under the aegis of the Forum, a 43 member delegation comprising students studying Communications and Information Technology as well as officials and media persons visited India from 21 to 31 March 2012. As a mark of the importance attached to the exercise, the entire delegation is headed by Dr. Yousef Terad Al Saadon, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs for Economic and Cultural Affairs of the Saudi Government. Public Diplomacy Division of the Ministry coordinated and facilitated the visit in association with Young Indians (YI) Group of Confederation of Indian Industry (CII).

4. The delegation visited Hyderabad and Bengaluru prior to their visit to Delhi where they were received at the Indian School of Business, Indian Space Research Organisation, Infosys, Narayana Hridyalaya, Computer Associates, TCS and Infotech. In Delhi, they interacted with the Telecom Regulatory Authority of India and the National Informatics Centre and were briefed by Secretary (East). Hon’ble Minister of State for Communications and Information Technology Sachin Pilot received the delegation and interacted with them. Hon’ble Minister of State E. Ahamed hosted a lunch in honour of the delegation.

5. Upon the conclusion of the official programme today, the India-Saudi Youth Forum presented a joint letter addressed to Hon'ble President of India and His Majesty the King of Saudi Arabia. Another joint letter addressed to Secretary General of United Nations was also presented. The letters speak of the rich experience which the Saudi youth obtained during the visit, the potential of using cutting edge technologies like tele-education and tele-medicine in addressing the challenges of education and healthcare and pledge the support of the youth in contributing to strengthening bilateral relations and also to peace and progress.
425. Condolence message of Prime Minister on the demise of His Royal Highness Prince Naif bin Abdulaziz Al Saud.

New Delhi, June 16, 2012.

In a message to the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques, His Majesty King Abdullah bin Abdulaziz Al Saud, the Prime Minister expressed his “profound sorrow and deep grief” on the demise of His Royal Highness Prince Naif bin Abdulaziz Al Saud, Crown Prince and Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Interior of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia,

In his message the Prime Minister conveyed the “deepest condolences” of the Government and people of India and said that “His Royal Highness Prince Naif will always be remembered and admired for his outstanding contribution towards the development of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in many different fields."

A senior Minister is being deputed by the Government of India to attend the funeral of Prince Naif bin Abdulaziz Al Saud.

SYRIA

426. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri during Briefing on the Middle East (Syria) in UN Security Council.

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organising this meeting at the request of the League of Arab States. I also take this opportunity to welcome in our midst today the Chair of the League’s Ministerial Committee and Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Qatar, His Excellency Bin Jasim Bin Jaber Al Thani, and the Secretary General of the League of Arab States, Dr. Nabil El-Arabi. I would like to thank them for their comprehensive briefings on the League’s efforts to resolve the crisis in Syria. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Syria for his statement. Participation of the US Secretary of State, the Foreign Minister of France, the Foreign Secretary of the UK, the Foreign Ministers of Guatemala, Portugal and Morocco and Minister of State of Federal Foreign Office of Germany in today’s meeting testifies to the importance of the subject of our discussion and deserves our appreciation.

2. Mr. President, Chapter VIII of the UN Charter provides for this Council’s cooperation with the regional organisations for maintenance of international peace and security. In this context, we welcome today’s meeting and think that it provides us a good opportunity to understand the role the League of Arab States is playing in resolution of the problem in Syria.

3. Mr. President, the Syrian Arab Republic has historically played an important role in the Middle East by virtue of its geographic and strategic location, its diversity, and the genius of its people. Developments in Syria have implications for peace and stability in the wider region. We have, therefore, called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of the Syrian society since the beginning of the protests in March 2011. The problem in Syria is not merely security-related; it is primarily political and economic and emanates from the Syrian people’s desire to play a greater role in shaping their destiny. Resolution of this problem cannot be found in violence or armed struggle and its violent suppression. Nor can a solution be reached through prescriptions from outside. The Syrian people demand and deserve empowerment so that a Syrian-led and Syrian-owned political solution can be found in an atmosphere free of violence and bloodshed.

4. Unfortunately, during the last ten months we have witnessed an increasing level of violence that has taken a heavy toll of civilians and security forces and caused destruction of civilian infrastructure. We unequivocally and strongly condemn all violence irrespective of whoever the perpetrators are and whatever justification is proffered. We also condemn all violations of human rights and rights of expression and peaceful assembly. India holds these rights among the fundamental values that should be respected while ensuring stability and security of the society. India, along with its IBSA partners, conveyed this message clearly to the Syrian leadership when an IBSA delegation visited Damascus in August 2011. This message was also contained in the Council’s PRST issued in August 2011 under India’s Presidency.

5. We see the efforts of the League of Arab States in Syria in light of our support for a political resolution of the crisis. We had noted that the deployment of the League’s Observer Mission across several areas in the country had had a calming effect and are disappointed that the Mission was suspended on 28 January on account of a serious deterioration in the form of continuing violence. The report of the Observer Mission that the League made available to the Security Council clearly states that there is an armed element to the opposition which is also responsible for a number of violent acts. The continued presence and deployment of the Observers could have helped reduce the violence and present a more accurate picture of developments especially since the monitors had also confirmed that a lot of information in the media is exaggerated and misleading. The report of the Observer Mission also made an important point that the mission needs to be accompanied by a political process to address the grievances of the Syrian people, something that we strongly support.

6. Mr President, we are firmly of the view that all sides need to cooperate with the League of Arab States. A political process must begin without any further delay. The process should be led by the Syrians and should respect Syria’s sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity. The League of Arab States, as an important regional organisation, should play its required and historic role in promoting political dialogue among the Syrian parties. This dialogue can build upon the package of political reforms already announced by the Syrian leadership and also bring about necessary changes to the package of political reforms so that it finds acceptance among all sections of the Syrian society. The outcome of this dialogue cannot be prejudged. The outcome should also be acceptable to the widest segment of Syrian society for it to resolve the present crisis and be enduring.

7. Mr President, the international community, including this Council, should play a constructive role in the process of political dialogue among the Syrians. In this context, we welcome submission of a draft resolution to the Security Council. We will engage with fellow Council members so that the Council can speak with a unanimous voice in support of the initiative of the League of Arab States to expeditiously resolve the Syrian crisis.

Thank you.
427. Explanation of Vote by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri
Permanent Representative of India to UN on UNSC Resolution on Syria.

Thank you, Mr President,

I want to start by congratulating you on assuming the Presidency of the Security Council for the month of February. My delegation and I look forward to working with you to make your presidency extremely successful. I had an opportunity, in an earlier incarnation, to have visited your beautiful country. I would also like to take this opportunity to compliment South Africa, Ambassador Baso Sangqu and his team, for their very wise and able stewardship of the Council during January.

2. Mr President, the Syrian Arab Republic has historically played an important role in the Middle East. Prolonged instability and unrest in Syria have implications for peace and stability in the wider region.

3. India is concerned with the present situation in Syria that has resulted in the deaths of thousands of civilians and security forces personnel over the last ten months. Therefore, since the beginning of the protest, we have called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of Syrian society.

4. We strongly condemn all violence, irrespective of whoever the perpetrators are. We also condemn all violations of human rights. India holds the rights of expression and peaceful assembly among the fundamental values that should be respected, while ensuring stability and security of the society.

5. India has conveyed this message to the Syrian leadership, both bilaterally as well as along with its IBSA partners. We have impressed upon the Syrian side to abjure violence and pay heed to the aspirations of the people of Syria. This message was also contained in the Council’s PRST issued in August 2011 under India’s Presidency.

6. We are firmly of the view that a political process for resolution of the present crisis should be led by the Syrians themselves. We believe that the main role of the international community, including this Council, is to facilitate engagement of the Syrian Government with all sections of Syrian society for an inclusive political process, taking into account the legitimate aspirations of all Syrians while ensuring respect for the country’s sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

7. We note that the resolution enjoins upon the government to protect its population, indicating that it should have the capacity to do so.
8. The League of Arab States, as an important regional organisation, should play its required and historic role in promoting political dialogue among the Syrian parties. In this context, we welcomed the deployment of the League’s Observer Mission across several areas in the country which had a calming effect on the level of violence and provided a more accurate picture of developments. We hope that this Mission can be resumed soon.

9. Our support for the Resolution is in accordance with our support for the efforts by the Arab League for a peaceful resolution of the crisis through a Syrian-led inclusive political process. We note that the resolution expressly rules out any measures under Article 42 of the Charter and calls for serious political dialogue between the Syrian government and the whole spectrum of the opposition under the auspices of the League of Arab States. We believe that the leadership of Syria is a matter for the Syrian people to decide. It would be necessary for all opposition forces in Syria to peacefully engage in constructive dialogue with the authorities. We hope that this will create a new environment for peace and facilitate a political process. This political dialogue should build upon the political reforms already announced by the Syrian leadership with necessary changes so that they find acceptance among all sections of Syrian society.

Thank you.
428. Explanation of Vote by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri Permanent Representative of India at the UN Security Council Resolution on Syria.

New York, April 21, 2012.

Thank you, Madam President.

Let me begin by thanking the Russian delegation for introducing the resolution that the Security Council has adopted unanimously today as resolution 2043. This is a significant step in the Council’s collective support for the efforts of the Joint Special Envoy, Mr Kofi Annan.

2. Madam President, it is a matter of satisfaction that Mr. Annan’s efforts over the last seven weeks have resulted in an improvement in the situation in Syria. Even though there have been reports of violations, the ceasefire that came into force on 12 April has been observed by all parties in a large part of Syria. Obviously, there is a need to sustain the gains made so far. This should be facilitated by the expeditious deployment of the United Nations Supervision Mission in Syria (UNSMIS), authorized by resolution 2043. This resolution is also an appeal to all parties to walk back from violence so that an impartial supervision and monitoring of the ceasefire can contribute to observing and upholding the commitment of the parties.

3. We have voted in favour of resolution 2043 with the expectation that UNSMIS will implement its mandate impartially, objectively and fairly and help the Syrian parties to build on the ceasefire and commence an inclusive Syrian-led political process that will meet the legitimate aspirations of the Syrian people.

4. For the success of the Annan plan, it is necessary that all parties implement their respective commitments under the six-point plan. We have noted that the Preliminary Understanding signed by the Syrian Government and the United Nations on 19 April sets out clear conditions that have to be met by the Syrian government and the armed opposition groups. We hope that all parties, including the opposition, will abide by those conditions.

5. Madam President, while the Syrian parties cooperate with UNSMIS and the Joint Special Envoy, it is also necessary that all countries interested in securing peace and stability in Syria extend their full support for Mr Annan and UNSMIS, and also refrain from any action that may cause further bloodshed. This will help in the expeditious resolution of the Syrian crisis as well as in ensuring that the crisis does not spill over Syria’s borders.
429. Explanation of Vote by India on Human Rights Situation in Syria and the recent killings in El-Houla at the 19th Special Session of the Human Rights Council.

Geneva, June 1, 2012.

Madam President,

India has consistently supported all efforts to resolve the Syrian crisis through an inclusive Syrian-led political process. To this end, we have given our full support for the mission of Joint Special Envoy Mr. Kofi Annan.

2. We strongly condemn the El-Houla incident, which has resulted in death of over a hundred innocent civilians including women and children and have therefore intended to vote for this resolution. The incident underscores what the situation can lead to if there is any further delay in the complete cessation of violence. We expect that the Commission of Inquiry will be able to identify those responsible for these heinous attacks and provide clarity on the events that led to it. We sincerely hope all concerned will cooperate to ensure an objective process of inquiry into these terrible events.

3. We strongly believe that all parties need to abjure violence for there to be a genuine chance for a realistic and lasting solution to the Syrian crisis. We urge all sides to comply with their obligations under the Annan plan.

Thank you, Madam President.

TAJIKISTAN

430. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson and Joint Secretary (Eurasia) on the visit of the President of Tajikistan Emomali Rahmon.

New Delhi, August 31, 2012.

The President of Tajikistan will pay a visit to India from 1st to 4th September, 2012 at the invitation of the President of India.

The main day of engagement would be the 3rd September when the Tajik President will meet the President of India, the Vice-President of India, and hold discussions on bilateral cooperation with the Prime Minister.

During the visit, the Leader of Opposition and the External Affairs Minister will both call on the President of Tajikistan as is the usual practice. On the same day, President Rahmon will also address a business meeting jointly organized by ASSOCHAM, CII and FICCI. The President is also slated to visit organizations and institutions outside New Delhi.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): As I have said before, I have here with me Joint Secretary (Eurasia) Mr. Ajay Bisaria who will brief you on the visit of the President of Tajikistan. You can ask him any question and he will answer those questions. I will request Ajay to make some initial remarks and then he will respond to any questions that you may have on this.

Joint Secretary (ERS) (Shri Ajay Bisaria): Thank you, Akbar.

We are going to talk about a country which is a neighbor of Pakistan, which seems to be the central theme of this press conference. It is a close neighbor of both Pakistan and India. Let me begin by repeating what Akbar has initially mentioned.

The President of Tajikistan His Excellency Mr. Emomali Rahmon will arrive in India for a state visit from the 1st to the 4th of September. During his stay, President Rahmon will visit Goa, Bengaluru and New Delhi for official meetings. He is expected to meet the Prime Minister for discussions on a range of issues. Also President Rahmon will meet the Hon. President at whose invitation he is visiting India, the Vice-President of India, and the Leader of Opposition in Parliament. The External Affairs Minister Shri Krishna will call on him. The President will be accompanied by a number of senior Ministers from the Tajik

It may be recalled that on April 13 the Official Spokesman of the Government of India in his response to developments in Syria had said: “We welcome the developments in Syria in response to the Mission of UN Special Envoy Kofi Annan. We hope this Mission will have further success in resolution of all issues leading to lasting peace in Syria.”
Cabinet which is, I believe, eight or nine. In Goa he will meet the Governor of the State. In Bengaluru he will be again hosted by the Governor and is also expected to visit facilities like Infosys and HAL.

I think it will be useful to give some background on Tajikistan. As you would see from this map, Tajikistan lies in India’s extended neighbourhood. It has borders with China of about 520 kilometres on the mountainous Pamiri region in the East, with Afghanistan of 1425 kilometres, a very porous border, with Uzbekistan and Kyrgyzstan on the North. Tajikistan across the Afghan Wakhan corridor at its narrowest point is just 16 kilometres from Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir. Hence, we call it a country in our extended neighbourhood.

Tajikistan became part of the Soviet Union in 1929 as the Tajik Soviet Socialist Republic. The country gained Independence from the Soviet Union in September 1991 and faced civil war from 1992 to 1997. President Rahmon was elected as de facto Head of State in 1992 - this would be already 20 years in power - and has continued in office ever since. The last Presidential election was held in 2006 in Tajikistan in which the President received a mandate for seven years. The next election for the Presidency is expected in 2013.

As for bilateral relations, they have traditionally been very close and friendly. We have had exchange of visits at higher levels which have cemented bilateral ties. President Pratibha Patil paid a state visit to Tajikistan in September 2009. President Rahmon himself has visited India four times in the past - in 1995, 1999, 2001 and 2006. Incidentally, the last time he was here he was known as President Rahmonov. The Russian ‘ov’ which forms the end of the name was removed in 2007. So, it is a more Tajikised name of President Rahmon now.

We have language similarities, similarities in customs, food, music, arts. These roots are from the ancient times even before the Kushana period. We share close relations with Tajikistan based on very ancient roots. In fact in the Kushana period we were part of the same political space.

We have several consultative mechanisms in place that reinforce high level visits. We have Foreign Office Consultations, a Joint Working Group on Terrorism, a Joint Commission on Trade, Economic and Scientific Cooperation, and we are of course discussing a few others that will be set up.

Over the years we have established a very strong development partnership with Tajikistan. This has elements of humanitarian assistance, of grant assistance, capacity-building, and a very robust partnership in defence based on capacity-building and training.

In keeping with our close bilateral relations, India has responded several times to humanitarian crises in Tajikistan. For example, in response to an appeal by President Rahmon for humanitarian aid to overcome the crisis caused by an unprecedented harsh winter in 2008, India announced a grant of two million dollars. We have also provided assistance in 2009, in 2010 during floods. And after the outbreak of polio in the southwest Tajikistan, the Government of India provided two million doses of oral polio vaccine. This just illustrates the kind of relationship we have in the humanitarian sphere.

Our project assistance in the form of grants has also been significant. In 1995, for the first time India extended a credit line of five million dollars to establish a joint venture in pharmaceuticals. This was converted into a grant later. Similarly, we extended a grant to set up a fruit-processing plant, which was commissioned in 2005, during the visit of the Indian Prime Minister in 2003. We agreed to set up an Information Technology Centre which was inaugurated in 2006 and started functioning under the name of Bedil India-Tajikistan Centre.

During the last visit of President Rahmon to India in 2006, India announced that it would undertake rehabilitation and modernization of Varzob-I Hydropower Station by BHEL and NHPC. This project is virtually complete, and in the latter part of 2012 it is expected to start generating power. We have also set up a modern tool room which was at the State Technical University. This was announced then.

India also contributes very strongly to capacity-building in Tajikistan. We have 100 ITEC slots, which mean that about 100 Tajik students are coming annually to avail of these. And there are 25 general cultural scholarships which mean that 25 graduates are joining our universities each year. These are extremely popular among the Tajik young people. We are also in discussion with the Tajik partners to deepen this development partnership with a series of new projects which will be announced after this visit.

Tajikistan and India will have very close and active defence cooperation, apart from playing a major role in the development of the Gissar military aerodrome, India helped in the reconstruction of this aerodrome. This was inaugurated by President Rahmon in September 2010. India is also training Tajik officers and cadets both within Tajikistan as well as by sending them for various military courses in India including the NDA and IMA.

We have of course transportation barriers, as you see. We are not connected by land, and Tajikistan is a doubly landlocked country. This has reduced our trade and commerce to a level of just 40 million dollars of trade. The usual route for transportation of goods from India is by sea to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas and from Bandar Abbas via Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan by land. This is not only time-consuming but prohibitive in terms of costs. Of late, we have been discussing various alternative routes for connecting, including making the North-South Transport Corridor more efficient. We have also been discussing trans-Afghan routes.

There have been some positive developments in terms of investment. There is a five-star hotel coming up by the Crown Plaza or CHL Group in Dushanbe. There is also discussion in Bengaluru by a Bengaluru-based company for investments.

Tajikistan has been very supportive politically of India in UN bodies and other international organizations. And India has supported Tajikistan’s accession to the WTO, and most recently on the 3rd of August, this month, a Protocol on Tajikistan’s accession was signed in Dushanbe.

So, overall we have a strong partnership of long standing with growing cooperation in a number of strategic areas, and we expect all these areas to be bolstered by this visit.

Thank you.

Question: Ajay, can you give us an overall picture of our relationship with Central Asia, all those States which are a part of the Soviet Union a long time ago? A lot of oil and gas has been discovered in those countries. Are we looking for any kind of investments in oil and gas fields there? When Chabahar becomes operational, what are the chances of our trade with Central Asia going up?

Joint Secretary (ERS): That requires a very detailed answer but let me try and briefly tell you about Central Asia. Yes, of course, India has articulated this year a very proactive phase in our engagement with Central Asia. We call it the Connect Central Asia Policy. This policy is based on proactive engagement in a number of spheres – economic, defence, strategic, cultural and so on – and a few flagships projects including what we call the Central Asia E-Network. This is a network that will connect all Central Asian countries and provide telemedicine and tele-education. We already have huge IT cooperation with these countries with IT Centres of Excellence. That is a subject of great interest in all these countries. We have already strategic partnerships with Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan in this space, and we have very strong relations in terms of high-level exchange of visits with all these countries.

As for oil and gas, hydrocarbons is an extremely important objective of India in this region, not the only objective but certainly a major objective. As you know, three of these countries are rich in oil and gas. Kazakhstan is rich in oil. India in the last couple of years had a major breakthrough where OVL got a 25 per cent stake in the Satpayev oil block in the Caspian Sea, which makes us an important player in the oil and gas market of Kazakhstan.

With Turkmenistan, which is one of the largest gas producers in the world, we have as you know the TAPI pipeline, which again is a paradigm-shifting sort of energy initiative which will deliver gas to India hopefully by 2017. We are at a very crucial stage right now of going for the consortium. There are road shows planned in different parts of the world to hunt for the right consortium which can build this pipeline across Pakistan and Afghanistan and deliver gas to India. Of course, we are talking with Uzbekistan as well about gas. We have uranium supplies from both Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan.

Overall, it is a picture of very strong engagement which we have put into a higher gear or a higher level. Particularly in the hydrocarbons sector we have a very strong engagement.

Question: Since we have the map here, could you just outline the North-South Corridor and how it helps?

Joint Secretary (ERS): Sure. The North-South Corridor essentially goes from Mumbai to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas. It is not quite here. The North-South Corridor is actually not represented in this map because it would go along Bandar Abbas port in North along the length of Iran to Bandar Anzali, a port in Northern Iran on the Caspian, then from there along the Caspian Sea to the Port of Astrakhan in Russia and onwards. But the central point about the North-South Corridor is that it is re-energizing an alternative route to Central Asia, and it is going to make transportation, hopefully at the end of it, forty per cent cheaper and faster. That is what it adds to the table. Incidentally for Tajikistan the route that is more important is one via the Trans-Afghanistan Corridor using either Chabahar or Badar Abbas - they are just 300 kilometres from each other - but basically using then this route - the Mashhad and Zaranj-Delaram the road that India built - and along this there is talk of routes to Tajikistan. So, the North-South Corridor is an important additional corridor on the table, not the only one. And India has made a lot of efforts this year to re-energize it.

Question: There was a meeting in January about filling of the gaps that existed. What has been the progress? You were supposed to have meetings with all the countries.

Joint Secretary (ERS): There was a meeting in January with all the major stakeholders of the North-South Corridor. All the countries got together. India took the initiative. Again in May there was an expert-level meeting where we tried to talk about funding of those two gaps in terms of railways. We are now expected to have another meeting of the Coordination Council of the INSTC in Azerbaijan soon. So, it is moving fairly fast and we are hoping that we will have major breakthroughs in terms of filling those gaps and then doing the soft stuff, which is essentially making the customs and other arrangements easier.

Question: Are there any plans to upgrade the only military overseas facility we have in Tajikistan? In terms of defence relationship, are any new initiatives being planned?

Joint Secretary (ERS): As I mentioned, you will know of any new initiative of course after the visit in terms of its outcomes. But the Gissar military aerodrome which I mentioned is an airport where India has in terms of Development Assistance provided technical assistance in terms of upgrading that Soviet airfield into a state-of-the-art, modern kind of facility for the Tajikistan State and the Tajikistan Government to use. We continue to discuss important initiatives in the military sector. As I said, this is an extremely important part of the relationship with Tajikistan. And of course you will come to know at the end of the visit what else we have arrived at.

Question: A follow-up to that question. Is India still engaged in the development of Ayni airbase?

Joint Secretary (ERS): Exactly what I said, Yes, India is engaged in the development of that facility. India is also engaged in training the Tajik cadets and Tajik army both in Tajikistan as well as in India.

Question: Sir, instead of the Government’s earlier clinic at Farkhor, where is the new one going to be? Has work on it started? When is it going to be ready?

Joint Secretary (ERS): You will come to know at the end of the visit, if there is any development on that.

Question: Does the Farkhor Medical Unit still exist?

Joint Secretary (ERS): It does not.

Question: You mentioned Ayni and that the upgraded base was inaugurated by the President of Tajikistan in the September of 2010. But you have also told us that we are still engaged there. Could we have a little clarity about the kind of engagement we have at the moment?

Joint Secretary (ERS): As I said, we developed the airfield and we continue to cooperate with Tajikistan in maintenance of this facility.

Question: Sir, just can you give an idea of what kind of discussions will we have with Tajikistan on Afghanistan?

Joint Secretary (ERS): Afghanistan will certainly be an important issue that will be discussed during the visit. I cannot predict the outcomes of what is going to happen. But, as you know, in recent times there has been some instability in Southern Badakshan region on the northern border of Afghanistan. We will continue to discuss counterterrorism issues, issues of narco-trafficking and of instability in the region. And of course we could expect discussions between our leadership and Tajik President on the situation in Afghanistan and ways and means of stabilizing it.

Official Spokesperson: With that we come to the end of this interaction. Thank you very much.
431. Statement by the Prime Minister to the Media after the delegation level talks during the State Visit of President of Tajikistan.

New Delhi, September 3, 2012.

Distinguished representatives of the media,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have great pleasure in extending a very warm welcome to His Excellency Mr. Emomali Rahmon, President of Tajikistan, on his fifth State Visit to our country.

Tajikistan will celebrate the 21st anniversary of its independence on September 9. On this occasion, I wish to convey our best wishes to the people of Tajikistan and to congratulate President Rahmon on sagaciously guiding the destiny of his country for the last two decades.

Tajikistan is a key partner of India in the Central Asian region. We recently commemorated two decades of the establishment of diplomatic relations between our two countries. President Rahmon and I agreed that in view of the broad progress made in our bilateral relations, particularly in defence and security cooperation, we should elevate our relations to a ‘strategic partnership’.

President Rahmon and I are also in agreement on the need to enhance our trade and investment relations. I conveyed to President Rahmon our desire to see an early accession of Tajikistan to the WTO, which would assist in enhancing our bilateral trade. We also discussed opportunities for investments in free economic zones in Tajikistan. We hope to send a delegation from the private and public sectors to explore investment opportunities in these zones. Information technology, e-connectivity, pharmaceuticals, biotechnology, textiles, leather goods, mining and renewable energy are some of the areas with high potential.

To intensify our developmental partnership, India has offered to undertake a series of development projects in Tajikistan. These include the setting up of an IT Centre of excellence, an e-network including tele-education and tele-medicine, medical centres, language laboratories, a fruit and vegetable processing plant and an Entrepreneurship Development Institute, as well as supply of agricultural machinery. We have also decided to enhance the number of training slots under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation training programme from 100 to 150 slots annually.

Cultural and people to people ties between our two countries date back centuries. The agreements signed today in the fields of culture and education will help renew such contacts.
The resumption of direct air links between New Delhi and Dushanbe by Tajik Air is a welcome development. However, surface connectivity challenges hinder the faster growth of our bilateral ties. We agreed to explore the possibility of establishing transport corridors, including rail lines, in cooperation with other countries of the region.

India and Tajikistan have common concerns regarding regional developments. President Rahmon and I exchanged views on the situation in the Central Asian region and beyond, particularly in the context of the security transition in Afghanistan. We also agreed to deepen our counter-terrorism cooperation.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I once again welcome President Rahmon to India and now invite him to make his remarks.

Ladies & Gentlemen

I am delighted to be here to inaugurate this event which marks the 20th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Turkmenistan. I compliment the Embassy of Turkmenistan, the Indo-Turkmen Friendship Society and the Centre of Advanced Regional Studies Parathethys in taking this initiative in organizing this event.

It is well-known that India and Turkmenistan have shared close, historical and civilization ties. We had close links with the present-day Turkmenistan during the Kushan Empire. The ‘Silk Route’ connected us in the past. Bairam Khan, who was the mentor of Emperor Akbar, was a Turkmen. His illustrious poet son Abdul Rahim Khan-e-khana contributed the Court of Emperor Akbar. The ‘Turkmen Gate’, built in 1650s in Delhi to honour Turkmen soldiers serving in the Mughal Army, testifies to a centuries-old relationship between our two countries.

I am fortunate to have visited Turkmenistan thrice; the first visit was in October 2006 as the Co-Chair of the Joint Commission, the second time in February 2007 to felicitate President Gurbanguly Berdimuhamedov on his assumption of office, and the third visit was in April 2008 as part of Hon’ble Vice President of India’s delegation to Turkmenistan. We remember and value the Turkmen President’s visit to India in May 2010. Allow me to take this opportunity to congratulate once again President Gurbanguly Berdimuhamedov on his re-election with a massive mandate earlier this year.

In presence of such a distinguished audience here let me highlight some important aspects which can help us to raise our bilateral relationship with Turkmenistan to a much higher pedestal in the years ahead:
i) The proposed TAPI gas pipeline which aims to bring the Turkmen gas to India via Afghanistan and Pakistan is an ambitious project. Once completed, the project could change the entire region. There has been remarkable progress on the project till date. TAPI gas pipeline project has been described by our Hon'ble Prime Minister as the ‘Pipeline of Peace’. The implementation of TAPI project will bring Central Asia and South Asia much closer in an enduring energy partnership for peace, development and prosperity of the peoples of the region.

ii) Ashgabat is witnessing a construction boom. There are vast opportunities for Indian construction companies in Turkmenistan. We would certainly like our construction companies to become partners in infrastructural development of Turkmenistan.

iii) India and Turkmenistan have an annual trade turnover limited to about US $ 50-60 million. India exports pharmaceutical drugs, tyres, buffalo meat, electrical goods, etc. to Turkmenistan and imports raw hides & skin, iodine etc. from there. Our trade turnover is much below its potential. The Ministry of External Affairs is committed to give boost to the bilateral trade. I would also like various trade bodies like CII, FICCI, ASSOCHAM and India-CIS Chambers of Commerce to mount business delegations to Turkmenistan so as to expand our bilateral trade basket.

iv) I am happy to note that an India-Turkmenistan IT Centre was inaugurated in October last and that this Centre has started conducting various IT courses for the students of Magtamguly University. India, being an IT superpower, would be happy to share its expertise for the development of information & communication technology, telecommunication network, e-governance, etc. with Turkmenistan.

v) Turkmenistan has great potential for tourism with the creation of National Tourist Zone of Avaza on the Caspian coast. We would be happy to see an increase in the two-way tourists’ movement.

vi) We are happy at the implementation of North-South Railway Corridor Project, expected to be completed next year, connecting Turkmenistan with Iran and Kazakhstan. On our part, we have also revived our efforts to increase connectivity with Central Asia through International North-South Transport Corridor. Increase connectivity in this region will benefit both India and Turkmenistan and will also boost bilateral trade.

vii) We are committed to the human resource development of friendly country Turkmenistan through our ITEC and ICCR scholarships. We are ready to increase cooperation in this field.
viii) India cooperates with Turkmenistan at various international fora including the UN. We highly value the support extended by Turkmenistan for our candidature for a permanent seat at the expanded United Nations Security Council.

To conclude, I would like to say that we are determined in strengthening our ties with Turkmenistan, matching our historical ties, in the contemporary era. At the same time, our Ministry of External Affairs would welcome your ideas, suggestions and comments to deepen and widen our ties with Turkmenistan.

I wish this event a huge success.

Thank you.
UAE

New Delhi, February 8, 2012.

The 2nd India-United Arab Emirates (UAE) Foreign Office Consultations took place in New Delhi today. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs and the Emirati delegation was led by Dr Tariq Ahmad Al Hidan, Assistant Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of UAE. The two delegations discussed bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual concern.
Joint Media Interaction by External Affairs Minister and Foreign Minister of United Arab Emirates.

New Delhi, May 18, 2012.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): His Highness, Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Foreign Minister of the United Arab Emirates; friends from media:

This is for the third time His Highness, Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Foreign Minister of the United Arab Emirates and I are meeting in less than a year. It is an indication of the priority that each of us accords to our bilateral relations.

Today we focused particularly on our economic ties. We discussed the forthcoming 3rd India-Arab Economic Conclave to be hosted in Abu Dhabi on 21st and 22nd May 2012 and the proposed Road Show on investment in Abu Dhabi and Dubai that Indian officials intend to undertake in June so as to exchange information and clarify issues related to the investment climate in India.

The United Arab Emirates is our largest trading partner, significant contributor to our energy security, and hosts about 1.75 million Indian expatriates.

The United Arab Emirates’ leadership is now keen to address the issue of investments to bring it on par with the multi-faceted relations we enjoy in all other sectors. I am happy to inform you that the two Governments have decided to set up a High Level Joint Task Force to explore further opportunities in the area of investments.

His Highness Sheikh Hamad bin Zayed Al Nahyan, the Managing Director of the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, and our Commerce, Industries and Textiles Minister Shri Anand Sharma will be leading the respective sides of the High Level Task Force.

Our bilateral relations have now acquired a new momentum and are progressing towards a comprehensive partnership for the mutual benefit of our countries.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): I now request His Excellency the Foreign Minister of the UAE to make his opening remarks.

Foreign Minister of UAE (Mr. Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan): Good afternoon.

Dear friend, dear colleague Mr. Krishna, I am very honoured to be back here in Delhi and visiting India. The relationship between our two countries prolongs for a period prior to the existence of our two nations as we know them now. The people-to-people relations between our two countries have been there for centuries, and we are very eager that we can even further facilitate this relationship in all means and forms.

It is extremely important to see the frequent flights between our two countries. The trade is extending to 50 billion dollars this year. The UAE is the fourth largest supplier of crude oil to India. We have almost two million Indians visiting and living in the UAE. We are very proud of that. I think there is a lot we could do. I am very delighted that both our Governments have reached an agreement on having a Joint Investment Task Force with very senior officials on both sides. We are working together not only in developing our investments in India but in looking at future investments in India.

India is not only a very important ally and a neighbour to the UAE but it is a booming economy worldwide. There is potential of one trillion dollar of investment in India in the next five years. India is looking for half of that amount to come from abroad. We would very much like to see a strong UAE presence in that.

Minister, you visited the UAE on the 16th of April. We had a very good visit. You rightly mentioned that this is our third meeting in the last year. It is extremely important that we keep in touch on bilateral relationship between our two countries but also in exchanging our views in a very dynamic region that both of us live in.

I am sure we will have even more time during lunch to discuss developments in the peace process between Israel and Palestine, discuss the Iran nuclear file, discuss the security in the Arabian Gulf, discuss the very vibrant and developing relationship in the last couple of months which we are very much pleased about between Pakistan and India, discuss the future of Afghanistan.

We will also have the opportunity to talk about the importance of securing maritime access in the Gulf of Aden, stabilizing and supporting the Government in Somalia. So, there is a huge agenda in front of us both on investment, trade but also on security and political matters.

Your Excellency, once again thank you very much for your kind words, and thank you very much for your robust support for the relationship between our two countries. I really hope that we could meet again soon and report to the media even further developments in the relationship.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to take a few questions.

Question (Mr. N.C. Bipindra, IANS): This question is to the Indian External Affairs Minister.

There have been plans of increasing oil imports from the UAE. Have you discussed this issue with your counterpart? What was the result of it?
External Affairs Minister: India’s economy is one of the fastest growing economies in the world. As a result of that, the need for increased import of oil and other energy sources is of extreme critical importance to us. And in the United Arab Emirates we have a dependable supplier of oil which India needs so badly.

In 2010, we imported 12 million tonnes, and in 2011 we increased it to 14 million tonnes. So, this should be the indication of the rate at which our imports from the UAE are going up. It is basically our refineries which make decisions on import of oil, and they are based on technical, economical and commercial considerations. Given the United Arab Emirates’ advantages on all these fronts, it is likely that this trend of the UAE continuing to meet our needs of energy security will be maintained.

We also discussed the possibilities of cooperating not only on increase in oil imports but also investment opportunities in this sector. The Task Force on Investments, we will certainly look into this matter also.

Question (Ms. Shohrat Aref, MENA): The UAE is an important source of energy to India. Do you intend to increase your exports to India in the coming period?

Foreign Minister of UAE: As you know, the UAE is a large exporter of crude oil, and we keep on trying to improve our capacity when it comes to production and export. Looking at many of our strategic plans, we do not only try to increase our exports but also to diversify our own ways where we use our own resources. That is why we invest very heavily in renewable energies, we are trying to invest in nuclear energy so we can offset further our capacity to the world market.

No doubt, we would like to see more UAE energy exports to India, especially when it comes to crude oil. I believe as we speak, there are talks between our officials and they are looking at these venues. But even further, as Mr. Krishna rightly mentioned, we would like to see a UAE presence in downstream investments in India when it comes to petrochemical, energy production, etc. It is not only a step that we would like to take today but there are several steps down the road that we would like to develop among our two countries.

Question (Mr. Ashok Sharma): Given the existing cooperation between the two countries, I would like to ask the two Ministers, is there any possibility of jointly tackling the maritime pirates in a very specific manner?

External Affairs Minister: We attach great importance to working with all other countries including the United Arab Emirates to counter the scourge of piracy on the high seas. When I visited Abu Dhabi last month, we had very extensive discussions on this issue. Both of us have agreed that our officials will work together and cooperate on tackling this menace collectively. We intend to share our knowledge, our intelligence, and cooperate effectively on this issue with the United Arab Emirates so that we as a group could tackle this scourge.

Foreign Minister of UAE: Resolving piracy will not come unless we can resolve Somalia. It is very important that at a time when we face piracy in the Gulf of Aden and beyond actually, which I am very much pleased that the UAE and India are working very closely on, its key where we can resolve the source of this problem which is the lack of government, of unity, of the void that has been created in Somalia. We are working very closely with the Central Government in Mogadishu but also with the local governments in Somalia where we could further not only help and support but try to get them together, and beyond by engaging with the African Union, in helping Somalia, in supporting many of their difficulties let alone poverty and drought. But beyond that, where we can help them building their capacity in every way and form. That is the only way where we can make sure that the source of piracy is resolved. And here also the help and the cooperation between our two countries to Somalia and to the African Union is vital and key.

Question (Ms. Geeta Mohan, Times Now): My question is to the External Affairs Minister of India. It is on a very different issue, Sir. Over a thousand of Indians are stranded in Angola. What has the Government been doing on this entire matter? Also, what is the message on the police brutality against the Indians in Angola when the Ambassador met with the Secretary (West) in the Ministry of External Affairs yesterday?

External Affairs Minister: I am personally following issues related to the problems that the Indian workers unfortunately are facing in Angola. It is engaging our most serious attention. I am sure that all efforts will be made to ensure a swift resolution of the issues involved. And those workers who want to come back to India I think that could be arranged swiftly and without any difficulty. We have done it before elsewhere, and we are willing to do it here in Angola. About their financial transactions, and their compensation and whatever it is, I think we will be taking it up with the company concerned, the employer. And I hope that we should be able to resolve the issue.

Official Spokesperson: With that, we come to the end of this event.

Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen.
YEMEN

435. Intervention by Minister of State E. Ahmed at the Third Ministerial Meeting of the Friends of Yemen in Riyadh.

Mr Chairman, His Royal Highness Prince Saud Al Faisal
His Excellency, Mohammad Basindawa, Prime Minister of Yemen
Friends of Yemen
And distinguished invitees,

At the outset, let me congratulate the countries of the Gulf Cooperation Council and the United Nations for having initiated the process of peaceful political transition in Yemen, thereby preventing the country and the region from plunging into a new turmoil.

I take this opportunity to strongly condemn ghastly terrorist attack on national day of Yemen and we express our heartfelt condolences to the people of Yemen. I also share the sentiments of other speakers that such incidents serve only to further strengthen our resolve to fight the forces of terrorism.

India supports peace, security, stability and territorial integrity of Yemen. We are aware of the extraordinary political, security, economic and humanitarian challenges faced by Yemen in the current times. In this hour of need for Yemen, India expresses its solidarity with the people and Government of Yemen in addressing the various challenges being faced by Yemen. Keeping in view our ancient civilizational links and close friendship with Yemen, India has decided to join the ‘Friends of Yemen Group’ with a view to strengthen the international efforts in assisting Yemen in this critical phase in the history of Yemen.

India already has an elaborate programme of capacity building and training in specialized fields for Yemeni citizens. Likewise hundreds of students avail of educational scholarships offered by Government of India. India is also conscious of needs of Yemen in the humanitarian fields. A consignment of rice valued at USD 2 million equivalent is on its way to Yemen. In addition, in our engagement under the ‘Friends of Yemen Group’, we would be happy to look at specific proposals for assistance from Government of Yemen, particularly in the field of training, capacity building, entrepreneurship development, the employment generating Small and Medium sector, education and Information Technology within the bilateral framework or under India’s programme for assisting the Least Developed Countries (LDCs).

Projects and Programmes considered urgent and necessary by Government of Yemen can be converted into Feasibility Reports that can be made available to Government of India for consideration under the umbrella of Credit lines for LDCs already announced by India during the India-LDC Ministerial Conference in New Delhi on February 18-19, 2011 and the UN LDC Meeting at Istanbul, Turkey on May 9-13, 2011.

Yemen can also benefit from concrete ideas and proposals that would emerge during India’s chairmanship of the Indian-Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC) of which Yemen was a former Chairman and an active member.

With these few words, I would like to wish the friendly people of Yemen continued progress, peace and prosperity and reassure them of India’s support as the country traverses through a crucial phase in its history.
INDIA’S FOREIGN RELATIONS - 2012

AFRICA
436. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce announcing US $ one million grant for the Project for Craftswomen of Africa.

New Delhi, January 10, 2012.

Shri Anand Sharma, Commerce, Industries and Textiles Minister announced that the National Institute of Design (NID) India is undertaking a project for training and exposure to craftswomen of rural Africa to empower them through design intervention in basketry making, as part of the India-Africa Forum Summit Action Plan. The announcement came during his meeting with Prof. Welshman Ncube, Ministry of Industry & Commerce of Zimbabwe at Harare yesterday. The initiative will cover five African countries at a cost of US $ one million over a period of three years. “This collaboration between the ancient civilizations with rich tradition in craft skills will further strengthen the bonds between India and Africa”, said Shri Sharma.

The project will be launched in Zimbabwe in February 2012 with the team from NID visiting Zimbabwe for identification of 25 craftswomen, who would be later trained in India, in collaboration with New Basket Workshop Foundation, an African NGO. The project aims at women empowerment through skill enhancement and appropriate marketing through leading Indian brands like Fab-India.

The Indian Minister assured that India will assist Zimbabwe in reviving its textile sector. India will provide skills training and also help in the development of textiles clusters. The two Ministers also reiterated the need for enhancing and diversifying the bilateral trade between the two countries which currently stood at US $ 128 million. The two Ministers also agreed to convene the meeting of the Joint Trade Committee within the next six months.
Speech by Minister of State for External Affairs, Smt. Preneet Kaur at the inaugural session of India-Africa Science & Technology Ministerial Conference

New Delhi, March 1, 2012.

Hon’ble Minister for Science & Technology and Earth Sciences, Shri Vilasrao Deshmukh
Hon’ble Minister of State for Science & Technology and Planning, Dr. Ashwani Kumar
Hon’ble Minister of Scientific research of Arab Republic of Egypt, Chair of the African Ministerial Conference on Science and Technology, Dr. Nadia Eskander Zakhary
Hon’ble Commissioner of Human Resources, Science and Technology of African Union Commission, Prof. Jean Pierre O Ezin
Hon’ble Ministers from Africa,
Excellencies,
Delegation Members
Distinguished guests, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted and deeply honoured to have this opportunity to welcome this distinguished gathering of Ministers and delegates for the India-Africa Science & Technology Ministerial Conference and Tech Expo.

India has always felt a special solidarity with Africa. In more contemporary times, the ties of friendship that bind us were forged in our common struggle against colonial domination and apartheid. India is keen for a reinvigorated and multi-dimensional India-Africa relationship. The tradition has continued under the rubric of the India Africa Forum Summit that paves the way for India and Africa in the areas of technology transfer, economic cooperation and capacity building. This new paradigm of cooperation aims at building upon the historical trust, goodwill and political engagement between India and Africa to create a modern functional partnership for mutual benefit.

We have now embarked upon an intensive and all-encompassing engagement with the African countries to implement important decisions that India and Africa took together at the first and second India Africa Forum Summits held in April 2008 and May 2011 respectively.
It is a matter of great satisfaction that today we are fulfilling one of the important commitments made at the first India Africa Forum Summit by organising the S&T Ministerial Conference. We are confident that the Science and Technology exposition will provide an opportunity to witness, appreciate and share various technologies. It will also help to develop an understanding for science, technology and innovation systems in the African continent.

Excellencies,

India's visionary Prime Minister Shri Jawaharlal Nehru considered institutions of scientific knowledge as “temples of learning” and “places of pilgrimage”. The spirit of this vision echoes, as under IA FS-I and IA FS-II, India has committed more than 100 capacity building institutions in Africa. This manifests our desire to build African capacities for both human and natural resources. Among the institutions, that we propose to establish and which have direct impact in the field of science and technology are; Food Processing Cluster, Medium Range Weather Forecasting Centre, University for Life and Earth Sciences, Soil, water and Tissue Testing Laboratories, Farm Science Centers, Material Testing Laboratories for Highways, Rural Technology Parks, Food Testing Laboratories, Centres on Geo-Informatic Applications and Rural Development, Women Solar Engineer vocational Training Centers, besides Information Technology Centers. The Addis Ababa Declaration and the Africa India Framework for Enhanced Cooperation adopted at the end of the second Summit will now guide our systematic enhanced engagement with Africa in the coming years.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Demonstrating India’s continued commitment to development in Africa, India has successfully implemented the Pan-African e-Network Project including tele-education, tele-medicine and connectivity between leaders in 47 African countries. An agreement has also been signed for its implementation in the 48th country, South Sudan recently.

To further strengthen these issues in Africa, there is a provision for 22,000 new scholarships for African Students in various academic courses and training programmes including special agriculture scholarships and C.V. Raman fellowships. India has offered more than 700 CV Raman Scientific Fellowships till 2014. So far more than 150 post doctorates from Africa have availed the fellowships. We hope that this would help in building capacity for scientific research in Africa.

As per India’s commitment to assist African countries in the field of Science & Technology, proposals for institutional strengthening of identified institutions in Africa and transfer of need based technologies have also been initiated. We are happy that the delegates from all the three institutes are present here and hope that they will have fruitful discussions with their India interlocutors. My ministry will support all these initiatives through its “Aid to Africa” budget and has duly secured approvals from the Cabinet to take this vast new agenda for cooperation with Africa forward.

In conclusion the camaraderie India shares with Africa would enhance technical collaboration, transfer of technology and greater participation by the young and dynamic populations of both India and Africa.

The next India Africa Forum Summit is slated for 2014 and our endeavour will be to implement as many decisions of the two Summits that have taken place so far as possible and take India-Africa cooperation to a new height by adopting mutually beneficial idea.

I thank you for your attention and wish you all a pleasant stay in India.
The First India-Africa Science & Technology Ministers’ Conference and Tech Expo was held on 1-2 March 2012 at Vigyan Bhawan, New Delhi. The inaugural session was addressed by Shri Vilasrao Deshmukh Hon’ble Minister for Science & Technology and Earth Sciences, Smt. Preneet Kaur, Hon’ble Minister of State for External Affairs, Dr. Ashwani Kumar, Hon’ble Minister of State for Science & Technology and Planning from Indian side and Dr. Nadia Eskander Zakhary, Hon’ble Minister of Scientific Research of Arab Republic of Egypt (Chair of African Ministerial Conference on Science and Technology) and Prof. Jean Pierre O Ezin Commissioner of Human Resources, Science & Technology of African Union Commission from African side. Following the inaugural session of the Conference, the Ministers visited the Tech Exp which was organized to showcase and share the best technologies.

2. Over 150 delegates from over 40 African countries attended the conference including 30 African Ministers dealing with Science and Technology, representatives from African Union Commission, and representatives from African Regional Economic Communities. Various round table sessions were held during the two days which focused on the following areas: Capacity building in Science and Technology, Science & Technology for development, Knowledge transfer & adoption and research areas of mutual interest.

3. India agreed to strengthen the three selected regional institutions in Africa such as Institute Pasteur of Tunisia, Institute of Mathematics and Physical Sciences of Benin and School of Science and Technology of Masuku in Gabon. The conference addressed the common societal needs such as affordable health care, water technology, climate change, agricultural science, food processing technologies, renewable energy, and Information & Communication technology, women in Science & Technology etc.

4. The conference ended with issuing of India- Africa Science & Technology Ministers Conference Declaration which put forth the action plan for the future cooperation in the field of Science and Technology.

5. The conference was organized in New Delhi as per India’s commitment made at the first India Africa Forum summit. Under the India Africa Forum summit, India has committed more than 100 capacity building institutions in Africa, provided 22,000 new scholarships for African students in various academic courses and training programmes including Special Agricultural Scholarships and C V Raman Fellowships.
Address by the Prime Minister at the Inauguration of Golden Jubilee Celebrations of Afro-Asian Rural Development Organization

New Delhi, March 5, 2012.

The Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh, participated in the inauguration of the Golden Jubilee Celebrations of the Afro-Asian Rural Development Organization in New Delhi today. Following is the text of the Prime Minister’s address on the occasion.

“I am delighted to participate in this inaugural session of the Golden Jubilee celebrations of the Afro Asian Rural Development Organisation. I welcome each one of the distinguished participants from the friendly countries of Asia and Africa.

It was more than 50 years back that India took the initiative to host the 1st Afro-Asian Conference on Rural Reconstruction here in this historic city of New Delhi. The far-sighted leaders of Asia and Africa recognized the need for cooperation in the development of agriculture and rural development among the newly liberated countries of the South. This historic Conference led subsequently to the establishment of the Afro-Asian Rural Development Organization which stands today as a shining symbol of South-South Cooperation.

Over much of the last century, the people of Asia and Africa fought together, shoulder to shoulder, to liberate themselves from colonial domination. Today the challenges we face are different but equally daunting. There are threats to international peace. The processes of globalization and the growing interdependence among nations pose fundamental new challenges to our economic sustenance. We face the rising aspirations of our teeming millions who demand and deserve nutritious food, clean drinking water, quality education and affordable health care.

In India, we have attempted to bring about rural reconstruction through development programmes aimed at poverty alleviation, employment generation, infrastructure development and provision for social security. In recent years, rapid economic growth has provided revenues to fund a massive expansion in our anti-poverty programmes. We have learnt important lessons in the process of implementing them and have adapted our strategies for intervention. We have empowered and democratized local bodies to make them principal instruments of implementing targeted schemes and programmes. We have directed large resources towards human development to enable the poor to benefit from the processes of economic reform and modernization. With a view to softening the harsh edges of poverty, we have introduced a landmark employment guarantee scheme named after the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, that assures a hundred days of employment to every rural household. Many challenges remain and we continue to explore new ideas and new means to reach out to the poor, particularly in the most backward and remote areas of our country and areas beset with violence and conflict.

India has a vision for a partnership with Africa to deal with some of these common challenges of the 21st century. That is why we initiated the India-Africa Forum Summit process in the year 2008, during which the leaders of India and Africa agreed on a Framework for Cooperation for a sustainable and wide-ranging partnership in development.

The first area of cooperation identified under this framework was agriculture. The thrust of the first phase of cooperation in this sector is on capacity building. We hope and trust this will complement the good work being done by the Afro-Asian Rural Development Organization, which runs international training programmes in seven member countries.

India will provide more than 500 new scholarships over the next few years particularly in agricultural sciences. We have earmarked 700 Science fellowships named after the celebrated Indian Nobel Laureate C.V. Raman for Africa. 150 African students have already been awarded this prestigious fellowship. We are also conducting short term training courses in areas such as water conservation, livestock and fisheries production, farm mechanization and post-harvest processing & value addition.

We have also agreed to pool our intellectual resources in the area of development planning. Joint studies have been planned on cotton production in Africa and on integrated water resource development and management of five different river basins in Africa.

Institution building is another important facet of our cooperation. We have earmarked about US $ 100 million for establishing various institutions including the India Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development, soil water and tissue testing laboratories, farm science centres, agricultural seeds production-cum-demonstration centres and rural technology parks in different parts of Africa. We hope that these initiatives will become intellectual hubs for agricultural studies and research for development.

We have to use science, innovation and entrepreneurship to give a boost to growth and employment in our rural economies. We are funding training and capacity building of 350 persons from Sub-Saharan Africa in the area of food processing.

We have approved lines of credit worth nearly US $ one billion for projects in rural Africa in the sugar sector, for rural power transmission and purchase of agricultural machinery.

We should encourage more investment and trade in agriculture between Asia and Africa. For this, the role of the private sector is also important. I am happy that Indian investment is flowing into Africa in areas such as agro-processing, agricultural machinery and floriculture. Indian farm technologies and practices are, I believe, quite relevant for African conditions and we should encourage such technology and investment flows. In the health sector too, Indian pharmaceutical companies are helping to combat AIDS in Africa.

Last year, the Prime Minister of Ethiopia and my friend, His Excellency Mr. Meles Zenawi made an important speech on the subject of ‘Green Economy and Structural Transformation in Africa’.

In that historic speech he said that the resource base of agriculture in Africa is very seriously threatened and that green development is central to transforming agriculture in the African continent. He also spoke of the enormous untapped renewable energy resources available in Africa, not the least being the bio-energy potential that would come with the greening of African agriculture.

I believe that in the future we will need to tackle the short term and long term environmental challenges that our economies face. Our scientists and experts have to reflect on technologies and processes that are most suitable for our rural conditions and circumstances, both in Africa and in Asia.

We have to work together to build a favourable international regime that enables us to access funds and green technologies for rural economic and social growth. We should put our heads together to work for the best outcomes at the Climate change negotiations and the forthcoming Rio +20 Conference in Brazil.

In pursuing our common goals, we should draw upon our own knowledge, our traditions and wisdom. The Nobel Laureate Ms. Wangari Maathai emphasized the importance of a holistic approach to development, as exemplified by the Green Belt Movement, which linked environmental preservation with women’s empowerment, democracy and peace. In her Nobel lecture she said “I have always believed that solutions to most of our problems must come from us”.

At the last Indian Science Congress, I was delighted to meet the members of the tribal community of Koraput, in the Indian State of Odisha. They had just been honoured by the Food and Agricultural Organization which had accorded the status of Globally Important Agricultural Heritage System to the traditional agricultural system they practiced.

So there is much to study and learn from each other.
Three quarters of the world’s poor live in Asia and Africa. Rural reconstruction and poverty eradication are, therefore, fundamental to our plans for sustainable development and inclusive growth. The Afro-Asian Rural Development Organization has the potential of playing a vital role in our collective battle against hunger, disease and despair that afflict large segments of populations in India and in Africa. I reiterate India’s full commitment to the ideals and objectives of the Organization and conclude by expressing our firm belief that the Organization will scale new heights under the distinguished leadership of Egypt. With these words I once again welcome all our guests, Their Excellencies, Ministers, Ambassadors from all friendly countries of Asia and Africa.”
New Delhi, March 19, 2012.

Excellency Ms. Joice Mujuru, Vice President of Zimbabwe,

Excellency Mr. Faustin Archangel Touadera, Prime Minister of Central African Republic

Hon'ble Ministers,

Eminent Heads of Institutions;

Industrialists;

Shri T C A Ranganathan, CMD, EXIM Bank;

Shri Syamal Gupta, Chairman, CII Africa Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to participate at this inaugural session on “India – Africa : Partners in Progress” of the 8th CII EXIM Bank Conclave on India-Africa Project Partnership, 2012 “Creating Possibilities; Delivering Values”. I welcome you all the Ministers and delegates who have come from Africa. Your visit and participation in this conclave makes it more meaningful. I am also delighted to welcome the young parliamentarians, journalists and Secretaries Generals of various African Chambers of Commerce and Industry. Your presence here, Excellencies is an affirmation of our common resolve and shared vision. I am happy that your visit to India takes place at the time of 8th CII EXIM Bank Conclave on India-Africa Project Partnership, 2012. India has institutionalised its partnership with Africa to deal with the common challenges of development in the 21st Century under the rubric of the India-Africa Forum Summits. The IAFS process has provided a new direction for greater collaboration in the areas of technology transfer, economic cooperation and capacity building. In fact the tripod on which the India-Africa relationship stands today with the resonance of South-South cooperation is that of technology, investment and training.

2. Recognising the trends towards regional integration in Africa we have created a three-tiered cooperation at the Pan-African, regional and bilateral levels with Africa. Under the decisions IAFS process, India would be establishing more than 100 capacity building institutions in Africa. There is also a provision for 22,000 scholarships for African students in various academic courses and training programmes including Special Agriculture Scholarships and C. V. Raman Scientific fellowships. Besides, we intend to organise several workshops and conferences. In the last 6 months we have already organised 15 workshops or Conferences including the India-Africa Hydrocarbon Conference, India-Africa Science and Technology Ministers Conference, and a conference to enhance economic partnership.

3. At the Second India-Africa Forum Summit, held in Addis Ababa in May 2011 a series of new initiatives were announced with regard to establishment of various capacity building institutions which includes India- Africa Food Processing Cluster; India-Africa integrated Textile Cluster; India- Africa Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting; India-Africa University for Life and Earth Sciences; India- Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development etc. These will be established at PAN-African level and the location of these institutions will be decided by the African Union. We are also setting up 32 institutions at regional level and approximately 40 Institutions at Bilateral level. I hope this will support the endeavour to achieve millennium development goals in Africa.

4. India has a large exposure through the Lines of Credit in Africa. During the Second India-Africa Forum Summit in May 2011 the Prime Minister of India announced the availability of Line of Credit of US $ 5 billion in the next 3 years. These Lines of Credit will support the development of infrastructure and expansion of industries and encourage the private sector to invest in Africa and the like.

5. It gives me pleasure to share with you that our capacity building training programmes under the framework of IAFS-I & II have been widely appreciated by our African partners. We have already conducted more than 50 special Training programmes so far which have been attended by more than 1000 participants from 43 African Countries.

6. While India today stands as an important partner with Africa we have realised that the world is changing rapidly. At this conclave we aim at creating a new understanding in the fast changing global economy and realise that we among the developing countries, must not depend only on traditional markets but must develop new markets as well and I am happy to note that India’s trade with Africa has increased by more than 35 % during 2010-11 from the previous year. This CII Conclave “Creating Possibilities; Delivering Values” aims at enhancing an understanding, recognising the new conditions and the emerging opportunities so that our partnership and engagement becomes more fruitful.

7. India’s economic growth and investment in education, human resource development, infrastructure and service sector has brought forth immense opportunities for modern India. We believe that this experience is a basis for sharing with Africa and for creating opportunities for cooperation and business partnerships. I am happy to state that the initiative taken by India for the PAN-African e-network project is functional in 47 African Countries and providing tele-medicine and tele-education facilities.

8. Your Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, it is matter of immense pride for us that we have just launched the India-Africa Business Council and convened the first meeting of Council. This Council will facilitate and enhance our business engagements. We have also concluded the Second India-Africa Trade Ministers meeting which has provided a unique platform to enhance our Business engagement. I am confident that these initiatives which recognise the development cooperation between India and Africa would have a positive impact on our societies and people to people contact. I would urge that the measures that we have outlined will lead to the development of stronger partnership, evolution of new areas of trade and investment and endeavour to enhance economic partnership between India and Africa.

9. Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, I have briefly touched upon the areas of cooperation that we undertake with Africa through the processes of the India Africa Summits. Our emphasis on nurturing human resources, building African capacities and enhance value addition and processing of African resources and commodities is unfailing. We are committed to work with Africa for fulfilling its developmental aspirations and we know both the pain and the pleasure of the processes of development in a democratic framework for multicultural and pluralistic societies. We believe that such a vast canvas needs multi-faceted attention and that is why my Ministry, which largely provides the budget for many of these activities, has tried to bring together various important groups of our African friends to also have associated with the India-Africa conclave. This manifests our desire to do business with Africa with a human face.

10. I wish you a pleasant stay in India and fruitful deliberations.

441. Media Interaction of Minister of State for External Affairs
Smt. Preneet Kaur with journalists from Africa.

New Delhi, March 20, 2012.

Dear friends from Africa, at the outset I would like to wish you a very warm welcome to India and to the Ministry of External Affairs. You represent 12 of our closest friends in Africa, and we are delighted to have you in India. I do hope that your visit so far has been good.

You have come at the time when there is the CII-Exim Bank Conclave, the eighth one on the India-Africa Project Partnership. I was privileged to interact with the Hon’ble Vice-President of Zimbabwe, and the Hon’ble Prime Minister of the Central African Republic, and many other Ministers who had come from various other nations yesterday at the Conclave.

As you all know, our ties with Africa are centuries old and through these centuries we have nourished a very good people-to-people contact and engagement. We have been partners in the struggle against colonialism. We are in the 21st century, and we have now moved to a new paradigm. We seek to cooperate with each other to build a better life for all our peoples. This partnership is anchored in the fundamental principles of equality, mutual respect, and mutual benefit.

Africa figures very prominently on our foreign policy radar in India. It is one of our most valued relationships and associations. We have created a three-tier engagement with Africa at the pan-African level, regional, and bilateral level. These levels are dealt through the rubric of the India-Africa Summits. The guiding principles here are: to work together for capacity-building, human resource development, science and technology cooperation, enhancing agricultural productivity, food security, development of infrastructure, and in other areas.

At the Second Africa-India Summit in May 2011, a series of new initiatives were announced. Here we are going to establish various capacity-building institutions. These include: the Africa Food Processing Cluster, the India-Africa Integrated Textile Cluster, the India-Africa Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting, the India-Africa University for Life and Earth Sciences, and the India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development. All these institutions will be established at the pan-Africa level, and the location of these institutes will be decided by the African Union.

We are also setting up 32 institutions at the regional level, and about 40 institutions at the bilateral level. There are 22,000 scholarships for African students in various academic courses, training programmes, especially for agriculture, and the C.V. Raman scientific fellowships. We hope that these will help you all achieve your Millennium Development Goals.
I think you all should be familiar with the Pan-African e-Network Programme. This is going to be in 53 countries and it is already providing tele-medicine and tele-education facilities in 47 countries. The meeting which you have come for, the CII Exim Bank Partnership and Development Conclave between India and Africa is the outcome and it will help the five billion dollar line of credit in the next three years that our Prime Minister announced at the last India Africa Forum Summit in May 2011. These lines of credit will support the development of infrastructure, expansion of industry, and encourage the private sector to invest in Africa.

I recently had a very successful and very good visit to the beautiful countries of Rwanda and Burundi. I would like to build on these successful visits and to the other countries that I have been to in your very beautiful continent.

India and Africa have common objectives, that is, to ensure that the voice of the developing countries in the world is given due attention. Media, as you know, in every country plays a pivotal role in creating better awareness of the openings and possibilities. That is why we are facilitating the exchange of journalists between India and Africa, and we are really very pleased to welcome you here.

I understand that you have already, during your week long stay here, been to Agra, and you are going to Ahmedabad. I hope that you will enjoy them and this will give you a glimpse of not only the abiding partnership that India and Africa have but also the special warmth India and her people have for our brothers and sisters in Africa. I wish you a very pleasant stay.

Thank you very much.

Question: This is a session where there is a competition for African resources between China and India. Can you make a comment on this from India’s point of view? What do you say is the difference between China-Africa interaction and India-Africa interaction?

Minister of State for External Affairs: I would not like to comment on the China-Africa interaction because that is your bilateral interaction, i.e., between the specific countries and China. As far as India is concerned, we consider not just an economic relationship; it is a relationship that goes way beyond that, many centuries. It is a relationship built on each of us being there for the other in once difficult time, against the colonial rule, against apartheid. Also, it is a relationship in which, as I said, we have mutual respect for each other and we want to help in your capacity-building so that your people can take care of your needs. Whichever way we can help you to develop the role and the ability of your people to be able to best serve your own country and how you would like to develop, that is important for us to know how to go forward in our relationship.
If there is anything else I would ask Shri Gurjit Singh, Additional Secretary (Eastern and Southern Africa) who is much more seasoned than I am, because he has been our Ambassador there and very good in looking after our relations with Africa. Maybe he can throw some light on a few more things.

Additional Secretary (East & Southern Africa) (Shri Gurjit Singh): I recall Madam when she spoke at African Union Executive Council two years ago. What she said was, for India the best African resources do not lie under the ground, but live on it. I think that is our approach. We believe that the real, good resources of Africa – they are also under the ground but - the human resource is the best. So, one of the significant departures I think of any other partnership and Africa, is that India focus on human resource development and capacity-building.

Question: Madam Minister, I would like to know whether you are thinking in terms of dealing with human rights as well apart from collaboration in different industries.

Additional Secretary (E&SA): Our policy towards Africa is worked on the basis that the best model of your development in a democratic manner is your own. So, we have no prescription for you. But yes, if you have acceded to international values, then you should abide by that. But if you choose to be democratic and abide by human values, follow the elections, India will help you to built capacities in those areas. And this is enshrined in the Addis Ababa Declaration which was signed between India and Africa at the Second Summit in Addis Ababa in May last year.

Question: I would like to talk about the relationship between India and some other countries in the world. But in ...(Unclear)... from the western world that Iran ...(Unclear)... Is India likely to increase its oil supplies from African countries?

Minister of State for External Affairs: Oil is one of the greatest energy demands that every country has, and it is an increasing demand. I would not at this stage like to comment on Iran. We have a separate relationship with Iran. So, that does not come between our relationship here. Certainly because of the increasing demand for oil, I am sure that India will look at increasing buying of oil from Africa?

Question: You were speaking about the five billion dollars which have been set aside. I would like to know what exactly that is. Is it a loan of some sort? What kind of system will be followed as opposed to other institutions and which industries?

Additional Secretary (E&SA): The five billion dollar provides soft loans, and Senegal is already a beneficiary. I cannot easily recall which projects but the projects are chosen by the Africans countries, not by us.

Question: What are the modes? Can you give some more details?

Additional Secretary (E&SA): For a country like Senegal we provide a loan at 1.75 per cent for a repayment period of 20 years.

Question: I am representing the National Press Agency which is part of the Government of Niger. I am happy that India is also collaborating with us. Earlier we were only doing projects with France and now, of course, we have moved on to do with China on petrol, and Canada in gold for example. What I would like to know is if we could also get a credit for the improvement of our agencies which requires large equipment to become a bigger project, - whether it could be a Government-connected project or whether private enterprise - can also be involved in developing this agency.

Additional Secretary (E&SA): First of all I would say that at the Addis Ababa AU Summit in January, our delegation and the new Foreign Minister of Niger had a very good meeting. As a result of that meeting, an Indian delegation would be going to Niger very soon to discuss the priorities of the Government of Niger, of what they want from us. If they tell us that they want this institute, we will help them. We do not set the priorities. Possibility, yes. Private sector, public sector, both, yes.
Statement by Minister of State Mrs. Preneet Kaur on New Partnership for Africa’s Development; Causes of Conflict and the Promotion of Durable Peace and Sustainable Development in Africa at the joint debate in UNGA.

New York, October 17, 2012.

Mr. President,

I am honoured to address this august assembly at today’s Joint Debate on the New Partnership for Africa’s Development: progress in implementation and international support, causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa including on the decade to Roll Back Malaria in developing countries.

Allow me to convey our sincerest appreciation to the Secretary General for his timely and extremely informative report on the agenda items under discussion today.

Mr. President,

The New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD) articulates both a vision and a strategic socio economic development framework for Africa.

India applauds the progress achieved by Africa in the implementation of NEPAD priorities over the last ten years through multi sectoral initiatives in agriculture, infrastructure, health, education, science, information technology and environment.

However, despite these positive strides, serious challenges remain to be addressed before the African continent can achieve all round development and prosperity.

Extreme poverty, hunger, lack of adequate nutrition, conflicts and other malaises continue to shackle the tremendous potential of the African people.

It is therefore important to acknowledge that addressing Africa’s development needs and challenges requires an unwavering commitment backed by resolute action, not only from within Africa, but equally important, from outside the continent.

It is imperative that the international community remain resolute in its support for Africa through sustained cooperation including transfer of technology, resources, and an enabling international environment.

As has been pointed in Secretary General’s report, as a proportion of total OECD global aid allocation in 2011, Africa’s share remained virtually unchanged at a mere 37 percent.
Indeed, till date, Africa has received only around half of the pledged increase made at the Group of Eight Summit in Gleneagles.

The international community therefore needs to urgently address this gaping gap between promise and delivery.

In these times of political uncertainty and economic meltdown, it is more incumbent than ever for the continent’s development partners to stay the course and help African countries achieve their developmental goals.

Mr. President,

The India-Africa partnership is based on firm historical foundations, which over the decades, has grown into one of the most productive and durable partnerships.

Our similar historical experiences have engendered a common worldview. Understanding and sensitivity to each other’s strengths, requirements and constraints has given our partnership lasting strength and resilience.

India is today on a path of rapid economic growth.

Africa is also witnessing a phase of robust resurgence. Some of the world’s fastest-growing economies are in Africa. Africa is also blessed with a young and dynamic population.

We have, therefore, together with our African friends, transformed our age old and traditional bond into an enduring and multi-dimensional relationship.

Our partnership with Africa is aligned with the priorities integral to the development goals of Africa and is built on the foundations of mutual equality and common benefit.

At the 2nd India Africa Forum Summit in 2011, India committed US Dollars 5 billion for the next three years under lines of credit to help our African partners, achieve their development goals.

We also committed an additional US Dollars 700 million to establish new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions.

We also decided to support the development of a new Ethio-Djibouti Railway line to the tune of US Dollars 300 million in keeping with NEPAD’s priority on infrastructure development.

Following the success of the Pan-African E-Network Project we are working on the establishment of an India-Africa Virtual University, which will help to meet some of the demand in Africa for higher studies in Indian institutions.
We are making available 10,000 new scholarships under this University exclusively for African students.

Our total commitment until 2014 by way of scholarships to African students, including under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme, stands at more than 22,000.

To strengthen trade and investment flows, we have earlier this year in May 2012, launched the India Africa Business Council, whose core sectors of cooperation include agriculture, manufacturing, pharmaceuticals, textiles, mining, petroleum and natural gas, IT/ITeS, financial services (including microfinance), energy, roads and railways.

Given the sheer potential of untapped trade, we have also raised our bilateral trade target to US Dollars 90 billion by 2015 from US Dollars 70 billion set earlier.

We are already making available duty free and quota free market access for goods from 34 LDCs in Africa, which covers 94% of India’s total tariff lines and provides preferential market access on tariff lines that comprise 92.5% of global exports of all LDCs.

Moreover, under the IBSA Trust Fund, with our partners from Brazil and South Africa, we have completed several successful projects in Burundi, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau and Sierra Leone for strengthening of infrastructure and capacity building.

Mr. President,

India’s partnership with Africa also spans capacity building programmes which include medical specialists to tackle pandemics like malaria, HIV and TB.

Our private sector has also invested substantially in pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities in several African countries.

We remain committed to the complete elimination of malaria and would like to thank the Secretary General for enlisting it as one of his top priorities.

Mr. President,

India’s engagement with Africa is built on a strong focus on all round capacity building and contributing to human resource development and facilitating greater intra African cooperation.

We have redirected our age-old bonds of friendship to respond to the contemporary aspirations of our peoples and build a partnership which is increasingly being cited as the ‘beacon of South South cooperation’.
This partnership, indeed, has the potential to strengthen global governance systems and democratise multilateral institutions.

In conclusion, I would like to quote the words of my Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh,

“The 21st century is often described as the Asian century. India wishes to see the 21st century as the Century of Asia and Africa with the people of the two continents working together to promote inclusive globalisation. Events in India and Africa in the middle of the 20th century changed the world. Today, we have a second chance to take charge of our own destiny, and give new meaning to the concept of sustainable, equitable and environment-friendly development.”

I thank you, Mr. President.
Speech by the Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur to African Heads of Mission.

New Delhi, November 15, 2012.

Excellencies,

Let me extend you all a very warm welcome.

I am sure you have been keeping close track of recent developments in India. Mr. Salman Khurshid has taken over as new Minister of External Affairs. As you are aware, he is no stranger to international affairs and served with distinction as Minister of State for External Affairs during 1993-1996. As most of you are aware, he has right from the start been deeply engaged in intense diplomatic activities including with IOR ARC and ASEM meetings.

Excellencies,

The UPA Government during last nine years have significant achievements to its credit in the field of social and economic policy-making. Some of these include flagship initiatives like the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme, the setting up of the Unique Identification Authority of India to provide every resident with an “Aadhaar” number to access social support services, Rural Health Mission, Jawahar Lal Nehru Urban Renewal Mission, Skill Development Mission and legislation bringing into effect the Right to Information and the Right to Education.

Excellencies,

We are now also experiencing the fallout of difficult economic conditions globally. The Indian economy has also been affected by these developments. Our exports have shrunk and the fiscal deficit has gone up on account of a variety of factors. Growth decelerated to 6.5 per cent last year. The economy grew 5.5% during April to June this year, marginally higher than the 5.3% recorded during the previous three months, but the full year growth for 2012-13 may still be below 6%. Data released last week showed that factory output contracted by 0.4% in September. India’s exports have also fallen by 1.63% in October, the sixth successive month of such contraction, as orders dry out from Europe hit by sovereign debt worries and a wobbly political situation.

Excellencies,

In recent weeks, the Government has initiated several important steps to:

(i) Stabilize government finances.
(ii) Make this growth process socially and regionally more inclusive.

(iii) Step up public investment as well as public-private partnerships.

(iv) Tap into available capital and technology from around the world that seeks investment opportunities in India.

We hope such steps will assist us in responding to the challenges being faced by our economy.

Excellencies,

Now let me turn to Africa and India’s relations with this important continent.

India and Africa share historic and close ties. India considered its own independence will not be complete till African and other countries were rid of colonisation and apartheid in South Africa. Indian leadership enjoyed close and warm relations with several African leaders. India’s own independence served as an example to many African countries in their liberation struggle.

In South Africa, the apartheid regime was a curse on human dignity. India was the first country to place trade embargo and later cut off diplomatic relations. India vigorously brought the issue of South Africa at the United Nations.

Excellencies,

We condole passing away of some senior African leaders this year such President of Ghana, PM of Ethiopia, President of Malawi. However, it is to be noted that African institutions have matured as transition of power in these countries has been smooth. It is a positive development that conflicts in Africa are on the decline except in the Horn and some parts of Western and Central Africa. We are concerned at rapidly deteriorating situation in Mali and we reiterate our support to efforts being made by the African Union and ECOWAS towards restoration of constitutional order. There is also an urgent need to restore peace and security in Cote d’Ivoire and Democratic Republic of Congo.

In Africa’s hot spots, there are at present more that 6,500 Indian soldiers under UN Peace Keeping Operations including in DR Congo, Liberia, Sudan, Cote d’Ivoire. Our soldiers have suffered casualties in Congo and elsewhere. We remain committed to playing our role in ensuring safety to the people as well as strengthening humanitarian assistance programmes in Africa. India has also contributed US$ 2 million to AMISOM for its operations in Somalia.

The democracy has been expanding in Africa. As compared to less than 5 in 1970s, today more than 40 countries in Africa hold regular elections. The African continent has been the second fastest growing region in the world in the past decade. Between 2000-2010, six of the 10 fastest growing economies were from Africa. KPMG in its recent report has noted that the African economy is expected to grow at 5.8% in 2012. The collective African GDP is expected to grow from US $1.6 trillion in 2008 to US $2.6 trillion in 2020. With one quarter of world’s population under 25 years is projected to be from sub-Saharan Africa in 2025; offers an opportunity and poses challenge too of providing skills and creating jobs. The urbanisation rates in some of the African counties are as high as 10%, this will put strain on existing urban infrastructure - water, sanitation, health; sustained and unprecedented growth will be needed for job creation.

In recent times the role of Africa in the international affairs has grown and its voice is heard with respect.

Excellencies,

India enjoys close and friendly relations with all countries in Africa, pan-African organisations African Union, African Development Bank, regional organisations - ECOWAS, India is one of the cooperating partners of COMESA the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa and Southern Africa Development Community (SADC).

Excellencies,

India is committed to a reinvigorated and multi-dimensional India-Africa relationship. The tradition has continued under the rubric of the India Africa Forum Summit that paves the way for India and Africa in the areas of technology transfer, economic cooperation and capacity building. This new paradigm of cooperation aims at building upon the historical trust, goodwill and political engagement between India and Africa to create a modern functional partnership for mutual benefit.

During the current year, former President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil of India paid state visits to Seychelles and South Africa. We were honoured by visits of President of Mali and Burundi; and Prime Minister of Mauritius to India. Apart from these, several high level visits were exchanged between India and Africa.

Excellencies,

The first India Africa Forum Summit was held in 2008 in New Delhi which adopted the Delhi Declaration and India-Africa Framework for Cooperation. Both documents together defined the future roadmap for cooperation between India and African countries. The Second one took place in Addis Ababa in May 2011.

These Summits, built upon the foundations of the historical relationship that existed between India and Africa and further contributed to designing the structure of an enhanced engagement between India and our African partners in the 21st century. The next India Africa Summit is slated for 2014 in India.

Excellencies,

India and Africa share the mutual desire to expand economic cooperation and trade and investment linkages between them. The trade and investment between Africa and India have increased; both Africa and India have agreed to take further measures to continue to create a positive ambience for such enhanced flows. India-Africa trade crossed US $ 65 billion in 2011-12. This is an encouraging development; however, this is still well short of the potential. India’s unilateral non-reciprocal Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme (DFTP) Scheme for LDCs announced at the time of the first India - Africa Forum Summit in 2008 has significantly contributed to the ability of African LDCs to access the growing Indian market and contributed to the creation of complementarity in their export baskets. We are currently examining a proposal to further expand coverage of the products which have now become of interest to several African countries to export to India under DFTP Scheme.

Lines of Credit have become an important instrument of development partnership between India and Africa. During the last decade, 115 LOCs of value of US $ 5.2 billion have been extended to African countries. Africa has also effectively utilized concessional Lines of Credit offered by India for supporting the development of its infrastructure, industry and capacity building. Some of the projects executed and under execution include setting up of tractor assembly plants (Benin), rural electrification (Ghana, Burkina Faso), low cost housing, setting up of textiles project (Angola), Cassava plantation (Cameroon), hydro electric projects (Central African Republic, Burundi, Rwanda), development of Sugar industry (Ethiopia), renewal of urban transport system (Cote d’Ivoire), Setting up cement plants (DR Congo, Djibouti), Energy transmission (Eritrea, Mali). This list is not an exhaustive but just an indicative one of projects undertaken by India under lines of credit.

Excellencies,

India's approach to cooperation with Africa is under the rubric of South-South Cooperation, responding to African needs in the development process especially in:

i. Capacity building,
ii. infrastructure development,
iii. promotion of trade and industry and
iv. value addition/beneficiation.

Capacity building, particularly as both India and Africa are young societies and want to translate the demographic dividend into effective growth has been an area of high importance. The successful utilization of the ITEC programme has been a manifestation of the South-South Cooperation that effectively exists between India and Africa. The enhancement of scholarships and training slots under the ITEC programme, as well as the creation of new courses for training of African nationals in specified areas, all emerge from the Action Plan of the Framework of Cooperation of IAFS-1 and have been appreciated.
Under IAfs-I and IAfs-II, India has committed more than 100 capacity building institutions in Africa. This manifests our desire to build African capacities for both human and natural resources. Among the institutions, that we propose to establish and which have direct impact in the field of science and technology are; Food Processing Cluster, Medium Range Weather Forecasting Centre, University for Life and Earth Sciences, Soil, water and Tissue Testing Laboratories, Farm Science Centers, Material Testing Laboratories for Highways, Rural Technology Parks, Food Testing Laboratories, Centres on Geo-Informatics Applications and Rural Development, Women Solar Engineer Vocational Training Centers, besides Information Technology Centers. These are at various stages of implementation and our endeavour is to accelerate it with your cooperation.

A provision has been made of 22,000 new scholarships for African Students in various academic courses and training programmes including special agriculture scholarships and C.V. Raman fellowships. India has offered more than 700 Dr. C V Raman Scientific Fellowships till 2014. So far more than 150 post-doctorates from Africa have availed the fellowships. We hope that this would help in building capacity for scientific research in Africa.

India is engaged in providing Technical Assistance to Cotton – 4 countries (Benin, Burkina Faso, Chad and Mali), Malawi, Nigeria and Uganda. This is aimed at improving the livelihood of African cotton growers and exporters and creating value addition to the local produce.

Excellencies,

The Pan African e-Network Project is unique project to use the Indian expertise in information technology to bring benefits of healthcare and higher education to all countries of Africa. The Network is connected by a satellite/fibre optical network to provide tele-medicine, tele-education and VVIP connectivity to these countries. The cost of the project is approx. US$ 130 million, a total grant from the Government of India. I am happy to inform you that close to 10,000 African students have been enrolled, 3,500 tele-education sessions conducted under this important initiative.

The first India-Africa Science & Technology Ministerial Conference was held on 1 and 2 of March 2012 at New Delhi. It helped to develop an understanding for science, technology and innovation systems in the African continent.

Excellencies,

As part of Joint Action Plan approved under the Framework for Cooperation of the India-Africa Forum Summit, we have been regularly organising familiarisation visits and training programmes for journalists from Africa as well as visits of Indian journalists to Africa. Overall from 2009 to 2012 India has hosted nearly 90 journalists from Africa and trained another 45 African journalists. Under "INDIAFRICA: A Shared Future" programme is a dynamic platform to exchange ideas about emergent realities, successes and challenges, and to imagine future collaborations in business, design and culture, understanding diverse nations as interdependent creative problem solvers with unique and invaluable resources and talents. In its first year, this unique people to people and youth outreach programme received participation from over 3000 people representing 282 institutions in 20 African countries.

Excellencies,

In implementation of India’s enhanced engagement under India Africa Forum mechanism, as this is a partnership, we seek close cooperation of the African Union, Regional Economic Communities and each African country. I also request you to closely follow-up all projects with your government and assist us in timely implementation.

Excellencies,

The challenges we confront today are global in nature be it international terrorism, piracy in the Indian Ocean and Gulf of Guinea, climate change, organised crime etc. We need to have close consultation, cooperation and coordination to effectively tackle these.

India has historically espoused African causes in the international fora - UN, Commonwealth. India will continue to extend its active support to the African issues. In that context, I wish to thank many African countries which have extended support for India’s candidature for Permanent Membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council.

Excellencies,

It may be relevant to recall here that PM in his recent address spoke of ‘rising expectations’ in India and round the world which has on the one hand unleashed new energies in our society and, on the other, fostered an atmosphere of great impatience and cynicism. He said, “This is a challenge that all of us must deal with, so that we can socially and politically sustain an environment conducive to higher economic growth.”

Let me conclude, by assuring you of India’s continued commitment as trusted partner of Africa in its socio-economic and technological and human resource development.

I wish, in advance, Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.
Thank you.
BURUNDI

444. Press Release issued on the visit of Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur to Burundi.

New Delhi, February 21, 2012.

Hon’ble Minister of State for External Affairs, Smt. Preneet Kaur visited Burundi as part of her two nation tour to Rwanda and Burundi on 17-18th February. This was the first ever visit by a high powered delegation from the Ministry of External Affairs to Burundi.

2. Burundi opened its Mission in New Delhi in 2009. Since then, relations with Burundi have taken a positive direction. The Foreign Minister of Burundi has visited India for the LDC Ministerial Meeting in 2011 and for the India-Africa Conclave. He also accompanied the President of Burundi on a private visit to India last year. Meetings with Foreign Minister of Burundi were held on the sidelines of international meetings in Africa on several occasions in the last 2 years, most lately during the AU Summit in Addis Ababa in January, 2012.

3. India’s engagements with Burundi have also grown rapidly. An LOC of US$ 80 million has been offered to establish Kabu hydroelectric power station. Under the decisions of IAFS, Burundi is establishing the India-Africa Institute of Educational Planning and Administration (IAIEPA) and a Vocational Training Centre. Bilaterally, it has been offered an IT Centre and a cluster of biomass gasifiers. India has also increased its scholarships for Burundi after IAFS-II. The Pan-African E-Network Project for both tele-medicines and tele-education is functional in Burundi. Burundi sees India as a major partner with whom it can engage effectively.

4. During her visit Smt. Preneet Kaur called on the President H.E. Pierre Nkurunziza. They recalled his participation in the Second Africa India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa in May, 2011 and his bilateral meeting with PM on that occasion. They reviewed the international and regional situation and bilateral cooperation. The President thanked India for its consistent support to Burundi in its development and supported it for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council. Detailed discussions were held with the Foreign Minister of Burundi, H.E. Laurent Kavakure. He also hosted a banquet in honour of Hon’ble Minister of State and described her visit as historic. He also emphasised that Burundi, which was recovering from international strife, had taken many positive steps and found India to be among the most responsive of partners and expressed his strong commitment for processes of IAFS from which Africa in general and Burundi in particular has benefited. He said I take this opportunity to reiterate the profound gratitude of the Government of Burundi for the so many measures. taken by Indian authorities to boost Africa’s development through the said mechanisms’. A General Cooperation Agreement between India and Burundi was signed during the occasion.

5. Smt. Preneet Kaur also met with the Minister of Commerce, Industry and Tourism, the Minister of Mines and Energy, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Higher Education, Science and Technology. Her invitation to the Minister of Higher Education, Science and Technology to participate in the India Africa S&T Ministers’ Conference in New Delhi to be held on 1st and 2nd March was accepted. Similarly, the Trade Minister accepted the invitation to participate in the India Africa Trade Ministers’ Meeting to be held on 17th March 2012.

6. A large business delegation from CII accompanied the Minister on her visit. The delegation was warmly received by Burundian authorities and Chambers of Commerce and had an extensive programme of engagements both at the official and private sector levels. A considerable potential of expanding economic cooperation and trade and commerce with Burundi was discussed.

7. The Indian community in Burundi has also revitalised its presence and is making a positive contribution to the economic development in Burundi. Smt. Preneet Kaur met with this growing community and addressed it.
445. Extracts from the Media Briefing on the visit of President of Burundi.

New Delhi, September 13, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ........

On my left is Joint Secretary (East and Southern Africa), Mr. Ravi Bangar, who will also be available to respond to some of the questions on the first of the announcements that I have to make.

The President of the Republic of Burundi, His Excellency Pierre Nkurunziza, will be visiting India on a State visit from September 17 to 19. This is the first State visit of the President of Burundi to India. Indeed, this is the first State visit either from India to Burundi or from Burundi to India.

Those of you who are following the number of State visits will perhaps note that this is the third State visit during the course of this month. We have already had two State visits earlier - from Tajikistan and Palestine – and this is the third State visit to India of a Head of State during this month.

The President will be accompanied by four other Ministers. He is scheduled to meet Rashtrapati on the 18th of September. He will also have delegation-level talks with the Prime Minister, and will have calls by various other dignitaries. During the visit he will also be addressing the chambers of commerce at a meeting jointly organized by the ASSOCHAM, CII and FICCI.

Burundi is one of the smallest and most densely populated countries in Africa. India’s bilateral relations with Burundi have been on the upswing since 2009 when they opened a Mission here. Also, this year earlier, Ms. Preneet Kaur, the Minister of State for External Affairs, had visited Burundi.

Burundi is also the location of two pan-African initiatives that India has taken. The first is the India-Africa Institute for Educational Planning and Administration, which is being set up there. The second is a vocational training centre which is being set up in Burundi. These are both pan-African initiatives that we have taken following the India-Africa Forum Summits. We hope that the visit would further develop our bilateral relations.

* * * *

Question: Can you just tell us what is it on the table, specific issues, between India and Burundi? Also, China has been there for quite some time. How are we placed in Burundi vis-à-vis China?

Official Spokesperson: Just one minute. We do not want to enter into comparisons, but JS (E&SA) will certainly explain our position on this. As regards any other country’s position, I think it is not proper and appropriate on our part to make that an issue of our briefing. With that I will hand it over to Ravi.

Joint Secretary (E&SA) (Shri Ravi Bangar): As far as India-Burundi relations are concerned, we have had a fairly intensive engagement with them since the end of the Genocide which unfortunately took place there in the early 1990s and following the Arusha accord of 2003. And their engagement with India has been on the upswing. They decided to open the Resident Mission in India in 2009, which they did. We have had a number of Ministers from Burundi who have come on a visit to India.

Burundi is rich in mineral resources, very small but rich in mineral resources, particularly in platinum, uranium and other precious metals too. Therefore, in the engagement with Burundi, our stand mainly is to build the capacity of Burundi and to contribute in the infrastructure development in Burundi. And the two institutions which were earlier mentioned by Akbar ... (Unclear) ... to bring a kind of a pan-African level engagement centred from Burundi with India’s participation as implementation of India-Africa Forum Summit decisions. In a nutshell, our engagement with Burundi is focused on capacity building, and on socioeconomic development of Burundi.

Question: Mr. Bangar, what are we looking at Burundi for? What is our take away from this meeting, this engagement? Also, are we looking at the kind of cooperation in peace-keeping areas? Is there some angle to the peace keeping ... (Inaudible) ...

Joint Secretary (E&SA): Both Burundi and India contribute troops to UN peace-keeping missions. Despite the Genocide, despite the turmoil which was there Burundi has contributed troops to AMISOM to combat the menace of the civil wars and the lack of governance in case of Somalia. Our basic objective is to forge a very closer relationship with all countries in Africa. Burundi is important. Burundi was the Chair of the East African Community last year. They joined the East African Community in 2007. So, Burundi is not just Burundi alone, but a group of 12 countries in East Africa. Their basic urge to integrate economically among themselves and as a bloc to seek closer ties with India, that is what is in our interest, that is what we are working at.

Official Spokesperson: Just to give you supplementary information, apart from AMISOM Burundi has also contributed to Sudan in Darfur and in Chad. This is a country of ten million. To AMISOM I think they contributed something like 2,000 soldiers.

Question: Since India has entered into nuclear cooperation agreements with other African countries, since they have uranium resources, is there any plan to have a similar agreement with Burundi?
Joint Secretary (E&SA): Not at the moment because they have to first have a complete, detailed survey done as to what their resources are. For platinum, definitely they are quite advanced. They produce almost 46,000 metric tonnes of platinum a year, which is quite significant. But other resources they have not yet done.

Question: Ravi, can you give us an update on our efforts to provide connectivity – internet, telecom, hospitals, education and all that between the States. How many countries have been able to connect so far ... (Inaudible) ...

Joint Secretary (E&SA): This is called Pan-Africa E-Network which we commenced in 2008. It is with a grant of about Rs.530 crore, roughly US $135 million at that point of time. We have 48 countries which have signed on to this project, of which in 47 of these countries it is already established. The last country to join was South Sudan earlier this year. And the remaining are keen to join this and they are completing their procedural requirements of this.

This tele-education, which you have mentioned, Venkat, and also the telemedicine has been useful. And here we are overcoming quite a number of challenges in terms of implementing the project. The time zones, thee are very different. There is the language issue. But still the popularity of the courses through this, through the University of Delhi, IGNOU, Amity University, private universities, hospitals like Apollo, like Netralaya, they are equally very well established in terms of connectivity now. And increasingly we are finding that the language is not a major issue to overcome. I hope that answers your question.

Question: Will we be looking to source Uranium from Burundi... (Inaudible) ...

Joint Secretary (E&SA): As I said earlier, it is too early for that.
Media Statement of Prime Minister during State Visit of the President of the Republic of Burundi.

New Delhi, September 18, 2012.

His Excellency Mr. Pierre Nkurunziza,
President of the Republic of Burundi,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the media.

It’s a great honour to welcome President Nkurunziza to India on his first state visit to India.

India and Burundi enjoy warm and friendly relations. Our official exchanges, trade and investment linkages and people-to-people interactions are growing steadily. Earlier today, President Nkurunziza and I reviewed our relations and we have agreed to further promote and expand our ties in an all-round manner.

The Memorandums of Understanding signed today in the fields of rural development, education, health and medicine will enable our two countries to undertake structured cooperation in these vital areas of human development, where India’s experience can be of some relevance to Burundi.

There is also great potential to further strengthen bilateral trade and investment relations. I requested President Nkurunziza to facilitate Indian investment in agriculture, infrastructure and manufacturing sectors in line with Burundi’s national development goals and policies.

India has also contributed to the development of Burundi’s human resources through the pan-African e-network project, training programmes and scholarships. Burundi will be hosting the India-Africa Institute of Educational Planning and Administration, a Vocational training Centre and Cluster of Biomass Gasifier Systems offered by India under the India-Africa Forum Summit initiative for capacity building and development. India is also setting up an Information and Technology Centre of Excellence there. I hope these institutions will be operational soon and benefit not only our friends from Burundi but the whole of Africa.

India is committed to the development of infrastructure in Burundi. In addition to the US$ 80 million line of credit for the important Kabu hydroelectric project currently under operation, we have agreed to extend a new line of credit worth over US$ 40 million to Burundi for a farm mechanization and food processing project.

We also exchanged views on regional and global issues, including our fight against the common threat of piracy and the urgent need for reform of the United Nations Security Council. India deeply appreciates Burundi's support for its candidature as a permanent member of the reformed and expanded Security Council.

This visit of President Nkurunziza has imparted a fresh impetus to our joint efforts to strengthen our bilateral relations. With these words, I am confident that our ties will make rapid progress in coming years.

I thank you.
Joint Statement on the State Visit of the President of Burundi.

New Delhi, September 18, 2012.

His Excellency Mr. Pierre Nkurunziza, President of the Republic of Burundi paid a State Visit to India from 17-19 September, 2012 at the invitation of Hon'ble President Shri Pranab Mukherjee.

2. He was accompanied by Her Excellency First Lady Mrs. Denise Bucumi Nkurunziza and a high-level Ministerial and official delegation. The Ministers accompanying included His Excellency Mr. Laurent Kavakure, Minister of External Relations and International Cooperation; Her Excellency Ms. Kayitesi, Minister of Agriculture and Livestock; and His Excellency Mr. Come Manirakiza, Minister of Energy and Mines.

3. The President of Burundi was accorded a ceremonial welcome at the Rashtrapati Bhavan on September 18, 2012. The President laid a wreath at the memorial to Mahatma Gandhi at Rajghat and paid homage to the Father of the Indian Nation. During the State Visit, President Nkurunziza met the Hon'ble President of India Shri Pranab Mukherjee who hosted a banquet in his honour. Hon'ble Vice President Shri M. Hamid Ansari called on the President of Burundi. The President of Burundi and the Prime Minister of India held detailed discussions on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest.

4. The President of Burundi received Minister of State for External Affairs Mrs. Preneet Kaur.

5. The President of Burundi and the Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh held delegation-level discussions on bilateral, regional and international issues. These discussions were held in a warm, cordial and friendly atmosphere reflecting the developing multi-faceted bilateral partnership between the two countries.

6. The two leaders recalled their meeting on the sidelines of the Second Africa-India Forum Summit held in Addis Ababa in May 2011 and discussions held thereon.

7. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the intensification of diplomatic contacts between the two countries, particularly after the opening of resident Embassy by Burundi in New Delhi in 2009. The leaders positively assessed the growing bilateral political, trade and economic relations. The General Cooperation Agreement signed during the visit of Minister of State for External Affairs of India in February 2012 was seen to provide an important platform for cooperation between the two countries in various areas.
8. Both sides agreed to further enhance the bilateral cooperation in view of the considerable untapped potential.

9. President of Burundi thanked the Government of India for approval of a concessional line of credit of US $ 80 mn for the Kabu – 16 Hydro-electric project. Completion of the project will go a long way in meeting Burundi's electricity requirements.

10. President Nkurunziza expressed satisfaction for the successful implementation of the Tele-education and Tele-medicine centres in Burundi set up in August 2010 under the Pan African E-Network project. Under the tele-education programme, Burundi has concluded agreements with the University of Madras and Indira Gandhi National Open University.

11. The two leaders reviewed and expressed satisfaction at the implementation of the following projects, which have been offered to Burundi as part of the decisions of the India-Africa Forum Summits of 2008 and 2011:
   (i) India-Africa Institute of Education, Planning and Administration;
   (ii) India-Africa Vocational Training Centre;
   (iii) Village electrification in Burundi through the setting up of Biomass Gasifiers; and
   (iv) Farm Science Centre.

12. India is also setting up an IT Centre of Excellence as a bilateral commitment. The two sides have identified the main thrust areas for the proposed Centre.

13. Both sides agreed to continue strengthening cooperation in the areas of economy, trade and investment, finance, human resource development, culture, etc. while striving to expand cooperation into other potential areas such as agriculture, food processing, ICT, science & technology, health, mining etc. Burundi invited Indian investments in infrastructure development, mining, agriculture, power generation and transmission, tourism among others. Both sides agreed to find ways and means of enhancing and further expanding the bilateral trade and investment.

14. President Nkurunziza thanked the Government of India for the increased number of long-term scholarships provided to Burundian students in the educational institutions in India under Indian Council for Cultural Relations. He also appreciated the high quality of training being imparted to the Burundian officials under Indian Technical and Economical Cooperation (ITEC) programme and various short-term training and long-term fellowship programmes of the India Africa Forum Summit mechanism. These programmes have been useful to Burundi in its human resource development.

15. The Burundian Government requested Government of India’s assistance to finance some of their infrastructure projects. Government of India assured President Nkurunziza of India’s continued support in Burundi’s economic and infrastructural development. Government of India announced a Line of Credit of US$ 42.38 million for Farm Mechanisation and Integrated Food Processing Complex in Burundi. The President of Burundi expressed gratitude to the Prime Minister of India for this financial support.

16. President Nkurunziza also appreciated the contribution of India through the IBSA Trust Fund for strengthening infrastructure and capacity to combat HIV/AIDS in Burundi.

17. The following agreements were signed during the visit: (i) Exchange Programme for Cooperation in the field of Education, (ii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Rural Development and (iii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Health and Medicine.

18. President Nkurunziza took special note of India’s active participation in the United Nations sponsored peace missions in Africa, and the role it continues to play in promoting peace and security in the continent. India appreciated Burundi’s contribution of forces to the AMISOM in an effort to bring in peace and security in Somalia.

19. President Nkurunziza conveyed Burundi’s support for India’s candidature for Permanent Membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council. The Indian side thanked Burundi for its support to India’s candidature for Permanent Membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council.

20. Burundi informed of its application for the membership of the Commonwealth and requested India’s support. India conveyed that, in view of the excellent and growing bilateral relations, the request of Burundi will be considered when the Commonwealth Secretary-General consults with member States in this regard, in keeping with the agreed process for membership of the Commonwealth.

21. Both India and Burundi strongly condemned the menace of international terrorism and its devastating effect on the human civilization. They affirmed that there can be no justification for terrorism and reiterated their resolve to work towards strengthening of the global consensus and legal regimes against terrorism.

22. Both sides agreed that the State Visit of the President of Burundi will lead to strengthening of the cooperative relations between the two countries, and will provide further impetus for the future development of a comprehensive partnership.

23. The President of Burundi conveyed his deep gratitude and appreciation to the President and Prime Minister of India for the warm hospitality extended to him and the members of his delegation during the visit. President Nkurunziza invited the President and the Prime Minister of India to pay State Visits to Burundi on mutually convenient dates. The invitations were accepted with gratitude and it was agreed that the dates of the visits would be finalized through diplomatic channels.

The President laid a wreath at the memorial to Mahatma Gandhi at Rajghat. During the visit, President Toure met with the President of India Smt. Pratibha Devi Singh Patil who hosted a Banquet in his honour. He held talks with Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. Shri E. Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs called on the President.

3. President Toure met leaders of Indian business and industry in New Delhi.

4. President Toure appreciated the achievements made by the State, the Government and people of India in all fields in the course of national development which has increasingly enhanced the role and standing of India in the region and the world.

5. The leaders of the two countries exchanged views in an atmosphere of warmth, cordiality and mutual trust on all aspects of bilateral cooperation as well as on the regional and international issues of mutual interest. They welcomed the development of the friendship and cooperation between India and Mali.

6. The leaders expressed satisfaction at the intensification of diplomatic contacts between the two countries following the opening of resident Embassies in New Delhi and Bamako in 2009 and 2010 respectively.

7. Both sides agreed to further enhance high-level visits and meetings between the two countries. The leaders noted that there still remained considerable potential for cooperation and agreed to strongly enhance the partnership between the two countries in all areas of mutual interest.

8. Both sides called for an early convening of the first meeting of the Joint Ministerial Commission following the signing of the Agreement on Political,

9. The leaders agreed to further deepen the partnership, by adding more concrete programmes and projects and broadening it to new areas for cooperation. Both sides agreed to continue strengthening cooperation in the areas of economy, trade and investment, finance, human resource development, culture, agriculture, fisheries, etc., while striving to expand cooperation into other potential areas such as mining, hydrocarbons, agriculture, food processing, ICT, science and technology, public health. Both sides agreed to find ways and means of enhancing and further expanding the bilateral trade and promoting mutually beneficial cooperation. India noted with appreciation Mali’s offer for Indian participation in their mining industry, agriculture, food processing, dairy and poultry farming, cotton cultivation, pharmaceutical industry, leather industry, automobile and two-wheeler segment and other commercial activities and expressed its willingness to collaborate with Mali in these areas.

10. Both sides noted with satisfaction that the two-way trade had increased steadily in the recent years. President Toure affirmed that Mali would create favourable conditions for Indian enterprises to invest in the country. Both sides agreed to step up trade and investment linkages, inter-alia by encouraging cooperation.

11. The Malian side welcomed the enhanced training slots provided by India under ITEC for training and capacity building of Malian defence forces.

12. During the visit, the following Agreements were concluded: an Agreement for grant of a Government of India Line of Credit of US $ 100 million for a Power Transmission Project connecting Bamako and Sikasso via Bougouni in Mali and MoU on Co-operation in the Field of Geology and Mineral Resources.

13. President Toure highly appreciated the support and assistance of the Government and people of India rendered to Mali’s development process over the past years and warmly welcomed the announcement by the Prime Minister of India to continue to assist Mali in its socio-economic development.

14. The leaders affirmed their desire and determination to work together for peace and stability in the region and the world, and agreed to further strengthen cooperation at regional and international fora, especially the ECOWAS-India as well as in AU, WTO, WIPO, UN and the Non-aligned Movement.

15. The Malian side underlined the pioneering role played by India in consistently extending support and cooperation to African countries within the framework of South-South Cooperation. This has acquired an enhanced and significant role following the successful organisation of India- Africa Forum...
Summit in 2008 and the Africa-India Forum Summit in 2011 leading to the strengthening of Africa-India relationship.

16. Both sides also agreed to closely cooperate to promote dialogue and cooperation in Africa with the aim of promoting peace, stability, development and prosperity in the continent.

17. The two sides agreed to strengthen cooperation to effectively address the challenges posed by non-traditional security threats such as climate change, environmental degradation, natural disasters, energy security etc.

18. The Indian side thanked Mali for its support to India’s candidature for permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council.

19. On the situation in the Middle East, the two sides condemned any forms of violence and urged the protagonists to resume dialogue and reiterated their support for the “Road Map” of the Quartet.

20. The two sides strongly condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and resolved to increase cooperation in the common efforts of the international community in preventing this scourge in a comprehensive manner. Both sides agreed to closely cooperate for an early finalisation of a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism, for which India had presented a draft at the United Nations in 1996.

21. The Indian side appreciated the regional peace-keeping efforts of Mali in Africa and reiterated its offer for providing training facilities to Mali to augment its peace-keeping capabilities. India appreciated the Conference on Peace, Security and Development in the Sahelo Saharian region organised by the Government of Mali in 2010, in order to address issues on cross-border crimes and terrorism affecting the region.

22. President Amadou Toumani Toure expressed his gratitude to the State, Government and friendly people of India for the warm reception and hospitality accorded to the President and the Malian delegation during their State Visit to the Republic of India. He invited Her Excellency the President and His Excellency the Prime of India to pay State Visits to Mali. The invitations were accepted.

450. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesperson on Recent Developments in Mali.

New Delhi, March 23, 2012.

In response to a question, the Spokesperson said as follows:

“The Government of India expresses its deep concern over the recent developments in Mali and calls for respect of the Constitutional order and democratic process in that country. It welcomes the statements by the United Nations Security Council, the African Union and the ECOWAS on the developments in Mali.

The Ministry of External Affairs is in touch with the Embassy of India in Bamako. The small Indian community in Mali is safe. The members of the community have been advised to exercise caution and remain in contact with the Embassy.

India will monitor the evolving situation in Mali.”

The Spokesperson was referring to the military coup in the African country, where on March 23, 2012 mutinous troops seized control of the state television and radio station, and announced a coup. The country's democratically elected president was not heard since then. President Amadou Toumani Toure, who was overthrown was himself a seasoned soldier, who headed the country's parachute commando unit. There was speculation of a counter coup by the troops loyal to President Toure. Mali was considered one of the only functioning democracies in the region. The coup represented a major setback for the 15.4 million Malians at the feet of the Sahara desert. Although Toure initially took power in a 1991 coup, he became known as the “Soldier of Democracy” because he handed power to civilians, and retreated from public life. Years later he re-emerged to win the 2002 election and was re-elected in 2007.
MAURITIUS

451. Extracts from Media Briefing relevant to the visit of Mauritius Prime Minister’s Visit.

New Delhi, February 6, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen and thank you for coming for this briefing.......

Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of Mauritius, will be arriving in the next few hours in New Delhi. He will be on a state visit from 6th to 10th February. We have put out a press release on this. So, you have all the details available with you. Just a few additional points I would like to make.

As you are aware, India has occupied a significant and important place in the foreign policy activities of Mauritius and this visit forms part of this regular exchange of high-level visits between India and Mauritius. This is Dr. Ramgoolam’s first visit after his re-election in 2010 and it follows the state visit of our President to Mauritius in April 2011.

As you know, Dr. Ramgoolam is a close friend of India and he has visited India in various capacities since 1995. The last time he was in India was in 2008 when he was the Chief Guest for the Sixth Pravasi Bharatiya Divas, and was conferred Pravasi Bharatiya Samman award.

His day of engagement is on 7th February when he will meet Prime Minister and senior dignitaries, and they will have delegation-level talks. The details of his schedule and the media opportunities for interaction will be provided to you separately.

Besides Delhi, Dr. Ramgoolam will also travel to Kurukshetra where he will be conferred the honoris causa degree of Doctor of Laws by the Kurukshetra University, and he will visit Mumbai to interact with business people. He will also have an interaction with businessmen here in Delhi.

I am certain you will have questions on that. We have here with me Additional Secretary (East & South Africa), Mr. Gurjit Singh who will answer those questions.

Question: Sir, what about the Double Taxation Avoidance Treaty? I believe there were talks in December, especially after the Vodafone court ruling ...

(Inaudible)...

Additional Secretary (East and Southern Africa)(Shri Gurjit Singh): Yes, you are right. In December we had the Joint Working Group on Double Taxation meet in Mauritius from 21 to 23 December. It was held in a friendly and constructive atmosphere. Both sides have agreed to pursue discussions on the basis of concerns raised at the meeting. They acknowledged that the economic interests of both countries should be preserved, and agreed to work towards concrete outcomes that would be mutually beneficial. This is the status as of now.

Question: There were some reservations, I believe, on the part of Mauritius. Have they been overcome?

Additional Secretary (E&SA): This is an ongoing discussion which was resumed in December. So, there are various things which have been said but I do not think any particular thing about reservations. I think we have made our position clear, they have spoken to us, and the discussions are ongoing.

Question: Sir, to my understanding, the details of the full financial disclosure from certain banks about certain accounts in Mauritius is not yet available to the Indian Government. Are these in talks?

Indian High Commissioner in Mauritius (Shri T.P. Seetharam): We have a process of exchange of information between Mauritius and India. It is based on specific cases rather than generally opening up all accounts of all banks. So, that is a process which is going fairly smoothly.

Additional Secretary (E&SA): You are aware that there is a major Business Delegation accompanying Prime Minister Ramgoolam. You would also be aware that our trade, though small in size, has grown by nearly 300 per cent over the last five years. And India’s exports are close to 800 million dollars. We are supplying almost the entire petroleum requirements of Mauritius. That is one aspect. The other aspect is that according to the Department of Investment Policy Protection, 62 billion dollars of investment out of 152 billion dollars received by India between 2000-2011, which is about 40 per cent, has come through Mauritius. So, they are a significant channel for foreign direct investment into India.

Question: Sir, any agreements likely to be signed with Mauritius?

Additional Secretary (E&SA): With a country with whom we have such a close and diverse relationship there is always a clutch of agreements. It is all being worked out. I think by tomorrow you will know exactly what went through. We have a very cogent relationship on that. We have a common agreement to deal with issues of surveillance and reconnaissance in the region. And, as you know, with the rising threat of piracy this has acquired greater significance and we are contributing to it in a significant manner on the basis of joint discussion with Mauritius. We have also sought to augment their capacity, both human and physical. As you know, in 2009 November I think we have gifted a Dhruv helicopter to them which is providing good service to them ... (Inaudible)... And we have also now installed, in April last year, a new coastal surveillance radar system, which is also from all accounts doing well and helping them to do this. Indian ships are visiting them regularly. Training of their people is also going on quite frequently and regularly. So, I think that relationship is fairly stable and it is looking at the requirements and dealing with them as they emerge. It is also significant that the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation is located there. And, as you know, India has taken over the Chair and an Indian has taken over as the Secretary-General and Mauritius is extremely supportive of our efforts to deal with this. So, we are working quite closely on the overall context of cooperation in the Indian Ocean.

Question: Mr. Ambassador, can you tell us a little bit about the Chinese presence there?

Indian High Commissioner in Mauritius: While Mauritius has a very large Indian origin population which is close to 69 per cent of the population, there is also a small but significant Chinese origin population in Mauritius. Three per cent of the population of Mauritius is Chinese origin. They are largely into trading and play a significant part in the economic aspect of Mauritius. China has good relations with Mauritius. They have an Embassy there. They have had high-level visits recently and they are taking more and more interest.

Question: Any defence relations?

Indian High Commissioner in Mauritius: Defence, no. Their cooperation is largely economic. They are in the process of setting up a Special Economic Zone in Mauritius. But in the area of defence, nothing worth mentioning has ever come to our notice in Mauritius, not between China and Mauritius.
452. Statement by the Prime Minister to the media during the State Visit of Prime Minister of Mauritius.

New Delhi, February 7, 2012.

Your Excellency, Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of Mauritius,
Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

It is a great honour for me to welcome Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam on his State Visit to India. He is a very special dear friend of India and a distinguished member of the Indian diaspora.

Prime Minister Dr. Ramgoolam and I have completed extremely fruitful and wide-ranging discussions aimed at strengthening and further expanding the India-Mauritius partnership.

Relations between India and Mauritius are rooted in strong historical and cultural links. However, over the years, our relations have been transformed into a modern, dynamic, comprehensive and mutually beneficial partnership that encompasses active cooperation in a wide spectrum of spheres.

We have agreed that the next Meeting of the India-Mauritius Joint Commission on Economic, Scientific, Technical and Cultural Cooperation will be held later this year to identify new measures to promote cooperation in key areas.

India has been a long-standing development partner of Mauritius. I was happy to inform the Prime Minister that the Government of India will provide a new economic package to Mauritius consisting of a Line of Credit of 250 million US dollars and a grant of 20 million US dollars. A part of this grant will be used to establish a hybrid planetarium at the Rajiv Gandhi Science Centre in Mauritius.

We reviewed the status of implementation of the India-Mauritius Double Taxation Avoidance Convention. Both India and Mauritius have a mutual interest in ensuring that there is no misuse of the convention. We are happy that the Joint Working Group on this Convention has resumed its work and held a meeting recently in Port Louis in December 2011. We have directed our officials to continue their work towards finding a mutually acceptable and satisfactory solution to the issues that concern us at the earliest.

The Memorandums of Understanding signed today in the areas of Science & Technology and Education will enable institutionalized cooperation in human resource development in our two countries. I have also invited Mauritius to make the best use of the opportunities available under the initiatives launched by us as part of the India-Africa Forum Summit process.

Diaspora links have provided the foundation for our bilateral relations. The Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Sports and Youth Affairs that will help in strengthening these contacts, particularly amongst the youth of our two countries.

The Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Textiles is aimed at developing cooperation to mutually benefit from the strengths and endowment of both countries with regard to raw materials, skill development and increasing production capabilities.

Defence and security cooperation is one of the key pillars of our relationship. We both have common security interests. India will continue to support Mauritius in ensuring the security and sovereignty of its land and maritime territory.

We have agreed to strengthen our cooperation to address the growing menace of piracy which has emerged as a major security and developmental challenge for all littoral states of the Indian Ocean. A stable and peaceful Indian Ocean is an objective we both share. In this context, we have agreed that India - as current chair of the IOR-ARC, and Mauritius - as the host for its Secretariat - should work together to reinvigorate this important initiative.

We have had a complete meeting of minds on key regional and global issues. We deeply appreciate Mauritius’ consistent and strong support for India’s candidature as a permanent member of an expanded and reformed United Nations Security Council.

This visit of Prime Minister Dr. Ramgoolam has imparted a fresh impetus to our efforts to further strengthen our excellent bilateral relations.

5. The Prime Minister of Mauritius received Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Minister of Finance and Shri Jaipal Reddy, Minister of Petroleum and Natural Gas and Smt. Preneet Kaur, Minister of State for External Affairs. He called on the UPA Chairperson, Smt. Sonia Gandhi.

6. The two leaders recalled the historical and cultural ties based on the foundations of kinship and shared heritage and common values between the two countries. They reiterated an abiding faith in and commitment to democracy, development and peace.

7. They shared the confidence that cooperation at the bilateral, regional and multilateral levels will enable the two countries to realise their developmental aspirations, and contribute to peace, prosperity and security in the Indian Ocean Region.

8. The two sides signed the following documents during the visit:

(i) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Science and Technology;
(ii) Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Youth and Sports;
(iv) Education Exchange Programme 2012-2016 and
(v) Memorandum of Understanding between the Rajiv Gandhi Science Centre Trust Fund and the National Council of Science Museums of India.

9. Both sides noted with satisfaction the progress achieved in the implementation of projects under the economic package offered by the Government of India to Mauritius in the past. One Advanced Light Helicopter Dhruv was gifted to Mauritius in November 2009 as part of this package. The Coastal Surveillance Radar System was installed and commissioned in April 2011. The construction of the Offshore Patrol Vessel is underway.

10. Government of India announced an offer of an economic package, including a Line of Credit of US$ 250 million and a grant of US$ 20 million. The Prime Minister of Mauritius thanked the Prime Minister of India for this generous financial package.

11. The two leaders agreed to strengthen cooperation to enhance security in the Indian Ocean region through jointly agreed programmes of EEZ surveillance, exchange of information, capacity building and the development of an effective legal framework against piracy.

12. The two leaders emphasized the need to intensify cooperation to tackle the challenges faced by Indian Ocean Rim countries, including strengthening the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC). Mauritius pledged its full support to IOR-ARC as India assumed the Chair of IOR-ARC.

13. The two leaders reviewed the progress achieved so far in cooperation in hydrography between India and Mauritius. Both sides agreed that 6 years of bilateral cooperation in hydrography had led to the successful preparation of new navigational charts of Mauritian waters.

14. The two leaders reviewed the various efforts to promote bilateral trade and investment ties and the development of infrastructure in a manner that contributes to sustainable development in both countries. The two leaders noted the growth of bilateral trade between India and Mauritius which has increased from US$207 million in 2005-06 to US$818 million in the year 2010-11, a growth of 295% in the last 5 years. During Financial Year 2010-11, India’s exports to Mauritius were US$801 million and imports from Mauritius were US$17 million. It was agreed that the Joint Commission Meeting would be held at an early date where all issues relating to closer economic cooperation would be addressed.
15. Both sides noted with satisfaction, the growing economic and commercial ties between India and Mauritius. The two Prime Ministers agreed on the need to foster greater business linkages in all areas where opportunities exist whether at bilateral or regional level.

16. Both sides noted that the Meeting of the Joint Working Group on DTAC was held from December 21-23, 2011 in a friendly, constructive and positive atmosphere. Both sides agreed to continue discussions at an early date with a view to reaching a mutually agreeable outcome.

17. Mauritius welcomed the initiative taken by India to hold the India Africa Forum Summits on a regular basis. Both sides noted with satisfaction that the process had enhanced India’s engagement with Africa and given it a modern and functional dimension. Mauritius expressed its appreciation for the contribution by India for infrastructure development and capacity building in Africa. A large amount of credit lines were providing an important basis for increased development and enhanced business interaction between India and Africa. The human resource development and capacity building initiatives were providing opportunities for training African youth to participate in their own development process. They expressed their satisfaction that the Pan African e-Network Project had been successfully implemented in Mauritius and that, under the IAFS initiatives, the Hybrid Planetarium at the Rajiv Gandhi Science Centre would be undertaken.

18. Both leaders reiterated the importance of an effective multilateral system, centered around a strong United Nations, as a key factor in tackling global challenges. In this context, they also recognized the need to pursue reform of the main UN bodies, including the revitalization of the UN General Assembly and expansion of the UN Security Council in both categories of membership. The Prime Minister of Mauritius reiterated his country's consistent support for India’s candidature for permanent membership of an expanded UN Security Council.

19. The two leaders underscored the need for strengthening and reform of multilateral financial institutions and enhancing the voice and participation of developing countries, including SIDS, in international economic decision-making.

20. The two leaders reaffirmed their unequivocal position against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. In furtherance of the shared security interests of both countries which are interlinked in the region, it was agreed to enhance bilateral cooperation on issues of common concern, including piracy, terrorism, organised crime and drugs. It was also agreed to intensify cooperation in the areas of training and capacity building of the Mauritian Police Force. The Prime Minister of Mauritius expressed interest in the purchase of equipment to strengthen the capability of Mauritius Police Force. The Prime Minister of India assured that this equipment could be supplied expeditiously to Mauritius under a mutually agreed time frame. Both the Prime Minister of India and the Prime Minister of Mauritius also agreed on the necessity of ensuring adequate surveillance of the vast EEZ of Mauritius through mutually agreed programmes.

21. Both sides agreed that climate change was one of the most important global challenges. They reaffirmed the provisions and principles of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), in particular that of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities. They reiterated that developed countries should take the lead in undertaking ambitious mitigation efforts and providing financial and technological support to developing countries. Both Parties shall collaborate on projects of mutual interest to preserve common eco-systems. They shall also collaborate to address vulnerability of Mauritius as a Small Island Developing State (S ID) to Climate Change and strengthen coastal research.

22. India reiterated its consistent support to Mauritius for the restoration of Mauritian sovereignty over the Chagos Archipelago. The Prime Minister of Mauritius thanked India for its long-standing and unwavering stand in this regard.

23. Both leaders welcomed the fact that the business delegation, led by the Hon. Prime Minister of Mauritius, had meaningful interactions with the business communities of India in New Delhi and Mumbai.

24. The Prime Minister of Mauritius thanked the Prime Minister of India for the warmth, cordiality and gracious hospitality extended to him and members of his delegation during their stay in India.

25. Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam extended an invitation to Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to pay a visit to Mauritius. The invitation was accepted and it was agreed that the dates of the visit would be finalized through diplomatic channels.
454. Banquet Speech by Prime Minister during the State Visit of the Prime Minister of Mauritius.

New Delhi, February 7, 2012.

Your Excellency The Honourable NavinChandra Ramgoolam,
Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius,
Mrs. Veena Ramgoolam,
Distinguished Members of the Delegation of the Republic of Mauritius,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is my honour and privilege to warmly welcome Prime Minister NavinChandra Ramgoolam and his delegation to India. Excellency, we regard you as a close and special friend of long standing. Even more than a friend, we regard you as family. The bonds of friendship between India and Mauritius are rooted in strong historical and cultural links. After an arduous journey and overcoming the vagaries of nature, your ancestors settled in Mauritius and have laid the foundations of a modern and prosperous State. The linkages forged by Mahatma Gandhi and Manilal Doctor among others, were carried forward by Smt. Indira Gandhi. She developed a close rapport with your distinguished father, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, who led your country to freedom and prosperity.

Today, our two countries have built strong bridges across the Indian Ocean to bring our people closer together. Yet advances in technology and communications allow us to close the gap even further between us. Our interests and welfare are interlinked. We must work towards greater integration in the widest sense of the term.

Excellency,

India and Mauritius are both pluralistic societies where rule of law and democratic values are cherished. Unity in diversity is the hallmark of both our countries. We compliment you and the people of Mauritius on the socio-economic progress that Mauritius has achieved over the last four decades. Mauritius has emerged as a model of success for Africa as well as for the entire world. Despite the prevalent winds of turbulence affecting the global economy, Mauritius has shown remarkable resilience under your leadership and has maintained an impressive economic growth and a high standard of living. India is committed to extending its full support to the Government and people of Mauritius in their development efforts.

Excellency,

Your visit has provided us an opportunity to reaffirm our special relationship and to identify ways and means of further enriching our multifaceted partnership for the mutual benefit of our two peoples.

There are many areas where our two countries can elevate the level of our cooperation to an even higher level. These include the areas of trade and economic cooperation, culture, connectivity, education, space and tourism. We look forward to working closely with you towards this end.

I once again wish you a very pleasant stay in India.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to invite you to join me in a toast to:

- To the good health and well being of Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius His Excellency The Honourable Navin Chandra Ramgoolam, and Mrs. Veena Ramgoolam;
- To the progress and prosperity of the friendly people of the Republic of Mauritius.
- To the close and continuing friendship between India and Mauritius.

NAMIBIA

455. Press Release on the India-Namibia Foreign Office Consultations.

New Delhi, November 22, 2012.

The Namibian delegation led by HE Ambassador Veiccoh Nghiwete, Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Namibia visited India on 20 November 2012 and held Foreign Office Consultations in New Delhi. Mr. M. Ganapathi, Secretary (West) in the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India led the Indian delegation at the Consultations.

The Namibian delegation called on Shri Salman Khurshid, Minister of External Affairs and exchanged views on bilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest.

Both sides noted with satisfaction that bilateral relations rooted in history during the Liberation struggle of Namibia had expanded in recent years especially following the State Visit of HE Hifikepunye Pohamba, President of Namibia to India in 2009. The two sides agreed that there was significant potential for further expanding bilateral relations.

During the Consultations, the two delegations discussed bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and international issues. Relations between the two countries in the areas of trade, education, healthcare, human resource development, capacity building, Cooperation on Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, defence and India Africa Forum Summits and related projects were amongst the subjects on which views were exchanged between the two delegations.

The two delegations also discussed cooperation between India and Namibia including in the UN, NAM, and Commonwealth. It was agreed to strengthen cooperation in regional and multilateral fora in areas of mutual interest.
Rwanda

February 16, 2012.

On her first leg of bilateral visit to Rwanda and Burundi in Africa, Preneet Kaur Minister of State for External Affairs met Louis Mushikiwabo, Foreign Minister and Paul Kagame, President of Rwanda. During the bilateral discussions with the two leaders, Smt. Kaur conveyed that Indians value Rwanda as a stable and rapidly developing country in Africa. The bilateral visit is in furtherance to consolidate the diplomatic relationship, which has already been blooming. This is the first ever visit by an Indian Minister of state from Ministry of External Affairs to Rwanda.

2. In a meeting with Rwanda Foreign Minister the two Ministers signed three MOUs viz. in the field of: i) India – Rwanda Renewable Energy Cooperation; ii) For solar electrification of 35 schools in rural Rwanda; and iii) Agreement for Establishment of a Joint Commission with Rwanda.

3. Smt. Kaur further stated that the economic engagement between the two countries has always been strong and during the recent years it has been growing steadily. Indian government has offered a support of US 80 million Dollars for a Hydroelectric Project on Nyabarongo River, which has been progressing well. While appreciating the assistance by the Government of India in capacity building efforts by the Rwandans, Foreign Minister Louis Mushikiwabo, expressed satisfaction with the progress in the Government of India supported projects and requested for expediting few more projects already submitted by them. Smt. Kaur stated that the Government of India remains committed to support the establishment of Vocational Training Centre in Rwanda to support the development of their Human Resources. Indian government has increased ITEC slots to 40 from 25 and ICCR scholarships from 6 to 10. Indian Government has also offered 8 post doctoral Fellowships under the C V Raman Scheme. In addition, the Government of India is going to support the Rwanda government in the establishment of an Entrepreneur Development Institute.

4. During this visit to Rwanda she also met the Agriculture Minister of Rwanda who has shown keen interest to intensify Agricultural co-operation between the two countries. In her meeting with the Indian Community at Kigali in Rwanda, she appreciated their efforts in strengthening the bilateral relationship.

5. A high powered CII business delegation consisting of 22 members is also accompanying the Minister of State for External Affairs to these two African countries. This is significant especially in view of the recent growing trend of India-Rwanda trade relations in the recent years as it will help Indian business people to explore new possibilities of strengthening trade relations.
SEYCHELLES

457. Press Release on the Prime Minister’s meeting with President of Seychelles.

New Delhi, February 2, 2012.

459. Address by President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the National Assembly of Seychelles.

Victoria, April 30, 2012.

I bring to you warm greetings, good wishes and best regards from the people of India, from the Members of the Indian Parliament, and from the Government of India.

I am honoured to have the privilege to address this special session of the National Assembly of Seychelles, the pillar of democracy of your beautiful country.

I am fascinated by the unique splendour of this paradise island. I am deeply touched by the warm welcome extended to me and my delegation by the friendly people of Seychelles.

Hon'ble Speaker,

Our peoples and our countries are connected by the Indian Ocean, the trade winds and the monsoon. The bonds between us are rich and infused with history. We share a common legacy of colonialism and a struggle to free our nations. India’s struggle for freedom was a unique movement for democracy, justice and equality. It was led by Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of our Nation - an important bridge between India and the African continent. It was the cradle of Africa that turned the barrister into a Mahatma, who remains the symbol of peace and, non-violence as also hope all over the world as it strives for global stability and security.

India and Seychelles are two vibrant democracies that share common values like expression of popular will, respect for liberty and human rights, adult suffrage, rule of law and equality. India’s experience has shown to the world how development can be addressed within the constitutional and democratic frameworks; how aspirations of millions can flourish in a pluralistic society and how diversity can be unifying as well. Democracy in India has remained strong and peoples’ faith in the system has remained alive and vibrant, as reflected in huge turnouts in all stages of elections to our Parliament and state assemblies.

We, in India, have great admiration for Seychelles’s strong democratic traditions, for its economic reforms, for the impressive human and social development indicators it has attained.

In a democracy, Parliaments are the forums to understand and address people’s aspirations and their developmental needs, and to focus on various aspects of governance, which impact on the well-being of the people. We also believe that Parliaments can play a role in building greater understanding between the peoples of different countries. India would like to increase cooperation between our two Parliaments, and there should be more exchange of visits between the Members... of Parliaments. With this aim in view we invited young MPs from African countries for mutually beneficial interactions with their Indian counterparts last month. I am happy that one of the young lady MPs from Seychelles had participated in the programme. I am happy that MPs from India are with me during this visit. We would like to continue such interactions.

India and Seychelles enjoy close relations. The links between our two countries extend to every aspect of human life, be it social, economic, cultural, intellectual or political. Our relations are characterized by regular high level visits and political consultation, both at the highest and official levels. President Michel’s State visit to India in June 2010 was historic as were his visits in 2011 and 2012. He has been instrumental in building up the relationship between our two countries over the years. These visits has strengthened co-operation in all fields. India would like to continue as an important partner of Seychelles in its development process. We are now entering a new phase of increased bilateral relationship. There is so much to gain and benefit through mutual help and understanding. Let us expand cooperation in areas such as economic and commercial, tourism including eco-tourism, and environment, apart from the existing cooperation in defence and security, education, health and human resource development.

Seychelles has ethnic links with three continents – Asia, Africa and Europe. It is uniquely placed to play a role in our efforts to achieve better integration of our policies with Africa. There is nothing metaphorical when we say that the trade winds take us to Africa via Seychelles. Shared values have enabled our two countries to have a common vision and common goals in our bilateral and multilateral ties. As members of the NAM, United Nations, Commonwealth and IOR-ARC, both the countries have played an important and cooperative role in these multilateral bodies. We have maintained close cooperation in multilateral fora mindful of each other’s vital interests and considering them as our own.

Peace and security has always remained the primary pre-condition for development. Attainable and Sustainable peace can only be achieved by curbing the acts of violence, conflicts and terrorism. There is a common need to be vigilant against this common threat. I would like to thank the people of Seychelles for their principled and consistent support to India on the issue of terrorism. The fight against terrorism has to be comprehensive and sustained, and for that we need to isolate the elements who instigate, support or assist terrorism, in any form, as much as those who perpetrate it. The issue of terrorism has been made more complex with the challenge posed by piracy. The issue of piracy, though not new, has brought a new dimension to the threat it posed to the peaceful Indian Ocean. This is affecting India as well as Seychelles, and many other countries by threatening security of our sea-lanes of trade and communication. India acknowledges the immense courage and conviction demonstrated by Seychelles in tackling the problem of piracy.
India would continue to extend cooperation to Seychelles in the fight against piracy as has been the case during the last few years. Indian naval ships make regular visits to Seychelles to safeguard the Exclusive Economic Zone of Seychelles.

We are living in an era in which most global problems and their solutions pertain to developing nations like ours and it is the demand of our time that our global institutions reflect this reality.

There is a need to expand the UN Security Council to make it more representative and effective to address challenges of the 21st Century. In this context, I would like to convey our sincere appreciation for the support of the Government of Seychelles to India’s candidature for the permanent membership of an expanded UN Security Council.

Hon’ble Speaker

Once again may I express my gratitude to you for having given me this opportunity to share my thoughts with the Honourable members of the National Assembly of Seychelles. It was, indeed, a great privilege and rare honour for me. I wish the very best to every one of you. May God bless your country and all the inhabitants, with ever increasing prosperity, success and glory.

Thank you.
460. Speech by President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the India-Seychelles Business Forum meeting.

Victoria, April 30, 2012.

Let me begin by thanking the Seychelles Government and the business community in organising this meeting during my visit to your beautiful country. Today’s meeting brings together businesspersons, investors and financiers both from India and Seychelles, for the purpose of fostering economic partnerships for the benefit of both India and Seychelles.

I am pleased to address this Business Forum. We envision this Forum, as an important step towards realising the business potential that exists between India and Seychelles.

India and Seychelles share the Indian Ocean; our cultural ties go back over two centuries. We also share many common values and beliefs, foremost among them are a democratic system, a secular, multi-linguistic and multi-cultural society. The warm and friendly bilateral relationship encompasses collaboration and cooperation in diverse fields - political, economic, scientific and cultural. The objective of my State Visit to Seychelles is to expand and deepen our bilateral relations in all areas.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We, in India, acknowledge the economic progress made by Seychelles. India stands ready to be a full and equal partner in the development of Seychelles through financial assistance and initiatives that support capacity building. With an exclusive economic zone of 1.3 million square kilometres, Seychelles offers a plethora of business opportunities in terms of both investment and trade. The Government of Seychelles has identified areas for investments that have a high potential and on the basis of traditional resource base and competitive advantage, and global business trends, has targeted specific sectors for fast track development. These sectors should be the focus of attention for Indian businesspersons.

Seychelles has investor friendly policies for foreign businesses, helped by Investment Promotion and Protection Agreements with several countries including India. It also provides incentives to businesses including tax holidays, concessions and the repatriation of profits. All this makes Seychelles an attractive destination for foreign direct investments. I call upon Indian investors and traders to tap into this market for mutual benefit.

India’s economic progress has been impressive. It is one of the largest and fastest growing economies, counted as one of the key drivers of the global economy. Today, we have large investments in education, health and rural development which are bringing their own benefits. We are undertaking a massive expansion in skills development as also in our physical infrastructure. We intend to do this through both public and private investments as also through public-private partnerships. We are, therefore, committed to creating an environment that promotes enterprise and investment. We are doing all this within a democratic framework that is focussed on inclusion and participatory growth. Expanding economic activities in India offer opportunities for the rest of the world, and India hopes this will also benefit Seychelles and wider Africa.

The trade between India and Seychelles can grow. Indian exports to Seychelles in 2010-2011 were worth US$ 31 million while imports from Seychelles by India were US$ 9.29 million. We must look at ways of increasing it, including by broadening the basket of trade between the two countries.

As you are aware, through the India-Africa Forum Summits, India-Africa engagements have been given a new dynamism and direction. In line with India’s commitment to assist in capacity building of African countries, we have visualised more than 22,000 scholarships to Africa over the period of the next three years; and establishment of more than 80 capacity building institutions in Africa. Some of these institutions will be conducting business related diploma courses which will be useful to all African countries including Seychelles. India has also been organizing Conclaves on India-Africa Project Partnership every year and the 8th edition was held in March this year. African delegations are invited and are provided an opportunity to link with Indian businessmen and entrepreneurs for enhancing trade and investment.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Seychelles is breathtakingly beautiful and its natural environment is captivating. I am deeply impressed with its scenic environs. Indian tourists have been visiting Seychelles. I understand that some Indian films have been shot here and I hope that many more Indian film producers and directors will look at Seychelles as a possible location. I am sure the Government and local industries of Seychelles will be only too happy to begin such discussions.

There is significant potential to expand the Indo-Seychellois bilateral partnership in the economic and commercial fields. I urge you to fully utilize the opportunity of meeting today, to impart further momentum to business relations between our two countries. You can be sure of a helping hand from the two governments. I wish you every success.

I would like to recognize the role played by the business chambers, as well as the High Commissions in the two countries, in enhancing the flow of information on investment and trade related issues. I am confident that this will make an invaluable contribution to supporting the establishment of joint ventures between enterprises of both countries. I urge them to keep up the good work.

Thank you.

Statement to the press by President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil on the conclusion of meeting with the President of Seychelles.

Victoria, April 30, 2012.

I am, indeed, very happy to be in Seychelles. My delegation and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the reception, and the generous hospitality accorded to us by the Government and the people of Seychelles. I bring greetings and good wishes from the people of India to the friendly people of Seychelles.

This is my first visit to Seychelles, a country of amazing natural beauty. I feel privileged to be here at the invitation of President James Alix Michel whose State visit to India in June 2010 was path breaking in our bilateral relations. My visit to Seychelles is to re-emphasize the strong friendship that exists between our two countries, which share the Indian Ocean and along with it, cultural affinities and ties of history. Today, this relationship is vibrant, wide-ranging, multi-dimensional and mutually beneficial. My visit to Seychelles reaffirms our common commitment to take our relations to new heights.

My meeting with His Excellency President James Alix Michel was very fruitful. I have also had a useful meeting with His Excellency the Vice President and the Cabinet Ministers of Seychelles. We have noted with satisfaction that India and Seychelles have, over the past few decades, developed a strong and mutually beneficial cooperation at both bilateral and regional levels. Given the progress in the relationship, both sides expressed the desire to work together towards elevating the bilateral relations to a strategic partnership for mutual benefit.

While expressing satisfaction over the present state of our economic-commercial relations, we agreed that considerable opportunities still exist for further expansion, particularly in the areas of trade and economic cooperation. I am happy to state that a business delegation has joined me from India to explore business opportunities in Seychelles. My participation in the Business Forum Meet last evening in Seychelles was very encouraging. I am confident that this interaction will further push bilateral relations in the economic and commercial fields.

We have agreed to further enhance exchanges in the fields of higher education, manpower development, health, Information and Communications Technology, Science and Technology, hydrographic surveys, monorail, tourism, hospitality and culture. In fact, the signing of the MOU on Co-operation in the field of Youth Affairs and Sports, will go a long way in enhancing people-to-people exchanges also. India would always be a trusted development partner of Seychelles. In tune with this commitment, I was happy to inform President Michel of India’s financial package of a Line of Credit of US $ 50 million and a grant of US $ 25 million for Seychelles.
We expressed satisfaction at the present level of bilateral cooperation in the defence and security areas, especially in the context of combating piracy in the Indian Ocean region. Piracy in the region adversely impacts on us all. India reiterated its commitment to provide assistance to Seychelles in the defence sector, including training and deputation of experts. We have seen the signing today of an MOU on co-operation on training of police personnel.

I express my gratitude to the Government of the Republic of Seychelles for its valued support on regional and global issues of crucial importance to India.
Seychelles has consistently supported India’s candidature for a permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council. The re-entry of Seychelles as a member of the IOR-ARC will further make the organization more representative and I hope Seychelles will benefit from it.

I am privileged to have been given the opportunity to address the Special Session of the National Assembly of Seychelles. It will be soon after this, and I am looking forward to it. India is keen to enhance parliamentary exchanges between our two countries. I am happy that apart from a Minister, two Members of Parliament are also with me to be part of this historic moment.

I have invited President James Alix Michel to visit India, which he has accepted.
The visit will take place on mutually convenient dates.

Thank You.
462. Speech by President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Indian Community Reception in Victoria, Seychelles.

Victoria, April 30, 2012.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to meet all of you, a significant cross section of the Indian community residing in Seychelles, a country with immense natural beauty.

I understand that the Indian community here has a substantial presence and is deeply respected. Many of you are occupying important positions in Seychelles in various walks of life including in Government and politics; and in the health, education, construction, banking and finance sectors. You have contributed substantially to the development and prosperity of this country and also for the strengthening of the relationship between India and Seychelles. We are proud of your accomplishments and achievements. From the time the first batch of Indian immigrants came to the islands of Seychelles over the 200 odd years - settling here as among the earliest inhabitants, the Indian community of Seychelles has contributed to the development of this country, while providing strong human, social and cultural links with India.

I am glad that the Indian community here is well-integrated with others in this country, even as it has preserved our traditional cultural values and civilizational strengths through activities of various cultural and other associations. The variety and number of Indian associations you have set up here, reflect the Indian ethos which is eloquently expressed in “unity in diversity”. All of you from different organizations, therefore, must work collectively as representatives of Indian culture and tradition in this beautiful country.

India has fascinated the rest of the world since times immemorial. The cultural ethos of our country has the capacity to stay deep rooted in the minds of its people, no matter where they live. It is the Indian way of life, multi-cultural but yet all-embracing, tolerant and harmonious living which is our heritage and strength. This has been augmented by the Indian thirst for knowledge, which has today found expression in our country being among the foremost in the knowledge revolution. India has emerged as an economically resilient nation largely due to the hard work of its people.

I believe that Indians living in different parts of the world have a deep affinity as they spring from the same source. The footprints of the Indian Diaspora are widespread and its presence felt in every continent. Overseas Indians numbering over 27 million dispersed all over the world are symbols of India in their adopted countries. Together, they constitute a formidable force, both in themselves as well as in having the potential to plough back their resources and acumen, to join as partners in the development and progress of India. The Government of India deeply cherishes its relationship with the Indian Diaspora. It is keenly interested in their well-being and also seeks to engage actively with them. Every year the Pravasi Bharatiya Divas is held in India as a celebration of Indians living abroad, and I am happy that members of the Indian community from Seychelles have also participated. The Government and people of India recognize and greatly value the important role being played by Indian communities living abroad.

In conclusion, I once again take this opportunity to compliment the Indian community in Seychelles for having integrated themselves so well into the local milieu and for making significant contribution to the growth of the island nation.
India deeply values its relationship with Seychelles, and this relationship could be nurtured and strengthened with the contributions of all of you in your respective fields. I have no doubt that all of you will continue your efforts in that direction.

My best wishes to all of you.

Jai Hind!
Media Briefing by Secretary (West) M. Ganapathi on the President’s Meetings during her State Visit to Seychelles.

Victoria, April 30, 2012.

Secretary (West) (Shri M. Ganapathi): Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, friends from the media.

First of all let me recognise the presence of Mr. Ravi Bangar, Joint Secretary (East & Southern Africa) in the Ministry of External Affairs; Ms. Archana Datta, OSD (PR) to the President; and the High Commissioner of India Mr. Thanglura Darlong. I also recognise Mr. Sailas Thangal, our colleague from the Ministry of External Affairs. I think Sailas you are on your last overseas trip, so we will miss you. I am sure the friends from media will miss you.

As we discussed in New Delhi just before coming here, the President of India is on a State Visit to the Republic of Seychelles and the Republic of South Africa and the first leg of the visit started yesterday.

The President of Seychelles, Mr. James Alix Michel, warmly welcomed the President of India yesterday on her arrival. I think the most significant point reflecting the visit appeared in the Special Communique of the newsletter of the Ruling Party here which says "En moman memorab dan Sesel!" that translates itself to 'A memorable moment for Seychelles!'. That is how the Seychellois leader welcomed the President of India. I think this also goes on to talk in terms of the importance which Seychelles accords to the visit.

Today morning the President of India and the President of the Republic of Seychelles Mr. James Alix Michel had extensive discussions in the State House where various aspects of our bilateral relations were covered. They also touched upon certain aspects of regional and international issues.

The President of India thereafter received the Vice-President of Seychelles and they again discussed various elements of our bilateral cooperation before the conclusion of two agreements – one relating to MoU on Cooperation in Sports and Youth Affairs and the second relating to Cooperation between the Seychelles’ People’s Defence Forces and the Bureau of Police Research and Development of India. The President thereafter addressed the National Assembly of the Republic of Seychelles.

In the discussions which the Hon’ble President had with the Seychellois side, the historical relations between India and Seychelles were underlined. The President of Seychelles reiterated the fact that Seychelles was a true friend of India and Indo-Seychelles relations have a long and historical background to it. In fact, the two sides reiterated the shared ideals and values besides the fact that both our countries are washed by the waters of the Indian Ocean.
The Seychelles President saw the President’s visit as a defining moment in the history of relations between our two countries, and said that besides sharing the Indian Ocean both sides shared a vision based on understanding, mutual trust and confidence.

The Seychelles President also emphasised the fact that India can count on Seychelles as a defender of the values of peace and development that we share. He noted that Seychelles was a bulwark of stability and an unshakeable friend of India in the region. The President said that Seychelles could count on India as a trusted friend.

The cooperation between India and Seychelles was seen as multidimensional, bringing together cooperation and interaction in the areas of the political field; trade, economic and investment areas; the cultural sphere; education and human resource development; people-to-people contact; and the defence and security areas.

In the political field, the two sides noted the unique partnership which was seen as that of a strategic partnership and a natural one which the Seychelles President underlined.

In the area of trade, economy and investment, the two sides noted that the bilateral trade turnover was around US$ 40 million, which our President said was not commensurate with what could be done, in the sense that there were enough opportunities to further expand trade and investment cooperation.

The two sides noted that we have a Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement, and that we would look forward to concluding other agreements as we move along towards further expanding our trade and economic partnership.

The President noted that India’s engagement with Africa through the India-Africa Forum Summit deliberations also extends to include Seychelles, and in this context mentioned the setting up of the cluster of solar energy cells in Seychelles, and looked forward to further expanding our relationship through the three areas which are under consideration – (1) the question of refurbishment of the national health sector in Seychelles, (2) the question of the development of a monorail facility, and (3) that relating to the Mahe Anse Dam.

The President also announced the offer of a line of credit of US$ 50 million to Seychelles besides a grant of US$ 25 million. This is in addition to the already extended lines of credit of US$ 10 million which was announced during the visit of the President of Seychelles to India in June 2010.

The Centre for IT was noted as a significant opportunity to further expand our cooperation in the field of information and communications technology. The Seychelles President and his Vice-President remarked on the fact that they would be having a fibre optic connectivity which would be available from June of this year, which would provide a further opportunity for diverse cooperation with Seychelles. In fact, the Seychelles side had said that the undersea fibre optic cable facility would allow for revolutionary changes in the financial services and online services sector, and they welcomed Indian participation. This was taken note of by our side.

Environment and renewable energy was seen as an important area of cooperation. We already mentioned the setting up of the solar power charging cluster and other opportunities in the renewable energy sector. In fact the President recalled the setting up of the photovoltaic street lighting facility in Seychelles. The Seychelles side also mentioned about the Conference on Biodiversity which will take place in India in October this year.

Education and training was seen as an important area of cooperation. The President noted that 41 slots which were being offered to Seychelles under the India Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC), and the nine scholarships which would be afforded in the education sector.

Cooperation in the infrastructure, transport and connectivity areas were touched upon. The President said that not only would India participate in capacity-building and in the human resource development sector in Seychelles but also in the development of the infrastructure sector.

In terms of the defence and security, the Seychelles President did remark on the fact that stability and security in the Indian Ocean would be an important area of bilateral cooperation. In this context we might all recall that India has offered a Dornier aircraft for Seychelles and are setting up the Coastal Surveillance Radar System (CSRS), which would be available to Seychelles. This would take forward our cooperation to provide for the security of Seychelles in a very big way.

Of course, you are all aware that the Indian Navy extensively participates in not only the hydrographic surveys of Seychelles water but also has been sending, at least over the couple of years, thrice a year its offshore patrol vessels for Extended Economic Zone Surveillance and Anti-Piracy Patrolling of the waters of Seychelles. The Seychelles side thanked the Government of India for this committed support which India has been offering in terms of the offshore patrolling which has been carried on extensively.

In this context, both sides discussed the threats which piracy has been posing to the countries in the Indian Ocean, particularly in this area. This was a point of considerable interest because we need to ensure that the menace of piracy is eliminated from this region. In fact, the President of Seychelles did note that the commitment of India towards not only anti-piracy patrolling but in eliminating the scourge was an important element in providing for security and stability of the countries of the region.

Two agreements were signed. One was the MoU on Cooperation in Sports and Youth Affairs, which was remarked as providing for greater engagement in people-to-people contacts, and also for providing for greater understanding between the two countries, particularly through youth exchanges. The second was the MoU between the Seychelles People’s Defence Forces and the Bureau of Police Research and Development of India. This will allow for greater training and capacity building of the Seychelles People’s Defence Forces.

The President thanked the Government of the Republic of Seychelles for their warm hospitality and for the exceptional arrangements made by them for the visit. The President also noted that this was a visit which was taking place at the Presidential level after around 23 years, which naturally reinforced the commitment of India to provide for greater engagement with Seychelles.

The President invited President James Alix Michel to visit India. The dates for the visit will naturally be worked out through diplomatic channels. As you are all aware, President Michel has been on a state visit to India twice in 2005 and 2010. He was in India in 2011 and 2012 for the Delhi Sustainable Development Summit.

The President of Seychelles accepted the invitation and we look forward to the visit in the near future.

In terms of the President’s Address to the National Assembly, this was the first Address by any President in the new building which the National Assembly is housing. The President’s Address was received with great attention, and was seen as an opportunity of the commitment of the world’s largest democracy to, as they called it, the world’s smallest democracy. The President’s Address was received with great applause and with great attention.

With these words I would conclude here, and I would be open to questions which our friends would have. Thank you.

Question: Could you just elaborate on the line of credit?

Secretary (West): The line of credit which was announced by the President was for a line of credit of US$50 million and for a grant of US$ 25 million. Now, what does happen, as you are all aware, is the President has announced now, the Seychelles Government will revert back to us with their requirements in various fields. And we would then work on this and provide the assistance commensurate with their requirements. Of course, the other thing which I mentioned is there are the earlier lines of credit which have already been announced and we have moved forward on these.
Question: You have mentioned that Indian Government is giving them assistance to stop the piracy. Are we giving any naval force or the coastguards?

Secretary (West): What I said was in terms of the anti-piracy patrolling and the EEZ surveillance which the Indian Navy provides for Seychelles. We have thrice a year Indian Naval ships coming around, and the fourth one when we do the hydrographic surveys. So, in a calendar year, four times our naval ships, the offshore patrol vessels, come over for anti-piracy patrolling. Of course, we do have Naval Advisors present here. I think we have here the Maritime Security Advisor, a senior officer from the Indian Navy, who does advise the Government of Seychelles. But the anti-piracy patrolling which takes place through the visit of our ships regularly does act as a major deterrent to the pirates in moving southwards.

Question: You said that India will be making available the radar system. Will it be stationed here or some other site?

Secretary (West): The Coastal Surveillance Radar System, the agreement for which has already been signed, provides for the establishment of what they call as the Automatic Identification System (AIS) plus the radars which would allow for tracking of unidentified vessels which would then provide for, if there is an unidentified vessel, appropriate deterrent action against it. This system will be based in Seychelles.

Question: Have you identified any particular island where this will be set up?

Secretary (West): The agreement has been signed and the islands have been identified and they will be placed there.

Question: Compared with other grants and credits to our friendly countries, how significant is this line of credit of US $ 50 million?

Secretary (West): I think any line of credit and grant, any assistance which is given, is significant because it provides an opportunity for the recipient government to work out their requirements which would be met through the assistance which we offered. I do not think we should compare this with the offer to any other country, but this is significant. And if you look at what we have offered so far to Seychelles, the total assistance offered so far has been around US $ 25 million line of credit. This is a US $ 50 million dollar of credit and a US $ 25 million grant.

Question: When was the radar deal signed?

Secretary (West): It was signed recently, I think in February this year. When the Seychelles Foreign Minister Jean Paul Adam was in New Delhi, we signed two agreements. One was on the supply of the Dornier aircraft and the second was that relating to the Coastal Surveillance Radar System. This was on the 14th of February.
Question: By when would these be provided?
Secretary (West): Normally what happens is it takes roughly six months.

Question: Sir, Dornier is already there.

Secretary (West): A Dornier is already there on loan. The supply of the Dornier will replace it.

I can just mention to you from the Mauritius example, because I was there in Mauritius when we also signed a similar Coastal Surveillance Radar System (CSRS) agreement. This is exclusively done by Bharat Electronics Limited which does the systems integration and provides for the AIS and the radar.

Question: Is there any agreement on terrorism?

Secretary (West): There is no agreement per se but there is a total understanding on the threat which terrorism and piracy poses to both India and Seychelles, and we are both determined to combat this menace and eliminate it.

Question: Seychelles is looking at improving the financial services sector. Do you foresee it becoming some kind of a Mauritius where ...(Inaudible)... tend to prevent it from being used as a tax haven.

Secretary (West): I think the interest of Seychelles naturally as a financial services centre would always be there because it is a developing country in this part of the world. When we have discussions on various elements of an ongoing cooperation in the financial services sector, all these are factored in.

Question: You mentioned about nine scholarships. Is it that scholarship is only for the ...(Inaudible)...

Secretary (West): Those nine scholarships are in the education sector. It is for students. The other 41 slots under the ITEC are for a comprehensive engagement in the economic, human resource capacity-building development, including police training. But the new agreement will afford a greater number of slots being made available for Seychelles.

Question: Are these scholarships for graduation level or PG?

Secretary (West): It is for undergraduate. Besides, we have also have under the India-Africa Forum Summit the CV Raman Fellowships for science and technology. That goes right up to postgraduate and Ph.D. level training. Thank you.
SOMALIA

464. Intervention by Shri E Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs at the London Conference on Somalia.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me begin by thanking the United Kingdom for organizing this important and timely conference. We hope today’s deliberations would be a step towards a comprehensive strategy to rid Somalia of the instability and conflict that has mired it for over two decades. We are here to affirm our solidarity with the people of Somalia with whom we share two millennia of civilizational exchanges across the seas.

2. As His Excellency Sheikh Sharif remarked to me yesterday, his country and mine are neighbours, separated only by the waters of our common ocean. India desires stability in Somalia. Piracy is the most obvious example of the lack of it. Not many years ago, India made a major contribution to peacekeeping in Somalia through its significant involvement in UNOSOM-II. Last May following my Prime Minister’s announcement at the second India Africa Summit we became financial contributors to AMISOM. We have continued to extend help to Somalia in capacity building through human resource development and have recently increased the number of scholarships we grant. We have also successfully contributed in the information technology sector in Somalia. We remain committed to helping Somalia in its development.

3. Much of India’s trade passes through the Gulf of Aden, estimated at about US $120 billion annually. Indians constitute 7% of all the World’s seafarers and a manifestation of the Somali predicament has been the tremendous human cost that these seafarers pay. As I speak, a number of Indian seafarers remain hostage to pirates in Somalia. We hope the outcome document of this important Conference will reflect our concerns over the treatment meted out to mariners.

4. We support all international efforts, led by the United Nations, for the creation of an environment in which the Somalis can take care of their own destiny, free from violence of all kinds. I am confident this conference will be a reaffirmation of our collective commitment to Somalia’s immediate future.

I thank you.
465. Statement by Mrs. Preneet Kaur, Minister of State at the Debate on Somalia in the UN Security Council.

New York, October 16, 2012.

Mr. President,

At the outset, I would like to thank the Guatemalan delegation for organizing today’s debate on the situation in Somalia.

As the new authorities start their work in Mogadishu, it is a good time to deliberate upon the progress achieved so far, the challenges that lie ahead, and how the international community can continue its support for the government and people of Somalia.

We have carefully noted the views expressed by SRSG Augustine Mahiga, and I would thank him for his valuable statement.

Mr. President,

During the course of last year there has been remarkable progress in the process of stabilization of political, security and humanitarian situations in Somalia. This has created a historic opportunity that must be seized for the full restoration of peace and stability in Somalia after two-decade long conflict.

The adoption of a provisional constitution, formation of the new parliament, elections of the President and the Speaker, and appointment of the new prime minister clearly reflect the collective resolve of the Somali people to move from the transitional institutions to a more representative government that can meet the legitimate aspirations of all sections of Somali society.

These important milestones would not have been possible but for the coordinated and concerted efforts of the international community, including the African Union and the United Nations.

The important role played by SRSG Mahiga in the successful completion of the transition process deserves our special appreciation.

Our congratulations are also due to the new Somali leadership, particularly H.E. Mr. Hassan Sheikh Mohamud, the new President of Somalia. It is a matter of immense pride for us that President Mohamud spent a few years studying in India in the late 1980’s.

Mr. President,

The gains on the political front have been made possible by the impressive achievements of AMISOM and the Somali forces on the security front.
Thanks to AMISOM, Mogadishu is today firmly under the control of the Somali authorities.

Last week, AMISOM and the Somali forces secured the strategic towns of Kismayo and Wanla Weyn from Al Shabaab. The support of the international community to AMISOM operations has been instrumental in these successes.

We commend all troop contributing countries, in particular Uganda, Burundi and Kenya, for their commitment to the Mission and for the sacrifices their troops have made.

Mr. President,

In order to consolidate the gains made, the new government in Somalia has to embark upon building effective state institutions that can pursue national reconciliation, provide the rule of law, revitalize economic activities, and restructure and strengthen the security forces.

It is also necessary to expeditiously implement the pending tasks of the Road Map. In this regard, we welcome the six-point policy framework set out by President Mohamud, and call upon the international community to fully support the implementation of the framework.

Mr. President,

AMISOM remains the mainstay of the international community’s efforts for stabilization of the security situation in Somalia. AMISOM and the Somali security forces have continued to expand their control in all four sectors of operations.

Still, Al Shabaab remains a major threat to peace and stability in Somalia, and has turned to asymmetrical warfare.

The changing security situation demands further augmentation of resources for AMISOM, including enablers and force multipliers.

We, therefore, support the request made by the AU for a technical roll over of four months, continuing the current support package. We also support the expansion of the logistical support package to cover the deployment of additional civilian personnel and to include naval assets for CoE reimbursement.

The latter is crucial to safeguard the supply routes of AMISOM and to prevent Al-Shabab from benefiting from illegal maritime trade and piracy.

Mr. President,

Maritime piracy off the coast of Somalia and the humanitarian plight of hostages held by pirates remain a major cause of concern for India.
Much of India’s trade passes through the Gulf of Aden, estimated at over US $160 billion annually.

Indians constitute 7% of the world’s seafarers and a consequence of piracy has been the tremendous human cost that these seafarers have had to pay. According to the Secretary General’s latest report, 259 hostages from 18 ships are still held by pirates. Of these, 43 are unfortunately Indian nationals.

We hope that the international community will provide full assistance to the new government in Somalia to implement the comprehensive set of measures to counter piracy as identified in the roadmap.

Mr. President,

India and Somalia share two millennia of civilizational exchanges across the seas. Not many years ago, India made a major contribution to peacekeeping in Somalia through its significant involvement in UNOSOM-II.

Last year, following our Prime Minister’s announcement at the second India-Africa Summit, India made a financial contribution of US $2 million to AMISOM. This year, we are making another contribution of US $1 million.

We have also continued to extend help to Somalia in capacity building through human resources development, and have recently increased the number of scholarships available for Somali experts and students to utilize in Indian academic institutions. We have also contributed to the development of the information technology sector in Somalia.

Mr. President,

As Somalia moves on to a new phase of pacification and peacebuilding, the continued support of the international community will remain critical for its success.

I would like to assure the new government of Somalia of India’s continued support for our common endeavours to put Somalia back on to the path of peace, stability, and prosperity.

I thank you again, Mr. President.

SOUTH AFRICA

466. Message of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh on the Centenary Celebrations of the African National Congress.

New Delhi, January 9, 2012.

Calling the Centenary celebrations of the African National Congress (ANC) “a moving moment for all those across the world who cherish human dignity and freedom”, Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh has said that economic engagement between the two countries have demonstrated dynamism in recent years and India and South Africa have coordinated their positions on many complex global issues. In a message to the President Jacob Zuma of South Africa the Prime Minister wrote “the dawn of 21st century has seen a dramatic shift in global, economic and political architecture and in the emerging paradigm, countries of the South are increasingly being called to play a much larger role. …today we (India and South Africa) share the same table at United Nations Security Council and G-20 and we are partners in IBSA and BRICS.”

Shri Anand Sharma, Minister for Commerce, Industry and Textiles, who is heading the Indian delegation to the Centenary celebrations of the African National Congress (ANC) in the South African city of Mangaung (Bloemfontein) called on President Jacob Zuma, who is also the President of the ANC, yesterday and personally handed over the message of the Prime Minister along with the message of the and President of the Indian National Congress (INC), Smt. Sonia Gandhi. Smt Gandhi recalled the shared past and shared national heroes by the two countries. She recalled Mahatma Gandhi’s 22 year stay in South Africa where he shaped his philosophy of Satyagrah and Non-violence. She also noted that the “leadership of Madiba (President Nelson Mandela) provided the moral anchor and the healing touch during the reconciliation process which was the emergence of a rainbow nation.” She thanked President Zuma for his invitation to join the celebrations and informed him that the India is represented by a senior leadership delegation, comprising of those who have been proactively engaged with struggle against apartheid, as mark of respect and solidarity.

President Zuma thanked Minister Sharma for the messages and stated that the ANC and the Indian National Congress shared historic and fraternal links forged over many years of struggle for freedom and justice. Minister Sharma stressed the continuing importance India attaches to the bilateral relationship between India and South Africa, and noted that the close party to party relations between the ANC and INC were a special facet of the overall bilateral relationship between the two countries.
Director (XP) (Shri Y.K. Sailas Thangal): Good afternoon friends. Thank you for coming for this briefing this afternoon. As you know, Hon. President would be on a state visit to Seychelles and South Africa. Secretary (West) has kindly agreed to come here and brief you on this visit. We also have on the dais Mr. Ravi Bangar, Joint Secretary (E&SA), who is looking after both these countries.

As usual, Secretary will make a few opening remarks after which he will take questions you may have on the visits. I would now hand over the floor to Secretary (West).

Secretary (West) (Shri Madhusudan Ganapathi): Good afternoon friends from the media, ladies and gentlemen, and my colleagues Ravi Bangar, Sailas Thangal.

As all of you are aware, the Hon. President of India will be paying a state visit to the Republic of Seychelles from April 30 to May 1, 2012. The President thereafter will pay a state visit to the Republic of South Africa from May 1 to 7, 2012. The visit to both Seychelles and South Africa are in response to the gracious invitations by the Seychelles and South African Presidents to the Hon. President of India to pay a state visit to their countries.

Shri Sachin Pilot, Hon. Minister of State for Communications and Information Technology; Dr. Prabha Thakur, Hon. Member of Parliament (Rajya Sabha); and Shri Sanjay Shamrao Dhotre, Hon. Member of Parliament (Lok Sabha), will accompany the Hon. President of India during her state visit to Seychelles and South Africa. Senior officials including the Secretary to President Dr. Christy Fernandez and Secretary (West), MEA will form a part of the delegation which would also include other senior officials, business leaders and members of the media.

While in Seychelles, the President will have a bilateral meeting with President James Alix Michel during which various aspects of bilateral, regional and international issues are expected to be discussed. The Vice-President of Seychelles Mr. Danny Faure and other members of the Cabinet in the Government of the Republic of Seychelles will call on the Hon. President. The President will address a Special Session of the National Assembly. This will be followed by a call on the President by the Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. David Pierre. President Michel will host a Cocktail Dinatoire in honour of the President.

The other engagements of the President in Seychelles include an address to the India-Seychelles Business Forum and attending a reception hosted by the High Commissioner of India for the Indian Community and Seychellois Friends. She will also visit the Seychelles People’s Defence Force where she will be received by the Chief of the Seychelles Defence Force and interact with Indian Naval Officers.

The President will leave Seychelles for South Africa in the forenoon of May 1, 2012.

While in South Africa, the President will meet President Jacob Zuma in Pretoria and hold discussions with him on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. The Deputy President of South Africa Mr. Kgalema Motlanthe will call on the President. President Zuma will host a State Banquet in honour of the President.

The President will visit Johannesburg on May 3, 2012 and unveil a bust of the Father of the Nation Mahatma Gandhi at the Constitution Hill. She will visit Number Four Prison where Mahatma Gandhi was incarcerated by the apartheid regime, and where Nelson Mandela was also there later. She will return to Pretoria and address the India-South Africa Business Forum Meet. The President will visit Cape Town on May 4-5, 2012. There she will meet a team of South African Parliamentarians led by the Speaker of the National Assembly Mr. Max Sisulu and Chairman of the National Council of Provinces, Mr. Mahlangu. The President is expected to visit Robben Island where Nelson Mandela had been imprisoned in Cell Number Five.

From Cape Town, the President will visit Durban on May 6-7, 2012. She will visit the Phoenix Settlement, offer floral tributes at the bust of Mahatma Gandhi, and visit thereafter the John Dube Memorial. The President will also visit the Pietermaritzburg Station which has a historic link to India wherein Mahatma Gandhi had been thrown out of a First Class compartment onto the platform by the then apartheid regime. The President will attend a Reception hosted by the High Commissioner of India for the Indian community and friends of India in South Africa. She will also meet representatives of the Gandhi Communities in South Africa.

As mentioned earlier, the President will be accompanied by a Business Delegation. Forty-one business persons will form a part of the business delegation to Seychelles and 54 business persons will be similarly represented in South Africa. The business component of the visit is being coordinated by ASSOCHAM, FICCI and CII, and members of the delegation are drawn from these three chambers. The leader of the business delegation is former Ambassador Shri V.B. Soni, the Chairman of the Overseas Infrastructure Alliance (I) Pvt. Ltd.

Relations between India and Seychelles have been close and friendly, and characterised by full mutual understanding and close cooperation. Diplomatic ties with Seychelles were established on its Independence in June 1976. India set up its Resident High Commission in Victoria in 1987, while Seychelles did so in New Delhi in 2008.

The President of Seychelles Mr. James Alix Michel was on a state visit to India in June 2010. He had earlier been on a similar state visit in 2005. He had twice thereafter been on two visits to India to attend the Delhi Sustainable Development Summit. The only Presidential visit from India so far to Seychelles till now had been by late President Shri R. Venkataraman in 1989.

President Michel’s visit to India had been followed by that of the Seychelles Foreign Minister Mr. Jean Paul Adam in February 2011.

India was in the forefront of the anti-apartheid struggle. It was the first country to sever trade relations with South Africa in 1946, even before it became independent. Relations between India and South Africa were restored in 1993, and the Indian High Commission in Pretoria opened in 1994. The ANC had maintained a representative office in India since the 1960’s which was thereafter upgraded to a High Commission following the end of apartheid. India’s relations with South Africa are close and friendly enjoined by a strategic partnership.

President Zuma of South Africa was on a state visit to India in June 2010 in what was his first bilateral visit to any Asian country. He was recently in New Delhi on March 29, for the Fourth BRICS Summit. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Mr. Jacob Zuma had met more than once last year on the margins of various multilateral and plurilateral summits, and their friendship has become stronger in all these meetings.

Trade and economic relations between India and Seychelles has not realised its full potential. Bilateral trade in 2010-11 was US $ 40.44 million with India’s exports to Seychelles being US $ 31.14 million and imports US $ 9.29 million. The current composition of major items of export from India to Seychelles includes food products, grains, pharmaceuticals and textiles. The major export items from Seychelles include copra, cinnamon and related items.

Potential areas of cooperation with Seychelles in the trade and investment area include those in the sectors relating to tourism, including the hospitality sector, healthcare, information and communication technology, food processing, financial services, renewable energy, engineering and electrical goods, textiles among others. Being an island archipelago, fishing and related industry offers considerable potential and promise. As a country with some of the best tourism resorts, the tourism and hospitality sector offers significant opportunities. The film industry has been naturally attracted to Seychelles because of some excellent locales, and some films in Hindi and the regional languages have been shot there. The medical industry provides a useful entry point in the absence of adequate medical facilities.
Indian investments in Seychelles thus far have included those by the Bharti Telecom Group, TCIL, LPG facilities by BNH Tank of Pune; Polaris’ venture to develop banking services; and supply of Tata and Ashok Leyland buses. India has extended Lines of Credit worth around US$ 25 million to Seychelles since 2000. During the visit of President James Alix Michel to India in June 2010, a Line of Credit of US$ 10 million was announced.

Bilateral trade between India and South Africa was US$ 11.125 billion in 2010-11 of which imports were US$ 7.14 billion and exports US$ 3.98 billion. During the state visit of President Zuma in 2010, agreed to work towards a target of US$ 10 billion in trade turnover by 2012. But we have crossed that well before the time and the current target of trade turnover has been revised to US$ 15 billion by 2015.

The main items of export from India to South Africa include mineral fuel, mineral oil, engineering goods, textiles, gems and jewellery, chemicals, drugs and pharmaceuticals among others. Insofar as imports from South Africa are concerned, gold forms an important part of our import besides those from the extracted industry including copper ores, concentrates and other minerals and organic chemicals. Substantial potential for trade growth exists with potential areas of cooperation seen in mining, manufacturing, petroleum sector, drugs and pharmaceuticals, biotechnology, automobiles sector, food processing, information technology and the SME sector.

Major investors from India in South Africa include the Tata Group, UB Group, Mahindra, Ranbaxy, Cipla and other IT companies, besides investments in the mining sector. There is a growing South African interest in investing in India in the infrastructure, insurance and financial services sectors.

The politico-legal base for cooperation between India and Seychelles and South Africa is fairly strong. India offers slots to both Seychelles and South Africa under the India Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme (ITEC). Around 520 Seychellois have so far availed of the opportunities under the ITEC programme with over 500 ITEC slots being used by South Africa. India has deputed a number of its experts to Seychelles under the ITEC Programme. For the year 2011-12, 41 ITEC slots have been allocated to Seychelles, and 108 ITEC slots to South Africa. Besides, India also offers specialised courses under the India-Africa Forum Summit to various African countries including Seychelles and South Africa.

Education has been an important area of cooperation between both India and Seychelles and South Africa. The number of tourists from India to Seychelles and South Africa and in the reverse direction has been quite significant. Cultural cooperation providing for strong people-to-people interaction has been quite vibrant between India and the two countries.
The Indian community in Seychelles numbers around 6500. The Chairman of the Seychelles Chamber of Commerce and Industry Dr. V. Ramadoss is a Pravasi Bharatiya Samman awardee and he is the Medical Adviser to the President of Seychelles. The Indian Diaspora in South Africa celebrated the 150th year of its arrival into South Africa in the year 2010 having arrived there in 1860. The Indian origin community in South Africa numbers over 1.5 million.

As in all visits of Heads of State or Government, the visit by the Hon. President of India to Seychelles and South Africa should provide a greater momentum and impetus in the further consolidation and development of our comprehensive, multifaceted engagement with these two countries. The visits are expected to provide a platform for an extensive exchange of views on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. The presence of a business delegation will allow for greater B2B engagement providing for expansion in trade, economic and investment related activity between India, Seychelles and South Africa. The State Visits will encourage greater people-to-people contact. The visits will naturally provide greater content and meaning to India’s partnership with both Seychelles and South Africa.

Thank you very much.

Question: Any new cooperation activity with Seychelles? Also, tell us about the present state of defence cooperation between India and Seychelles.

Secretary (West): The standard operating procedure, as all of you are aware, is that we do not announce agreements before the conclusion of the visit because many agreements are at the stage of discussion and we sometimes have a surprise by adding a few and there are many surprises by deleting a few because some of them are not ready. But we do expect some agreements to be signed in Seychelles. India has, of course, provided a Dornier aircraft to Seychelles. We have a Maritime Security Advisor, a Military Advisor and Naval Advisor. We expect the strategic partnership between India and Seychelles to be further consolidated and strengthened in continuation of the President’s visit.

Question: Will the situation in South Sudan figure in the discussions among the international issues which would be discussed with the two Presidents? Also, what is our reaction on the increasingly escalating confrontation between the two Sudans? Since we support the Thabo Mbeki initiative, will this be one of the important issues that would be discussed?

Secretary (West): That is a very relevant question obviously because South Africa plays a very prominent role on the African continent, and we expect every issue on the African continent to be discussed between the President and her South African host. And obviously I think the situation in the Sudan will be touched upon as also the situation in certain parts of West Africa, and the cooperation between India and Africa through the India-Africa Forum Summit. Of course our view on Sudan is very clear. As you said, we support the African Union High Implementation Group led by Thabo Mbeki in trying to resolve the situation between Sudan and the South Sudan. You are also aware that we had sent a Special Envoy not long ago in Additional Secretary (P V) Mr. Amarendra Khatua visiting both Juba and Khartoum and then touching base in Addis Ababa.

Question: I want to know the latest about India-SACU PTA. It was being negotiated, it should have been signed by now. The expectation was that India-SACU and MERCOSUR will expand our trade with Africa and America. What is the latest on that?

Secretary (West): Venkat, looks like you have not forgotten the IBSA briefing. Yes, we have it with MERCOSUR but with SACU the point is that all the countries have not yet come on board. So, we are going to request the South Africans to ensure that this is expedited. In this visit I do not think it will be concluded but hopefully we should be following on the course towards its conclusion as early as possible.

Question: In Seychelles there is an obvious growing presence of China. Has the consolidation of the ties between Seychelles and India something to do with this?

Secretary (West): As the Prime Minister of India has stated, there is enough space in the world and in every country for India and China to be present. I think we are not competing with each other. And our relations with Seychelles stand on their own merit and content.

Question: A South African Government owned company called Denel was a couple of years ago central to India’s artillery plans. It was subsequently blacklisted and the Government of South Africa has asked for a review of the decision. Is this going to be discussed?

Secretary (West): As I pointed out, all issues of mutual interest in the bilateral, regional and international spheres will be touched upon between the two Presidents.

Question: Sir, you said a large delegation was going to South Africa and Seychelles. Can you tell us how many members of the President's personal family will accompany?

Secretary (West): Shrinjoy, there is again a standard operating procedure. As my predecessor had said, as I have said, we do not comment on the family members.

Thank you.
Statement by the President at the conclusion of her talks with the President of South Africa.

My delegation and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the reception, and the generous hospitality accorded to us by the Government and the people of South Africa. I bring greetings and good wishes from the people of India to the people of South Africa.

India and South Africa are bound by ties of history, emotional attachment, cultural affinities and indeed, kinship. It is even more satisfying that our bilateral relationship today has acquired a robust and dynamic character, to assume the dimension of a strategic partnership. Since the establishment of our relations in 1994, we have developed strong ties and institutional frameworks for dialogue and cooperation in the political, economic, commercial, science and technology fields. Our bilateral relations today are wide-ranging, multi-dimensional and mutually beneficial. Our shared and abiding commitment to the ideals of democracy and pluralism has only reinforced our close and friendly ties. My visit to South Africa is part of our tradition of regular high-level exchanges, reaffirming our common commitment to take our relations onward to new heights.

Today's discussions with His Excellency President Jacob Zuma were wide ranging and covered bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. The focus of our discussions was on issues covering the vast canvass of Indo-South African relations. While expressing satisfaction over the current state of our relations, we did feel that considerable opportunities existed which are needed to be fully explored, particularly in the area of trade and economic cooperation. Indian companies are investing in capacity building by systematic training of South Africans, creating jobs and playing an important role in the development and economic growth of South Africa. A business delegation from India accompanies me, and it would explore business opportunities in South Africa, to give greater thrust to this important sphere of our interaction. President Zuma and I will be participating in the Business Forum tomorrow to listen to views of captains of industry from both sides, and encourage them to contribute to our bilateral economic exchanges.

We have agreed to closely monitor the implementation of various agreements that exist and expand co-operation in the fields of power including renewable energy, health, Information Technology, Science and Technology, tourism, hospitality, infrastructure development and culture. People to people contacts are at the heart of our vibrant and robust relationship. India is interested in working closely with the Government of South Africa to develop Gandhi heritage sites in South Africa. Both the governments continue to support the wide range of linkages that exist between our universities, research institutes, academic institutions, think-tanks, media houses and civil society. We are mindful of the sporting ties between the countries, especially in cricket. I would also like to recognise the South African hand in the form of Coach Gary Kirsten in ensuring victory for India in the Cricket World Cup in 2011.

I have thanked the Government of the Republic of South Africa for its meaningful contribution, as one of our closest partners, on important issues like reform of the United Nations, reform of the international financial system, including the Bretton Woods Institutions, climate change and global trade talks. India and South Africa are members of IBSA, BRICS, G-20, IOR-ARC, NAM, the Commonwealth and other plurilateral as well as multilateral bodies, where we work together.

Piracy in the Indian Ocean region adversely impacts on us all. We are deeply committed to working with the Government of South Africa and its people, to ensure that our trade routes are not affected, and we are able to bring a sense of safety and security in the maritime waters.

I am confident that today’s discussions have promoted a better understanding of issues of mutual interest and established a solid foundation for the deepening and expansion of our mutually beneficial strategic partnership, and in bringing our two peoples closer together for a better future.

Thank you.
469. Speech by the President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil at India-South Africa Business Forum.

His Excellency Mr Jacob Zuma, President of South Africa;
Dr. Rob Davies, Minister of Trade and Industry of South Africa;
Shri Sachin Pilot, Minister of State for Communication and IT of India;
Dr. Prabha Thakur and Shri Sanjay Dhotre, Members of Parliament of India;
Mr. V.B. Soni, Leader of the Indian Business Delegation;
Ms. N. Majokweni, CEO of Business Unity of South Africa;
Mr. Xolani Qubeka, CEO of Black Business Council;

Distinguished representatives of the business community of India and South Africa;

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Let me begin by conveying my deep appreciation for the presence of President Zuma at this Business Forum. This augurs well not only for this Business Forum but also for broader economic engagement between our two countries. It gives me great pleasure to join the business representatives from South Africa and India here today. The economic and commercial exchanges between our two countries are at the core of our bilateral ties.

Growth rate of over forty-three percent in our bilateral trade registered in the year 2010-11 is impressive by any standard but especially so in today’s global economic scenario. I am extremely happy to note that the trade target of Ten billion US Dollars by 2012 agreed during the State Visit of President Zuma to India in June 2010, was achieved last year with bilateral trade having crossed the figure of Eleven billion US Dollars. I am bold that the next goal is to achieve bilateral trade of Fifteen billion US Dollars by year 2014. I am confident that this target would also be achieved as we build on the momentum of our bilateral ties. South Africa is one of our most important trading partners and in the future too, I believe, our two countries will have deep economic engagement.

I am happy that Indian companies work closely to achieve the priorities of the South African government, and are also seeking to add value to raw materials, with a view to increasing beneficiation locally. Indian companies have not only built partnerships with their South African counterparts, but also view it as a gateway to the Southern African region.
Indian companies are also significant investors in the services sector. India itself has become a predominantly service economy with over fifty-five percent of our GDP attributable to services. This has naturally meant that the trade in services has become an important component of our international engagement. IT Technology, training, capacity building, Business Process Outsourcing, banking and finance, and transfer of technology are important areas of our exchanges. Our confidence in the South African economy is reflected in the fact that several major Indian banks are present in South Africa, and I am told that their representation is planned to grow in the future. We are also happy that many important firms from South Africa have established their presence in India. We want many more of your companies to look at business opportunities in India.

The Joint CEO’s Forum set up during President Zuma’s State Visit to India in 2010, provides an institutional mechanism for our economic and commercial interaction.

I would also like to compliment the Business Unity South Africa for proactively bringing the business communities of our two countries together. I have been told that on average at least one South African business delegation visits India every month. I hope that this frequency only grows in the future, and gives a further fillip to our trade and industry co-operation.

India seeks economic development that has an inclusive character so that it benefits all our citizens. The fulfillment of our goals would depend to a great extent on the ability to tackle the constraints in our physical infrastructure. Power, roads, airports and ports, are all India’s overarching priorities - and investments of close to one trillion US Dollars would be required in the next five years. Like us, South Africa too, is focused on boosting its infrastructure development. This provides an excellent investment opportunity for Indian and South African companies to look at each other’s strengths in infrastructure, housing, engineering, skill building and other key areas, and find complementarities for forging mutually beneficial collaborations. As we build infrastructure in our respective countries, we can look at each other as partners. In the field of energy security too - another important objective for both countries - renewable energy and gasification of coal are areas in which we can work together. I urge the business community to explore these possibilities and concretize projects.

A critical and an absolutely necessary input for the sustainable growth of a nation’s economy and all its sectors is technology, which in turn, depends on research and development. India has a rich human capital and a strong knowledge base. We have been successful in many frontier areas - space, nuclear energy, Information Technology, nano-technology and bio-technology, among others.
The Indian Space Research Organisation is working with the South African National Space Agency to support joint initiatives, so that as developing countries we are not left out in our efforts to explore new areas. I feel that it would be useful to share our knowledge and experience, to translate the cutting-edge knowledge of science into products for the market. This will yield benefits both in terms of new employment and new products for consumers. Technical education linkages would get a fillip and new momentum, if on both sides, businesses were to assess the value of such research and collaboration and promote them.

India and South Africa are strategic partners. South Africa has become a member of BRICS, adding greater weight to this grouping. We were honoured that President Zuma travelled to Delhi in March 2012 for the BRICS Summit in New Delhi. The Summit had discussed the establishment of a development bank which would cater for needs of developing countries. We look forward to working with South Africa to take the process forward, as many developing countries are looking to us to provide leadership in the 21st Century.

India and the Southern Africa Customs Union are negotiating a broad based Preferential Trade and Investment Agreement which will, in our view, serve the mutual interest of both sides. I hope that South Africa would facilitate the early completion of the internal discussion process. I visualize great opportunities for expansion of trade in goods and services and two-way investment through this Agreement.

We are keen to working with South Africa bilaterally, and also through the IBSA, BRICS, G-20 and other international fora, to deal with the impact of economic fluctuations in the Western countries on our economy, and ensure that international financial institutions reflect the emerging economic realities.

In conclusion, I would like to share with you that my interactions with President Zuma and the leadership of South Africa, have left me in no doubt that the India-South Africa relationship is based on solid foundations and has a bright future. There is tremendous potential to expand the India-South Africa bilateral partnership. I urge you to fully utilize the opportunity of meeting today, to impart further momentum to business relations between our two countries. You can be sure of a helping hand from the two Governments, as they are committed to taking bilateral economic ties to ever greater heights.

Thank you!
SUDAN & SOUTH SUDAN

470. Press Note issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the up-gradation of the Consulate General of India in Juba, South Sudan to Embassy level.

New Delhi, March 13, 2012.

The status of the Consulate General of India in Juba, South Sudan has now been upgraded to Embassy level. South Sudan declared its independence on July 9, 2011. Hon'ble Vice-President had attended the ceremony in Juba marking the independence of South Sudan. It may be mentioned that India was one of the first countries to open a Consulate in Juba in August 2007.

471. Response of Official Spokesperson to Developments in Sudan and South Sudan.

New Delhi, April 12, 2012.

_In response to a query on the situation between Sudan and South Sudan, the Official Spokesperson said:_

“The Government of India is concerned with the recent developments in Sudan and South Sudan. We had also recently conveyed our concern when our Special Envoy had visited Khartoum and Juba last month. We again urge both sides to exercise restraint and recommence negotiations, which are being held under the African Union High Level Implementation Panel, to resolve all outstanding issues peacefully.”
Remarks by Secretary (West) M. Ganapathi at the Indian Council of World Affairs (ICWA) re. National Consultations on India-LAC Relations.

New Delhi, July 10, 2012.

Ambassador Rajiv Bhatia, Director General, ICWA,
Prof. Varun Sahni, Chairman, ICWA Programmes Committee,
Ambassador Deepak Bhojwani, Consultant for LAC countries, ICWA,
Your Excellency, Mr. Javier Paulinich, Ambassador of Peru and President of the GRULAC countries in New Delhi,
Your Excellencies Ambassadors from Latin American and Caribbean countries, Diplomats from the LAC region, Senior Members of the Indian Foreign Service and former Ambassadors, Indian Ambassador-designate to Mexico,
My Colleague in the Ministry, Ambassador Dammu Ravi, Joint Secretary (LAC) and Dr. Janakiraman, Deputy Secretary (LAC), Friends, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I consider it a privilege and honour to be invited today to speak at the ICWA's National Consultations on India-LAC Relations. It is also among Ambassador Rajiv Bhatia's first major events under his watch as the Director General of ICWA. May I, add my own congratulations and best wishes to him in addition to the many plaudits of Pundits who have warmly welcomed Ambassador Bhatia's appointment to this very important institution. ICWA is an iconic institution and it needs to be nurtured carefully and given his distinguished service as one of my senior colleagues and Ambassadors and his innate abilities and intuitive qualities, I could say unequivocally that ICWA is in safe hands and we could see it from going to strength to strength. I am particularly pleased that among the first events organised by ICWA with Ambassador Bhatia as the Director General, India's relationship with Latin America and the Caribbean has been given a prominent place. I was also happy to hear that ICWA's website with focus on the Latin America and the Caribbean Region would be launched today - this in itself is an important pointer to ICWA's interest in that region.

2. Many may point out and not incorrectly too that while some attention has been given to this important continent, not much focus has been allowed for a sustained engagement with Latin America and the Caribbean. Undoubtedly, the LAC region is highly fascinating; its culture, music, sports (particularly football) and literature strikes a common chord with many an Indian. The Latin America and Caribbean region is diverse and pluralistic like India. Underlying this vibrancy, we are witnessing today a region that is rapidly integrating. What was a dream 190 years ago in 1822 is a reality today.

3. Latin America and the Caribbean region is geographically vast and diverse. It encompasses more than 40 sovereign States and a large land mass with about 600 million inhabitants. 40% of the world’s fresh water resources are available in this part of the world. With the discovery of new hydrocarbons, the region is becoming increasingly attractive for investments. Similarly, there is ample scope for agriculture farming and it is also an excellent source for diverse minerals. All of this naturally makes the region very attractive. I should not forget that more importantly the countries of the region and their people have the warmest and friendly feelings for India and its people. Thus, there is a lot of synergy to galvanise our relations.

4. The Caribbean region is home to a large Indian Diaspora. Through various programmes, we have aimed to strengthen our historical and cultural links with the region.

5. Latin America and the Caribbean comprises of many regional forums and institutions including the Andean Community; the CARICOM; the MERCOSUR; the Rio Group; the ALBA; the UNASUR; the SICA; the OAS and the recently launched CELAC.

6. The formation of CELAC (Community of Latin American Countries) is a recent phenomenon. It came into existence only last December. This development has a far reaching implication for the world as well as for India. The rapid integration of the region is a clear indication of their shared desire to embark upon a common destiny. India has engaged with many of the groups in the region and is particularly keen to engage with CELAC by enhancing interaction at all levels. India will be hosting the first India-CELAC Foreign Ministers’ Dialogue in New Delhi next month on August 7, 2012. The Foreign Minister’s of Chile, Cuba and Venezuela are expected to participate in the Troika format. The External Affairs Minister will be the host to the event.

7. Ladies and Gentlemen, let me be frank and honest enough to admit that our approach to this region has been admittedly slow. There is the ready excuse giving reasons of distance, poor connectivity and language constraints. However, these are unacceptable and we need to do more. We are determined to overcome any mindset which may have inhibited an enhanced engagement with the region. While there will be challenges, there are opportunities as well. It is our aim to overcome these challenges and convert them into opportunities. A concerted and cogent approach will be formulated to direct our attention and energy to this very important region with which we could naturally forge a productive partnership. Ambassador Bhatia mentioned the region as the Last Frontier. However, it is only East of East and West of West. Being a cricketing nation and drawing from a cricketing analogy, the Last Frontier shall be conquered and converted into a mutually beneficial partnership.

8. There has been exchange of visits at the Head of State/Government level besides those at the Ministerial, official and people-to-people level with the Latin American and Caribbean region. The Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, the President of Brazil and the President of Paraguay were in India in the first six months of this year. Our Prime Minister was in Mexico and Brazil only last month. External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna was in Cuba recently. He was very warmly received in Havana. Minister Krishna also chaired a LAC Regional Conference of Indian HOMs in Havana on June 16, 2012. The meeting looked at various ways of strategising our engagement with this important region. Besides, there have been other Ministerial visits. As was mentioned, our Minister of State for Commerce and Industry is in Cuba today after having visited Colombia and Venezuela. The Minister of State for Information Technology had not long ago extensively travelled to counties in the region.

9. Trade and investments relations with the region are growing at a rapid pace. From a mere US$ 2 billion in 2000, bilateral trade with the region has crossed a record US$ 25 billion. However, this is not much – it is only one-tenth of that of China’s and only one per cent of the region’s overall trade. Our investments in the region are estimated to be of the order of around US$ 15 billion. If you look at the rate of growth, perhaps, this is the fastest growing region in the world today. As mentioned earlier, let me once again emphasise that it is just not mere trade and investments that underpins our relations with the region. The engagement is multifaceted and dynamic which is evolving to our mutual benefit. We have Preferential Trade Agreement with Chile and MERCOSUR. Some of the LAC countries have shown interest in an FTA. There is the India-MERCOSUR-SADC PTA. Cooperation is also carried on through IBSA and BRICS. Our engagement with the region also takes place through our membership of NAM and at the UN.

10. Cooperation in technology is an important aspect of our relationship. As developing countries we need to cooperate amongst ourselves to address our common challenges. It is not merely a commitment to South-South Cooperation but also to learn from each other on the applicability of technologies. Through the ITEC programme, India offers 450 ITEC scholarships to countries in the region and there is the possibility of enhancing this number. India’s IT centres in the region are widely appreciated and has provided employment to a significant number of people. All these initiatives are no doubt does contribute modestly to the enhancement of human resource development and capacity building in the region.

11. In the UN and other multilateral agencies and organisation, CELAC constitutes a significant bloc. Our cooperation with the region is close and driven by common interests and shared values. There is a common understanding on many issues, particularly on UN reforms. We need to engage with the countries both bilateral and through regional organisations. There may be certain differences in approach or nuance to issues. However, this should not deter us from engaging with the countries of the region and sensitising them on our core concerns. We should also extend our cooperation with these counties on issues relating to security, human trafficking, migration and disaster management.

12. India’s engagement with Africa has culminated in the setting up of the India-Africa Forum Summit mechanism. Our aim is to have a similar India-Latin America and Caribbean Dialogue Mechanism. We have a mechanism for interaction with SICA and the CARICOM. The SICA Foreign Ministers were expected in India in May this year but due to absence of mutually convenient dates, this meeting will now take place later this year. The CELAC Foreign Ministers’ Dialogue is an additional important mechanism leading to the ultimate objective. These steps will enable the counties in the region and India to overcome the lack of awareness of our potential for significant cooperation. We in the Ministry of External Affairs sincerely believe in enhancing this opportunity to mutual benefit.

13. It is in this context this National Consultation on India and the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean region assumes significance. We would like to be guided by your thoughts as to how we can take the entire process forward. I wish today’s event all success and congratulate ICWA for this excellent initiative.

Thank you.

New Delhi, August 2, 2012.

The First India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministerial Meeting will be held on August 7, 2012 in New Delhi. External Affairs Minister Shri S. M. Krishna will lead the Indian delegation and Foreign Minister of Chile, Mr. Alfredo Moreno Charme will lead the CELAC Troika. Foreign Minister of Venezuela, Mr. Nicolas Maduro and Vice Foreign Minister of Cuba, Mr. Rogelio Sierra will participate in the Meeting as members of the Troika.

Community of Latin American and Caribbean States (CELAC) is a newly formed regional group comprising of 33 Sovereign States of Latin America and the Caribbean region (LAC) region. Chile holds the pro-tempore Presidency of CELAC till January 2013. LAC has a land mass 5 times that of India and is endowed with vast mineral resources and hydrocarbons. It has about 600 million inhabitants.

India enjoys friendly and warm relations with all CELAC countries. They have a shared understanding on the values of democracy, freedom, equality and justice. India’s trade with the region is over US$ 25 billion in 2011 and cumulative investments are estimated to be US$ 16 billion mostly in Hydrocarbons, Minerals, Agriculture, Pharma and IT. There exists a vast untapped potential for mutually beneficial cooperation in various sectors.

The meeting will provide a unique platform for both sides to discuss a vision for building India-CELAC relations. Both sides will also discuss various regional developments and multilateral issues of mutual interest.

Joint Statement on the First India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministers’ Meeting

New Delhi, August 7, 2012.

1. The First Meeting of the India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministers was held in New Delhi on August 7, 2012. The External Affairs Minister of India Shri S.M. Krishna led the Indian delegation. The CELAC Troika was led by the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Chile Mr. Alfredo Moreno Charme, the pro-tempore President of CELAC. The Foreign Minister of Venezuela Mr. Nicolas Maduro and the Vice Foreign Minister of Cuba, Mr. Rogelio Sierra participated in the meeting as members of the Troika.

2. During the discussions, both sides undertook a comprehensive review of India-CELAC relations. They also discussed regional and multilateral issues of mutual interest. The discussions were aimed at, inter alia, strengthening the multifaceted bilateral cooperation between India and CELAC, coordinating responses to regional issues and addressing international challenges including UN reforms, the international financial crisis, climate change and international terrorism.

3. The Foreign Ministers of India and the CELAC Troika expressed satisfaction at the First Meeting of the India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministerial Dialogue after the commencement of CELAC in December 2011. They expressed their deep appreciation at the expanding relations between India and countries in the Latin America and the Caribbean region and reiterated their desire to work together bearing in mind each sides’ respective development priorities based on the common shared values of democracy, freedom, equality and justice.

4. The Foreign Ministers agreed to enhance exchange of visits at all levels including at the Summit level leading towards realisation of a ‘Strategic Partnership’ between India and CELAC. They underscored the need to meet every year alternately in India and the CELAC country holding the pro-tempore Presidency.

Trade and Investment

5. The Ministers expressed satisfaction over the growth of commercial, economic and investment relations between India and CELAC. They recognised that although trade between India and the region had crossed US $25 billion in 2012, it was still far below potential. The Ministers underscored the need to tap the available potential through diversification of trade, participation in each other’s trade fairs, exchange of business delegations, construction of regulatory frameworks, relaxation in movement of goods, services and people and through strengthening air connectivity and shipping links. In this regard, they agreed to set up a India-CELAC Business Council and a India-CELAC CEOs Forum. These business related institutional mechanisms are expected to meet regularly and submit recommendations towards further enhancement of such links between India and CELAC.

Energy

6. Both sides recognised that energy security holds the key to economic development. Considering the importance attached by both sides to bilateral cooperation in the sphere of energy security including that in renewable energy, both sides agreed to set up an Energy Forum to address this important issue.

Minerals

7. The Indian side recognised that Latin America is endowed with abundant and diverse mineral resources which could help to sustain India’s growth rate. Both sides agreed to work towards providing for value addition in the exchange of commodities through direct trading and by setting up of manufacturing units. The Indian side offered to provide technical know-how to the CELAC countries in mapping of their geological resources by using India’s remote sensing satellites. Both sides highlighted the growing importance of the mineral trade, and in this regard, emphasized on the need to promote mutual investment opportunities to contribute to the economic growth of both India and CELAC countries.

Agriculture

8. Both sides agreed to work towards providing for food security for their people. In this regard, they expressed their desire to deepen cooperation through the setting up of a mutually beneficial partnership in the agriculture farming and food processing sector. They discussed the need to work together on agricultural research through institutional linkages and by exchanging ideas on their agriculture practices. In this regard, they agreed to set up an Agricultural Expert Group which is expected to submit recommendations to Ministers.

Science and Technology

9. Recognising that cooperation in science and technology is crucial for addressing poverty and developmental challenges that confront them, the Ministers reiterated their commitment to work together by synergising their technological strength and capabilities. They agreed to set up a Science Forum that will consider a programme of action for joint research in the areas relating to medicine, agriculture, astronomy, information technology and renewable energy, in particular bio-fuels, solar, wind and hydro energy. India offered to assist CELAC countries in the launch of low-cost satellites for communications as well as for weather forecasting.
10. Both sides welcomed the ongoing cooperation in the field of technical training and capacity building and noted the potential for further enhancement for cooperation in this area. They agreed to initiate various projects related to tele-education, e-governance and tele-medicine that would cover the entire Latin America and Caribbean region.

Culture, Education and people-to-people contacts

11. Both sides reiterated the importance attached by them to encourage people-to-people contacts and reaffirmed their determination to cooperate closely in this field. They agreed to strengthen cultural and academic linkages, including between the Diplomatic Institutes in India and CELAC countries. They underscored the need to conclude bilateral Air Services Agreements to enhance direct air links between India and CELAC in order to promote tourism and business.

Regional and Multilateral

12. Both sides discussed a broad range of regional and international issues of mutual interest. They exchanged views on the development in South Asia and Latin America and Caribbean region. They acknowledged that their cooperation in the UN and other multilateral fora has always been close and determined by common interests. They agreed to work together on common global challenges in the interest of developing countries by maintaining coordinated approach on UN reforms, financial crisis, climate change and international terrorism.

13. Both sides strongly condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and agreed to cooperate in the joint endeavour of the international community in eliminating the menace of international terrorism. They urged the international community to adopt a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism at the earliest.

14. Both sides recognised that climate change is a global challenge with strong economic, environmental and social dimensions. They acknowledged the efforts of the UN Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20) for a renewed political commitment towards Sustainable Development to achieve poverty eradication through a balanced integration of economic, social and environmental aspects.

15. The Foreign Ministers of the CELAC Troika thanked the External Affairs Minister of India for the warm hospitality extended to the CELAC delegation and for the arrangements made for the First India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministerial Dialogue. They agreed that the next meeting of the India-CELAC Foreign Ministerial Dialogue will take place in 2013 under the Cuban Presidency of CELAC.
16. The pro-Tempore President and Troika Foreign Ministers of CELAC will present this Joint Statement in next meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Community that will be held in September 2012 in New York on the sidelines of UNGA.
Joint Media Interaction following the First India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministerial Meeting.

New Delhi, August 7, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen of the media. I welcome you to this interaction. As is usual, we will begin with brief opening remarks.

I would now request the External Affairs Minister of India Shri S.M. Krishna to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): Excellency Foreign Minister of Chile Mr. Charme, Excellency Foreign Minister of Venezuela Mr. Maduro, Excellency Vice Foreign Minister of Cuba Mr. Sierra Diaz, Friends from Media:

I am indeed delighted to welcome the Foreign Ministers of Chile and Venezuela, and the Vice Foreign Minister of Cuba for the first ever India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministers Dialogue.

During the Dialogue we recognized that India and Latin American and Caribbean countries are facing common challenges and similar aspirations. With the economic cooperation gathering momentum at bilateral levels with the Latin American and Caribbean countries, we have agreed to strengthen our cooperation in diverse sectors at India-CELAC level also. In this context, our discussions today focused on ways to strengthen interaction at all levels.

We agreed that as our Dialogue process gains momentum, we should set up specific frameworks for cooperation, in particular in the areas of trade and investments, energy security, agriculture, science and technology, culture and education. I proposed that in the not too distant future, India and CELAC should take forward the Dialogue process to the Summit level.

We reiterated our intention to enhance our bilateral trade, which is currently around 25 billion US Dollars. Our discussions today also examined ways to provide value addition to business activities by direct trading, imparting technology and setting up mutually beneficial partnerships in the manufacturing sector. We agreed to strengthen interaction between business communities. We have agreed to encourage our respective Trade Ministers to consider setting up India-CELAC level Joint Business Council.

Science and Technology was another area that came up for discussion. We agreed to set up India-CELAC Science Forum to synergize the respective strengths in technology for mutual benefit. India has offered to share its experiences in e-governance, tele-medicine, tele-education with CELAC countries, and also use of satellite technology to map the mineral resources of the region as well as to assist in weather forecasting.
We recognized that India and the Latin American and Caribbean societies are culturally vibrant and tolerant. We agreed to enhance our people-to-people contacts through exchange of scholars, cultural troupes, students and tourists. We propose to set up an Academic Forum to look into these issues.

CELC Troika Foreign Ministers and I also exchanged views on regional development and multilateral issues. We have a shared understanding on regional developments and threats to international peace and security. We further agreed to work together on the reform of the United Nations, climate change and global economic situation in a coherent and concerted manner in the interest of developing countries.

I am fully satisfied with the outcome of the first India-CELAC Troika Foreign Ministers meeting. India looks forward to work closely with CELAC for mutual benefit of our peoples.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: I now request the Foreign Minister of Chile to make his opening remarks on behalf of CELAC.

Foreign Minister of Chile (Mr. Alfredo Moreno Charme): First of all I want to say thank you to India and its Minister and its people for this warm welcome that we have received here today.

This is an historical event. For the first time 33 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, all the Latin American and Caribbean countries, have set up this Organisation and this is the first time that we have an international presentation to another country and that country is India.

It is India because of many reasons. One is that you have this idea some time ago when we have the Rio Group which was a smaller group, but also because India is a close friend because we share a lot of positions on the multilateral organizations, but also because we have a lot to benefit, both, because we have a lot of complementarity. For example in trade, today trade among both regions is only four per cent of our imports and exports. These figures are one/tenth of what the Latin American and Caribbean countries have for example with China.

What has been done with Chile yesterday and today in our meetings to increase our limited trade agreement that we have and to continue on a free trade agreement show that we can go on, not only with Chile but with the other countries. This is also true on investment, on agriculture, on mining, on energy, and on many other fields. Latin America and Caribbean countries have the largest reserves of oil, many minerals and large agricultural extensions. Just to tell you, that continent is five times the size of India but it only has half of the population. So, there are a lot of complementarities that we can share.
On the other hand, India has the technology, the expertise that we need to go on and achieve what all these countries want to achieve which is to be developed countries in the future. So, what we are doing today in this historical event, this first time that we share our common beliefs and we have a lot to do in the future, a lot of complementarity and a lot of benefits that we can obtain from both sides.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: The Ministers have agreed to field a few questions.

Question: My question is to Mr. Krishna. Sir, what are the advantages of India engaging with the CELAC so soon after its formation?

External Affairs Minister: The fact that India has been one of the initiators of this interaction with the group of nations of Latin America and Caribbean states, the Community of Latin American and Caribbean states, provides India a platform to interact directly with 33 countries in the region. Since our relations with all Latin American and Caribbean countries are friendly and our trade and commercial relations are increasing steadily, we thought it is a good time to strengthen our relations with this new born grouping from Latin America and Caribbean region. There is a high degree of complementarity between India and the region. The India-CELAC dialogue, we therefore think will provide an excellent opportunity to take our relations to the next higher level.

Question: I have a question for the Foreign Minister of Chile. Is the Chilean industry satisfied with the Partial Trade Agreement that they have in India? Do you want to expand it at a later stage … (inaudible)...

Foreign Minister of Chile: Our teams, India and Chile, have been working on expanding this limited agreement that we have today. The limited agreement that we had until today was only 178 products. We will increase it to 1100, which covers almost all the goods that are exchanged between both countries. And also we will continue onwards on negotiations for a free trade agreement after we have completed this agreement on this increase on the current agreement that we have today, which we believe that we can obtain that in a few weeks.

So, going to your question, we feel that the agreement that we had until now worked fantastically, but today we need to go to the next level, taking your words to a higher level. And we are really glad that we have been able to obtain that agreement with the Indian authorities.

Official Spokesperson: With that we come to the end of this interaction.

Thank you very much ladies and gentlemen.
BRAZIL

476. Statement by the Prime Minister to the Media during the State Visit of the President of Brazil.

    New Delhi, March 30, 2012.

Distinguished representatives of the media,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is my proud privilege to welcome the President of Brazil, Her Excellency Ms. Dilma Rousseff, to India on her first State Visit.

We have just completed very fruitful discussions. President Rousseff is a pioneer in many fields. She is the first Brazilian woman to be elected to the office of the President of her country. Her personal zeal and commitment to democracy, human rights and upliftment of the downtrodden are well known. I have conveyed to her our deep admiration of her work and her achievements. I congratulated her on receiving an Honorary Doctorate from the University of Delhi.

India and Brazil represent diverse, multi-ethnic, vibrant democracies. We are both committed to creating an international order that facilitates our efforts at poverty eradication and social development. We have emerged as new growth poles of the evolving global economy. We deeply value our cooperation in various multilateral and plurilateral forums including the Fourth BRICS Summit that was held yesterday. President Rousseff and I have agreed to enhance our consultations on reform of global governance system, particularly in the context of the reforms of the United Nations and in the G-20 process. We have agreed to step up our efforts, particularly towards the reform of the United Nations Security Council as G-4 partners.

We also agreed on the importance of IBSA and noted our cooperation in third countries through the IBSA process.

President Rousseff and I exchanged views on various global developments. Our perspectives are marked by a high degree of convergence. We are convinced that a resolution to the crisis in West Asia can only be achieved through dialogue and consultations.

India and Brazil share common perspectives on environmental issues. Brazil will be hosting the important Rio+20 Conference on sustainable development in June this year. I informed the President of our full support to make this event a success.

Our bilateral Strategic Partnership has strengthened and deepened enormously. President Rousseff and I have undertaken a comprehensive review of our relations, including the work of the inter-governmental Joint Commission Meeting which met last December in New Delhi. We directed our officials to take specific steps to exploit the full potential in areas such as trade, education, science and technology, environment, defence, space and nuclear energy.

Bilateral trade and investment flows have grown by leaps and bounds. Yet, the President and I are in full agreement that these can be enhanced even further. We agreed to take measures to promote greater business interaction.

The reconstitution of the India-Brazil CEO’s Forum is a first step in this regard.

Our two countries face similar challenges in promoting inclusive growth. Brazil has been successfully implementing various social welfare programmes that hold relevance for India’s situation as well. We agreed to exchange experiences in this field.

I conveyed to H.E. the President our interest in her innovative initiative “Science without Borders,” aimed at upgrading scientific and technological talent. We look forward to receiving Brazilian students in our institutes of science and engineering.

The President and I underscored the need to enhance cultural and people-to-people ties. The Cultural Exchange Programme that was signed today will facilitate such interactions.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am convinced that it is in our interest, and in the interest of the world, to deepen the Strategic Partnership between India and Brazil in every possible way. I look forward to working closely with President Dilma Rousseff in this endeavour.

Thank you very much.
Joint Statement by India and Brazil on the State Visit of Brazilian President Ms. Dilma Rousseff.

New Delhi, March 30, 2012.

Her Excellency Ms. Dilma Rousseff, President of the Federative Republic of Brazil paid a State Visit to India from March 27-31, 2012 at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, His Excellency Dr. Manmohan Singh. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India held official talks on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest.

2. During the visit, the President of Brazil met the President of India, Her Excellency Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil. After a ceremonial welcome in New Delhi, the President of Brazil visited Rajghat to pay homage to the memory of Mahatma Gandhi. The President of India hosted a Banquet in honour of the visiting dignitary. The Chairperson UPA Smt. Sonia Gandhi and the Leader of Opposition Smt. Sushma Swaraj called on the President of Brazil. The University of Delhi conferred the Degree of Doctor of Letters Honoris Causa on the President of Brazil during the visit.

3. The following bilateral instruments for cooperation were signed during the visit:

i Executive Programme of Cultural Exchange 2012-2014;
ii Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation under the Brazilian programme 'Science without Borders';
iii Programme of Cooperation on Science, Technology and Innovation (2012-2014);
iv Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in the field of Biotechnology;
v Memorandum of Understanding on Technical Cooperation; vi MOU between INMETRO and NABCB on mutual recognition of accreditation bodies; and vii Statement of Intent for Promotion of Gender Equality and Advancement of the Rights of Women and Children.

Strategic Partnership

4. The two Heads of Government acknowledged the significance of the bilateral visit of the President of Brazil and underlined that the India-Brazil Strategic Partnership established in 2006 has moved to a higher level of a privileged nature. They recognised that the bilateral relations between India and Brazil are based on bonds of strong friendship which are underpinned by shared values of democracy, rule of law and commonality of interests. The meeting between the two Leaders was held in an atmosphere of warmth and friendship. They noted with satisfaction that the range and frequency of engagement between the two countries had expanded and intensified in recent years and reiterated their commitment to enhance bilateral cooperation to a higher level. They also reaffirmed that they would work together for the further enhancement of their multifaceted relationship.

5. Both Leaders expressed satisfaction with the mutually beneficial cooperation and partnership between India and Brazil at all levels encompassing political, economic, trade, investment, defence, energy, agriculture, science and technology, space, education and culture. They recalled that South-South cooperation fosters a shared vision of the evolving international order which enables close cooperation and coordination in all multilateral fora. They underscored that the ongoing cooperation through G-4, G-20, IBSA, BRICS and BASIC is another important dimension of their relationship.

6. The two Leaders complimented the Foreign Ministers of the two countries for the excellent groundwork they had made on all areas of India-Brazil Strategic Partnership during the 5th round of the India-Brazil Joint Ministerial Commission meeting in New Delhi in December 2011. They evaluated the outcome of the decision of the Joint Commission Ministerial meeting and called for the 6th Meeting to be held in Brazil in 2012. The co-Chairs of the Joint Ministerial Meeting have been requested to carry out a review of the implementation of the decisions arrived at during the State visit.

Economic and Financial Dialogue

7. Both Leaders welcomed the establishment of the bilateral Economic and Financial Dialogue in 2011. Considering the fast changing nature of global financial markets, it was useful for the two countries as major economies and members of the G-20 to exchange views on macro and micro economic and financial issues. The two Leaders expressed deep concern over the international economic and financial crisis and underlined the importance of maintaining close contact in the G-20 meetings.

Trade and Investment

8. The two Leaders expressed satisfaction at the steady increase of bilateral trade and investment between India and Brazil. They noted that the bilateral trade has already touched a record US$ 9.3 billion in 2011 and agreed to set a trade target of US$ 15 billion by 2015. The two countries would work towards identifying and implementing steps required to remove various impediments to trade to achieve this objective. They recognised that there exists considerable untapped potential for greater trade exchanges considering the size of the two economies and also the total volume of foreign trade in both countries. In this context, they also took note of the recommendations of the meetings of the fifth Joint Ministerial Commission, the Trade Monitoring Mechanism (TMM) and the Brazil-India Business Conference: “A New Frontier for Business Opportunities”. Addressing Indian and Brazilian businessmen at the Conference, President of Brazil made a presentation on the bilateral economic relations and future perspectives for strengthening the economic ties between the two countries.

9. The two Heads of Government underscored the importance of the CEOs Forum in the promotion of bilateral trade and investments and called for the early convening of the India-Brazil CEOs Forum. Both sides noted that diversification of trade basket and participation in each other’s trade fairs and sharing of information on each other’s investment policies in specific sectors through seminars and conclaves would help to further strengthening trade and investment linkages. Both Leaders urged the concerned officials to discuss and find solutions on tariff and non-tariff barriers, anti-dumping cases and countervailing duties and resolve them through mutual consultations. The Indian side invited Brazil to join the 20th International Engineering and Technology Fair (IETF) to be held in New Delhi in 2013 as a focus country.

10. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India discussed opportunities for further expansion of bilateral trade and expressed their satisfaction with the implementation of the India-MERCOSUR Preferential Trade Agreement. They also reaffirmed their commitment to analyse possible alternatives to expand the Agreement and the preferences granted to each other.

Agriculture

11. Recognising the enormous potential in agriculture and food processing sectors, the two Leaders expressed interest in enhancing cooperation for mutually beneficial partnerships. They urged their competent authorities and technical teams to take necessary measures to widen our cooperation in these sectors in the context of food security of both countries in the near future. They underscored their mutual desire to deepen cooperation in agriculture research between the Indian Council of Agricultural Research (ICAR) and the Brazilian Agricultural Research Corporation (EMBRAPA). They welcomed the areas identified for cooperation in the fields of germ-plasm exchange, agro energy, sugar based ethanol, soybean cultivation and processing for bio diesel and animal reproduction, beginning with programmes in 2012. They expressed appreciation over the streamlining of certification for import of bovine embryos from India to Brazil. The successful exchange of bovine genetic material is an example of how both countries can help each other to improve the quality of their cooperation in the areas of animal husbandry. They reiterated interest to cooperate in setting up cold chains and terminal markets for fruits, vegetables and other perishables with state of art facilities in India. In this regard they recognised the importance of convening the Joint Working Group on Agriculture to discuss specific proposals and take forward bilateral cooperation in Agriculture.

Tourism, Air Services and Sports

12. Both Leaders recognised the vast tourism potential in each other’s countries and reiterated their interest to collaborate in the Tourism sector for mutually beneficial partnership. They agreed to facilitate expeditious movement of tourists to each other’s countries. In view of the forthcoming Football World Cup 2014 and Olympic Games 2016 to be held in Rio de Janeiro, both Leaders expressed interest to explore the possibility of joint venture investments in the hospitality and tourism sectors. They urged the two sides to operationalise the Bilateral Air Services Agreement between India and Brazil signed in March 2011 so as to facilitate and encourage business interaction, tourism and people-to-people exchanges. Furthermore, they highlighted their interest in promotion of cooperation in the areas of sports and youth exchanges.

Defence

13. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India expressed satisfaction at the ongoing cooperation in defence. They recalled the successful visit of the Defence Minister of Brazil, H.E. Mr. Celso Amorim, to India in February 2012. They also noted with satisfaction the reciprocal visits of high level officials and exchanges of defence personnel. They reiterated their desire to jointly collaborate in training as well as exchange of information on peace keeping operations and other areas of mutual interest. They agreed to work on specific proposals for joint development of projects in defence sector, in particular relating to ship building and design. They also agreed to explore possible cooperations in the areas such as space, nuclear propulsion, cyber-defence and defence systems, among others. They expressed satisfaction with the successful maiden flight with the Indian Airborne Early Warning and Control System mounted on the Brazilian EMBRAER aircraft as an excellent example of their ongoing collaborative partnership in Research and Development. The two Leaders recognised that the existing Joint Defence Committee is a useful mechanism to discuss these issues and work towards expanding bilateral defence cooperation.

14. They noted the progress made in the realisation of the objectives enshrined in the Brazil-India Agreement on Defence Cooperation, signed in 2003, and reaffirmed the interest of both sides to further build cooperation in the defence sector. Both Leaders agreed that there is scope for promoting military technical cooperation through joint scientific research and technological development... activities in armament and military equipment; exchange of experience, technologies and information related to development, production and testing of armament and military equipment, and other such initiatives.

Science and Technology

15. The two Leaders expressed their satisfaction with the first meeting of the Brazil-India Joint Commission on Scientific and Technological Cooperation on March 22-23, 2012. The Joint Commission is a relevant mechanism for the exchange of experience and programmes and for the establishment of new scientific and corporate partnerships, in the fields of second generation biofuels and renewable energy; nanotechnology; biotechnology; information and communications technology; innovation; cooperation in the aerospace sector; and oceanography. They welcomed the establishment of a Bilateral Programme of Cooperation on Science, Technology and Innovation for 2012-2014, with implementation mechanisms, as well as the signature of the Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Biotechnology, which will focus on initiatives in the areas of health (especially cancer and stem cell therapy); agriculture; biofuels and bio-energy; nanotechnology; taxonomy; and vaccines, among others.

16. Both Leaders emphasised the potential for bilateral cooperation in the field of Information and Communications Technology, based on the complementarities and technological development of both countries. They noted with satisfaction their converging dialogue on the Information Society, especially regarding the trilateral cooperation in the IBSA Forum. They also reaffirmed their commitment to the principles established by the Tunis Agenda during the World Summit on the Information Society (WSIS), highlighting the importance of the democratisation of the forums discussing this issue and of the effective participation of the developing countries in the Internet global governance regime, as a means to resolve the effects of the “digital hiatus”.

Space

17. Both Leaders expressed desire to strengthen cooperation in Space research in areas such as remote sensing, data sharing and weather forecasting. In this regard they expressed their interest to exchange experts on regular basis. Brazil reiterated its interest in receiving images from the Indian satellite Resourcesat-2, given the successful cooperation in reception of data from Resourcesat-1 in the Terrestrial Station of Cuiaba. On IBSA Satellite Project, both Leaders expressed strong interest in working jointly for the success of the Technical Meeting to be held in Bengaluru before the end of the year of 2012.

Environment

18. Both Leaders expressed interest in fostering cooperation in the field of traditional knowledge, protected areas and water resource management. They expressed satisfaction in enhancing cooperation in Environment in areas including scientific management of forests, climate change, waste management and reuse of treated effluents.

Energy

19. The two Leaders expressed satisfaction on the progress of bilateral cooperation in the field of energy for mutually beneficial partnership. They recognised the potential opportunities in this sector and welcomed private and public companies to participate in exploration and production of oil and gas in Brazil. They asked concerned authorities for early convening of Joint Working Group meeting on Hydrocarbons to discuss further cooperation in this sector as well as sharing of experiences in bio-fuels, hydro-power generation, wind and solar energy and privatization and distribution of electricity. Acknowledging the importance of the new and renewable energy resources as instruments for the strengthening of the national energy security, the promotion of sustainable development, technological growth and poverty elimination in association with social inclusion, the parties concurred to create a permanent mechanism for the exchange of technical information and to address those issues. They further reiterated their interest to cooperate in the area of civil nuclear energy.

Health

20. Both sides recognised the importance of active floor co-ordination on the issue of substandard/spurious/falsely-labelled/falsified/counterfeit medical products in the World Health Organization (WHO) and IPR related issues on generic medicines. Both sides also agreed to cooperate and exchange views on other priority health areas such as social determinants of health, prevention, diagnosis and treatment of HIV/AIDS, primary health care, non-communicable diseases traditional medicine, as well as neglected diseases with a focus on Hansen disease.

Education

21. The President of Brazil informed the Prime Minister of India about her initiative of “Science without Borders”. The Prime Minister expressed keen interest in the idea with emphasis on basic sciences and technology. Recognising some of India’s capabilities in specific areas, they agreed to start a programme of placement of students and scholars in each other’s institutes of excellence. They also took note of the progress made in the Joint Working Group on Education and directed that a beginning could be made by the two countries with regard to these exchanges at different levels in 2012. Both Leaders expressed their satisfaction with the signature of the “MOU on Cooperation under the Brazilian programme ‘Science without Borders’ on reception of Brazilian scholarship students in India. Brazil welcomed the establishment of an Indian Chair at the Getulio Vargas Foundation (FGV) in Rio de Janeiro.

Culture

22. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India reaffirmed the fundamental role of culture to deepen the friendly ties between the peoples of Brazil and India and decided to stimulate closer relations between artists, cultural institutions and producers of the two countries. They expressed their satisfaction with the signature of the Executive Programme of Cultural Exchanges for the Period 2012-2014, and underlined that it will give momentum to the existing cultural ties. They welcomed more frequent cultural exchanges including the highly successful Indian Cultural Festival in four cities in Brazil in 2011, the Film Festivals held in different cities in Brazil and the setting up of the Indian Cultural Centre in Sao Paulo in 2011, as well as the announcement of the residency programme for Brazilian visual artists, which will take place in New Delhi and Mumbai in 2012. Brazil expressed its intention to set up a Brazilian Cultural Centre in India. They agreed to strengthen cooperation in the audio-visual sector and explore mutually beneficial opportunities in this sector for Film production.

Regional and Multilateral

23. The two Heads of Government discussed a broad range of regional and international issues of mutual interest. They exchanged views on the developments in South Asia and Latin American region. They reaffirmed their commitment to the Millennium Development Goals to fight against hunger and poverty. They also agreed to continue their coordination on issues of common interest of the international agenda.

24. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India noted with satisfaction the fruitful cooperation established during the nine years of the IBSA Forum. The continuity of various IBSA Forum activities remains a priority of their foreign policies. The last IBSA Summit, in October 2011, was held in a unique moment for the Forum, when the three countries were simultaneously members of the United Nations Security Council. They underscored that the cooperation of the IBSA countries in the UNSC in 2011 enriched the debates on the agenda of the Council and contributed to enhance its effectiveness and legitimacy.

25. The President of Brazil congratulated Prime Minister of India for the successful organisation of the Fourth BRICS Summit and the other events in the run up to the meetings of the Leaders. Brazil and India expressed their satisfaction with the growing dynamism of the BRICS and the important consensus reached in different subjects during the Fourth Summit. They also noticed with great satisfaction that the scope of intra-BRICS cooperation is continuously broadening out and that the five countries concur on important issues on the international agenda.

26. The two Heads of Government stressed the importance of coordinating their actions at the G-20 and other international economic fora. As the world economy presents modest and unequal growth and exposed to risks, Brazil and India’s efforts to combine financial and monetary policies with inclusive growth and employment generation become increasingly relevant. The Leaders also noted the importance of promptly implementing the agreed reforms in the governance structure of the international financial institutions. Such reforms must take into consideration the growing influence of the emerging countries economies.

27. The Leaders reaffirmed their commitment to the reform of the United Nations, particularly the Security Council, through its expansion in the permanent and non-permanent categories, with increased representation of developing countries in both, in order to improve its representativeness, and legitimacy, and for it to better meet the contemporary challenges faced by the international community. The Leaders reiterated mutual support for their countries’ aspiration to permanent membership in an expanded UNSC.

28. The Leaders called for enhanced Security Council procedures in order to monitor and assess the manner in which resolutions are interpreted and implemented. In this vein, they support the idea that the concept of Responsibility while Protecting (RwP) should be discussed further at the UN.

29. Regarding Middle East and North Africa, the two Heads of Government expressed their support the movement for greater democracy, inclusive growth, human dignity and social justice in the region.

30. They expressed their deep concern at the deteriorating situation in Syria and called for an immediate end to violence, which they strongly condemned. They stressed that a peaceful, Syrian-led political process is essential to resolve the ongoing crisis. They also welcomed the designation of former UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan as UN-LAS Joint Special Envoy on the Syria Crisis and support his efforts to bring about a peaceful resolution.

31. The two Leaders underlined the urgent need for a just and lasting resolution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Brazil and India reiterated their support for a sovereign, independent, democratic and economically viable Palestinian State, with East Jerusalem as its capital, within the 1967 borders, living side by side with Israel in peace and security. Given that the Palestinian question is possibly the single most complex challenge on the international peace and security agenda, they called for greater involvement of the Council in the search of a solution to the conflict.
32. The President of Brazil and the Prime Minister of India considered that sustainable development is the main paradigm for inclusive economic growth, social equality and environmental conservation, in primacy of the Rio principles in this regard. They underscored that a green economy should contribute to meeting the goals of poverty eradication, food security and sustained, inclusive and equitable growth that generates employment. The Leaders highlighted their countries’ coordination in the BASIC group on the climate change negotiations, which played an important role in the positive results of the Conference of the Parties (COP 17) of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change in Durban in 2011.

33. The two Leaders reaffirmed their mutual support to the important events of the environmental agenda that will take place in India and in Brazil in 2012: the 11th Conference of the Parties (COP-11) to the Convention on Biological Diversity, in October 2012 in Hyderabad, India and the United Nations Conference on Sustainability Development (the Rio+20) In this context, they underlined that the Rio+20 Conference represents an unique opportunity for the international community to secure renewed political commitment to sustainable development. President Dilma Rousseff extended an invitation to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to participate in the Rio+20 Conference to be held in Rio de Janeiro from June 20-22, 2012.

34. The President of Federative Republic of Brazil thanked the Indian government and its people for the warm hospitality extended to her and the accompanying delegation in India. She invited the President of India and Prime Minister of India to visit Brazil on mutually convenient dates which will be decided through diplomatic channel.
CANADA

Toronto, June 18, 2012.

High Commissioner Gavai,
Consul General Smt Preeti Saran,
Friends from the Media,

I am very pleased to meet you today in Toronto. As you may be aware, I am transiting through Toronto after my official visits to USA and Cuba.

Last evening Hon’ble Minister for Foreign Affairs of Canada Mr John Baird, joined by three other Cabinet Ministers, hosted a dinner for me. He flew in from Ottawa on a Sunday evening especially to host me. I am deeply touched and honoured by this special gesture and for his hospitality. It reaffirms, once again the importance that we both attach to India Canada relations. Minister John Baird and I reviewed the entire gamut of our bilateral relations and agreed on further strengthening the relationship. I look forward to receive Foreign Minister John Baird in India soon.

Immediately after this media interaction, I will be attending a Reception organised by the Consulate General of India and the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce. I am happy to note that you are also joining us at the Reception.

I am taking advantage of my transit visit to renew our contacts with the Friends of India as well as the members of the vibrant Indo-Canadian community residing within the Greater Toronto Area. We in India are, indeed, proud of their achievements in Canada. This, of course, includes all of you. As members of a vibrant media that takes keen interest on India, you not only cover recent developments in India but also help bring Indo-Canadian community closer to their heritage and to their links with India.

Friends,

India - Canada relations have never been as close as they are today. These have been sustained more recently by a series of high level visits, including frequent interaction between our two Prime Ministers, both during visits to each others’ countries as well as at international Summits. Last year was a landmark year in our relations as the Year of India was observed in Canada. It was a celebration of the tremendous space that exists in our bilateral relations. There is immense scope for further cooperation in a number of sectors.
In recent years, our governments have signed several agreements in different areas of cooperation including nuclear cooperation, mining, agriculture, education, and science and technology. We are also discussing other instruments to further facilitate greater trade and commerce between our two countries including a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement.

There is an increased understanding on both sides of the vast untapped potential for further economic ties. The Indo-Canadian community is an important asset and an important link in building stronger ties between India and Canada. I want to take this opportunity, and convey through you, Government of India’s deep appreciation to the Indo-Canadian community for their immense contribution in bringing India and Canada closer together.

Thank you.

479. Remarks by External Affairs Minister at a reception hosted in his honour by the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce together with Consul General of India in Toronto.

Toronto, June 18, 2012.

Hon’ble Ministers Harinder Tahkar, Kathaleen Wynn and Margret Best, Members of Parliament and Members of Provincial Parliament, President of Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce Mr. Satish Thakkar, High Commissioner Shri S.M. Gavai, Consul General Smt Preeti Saran, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to be present at this evening reception hosted by the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce together with the Consulate General of India in Toronto. I place on record my sincere appreciation to Mr. Satish Thakkar, President, Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce for his gracious invitation to me to meet with you all.

It is indeed a special occasion for me as I get to meet and interact with Friends of India and other members of the vibrant Indo-Canadian community. You are an important asset in our relations with Canada – a country with which we share a close bilateral relationship based on our shared values of democracy, pluralism, multiculturalism and tolerance.

A series of recent high level visits have raised the political profile of our relations. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and Prime Minister Harper are keen to advance the bilateral relationship to the next high level. We are currently discussing a number of important bilateral agreements, including a comprehensive economic partnership agreement. A concerted effort is underway to transform the bilateral relationship by infusing greater economic content into it.

Last year was a landmark year in our relations with Canada, as we celebrated the Year of India in Canada. The Year of India was not just about showcasing India’s vibrant and rich culture. It was a celebration of India-Canada relationship. It highlighted the tremendous space that exists for taking this relationship to even greater heights.

The Pravasi Bharatiya Divas (PBD) Canada, organised in partnership with the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce, was an important component of the celebration of the Year of India in Canada. The very fact that the mini-PBD was held in Canada is a recognition and acknowledgment of the important role of the Indo-Canadian community in building bridges between our two countries.

Ladies and Gentlemen,
India today is at a historic phase when the world is witnessing profound changes. The socio-economic transformation in India with over one billion people, within a democratic framework, will have enormous contribution to make for the rest of the world. It could become an anchor of stability and opportunity for the global economy.

Despite the global economic crisis, the Indian economy has shown resilience and managed to grow at 6.9 percent last year. We are confident of resuming higher growth rates in the coming years. We have initiated measures to harness the creativity of our young population— with 50% of the population below the age of 25 years, to drive innovation-led inclusive growth. This will assist us to sustain growth and help alleviate poverty in India.

There is also an external dimension to India’s growth story. Our economic future will depend to a large extent on global peace, stability and security. Our foreign policy always had a broad and open outlook. Thanks to our economic growth and development over the last two decades, we now also have increased capabilities and capacities to contribute to global peace and security.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We have today a broad-based agenda of cooperation with major countries and regions of the world. In Asia, which is fast becoming the center of global opportunities and challenges of the 21st century, India is seen as an anchor of moderation and stability.

Our economic fundamentals are strong with a regulated banking sector, high savings rate, a vibrant private sector and an economy that is largely driven by domestic demands. We have introduced extensive reforms and liberalised our economy to allow participation of external partners. Our government has developed an ambitious plan of investing over one trillion US Dollars in the next five years for infrastructure development alone. We, therefore, see new and exciting possibilities for India and Canada to work together.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I deeply value the contribution that all of you have made in transforming the bilateral relationship to one that is forward looking and with high level of substance. I take this opportunity to invite you and through you the Canadian industries and businesses to be part of India’s growth story, especially in important sectors such as mining, agriculture, agro-processing, education, infrastructure and energy, where Canada has immense strengths.

I thank you all.
Joint Media Interaction of External Affairs Minister and Foreign Minister of Canada.

New Delhi, September 12, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen. I welcome you to this media interaction. As is usual, we will begin with opening remarks by the two Ministers. I now request the External Affairs Minister of India, Shri S.M. Krishna, to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister of India (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Foreign Minister John Baird; Friends from the Media:

It is a great pleasure to welcome Foreign Minister Baird on his first visit to India. I wish to acknowledge his special gesture when he flew down from Ottawa to Toronto for a meeting with me on a Sunday and he went back to Ottawa late in the night so that he would be ready to face parliament the next morning. I did extend an invitation to him and I am indeed very happy, both at a personal and official level for the wonderful gesture of increasing the engagement between our two great democracies.

Foreign Minister Baird’s visit marks the beginning of a new phase of deeper engagement and more productive cooperation between our two countries. Today, Foreign Minister Baird and I had productive discussions on the entire gamut of our bilateral relations. We are pleased with the progress we are making on bilateral framework agreements like the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, the Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement and the Social Security Agreement. This is in addition to a number of agreements for cooperation in areas like agriculture, mining and higher education signed over the last few years.

We both acknowledged that India and Canada have the potential to be strong economic partners. Canada’s rich natural resources and sophisticated technological and educational base give us a great promise to make our engagement more substantive.

I have stressed to Foreign Minister Baird that Canada can be a true partner in India’s pursuit for food security as well as energy security. Indeed, trends in supplies and price of oil and gas make Canada an economically attractive option for sourcing our requirements; and this is a subject of growing importance in our dialogue and in the engagement between our two private sectors.

We are encouraged by the growing flow of investments in both directions. Indian companies have invested over US$ 10 billion in Canada during the past two years, including in the resources sector. The India-Canada CEO Forum has been constituted and should commence its work soon. We also looked forward to early completion of negotiations on Appropriate Arrangements for the bilateral Civil Nuclear Cooperation Agreement signed in 2010.

We also acknowledged the enormous potential for cooperation in the areas of science and technology, defence technology, higher education and clean energy. We agreed that our two governments should establish innovative platforms to stimulate collaboration in these areas.

People-to-people ties are very strong. A million-strong Indian community is an integral part of Canada’s vibrant society and acts as a bridge of friendship between our two countries. Canada is a rapidly growing destination for Indian students who want to pursue higher studies abroad. Canadian Government’s support helped make the Year of India in Canada in 2011 a great success. I invited Foreign Minister Baird to host a Year of Canada in India.

India and Canada are part of the wider Asia Pacific community, the Commonwealth, and the G-20. The challenges of terrorism, proliferation and maritime security are of concern to both countries. We welcome Canada’s support for India’s membership of the four international export control regimes.

Foreign Minister Baird and I will continue our discussions later after this media interaction.

Foreign Minister Baird and I agreed our two countries should deepen and broaden our dialogue and consultations, on political and strategic issues as well as on economic cooperation. We look forward to making this dialogue a regular feature.

Finally, Foreign Minister Baird and I discussed the visit of Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who has been a strong advocate of closer India-Canada ties, later in the year as an opportunity to raise our relationship to a qualitatively new level.

Thank you.

Foreign Minister of Canada (Mr. John Baird): Thank you very much, Minister. I want to thank you at the outset for the very kind invitation to travel and to visit India. This is my third day in the country and it is simply overwhelming. I have enjoyed the trip immensely. I wanted to thank you as well for the generous welcome me and my delegation received. The Government has been very kind.

The Prime Minister of Canada, Rt. Hon. Stephen Harper, and Prime Minister Dr. Singh have established a very good cordial friendship and relationship both personally and professionally. We are very pleased with the solid footing the relationship between Canada and India is on, but even more pleased with the trajectory, that it is going in very much in the right direction and improving each and every day. And that is because of the leadership of the two Prime Ministers and of your Government.

We enjoy such strong people-to-people ties. I am pleased to be joined by my Parliamentary Secretary Deepak Obhrai who has been in the Department for six years and has served in the Parliament for fifteen years. He is the key interlocutor for our relationship, and I am pleased that he could join me.

We enjoy so many things in common, principally values. We are both liberal democracies; we are both pluralistic societies; we welcome diversity as a strength; we are also open economies; we are working to increase the prosperity of our peoples. The complementarities between the Indian economy and the Canadian economy are profound. We are excited about the opportunities to further collaborate and to increase trade and commerce, to increase investment both ways.

The economic agenda with us is very strong. The Comprehensive Economic Partnership discussions are going very well. We have had five or six very good rounds and we look forward to the next round, and to success in the coming months and years on that. We are very excited about our negotiations on the Bilateral Investment Protection and Promotion Agreement. Those two things will send a very strong signal and a very strong message to the business communities of both our countries to increase trade and investment and increase the prosperity and standards of living of both of our people.

We had a very good discussion with respect to cooperation on energy. Canada has the third largest confirmed sources of oil in the world. We have tremendous opportunities to partner with India on that. We have large deposits of natural gas, some of which can be brought to India, closer from Eastern Canada than Western Canada. There are great opportunities for oil and gas for Canada as a stable and liberal democracy and open economy, to provide for India’s economic growth and energy security.

We are also very pleased with the nuclear cooperation between our two countries. The number one area that we can point to in the growth of the relationship is the nuclear cooperation agreement that was signed by the two Prime Ministers two years ago. We look forward to enhancing our cooperation, providing for the peaceful use of nuclear energy which is important for the future prosperity in India but also tremendously important for air quality and on tackling climate change. We also had a very good discussion on security and counterterrorism cooperation. This is an area with which we see great opportunities for future engagements.

The biggest terrorist incident ever happened in Canada was the bombing of the Air India flight back in 1985. As I told the Minister, that is something that is dear to my heart, close to my heart because one of the victims I went to High School with. And that is something that since I was 15 or 16 years old have... (Inaudible)... about, in a very personal sense. We have enhanced our cooperation on both security and counterterrorism. I think we can do much more to help promote the values that India and Canada both cherish.

Once again I thank you for your kind invitation and for the very warm hospitality. But most importantly, Minister, thank you for your leadership in helping to get this relationship going in the right trajectory. ... (Inaudible)...

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to take a couple of questions each.

Question (Mr. Manish Chand, IANS): I have a set of two interlinked questions. The first one is for External Affairs Minister Mr. Krishna. Sir, what are the issues holding up the implementation of the bilateral civil nuclear deal? It has been two years since we signed that but we have not seen much visible progress.

My second question is for the Canadian Foreign Minister. Excellency, when will Canada start supplying uranium to India? Are you looking for additional conditionalities on top of what we have with, say for example, Russia and France?

External Affairs Minister: About the civil nuclear agreement signed in 2010 during Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh’s visit to Toronto, it is an important milestone in our relationship. Nothing is holding up the implementation of the agreement. Only the two governments are in the process of working out the arrangements and the details which are being negotiated. These are a matter of detail and are being worked out through consultations. We look forward to early completion of these consultations.

Foreign Minister of Canada: We are excited about the nuclear cooperation agreement. We think it is a tangible demonstration that our relationship with India is in the 21st century and not in the 20th century. We have no concerns with respect to proliferation. Those concerns and issues are in the past. We came to agreement. We have to do the administrative details. Often they can take more time than any of us would like. But I can underline the fact that these administrative discussions, I am confident, will be concluded in very short order. And I had underlined the issues I did with the Minister... (Unclear)... We certainly have no additional concerns with respect to those discussions that we would have the agreement that we have with the United States or with the European Union. So, we look forward to the successful resolution of these administrative discussions.

Question (Ms. Parul Chandra, The Asian Age): My question is for both the Ministers. India’s energy needs are growing and Canada has shale gas reserves.
So, was this issue of a possible sale of shale gas to India by Canada discussed at the meeting?

External Affairs Minister: The energy requirements of India was one of the important deliberations between the Foreign Minister and me. Canada is potentially an important source of oil and gas. Given the sharp increase in the availability of gas in North America and steep decline in prices of gas in North America, India would naturally be interested to import oil and gas from North America. Indian companies are interested in investing in Canada as also entering into long-term commitments. This is an issue of growing importance in our bilateral dialogue and I have raised it again. Canada also attaches importance to expanding cooperation in this area. We acknowledge Canada is a superpower in energy and naturally India would depend quite a bit on Canada.

Foreign Minister of Canada: I concur with the Minister’s comments. We having significant reserves of both oil and natural gas, and we think especially from our East Coast there is a great potential for commercial deals. And our Government is very supportive of establishing those commercial relations. It is a significant priority of our High Commissioner here in Delhi. So, it is a part of the discussions. And we look forward to do more work there. I think Canada can be a stable supplier of natural gas to India.

These things are primarily on our end dealt with by commercial entities. But they will do so with the full support of our Government. We think that we can be part of meeting India’s growing energy needs to help power the prosperity and the economic growth that we see here. Most importantly it can be a stable source of the national security supply for India. So, we are quite enthusiastic about this ...(Unclear)...

Question (Mr. Vishal Thapar, NewsEx): My question is for Minister Baird. In your opening remarks, Sir, you made a reference to counterterrorism. But there have been reports of Sikh militants engaging openly in anti-India activities in Canada, about them indulging in hate speeches and organizing functions where Canadian politicians are also present. How do you address the impression that there is a certain permissiveness in Canada towards anti-India activities?

Foreign Minister of Canada: The Minister had made a very good intervention in our meetings on this. I know, both he and Prime Minister Singh have raised this in the past. Our Government will do everything it can possibly do under the law to combat radical extremism by such groups in Canada.

We have, going back to 2003, listed groups under our criminal code as terrorist organizations. I invited the Minister, if he has any counsel or if there are additional groups that we could list. And certainly we have agreed that we have got to do more to tackle this challenge. We are completely on the same page as the Government of India that it is completely unacceptable. From time to time there are representatives, not at the senior political level, who find themselves at one of these events not necessarily knowing the radical nature or extremist nature of these militant groups. When it is brought to our attention or we discover, we tackle it aggressively.

The Indian High Commission in Ottawa brought to us a case about a year or a year and a half ago which we were horrified with. And we will do more to promote and inform and educate officials, whether they be at the political level, at the public service level or at the military level. The fight against extremism and radical terrorists knows no borders, and Canada will be a strong ally to India in this … (Unclear)...

Question (Mr. Tom …, Global TV): This is a question for Mr. Baird on Iran. But I would like to hear Minister Krishna’s thoughts on it as well.

Would Canada support a unilateral Israeli strike on Iran? If so, what redlines need to be crossed to justify that?

Foreign Minister of Canada: We want to see this issue tackled diplomatically. We want to see every diplomatic measure necessary to bring this issue to a successful conclusion. We had some optimism for the P5+1, or it might be referred to as 3+3, dialogue. I am in close contact with Catherine Ashton, the EU Representative for Foreign Affairs. We will continue to work progressively on sanctions. Canada has some of the most aggressive sanctions in the world. We are pleased with the unanimity of the P5+1 including China and India who have been constructive players in these discussions. Obviously we want to see this issue dealt with in a nonmilitary fashion.

We are deeply concerned about the nuclear programme. We are deeply concerned about Iran’s disgraceful human rights record which is, if anything not getting better and is deteriorating. And we are concerned by Iran’s hostile intentions to its neighbours and others in the region, particularly its racist, anti-Semitic rhetoric against the State of Israel and the unconstructive role that it plays supporting terrorism in the region. Beyond that I would not speculate.

But we do believe that all diplomatic action should be necessary. If the Government of Iran wants to resolve this issue, I think there is an ample opportunity for them to do that. They have not taken advantage of the first two or three meetings and the other dialogues that they had with the P5+1. And I would in the strongest of the terms encourage them to take a different course. This thing can be resolved, if the Government of Iran wants to.

Official Spokesperson: With that we come to the end of this event. Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen.

481. Media Briefing on the visit of Canadian Prime Minister.

New Delhi, November 1, 2012.

Joint Secretary (Americas) (Shri Vikram Kumar Doraiswami): Good evening ladies and gentlemen and thank you for your time and attention.....

You already have an approximation of the programme, the main highlights of the programme of Prime Minister Harper’s visit. We have a Press Release out with a little factsheet that we have put together for your information. It is basically a little snapshot of the India-Canada relationship. It gives you statistics on trade, investment, sectors of interest, something that we hope will give you a little background and a little flavor of the relationship. What I would like to say, however, is what you would not find in the factsheet, which is essentially this that this is Prime Minister Harper’s second visit in three years. This is his first State visit of course. He was here almost exactly three years to the day ago. In November 2009 he visited India last. It is part of what we see as a strong effort on the part of the two countries to re-engage, to engage much more closely. Prime Minister Harper’s 2009 visit was preceded by the visit of Prime Minister Paul Martin in 2005 and Prime Minister Chretien in 2003. So, in a space of about a decade this will be the fourth visit from Canada to India.

Prime Minister Manmohan Singh visited Canada in 2010 for the G20 Summit. A bilateral segment of the visit was bookended for that visit. Some of you may have gone on that visit too. So, on both sides we see a strong desire to reengage and to take the relationship to another level.

We have of course the highlights of the relationship being a strong economic and commercial partnership. We are looking at ways of enhancing bilateral trade which is currently at around five billion dollars all told. This is a net growth of about 28 per cent on the previous year. This is good growth but not at the speed the two Prime Ministers had expected. So, efforts are on to find ways of stepping this up. We would look at using this visit as an opportunity to look at more functional mechanisms to identify specific areas of trade in which we can take matters forward. Investment has been an area in which significant growth has happened in terms of bilateral investment. India’s investment in Canada is quite a bit larger than Canada’s investment in India. All told, investment is of the order of 14 billion dollars from India to Canada. Canadian investment in India, historically that is, is at about just under the five billion US dollars mark. It is about 4.8 billion or so. In 2010 alone we had over six billion dollars in Indian investment in Canada.

Key sectors of interest for us include energy, of course. We see Canada as an important and potentially critical partner for India in the energy sector. We are looking of course at agriculture as an important part of the partnership. You will find in your factsheet that Canada is an important provider of lentils and peas to the Indian agricultural sector. Current agricultural trade figures are at 490 million in terms of imports by India and 157 million in terms of exports from India to Canada.

We are looking at ways in which we can more substantively engage Canada's agricultural economy. Canada is of course an agricultural superpower. So, obviously it makes sense for us to have a much more detailed and multi-layered engagement with Canada in that sector.

Apart from that there is also of course education. Canadian universities are among the best in the world. There is already a significant flow of Indian students studying in Canada. We have currently an estimate of about 23,000 students studying in Canada per year. We want to look at ways of building and expanding this relationship. Mining is another area of great interest. Because of its history as a strong natural resource producing country, Canadian mining in terms of technologies is among the world leaders. Obviously we could do with a lot more cooperation in the mining sector.

Technology. We have an excellent partnership already ongoing for several decades between Canada and our Department of Science and Technology. We are looking at ways of trying to take this partnership forward in terms of identifying more and new sectors of technology partnership, in particular nanotechnology, in advanced materials, and biotechnology. Finally of course there is a vibrant link of Canadians of Indian origin. We have estimates of a bit over a million people of Indian origin in Canada. This in percentage terms is about three per cent of the total population of Canada. In ethnic terms, it means the second largest ethnicity in Canada.

We are looking at a number of mechanisms that take our partnership forward. Some of this is captured in the stuff that we have already prepared for you. So, we look forward to using this visit as a means of taking the relationship forward and building upon what we see as a strong desire on the part of Canada also to engage much more closely with India. I do not think I have much more to say in the opening remarks. I am more than happy to address any questions subject to my knowing the answers. Thank you.

Question: Sir, considering the travails of Petronas and CNOOC, both of them are SOEs, what is our strategy to gain energy resources from Canada? Do we want them from SOEs or are we pushing private sector forward? Do our SOEs match the transparency norms that Canada wants?

Joint Secretary (AMS): Thank you for that question. I think it is really an answer that, quite fairly speaking, should be given by a Canadian official rather than by me. As far as we understand Canada’s investment laws, the net benefit test is applied insofar as majority stakes are concerned. In other words, if you have a company that is seeking to access natural resources in Canada and to buy out a stake, if it falls within the benchmark of a majority stake, in other words if it is under 50 per cent, then you do not need to have this test assessed. If it is over 50 per cent, it is a different matter.

I really cannot comment why the Petronas-Nexen deal fell through. But this really is a matter for Government of Canada to answer. But insofar as our strategies are concerned, OVL is very interested. They have an office opened up in Calgary as of July this year. We believe our bids will be good ones, professional bids. I have had personally a discussion with the people at OVL. I think they are very seized of the Canadian Government’s approach to investment. And it is not as if the Canadian Government does not want investment in these sectors. They are open to investment. But I think in their system it all depends on what triggers the regulations within their own system. So, while it is not for me to defend or in any other way comment on their system, I think it is fairly clear from what they have put out that they have set a fairly transparent set of mechanisms in place. And I do not believe that OVL in any sense is a nontransparent holding.

Just to add a point to that, the bid that OVL has made at least in one of the two areas that they are looking at is a consortium of three state-owned companies. But as you know, at least in the case of ONGC about 30 plus per cent of its holding is not purely in state hands.

Question: Vikram, what is the status of civil nuclear negotiations between the two countries? Do we expect a deal by the time the Prime Minister comes or during the visit?

Joint Secretary (AMS): That is an important question. As you know, we signed a bilateral civil nuclear agreement in 2010. We think it was an important moment in our bilateral relationship. I think the quality of India-Canada cooperation has significantly changed as a result of that and as a result of Canada’s support for the India-specific safeguards agreement at the IAEA prior to the 2010 agreement. So, obviously there is a qualitative movement on both sides to engage. The specificities and modalities of getting the cooperation operationalised are being discussed. We hope to have forward movement on this in time for Prime Minister Harper’s visit. Naturally it would be improper for me to comment on exactly where we stand at this particular juncture. But we would be very happy if this comes through. I think both Governments feel that this is an area in which we can cooperate. You are of course aware of the scale of uranium resources in Canada. And Canada’s long and very well put together systems in the management of strategic resources like uranium. So, any cooperation that has to be done will be done within the framework of our international commitments, in particular the India-specific safeguards agreement, the bilateral India-Canada nuclear cooperation agreement, and of course Canadian law and the IAEA rules. So, within these four corners which I have just spelled out, whatever we can exactly nail down, we hope to be able to do something within that.

Question: Vikram, actually there had been complaints against Canada about giving shelter to separatist elements that had been active in India for long. Has there been any forward movement on this trend in Canada? And do you expect anything more on this?

Joint Secretary (AMS): I think the history of this particular issue is well-known, I do not need to comment on this. The fact of the matter is that it has been an issue of significant concern to the Government of India. It has been raised now for decades, in particular since 1985, since the tragedy of Kanishka. But we have had an excellent response from the Government of Canada. You are of course aware of Foreign Minister Baird’s visit here in September. He made a very specific and a very clear-cut, in our view, denunciation of such activity. And we feel that the kind of cooperation that we are getting from Canada has significantly improved. It is of course a matter of concern for us. And we do continue to be in dialogue with the Government of Canada on this issue. But we also recognize that Canada’s cooperation with us has to be within the limits of Canadian law and also within the parameters of their commitments to cooperate against extremism and terrorism.

Question: Vikram, I was surprised to find a large number of Indian doctors driving taxis in Vancouver. That is because I understand Canada does not recognize Indian medical degrees. I think this is terrible. What is the Government of India doing about it?

Joint Secretary (AMS): We are actually working towards a new strategy on cooperation in education. One of the outcomes of this would be recognition of degrees. Professional degrees of course is a more complicated matter. It would be fair only to recognize that this is not the only country in the world where this happens in terms of having extremely qualified emigrants from India doing jobs that say, if I were to understate it a bit, not exactly within the limits of their qualifications. If that were to be the case, getting this done in a manner in which needs and capacities are matched better requires a certain level of comfort between the regulatory institutions on both sides. That is an ongoing process. Canada’s interest in engaging with us in education is quite strong. And we recognize that it is also in our interest given Canada’s highly competent educational institutions. But the movement of people is always a complicated issue in today’s world, as you know, particularly skilled people because of issues of job displacement. So, managing this within the two contending ends of migration. policies and educational recognition of degrees is always a complex balancing act. But we have been encouraged by Canada’s willingness to talk to us on issues of this sort. So, let us see where this dialogue goes further.

Question: Are there any pending security issues? For instance Blackberry, is it a pending issue? Or is Blackberry something which is behind us now?

Joint Secretary (AMS): The dialogue vis-à-vis Blackberry was not directly raised with the Government of Canada. It is a major private sector operator. Whatever dialogue happens between their entity in India and the Home Ministry is happening in direct channels with the company. I am not aware of whether there are further issues that Home Ministry requires to raise with them at this stage.

Question: This is on super visa. Canadians have recently launched their super visa scheme and the Indian Canadians are up in arms against it. They call it super flop. They have several problems. One of the irritants is the fee structure is higher. And the insurance cover for the senior citizens is not there. So, is it going to be on the table? Are you going to seek any redressal in this regard?

Joint Secretary (AMS): I must be honest this has not been one of the issues that we have had currently on the agenda but certainly I can look into it and come back on this.

Question: Can you give us an update on the negotiations on the Indo-Canadian FTA? He is coming with a substantial trade delegation. Who are the other Ministers accompanying him? And why is he going to Bangalore and Chandigarh?

Joint Secretary (AMS): The question about why he is going where he is going is really probably best directed to his media advisor, not me. We are quite happy to have our visiting dignitaries travel to wherever they wish in our country. Bangalore is a quite often visited city. It has got nothing to do with the fact that I am from Bangalore. But, Chandigarh of course there is interest given the strong population of course I am sure of people of Punjabi origin. The visiting delegations tell us that they wish to go to x, y and z after Delhi, and it is fine with us usually. We have absolutely no comment on that to offer.

Your first question was, who are the Ministers? That is in our little press release. Basically the Cabinet Minister accompanying is Minister Edward Fast who is the Minister for International Trade, the Minister of State for Democratic Reforms Mr. Uppal, and Minister of State for Sport Mr. Gosal. Those are the Ministers accompanying.

Question: ...(Inaudible)...

Joint Secretary (AMS): I can hardly speak for the Government of Canada on how they allocate portfolios and what they call them. So, really on that one you have got me.
There was a question on the FTA. Actually it is not an FTA, it is a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) negotiation. The next round of negotiations will take place in the middle of this month in Canada. We are hopeful of moving forward in the next 12 to 18 months' time to actually conclude it. But negotiations are moving at a pretty fast pace now. I think there is great hope for forward movement on this.

Question: Is there any talk between India and Canada about the extraction of natural resources in the Arctic zone? China, Russia, America and Canada, all of them are interested in this kind of a race that is going on. Are we in talks with Canadians so far as this is concerned?

Joint Secretary (AMS): You are actually looking into Volume 2. Canada will chair the Arctic Council next year and it is an area which we definitely are hoping to talk to them about. So, during the visit let us see what kind of dialogue we can have on the subject.

Question: Vikram, what is the political component of this particular relationship? Is there a strategic element to it at all?

Joint Secretary (AMS): I am not too sure I follow the question. But in the sense of the political component being the quality of interaction between the leaders, I have just shown you how the scale of interaction has increased considerably. Our leaders have also had the opportunity to meet in a number of international fora. India and Canada are also co-chairs of a subgroup in the G20. On defence, we have been in dialogue with Canada. Canada’s defence structure is quite dissimilar from ours in the sense that it is entirely in the private sector pretty much. Even the equivalent of our DRDO is a corporation in Canada, it is DRDC. So, direct engagement in the form of state-to-state relationship is a little more difficult. It is also different from the United States which has a Foreign Military Sales Programme which is routed through the Department of Defence. So, in Canada the quality of partnership tends to be through private sector entities. But certainly we are interested in it - thank you for reminding me, I should have mentioned that - because defence technology in Canada, the quality and capacity in Canada is very high. So, it is an area in which we are engaging with them. We already have an MoU on cooperation on some parts of this. So, we look to taking this forward during the visit in fact.
482. Press Release on the call by the Prime Minister of Canada on President Pranab Mukherjee.

New Delhi, November 6, 2012.

The Prime Minister of Canada Mr. Stephen Harper called on the President Pranab Mukherjee today and held wide ranging discussions on bilateral and multilateral issues.

The President said that India and Canada share fundamental values as two inclusive democracies wedded to federalism, pluralism, individual liberty and human rights. He expressed happiness that Canada is home to 1.5 million people of Indian origin. The President invited Canada to be partner in India’s development, especially in the fields of energy, mineral resources, infrastructure and food security. The President said there is need to encourage more investment in both directions, from Canada in India’s infrastructure and from India, in Canada’s resources sector.

The President also said cooperation with Canada in the field of agriculture is crucial to India’s food security. India imports 40 percent of its pulses and 25 percent of its potash requirements from Canada. With India’s large and growing population, food security in the coming years is a strategic imperative for India and Canada can be an important partner in this regard.

The Canadian Prime Minister welcomed the President’s views and said there is need to focus on few areas and deepen the engagement between the two countries. He said India has needs which can be best served by Canada and for Canada, there is no emerging market more compatible than India to expand its engagement. He specially lauded the cooperation between India and Canada within the G-20 and said many important achievements have been made by the G-20 due to the joint leadership of the two countries.

Prime Minister’s statement to the media during the State Visit of Prime Minister of Canada Mr. Stephen Harper to India

New Delhi, November 6, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Harper,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the media,

It is my pleasure to extend a very warm welcome to Prime Minister Harper on his second visit to India. Since his last visit in 2009, our bilateral relations have seen a significant transformation. I am confident that our ties will be marked by increasingly beneficial cooperation in the years ahead.

Prime Minister Harper and I have conducted a comprehensive review of our wide-ranging partnership. We agreed to institute a Strategic Dialogue at the level of Foreign Ministers. We identified energy cooperation, particularly exports of Canadian oil and natural gas as well as renewable energy cooperation, as an area with enormous potential. A Ministerial-level energy dialogue will supplement the Strategic Dialogue and promote specific projects. We also welcomed the recent progress made towards concluding the modalities for the effective operationalization of the agreement on civil nuclear energy cooperation that we had signed in 2010.

There is active collaboration in high technology sectors between our scientific institutions. The Prime Minister and I agreed on the need to develop such linkages. The MOU that has just been signed between DRDO and York University is a welcome foray into bilateral defence technology cooperation, where Canadian prowess is widely acknowledged.

The large Indian origin community in Canada, and the people to people interaction this has fostered, has played a vital role in strengthening our relations. The Social Security Agreement that has been signed today will be of enormous benefit to many expatriate professionals in both countries.

Canada has traditionally been an important partner in our efforts to ensure food security. In this context, both sides have agreed to enhance cooperation in the field of agriculture.

Our economic cooperation is below its potential. The establishment of a bilateral CEOs Forum, and the commitment to a structured dialogue between our Commerce Ministers, will help our trade and economic interaction. We resolved to conclude negotiations for a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement within the next year. I assured the Prime Minister that India is committed to finalizing a Bilateral Investment Protection and Promotion Agreement, on which negotiations are underway. I also conveyed that India hopes to attract more Canadian investment in India, just as there has been a steady flow of Indian capital into Canada.

India and Canada are nations built on shared values that celebrate democracy, inclusiveness and diversity. We have similar concerns in combating terrorism, extremism and radicalism. The Prime Minister and I agreed to deepen our counter-terrorism cooperation. I conveyed to the Prime Minister our appreciation for Canada’s efforts in promoting peace and development in Afghanistan.

Our two countries have a common interest in the stability of the global financial system. We have a close and effective partnership in the G-20, where India and Canada co-chair the Working Group on a Framework for Strong, Sustainable and Balanced Growth. The Prime Minister and I agreed to intensify our coordination in international fora.

Prime Minister Harper’s visit is yet another milestone in our bilateral relations. It has been a pleasure working with him and I look forward to continuing our fruitful partnership.

Thank you.
Joint Statement on the occasion of the State visit of Stephen Harper, Prime Minister of Canada to India.

New Delhi, November 6, 2012.

The Prime Minister of Canada, The Right Honourable Stephen Harper, paid a State Visit to India from November 4-9, 2012, at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh. Prime Minister Harper was accompanied by Mrs. Laureen Harper and a high-level delegation comprising three Ministers, five Members of Parliament, two Senators, senior officials and business persons, including four members of the India-Canada CEO Forum. In addition to New Delhi, Prime Minister Harper visited Agra, Chandigarh, and Bengaluru (Bangalore). During his official engagements in New Delhi, Prime Minister Harper held bilateral consultations with Prime Minister Singh. He also called on the President of India, Shri Pranab Mukherjee, and the Vice President of India, Shri Hamid Ansari. Prime Minister Harper met the Leader of the Opposition Smt. Sushma Swaraj and the UPA Chairperson Smt. Sonia Gandhi.

The Prime Ministers held detailed discussions on bilateral issues and on regional and international issues of mutual interest. They noted the significance of the visit, marking the 65th Anniversary of the opening of the High Commission of Canada in India. The two Prime Ministers highlighted the strengthening of India-Canada relations, based on long-standing people-to-people ties and mutually-cherished values of democracy, tolerance, human rights, pluralism, freedom of religion and the rule of law.

The two leaders agreed on the imperative to forge a forward-looking relationship by deepening the bilateral engagement at a strategic level and better leveraging significant complementarities existing between the two countries in key areas of mutual interest such as: energy security; agriculture and food security; mineral resources; education; infrastructure development; and advanced civilian, defence and space technologies. Towards achieving this objective, they agreed to intensify their interaction through regular meetings, including dialogues on the margins of international meetings, and to institute an annual strategic dialogue between the two Foreign Ministers, supported by bilateral meetings among senior officials.

Energy and Mining

Both leaders agreed that a key area of focus should be enhanced cooperation in energy, in particular, joint efforts to develop capacities to maximize the utilization of energy resources ranging from oil and gas to new hydrocarbon resources such as oil sands, shale gas and other sources of energy including renewables. To take this forward and strengthen the bilateral dialogue, both leaders agreed to elevate the discussions to the Ministerial level, led by the Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission, on the Indian side and the Minister of Natural Resources on the Canadian side, and to explore the possibility of a Memorandum of Understanding in the field of oil and gas.

Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Harper welcomed the recognition of synergies between Canada’s developed natural resources sector and the growing demand for such resources and related technologies and services generated by India’s economic growth, in particular in mining and energy sectors, including liquefied natural gas. They welcomed ongoing bilateral collaboration under Memoranda of Understanding signed between India and Canada as well as with four of Canada’s provinces: British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec and Saskatchewan. They emphasized the need to further augment such engagement through long-term commercial investments, joint partnerships, technological cooperation and exchange of best practices in mining and energy sectors including oil, natural gas, renewables and energy efficiency.

Trade and Economy

The two leaders welcomed the substantial progress made towards finalizing a Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement and expressed their commitment to finalize the Agreement on a priority basis.

The two Prime Ministers welcomed the progress being made in negotiations on a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) and reaffirmed their desire to conclude it by the end of 2013.

The two leaders noted that bilateral trade, at its current level, did not reflect the true potential of the commercial relationship. The two leaders reiterated their shared desire to see bilateral trade reach $15 billion by 2015. They welcomed the two successful rounds of the Annual Trade Ministerial Dialogue and underlined the need to institutionalize the dialogue on a regular basis to boost bilateral trade and to realize the enormous potential for bilateral trade and investment flows. In this context, they welcomed the signature of significant commercial contracts and private sector agreements in the course of the visit as a demonstration of the benefits of even greater trade and economic cooperation and a further contribution to prosperity and economic development in both countries.

The two leaders also commended the convening of the first meeting of the India-Canada CEO Forum. The CEO Forum meeting was co-Chaired by Mr. Tom Jenkins (Executive Chairman and Chief Strategy Officer, Open Text Corporation) and Mr. Hari Bhartia (Co-Chairman & Managing Director, Jubilant Life Sciences). The co-Chairs presented to the two Governments, the CEO Forum’s preliminary views and action plan on measures to enhance bilateral trade and commercial relations.
The two Prime Ministers endorsed the decision to commence a Financial Sector Policy Dialogue at an early date, to facilitate mutual understanding of developments in the financial sectors of the two countries, and to discuss and coordinate positions on developments in global fora. Recognizing the sound health of Canada’s financial services sector and India’s requirement for large-scale investment capital, and the various steps taken by India towards further liberalizing foreign portfolio investment and easing regulations for external commercial borrowings by Indian companies, India invited Canada to consider investing in the Indian infrastructure sector and avail of the opportunities provided by Government divestment of shares in several Indian public sector enterprises. Recognizing the significance and dynamism of India’s economy, Canada encouraged India to consider providing increased opportunities for Canadian participation in the Indian financial sector.

The two leaders also welcomed the expansion of commercial cooperation between India and Canada, noting in particular the decision by Indian Farmers Fertilizer Cooperative Ltd to establish a urea project worth $1.2 billion in the Province of Quebec.

Science & Technology

The two leaders affirmed their support for the Canada-India Science and Technology Cooperation Agreement and acknowledged the increase in collaboration between the scientific communities of both countries. Recognizing the strategic importance of enhanced science and technology cooperation, the two leaders have tasked the Canada-India Joint Science and Technology Cooperation Committee, which meets in January 2013, to develop an Action Plan that would further strengthen the scope of this collaboration with the goal of promoting basic research, facilitating academic and industrial personnel exchanges, and accelerating technology commercialization.

The two Prime Ministers welcomed the completion of eight projects for research in cutting-edge areas of science and engineering, jointly funded by the Government of Canada and India’s Department of Science and Technology (through the DST-CII platform, GITA) and Department of Biotechnology. India also welcomed Canada’s initiative to award $13.8 million in grants to set up the Canada-India Research Centre of Excellence (CIRCE).

Information and Communication Technologies

The two Prime Ministers welcomed the signing of the Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) Memorandum of Understanding (MOU). They recognized the mutual benefit from cooperation in the Information Communication Technology and Electronics (ICTE) sector and stressed the need to establish a strong and effective business-to-business partnership and cooperation in this sector; to raise awareness among private and public sector stakeholders on ICTE opportunities in Canada and India; and to establish an ICTE Working Group to engage in a wide variety of ICTE Sector related issues.

Education

Recognizing that the number of Indian students studying in Canada has grown considerably over the past five years, with a total of more than 23,000 Indian students currently in Canada, and noting that over 300 Memoranda of Understanding exist between institutions of higher learning in India and Canada, the two leaders identified education as a key area of mutual interest and enhanced collaboration.

Canada welcomed the decision by the Indian Council of Cultural Relations to establish an India Research Chair in Humanities and Social Sciences at McGill University. Both sides also agreed to explore the possibility of convening an India-Canada Education Summit in India further to the Canada-India Education Summit in Canada in June 2011, with the objective of expanding cooperation between the educational institutions of the two countries.

Agriculture

Recognizing that Canada is a key supplier of India’s agricultural imports including pulses and fertilizers, Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Harper welcomed ongoing collaboration under the Memorandum of Understanding on Agriculture Cooperation. Recognizing the imperative of growing food demand in India and the salience of food security to India’s sustained future development and growth, both leaders reaffirmed the importance of intensifying bilateral collaboration in the area of agriculture and fertilizers. In this context, they underlined the need for closer cooperation in the area of fertilizers, especially potash, as well as dairy and agricultural production, processing, distribution and monitoring.

People-to-People Ties

Appreciating the contributions made to both societies by the community of more than one million Canadians of Indian origin, the two Prime Ministers emphasized the need to further energize bilateral people-to-people contacts and for the two Governments to work more closely to facilitate the orderly movement of people, in particular, students and professionals. They applauded the increased interaction between skilled professionals from India and Canada, and in this context, welcomed the signing of a Social Security Agreement to enable coordination of specific pension programmes in the two countries, for the benefit of working professionals, businesses, and retirees in both countries.

The two leaders welcomed the ongoing effort to update the 1982 bilateral Air Services Agreement. Recent amendments which are being applied on an administrative basis have already facilitated easier travel between India and Canada, permitting more flights to an expanded list of destinations and providing air carriers the flexibility to add new services, including cargo services, well into the future. Subject to a thorough legal review, the two sides also concluded updated Articles dealing with security and pricing to significantly ease regulatory requirements and allow air carriers on both sides to respond quickly to developments in the marketplace.

Audio-Visual Co-Production Treaty
Acknowledging the progress made in the ongoing negotiations for an Audio-Visual Co-production Treaty, the two Prime Ministers agreed that both sides would make their best endeavours to conclude the Treaty in 2013. They recognized that when finalized, the Treaty would contribute to both India’s and Canada’s economies and enhance trade between the two countries.

Space
The two Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction at the existing India-Canada space partnership, including astronomy and commercial activities in satellite launch services. Both sides expressed satisfaction at progress in developing an ultraviolet space telescope, soon to be flown in India’s Astrosat satellite. They agreed to explore further cooperation in the years ahead.

Defence
The two Prime Ministers congratulated the Defence Research Development Organization of India and York University of Canada for concluding a Memorandum of Understanding to develop collaboration in areas such as chemical-biological defence and the application of research in advanced materials and nanotechnology to defence. They also noted the growing opportunities for cooperation in defence, especially in the areas of research and training.

Security
Prime Minister Harper and Prime Minister Singh agreed to enhance bilateral security cooperation, including through a dialogue to be led by India’s National Security Council Secretariat and Canada’s Office of the National Security Advisor to the Prime Minister. Both countries agreed to work closely together to improve cyber security as well as broaden their dialogue and cooperation on cyberspace policy with the shared goal of an open and secure cyberspace which is increasingly essential to freedom of expression and economic growth. Condemning violent extremism in all its forms and committing to continue to counter global terrorism, they agreed that India and Canada would work together to address this challenge. The two Prime Ministers looked forward to a productive meeting of the Canada-India Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism that is scheduled to meet on November 29, 2012 in New Delhi.
The two Prime Ministers were pleased to note that Canada can now undertake its internal processes to enable early signing of the agreed Transfer of Offenders Treaty / Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons.

Regional and Global Issues

Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Harper affirmed that, as Co-chairs of the G-20 Framework for Strong, Sustainable and Balanced Growth Working Group, India and Canada have shared stakes in keeping the global recovery on track. The Prime Ministers highlighted their group’s important work in global economic cooperation, most recently through the Los Cabos Growth and Jobs Action Plan.

The two sides agreed on the need for greater effort to reform the Bretton Woods Institutions, key organs of the United Nations and other international institution. In this context, they noted progress made in the reform and renewal of the Commonwealth. Expressing their continued commitment to the Commonwealth’s values and principles, both sides reiterated the importance of democracy and development as the twin pillars of the Association’s strength.

The two leaders underlined their shared commitment to a world without nuclear weapons. They reaffirmed their support for global efforts for non-proliferation and elimination of all weapons of mass destruction. Canada acknowledged India’s strong non-proliferation record and expressed support for India’s ongoing engagement with the four multilateral export control regimes with the objective of India’s full membership of these regimes. In this regard, both sides agreed to hold regular official-level bilateral consultations on disarmament, arms-control and non-proliferation issues.

Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Harper underscored the considerable potential for mutually-beneficial civil nuclear cooperation, based on the early implementation of the 2010 Bilateral Agreement of Cooperation on Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy. The two Prime Ministers recognized that both countries were leaders in nuclear technology and services, and that the two countries could develop mutually-beneficial partnerships in this regard. They also recognized that Canada, with its large and high-quality reserves of uranium, could become an important supplier to India’s nuclear power programme. In this context, they welcomed the conclusion of negotiations on Appropriate Arrangement and looked forward to its early entry into effect, as well as to the inaugural meeting of the Joint Committee created under the Agreement.

The two Prime Ministers also discussed a range of international security matters of concern including the conflict in Syria, Iran’s nuclear program, and stability and economic recovery in Afghanistan.

The Prime Minister of Canada thanked the Prime Minister of India for the warm hospitality extended to him, Mrs. Laureen Harper and the accompanying delegation. He invited Prime Minister Singh and Mrs. Gursharan Kaur to visit Canada again. The invitation was duly accepted with gratitude.

Speech by Prime Minister at the banquet hosted in the honour of the Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

New Delhi, November 6, 2012.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Harper,

Madam Laureen Harper,

Distinguished Guests,

I and my wife are delighted to welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, and Madam Harper, on your second visit to India. We have very warm memories of our visit to Toronto in 2010. We are therefore glad to have this opportunity to reciprocate your very gracious hospitality on that occasion.

Mr. Prime Minister, we welcome you here as a friend and as an ardent advocate of closer ties between India and Canada. Your vision for this relationship and your sustained commitment to pursue it has placed our ties firmly on a growth path. You have worked not only to expand opportunities, but also to address concerns in our relationship. The civil nuclear agreement of June 2010 heralds a truly changed paradigm in our cooperation.

We also admire your stewardship of Canada at a time of great challenge for the global economy. Your contribution to the G-20 process and your efforts to deepen Canada’s global engagement, especially in the Asia-Pacific region, are noteworthy.

Your Excellency,

India and Canada have every reason to have a close partnership. We are defined by democracy and diversity. We face many similar challenges and we have a common interest in a peaceful and stable Asia Pacific region. Our economic synergies hold enormous potential for mutually beneficial partnerships. More than a million Canadians of Indian origin are a testimony to the values that our two societies deeply cherish. They form an enduring bridge of friendship between our two countries and I am pleased to see some of them here today.

Your Excellency,

At the dawn of India’s independence, Indian and Canadian leaders like Jawaharlal Nehru, Louis Saint Laurent and Lester Pearson defined a vision of great promise and potential for this relationship between our two countries. Subsequently, for reasons that we need not dwell on tonight, we were adrift for many years. Now, however, we have set a new course in our relationship.

I believe that we stand at the cusp of a historic moment in India-Canada relations. As we discussed today, exciting opportunities await us in diverse fields such as energy, education, agriculture, mining, science and technology, defence, counter-terrorism and the knowledge economy. As Governments, we should, in partnership with our institutions and businesses, seek to harness the full potential of our cooperation in these areas. I am confident that, with your visit today, we will add further momentum and purpose to the new and enriching journey that has already begun for our two countries.

With those words, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in raising a toast:
- to the health and happiness of Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Mrs Laureen Harper;
- to the continued growth of the India-Canada partnership; and
- to the happiness and prosperity of the friendly people of Canada.

Thank you.

New Delhi, November 29, 2012.

The 11th meeting of the Joint Working Group on Counter Terrorism between India and Canada was held in New Delhi on 29 November 2012. The meeting took place within the framework of the enhanced interaction in bilateral relations between India and Canada, and in keeping with the desire of the Prime Ministers of India and Canada towards greater cooperation in counter terrorism matters, as set out in the India-Canada Joint Statement of 6 November 2012.

The discussions were held in an atmosphere of trust and mutual understanding. The two countries shared their respective threat assessments and informed each other of the measures taken by their Governments to strengthen counter terrorism policy and structure. They also discussed the follow-up of the Mumbai terror attack of 26 November 2008.

The two sides also exchanged views on international developments, coordination in international fora and their bilateral cooperation in the area.

The delegations comprised of representatives from relevant Ministries and agencies of the two countries. The next meeting of the Joint Working Group will be held in Canada in 2013 on mutually convenient dates. The meeting was co-chaired by Mr. Asoke Kumar Mukerji, Special Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, India and Mr. Artur Wilczynski, Director General for International Relations, Canada.

488. Press Release on the visit of Cuban Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Rogelio Sierra Diaz.

New Delhi, August 8, 2012.

On the sidelines of the First India-CELAC Foreign Ministers Troika Meeting in New Delhi on August 7, 2012, His Excellency Mr. Rogelio Sierra Diaz, Vice Foreign Minister of Cuba met with Shri S.M. Krishna, Hon'ble Minister of External Affairs of India.

2. During the meeting, both sides reviewed the entire gamut of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction that bilateral interaction between India and Cuba encompassing the areas dealing with political; commercial and economic; energy; sports; science and technology; education and culture was progressing well. Both sides reiterated their desire to sustain and consolidate these relations.

3. Both sides noted that the total bilateral trade of US $ 40 million between India and Cuba did not correspond to the excellent bilateral ties. They emphasised that the trade turnover should be enhanced through concerted efforts and underlined that new opportunities for cooperation existed in the area of trade and investment.

4. The Cuban side appreciated the importance of the role played by the Indian Company OVL (ONGC Videsh Ltd.) in the field of petroleum exploration in Cuba and sought OVL’s continued engagement in Cuba in this area. The Indian side noted the Cuban interest.

5. The Indian side reiterated its offer of Lines of Credit announced during the visit of its Minister of External Affairs to Cuba in June 2012. The Cuban side expressed its gratitude for India’s continued economic and technical assistance to Cuba.

6. Regional and multilateral issues of mutual interest were discussed during the meeting. Both sides acknowledged their ongoing cooperation in various international fora. They expressed satisfaction over the convergence of views on various international issues of common concern.

8. Both sides emphasised the continued relevance of the Non-Aligned Movement in the current context of global relations and agreed to work towards the success of the forthcoming NAM Summit in Tehran.
9. India and Cuba expressed appreciation over the importance and significance of the First India-CELAC Troika Ministerial Dialogue and recalled the considerable opportunities available for mutually beneficial cooperation between India and CELAC both in a multilateral manner and bilaterally.

10. The Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs of Cuba thanked the Minister of External Affairs of India for the warm hospitality and the excellent arrangements made for him and his delegation during their stay in New Delhi.
TRINIDAD & TOBAGO

489. Media Briefing by Officer on Special Duty (External Publicity) on the ongoing visit of Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago.

New Delhi, January 5, 2012.

Officer on Special Duty (External Publicity) (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon everyone. As you are aware, today we will have a briefing on the visit of the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago. Before I begin I wanted to just inform you that we have with me a colleague, Mr. Dammu Ravi, Joint Secretary (Latin America & Caribbean), who will be there to answer any questions if you have specifically which I am not able to answer.

Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, Mrs. Kamla Persad-Bissessar, is on a state visit to India from January 5 to 14. This is the first state visit of the year and is also the first state visit by a woman Head of Government of Indian origin. So, it has a special resonance as far as we are concerned.

She is accompanied by several Ministers and two very prominent sporting Ambassadors who cricket lovers will instantly recognize. They are Brian Lara and Daren Ganga. For those of you who follow cricket these are household names.

During her visit to India, the Prime Minister will have discussions with our Prime Minister, and as is customary will call on the President and the Vice-President of India. External Affairs Minister will also meet her. The logistical details of these meetings will be provided separately to those of you who are interested.

Apart from her programme in Delhi, the visiting Prime Minister is expected to visit Jaipur for the Pravasi Bharatiya Divas as the Chief Guest; and will be conferred the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman award. She is also visiting her ancestral village in Buxar, Bihar; and will also visit Kolkata and Mumbai.

Our relations with Trinidad and Tobago are evolving in the context of the focus that we have on strengthening India’s relations with the Latin American and Caribbean region. In 2010 India’s trade with the Latin American and Caribbean region was US$ 23 billion and cumulative investments in that region were estimated to be about US$ 15 billion.

As regards Trinidad and Tobago itself, people-to-people interaction and exchanges constitute an important part of our bilateral relations. People of Indian origin constitute about 42 per cent of the population there, and are part and parcel of the economic, political and social fabric of the country. These historic and cultural linkages have become stronger with time. In 1966, we established the Mahatma Gandhi Institute of Cultural Cooperation in Port of Spain. The ICCR has also set up long-term Chairs on contemporary Indian studies and on Hindi. Indian cultural troupes regularly visit Trinidad and Tobago. The Government of Trinidad and Tobago, since January 2011, has relaxed visa requirements for Indian nationals for tourism and business purposes, if the period of stay does not exceed 90 days.

The outlook for bilateral trade between the two countries has considerable potential. Indian exports have grown exponentially from US$ 8.8 million in 2001 to approximately US$ 420 million in 2008-09. However, during the last two years bilateral trade has declined on account of shortfall of LNG exports of Trinidad and Tobago to India, and also due to global economic recession. Currently they stand around US$ 140 million in 2010-11. Indian exports include drugs and pharmaceuticals, iron and steel, petroleum products, IT services, auto components and gems and jewelry.

Trinidad and Tobago is rich in oil and gas resources and has the largest and most vibrant economy in the Caribbean. Indian companies have evinced interest in investing in gas and petrochemicals sector. India also offers 30 ITEC training slots annually to Trinidad and Tobago nationals for training in Indian institutions.

The visit of the Trinidad and Tobago Prime Minister was preceded earlier this year by the first Joint Commission meeting chaired by External Affairs Minister and his counterpart in November in New Delhi.

During the visit, as is customary, we expect several MoUs to be agreed upon and signed. The details of these will be provided in case any of you would require further information on that.

With that I close my opening remarks, except for one other mundane matter of information and that is, many of you know that External Affairs Minister will be visiting Israel and Palestine from 9th to 11th and we will have a separate background briefing on that before External Affairs Minister’s visit.

Thank you very much for the time provided. In case you have any questions, we will try to answer them.

Question: When is she meeting our Prime Minister?

Joint Secretary (Latin America & Caribbean) (Shri Dammu Ravi): On the 6th. That is tomorrow. She came today early in the morning. Tomorrow is the official day of engagements when she will call on the President, Vice-President, will hold talks with the Prime Minister; the External Affairs Minister will call on her.
Officer on Special Duty (XP): All her engagements in Delhi are tomorrow, and then she proceeds to Jaipur. So, her day of engagements in Delhi is tomorrow.

Question: In which areas are the MoUs likely to be signed?

Joint Secretary (LAC): There are five MoUs that have now been finalized. One is in culture, a CEP; one in technical education; two pertaining to Department of AYUSH - one is for technical cooperation in traditional medicine and the second one is for establishing an Ayurveda Chair in the University of West Indies; and the fifth is Bilateral Air Services Agreement.

Question: Is she going to Bihar? What are her engagements there?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): Yes, she will be in Bihar on January 11. She is to visit Bhelupur, that is her ancestral village. If you want all the details, we will provide them to you. It is a ten-day itinerary with various details, which we can surely provide to you.

Question: Can you tell us briefly the importance of the visit of the Prime Minister to India, the importance of the country itself?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): Let me try and summarise it. As I mentioned to you, she is the first woman of Indian origin to head a Government of a country. That by itself is an important issue that we have for the first time a woman of Indian origin heading a Government in another country visiting us. The second thing is in the Caribbean, which consists of several small states and island states, Trinidad and Tobago is the largest. It also has the most vibrant and open economy in that region. The third thing is that there are cultural and historical links between Trinidad and Tobago and us. And there are people of Indian origin who constitute a significant number there. And finally, there are increasing number of Indian companies who are interested in investing in the oil and natural gas sector in that country. Also, she is accompanied by seven Ministers in various areas. So, you would understand the areas of interest that they are interested in cooperating with India are vast. For all these factors we think that this is an important visit.

Question: What is their stand on the United Nations Security Council?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): They were supportive of India for the nonpermanent membership and they voted for us. As regards the permanent membership, many of the smaller countries constitute and work together as groups, and they work within what is called the CARICOM. It consists of various other countries in the region. CARICOM has a generic view on this rather than Trinidad and Tobago individually. They work within the parameters of that view in the United Nations.
Question: Are there any Indian oil companies already in collaboration with the companies there?

Joint Secretary (LAC): Already there are a few Indian companies which are present. ArcelorMittal is already there, they are in the steel, and they have been there for a long time. Essar is interested. They are in exploratory talks in terms of setting up units there. The Indraprastha Gas Limited (IPL) is also very much interested in talks. Reliance is interested to invest about a billion dollar in a bitumen plant. So, basically in oil, fertilizers, chemicals. And these are at the negotiations stage and we hope they will mature in course of time.

Question: Any agreements expected to be signed during the visit?

Joint Secretary (LAC): There are five MoUs and agreements put together to be signed. The details will be known only tomorrow. But I have already mentioned the two in the traditional medicine, one bilateral air services agreement, CEP and the EEP, technical education.

Question: Just want a clarification on the CARICOM stand on UNSC reforms. I believe they have only asked for expansion in the nonpermanent seats category or expansion in the permanent seats category with no veto.

Officer on Special Duty (XP): I am not aware of the update, but you are right that they are a group of small countries and for them the primary requirement is an expansion of opportunities for smaller countries to be represented more on the Security Council. So, you are right that their focus largely is on those areas which are of interest to them. However, as individual countries, many of them are not opposed to an expansion of the Security Council both in the permanent and nonpermanent category. But you are right that on the veto they have a fairly strong position.

Joint Secretary (LAC): They have also expressed their support for permanent membership for India.

Officer on Special Duty (XP): The Trinidad and Tobago, not the CARICOM.

Joint Secretary (LAC): Of course, all the CARICOM members have a united position. But I think Trinidad and Tobago has come out in the open to say that they will support India for the permanent membership.

Thank you very much.
Remarks by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh during the joint media interaction with Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago.

New Delhi, January 6, 2012

Your Excellency Prime Minister Ms. Kamla Persad Bissessar,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

It is an honour for me to welcome Prime Minister Kamla Persad Bissessar on her first State visit to India. Her visit has a special importance in our bilateral relations as Prime Minister Bissessar has the unique distinction of being the first woman Head of Government from the Indian Diaspora. She is also the Chief Guest of the Pravasi Bharatiya Divas this year.

Prime Minister Bissessar and I had very productive discussions. We have a complete meeting of minds on all issues, including on the future direction of our partnership.

We reiterated our intention to augment the scale of our bilateral trade and investment relations which presently do not correspond to the excellent political and people-to-people relations that our two countries enjoy. In this context, we agreed to encourage enhanced economic engagement between our business communities. We also decided to vigorously pursue the thrust areas for bilateral trade and investments identified by the Inter-Governmental Joint Commission in its meeting in November 2011. These include hydrocarbons and renewable energy, agriculture, IT and communications, hospitality, health, pharmaceuticals and tourism. We believe that mutually beneficial partnerships can be forged in all these areas.

I thanked Prime Minister Bissessar for waiving off visa requirement for the Indian passport holders. This measure will help in further development of our trade and tourism links. The Air Services Agreement that has been concluded today would also help strengthen these contacts.

Similarly we hope that cooperation in the Health sector, especially in Traditional Medicine, will receive a big push through the two MoUs that have just been signed.

Strong cultural and education links between our two countries provide the foundation for our relationship. The Technical Cooperation Agreement in the field of Education and the Cultural Exchange Programme signed today will facilitate greater academic and cultural exchanges.

We have also agreed to enhance our bilateral technical cooperation through exchange of experts. Towards this end, Government of India has agreed to enhance the annual ITEC scholarship slots for Trinidad and Tobago from current 30 to 50.

Prime Minister Bissessar and I also exchanged views on regional developments and multilateral issues. We share similar views on threats to international security from terrorism, piracy and drug trafficking. Further we agreed that the challenges of climate change and global economic situation should be addressed in a concerted manner with greater commitment from the developed world.

We also agreed to work closely on the reform of the United Nations. We deeply appreciate the support of Trinidad and Tobago for India’s Permanent Membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council.

I look forward to continuing to work together with Prime Minister Bissessar on further enhancing close friendship and partnership between India and Trinidad & Tobago for the benefit of our two peoples.

I invite Prime Minister Bissessar to make her remarks.

Krishna called on the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago. Prime Minister Ms. Kamla Persad-Bissessar and her delegation will also visit Jipur, Agra, Jodhpur, Kolkata, Buxar and Mumbai.

3. The Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago will be the Chief Guest at the Pravasi Bharatiya Divas in Jipur from January 7-9, 2012. The Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago is the first woman of Indian origin to become a Head of Government in the wider Diaspora which is a source of inspiration to the Diaspora. Prime Minister Ms. Kamla Persad-Bissessar will be conferred the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman Award in recognition of her contribution to the cause of the Diaspora in the development of relations between India and Trinidad and Tobago.

4. Prime Minister Ms. Kamla Persad-Bissessar will visit the Kolkata Memorial Monument from where her ancestors had set sail for Trinidad and Tobago in the middle of the 19th Century. She will also visit her ancestral village of Bhelupur in Buxar district of the State of Bihar.

5. Discussions between the Prime Minister of India and the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago were held in a warm and friendly atmosphere with full mutual understanding, characteristic of the close relations between the two countries. The official talks covered bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest.

6. The two sides expressed satisfaction that the bilateral interaction and partnership between India and Trinidad and Tobago encompassing political, economic, trade, investment, energy, tourism, agriculture, science & technology, medical, education and culture was progressing in a positive direction. At the same time, the Leaders of the two sides noted that there was considerable potential towards further development and consolidation of the historical relations between the two countries and agreed to work together for further enhancement of the multi-faceted relations to a higher level. Leaders recalled that the bilateral relations between India and Trinidad and Tobago were anchored on shared democratic values, respect for human rights, mutual understanding and cooperation and a similarity of views on major international issues.

7. During the visit, the following Agreements were concluded: a Bilateral Air Services Agreement; an MoU on Cooperation in Traditional Indian Medicine; an MoU on setting up of a Chair on Ayurveda in the University of West Indies; Programme of Cultural Exchanges and; Technical Cooperation Agreement in the field of Education.

8. Prime Ministers of India and Trinidad and Tobago highly appreciated the results of the first meeting of the Joint Ministerial Commission on Trade and Economic Cooperation between the two countries which was held at the Foreign Ministers level in November 2011 in New Delhi. They welcomed the results of the Ministerial Joint Commission which is an important institutional framework for providing a direction to the development of bilateral cooperation.

Trade, Economic and Investment

9. The two sides expressed satisfaction at the growing engagement between India and Trinidad and Tobago in trade and investments. They noted that bilateral trade has a vast potential which needs to be tapped with renewed efforts by encouraging participation in each other's trade fairs, business seminars and conclaves and exchange of business delegations. They agreed to diversify trade and investments to prospective areas such as conventional and renewable energy, SMEs, ICT, Pharmaceuticals & Medical equipments and consumables, Health, Wellness Tourism, Ayurveda, Entertainment, Shipping among others.

10. The Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago welcomed the announcement by the Indian side to increase the number of ITEC scholarships from the current number of 30 to 50 commencing the year 2012.

Energy

11. The two sides noted that the importance of energy security to cater to their development needs. They reiterated their interest to collaborate in the energy sector for a mutually beneficial partnership. In this context, they noted Trinidad and Tobago's strength in the energy sector and the possibilities for closer technical and commercial cooperation between the two countries in this regard. Both sides welcomed the fact that Indian companies from the public and private sectors have expressed interest in investing in Trinidad and Tobago.
They agreed that at the invitation of Trinidad and Tobago, an Indian delegation led by the Minister of Petroleum and Natural Gas would visit Trinidad and Tobago in the near future to further concretise areas of mutually beneficial cooperation.

12. The two sides expressed support for closer bilateral interaction in the utilisation of renewable and alternative sources of energy and appropriate technologies as a basis for sustainable development and as part of the global effort in addressing the challenges of Climate Change.

Information Technology

13. Both sides noted the growing importance of Information and Communications Technology as a powerful catalyst in the development of their economies. The Trinidad and Tobago side expressed its keenness to transform its country into an inter-connected, technologically advanced society with modern information and communication systems for economic growth and social progress. They expressed their interest for partnership with the Indian IT sector in the development of an Information Technology Park which will drive innovation, conception and design of efficient technologies. The Indian side agreed to encourage the Indian IT sector, both public and private, to collaborate with Trinidad and Tobago in its endeavour to develop an efficient IT industry.

Health Sector

14. The Trinidad and Tobago side expressed its interest to develop Trinidad and Tobago as a hub of medical and healthcare tourism in their region. The Indian side agreed to assist Trinidad and Tobago in this endeavour. The Indian side also agreed to develop the Indian system of traditional medicine, especially Ayurveda in Trinidad and Tobago. The Trinidad and Tobago side welcomed the Indian proposal to set up a Chair in Ayurveda in the University of West Indies.

Education

15. Both sides expressed their interest to intensify educational linkages, especially in the technical and higher education areas through use of IT enabled services such as e-Education. In this regard they underscored that the bilateral Technical Cooperation Agreement in the field of education would facilitate closer academic ties.

Tourism

16. Both sides recognised that the vast tourism potential in each other’s countries needs to be fully realised through cooperation in training in travel and hospitality sectors and though greater tourist exchanges between the two countries. They noted that the Bilateral Air Services Agreement signed during the visit would facilitate better air connectivity between the two countries and help in the people-to-people exchanges and trade. The Indian side appreciated the decision of the Government of Trinidad & Tobago for according visa waiver facility to Indian citizens for a period of 90 days. Both sides recognised that this will further enhance business and tourist movement between the two countries.

Films

17. The Trinidad and Tobago side underlined the growing importance of its creative industry, notably in the areas of Fashion, Film and Animation. They invited India’s participation in the development of these areas through transfer of technology, investment and training. It was agreed to explore mutually beneficial opportunities in these sectors through institutional linkages and involvement of Bollywood production units.

Arts and Culture

18. Both sides recognised that the historical and cultural linkages between the two countries are being further strengthened through the Mahatma Gandhi Centre for Cultural Cooperation in Port of Spain set up in 1996. The Trinidad and Tobago side expressed its appreciation for the active role of the Indian Council for Cultural Relations in the promotion of Indian culture and arts through various activities as well as through setting up of Chairs on Contemporary Indian Studies and Hindi. Both sides expressed satisfaction at the conclusion of the Cultural Exchange Programme (CEP) for the period 2012-14 noting that it will give fresh impetus to the existing cultural ties.

International Developments and Multilateralism

19. The two sides exchanged views on a broad range of regional and international issues of mutual interest. They discussed developments in South Asia and the Caribbean region. They reaffirmed their commitment to fight hunger and poverty, promote democratic values and foster economic development and emphasised the importance of implementing the Millennium Development Goals.

20. The two sides emphasised the central role of the UN in maintaining global peace and security; promoting the economic and social advancement of all people; and for meeting global threats and challenges. Both sides expressed the need to implement the process of UN reforms to make it more representative, legitimate and effective. They agreed that any expansion and restructuring of the Security Council must reflect contemporary realities, increased transparency and democracy and include developing countries in both categories of membership. The Trinidad and Tobago side reiterated its support for India’s permanent membership in an expanded UNSC.

21. Both sides strongly condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and agreed to cooperate in the international communities' joint endeavour in eliminating the menace of international terrorism. They also noted their cooperation in the UN in this regard and urged the international community to adopt a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism at the earliest.

22. The two sides recognised that Climate Change is a global challenge with strong economic, environmental and social dimensions. It impacts all countries, but is particularly severe for developing countries, given their vulnerabilities, inadequate means and limited capacities to adapt to its effects. They called on developed countries to take the lead in mitigation efforts and provide the necessary means of implementation, including financial and technological support.

23. The two sides expressed deep concern over the international economic and financial crisis and agreed that the current situation demands restructuring of the international financial and monetary system. They underlined that the voice of emerging and developing economies, in the international financial and monetary system, should be heard in order to avoid new and potentially more calamitous crises in the future and contribute to the inclusive growth.

24. The Prime Minister of Republic of Trinidad and Tobago sincerely thanked the Prime Minister of the Republic of India for the warm hospitality extended to her and the accompanying delegation. She invited the Prime Minister of India to pay a State Visit to Trinidad and Tobago. The invitation was duly accepted.
Response of Official Spokesperson on the question of depiction of map of India on the US State Department website.

New Delhi, January 4, 2012.

“The Government is aware of the gross inaccuracies, in the map of India, on the US State Department website. The Government has consistently rejected incorrect depiction of India’s borders on maps used by the US Government. It has used every opportunity to convey to the US side its concern in this regard, and has asked that these maps be corrected. We shall reiterate our position to the US.

The Government takes this opportunity to reaffirm that the entire State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and has consistently conveyed to the international community that maps of India should depict the boundaries of our country correctly.”
Dr. John Hamre,

Ambassador Karl Inderfurth,

friends,

Dr. Hamre, thank you for your kind words of introduction and for setting the stage so eloquently for a discussion on India-U.S. relations. It, indeed, is a great honour and privilege be hosted at the Statesmen’s Forum at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a center of great eminence and scholarship, and one that now has a special link to India through the CSIS Wadhwani Chair for India-U.S. Policy studies.

I am fairly sure that I am here purely as a guest – as I am no statesman. Particularly not in Truman’s definition. But I am returning to Washington DC - more than 25 years after I had done a three-year tour of duty at our Embassy here. Besides the iconic architectural marvels of this city and the reassuringly familiar feel of the Embassy Row, much has changed in this city. The K-street is much richer now. And yet much remains as it was particularly the vigour of your debates, and the fact that they encompass the entire globe.

While change is a constant companion of time, it is also true that since the mid eighties, the world has seen more profound political, economic, technological and strategic changes than we would normally expect in a period of two or three decades. Yet through these changes the significance of the US has not altered. But India’s ongoing transformation and the new India-U.S. relationship are both part of what has changed, and both can have a considerable impact on the shape of the world in the 21st century.

When I returned to Delhi last July to prepare for my current assignment, I had the good fortune to begin with the second India-U.S. Strategic Dialogue, which Ambassador Nirupama Rao, then our Foreign Secretary, was coordinating so ably. I was struck by the depth and diversity of our partnership; the comfort and candour in our dialogue; and, the extensive support it enjoyed across a broad spectrum of public opinion, particularly among those looking to the future. Some of us are absorbed with the present which is of course a bridge to the future, but it became evident to me that what was perhaps unprecedented and novel in our relationship ten years ago is even right now part of the normal and the routine. There are many here who have experienced or participated in that change, and few would understand it as well as Karl Inderfurth, who was handling this account at critical times.

We spent the first decade of this century in building this relationship – addressing the constraints of the past and laying the foundation for the future. It was an ambitious enterprise that required great political investment in both countries. And, even as our relationship has matured, it continues to be infused with dynamism and momentum.

In the year since President Obama’s visit to India in November 2010, we have sustained an unprecedented level of bilateral engagement, launched new strategic consultations that cover key regions of the world; begun our first trilateral consultation with Japan; advanced our cooperation on non-proliferation and nuclear security; deepened counter-terrorism and intelligence cooperation; launched a new Homeland Security Dialogue; made steady progress in our partnership on export controls, non-proliferation and nuclear security; concluded the largest defence deal yet in our bilateral relations, sustained exercises and broadened defence strategic dialogue; taken forward the incipient cooperation for development in third countries, especially Africa; held a very successful Higher Education Summit in Washington DC; and, made innovation driven progress in areas such as clean energy, food security and healthcare. We resumed negotiations on a Bilateral Investment Treaty and expanded opportunities for economic cooperation through measures like the Infrastructure Debt Fund and tariff reductions on products with potential for bilateral trade.

Indeed, I do not think that we have had as much convergence, or spoken more transparently and extensively with each other, as we do now on some of the most important issues in our engagement: terrorism, and key regional issues, Afghanistan, Myanmar and the future of Asia Pacific.

These developments would constitute a remarkable year in any bilateral relationship. Yet, there are, in both countries, questions about the state and the direction of our relationship. Some of this, as we all realize, comes from the fact that the relationship no longer derives its intensity and excitement from the pursuit of one transformational idea, and has matured into a solid, broad-based relationship. There are, of course, tangible issues – in the U.S., worries about the commercial implementation of the civil nuclear agreement and lingering disappointment with one major defence contract; in India – there is wariness that relationship may be turning transactional, with an emphasis on immediate returns rather than upward trends. There is anxiety about protectionist trends in the U.S., especially in the IT industry that has been the bridge between our two economies so far. And, in both countries, developments in West Asia have raised questions whether our approaches, if not interests, are consistent, at least in the immediate future. It is important to address these issues.
As Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh said, the India-U.S. civil nuclear initiative is a symbol, instrument and platform of a transformed India-U.S. relationship. We are committed to translating the success of our diplomatic partnership in changing the global nuclear order into an equally productive commercial cooperation in civil nuclear energy. We have the reality of our law passed by our Parliament. And, as we have said before, we will provide a level playing field to U.S. companies, and are prepared to address specific concerns of U.S. companies within the framework of that law. We have remained engaged and must now take practical steps to advance our cooperation, as we have done over the past year. We have just had a round of discussions between our legal experts. The commencement of discussions between the Indian operator, NPCIL, and U.S. companies in regard to an Early Works Agreement is an encouraging development.

Our defence procurement in India has to be based on the best techno-economic choice, in accordance with procurement guidelines, and it must also meet the test of Parliamentary scrutiny on procurement process – an obligation not unfamiliar to you in Washington DC. It also bears repeating that our defence trade has gone from negligible levels a few years ago to a cumulative value of USD 9.0 billion in the last four-five years, and is set to expand further. On both sides, we are making continuous progress in understanding each other’s procurement and approval process; extending our engagement from simple trade to technology transfer and joint research, development and production.

Our dialogues on regional issues have been expanding. Let me start with the developments in West Asia in 2011 which may have taken us all by surprise. In our discussions we were all trying to comprehend the underlying causes and the forces involved, and striving to grasp the consequences and sense the outcomes of changes that generated both hope and concerns in a region of global significance. Six million Indians live in that region; they constitute the largest expatriate group and obviously their welfare is matter of high priority. The region is critical for our economy, contributing over a 100 billion dollars by way of export markets, over 40 billion dollars in remittances and more than two-third of our petroleum imports. This in a country dependent on imports for 75% of its oil consumption. Peace and stability and a climate of moderation in the region are absolutely vital for India.

We not only have strong political and economic ties with countries in the region, but also enjoy a warm relationship with their people. Since before the time when India became one of the earliest destinations for the three great religions from West Asia, India and the West Asian countries have shared close and natural ties as neighbours. Ties of religion continue to bind us. India has always had and will remain sensitive to the interests, aspirations and rights of the people in West Asia. And, we do expect that their governments, too, will respect their rights and respond to their aspirations. However we look at the developments there, we are all united by the desire for peace and stability in the region and we must seek to forge the broadest possible consensus on our collective response. It also follows from our stakes in the region that we do not wish to see the spread of nuclear weapons in West Asia. India’s position on the question of Iran’s nuclear programme is well known and our votes in IAEA speak for themselves. We believe that while Iran has rights to peaceful uses of nuclear energy, it must also fulfill its international obligations as a non-nuclear weapon state under the NPT. We would like to see the issue resolved peacefully through negotiations. We also hope that negotiations between P5+1 and Iran would resume soon and contribute to a positive outcome. Iran is our near neighbor, our only surface access to Central Asia and Afghanistan, and constitutes a declining but still a significant share - currently under 10% - of our oil imports. For us, there are also broader and long term geo strategic concerns that are no different from what we face elsewhere in the Asia-Pacific region. Our relationship with Iran is neither inconsistent with our non-proliferation objectives, nor is it in contradiction with the relationships that we have with our friends in West Asia or with the United States and Europe.

These are important, even if difficult, issues and one of the heartening aspects of India-U.S. relationship has been that we are able to discuss them respectfully and candidly, with a sense of appreciation of each other’s perspectives, and a recognition, I believe, that while the choices that each makes may have a bearing on the other, they are not directed against each other.

Beyond that, we continue to be guided by the larger vision for our strategic partnership and the value of all that our two sides have built together. In India, we are confident that the long term framework of our partnership will continue to become stronger and more broad-based. Let me highlight the priorities. India and the United States can and must strengthen their economic partnership. The flow of trade in goods and services, and investments in both directions has grown several times in the past two decades. Today we have almost $40 bn of US imports, both goods and services. Indian businesses have invested perhaps 26 bn in the US in 5 years. All this has created new job openings in the US. It is also natural that as the Indian economy continues to grow and modernize, as the U.S economy recovers its momentum and as the global economic situation improves, our trade and investment relations will surge to higher levels. India’s planned infrastructure spending of USD 1.0 trillion in the next five years; the modernization of our agriculture sector; our shift to clean energy; the implementation of the civil nuclear agreement; the burgeoning defence trade; cooperation in higher education; and, the growing ability of the Indian companies to compete in the U.S. market could take our economic ties to an entirely new level.
We remain committed to pursuing economic reforms in India in their broadest sense. The debate in India is not a question only about economic growth, efficiency and openness, but about equity, empowerment and opportunities for a large section of the population, which feels left behind during the country’s two decades of rapid economic growth.

We are of course affected by the international debate on globalization and its discontents. We do hope the current economic challenges in the US would not lead to protectionism and that concerns of Indian IT industry will be addressed quickly. NASSCOM estimates that Indian industry employs over 100,000 in the US up from 20,000 six years ago. It supports 200,000 other jobs including indirect ones, apart from enhancing the competitiveness of some US industries. Most Indian companies are setting up development centers. Indian IT industry contributed $15 billion in taxes over the last 5 years. This success story should not be set back by stringent visa regulations which act as a non tariff barrier. According to a back of envelope calculation – Indians paid over $200 million in visa fees. Perhaps $30-$50 million has been taken from young aspiring Indians working in businesses whose US visas were rejected. The pink slip has become a greenback! It needs reiteration that the targets of these discriminatory actions are precisely those who have contributed intellectually to the climate of reform in India, and who have been votaries of strong India-US relations.

As our economic ties deepen, we will obviously have a growing range of policy and regulatory concerns with each other. But, we have in place an elaborate set of bilateral mechanisms to address them. While we should expeditiously conclude a Bilateral Investment Treaty, we must look beyond it, too. The United States is the only advanced economy in the world with which India has not concluded or is pursuing a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement.

So, we should not only focus on expanding trade and investment, but also use the power of innovation to make our economies global leaders in the 21st century, and at the same time, address the needs of the poorest sections of the population in the world and find solutions to the challenges of clean energy, food security, health, education. It is gratifying that we have powerful examples of innovative India-U.S. partnerships, often forged by the youth of our two countries. Initiatives like the S&T Forum, S&T Endowment Fund, the Joint Clean Energy Research Center and the Singh Obama Knowledge Initiative, the Nehru-Fulbright Programme, are collaborative ventures of great importance. The enthusiastic response in both countries to these mechanisms demonstrates the enormous potential for collaboration between our two countries.

Energy security is of such vital economic and strategic significance for us that we must treat it as a priority in itself. We have a number of financial, technological and exploratory initiatives with the U.S. in clean and renewable energy, and energy conservation and efficiency. And, as part of our wide-ranging official energy dialogue, we also plan to launch a dialogue to share experiences and perspectives on low carbon growth. I believe that we also need to build on the potential for increasing natural gas production in India. This energy source could be a significant bridge to a future based on clean energy. In the transition period, we have to balance our requirements for massive industrial, infrastructural and transport growth without expanding our carbon footprint excessively.

We must also extend the benefit of our cooperation to other countries, building on our incipient cooperation on food security in Africa or the Open Government Platform that we are developing jointly for application in other interested countries. We must do this not merely as a moral imperative of making economic development more broad-based and inclusive globally, but also for the strategic reason of promoting stability and security in vulnerable parts of the world, and to underline the strength of our democratic and liberal values.

Our partnership is important for building a stable, prosperous and secure Asia-Pacific region - or, as some here have begun to call it, the Indo-Pacific region. This is a region of unprecedented transitions and unsettled questions, but what is clear to most us is that many of the greatest opportunities as well as challenges of the 21st century lie in this region. India’s engagements with Southeast and East Asia, and, increasingly, the Pacific, have expanded over the past two decades. It is an engagement characterised by strong bilateral ties extending from Myanmar to Australia; deepening linkages with regional organisations, especially ASEAN; a web of comprehensive economic partnership agreements and ambitious plans of surface and air connectivity. While our Look East Policy began with a strong economic emphasis and content, we now have growing strategic and security engagement in the region.

China is our largest neighbour, a major country in the Asia-Pacific region and a country with great global influence. We have considerable challenges in our relationship, but also enormous opportunities for mutually beneficial partnership at the bilateral and global levels. We will continue to invest in building a stable and cooperative relationship with China that is mutually beneficial, and also a source of regional stability and prosperity. There are a number of global and regional challenges on which India, China and the United States must work together. We welcome the proposal Secretary Clinton made last July in Delhi for a trilateral dialogue between India, China and the United States.

The Indian Ocean is central to India’s economy and its security, and it is also a region of growing global strategic attention. India does not want to see this ocean emerge as a contested common or remain vulnerable to natural disasters, piracy or instability in coastal or littoral states. For this reason, we not only have robust bilateral economic and security relationships in the region, but through regional initiatives like Indian Ocean Naval Symposium and the IOR-ARC, we are seeking to promote comprehensive economic cooperation.

Maritime security, more broadly, has emerged as a key national security priority. We believe that maritime security requires, first and foremost, a collective affirmation of the principles of freedom of navigation, unimpeded commerce and peaceful settlement of maritime disputes, in accordance with international law. This must be an important priority for regional diplomatic and political efforts, and it is an area of growing importance in the India-U.S. relationship.

The future of Afghanistan and Pakistan will continue to engage our two countries. Their future is inseparable from the destiny of India and our region, and, therefore, India has a vital stake in their stability and progress. With Pakistan, we will continue our endeavour to seek a peaceful, cooperative and normal relationship.

Over the past year, India and the U.S. have had close consultation and coordination on our shared vision of a stable, democratic and prosperous Afghanistan. It is a vision that can ultimately only be realised by the people of Afghanistan, but they need the support, assistance, facilitation and sustained commitment of the international community. The quest for a settlement in Afghanistan must ensure that the enormous sacrifices and efforts of the past decade are not in vain; it must build on the progress and change that Afghanistan has experienced in the last ten years; and, it must embrace all sections of Afghan society, including women and minorities.

Any landlocked country’s fortunes are linked with its neighbours; in the case of Afghanistan, it is even more so. So, we believe that Afghanistan’s regional economic integration - whether we describe it as the New Silk Road Initiative or as Ambassador Rao has called it, the Grand Trunk Road Initiative, or by any other name - it is important for Afghanistan’s and the wider region’s stability and prosperity.

India’s commitment to Afghanistan is reflected in our Strategic Partnership Agreement of October 2011; our two billion dollars of assistance; our support for building Afghan capacity for governance, security and development; Afghanistan’s preferential access to the Indian market and our efforts to improve its connectivity to the world; our commitment to invest in Afghanistan’s mining sector; and our willingness to use regional cooperation frameworks with the other neighbours of Afghanistan including Pakistan and Iran. We should also explore avenues for collaboration between India and the U.S., with others such as Japan, for Afghanistan’s development, including through development of its natural resources.

Terrorism remains a major security challenge for India and the U.S.: Our convergence on the source and the nature of the threat, emanating from India’s.
neighbourhood, has never been greater; and, our cooperation on combating and protecting our people from terrorism has never been stronger than today. This is a very important aspect of our relationship, with a strong public resonance, and one that we must continue to strengthen in all its dimensions.

We should continue to further strengthen our growing partnership in leading international efforts on non-proliferation, disarmament and pursuing the goals of Nuclear Security Summit. India was pleased to host the Sherpas meeting of the Nuclear Security Summit in January.

We must also continue to work together to reform and adapt the global architecture of governance, security and non-proliferation to reflect contemporary realities and enable our two countries to work together more effectively for our shared interests.

Taken together, this is a rich and broad canvas of priorities that also address some of the core interests of India and the United States. The question that is often asked is whether our two sides can translate our shared goals into a sustained and effective strategy of engagement and cooperation.

India’s enduring commitment to strategic autonomy is a reflection of its democratic tradition and a conscious policy given our external environment and national development goals. But, it does not mean that India will not assume its international responsibility, nor is it mutually exclusive to building a strong strategic partnership. Indeed, it is natural that our shared values and the wide range of convergent interests will lead to deepening partnership of shared endeavours.

However, given our different circumstances, history, location and levels of development, we will occasionally have differing perspectives and policies. But, this can be a source of great value and strength in our dialogue; and, it also enables us to work together for a broad global consensus on issues of common interest. But, for that, we should attach real value to each other’s perspectives and appreciate each other’s interest and sensitivities; and, when we differ, we should be able to speak candidly and respectfully to each other, and insulate the vast common ground between us from the differences in our relationship.

We must remember that while we may have occasionally different perspectives, we are also united by a fundamental stake in each other’s success, because in succeeding individually, we can advance our common interests and inspire a world mirrored in our ideals.

And, even if our two governments did nothing, it would still be an extraordinary relationship, because of the growing ties of kinship between our people and the vitality of private partnerships of enterprise, innovation, research and education across every field of human endeavour.
But, I believe that we have the political momentum, public goodwill, a comprehensive architecture of engagement, comfort and confidence in the relationship, the experience of bold and ambitious undertakings, a proven capacity to work through challenges and, as we have seen in recent years, a growing habit of taking tangible steps on a regular basis to advance our cooperation.

So, as I look ahead, we will continue to consolidate and affirm our strategic partnership, by completing existing projects and focusing on the wealth of new opportunities that we have. We should continue to stay in close touch on the current challenges in the world, in our neighbourhood and beyond. And, we should, above all, continue to strengthen and expand the long-term strategic framework of our relationship, so that we can fully harness the boundless opportunities that this relationship has for our people and the substantial benefit that it can bring to this world.

Thank you.
494. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Foreign Secretary to Washington D.C.

New Delhi, February 14, 2012.

Shri Ranjan Mathai, Foreign Secretary, visited Washington D.C. from 6-8 February 2012. In addition to co-chairing the annual Foreign Office Consultations with U.S. Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs Wendy Sherman, he called on Deputy Secretary of State William Burns; Secretary of State Hillary Clinton also joined the meeting briefly. He also met Deputy National Security Advisor Denis McDonough, Deputy National Security Advisor for International Economic Affairs Michael Froman, Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan Marc Grossman, Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs Robert Hormats, Under Secretary of State for Global Affairs Maria Otero, Under Secretary of State for Arms Control and Non-Proliferation Ellen Tauscher and Under Secretary for Commerce Eric Hirschhorn.

2. Foreign Secretary also had wide ranging meetings in the U.S. Congress, including with Representative Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, Chairman, House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Howard Berman, Ranking Member, House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Mike Rogers, Chairman, House Permanent Select Intelligence Committee; Senator Richard Lugar, Ranking Member, Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator John McCain, Ranking Members, Senate Armed Services Committee; and, Senator Joseph Lieberman, Chairman, Senate Homeland Security Committee. Rep Steve Chabot, Chairman, and Rep Gary Ackerman, Ranking Member, of the House Sub-committee on Middle East and South Asia, and Representative Dana Rohrabacher also joined the meeting with HFAC Chair.

3. Shri Mathai delivered an address on “Building on Convergences: Deepening India-U.S. Strategic Partnership” in the Statesmen’s Forum at Central for Strategic and International Studies on 6 February 2012.

4. During the visit, the two sides reaffirmed the India-U.S. global strategic partnership and reiterated the commitment of their governments to further strengthen and expand the relationship. They reviewed bilateral relation and expressed satisfaction with progress in their engagement across the full spectrum of bilateral agenda, including in political and strategic consultations; defence, counterterrorism, intelligence and homeland security; trade and investment; energy, including in civil nuclear energy; science, technology and innovation; higher education; high technology trade; and, people-to-people ties. The two sides discussed ways to further deepen bilateral ties and plan for the third round of India-U.S. Strategic Dialogue, co-chaired by External Affairs Minister and U.S. Secretary of State, which is to be held in Washington D.C. in the summer of 2012.
5. Foreign Secretary’s meetings in the U.S. Administration and Congress also provided an opportunity for discussion on multilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest.
495. Response of Official Spokesperson to reports about stationing of US Special Forces personnel in India.

New Delhi, March 2, 2012.

“The U.S. Government has neither sought nor has the Government of India approved stationing of U.S. Special Forces personnel in any capacity in India. The two countries occasionally conduct short duration Special Forces exercises in India and the U.S. in the context of their counter-terrorism cooperation and capacity building.”

**********

The Ministry of External Affairs and the Defence Ministry were responding to media reports of a March 2 statement of a top Pentagon general that crack U.S. military troops were based in India besides Nepal, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and the Maldives to counter threats from organisations such as the Lashkar-e-Taiba. Coming up with the denials after U.S. Pacific Command (Pacom) chief Admiral Willard made the claim in a prepared statement at a U.S. Congressional hearing, the MEA said India interacted with the American Special Forces only during joint exercises here and abroad while the Defence Ministry asserted that U.S. special forces teams have never been stationed in India in the past, nor are such teams stationed in the country presently. “We have currently special forces assist teams — Pacific assist teams is the term — laid down in Nepal, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Maldives, as well as India,” Admiral Willard had told the Congressional hearing in response to a question on co-operation with India on counter-terrorism issues.
496. Joint Media Conference by External Affairs Minister and US Secretary of State.

New Delhi, May 8, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good morning, ladies and gentlemen of the media. I welcome you to this media interaction. As is usual, we will begin with brief opening remarks.

I now invite the External Affairs Minister of India Shri S.M. Krishna to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S.M. Krishna): Madam Secretary, it is a great pleasure to welcome you back to Delhi. I am glad that you decided to visit India on your way back to Washington DC. This is a sign of our close friendship.

It also underscores the importance of regular consultations between our two Governments at a time of enormous challenges and far-reaching changes taking place in the world.

Secretary Clinton and I reviewed the entire gamut of our bilateral relations. We expressed satisfaction with the progress in our relationship and are optimistic about the future. The emerging global trends only reinforce our shared conviction in the importance of this relationship for the future of our two countries and the shape of the world in this century.

We have an extraordinary frequency and depth in our dialogue and engagement. We continue to make tangible progress across virtually every area of bilateral cooperation. We expressed hope that our economic relationship, which is very important to both countries, would grow much faster and realise its enormous potential.

There are issues on both sides. I did convey our concerns about the continuing difficulties on mobility of professionals, especially for our IT companies, and protectionist sentiments in the U.S. with regard to global supply chain in services industry. I want to thank Secretary Clinton for her personal attention to the welfare of Indians and Indian students in the U.S.

Secretary Clinton and I also had a good discussion on the path to fostering commercial cooperation in civil nuclear energy. I assured her of India’s commitment to provide a level-playing field to all U.S. companies, within the framework of national law and our international legal obligations. We were pleased that US companies are engaged in substantive discussions with the Indian operator, Nuclear Power Corporation of India Limited. We hope that they will make early progress towards contractual steps.
Our strategic consultations have a global character, with convergence of views on a range of global and regional issues.

We discussed our vision for Afghanistan. We stressed the need for sustained international commitment to build Afghan capacity for governance, security and economic development, and to support Afghanistan with assistance, investment and regional linkages. Recent attacks in Kabul highlight once again the need for elimination of terrorist sanctuaries in the neighbourhood and the need for stronger action from Pakistan on terrorism, including on bringing to justice the perpetrators of Mumbai terrorist attack. We also discussed our respective relations with Pakistan.

I conveyed our vital stakes in peace and stability in the Gulf region and wider West Asian region, given the six million Indians who live there and the region’s importance to our economy.

We also discussed the importance of peaceful settlement of the Iranian nuclear issue through dialogue and negotiations, based on the position that Iran has rights as a member of NPT, but it must also abide by its obligations as a non-nuclear weapons state under the NPT.

Secretary Clinton and I had a fruitful discussion on the Asia Pacific and Indian Ocean region, including relations with China, and developments in countries in India’s immediate neighbourhood. We exchanged views on our recent interaction with our Bangladeshi counterpart also.

Finally, we look forward to a productive Strategic Dialogue in June in Washington DC, not only to showcase the extraordinary progress in our engagement, but also outline how we intend to take our strategic partnership to a new level.

Thank you.

US Secretary of State (Mrs. Hillary Rodham Clinton): Thank you very much, Minister Krishna, and thank you for your warm welcome. And let me congratulate you on the completion of fifty years in active public service.

I am delighted that we are continuing to work together on such a broad range of important issues affecting our two countries. I was also delighted to see the Prime Minister yesterday. It is always a pleasure to be back in Delhi and to reaffirm what President Obama has called one of the defining partnerships of the 21st century.

The United States and India are two great democracies with common values and increasingly convergent interests. In our meetings today we have worked to focus our agenda and prepare for the strategic dialogues in June. Let me touch on four key lines of action we discussed.
First, we have to continue expanding trade and investment between our countries. We have come a long way. When I first visited India in 1995, trade stood at nine billion dollars, and this year we expect to surpass 100 billion dollars. And I actually believe there is much more potential to unleash. We should be working toward having one of the world’s largest trading relationships, and we need to continue to reduce barriers and open our markets to greater trade and investment.

As part of this, we discussed our landmark civil nuclear agreement. I and Minister Krishna reiterated India’s commitment to ensure a level-playing field for US companies. We welcomed the fact that the Nuclear Power Corporation of India and leading US companies are engaged in direct conversations on how to move forward together.

Second, we need to deepen our security cooperation. Our militaries are conducting training exercises unprecedented in scale and scope. We have expanded our work on behalf of our joint fight against terrorism and violent extremism. And our Navies are cooperating to combat piracy, patrol the sea lanes and protect the freedom of navigation.

Third, we have to work to meet the challenges and seize the opportunities in South and Central Asia. I updated the Minister on the new Strategic Partnership Agreement that President Obama signed with President Karzai, and I expressed our strong appreciation for India’s support for the Afghan people’s efforts to build a more peaceful and prosperous future and its intention to host a conference in late June to encourage greater private sector investment in Afghanistan.

We also look to India as a partner in the broad international effort to prevent Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons, the best way to achieve this diplomatic solution that we all seek, is for the international community to stay united and to keep the pressure that has brought Iran back to the negotiating table on Iran until we reach a peaceful diplomatic resolution.

I welcomed the progress India is making to reduce its purchases of oil from Iran, and hope to see continuing progress because we believe that if the international community eases the pressure or wavers in our resolve, Iran will have less incentive to negotiate in good faith, or to take the necessary actions to address the international community’s concerns about its nuclear programme.

Finally, we need to work together to promote a shared vision for the Asia-Pacific, especially as we head toward the East Asia Summit in Cambodia this November.

I have reaffirmed to the Minister, and continue to speak out in favour of India’s Look East Policy and its growing role across the region, particularly in support of democracy and economic reform in Burma. As an experienced democracy, India can provide key support. And greater trade and transit between India, Bangladesh, Burma – the countries of South East Asia – will fuel even more political and economic progress and growth.

So, our strategic interests are indeed converging and so must our efforts. I am looking forward to welcoming the Minister when he comes to Washington in June for the next round of our strategic dialogue.

So, again, let me thank you, Minister, for your partnership. And let me again thank the Government and people of India for the warm welcome and hospitality.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers will take a few questions.

Question (Mr. Richard Wolf, USA Today): Secretary Clinton, I would like to ask you in particular about the latest underwear bomb plot in Yemen and how that relates to other terrorist issues in Pakistan involving Ayman al-Zawahiri, involving Hafiz Saeed; and your thoughts also on the rise of the Haqqani Network in Afghanistan; whether you feel that the efforts against terrorism are indeed still working or there is something else needed.

US Secretary of State: Richard, that is obviously an incredibly important question that is on the minds of not only our Government but of course the Indian Government because we both know the tragedies and losses that come with terrorism on our soil. So, we have increased our cooperation between India and the United States and we are going to continue to do everything we can not only to prevent terrorists from carrying out their evil acts of violence but also to try to convince people not to be recruited into terrorism which is a very much of a dead end, literally and figuratively, when it comes to pursuing any kind of political or ideological aims. In democracies like ours people should be in the market place of ideas. If they have views, they should put them to the test of the debate, the dialogue and the political process.

With respect to the plot that was discussed in Washington, as the White House said, the device did not appear to pose a threat to the public air service, but the plot itself indicates that these terrorists keep trying, they keep trying to devise more and more perverse and terrible ways to kill innocent people. And it is a reminder as to why we have to remain vigilant at home and abroad in protecting our nation and in protecting our friendly nations and peoples like India and others.

With respect to the question on the terrorist groups that still operate out of Pakistan, we are committed to going after those who pose direct threats to the United States, to Afghanistan, and to our allies in Afghanistan. We are also cooperating closely with India regarding the threats that emanate against them.

The 166 people killed in Mumbai during that horrific terrorist attack in 2008, included six Americans. So, as part of our Rewards for Justice Programme we have offered a ten million dollar reward that could lead to the arrest or conviction of Hafiz Saeed for his role in those attacks. Our Rewards for Justice offer demonstrates our seriousness in obtaining additional information that can withstand judicial scrutiny, and that leads to arrest or conviction, and brings the perpetrators and the planners of the Mumbai attacks to justice.

This effort that we are pursuing is not just about the United States. Combating violent extremism is something we all agree on, and we need to do more, and we look to the Government of Pakistan to do more. It needs to make sure that its territory is not used as launching pads for terrorist attacks anywhere including inside of Pakistan because the great unfortunate fact is that terrorists in Pakistan have killed more than 30,000 Pakistanis. So, it is very much about the people of Pakistan and their right to go to a market, or go to a mosque, to live their lives.

We need stronger, more concerted efforts on behalf of Governments and societies against the scourge of terrorism. Terrorism is a tactic, it is a losing tactic. But we have to prevent as much death and destruction as possible as we uproot and destroy these groups and convince those whom they recruit, that that is no longer a decision that should be made.

Question (Mr. Abhisar Sharma (Aaj Tak): Secretary Clinton, it is interesting that you talk about the ten million bounty on Hafiz Saeed. My question to you is that, in order to sound politically correct in Pakistan, is the US indulging in doublespeak on the issue of Hafiz Saeed? I would like to draw your attention to what Ambassador Munter said in Islamabad that there is no exclusive bounty on Hafiz Saeed.

And my question to Foreign Minister Krishna is, did you raise this issue because this is contrary to the things that were told to our Government by the US Ambassador in India?

US Secretary of State: I am sorry, I do not really follow your question. We have a Rewards for Justice Programme that we have used quite successfully for a number of years. It has led to evidence and information and tips that we have used to bring terrorists to justice. We have used it in Pakistan; we have used it around the world. So, this is not unique; this is not a special case.

We wanted to raise the visibility and make it very clear that the United States had reason to believe that Hafiz Saeed had been one of the principal architects of the attack against Mumbai. And, therefore, we wanted to send an unmistakable message of solidarity with India, but not only with India solidarity with people everywhere who will not tolerate the continuation of terrorism and want to see terrorists brought to justice wherever they may be.
External Affairs Minister: Secretary Clinton has come out I think very eloquently as to how the United States has made up its mind to fight terrorism across the board. Even in our discussions this morning over breakfast we did talk about terrorism, and all that terrorism brings into this region and to the other regions of the world as well. Hence, India and the United States have strong cooperation on combating terrorism. In addition to the growing intelligence exchanges and cooperation, we also have a Joint Working Group on Counter Terrorism, Counter Terrorism Cooperation Initiative, and a Homeland Security Dialogue. So, we always keep in close contact, and thereby we are trying to checkmate terror from wherever it emanates.

Question (Mr. Shaun Tandon, AFP): I wanted to follow up a little bit on the comments on Iran, its nuclear programme, and about oil. Madam Secretary, in your conversations here in India, are you confident that India is doing more? You commended Indian efforts. Do you think India has done enough to become exempt from the sanctions that will come into place on June 28th?

Question: Mr. Foreign Minister, if I can follow that up, do you agree with the strategic view of the United States when it comes to Iran, the idea that Iran is a global threat? And do you agree with the use of a domestic US law to try to influence Indian policy on this?

US Secretary of State: Let the Minister go first.

External Affairs Minister: In the contemporary context that is a very important question. Iran is a key country for our energy needs. But we have to look at the Iran issue beyond the issue of energy trade. In the first place we have to think about the security and stability in the Gulf region. India has vital stakes in the Gulf region. Six million Indians live and work in the Gulf region and beyond. It is one of the critical destinations of our external trade - over 100 billion US dollars in exports, and over 60 per cent of oil imports, and a major source of remittances. There are ties of religion, culture and civilization that bind us to the region. There is turbulence in wider West Asian and North African region with uncertain outcomes. Hence, we have a strong interest in peaceful and negotiated settlement of issues relating to Iran’s nuclear programme. Our position on the nuclear issue has been clear, and it has always been consistent.

With respect to our energy, we are dependent on imports to meet bulk of our requirements. India’s imports are growing on an average by about ten million tonnes annually. Given our growing demand it is natural for us to try and diversify our sources of imports of oil and gas to meet the objective of energy security.

Since you asked a specific question about Iran it remains an important source of oil for us, although its share in our imports are declining which is well-known. Ultimately, it reflects the decision that refineries make based on commercial, financial and technical considerations. We have discussed our position and our perspectives on energy security, and these discussions will continue. As far as India is concerned, we subscribe to and rigorously implement the UN Security Council Resolutions. This issue, however, is not a source of discord between our two countries.

US Secretary of State: Shaun, as the Minister said, the United States and India share the same goal. We both want to prevent Iran from getting a nuclear weapon. And India has been a strong partner in urging Iran to live up to its international obligations and to use the P5+1 talks that began again in Istanbul and will meet again this month in Baghdad to demonstrate unequivocally the peaceful intent of its nuclear programme. As I said in Calcutta yesterday, we do not believe Iran would be back at the negotiating table unless there had been the unrelenting pressure of the international sanctions. And this pressure must stay on if we want to see progress toward a peaceful resolution.

So, we commend India for steps its refineries are taking to reduce imports from Iran. We have also been consulting with India and working with them in some areas on alternative sources of supply. So, we have had a very good discussion of these issues during my visit. Our Energy Coordinator, Ambassador Carlos Pascual, will be here with an expert team next week to continue these consultations. But there is no doubt that India and the United States are after the same goal.

Question (Mr. Ashish Singh, Star News): My question is for both Secretary of State Ms. Clinton and for External Affairs Mr. S.M. Krishna.

Madam, to you first. Both of you discussed Afghanistan issue also. Could you, Madam, say in your assessment how you see the current situation of Afghanistan? And after the western forces start pulling out from Afghanistan, what role do you see India playing in Afghanistan? And to you, Sir, could you also respond to the same question as to what role do you see India playing in Afghanistan after western forces start pulling out from Afghanistan?

US Secretary of State: First let me say that our consultations with India and Afghanistan are very substantive and helpful. As you I am sure recall, India entered into a strategic partnership with Afghanistan last year. We have just signed our Strategic Partnership Agreement when President Obama went to Kabul to do so with President Karzai. We have made clear that we intend to remain an active presence in Afghanistan. We will support Afghanistan’s security and stability. We will contribute to building their capacity in their Government, and enhancing their economic growth and development. I think that the phrasing you used is technically perhaps correct that after 2014, the NATO ISAF mission of combat will end. But the United States and NATO will maintain a commitment of security and development support. That will continue. I think the details of that are being worked out on our side, speaking just for the United States, with the strategic agreement. And now we will negotiate a security agreement.

There are a couple of milestones up ahead. At the NATO meeting in Chicago in about two weeks there will be a reaffirmation of our commitment to Afghanistan, both to the transition to Afghan-led security and then after 2014. The Indian Government will host a private sector conference to encourage more private sector investment in Afghanistan in June. Japan will host a donor conference to encourage more philanthropic contributions and government contributions in July. So, the international community is very engaged. I think we all understand that it is imperative we continue to work together to provide as much support for a stable, secure Afghanistan moving forward.

External Affairs Minister: Afghanistan has made significant progress in the last decade. The United States has made enormous contribution. Afghanistan is at a crucial juncture as it begins to assume greater responsibility for the governance, development and security. The most important signal that the international community has to give is a strong, sustained commitment to Afghanistan. With that, I am confident that Afghanistan will become a sovereign, independent, united and economically viable state capable of defeating terrorism, and resisting interference from outside. We see the US-Afghanistan Strategic Partnership Agreement in that spirit.

We will continue to support Afghanistan on the basis of our own Strategic Partnership Declaration of October, 2011. Elimination of safe havens in Pakistan is indeed vital for success in Afghanistan and regional security and stability. We remain supportive of any reconciliation effort that is fundamentally acceptable to us as long as it is led and owned by Afghan people, that upholds the redlines and embraces all sections of Afghan society, and that does not fritter away the gains of the past decade. The international community along with India wishes Afghanistan all well.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

With that we come to the end of this media interaction. Thank you.

New Delhi, June 11, 2012.

In response to a question relating to Sanctions on Iran, the Official Spokesperson said:

“We have seen the US notification exempting Indian financial institutions from the application of the provisions of U.S. domestic law for energy-related transactions with Iranian Central Bank and other financial institutions designated by U.S. Government. This is a decision taken by the U.S. Government under its domestic law.

India and the United States have a growing strategic partnership. The India-US Strategic Dialogue on June 13 will once again demonstrate the strength of our relationship and the extraordinary breadth of our bilateral cooperation, based on our shared values and convergent interests.”

Distinguished guests

I am honoured to speak at the annual summit of U.S.-India Business Council. I thank Mr. Froman for his leadership on promoting economic relations. I also thank the outgoing Chairman Terry McGraw for ably focusing on current challenges and pointing us to long term opportunities. I congratulate Ajay Banga for taking over the reins of the Council at an important juncture in our commercial engagement. His life and career embodies everything that infuses India-U.S. relationship with so much promise and potential.

U.S.-India Business Council was formed at a particularly difficult moment in our relationship in the mid-seventies. The initiative was both economic and strategic in nature. It rested on the logic that in pursuing closer economic relationship, our companies, entrepreneurs and professionals would serve as a bridge to a broader and deeper relationship between our countries.

Nearly four decades later that vision has met the test of time. The private sector in our two nations has been the harbinger of change, indeed one of the catalysts in the transformation of India-U.S. relationship into a strategic partnership of great depth and diversity. The ballast our businesses provide will continue to keep our relationships growing steadily and rapidly. And, I hope that the U.S.-India Business Council will continue to promote India as much as the U.S. in its endeavors.

This is a time of vulnerability and uncertainty in the global economy. This is also a phase of challenges and opportunities for our two economies, too.
In India, there are evident concerns about economic parameters. Measures taken in response to an earlier phase of the global economic crisis, international turbulence and volatility, and policy challenges, have all contributed to the current situation. There are also complex and unresolved issues of equity, sustainability and opportunities and achieving the right balance between various sectors of the economy – these issues have been at the heart of political and policy debate in India.

Questions have been raised about economic policy and commitment to implement reforms. Doubts have been expressed whether the story of Incredible India will remain credible!

These sentiments are not new. Over the past two decades of extraordinary change in the Indian economy, there have been periods when the growth seemed to lose its steam and the agenda of reform seemed to slow. But, time and again, our economy rebounded with new vigor, on the strength of strong fundamentals, and supported by sound policies and prudent economic management.

In an era of global inter-dependence, not everything is within the powers of national governments. But we are confident that we will restore investor confidence and regain economic momentum and growth.

Our confidence stems not just from the strong fundamentals of our economy, but, also from the fact that virtually every political party in India has been at some point part of the reform process. We have to respond to the aspirations of an increasingly young, empowered and energised India that has experienced enormous change in a short span of time, and we will do so. But, we will also need a stable and supportive international environment, including an open and growing U.S. market, and the flow of capital and technology.

We are also optimistic because we are purposefully seeking to shape our external environment in support our national development goals. There are stirrings of change in our neighbourhood. We are working with Pakistan to define a new paradigm of trade relations. We are supporting Afghanistan with investment, development partnership and regional integration. We will host an investors’ conference at the end of June in Delhi, to which, I hope, some of you will come. Across South Asia, we are seeking relationship of shared prosperity through increased trade, assistance and connectivity.

With Myanmar, we are not only rediscovering our natural economic partnership, but also building a bridge to Southeast Asia, with which we have a robust and matured economic engagement. We are building strong economic ties and seeking improved market access with China. Our exports to West Asia have expanded at a faster rate than our imports from there.

The vision of bringing Central Asia’s gas to South Asia is turning into a reality, but our connection with the region will go beyond hydrocarbons. From Australia to Africa, our businesses are seeking new sources of minerals and energy, but we also see ourselves as partners in the development of industry, infrastructure and human resources, particularly in Africa.

North America has emerged as an important source of gas and potentially of oil for world markets, and we hope that the U.S. Government will be liberal in permitting gas exports to India. This will be in our mutual economic and energy security interests. And, we are building a web of trade and economic arrangements that stretches from Japan to Canada.

I also have great confidence in the future of India-U.S. economic partnership. I know that this is a time when a degree of skepticism has entered into the sentiment of the business on both sides. I am aware of the concerns of the U.S. businesses; USIBC has been forceful in articulating them!

For our businesses, too, there are pressing issues: whether it is the worsening environment for mobility of professionals, the protectionist sentiments against the global supply chain in services industry, the refusal to even consider a Social Security Agreement that affects the lives of 300,000 non-immigrant Indian professionals in the United States, the unresolved market access issues, or, the persisting presence of India in the Super 301 Priority Watch List and the U.S. Department of Labour's list.

It is, in part, natural, if not inevitable, that as our economic engagement grows; the range of issues that we face will also expand. But, it is also true, that as our inter-dependence deepens, it becomes even more important to address the issues with a sense of urgency and purpose.

The progress that we have made gives us the confidence to deal with the challenges in our relationship. Our trade in goods and services has reached a milestone by crossing 100 billion US dollars last year. India has been one of the fastest growing destinations for U.S. exports.

The U.S. remains a major source of investment in India. Indian companies, too, have established presence in at least 40 states in the U.S, with a significant part of their investments going into the manufacturing sector, and generating more than 80% of their employment locally from the United States.

We have recently launched a strategic dialogue on energy security. We have agreed on a dialogue on sustainable manufacturing and on standards. Later this month, our Finance Minister will lead the Financial and Economic Partnership Dialogue. We are negotiating a Bilateral Investment Treaty and we have just had another round of extensive dialogue last week in Delhi.

A decade ago, lack of familiarity, trust and confidence made U.S. industry an unlikely partner for our defence requirement. Now, in the last four years, defence contracts for U.S. companies have amounted to nine billion US dollars. As we seek to expand this relationship further, it must increasingly rest on the foundation of technology transfer, as well as joint research, development and production.

We remain committed to transforming the success of our diplomatic partnership in changing the global nuclear order into an equally fruitful commercial partnership. We welcome the ongoing progress in the dialogue between Indian operator and the U.S. companies. Our high technology trade will also grow as the Indian industry grows in sophistication and begins to take advantage of liberalization in U.S. export controls for India.

India’s planned investment of more than a trillion US dollars in infrastructure development over the next five years offers enormous opportunities for expanding our economic partnership. Commerce Secretary Bryson’s visit to India with a strong infrastructure delegation in March this year and the launch of first Infrastructure Debt Fund in India, with a corpus of 2 billion US dollars, augurs well for our cooperation.

In the coming years, one of the largest waves of urbanization in the world will take place in India. This alone will create enormous economic opportunities, from smart grid to energy efficient buildings to the recently launched Dunkin Donuts!

I have faith in the future of India-U.S. economic partnership, because I have seen, from my time as the Chief Minister in Bangalore, pioneering models of partnerships between Indian and U.S. firms. These ventures have helped modernize India’s economy and shaped the global knowledge economy. They have also made enormous contribution to U.S. economy and employment. We, in India, have to foster an environment that nurtures these collaborations. The U.S. too, I hope, will remain supportive of these models of partnership.

I am also inspired by the outstanding partnerships of innovation, research and development that are being forged across a truly broad range of areas. These include healthcare; agricultural productivity and the cold supply chain; clean and renewable energy and energy efficiency; higher education; and, delivery of services. They are generating hope, transforming lives, creating prosperity and addressing global challenges.

Their impact encourages us to set higher ambitions. And, working with the industry, we can set our sights even higher. Indeed, the areas I have mentioned are also the priorities identified by the India-U.S. CEO Forum and will command a lot of attention at the Strategic Dialogue tomorrow.

Indeed, the power of innovation would be the driver of our economic partnership.
Its success will be measured not only in terms of growth, but also its capacity to usher in change.

A strong economic relationship is an important dimension of the vision of global partnership outlined by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama. It is a partnership that continues to grow.

We are working together, and with others, to build a secure, stable and prosperous Asia Pacific and Indian Ocean regions, including through the evolving regional architecture. We consult each other regularly on all major regions and issues in the world. We are united in our political and diplomatic efforts to affirm the principles of freedom of navigation and unimpeded commerce, in accordance with international law, and peaceful settlement of maritime disputes. We are engaged in helping build a strong future for Afghanistan.

Our defence engagement is strong and growing, as underscored during Secretary Panetta’s visit to Delhi last week. Our intelligence and counter-terrorism cooperation is deepening, and we have shared interest in the elimination of terrorist infrastructure and safe havens from our neighbourhood.

Our growing cooperation on cyber security is important for our increasingly interdependent economies. We have productive engagement and growing cooperation in multilateral forums on international disarmament and non-proliferation. We appreciate the continuing U.S. leadership in seeking India’s full membership of the multilateral export control regimes.

India and the United States have built a comprehensive architecture of engagement. But, we have also built something more priceless – goodwill and friendship; mutual confidence and respect; and, candour and comfort in our dialogue; and a belief in the value of this relationship for our two countries and the importance of this partnership for the world.

Our high mutual expectations, natural in a relationship driven by values, lead to occasional disappointment. But, this only underscores that neither side is prepared to settle for what we have achieved, but continues to strive for more. And, it is my belief that once we have a relationship defined by those qualities, we will reach the destination we seek and achieve the goals we set for ourselves.

So, tomorrow, it will be my privilege to chair the third strategic dialogue with Secretary Clinton. It will be an opportunity to reaffirm our shared vision and values that brings our two countries together; to celebrate what we have achieved in the past three years and before; and, to renew our commitment and reinvigorate our efforts to keep striving towards the peak of our potential.

Thank you.

New Delhi, June 13, 2012.

The second Indo US Higher Education dialogue was held in Washington, United States yesterday with Union Human Resource Development Minister Shri Kapil Sibal and U S Secretary of State Ms Hillary Clinton as the co-chair.

Opening the dialogue, Shri Sibal said the digital world is challenging the lecture-driven teaching traditions of the university. With open content and open-access, we are seeing the early emergence of a meta-university. The Internet and the Web will provide the communication infrastructure, while the open-access movement and its derivatives will provide much of the knowledge and information infrastructure. The meta university will reinterpret the concept of a University as not just a traditional, physical space of learning, but as a repository of knowledge and information that can be delivered in multiple ways, and can be accessed from anywhere, at anytime.

Speaking on the need to appreciate, manage and preserve our diversity through education and learning by experience, the Minister said global students would understand and learn about management of diversity in India far better than elsewhere in the world. Towards this end, Shri Sibal said he proposed to launch a “Connect to India” initiative that will make available opportunities for students in the U.S to spend some time in our quality institutions for learning about our life, society, culture, economy, polity and business.

U S Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said the Dialogue not only represents the commitment of both the governments but also of both societies to provide more opportunities to the youth to achieve their aspirations. Secretary Clinton highlighted three main focus areas:

- Work force development
- Research in grand challenge areas like sustainable development, energy, public health;
- Developing open education resources

The Higher Education Dialogue chalked out the future strategy for effective partnerships for research and innovation as well as Community colleges and skills, which are very high on India’s development agenda.

Both sides appreciated that there is immense scope of working together on various strands in Research and Innovation, particularly in the identified areas.
of challenges for which discussion on modes of collaboration, collaborative models, and governance and management issues were deliberated. Both sides also committed resources for these initiatives.

Some of the areas identified for research and innovation are:

- Public health including medical technology, green energy and environmental studies
- Cyber security- Leveraging technology for education leading to e-learning
- Development of Meta University
- Increasing connectivity through NKN
- Educational Technology
- Connect to India programme
- Sharing of best practices in innovation and incubation

The meeting was followed by the announcement of awards under the Singh - Obama knowledge Initiative and the presentation of web portal on Indo US higher education developed by AICTE was presented.

India’s Minister of External Affairs Shri S.M. Krishna and U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton met in Washington, DC, on June 13, 2012, for the third annual U.S.-India Strategic Dialogue. The leaders reflected on the remarkable expansion and growth of the bilateral relationship since the inaugural Strategic Dialogue in 2010. They committed to further broaden and deepen the U.S.-India global strategic partnership and charted a vision for the future, centered on promoting shared prosperity, peace and stability.

Secretary Clinton was joined by Ambassador to India Nancy Powell, Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius, White House Office of Science and Technology Policy Director Dr. John P. Holdren, Deputy Secretary for Homeland Security Jane Lute, Deputy National Security Advisor Michael Froman, USAID Administrator Raj Shah, Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women’s Issues, Melanne Verveer, and other senior officials. Minister Krishna was accompanied by Minister for Health and Family Welfare Ghulam Nabi Azad, Deputy Chairman of Planning Commission Dr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Prime Minister’s Public Information Infrastructure and Innovation Advisor Sam Pitroda, Minister of State (Independent Charge) for Women and Child Development Krishna Tirath, Minister of State for Planning, S&T and Earth Sciences Ashwini Kumar, Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai, Ambassador to the United States of America Nirupama Rao, Home Secretary R.K. Singh, Director of Intelligence Bureau Nehchal Sandhu, Secretary for Higher Education Ashok Thakur and other senior officials.

On the margins of this Strategic Dialogue, an unprecedented number of sub-dialogues have taken place, including the Global Issues Forum, S&T Joint Commission Meeting, the Counterterrorism Joint Working Group, the Higher Education Dialogue, co-chaired by Secretary Clinton and Human Resource Development Minister Kapil Sibal, Cyber Consultations, the Information and Communications Technology Working Group, the Women’s Empowerment Dialogue, Homeland Security Consultations and other events. In addition, U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta visited India on June 5-6, 2012.

Recognizing that the India-U.S. relationship draws its strength and dynamism from shared values, the breadth and diversity of the engagement and growing links between the people of the two countries, leaders of both countries have placed promotion of closer ties between the people, private collaborations and public-private partnerships at the center of the Strategic Dialogue.

Strategic Cooperation

The United States and India have engaged in comprehensive regional consultations that touched on nearly every region of the world.
The United States and India have a shared vision for peace, stability and prosperity in Asia, the Indian Ocean region and the Pacific region and are committed to work together, and with others in the region, for the evolution of an open, balanced and inclusive architecture. They reaffirmed their support for regional forums like East Asia Summit, ASEAN Regional Forum and ASEAN Defense Ministers Meeting Plus, and committed to regular consultations in this regard. The two leaders also welcomed the two rounds of trilateral dialogue between India, the United States and Japan, launched after the second Strategic Dialogue in July 2011, and the ongoing East Asia Dialogue. The United States welcomed India’s actions to strengthen regional economic connectivity. Both sides intend to continue to support efforts that promote regional trade, transit, and energy linkages. Secretary Clinton welcomed India’s growing engagement in the Asia Pacific. They agreed to further enhance their consultations on the Indian Ocean region. Minister Krishna welcomed the U.S. interest in becoming a dialogue partner with the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC), and conveyed that as the current Chair, India will take it forward with other IOR-ARC members.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna affirmed the importance of maritime security, unimpeded commerce, and freedom of navigation, in accordance with international law, and the peaceful settlement of maritime disputes. The two sides agreed to continue to consult closely on key global issues, including bilateral exchanges and information sharing in areas such as counternarcotics, countering piracy, maritime safety, and humanitarian assistance/disaster relief. Determined to curb the problem of piracy off the coast of Somalia, both governments planned to improve coordination of their anti-piracy efforts. They also planned to cooperate in addressing the problem of hostage-taking by pirates.

The two leaders stressed the importance of sustained international commitment to Afghanistan as it assumes full responsibility for governance, development and security. Noting that India and the United States have each signed Strategic Partnership Agreements with Afghanistan, Minister Krishna and Secretary Clinton welcomed their productive joint consultations on Afghanistan and intend to seek new opportunities to intensify their consultation, coordination and cooperation to promote a stable, democratic, united, sovereign and prosperous Afghanistan. They intend to explore opportunities to work together to promote Afghanistan’s development, including in areas such as agriculture, mining, energy, capacity building and infrastructure. Noting the importance of women’s economic empowerment for Afghanistan’s economic success, they plan to work to further increase their ongoing vocational training and empowerment initiatives. To support their efforts in Afghanistan, they agreed to hold a trilateral dialogue with the Government of Afghanistan.

They welcomed the announcement at the 2012 NATO Summit in Chicago of progress in the security transition process and the participants’ commitment to supporting Afghanistan's security and development needs into the “transformation decade” (2015-2024). Secretary Clinton welcomed India’s hosting of the Delhi Summit on Investment in Afghanistan on June 28 in New Delhi and both leaders looked forward to the July 8 Tokyo Conference on Afghanistan. The two leaders discussed the vision for enhanced regional connectivity through South and Central Asia. They reiterated the importance of taking concrete steps to promote expanded private investment and trade in Afghanistan. They acknowledged the critical importance of improving Afghanistan’s integration and linkages within the South and Central Asia region and welcomed the ministerial meeting in Kabul on June 14. They acknowledged that success in Afghanistan requires, in addition to building up Afghanistan’s capacity to defend itself, an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned reconciliation process. They reiterated that success in Afghanistan and regional and global security require elimination of safe havens and infrastructure for terrorism and violent extremism in Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The two leaders agreed to continue the dialogue on West Asia and Central Asia.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna expressed satisfaction with the progress in defense relations, which is an important dimension of their strategic partnership. They noted that India and the United States have conducted many military exercises and exchanges in the last six years across all uniformed service branches as well as with civilian relief and development agencies. The two leaders noted that Government of India has awarded defense contracts worth $9 billion in recent years to U.S. companies. Reflecting the United States’ support for India’s continued military modernization, both sides reaffirmed their desire to strengthen defense cooperation through increased technology transfer, collaborative joint research and development, and co-production of defense items. They also welcomed the progress made in the Defense Policy Group (DPG) and the resumption of the Political Military consultations between the two sides.

Reflective of the United States’ deep commitment to pursuing the fullest possible accounting of all Americans missing from past conflicts, the United States appreciated Government of India’s support for the renewal of missions to recover the remains of missing U.S. service members killed in air crashes during World War II.

The two sides expressed satisfaction with the Strategic Security Dialogue held in February 2012 in Washington on a wide range of issues on the international arms control, disarmament and non-proliferation agenda and their strengthened consultations in various multilateral forums. Both sides welcomed the successful conclusion of the Seoul Nuclear Security Summit in March 2012 and expressed continued support for the early start of negotiations on a Fissile Material Cutoff Treaty in the Conference on Disarmament.

The two sides welcomed progress towards the full implementation of the historic Civil Nuclear Initiative including the Memorandum of Understanding signed between Westinghouse and the Nuclear Power Corporation of India (NPCIL) committing both sides to negotiate an Early Works Agreement for the preliminary licensing and site development work associated with construction of the new Westinghouse reactors in Gujarat state, and the ongoing progress between General Electric-Hitachi and NPCIL on their Memorandum of Understanding. India expressed appreciation for the strong support extended by the United States for India’s full membership in the four multilateral export control regimes – Nuclear Suppliers Group, Missile Technology Control Regime, Wassenaar Arrangement and Australia Group. The United States welcomed steps India has taken in pursuing outreach with each of the regimes.

Counter-terrorism, Intelligence, Homeland Security and Cyber Security

Building on the progress in cooperation on counter-terrorism and related homeland security issues since the inaugural Homeland Security Dialogue Ministerial between Home Minister Chidambaram and Homeland Security Secretary Napolitano in May 2011, the United States and India committed to implementation of a detailed action plan intended to share best practices, facilitate the exchange of operational approaches, and promote the development of concrete capacity building programs to secure our respective countries. The two governments also plan to exchange visits across the full range of homeland security issues to address port and border issues, transportation, illicit finance and counterfeit currency, cyber crime, megacity policing and capacity building.

The United States and India committed to continue to collaborate closely on technology approaches to security issues, including science and technology arrangements, to foster closer cooperation. They noted progress in cooperation and exchanges under the Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation between the Computer Emergency Response Team (CERT) of the U.S. and India, including the first bilateral exercise to be scheduled in the fall of 2012.

Recognizing the growing threats and challenges in cyberspace, they welcomed the second round of Cyber Consultations held on June 4, led by their respective national security councils, during which the U.S. and India exchanged views and best practices on a broad range of cyber issues in the interest of advancing security and the effective and timely sharing of digital evidence and information to support counter-terrorism and law enforcement. The delegations agreed to form a working group chaired by the State Department and the Ministry of External Affairs to further discuss the issue of international norms in cyberspace and global Internet governance. The group would provide a forum for consultations will also in advance of important international events related to cyberspace.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna welcomed the decision by India’s Ministry of Human Resource Development to set up a Center of Excellence in Cyber Security and the dialogue between leading Indian and U.S. universities to enter cooperation in the proposed Center.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna lauded the growing collaboration on counter-terrorism in the 13th meeting of the India-U.S. Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism held on June 1 in Washington D.C. and the outcomes of the 2nd meeting of the Coordinating Committee of Global Forum for Counter Terrorism (GCTF) held in Istanbul on June 6-7. They reiterated their commitment to further strengthening bilateral and multilateral counter-terrorism cooperation, including through intelligence sharing, information exchange, operational cooperation, and access to advanced counter-terrorism technology and equipment. They reiterated their commitment to bringing to justice the perpetrators of the Mumbai terror attack in November 2008 and to comprehensive sharing of information on the investigations and trials relating to that attack.

Energy and Climate Change

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna welcomed the progress in India-U.S. cooperation in the energy sector, including in the areas of clean and renewable energy, and energy conservation and efficiency.

They welcomed the selection of three public-private consortia for funding under the U.S.-India Joint Clean Energy R&D Center, announced by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama in November 2010, with annual commitment of $5 million each from the two governments and matching private contributions from the winning consortia, to promote research and development in the areas of advanced biofuels, solar energy and energy efficiency in buildings.

They also welcomed the new five-year, $20 million technical assistance partnership between USAID and the Indian Ministry of Power and the Indian Ministry of New and Renewable Energy to accelerate the scale-up of clean energy technologies.

They noted that the Partnership to Advance Clean Energy (PACE), launched by President Obama and Prime Minister Singh in November 2009, has mobilized more than $1.7 billion towards a wide range of clean energy projects. They expressed appreciation for the efforts of several U.S. agencies to support development and deployment of clean energy projects. They confirmed that both countries would continue to exchange best practices on low-carbon growth strategies to support a greener and more prosperous future.

They welcomed the productive discussions between India and the United States on energy security in May 2012 and planned to continue this conversation, through the Energy Dialogue and other appropriate forums. The two sides also agreed to continue exchanges on assessment of shale and other unconventional gas resource potential in India and on hydrocarbon potential in the Indian Ocean and other regions, and its impact on global energy security. Recognizing the importance of natural gas as a bridge fuel to a clean energy future, the United States reiterated its support as India seeks to secure stable supplies of natural gas. Minister Krishna stressed India’s interest in import of LNG from the U.S. and requested the U.S. Government to permit such exports to India.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna acknowledged broad collaboration on a range of bilateral climate change related programs, including those aimed at addressing adaptation to climate change, sustainable management of forests including reduction of emissions from deforestation and forest degradation, the U.S.-India task force on hydro-fluorocarbons (HFCs), and our respective domestic research programs in the area of black carbon.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna commended the progress made at the Durban climate change conference in December 2011. They also affirmed their commitment to address climate change at the multilateral level, including through the work of the Ad hoc Working Group on Durban Platform for Enhanced Actions under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change. They stressed the need to enhance international cooperation under appropriate multilateral bodies to address emissions from the international civil aviation and maritime sectors.

Education and Development

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna applauded the expansion of the U.S.-India Higher Education Dialogue, which made significant strides in fostering cooperation between the two countries in higher education, research and innovation, and community colleges. The United States and India plan to hold the next annual Higher Education Dialogue in 2013 in India.

They welcomed the announcement of the award of the first eight grants under the Obama-Singh Knowledge Initiative, which aims to strengthen teaching, research, and administration of both U.S. and Indian institutions through university linkages and junior faculty development. The next call for proposals will be announced in July 2012, with both governments having committed $5 million dollars over 5 years.

The two leaders also applauded efforts by both governments to continue to expand educational opportunities and cooperation, including through the Fulbright Nehru Program for students and scholars. These include India's goal of establishing 100 community colleges in India; the announcement of the C.V. Raman Fellowship, under which the first tranche of 300 junior faculty members would be placed for post-doctoral research in American higher education institutions; India’s launch of a higher education web portal to provide a platform to disseminate information and foster educational and research collaboration and exchanges, such as India’s new Connect to India program to facilitate more American students in Indian universities; and new private sector pledges in support of the United States’ Passport to India Initiative, which seeks to increase the number of American students participating in internships in India.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna noted that the third meeting of the Women’s Empowerment Dialogue held in February 2012, focused on women’s social and economic empowerment, political participation, early childhood education, skill development of women and girls, and strengthening of institutional linkages and exchanges. The U.S. welcomed India’s proposal to organize a regional South Asia Women’s Entrepreneurship Conference that will bring key policy makers, women entrepreneurs, civil society organizations, private sector institutions, and corporations together to work on concrete actions to expand women’s economic participation in the region and beyond.

Economic, Trade and Agriculture

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna noted that bilateral trade in goods and services continues to grow and will likely reach $100 billion by the end of 2012. They lauded the launch of the first Infrastructure Debt Fund in India, with a corpus of $2 billion, through the participation of Indian and U.S. financial institutions and welcomed the March 2012 visit to India by U.S. Commerce Secretary John Bryson with a private sector delegation of infrastructure companies as important steps to strengthen bilateral trade and investment in India’s planned investment of $1 trillion in its infrastructure sector.

The two leaders recognized that steps should be taken promote greater bilateral trade and investment flows, including facilitating greater movement of professionals, investors and business travelers, and encouraging research and innovation that further strengthen economic partnership between the two countries.

The Secretary and Minister called for an expeditious conclusion to negotiations toward a high standard Bilateral Investment Treaty (BIT) as a key part of the effort to deepen the economic relationship, improve investor confidence, and support economic growth in both countries. They welcomed consultations by experts from both governments on manufacturing best practices and policy.

They welcomed the decision of the two governments to launch a dialogue on Sustainable Manufacturing and another on Enhancing Cooperation in Standards under the Commercial Dialogue. They noted the conclusion in February 2012 of a Memorandum of Understanding between the Ministry of Labour and Employment and U.S. Department of Labor for skill development, youth development, occupational safety and health, and mine safety and health.

The two leaders reiterated their governments’ efforts to foster cooperation in research, development and innovation in agriculture, especially on agricultural productivity, envisaged in the Agricultural Dialogue. They welcomed the recent agreements between agricultural universities in India and U.S. universities for agricultural research, and the proposed collaboration to create a Regional Center of Excellence at the National Institute of Plant Health Management in Hyderabad.

Secretary Clinton welcomed Minister Krishna’s proposal for a “Conversation between Cities” later this year to discuss urban challenges and their solutions in the 21st century and to foster greater economic ties, understanding and friendship between the people of the two countries.

Science & Technology, Health and Innovation

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna reviewed the outcomes of the second Science and Technology Joint Commission Meeting, held on June 11, which covered bilateral research cooperation on basic and applied sciences, atmospheric, environment and earth sciences, health and medical services, STEM education, facilitating technology commercialization for societal impact and retention and advancement of women in science and engineering. They applauded the first award of grants by the U.S.-India Science and Technology Endowment Board for entrepreneurial projects that commercialize technologies to improve health and empower citizens, which include a partnership to create a cold-chain storage solution to keep farmers’ produce fresh. They noted the ongoing activities of U.S.-India Science & Technology Forum, now in its eleventh year, which have brought together 11,000 Indian and U.S. scientists and technologists.

The two leaders welcomed the rich array of public and private science and technology cooperation between U.S. and Indian institutions and partners.

These include the new initiatives between India’s Department of Science and Technology and U.S. National Science Foundation on a Virtual Institute on Mathematics and Statistical Sciences and DST-NSF Summer Internship; the recent initiative (PC3) of the Department of Electronics and Information Technology and U.S. NSF to jointly fund collaborations between universities and institutions in the two countries on the application of electronics and IT for societal challenges, which has already resulted in five collaborations in the areas of wildlife management, air quality, water sustainability, healthcare and smart electric grids; India’s recent commitment of more than $100 million to the California Institute of Technology’s Thirty-Meter Telescope Project; the exchange of weather and monsoon forecasting, climate change information and global precipitation under the Civil Space Working Group; and the collaborative project of the U.S. National Science Foundation and the Indian Department of Atomic Energy and Department of Science & Technology to develop a Laser Interferometer Gravitational Wave Observatory, with a likely contribution of USD 100 million from India. The two sides also intend to explore opportunities for cooperation in the study of groundwater information systems and Decision Support Systems for optimal management of groundwater resources. The two sides plan to host the next Civil Space Joint Working Group in Washington, D.C. in the summer of 2013.

The two leaders acknowledged the June 9 launch of the Global Ring Network for Advanced Applications Development (GLORIAD), the first direct U.S.-India advanced science and education network supporting enormous data flows between the U.S. and India. Funded by the U.S. National Science Foundation, and as part of a public-private partnership featuring a $6M contribution by Tata Communications and housed by the International Centre for Theoretical Sciences (ICTS) of the Tata Institute for Fundamental Research in Bangalore, the new link is part of the NSF-funded advanced global GLORIAD network. Designed to support the most advanced big-data research today - as well as education and health-related research, GLORIAD's Indian partners at the ICTS are also launching the first open, science-driven, science-managed network exchange in India.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna lauded the completion of 25 years of the Vaccine Action Programme, a collaborative research venture between the two countries; welcomed the establishment of the Global Disease Detection India Center, announced by Prime Minister Dr. Singh and President Obama in November 2010; the proposed collaboration between the Department of Biotechnology of India and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services on stem cell regenerative medicine research; and collaboration between the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and Indian Ministry of Health and Family Welfare on Diabetes Research. These are part of the wide-ranging collaboration between the two countries in the health sector.

The Secretary and Minister appreciated the December announcement of the USAID and Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) partnership to establish the Millennium Alliance, an innovative development concept to leverage Indian creativity, expertise, and resources to support solutions to benefit vulnerable populations across India and around the world.

The two sides plan to hold an Innovation Roundtable on development challenges and solutions in New Delhi in the later part of 2012. The last roundtable was held in September 2010.

Global Partnership

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna commended the progress the two sides have made in implementing the initiatives for international partnership for development and capacity building announced by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama in November 2010.
Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna took note of the March release of an open-source web portal—the “Open Government Platform” (OGPL)—developed under the India-U.S. Dialogue on Open Government. OGPL allows any nation to download free software and create a site that provides its citizens access to government data for innovation, economic development, and transparency. Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna welcomed OGPL’s planned extension to additional countries, starting with Rwanda.

They welcomed the progress in their collaborative efforts to support agricultural development in Africa through initially offering training at Indian agricultural institutions through USAID support to Kenya, Liberia and Malawi.

They also welcomed progress in the initiative for capacity building and training for election management in interested countries.

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna lauded the initiative of the U.S. and India to host, along with the Government of Ethiopia and UNICEF, a Call to Action on June 14-15 in Washington, D.C., to launch a global movement to end preventable child deaths—A Promise to Keep—to demonstrate both countries’ commitment to leadership on this global priority, extending toward ambitious targets in 2035.

People-to-people ties

Secretary Clinton welcomed Government of India’s plans to open a Cultural Center in Washington, D.C., noting the powerful U.S.-India connections provided by the nearly three million Indian-Americans in the United States, as well as the more than 100,000 Indian students studying in U.S. universities.

The United States announced the launch of a new online philanthropy platform, a natural extension of the deep and vibrant people-to-people ties between the United States and India, providing private donors in the United States with information to help make decisions about contributing to NGOs in India more effectively (ProjectIndiaGiving.org).

Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna appreciated the many actions taken to facilitate the travel of U.S. and Indian citizens, including the planned opening of India’s Atlanta consulate in 2012, the second round of the U.S.-India Consular Dialogue on March 22 in New Delhi, a new interview waiver pilot program to further streamline U.S. visa processing and facilitate legitimate travel between the two countries. The Secretary and Minister discussed various issues relating to inter-country adoptions and expressed the hope that these would be dealt with in a transparent and humane manner to protect the welfare of adopted children.

They also appreciated the establishment of the “Indian Ministry of Culture Vivekananda Chair” at the University of Chicago and an agreement signed between the Ministry of Culture and the Art Institute of Chicago for the “Vivekananda Memorial Program for Museum Excellence” for upgrading the skills of Museum Professionals of India as part of commemoration of the 150th birth anniversary of Swami Vivekananda.

The next meeting of the Strategic Dialogue is planned in New Delhi in 2013.

Opening Remarks

Madam Secretary Hillary Clinton,

Distinguished members of the United States’ delegation

It is a great pleasure for me to join you in chairing the third India-U.S. Strategic Dialogue. I want to thank you for hosting the dialogue and for your warmth and hospitality.

We also sincerely appreciate the efforts that your team and our Embassy here have put into making this, literally, an India-United States fortnight in Washington, with all the other bilateral meetings scheduled in the past two weeks! It speaks to the depth of our relationship and the diversity of our engagement.

Madam Secretary,

I am particularly honoured to be joined by my distinguished Ministerial colleagues – Mr. Ghulam Nabi Azad, Minister for Health & Family Welfare, Mr. Montek Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission, Mrs. Krishna Tirath, Minister of State for Women and Child Development, Mr. Ashwini Kumar, Minister of State for Planning, S&T and Earth Sciences, and, Mr. Sam Pitroda, Public Information Infrastructure and Innovation Adviser to Prime Minister. I am pleased to be joined by several of our most senior officers in the Government.

Even by the high standards of India-U.S. relationship, we have had an unprecedented intensity of engagement over the past year. Yet, the Strategic Dialogue is a unique opportunity to bring together all the threads of our cooperation that constitute the extraordinarily rich tapestry of our relationship.

Madam Secretary,

Our two sides have a shared vision that our global strategic partnership could be one of the most important or defining relationships of the 21st century.

In July 2009 in Delhi, we started a new chapter in an already exciting story of India-U.S. ties. Our bilateral engagement as well as global developments over the past three years has only strengthened our mutual commitment to the partnership.

In every field - political, strategic, security, defence, intelligence, nuclear cooperation, space, trade and investment, energy, science and technology, higher education and empowerment - we are making tangible and continuous progress.

What was once novel and unprecedented in our relationship is now routine and normal. In the process of our engagement, we have built something more precious - friendship, goodwill, trust, mutual confidence, candour and belief in the importance of a successful partnership.

Sometimes there are questions and doubts about the relationship. They are inevitable in something so unique and new. But, I believe that having settled the question of whether India and the U.S. can or should work towards a close relationship, the questions we ask now are how to harness the full potential of that relationship.

If we go by the investments that the two governments are making, and the energy and enterprise of our people, we are on the right track. But, as I say, we have reasons to be satisfied, but not complacent. So, we hope in the course of today, we will chart the course ahead, both for the immediate future and the long term.

Thank you.

I am in Washington DC to co-chair the third India-U.S. Strategic Dialogue with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. As you know, the Strategic Dialogue is the principal platform to bring the different strands of the broad-based and diverse agenda of bilateral engagement and pursue the vision of India-U.S. Global Strategic Partnership, outlined by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Barack Obama.

I was accompanied by Minister for Health and Family Welfare Ghulam Nabi Azad, Deputy Chairman of Planning Commission Dr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Prime Minister’s Public Information Infrastructure and Innovation Advisor Sam Pitroda, Minister of State (Independent Charge) for Women and Child Development Krishna Tirath, Minister of State for Planning, S&T and Earth Sciences Ashwini Kumar, Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai, Home Secretary R.K. Singh, Secretary for Science and Technology, Secretary for Higher Education Ashok Thakur, Director of Intelligence Bureau Nehchal Sandhu, and other senior officials. Secretary Clinton was joined by her ministerial colleagues and senior officials.

There were several dialogues on the margins of and preceding the Strategic Dialogue.

Shri Kapil Sibal, Minister for Human Resource Development, IT and Telecommunication, chaired the Higher Education Dialogue with Secretary Clinton on June 12. Minister for Science and Technology co-chaired the Joint Science and Technology Commission Meeting with Dr. John Holdren, President Obama’s Advisor on Science and Technology. Minister for Health and Family Welfare will co-convene with Secretary Clinton and UNICEF, a Call to Maternal and Child Care Action on June 14-15 in Washington, D.C.

A number of sub-dialogues were scheduled on the margins of this Strategic Dialogue, including the Global Issues Forum, Homeland Security Consultations, Strategic Intelligence Dialogue, the Counterterrorism Joint Working Group, Cyber Consultations, Information and Communications Technology Working Group, the Women’s Empowerment Dialogue, Dialogue on Health Cooperation and other events.

I also delivered the key note address at the Annual Summit of the U.S.-India Business Council on 12 June 2012 in Washington DC.

Today, I had a restricted meeting with Secretary Clinton, during which we discussed key bilateral and regional issues. I also raised humanitarian dimensions of the Karie Shepherd case. We then chaired the Plenary Session, which had discussions on five themes:

- Strategic, Defence, Homeland Security, Counter-terrorism and Intelligence
- Economic, Energy, Climate
- S&T, Innovation and Health
- Higher Education and Empowerment
- Regional Strategies and linkages

The Joint Statement issued today is reflective of the tangible and continuous progress that we are making in every field, including political and strategic consultations, defence, intelligence, counter-terrorism, homeland security, trade and investment, civilian nuclear energy, space, science and technology, agriculture, higher education and empowerment.

New Delhi, June 13, 2012.

In a milestone in the educational partnership between India and the United States, a joint working group of India and the United States have selected eight (8) institutional partnership projects for the first Obama-Singh 21st Century Knowledge Initiative awards. The announcement was jointly made by Shri Kapil Sibal, Union Minister for Human Resource Development and Ms Hillary Clinton, US Secretary of State, in Washington, United States yesterday. The initiative aims to strengthen collaboration and build partnerships between American and Indian institutions of higher education.

The projects selected are as follows:

(A) Indian-led partnerships:

1. Mahatma Gandhi University

   Project Title: An Interdisciplinary and Community Oriented Approach toward Sustainable Development

   Partner Institutions: Brown University, Duke University and Plymouth State University

2. Banaras Hindu University

   Project Title: Paradigm Shift in Energy Scenario for the 21st Century toward Renewable Energy Sources required for both India and the U.S.

   Partner Institution: University of Pittsburgh

3. Indian Institute of Technology, Kanpur

   Project Title: International Program for Sustainable Infrastructure Development

   Partner Institution: Virginia Tech University

4. Indian Institute of Technology, Delhi

   Project Title: Resource Building for Ecosystem and Human Health Risk Assessment with Special reference to Microbial Contamination

   Partner Institution: Drexel University

(B) U.S.-led partnerships:
5. Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey

Project Title: Capitalizing on the Demographic Dividend: Enhancing Talent Development Capacity for India and the U.S. in the 21st Century

Partner Institution: Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai

6. University of Montana

Project Title: Impacts of Climate Change and Changes in Socio-Economic Structure on Traditional Agriculture and the Development of Sustainable Communities among Indigenous Populations

Partner Institution: Bangalore University

7. Cornell University

Project Title: Implementing Reformed Curriculum in Emerging areas of Agriculture and Food Security in Two State Agricultural Universities of India

Partner Institutions: University of Agricultural Sciences, Dharwad and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel University of Agriculture and Technology, Meerut

8. University of Michigan

Project Title: The Joint Development of a Master's Degree in Education for Health Professions Faculty in the United States and India

Partner Institution: Maharashtra University of the Health Sciences

Each project will receive an award of approximately $250,000 that can be utilized over the three year grant period, with the aim of encouraging mutual understanding, educational reform, and economic growth, as well as the development of junior faculty at Indian and American institutions of higher learning.

Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh and US President Barack Obama had announced the Obama-Singh Initiative in November 2009 as an affirmation of their commitment to building an enhanced India-U.S. partnership in education. Each government pledged $5 million for this endeavor, for a total of $10 million.

To implement this initiative, the Governments of India and the United States established a bi-national Obama-Singh Initiative joint working group (JWG). The JWG provides the final approval for all grants awarded through the Obama-Singh Initiative. The JWG will allocate the $10 million over the course of a five year period awarding 8 – 10 university partnership grants annually. Grants to universities will be approximately $250,000 for activities to take place over a maximum of 36 months.
This year, the thematic areas stipulated for proposal consideration included: Agricultural Sciences and Food Security; Energy; Sustainable Development; Climate Change; Environmental Studies; Education and Educational Reform; Public Health; Community Development and Innovation.
Secretary Clinton: Good afternoon. It has been a great pleasure to welcome Minister Krishna and his distinguished delegation to Washington. We have had an excellent meeting of the Strategic Dialogue between our two nations covering a wide range of bilateral, regional, and global issues, and I will just touch on a few highlights.

First, I want to put this third Strategic Dialogue into a broader context. India and the United States have a strong foundation of friendship and cooperation. But today we are seeing something new. The strategic fundamentals of our relationship are pushing our two countries' interests into closer convergence.

By strategic fundamentals I mean not just our shared democratic values, but also our economic imperatives and our diplomatic and security priorities. For example, in order to grow and prosper in today's world, both the United States and India need an open, free, fair, and transparent global economic system. We both seek security and stability in South Asia and the Asia Pacific. And we both see the importance of a coordinated international response to violent extremism and other shared global challenges.

What does this mean for our partnership? Well, today there is less need for dramatic breakthroughs that marked earlier phases in our relationship, but more need for steady, focused cooperation aimed at working through our differences and advancing the interests and values we share. This kind of daily, weekly, monthly collaboration may not always be glamorous, but it is strategically significant. And that is, after all, what this dialogue is all about.

On the economic front, we reviewed the progress that we've made together, and acknowledged there is still more room for growth, investment, and business ties. We need to advance negotiations on a bilateral investment treaty, further reduce barriers to trade and investment in our two countries, create more hospitable environments for companies to do business.

And I was pleased that just yesterday, Westinghouse and the Nuclear Power Corporation of India signed an agreement that will speed construction of new power plants in Gujarat and help India meet its energy needs. I look forward to additional deals involving other leading American companies, including General Electric. And we will work together to ensure these projects are implemented to produce real benefits for citizens and businesses alike.

We also covered a number of serious concerns such as counterterrorism, cybersecurity, and sustainable development. We discussed cooperation in Afghanistan and the importance of working together with other partners to help build a peaceful and prosperous South Asia. Both the United States and India have signed strategic partnership agreements with Afghanistan to demonstrate our enduring commitment, and today we agreed to move forward with a formal trilateral consultation among our three nations. I told Minister Krishna how much we appreciate India’s efforts in Afghanistan and the region and how much we are looking forward to the investment conference that India will host later this month in New Delhi.

We also discussed the steps that the governments of India and Pakistan are taking to open up avenues for trade, investment, and movement of people. And I applaud the leadership that Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Gilani have demonstrated.

We paid particular attention to the future of the Asia Pacific region and our strong support for India’s Look East Policy. We will work together through key multilateral institutions such as the East Asia Summit and the ASEAN Regional Forum. And the United States really welcomes India’s support for our participation as dialogue partner in the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation.

And finally, we worked through some of the issues that we have fielded in common because of the concerns about Iran’s continuing search for a nuclear weapon, and India has made it clear that Iran, like all countries, must live up to their international obligations and, as I reported to Congress this week, India has taken steps to diversify its sources of imported crude by reducing purchases of Iranian oil. We recognize the important energy needs that India has, and we’re working with India, not only to ensure stable oil markets, but to do more to open up other sources of energy for India.

Now, on all these and other key issues, we are working to convert common interests into common actions. And we have to follow through. But I was very encouraged by what we heard today. Things that don’t make the headlines but are so critical, such as yesterday’s first ever higher education dialogue, making it easier for U.S. and Indian researchers, students, faculty to take advantage of the educational resources and opportunities in both countries. And we announced the first eight grant recipients of the Obama-Singh 21st Century Knowledge Initiative.

Our Science and Technology Joint Commission are working on improving our linkages in science and engineering and data sharing. We have a new agreement signed in the health area to boost research on diabetes. And, for the first time, we agreed to share the U.S.-India Open Government Platform software that promotes transparency and accountability with a third country partner, Rwanda.
The list is very long and the Minister and I will be making a comprehensive report – he to the Prime Minister, I to the President – of everything that’s been happening in all of the various aspects of this incredibly important dialogue. But I want to thank my partner and colleague in this work for his leadership and his attention that has translated this idea into a very important reality for both our countries.

External Affairs Minister: Thank you, Secretary Clinton. It is always a pleasure for me to come back to Washington, D.C. because it is in this city that I have spent a couple of years of my very interesting interaction into American politics. And I had the pleasure of meeting some of great Americans who have led this country subsequently in subsequent years.

And it is always an added pleasure for me, personally, to meet with Secretary Clinton. I always derive so much of comfort and so much of inspiration, if I may say so, Secretary Clinton.

Three years back, we started on this journey of this strategic dialogue. And this is the third year in succession that we are representing our two great countries. And let me convey that we had a very productive strategic dialogue. I want to thank all my ministerial colleagues and senior officials for their participation. Our presence here speaks to the extraordinary depth and diversity of our engagement, which is ever increasing. The relationship between our two countries and our two vibrant democracies, one the oldest and the other one the largest. Secretary Clinton and I expressed confidence about realizing the enormous potentials of our economic ties and addressing the concerns on both sides, which I had outlined at USIBC yesterday.

We welcome the tangible progress on nuclear energy cooperation, as was mentioned by Secretary Clinton with the signing of the MOU between NPCIL and the Westinghouse. I think this should put at rest some of the interpretations and some of the confusion that was prevailing in the immediate aftermath after we signed the nuclear accord. But I’m glad that things are now behind us – nuclear commerce is now beginning to expand itself and we hope more Indian and American companies will be involved in the course of the coming months.

We, Secretary and I, support the growing emphasis on defense technology transfers and co-development and co-production in our expanding defense relationship. I have informed Secretary Clinton of our willingness to receive a team of officials to visit India for the search and recovery of the remains of the MIAs from World War II. Stronger and more effective cooperation in counterterrorism, homeland security, cyber security, and intelligence in recent years is an important aspect of our strategic partnership. India’s interest in further access to Headley and Rana in accordance with our legal procedures for the investigations into the Mumbai terror attack of November 2008 was raised.
We recommend the broad portfolio of cooperation in clean energy. I also sought a liberal U.S. regime for gas exports to India, which would be in our mutual economic and energy security interest. We agreed to strengthen the impressive array of our programs in higher education, health, science and technology, innovation, agriculture and women's empowerment. We have made tangible progress in these areas.

As Secretary Clinton has pointed out, our discussions demonstrated yet again our shared interest and convergent views on a range of regional and global issues. We are committed to build Afghan capacity for governance, development, and security, and to unlock its economic potential through regional integration. We again stressed the importance of elimination of safe havens in Pakistan for Afghanistan's security and the region's stability.

We discussed the Gulf region and West Asia, including our concern about the growing violence in Syria. Secretary Clinton updated me on the P-5+1 talks with Iran. I conveyed India's vital interest in settlement of the Iranian nuclear issue through dialogue. There are six million Indians who live in this region, which is also of critical importance to our economy. We shared perspectives on the profound changes taking place in Myanmar, and also I briefed her on Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's recent visit to Myanmar.

Friends, we continue to intensify our dialogue on Asia Pacific and the Indian Ocean region. As also associated regional architecture. We affirmed our mutual interest in maritime security. Secretary Clinton welcomed India's growing engagement in the Asia Pacific. I welcomed the U.S. interest in becoming a dialogue partner with IOR-ARC. I told her that as the current chair, we will take it forward with other IOR-ARC members.

Our meeting today yet again underscored the global dimensions of our relationship and added new momentum to our partnership. Thank you.

Secretary Clinton: Thank you.

MS. NULAND: Let's take two questions a side today. We'll start with CNN, Jill Dougherty.

QUESTION: Thank you. Madam Secretary, you and Minister Lavrov of Russia appear to be calling each other liars. In essence, you are saying that Russia is providing helicopters – in fact, the word was used “en route” today – en route to Syria. Minister Lavrov completely denies that; he says they're providing air defense systems but everything that they are providing does not violate international laws. Then he threw it back at you and said that the U.S. indeed is providing arms and weapons.

So you can't both be right. Who is?
Secretary Clinton: (Laughter.) Well, I was very clear yesterday about our concerns regarding the continuing military relationship between Moscow and the Assad regime. We have repeatedly urged the Russian Government to cut these military ties completely and to suspend all further support and deliveries. Obviously, we know, because they confirm that they continue to deliver. And we believe that the situation is spiraling towards civil war, and it's now time for everyone in the international community, including Russia and all Security Council members, to speak to Assad with a unified voice and insist that the violence stop, and come together with Kofi Annan to plan a political transition going forward.

It is something that we believe is in everyone's interests, most particularly the Syrian people. And Russia says it wants peace and stability restored. It says it has no particular love lost for Assad. And it also claims to have vital interests in the region and relationships that it wants to continue to keep. They put all of that at risk if they do not move more constructively right now.

And I would emphasize that the United States has provided no military support to the Syrian opposition, none. All of our support has been medical and humanitarian to help relieve the suffering of the Syrian people, a total of $52 million so far. We have also provided nonlethal support to the opposition, including things like communications gear.

So rather than having a long distance debate with my colleague with whom I work on so many issues on a regular basis, I would urge that we follow the lead and request of Kofi Annan and come together to try to implement the pillars of his plan, including a framework for a political transition. And that is what we have been advocating for and that is what I stand ready to do.

MS. NULAND: Next question, Lalit Jha from PTI.

Question: Thank you, Mr. Minister. After three rounds of Strategic Dialogue with the U.S., where is the relationship between the two countries headed towards? A strong relationship between India and the U.S.? What is the signal or message you are sending to the world or the region?

And Madam Secretary, three years ago, you addressed the USIBC, your first speech on India. You have said this is the beginning of India-U.S. 3.0. After your opening remarks today, is it the beginning of India-U.S. 4.0, and what it would look like? And if you -- do you agree with recent remarks by Secretary Panetta in New Delhi that India needs to do more in Afghanistan? What is that India needs to do?

Mr. Minister, is -- (laughter) --

Participant: A fourth question.
Question: Does – India has a redline in Afghanistan which you say to U.S., “No, we can’t do this?” And finally – (laughter) – India has made a request for giving access to Rana and Headley, the two who were involved in the Mumbai terrorist attack. Is the U.S. ready to give them access again? Thank you.

Secretary Clinton: Do you want to start, Minister? I don’t know where to start. (Laughter.)

External Affairs Minister: Well, where did you start? (Laughter.)

SECRETARY CLINTON: Yeah. I will take a stab at it because it’s one of those multipart questions – let me try.

First of all, as to the Strategic Dialogue, we go from strength to strength. I’m actually quoting the Minister today. Because we believe strongly, and we have evidence to prove it, that our relationship is deepening and broadening. The extraordinary work that has been done between the last Strategic Dialogue and today’s on so many issues, which we will memorialize in our report and certainly make public, demonstrates the depth of cooperation between our two countries. And it’s not only government to government; we’re bringing in civil society, we’re bringing in academia, we’re bringing in the private sector. So I, for one, believe that we may be surpassing 3.0. We may be onto something that is quite unique and very important, and I appreciate your asking.

Secondly, on Afghanistan, I was briefed on the work that India is doing with Afghanistan. We very much appreciate India’s commitment to help build a better future for the Afghan people, helping them with more than $2 billion for development, supporting the New Silk Road Initiative, hosting the investment conference at the end of the month, providing security training and support. I am very pleased that Afghanistan is getting this kind of encouragement and tangible support because it’s in everyone’s interests that Afghanistan be as secure and stable as possible.

With respect to information sharing, it is our policy and practice to share information, and we do that. But I’m not going to go into details because we think that our cooperation on intelligence sharing, on homeland security issues, on counterterrorism, has gotten to a new level. It is very important to both of our countries. But it’s also important that we support the work that is done by our professionals and our experts in protecting both of our countries, and I think we are satisfied that that is occurring.

External Affairs Minister: Well, the Strategic Dialogue that has taken place with the United States in the last three years has been extremely beneficial to India. The tangible outcomes of the broad-based discussions we had and a vast array of issues are listed in the joint statement that has been issued. If I am to list some of the most important areas where we have moved ahead at the third Strategic Dialogue, I would unhesitatingly single out higher education, science and technology, innovation, women’s empowerment, and clean energy.

I was very impressed with the way the Dialogue on Higher Education, which represented not only government but a vice chancellor was there and the academia – representatives from the academia were also there. I think this is an important moment in the most positive direction that not only the two governments are involved in the Strategic Dialogue but the civil society. As was put by Secretary Clinton, the civil society is also involved, the academia is also involved, the people are also involved.

So hence, I think this Strategic Dialogue derives its basic strength from this, and we will certainly continue to take this forward. There have been some useful outcomes, as were mentioned about by Secretary Clinton the agreement between Westinghouse and the NPCIL, and the shared interest and convergent views on a range of regional and global issues that were evident in our talks today. I may add – it provided new momentum for our global strategic partnership.

But with reference to Afghanistan, well, India’s role has always been a very constructive approach. Afghanistan falls in the larger neighborhood of India. And we have civilizational, historical, and trade connections and cultural ties with that country and with the people of Afghanistan. And President Karzai, when he came last October to Delhi, we signed a strategic partnership with Afghanistan. And the whole purpose behind that is to convey to the people of Afghanistan that the Afghan problem has to be solved under Afghan leadership.

Yes, they need external support to the extent that is possible. And that external support will not be available to Afghanistan indefinitely. And that is the reason why we have impressed upon Afghanistan and other countries who are well-meaning friends of Afghanistan that we need to equip Afghanistan with a security force which is – which consists of Afghans, – trained by others but basically Afghan-led and Afghan manned And so I think we will continue to do that. And then I am sure that Afghanistan will be able to find a solution within the four corners of their constitution, and we wish them well.

MS. NULAND: Next question, CBS, Cami McCormick.

Question: Thank you. Madam Secretary, if we could go back to Syria for just a second, I’m wondering how bad have relations between the U.S. and Russia gotten over this. There are some might – who might argue that it’s almost become as much about the U.S. and Russia poking each other than it is about the real issue here. And how has that taken away, in your opinion, from what the real goal is? And you always say diplomacy is key in this area.
And secondly, if Syria is spiraling towards civil war, what does that say about the UN observer mission there? Are you concerned about their safety? Would they remain in there in the same capacity if and when you are ready to say it is a full-blown civil war?

Secretary Clinton: Well, look, I think that everyone knows we have a very comprehensive relationship with Russia. We have worked well together on a range of important issues in the last three and a half years. The so-called reset that President Obama and President Medvedev led at the beginning of this Administration has been quite constructive and positive for certainly the United States and Russia and the larger world.

We disagree on Syria. Now, it’s not the only issue we disagree on, but it is one where people are being killed every single day, where violence is escalating, where the government has engaged in these brutal assaults against unarmed civilians, including children. We disagree.

And we were encouraged when Russia, along with the other members of the Security Council, supported Kofi Annan’s plan. And we have been working very hard with many nations to translate that plan into tangible steps that can be taken. And it’s clear that the voices of the entire international community need to be clear in the message to Assad, that it is time for him to participate in saving his own country from a downward spiral into even greater violence. And as part of Special Envoy Kofi Annan’s plan, that includes a political transition.

So we’ve had numerous discussions, and we are remaining hopeful that Kofi will be able to bring a relevant group of nations and multinational organizations together to find a way forward. So we will state our position very clearly and support Kofi Annan.

And we do so in part because we are worried about the UN mission. We think that the events of the last week, where UN observers have been put at risk, even in positions where they were attacked either intentionally or unintentionally in the midst of the conflict, are worrisome. And I’ve talked about this last week with Kofi. He does not want to put these brave men and women who are trying to help protect civilians into situations that are absolutely untenable and dangerous to them.

So all of these concerns have to be addressed, and I think it’s time for the international community, including Russia, to come to the table and be constructive in trying to find a way forward.

MS. NULAND: Last question, Narayan Lakshman from the The Hindu.

Question: Thank you. And I have only one question for each of you. (Laughter.)
My first, Mr. Minister, my question is on the economic linkages between India and the U.S., a key pillar of the Strategic Dialogue, where there appears to be pressure on India to open up access to some of its markets more rapidly and also some disappointments with India’s decisions in the nuclear sector, at least until recently, and defense sectors. How would you explain India’s views on these matters? And on the flipside, did you query the U.S. side on concerns that India may have regarding U.S. policies that affect its economic interests?

And Madam Secretary, to you —

Secretary Clinton: One each. (Laughter.)

Question: Yeah, just one each. (Laughter.)

When you and Minister Krishna stood at the same podiums in 2010, you described the relationship as an affair of the heart. And since then, however, there have been various ups and downs. And for example, again until recently, slow progress on civ-nuke and India’s concerns maybe about protectionism and the Iran question. So given the strong stand that both these countries have on issues of mutual interest. Do you see any changes that you might propose to the model, so to speak, that the U.S. has for this relationship?

Secretary Clinton: Well, with respect to affairs of the heart, they usually have ups and downs. (Laughter.) But that does not make them any less heartfelt – (laughter) – or any less of a commitment. And so I feel as strongly today as I did two years ago. And I think that it’s always a temptation to zero in on what the differences are. That is understandable and it certainly is to be expected by the press. That’s part of your job. But whether it’s one country or another or, in particular, India, I always look at the totality of the relationship. And I would be never in a position to say we don’t have differences. How could two great nations with our histories and our political systems – these raucous, incredibly pluralistic democracies – not have differences? That would be quite odd if that were the case.

But there is no doubt that our values and our interests are converging, that we have a view of this relationship that is in keeping with the perspectives and histories that bring us together in the 21st century where we are finding so much more common ground that we are working on together.

So I’m very positive about our relationship, and we will continue to work through the differences as they arise.

External Affairs Minister: Well, I am conscious of the fact that there is a degree of skepticism regarding the prevailing sentiment of business and economic content of our relationship. I have listed some of our pressing concerns in my speech yesterday. I have also been sensitized to the concerns articulated by U.S. business. In times of vulnerability and uncertainty for the global economy, expression of such views are not unusual. However, as I said yesterday, the Indian economy will restore investors’ confidence and regain the growth momentum.

I have great confidence in the future of our economic partnership. Our ties of trade, investment, and innovation are growing in both directions. Our defense and high-technology trade is ever expanding. Indian plans to invest more than a trillion dollars on infrastructure development in the coming five years will provide enormous business opportunities which the U.S. companies can consider exploiting. Openness and growth in the U.S. economy will also support stronger economic ties. And we have assured everyone who would be interested in making investments in India that there is going to be a level playing field and there will be total transparency.

And with these two parameters being ensured, I am sure that a number of companies from outside India would be willing to participate in this great developmental journey that India is setting on. And I am sure that the United States and India strategic relationship is going to be helpful in this journey.

Question: Madam Secretary —

Secretary Clinton: Thank you all. Thank you.

505. Response of the Official Spokesperson to a question on the incident involving US Naval Vessel off the coast of UAE.

New Delhi, July 17, 2012.

“The U.S. Government has officially confirmed that a U.S. Navy vessel fired shots at a fishing vessel near the port of Jebel Ali, Dubai at about 3.00 PM UAE local time on 16 July 2012. According to UAE officials, one Indian fisherman was killed in the firing incident and three other Indians were injured. We are deeply saddened by the loss of life of the Indian fisherman and the injuries sustained by the others. Our thoughts are with their families.

Our Embassy in Washington D.C. has been in touch with the United States Government since midnight IST yesterday. Our Embassy in Abu Dhabi is working with local authorities to carry out full investigation into the circumstances leading to this unfortunate and tragic incident. The Acting Consul General is in Jebel Ali to provide all necessary assistance.

The U.S. Ambassador to India Nancy Powell telephoned Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai this morning to convey her regret for the loss of life and assured that the U.S. Government would conduct full investigation.

We will stay in regular touch with U.S. and UAE authorities to ascertain full facts and take appropriate further action in the matter”.

According to media report Mr. Dahi Khalfan Tamin, the Dubai’s senior police officer told the UAE daily the National that “the primary investigation confirms that the boat was in its right course and did not pose any danger. The shooting was clearly a mistake.” However the U.S. Navy said that it was forced to open fire as a last resort, after the fishing boat failed to heed an entire protocol of warnings. The Indian embassy in Abu Dhabi was working with local authorities to carry out a full investigation into the incident. The Indian Ambassador to UAE said: “We have made the request and the UAE authorities have already begun the investigation on their own.”

Contrary to the U.S. position that the event occurred 30 miles (48 km) south-west of Dubai as reported in The New York Times, the UAE authorities maintained that the fishing boat was shot “near the mouth of the Jebel Ali Port in the Emirate of Dubai.”

In the meantime the U.S. government has officially confirmed that shots fired from its Navy vessel had killed the Indian and injured three more off a Dubai port. The U.S. Ambassador to India Nancy Powell telephoned Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai on July 19 to convey her regret for the loss of life and assured him that the U.S. government would conduct a full investigation. India was handed an unconditional apology for the July 16 killing of Tamil Nadu fisherman by a U.S. Navy ship when U.S. Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs Wendy Sherman met with Indian Ambassador Nirupama Rao in Washington on July 20. At their meeting, Ms. Sherman was quick to “convey her personal condolences and deep regrets for those Indian nationals killed and injured off the coast of UAE by a U.S. Navy ship on 16 July,” according to an official statement by the Indian Embassy in Washington.
Response of Official Spokesperson to a question regarding attack on U.S. Consulate in Benghazi (Libya).

New Delhi, September 12, 2012.

In response to a media query on the attack on U.S. Consulate in Benghazi the Official Spokesperson said:

"We are deeply shocked at the attack on the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi. India strongly condemns the violent acts which unfortunately resulted in the death of the US Ambassador to Libya and other officials. Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai has spoken to the US Ambassador in Delhi and conveyed our condolences at the tragic loss of life."

The spokesman was referring to the attack on the American Consulate in Benghazi, where a violent mob protesting against a film made in the United States, alleged to be derogatory to Prophet Muhammad, killed the American Ambassador and three other diplomats.
507. Congratulatory message of President to the US President Barack Obama on his re-election as President of the United States.

New Delhi, November 7, 2012.

Your Excellency, President Barack Obama,

It is with great pleasure that I extend to you my hearty congratulations on your re-election as the President of the United States of America.

The mandate for a second term has been given to you by the people of the United States of America in the highest democratic traditions of your country.

India and United States share a bilateral partnership which has deepened and intensified in diverse and critical areas of co-operation during your first term in office. Ours is a relationship based on shared democratic values of individual liberty, pluralism and respect for the rule of law. We have built a strategic partnership in areas of shared interest, including matters relating to international peace and security, technological co-operation and in strengthening institutions of global governance. We look forward to the further progress of our co-operation in all these areas during your second term.

I take this opportunity to convey to Mrs. Michelle Obama, your daughters and to you, personally, my best wishes for your continued good health and success in the years ahead.

Please accept, Mr. President, the assurances of my highest consideration.

508. Congratulatory Message of Prime Minister to President Obama on his re-election as President of the United States.

New Delhi, November 7, 2012.

“It gives me great pleasure to convey to you my warmest congratulations on your re-election as the president of the United States. The renewed confidence that the people of your great country have reposed in you is as much a tribute to your qualities of head and heart as it is an indication of the faith that the American people have in your leadership. Your mandate gives you a historic opportunity to continue to work for the welfare of the American people as also for global peace and progress at an admittedly difficult juncture, not just for the U.S., but indeed for the world at large.

Over the last four years, consistent with our vision of a global strategic partnership between India and the United States, the ties between our two democracies have seen sustained growth. We have not only advanced cooperation across the full spectrum of our bilateral relationship, but also deepened our engagement in the pursuit of global peace, stability and prosperity.

I have personally valued our friendship and I look forward to continuing our rewarding association in order to build further on the enduring foundations of our shared values and the accomplishments of the past four years. I have no doubt that there is much more we can do together to further strengthen the India-U.S. partnership and thereby advance peace and stability, expand mutual economic opportunities, harness the potential of science and technology, innovation and higher education and empower our people to address global challenges.

My wife joins me in wishing you and Mrs. Obama, as well as Malia and Sasha, good health, success and happiness as you prepare for a new term in office.”

New Delhi, November 07, 2012.

1. Results of the election for the next President of the United States show that President Barack Obama has been re-elected for a second term of four years.

2. The Government and people of India send their congratulations to President Obama on his winning a second mandate from the people of the U.S.A. who have expressed their will in the great tradition of democracy in their country. President Shri Pranab Mukherjee and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh are separately sending messages of congratulations to President Obama upon his re-election.

3. India and the U.S. have developed extensive bilateral cooperation and partnership based on shared values based on belief in democracy, the rule of law and pluralism. We look forward to continuing to deepen and widen the engagement between India and the U.S. in the years ahead.

510. Response of the Official Spokesperson on Statement of Interest filed by U.S. State Department on Immunity for Pakistan's ISI in District Court of New York.

New Delhi, December 19, 2012.

In response to a media query on the Statement of Interest filed by the U.S. State Department on immunity for the ISI and two former DGs of ISI in the Eastern District Court of New York, in the civil case of wrongful death filed by U.S. family members of victims of the Mumbai Terror Attacks, the Official Spokesperson stated:

“We have noted that the US Department of State has taken the position in a US Court that the Pakistani ISI be accorded immunity from the civil suit on the Mumbai terrorist attack of November 26, 2008.

For India, it remains of vital importance that justice is done and that those who organized and perpetrated this horrible crime be brought to justice, irrespective of the jurisdiction under which they may reside or be operating. It cannot be that any organization, State or non-State, that sponsors terrorism enjoys immunity.

Our position has been made known to the United States consistently.

India is not a party to the civil suit filed in the Eastern District Court of New York. The details of what was conveyed to the Court by a sovereign Government are a matter for that Government to explain.

From our perspective, this decision is a matter of deep and abiding concern. The leadership of the U.S. has publicly stated its commitment to counter terrorism, to dismantle terrorist infrastructure in Pakistan and to bring those responsible for the Mumbai terror attacks to justice. In this context the decision of the U.S. authorities in this case is a cause of serious disappointment.”

AUSTRIA

511. Press Release of the Planning Commission on the signing of an Agreement on Technology Cooperation in the Shipping and Port Infrastructure Sectors with Austria.

New Delhi, October 3, 2012.

A Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on Technology Cooperation in the Shipping and Ports Infrastructure was signed today between India and Austria. The MoU was signed by Shri G. K. Vasan, Minister of Shipping with Mrs. Doris Bures, Austrian Federal Minister for Transport, Innovation & Technology in New Delhi.

While welcoming the Austrian Minister, Shri Vasan recalled that traditionally, India – Austria relations have been warm and friendly. There has been regular exchange of high level visits between the two countries during which the special emphasis is put on strengthening economic and commercial cooperation and scientific cooperation.

Austria derives its importance by virtue of its active role in international organizations. With its central location in the heart of Europe and historical linkages and legacy with the countries of the region, Austria is also well placed to serve as a gateway to emerging market economies in Central & East Europe. Cutting edge technology is Austria’s forte in several niche areas of interest to us, particularly in infrastructure.

Shipping continues to dominate as the world’s most efficient means of transportation and it’s the endeavour of the Ministry of Shipping to take necessary initiatives to recognize, reward and promote quality whenever and wherever it is found within the industry.

New technologies for implementation of International Ship & Port Security code, use of radio frequency identification in logistics and transport planning and optical character recognition in terminals to speed up the processing of containers in and out are the areas where Austrian expertise could be utilized in India.

Realtime Kinematics (RTK) measurements of tides and currents for facilations of berth to berth navigation in Gulf of Kutch and Gulf of Khambat could be developed with Austrian expertise.

Since more than 300km of Danube river in Austria is used for navigation purpose with a well-developed and regulated inland waterway system their experience and expertise in the field of Inland Water Transport would be beneficial to the development of Inland Water Transport in India.
The Minister also hoped that signing of the MoU will pave way for sharing appropriate know-how, scientific knowledge and research and development capabilities between the two countries. It will enable the Indian organizations in the Ports and Shipping Sectors to acquire latest knowledge and technology etc. from Austria.

512. Press Release on the Visit of Deputy Prime Minister of Belgium.

New Delhi, August 7, 2012.

The Belgian Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Foreign Trade and European Affairs Mr. Didier Reynders is visiting India from August 1-5 and 8-12, 2012.

Apart from New Delhi, Mr. Reynders is visiting Agra, Udaipur and Jaipur.

Mr. Reynders will discuss bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest with Shri S.M. Krishna, Hon’ble Minister for External Affairs on 8 August 2012 in New Delhi.

Mr. Reynders has had meeting with Shri Anand Sharma, Hon’ble Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles, Shri Mukul Roy, Hon’ble Minister of Railways and Dr. Karan Singh, President, Indian Council of Cultural Relations. In Rajasthan, Mr. Reynders will meet Ms. Margaret Alva, Hon’ble Governor of Rajasthan.

A Memorandum of Understanding was signed between Ministry of Railways, Government of India and the Ministry of Mobility of Kingdom of Belgium on 2 August 2012.

India and Belgium enjoy warm and friendly relations. High level visits between the two sides have provided the much needed impetus to bilateral relations, particularly to economic interaction. The economic content of the relationship between India and Belgium continues to grow. In 2011, bilateral trade reached $13.2 billion making Belgium the second largest trade partner for India in the goods sector within the EU.

Next year (2013) will be a significant year for India-Belgium relations as it coincides with Europalia - India festival to be held in Belgium, for which India has agreed to be the partner country. A number of cultural activities are being planned for this event.

513. Opening remarks by External Affairs Minister at the Joint Media Interaction with the visiting Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Belgium.

New Delhi, August 8, 2012.

Your Excellency Mr. Didier Reynders Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Foreign Trade and European Affairs of Belgium,

Friends from Media,

I am indeed delighted to welcome His Excellency Mr. Reynders Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Foreign Trade and European Affairs of Belgium, who is on a visit to India.

Deputy Prime Minister Reynders and I have just held useful discussions on the entire gamut of our bilateral relations, and also touched on our cooperation in further strengthening the strategic partnership with the European Union. Discussions were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere, which characterizes the warmth of our bilateral relations.

India and Belgium share a relationship that has stood the test of time. As two vibrant democracies, we share many common values and have a similarity of world view. Both countries are committed to the rule of law, freedom of the press, protection of human rights, and independence of judiciary. These common values provide a good foundation on which our strong bilateral relations rest.

Today, we also reviewed our political relations and agreed to maintain the momentum of high level visits, both in the bilateral as well as in the European Union context.

We have noted that, despite global economic slowdown, there is substantial increase in our bilateral trade, which has now crossed the 13 billion Euro mark in 2011. Belgium has now emerged as the second largest trading partner in goods sector within the European Union. I have mentioned the need to diversify the trade basket to make our commercial cooperation more sustainable and reflective of strengths of our two countries. In addition, our interest to collaborate in newer areas, particularly in infrastructure and energy sector, including port development, renewal energy, both solar and wind power, has also been conveyed.

The visit of His Excellency Mr. Didier Reynders provided the opportunity to sign a Memorandum of Understanding for cooperation in the railway sector.

Several Indian companies have made substantial investments in Belgium especially in the IT and software sector. Belgium has the potential to emerge as a hub for their European operations. There is also enhanced interest in Belgium in the many new opportunities that are available in India.
There has been increasing interest in Belgium in different aspects of Indian culture. India will look forward to its participation as the partner country in Europalia-2013. This would be the largest Indian festival in another country in recent times.

My discussions with His Excellency also covered regional and multilateral issues of mutual interest.

Thank you.

514. Press Release on the visit of Prime Minister of Belarus Dr. Mikhail Myasnikovich.

New Delhi, November 15, 2012.

His Excellency Dr. Mikhail Myasnikovich, the Prime Minister of the Republic of Belarus, paid a working visit to India on 13-14 November 2012.

1. The Prime Minister of Belarus was the guest of honour at the inauguration ceremony of the 32nd India International Trade Fair 2012 in New Delhi. During the inauguration, the visiting dignitary had a wide-ranging discussion with Shri Pranab Mukherjee, President of India. The President warmly recalled his interaction, as the External Affairs Minister of India, with President Lukashenko, during the latter's state visit to India in 2007. Prime Minister Myasnikovich, accompanied by the Minister of Commerce and Industry of India, Shri Anand Sharma, inaugurated the special pavilion of the Republic of Belarus at the India International Trade Fair. Belarus has been designated India’s partner country at the Trade Fair this year and more than 60 Belarusian companies and organisations are participating in the Fair, showcasing their scientific and technological prowess.

2. Prime Minister Myasnikovich met with Dr. Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of India, and held detailed talks focused on raising bilateral cooperation to a qualitatively higher level. Both leaders agreed to give a strong fillip to bilateral relations, particularly in the areas of fertilisers, pharmaceuticals and science & technology. Shri. Anand Sharma, Minister of Commerce and Industry, Shri Jairam Ramesh, Minister of Science & Technology, Shri. Pratik Patil, Minister of State for Coal and Shri Sudhir Mittal, Secretary, Department of Fertilisers also called on the visiting dignitary.

3. A Joint India-Belarus Business Forum was organised on the occasion by India’s apex chambers of commerce and industry, CII, FICCI and ASSOCHAM. The business forum was addressed by the Belarusian Prime Minister and the Indian Minister of State for Commerce and Industry, Ms. Daggubati Purandeswari. Three business level contracts were also concluded.

4. Bilateral documents in the fields of energy, fertilisers, pharmaceuticals, education, media and information technology were signed in the presence of the Prime Minister of Belarus.

5. India and Belarus reviewed the progress in bilateral cooperation and agreed to intensify dialogue and cooperation in the trade, economic and industrial spheres and focus on the areas of fertilisers, pharmaceuticals, science and technology, information technology, education, culture and sports. Both sides agreed to expeditiously resolve outstanding issues of bilateral trade and promote two-way investment flows and the setting up of joint ventures. Both sides also exchanged views on a number of regional and international issues of mutual concern and agreed to continue their close cooperation at international and multilateral fora.

The visiting dignitary invited the President and the Prime Minister of India to visit the Republic of Belarus at their convenience.
GERMANY

515. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on India - German Trade.

New Delhi, May 9, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce Industry and Textile Shri Sharma informed that the bilateral trade between India and Germany has more than doubled over the last 5 years to reach nearly US$ 23.64 billion last year. After a bilateral meeting with Dr. Philipp Roessler, German Federal Minister of Economics & Technology of Germany in Berlin today, Shri Sharma expressed confidence that the trade target of Euro 20 Billion by 2012 will be surpassed. Prime Minister Manmohan Singh in his opening statement at Joint Press Interaction in Berlin in December 2010 said “German excellence in the manufacturing and infrastructure sectors is well known. We welcome the steady growth of German investments in India. Despite the economic downturn, we are hopeful that the target of achieving bilateral trade of 20 billion Euros by 2012 will be achieved” Shri Sharma said today “Our leaders had set for a target of Euro 20 Billion by 2012 and, I am confident that we will surpass their expectations.” India asked for better collaboration between India and Germany in the field of generics. After the meeting Shri Sharma said “generics constitutes just about one-fifth of German pharmaceutical industry, but the recent moves of German Government to promote the use of generics affords enormous opportunities of collaboration with Indian Pharma companies, which have acquired global repute in developing affordable generic medicines.” Both Ministers reviewed the economic and commercial relations between India and Germany. They discussed issues relating to bilateral trade and investments and suggested ways of expanding these linkages. Following the bilateral meeting, Minister Shri Anand Sharma and Minister Dr. Philipp Roessler joined the meeting of German and Indian CEOs. The Minister congratulated the German Minister on the successful organization of the ongoing German Year in India. The year of Germany in India, titled ‘Germany and India: Infinite Opportunities 2011-2012 was launched in September 2011, will end in November 2012. The two Minister will be inaugurating ‘Days of India’ in Germany at the Hamburg Port Festival on May 11, 2012. The Days will begin in May 2012 and will end in March 2013. “This is indeed a splendid way of commemorating the 60th Anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Germany” said Shri Sharma. Speaking on the areas of collaborations, Shri Sharma pointed out “Small and medium enterprises which form the backbone of Indian industry, employing 26 million people, contributing to 45% of our manufacturing output and 40% of total exports would benefit immensely through a technology collaboration with Germany. "Speaking on mutual investments Shri Sharma said that there are more than 1600 Indo-German collaborations and over 600 Indo-German joint ventures in operation. BMW has emerged as one of the largest selling luxury cars in India. Indian corporate leaders have been equally enthusiastic about investing in Germany, given the welcoming investment climate and the natural synergy which exists between the two countries. "Indian corporate entities invested over US$ 6 Billion in Germany. Indian industry majors such as Tata Motors, Bharat Forge, Suzlon and the Mahindras group, Wipro, Infosys have all established their base in Germany. There are 215 Indian companies active in Germany employing over 24,000 people" added Shri Sharma.

516. Joint Press Interaction of External Affairs Minister and German Foreign Minister.

Deputy Secretary (XP) (Shri Bishwadip Dey): Ladies and gentlemen from the media, I welcome you to today's media event. To begin with, the Hon. Ministers would make brief opening statements following which both Ministers have kindly agreed to take a few questions.

May I now request Shri S. M. Krishna, Hon. External Affairs Minister of India to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri S. M. Krishna): Your Excellency Dr. Westerwelle, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Germany, members of the media, it's a privilege to have you, Foreign Minister, in our midst today.

Foreign Minister Westerwelle and I had very cordial and extensive discussions on various issues pertaining to our bilateral relations as well as the G20 process, the global financial crisis, reform of the global institutions including United Nations Security Council, the global threat of terrorism, and other issues of mutual interest.

India and Germany share traditionally warm relations based on strong foundations of mutual trust, cultural links and respect for democratic ideals. There has always been admiration and appreciation in India for German technology and creativity. Similarly, Indian culture and philosophy have been of interest to German thinkers and philosophers.

In addition to the traditional areas of cooperation like trade and economics, new areas of thrust are education, innovation and research in cutting-edge sectors. They have emerged as important areas of our bilateral relationship.

Indo-German bilateral relations encompass the entire gamut of political, strategic, economic, scientific and technological, cultural, higher and vocational educational, and civil society interaction. My discussion today with His Excellency provided an opportunity to discuss our bilateral relationship extensively.

Despite the ongoing global crisis, our bilateral trade with Germany has been growing steadily over the last few years, and has crossed 18 billion Euros in 2011. Going by this trend, we are optimistic about achieving the target of 20 billion Euros for the remaining part of the year. This has been set out by our leaders.

Friends, we are currently celebrating the successful completion of 60 years of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Germany. This positive milestone has provided us yet another opportunity to showcase our economic, scientific and cultural ties through yearlong festivals in both our countries. A variety of cultural, economic and commercial events are being undertaken as the Year of Germany in India and the Days of India in Germany. I hope that these celebrations will serve as yet another catalyst in the intensive ongoing interaction between India and Germany and in promoting people-to-people contacts between our two friendly nations.

When the idea of the distinguished Foreign Minister of Germany coming to India, the venue as to where we meet certainly came up. I knew that Excellency Westerwelle was traveling to Bangalore after Delhi because he was due to inaugurate the Consulate office in Bangalore. Then I thought it would be desirable that the venue gets shifted to Bangalore itself for this bilateral meeting.

Excellency Foreign Minister Westerwelle, this happens to be my hometown. This is a city about which, in spite of the traffic jams, I take great pride for the tremendous contribution that they have made particularly in information technology and human resource development.

On a personal note, I have known you for three years now and I have had interactions with you on various multilateral forums. And it is a great pleasure to welcome you to my home city of Bangalore. I hope you and your delegation will have a very comfortable stay.

Thank you.

Foreign Minister of Germany (Dr. Guido Westerwelle): Thank you so much Your Excellency Minister Krishna and ladies and gentlemen Excellencies:

First of all I would like to express my personal gratitude for this great gesture inviting me to your home city Bangalore, and I would like to say this not only for diplomatic reasons. We arrived last night and I would like to say how impressed we are about the hospitality which we received here in Bangalore. Thank you so much. It is a great personal gesture and we are honoured and we are delighted that you invited us to Bangalore.

I would like to ask the media and the journalists to deliver our personal gratitude, the gratitude of our delegation for the hospitality. People of Bangalore are overwhelmingly friendly and we are really glad that we are happy to be here. Thank you so much.

And I would like to say that Bangalore is one of the cities which is very well-known worldwide and especially in Germany because Bangalore and the whole region showed a breathtaking success story in the last years and this has a lot to do with the leadership, the political leadership and of course the discipline and the precious work of the people of Bangalore. Therefore, Minister Krishna, dear friend, it is a great honour to be here. Thank you so much for the invitation. It is really our pleasure that you could receive us in your beautiful home city.
Our two nations are linked by a strategic partnership based on common values. The ongoing German Year in India shows the quality of our relations. Government consultations in spring 2013 will offer another opportunity to intensify our cooperation.

I would like to ask the journalists for your understanding that I repeat a few sentences in my native language because we have in our delegation also some German colleagues, some German journalists. … (German language)...

We had substantial and productive talks on a number of issues such as the reform of the United Nations. India and Germany, both countries share the same goal. We think we have to restructure the architecture of the United Nations and we think that the United Nations like we see them now, especially the Security Council, they reflect, they mirror the situation and the world’s architecture like it has been. But now time has changed. The situation has changed. We think the situation in the world, the architecture of the world, what we have now, should be represented in the Security Council also with the permanent membership.

We discussed of course other issues. On Afghanistan I assured His Excellency Minister Krishna that our commitment to Afghanistan will not stop in the end of 2014 after withdrawal of international combat troops. In the interest of long-term stability in Afghanistan and in the region, we will continue to support Afghanistan with civil assistance and by training. In this context we appreciate very much that India will soon host a private sector conference to encourage more private investments in Afghanistan. We share this philosophy, we share this policy because we know security and development are two sides of the same coin.

I sharply condemn the hostage-taking at the hotel in Kabul. I deeply regret the loss of innocent lives. The terror will not stop us to work for a better future of Afghanistan. … (German language)...

Of course we also discussed other global issues. Development in Syria concerns all of us. And of course we agree that it is necessary to support the efforts of Kofi Annan to find a political solution to the conflict.

We also discussed the situation in Iran and with Iran. We agree that Iran has of course the right to use nuclear energy for civil reasons. But it also has to fulfill its international obligations concerning the transparency and nature of its nuclear programme.

His Excellency mentioned that we of course also discussed the situation in Europe. Both Head of Governments, Prime Minister Singh and Chancellor Merkel, just met in Los Cabos in Mexico on the occasion of the G20 meeting. I would like to repeat what I just said to His Excellency Minister Krishna. For us there is no doubt that we have to work hard for the future of Europe and for the stability of our European currency. But I am optimistic and I am full of confidence that we will manage this debt crisis. It is not a Euro crisis. It is a debt crisis which morphed into a crisis of confidence.

The Euro is a currency. The European economy is stable and successful, especially the German economy is doing excellent. And I would like to say what our philosophy is. Our policy is built on three pillars. All three pillars are part of our strategy to overcome this debt crisis. It is solidity and fiscal discipline because we think you cannot solve a debt crisis by making it easier to take up new debts. Second is solidarity. I think the size of solidarity Germany shows in this debt crisis is respectable and remarkable. And third, we agree that it is necessary to stimulate growth. Growth is one of the key issues, one of the key answers to this debt crisis in our European continent.

Germany is India’s most important trading partner in the European Union. In Bangalore alone 150 German companies are active. We want to further deepen our economic relations. An important step would be quick conclusion of a free trade agreement between the European Union and India. We will continue to work on this.

Thank you so much for your attention. Thank you so much once again Minister Krishna for your invitation and for your hospitality. I am very grateful for being here, and it is good to be back in India. Once again, thank you so much.

Deputy Secretary (XP): Hon. Ministers have kindly agreed to take a few questions.

Question (Indian Media): Mr. Krishna, this question is for you. You spoke about the two countries celebrating sixty years of establishment diplomatic relations between the two countries. If you could just give us a brief as to how these celebrations are really panning out, some detail on that?

Foreign Minister of Germany: Shall I say ... (Inaudible) ... First of all, the fact that I am here shows you that we really think that this diplomatic tradition is very important for both countries. We have the German Year in India; we have the upcoming Indian Days in Germany. This shows you there is a lot on the agenda to celebrate this anniversary of sixty years of our diplomatic relations.

Please allow me to add one point. We think the diplomatic relations are important. We think good friendship and a good partnership between the Governments are important. But the most important issue in our relationship is the exchange of our people, is especially the exchange of the young generation, is education, is exchange of students, is the whole area of education, science and research. And I could not imagine a better city in India to underline and to underscore this issue because I think this is our future. Our future is good connection between our societies and the people know each other, and they understand each other, even if they have a totally different cultural background and if they grew up in totally different circumstances. This is from my point of view what we have to increase. And what we are strongly working on is the exchange of the young generation, especially of course of the students.

Question (German Media): I have two questions, one going to Mr. Krishna. Are you satisfied with the European crisis management, or do you expect from Europeans further more?

One question to Mr. Westerwelle. There will be a delay in the German ratification process on the European Rescue Fund. So, the President won’t sign the laws ... (Inaudible)... due to Constitutional concerns. So, what does that mean? What will be the consequences? And can Germany and can Europe afford its delay?

External Affairs Minister: I think I entirely agree with Foreign Minister Westerwelle when he expounded the strength of the bilateral relationship between our two countries. I think the relationship assumes special significance in the light of what has been happening in Europe in recent months. Europe is of particular concern as it accounts for a significant share of global economy and is also India’s major trade and investment partner.

The sovereign debt crisis and the banking crisis now on the horizon has grave implications not only for the European community but for the entire global economy. And what we have heard from Foreign Minister Westerwelle is reassuring in terms of Germany’s commitment. Germany which has one of the strongest economic presence in the world, and when they say that they are going to stand by the European community I think that goes a long way in creating the right kind of psychological impact that is needed in overcoming a crisis of this kind.

A crisis in the European banking system can choke trade, finance quite quickly, and end up choking economic growth not just in the Eurozone but in the world at large. I think there is need to substantially expand the resource base of multilateral development banks so that they have the firepower to help developing countries in pursuance of their developmental goals.

Foreign Minister of Germany: If you please allow, I will answer that question in both languages – in English and in my native language. Thank you so much.

It is not up to me to comment on decisions by our Federal President. I can only say that the Government for its part will do what it can so that the Fiscal Compact and the ESM will enter into force as quickly as possible. We know our responsibility for Europe and of course for the economy in the world. This is also our responsibility not only to our partners like in India, it is our responsibility as one of the leading economic centres in the world for the world.

Deputy Secretary (XP): With that we come to the conclusion of this media interaction. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

517. Shooting by the Italian Marines on Indian Fishermen on the Kerala coast.

(i) Press Release on the External Affairs Minister's telephone conversation with the Italian Foreign Minister.

New Delhi, February 18, 2012.

External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna received a call from the Italian Foreign Minister His Excellency Mr. Giulio Maria Terzi di Sant'Agata at 2000 hrs today. The telephonic conversation related to the incident on February 15, 2012 when two Indian fishermen were shot dead by personnel on board the Italian merchant vessel Enrica Lexie off the coast of Kerala in south-west India. Minister Terzi conveyed his deep regret at the loss of the lives of the two fishermen and expressed his desire that both countries should work together to find a mutually acceptable procedure to establish the facts beyond any doubt and determine responsibilities.

External Affairs Minister conveyed to the Italian Foreign Minister that it was unfortunate that innocent lives had been lost which could have been avoided had the naval personnel on board Enrica Lexie been careful and exercised restraint. He told his Italian counterpart that our information clearly indicated that the Indian fishermen were not carrying any arms or ammunition on board their vessel. Indian fishing vessels do not carry these on board but only fishing nets and the fish they catch. He said that the law should be allowed to take its course.

Minister Shri S M Krishna informed the Italian Foreign Minister of his telephonic conversation with the Chief Minister of Kerala who conveyed the strong public opinion and agitation in the state of Kerala at the loss of the innocent lives and the need for an urgent resolution of this issue.

Minister Shri S M Krishna emphasized that the personnel on board Enrica Lexie, particularly the Captain of the ship and the two concerned personnel involved in the shooting, should fully cooperate with the concerned Indian investigating authorities. He hoped that the issue will be satisfactorily resolved.

(ii) Media Statement by External Affairs Minister during the visit of Foreign Minister of Italy

New Delhi, February 28, 2012.
Your Excellency Foreign Minister Terzi of Italy,

Distinguished Members of the Media,

His Excellency Foreign Minister Terzi and I, along with our delegations, have held very fruitful discussions today. We reviewed our bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and global issues of mutual interest in a cordial atmosphere.

We met in the backdrop of an unfortunate incident involving death of two Indian fishermen and the subsequent detention of two Italian navy personnel. There is strong public opinion on both sides. Minister Terzi and I agreed that we need to clear the air so that people in both countries are reassured of our will and commitment to strengthen our partnership. We are of the view that our relations are mature and based on strong foundations. This gives us the ability to address challenges together.

India values its relationship with Italy. Italy occupies an important and central position in Europe. There is enormous scope to further consolidate and strengthen our bilateral ties. I had visited Rome last June and had the privilege to participate in the 150th Anniversary celebrations of the unification of your great country.

The Government of Prime Minister Monti has undertaken in a short period of time bold and challenging fiscal and economic measures, which have been applauded both in Europe and internationally. We wish Italy the very best in their efforts.

The economic and trade relations are central to our relationship. We have a vibrant bilateral trade and economic relationship with Italy. Italy is now India’s 5th largest trading partner in the European Union. Our bilateral trade grew at the remarkable rate of around 28% to reach 7.21 billion Euros in 2010, and it grew further by 24% during January-October of the last year compared to same period in 2010. There is also enormous opportunity for expansion of Italian investment in India. We would like to see these to grow, to achieve their full potential. Both sides will continue work in this direction.

With the rich cultural heritage that exists in both countries, there is also potential for growth in the tourism sector. We have good cooperation in Defence and S&T sector. As two ancient civilizations with a rich cultural heritage, we would like to see our cultural contacts with Italy expand.

People-to-people relations are the firm foundations on which other aspects of bilateral relations can be consolidated.

Minister Terzi and I acknowledge the contribution of the vibrant Indian community in Italy.
I also thanked Minister Terzi for assuring me of his personal attention to alleviate the difficulties being faced by members of the Sikh community in Italy. We appreciate the measures taken by the Italian government and look to Italy’s continued support in resolving this issue.

(iii) Prime Minister’s telephonic conversation with Italian Prime Minister.

New Delhi, March 7, 2012.

The Italian Prime Minister Mr. Mario Monti called the Prime Minister today regarding the tragic incident off the coast of Kerala which led to the loss of two precious lives. The Italian Prime Minister condoled the deaths of the two fishermen and expressed regret at the incident. The two leaders reaffirmed the importance of deepening relations between India and Italy and agreed that the issues that had arisen following the incident should be resolved amicably in accordance with law and in the spirit of friendship that characterizes relations between the two countries. The two leaders said that they were looking forward to meeting each other at the forthcoming Nuclear Security Summit in Seoul.

518. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the proposal to liberalize visa regime between India and Italy.

New Delhi, February 28, 2012.

Giving a new impetus to the economic engagement with Italy, the Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma has set a deadline for joint working groups to prepare their recommendation for upcoming meeting of India-Italy Joint Economic Commission to be held in June 2012. India and Italy have five working groups on Infrastructure, Manufacturing, Innovation and Science, ICT and Pharmaceuticals. Officials have been asked to explore the possibility of two more working groups on Tourism & hospitality and Agro-processing. In his meeting with the visiting Italian Foreign Minister Mr Guilio Terzi di Sant' Agata here today, both sides also agreed to announce a Joint Business Forum in the upcoming visit of the Indian Minister to Italy.

While apprising the visiting Minister about the recent developments in the Indian economic policy environment, Shri Sharma invited Italian industry to be a partner in the proposed National Manufacturing and Investment Zones. “May be a consortium of Industry from Italy can become a partner in at least one of the NMIZs,” said the Minister.

Shri Sharma emphasized that implementation of a liberalized Business Visa regime will lead to even greater levels of cooperation and partnership between the business communities of the two countries. During Shri Sharma’s visit to Rome in February 2011 the Italian side had assured full cooperation in realizing a liberalized business visa regime, within Schengen parameters. India is giving Italian citizens multiple entry long duration (one year) business visa. Shri Sharma suggested that apex business chambers should be the nodal agency for certifying the candidates for long duration business visa. Italian Minister assured to streamline the process of visa and informed that already there is a significant rise in number of business visa.

Both sides emphasized the need to strengthen institutional arrangements between the two country. Shri Sharma informed the Foreign Minister about the tie up between Milan Polytechnic with Institutions in India with regard to collaboration in the field of design. India will participate as Partner Country in Milan Expo 2015.

Later Shri Sharma and the Italian Minister interacted with select Italian business leaders from the fields of Infrastructure, defence, constructions, engineering, etc.

Both sides expressed satisfaction over the growing trade and investment between the two countries as reflected in the 2010-11 figures, where overall trade with Italy touched US $ 8.81 billion, showing a growth of 21.27% in 2010-11 from the earlier year. Exports to Italy in 2010-11 registered a growth of 33.85% at US$ 4.55 billion. Imports from Italy saw a growth of 10.20% at US$ 4.26 billion in 2010-11 as compared to 2009-10. The overall trade has registered a growth of 20.02% during the period 2011-12 (Apr-Dec). Exports registered a growth of 11.82% valued at US$ 3.55 billion and imports registered a growth of 28.12% valued at US$ 4.12 billion over the corresponding period in the last year.

The top sectors of exports which witnessed growth in F.Y. 2010-11 are Transport Equipments, Petroleum, Readymade garments, Electronic Goods, Machinery & equipments, etc. Petroleum products (18149%) and Electronic Goods (303.14%) saw the maximum growth. The top sectors of imports from Italy are Machinery, Machine Tools, Project Goods, Iron & Steel, Electronic Goods etc. In imports machine tools (64.36%) and artificial resins (35.71%), saw the maximum growth.

520. Press Release of the Ministry of Finance on the signing of a Protocol between India and Netherlands to amend the DTAC.

New Delhi, May 25, 2012.

The Convention between the Kingdom of Netherlands and the Republic of India for the avoidance of double taxation and for the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income and on capital was signed on 30th July, 1988 (DTAC). Both India and Netherlands have concluded a Protocol to amend the Article 26 of the DTAC concerning Exchange of Information to bring it in line with the international standards.

On 10th May, 2012, India and Netherlands have signed the Protocol at The Hague, Netherlands. The protocol was signed by Ms. Bhaswati Mukherjee, Ambassador of India to The Netherlands and Mr. F.H.H. Weekers, state Secretary of Finance, Netherlands. The Protocol will replace the Article concerning Exchange of Information in the existing DTAC between India and Netherlands and will allow exchange of banking information as well as information without domestic interest. It will, now, allow use of information for non-tax purpose if allowed under the domestic laws of both the countries, after the approval of the supplying state.
Statement by Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur in response to the calling attention motion in Lok Sabha on the subject of the incident of separation of two children from their parents in Norway

New Delhi, March 29, 2012.

Two young Indian children, three year old Abhigyan Bhattacharya and one year old Aishwarya Bhattacharya were taken away from their parents Shri Anurup Bhattacharya and Smt. Sagarika Chakraborty, an NRI couple residing in Stavanger in Norway by the Norwegian Child Welfare Service (CWS) of the Stavanger Municipality and placed in emergency foster care in May 2011.

The ostensible reason given by CWS for this drastic action included “fear of possible violence against the children and lack of adequate parental care”. The parents moved the Family Court to get the children back. The initial decision of the Court went in the favour of the parents. The CWS, however, obtained a stay for the deferment of the implementation of the decision of the Family Court.

Accordingly, the children continued to stay in foster care. In its judgment delivered on November 28, 2011, the Family Court accepted the recommendations of the CWS that the (i) children be placed in long-term foster care and (ii) parents be given limited visitation rights. The parents filed an appeal before the Stavanger District Court on December 20, 2011.

After the decision of the Family Court, the parents approached the Embassy of India in Oslo to take up the matter with the concerned authorities and the complete details of the case were made available to the Indian Embassy in the third week of December 2011. Around the same time, the Ministry of External Affairs was also apprised of the issue. Since then the matter has been taken up strongly and repeatedly with the Norwegian Government in Oslo and by the Ministry of External Affairs with the Norwegian Ambassador in India. The External Affairs Minister spoke to his Norwegian counterpart on January 23, 2012 and sought the early return of the children to India to enable them to be brought up in familiar surroundings under the loving care of their extended family which was in their best long-term interests. External Affairs Minister also sent a written communication to his Norwegian counterpart immediately thereafter.

In view of the delay on the matter and on learning that the Stavanger Municipality had applied for extension of the Residence Permits of the two children beyond March 8, 2012 without the consent of the parents, the External Affairs Minister took the exceptional step of sending Secretary(West), Ministry of External Affairs as his Special Envoy to Norway from February 26-29, 2012. The Special Envoy of the Minister carried a letter from External Affairs Minister addressed to the Norwegian Minister of Foreign Affairs. He also met the Minister of Children, Equality and Social Inclusion and other concerned senior officials. In all these discussions, he conveyed the concern of the Government of India on the continued stay of the children in foster care and urged them to resolve the case expeditiously by taking a humane approach and to send the children back to India so that they could be brought up in their own cultural, linguistic, religious and natural milieu and social environment which was best available in their extended family. It was also conveyed to the Norwegian authorities that this was in the best long-term interest of the children.

The CWS proposed a solution in early February 2012 which, while meeting the Norwegian legal requirements, would result in the children returning to India under the care of their paternal uncle. Accordingly, the uncle, Mr. Arunabhas reached Stavanger on February 3, 2012. The CWS held several meetings with the uncle to “evaluate him”. After discussions with the uncle and with the Embassy of India as also the Special Envoy, the CWS announced on February 28, 2012 that the care of the children could be awarded to the uncle, if the Court so agreed. The hearing of the Court was provisionally fixed for March 23, 2012. To prepare their case, the CWS asked for the help of the Indian Embassy in Oslo to obtain information regarding the judicial system and legislative and institutional mechanisms available in India for protecting the best interests of the children. This information was collated and sent to the CWS through the Embassy of India in Oslo on March 13, 2012.

Unfortunately, the Court hearing which would have considered this solution was postponed by the CWS after certain developments “led them to conclude that the parents of the children and their families were not united.” This has led to a set back to the entire process of the resolution of the case. We do hope that this is only a temporary delay.

On March 23, 2012, the parents and the paternal uncle signed an Agreement which was notarised by the Embassy of India. This Agreement has been presented to the CWS to enable it to submit it to the Court on the date of hearing.

The matter was discussed in the meeting which Prime Minister had with the Norwegian Prime Minister in Seoul on March 26, 2012.

The Government continues to believe that the long term interest of the children would be served better if they grow up in their own social, religious, cultural and linguistic milieu. The Government of India will continue to engage with the Norwegian authorities on this matter.

Felicitations from Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Vladimir Putin on his election as President of the Russian Federation.

New Delhi, March 6, 2012.

The Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh has congratulated Prime Minister Vladimir Putin on his victory in the presidential elections in Russia.

The text of the Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh's congratulatory message is as follows:

“I have the honour to convey my warmest felicitations following Your Excellency's impressive victory in the presidential elections held in Russia on March 4. Your success in these elections is an affirmation by the Russian people of your vision of a strong, prosperous and democratic Russia.

India and Russia have enjoyed the strongest of relations in recent years. We have always recognised Your Excellency as a special friend of India and deeply appreciated the personal commitment and attention that you have brought to nurturing the India-Russia strategic partnership over the last 12 years. It is a matter of great satisfaction that both our countries share a common vision on a range of international issues and that our partnership contributes substantially to international peace and security.

As you prepare to assume your new responsibilities, I look forward to working closely with Your Excellency to strengthen further our strong and close relationship. I also look forward to welcoming Your Excellency in India later this year for the next India-Russia Summit.”

New Delhi, April 11, 2012.

The seventh meeting of the India-Russia Joint Working Group (JWG) on Combating International Terrorism was held on April 11 in New Delhi. It was co-chaired by Mr. Asoke Kumar Mukerji, Additional Secretary of the Ministry of External Affairs of India, and Ambassador Alexander Zmeevsky, the Special Representative of the President of the Russian Federation on International Cooperation in Combating Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime. The delegations comprised the representatives from relevant Ministries and agencies of both countries. The Head of the Russian delegation called on the Foreign Secretary of India, Shri Ranjan Mathai.

The discussions were held in an atmosphere of trust and mutual understanding. The parties emphasized that their cooperation in countering new challenges and threats is an integral part of the Indian-Russian special and privileged strategic partnership, expressed mutual concern about the continuous threat of cross-border terrorism, and reaffirmed their commitment to consolidate bilateral interaction in the fight against this global scourge.

The parties also underlined the role of international efforts in preventing and suppressing terrorism including the consistent implementation of the UN Global Counterterrorism Strategy and the relevant resolutions of the UN Security Council. They noted the importance of the early conclusion of the negotiation process aimed at agreeing within the framework of the UN General Assembly on the draft Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism (CCIT) that was put forward by India.

The sides noted that India and Russia have a significant capacity for developing their interaction in countering the criminal proceeds laundering and financing terrorism, and establishing a partnership dialogue within the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) and modeled on it the Eurasian Group (EAG) on Combating Money-Laundering and the Financing of Terrorism.

The parties expressed their concern about the issue of drug trafficking which undermines peace and stability in the region. They also noted the need to step up their interaction on the basis of the Intergovernmental Agreement on Cooperation in Combating Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs, Psychotropic Substances and their Precursors signed on November 8, 2007.

The appropriate agencies of India and Russia will continue to actively engage in the dialogue to enhance the exchange of information and experience related to countering new challenges and threats.
The Joint Working Group on Combating International Terrorism will hold its eighth meeting in Moscow in 2013.
526. Speech by External Affairs Minister at the Closing session of the Conference on the occasion of the 65th Anniversary of India-Russia Diplomatic Relations.

Moscow, April 13, 2012.

Your Excellency Margulov, Deputy Foreign Minister
Your Excellency Kiselev, Director General of Russian Post
Ambassador Ajai Malhotra
Distinguished Rector Bazhanov
Distinguished members of the Academia,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me immense pleasure to be here today to participate in this Conference being held to commemorate the 65th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic ties between India and Russia. Today, India and Russia share a 'special and privileged' Strategic Partnership that has provided sustained and visible benefits to both our countries.

I belong to a generation of Indians who can vividly recollect the special role the former Soviet Union (and subsequently the Russian Federation) played in India's quest for security and economic development. In hindsight, I feel that it was almost pre-ordained that our partnership would become special and privileged one day. After all we formally established our diplomatic ties almost four months before India actually gained its independence.

In the period soon after independence, the remarkable expansion in our bilateral economic ties helped lay the foundations of India's present industrial structure. The expansion in military technical cooperation in the late 1960s, and the signing of the Indo-Soviet Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation in August 1971, were important milestones in building India's security environment.

The Declaration on Strategic Partnership between India and Russia, signed in October 2000, recognized the realities of the new century. It imparted a qualitatively new character and long term perspective to the multifaceted bilateral cooperation that we have gradually nurtured in the political, economic, trade, scientific and cultural fields.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Today, both our countries recognize that we have a special responsibility to help shape the emerging global order, into one that is truly multi-polar, based on the principles of international law and mandated through global institutions which operate on the basis of consensus.

The world is witnessing a profound transformation, and a shift in the global balance of power. Our relationship is serving as an anchor of peace and stability at the global level.

Recent times have brought to light certain new challenges and threats, directly or indirectly impacting upon the lives of individuals, governments, countries and the world as a whole. These global challenges make it imperative that we further intensify our dialogue and cooperation.

For me personally it is a source of immense satisfaction, that despite the great geographic distance between our two countries, we have succeeded in building genuine ties of goodwill, warmth, friendship and mutual respect not just between the governments and political leadership in both countries but at the people-to-people level. This is the true bedrock on which the India-Russia strategic partnership rests.

I wish all gathered here to continue their good work towards deepening this great India-Russia friendship. My felicitations to all on this landmark occasion.

Thank You.
527. Message from the External Affairs Minister to Foreign Minister of Russia on the occasion of the 65th anniversary of establishment of India-Russia Diplomatic Relations.

New Delhi, April 13, 2012.

External Affairs Minister felicitated Foreign Minister of Russian Federation Mr. Sergei Viktorovich Lavrov on the occasion of the 65th anniversary of establishment of India-Russia Diplomatic Relations.

The text of his letter is as follows:

“I have the honour to convey my warm felicitations to Your Excellency on the occasion of the 65th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Russia.

Over the last six and a half decades, our multi-dimensional relationship has evolved in different ways, but deep friendship and trust has always been the hallmark of our ties. Our unique bonds have been nurtured and reinforced with every succeeding generation, enjoying a strong positive consensus across the political and social spectrum in both countries. From Soviet assistance in India’s early industrialization and security endeavours, to a strong partnership in joint development and design in strategic sectors, the India-Russia ‘special & privileged’ strategic partnership is today a model of depth and understanding for any two nation states. As emerging and responsible stakeholders in an ever-changing international system, our close relations serve as an anchor and a pivot of durable peace, a just global order and of multilateral stability.

I look forward to working with you closely in the years to come, to take forward our special and privileged strategic partnership to a qualitatively higher level.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.”

His Excellency Deputy Foreign Minister Mr. Igor Morgulov, Ambassador Ajai Malhotra,
Distinguished guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to be here at the inauguration of “Open India”, a Festival of Modern Indian Cinema and Culture, which marks the beginning of the celebrations commemorating the 65th Anniversary of the India-Russia Diplomatic Relations.

India and Russia share a ‘special and privileged’ partnership which has stood the test of time. In the past six and a half decades, our relations have gained enormously in strength and content.

Ours is a symbiotic relationship which has produced concrete and dramatic results in the widest possible fields of cooperation. Both our countries today have a broad vision for our future, bolstered by deep mutual trust and convergence of views on many bilateral, regional and international issues.

The depth of our unique friendship has, indeed, been possible due to the guidance and direction provided by our leaders over the years.

However, the close bonds are not limited to the political or the strategic level. This tradition permeates down to the cultural and people-to-people contacts which have been nurtured and continuously reinforced over these 65 years.

Cultural cooperation has played a pivotal role in bringing our peoples closer. Leading personalities in the field of literature, performing arts and related fields in both countries have left their indelible impressions in history.

The influence of Leo Tolstoy on Mahatma Gandhi and Rabindranath Tagore’s following in Russia are well chronicled. The great painter and thinker, Nikolai Roerich and his son Svetoslav Roerich made India their home.

The rich tradition of Indology in Russia and of Russian studies in India has produced a budding generation of academic scholars. I believe that interest in Indian dance, music, yoga is very popular here, not to mention the abiding interest in Indian films. The organization of regular and reciprocal Festivals has also achieved memorable results.
Cognizant of these deep ties, during our Prime Minister's visit to Moscow last December, we decided that the 65th Anniversary of the establishment of our diplomatic relations would be an appropriate occasion to celebrate the spirit of the joy and camaraderie between our peoples. I am, therefore, especially delighted to be part of the opening event of this Anniversary here today.

Indian Cinema and film personalities have immense appeal across the globe. In Russia, as we all know, Raj Kapoor was a house-hold name once and continues to be as popular as ever.

I am hopeful that this film Festival shall not only provide a glimpse of quality entertainment to the audiences here, but also pave the way for further cooperation between the film industries of our two countries.

I am optimistic that this film Festival shall also set the tone for the rest of the year and for the many programmes that have been planned. I would like to express my deep appreciation to the Government of the Russian Federation for their support in organizing the celebrations.

I wish all success to the Festival “Open India” in Russia. I have great pleasure in declaring the Festival open.

Thank you.
529. Remarks by Foreign Secretary at the Russian Embassy Reception to mark the 65th Anniversary of India-Russia Diplomatic Relations.

New Delhi, April 17, 2012.

Please accept my felicitations on the momentous occasion of the 65th Anniversary of establishment of India-Russia diplomatic relations. Our External Affairs Minister was in Moscow last week and has already flagged off the celebrations for this landmark event on 13 April. I am happy to be present at the beginning of an exciting year ahead. I wish to thank Ambassador Kadakin for his role in pushing this relationship forward as a genuine friend of India. Of the last 65 years of our relationship Ambassador Kadakin has been personally involved for almost 45.

2. We speak today of ‘special and privileged’ Strategic Partnership between India and Russia. This unique and multi-dimensional relationship did not come about suddenly. It has been built brick-by-brick over the last 65 years, keeping the mutual interests of both our peoples foremost in mind. That is why it has produced concrete and constructive results in the widest possible fields of cooperation. In the decades gone by our relations have gained enormously in strength. I am happy that this evening many of the bricklayers are present, as are some of those who provided the mortar to hold the bricks in place.

3. Deep friendship with trust has been the hallmark of our ties. The unique bond has been nurtured and reinforced with every succeeding generation. It has also enjoyed broad positive consensus across the respective political and social spectrums.

4. From Soviet assistance in India’s early industrialization and defence consolidation, to a strong symbiotic relationship in joint design & development in key strategic sectors, the India-Russia ‘special & privileged’ Strategic Partnership is today a model worth emulating for any two nation states. This deep-rooted Partnership is also underpinned by regular dialogues and bilateral mechanisms at all levels. There are so many levels that one is reminded of the Matryushka doll! But that is why our cooperation has become institutional - whether you speak of defence or space or hydrocarbons or nuclear energy. And it has produced steady benefits accruing to both countries.

5. It is very important to note that the relationship between our peoples has also expanded. Ambassador Kadakin has drawn attention to the spiritual links that bind us. The academic and artistic contacts have also been most significant. Over 5000 Indian students are in Russian universities and institutes. Private sector business relationships are also growing fast and at all levels. Cultural ties remain strong with great appreciation for each others music, dance and old traditions.
6. At the global stage, India and Russia today share common visions and converging goals for an ever-changing global order. As emerging and responsible stakeholders in a dynamic international system, we benefit from each others strength and strategic autonomy. Our relations serve as an anchor and as a pivot of durable peace, a just global order and of multilateral stability. There has been greater convergence and commonality of views between India and Russia on issues of global and regional significance. This is evident in the Dec 2011 Joint Indo-Russian Joint Statement, the New Delhi BRICS Declaration and the Moscow RIC Joint Communiqué. We value Russia’s support on major forums where India is not yet a permanent member, like the SCO, NSG and the UNSC.

7. At this important threshold, I reaffirm that we in India will work together with Russian colleagues to further enrich the scope of our interactions and take our Partnership to new heights. The rapid progress in both our economies and societies has opened newer opportunities for cooperation that did not exist before. Our relations with Russia have stood the test of time and they rest on a firm footing.

8. I also looking forward to this 65th Anniversary year as an important opportunity to enhance our people-to-people contacts. I wish the celebrations a grand success.
530. Press Release of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on India-Russia Trade.

New Delhi, June 21, 2012.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma today addressed a group of political and business leaders from Russia and India at the third “India-Russia Business Dialogue” which was held under the umbrella of the St. Petersburg International Economic Forum 2012.

Speaking on the historical bonds between the two nations, Shri Sharma said that India and Russia today share a “special and privileged strategic partnership” which permeates the entire spectrum of economic activity.

Highlighting the fact that the GDP of both the countries is over US$ 3 trillion, Shri Sharma further added that the bilateral trade between India and Russia in 2011 was in the range of US$ 9 billion. “We have set for ourselves an ambitious target of reaching US$ 20 billion by 2015. However, there is a need to diversify the trade basket between our countries as the current profile of trade is dominated by commodities with large imports of iron, steel, fertilizer and oil from Russia. We need to expand the trade basket to have more value added products,” he underlined during the event.

India is also planning to invest US$ 1 trillion in the infrastructure sector alone in the next five years. For this, Shri Sharma welcomed Russian participation to build a strong infrastructure base in India. “We are also building gas and oil pipelines and Russian companies have considerable expertise in pipeline construction technologies which will greatly be valued. In the telecom sector, of course, we have seen the emergence of flourishing partnerships between India and Russia which will see investments of over US$ 1.5 billion in the coming years” said Shri Sharma.

During his address, Shri Anand Sharma informed that India aims to double its food processing capabilities in the next five years with the establishment of 64 fully equipped Agro Processing Zones and Food Parks. He said that Russia “can be an invaluable partner to develop cross sectoral linkages in the entire value addition chain from agriculture to retail, packaging and logistics.” “I am confident that the coming weeks will see the emergence of political consensus on liberalizing FDI in Multi-brand retail which will open immense opportunities,” Shri Sharma added.

With the rolling out of the National Manufacturing Policy last year, Shri Sharma showed his interest to invite Russian companies both in the development of industrial townships as well as in investments which will flow into these zones. We are keen to participate in the Pharma 2020 program of Russia where Russian Government has ambitious plans in developing pharmaceutical industry with an objective to reducing healthcare cost,” said Shri Sharma.

The event was co-chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister of Russian Federation, Mr. D. Rogozin. Mr. Cheremin, Chairman, Business Council for Cooperation with India; Mr. Adi Godrej, President, CII; Mr. Ajai Malhotra, Ambassador of India to Russian Federation and business leaders from Russia and India attended the event.
531. Opening Remarks of External Affairs Minister at the Media Interaction with the Deputy Prime Minister of Russia.

New Delhi, July 17, 2012.

Your Excellency Deputy Prime Minister Rogozin,

Friends from Media,

Today, I had the privilege to welcome His Excellency Mr. Dmitry Rogozin, Deputy Prime Minister of Russian Federation. I had very productive discussions with him. We continued a conversation we started in Moscow in April this year.

We are delighted that Deputy Prime Minister Rogozin has been nominated earlier in the year to be my counterpart Co-Chair of our Inter-Governmental Commission. Mr. Rogozin is full of fresh ideas and brings a new energy to our relationship and we value his contributions.

Today's was an inter-session meeting of the two Co-chairs of the bilateral Commission, where we focused on the economic aspects of our relationship. We also discussed cooperation in some strategic sectors.

We exchanged constructive views on various aspects of India-Russia trade and investment cooperation. We sought definite solutions to certain outstanding problems confronting our business communities and explored ways to enhance our trade turnover.

We agreed to redouble our efforts to achieve the 20 billion US Dollar trade target that we have set for ourselves by 2015. The figures for the first quarter of this calendar year are encouraging, but clearly more needs to be done.

Today we also reviewed progress on some of our new initiatives that we had promised to undertake since the Annual Summit in 2011. They include the joint drive to harness the benefits of modernization and industrial cooperation by pooling in the vast human and scientific resources of the two countries. Both sides have since set up a Joint Working Group on this subject and the first meeting is to take place shortly.

Russia is today the leading force behind the increasingly integrating Eurasian economic space. To forge greater contacts, we have agreed to jointly study a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA) with the Belarus-Kazakhstan-Russia Customs Union.

In my discussions with Deputy Prime Minister Rogozin, we also outlined the milestones that should be reached prior to the visit of H.E. Mr. Vladimir Putin, the President of the Russian Federation, to India for the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit, later this year. In that context, we reviewed the progress being made by the various Working Groups in the economic areas reporting to the IGC under its elaborate institutional mechanism.

I have invited H.E. Mr. Rogozin to visit New Delhi later for the full-fledged 18th Session of the IRIGC meeting. We will then have the opportunity to review in detail these important areas of our cooperation and set the future course of our ‘special and privileged’ strategic partnership.

Thank you.
Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the visit of Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin.

New Delhi, October 11, 2012.

....... the visit of Mr. Dmitry Rogozin, the Deputy Prime Minister of the Russian Federation who will be here from the 13th to the 15th of this month. Mr. Rogozin will primarily be here for the meeting of the India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological and Cultural Cooperation. This is the eighteenth session of the Indo-Russian Inter-Governmental Commission.

The Inter-Governmental Commission is a vital pillar of the special and privileged partnership between India and Russia. It includes a wide spectrum of representatives from various Ministries and agencies. It integrates inputs from six Working Groups. For those of you who are interested, these Working Groups relate to economic and trade cooperation, energy and energy efficiency, tourism and culture, science and technology, information technology, and modernization and industrial cooperation. The outcomes of this session will feed into the annual summit between India and Russia for which President Putin is expected to visit India later during the year.

During his stay in New Delhi, Mr. Rogozin will also call on the Prime Minister apart from his bilateral meetings with the External Affairs Minister.

Question: This is on IRIGC-MTC. Defence Minister of Russia was supposed to come on the 4th. He came eventually on the 10th. The reason given was that President Putin required him there. The fact is that on 4th Gen. Kayani was there, he was hosting Gen. Kayani actually. So, what is your take on that? Secondly, what are the major talking points when this IRIGC meets?

Official Spokesperson: First of all I do not think we have any reason to doubt what the Russians have themselves put out. Since then the Defence Minister has been here, he has met our Defence Minister, and there is much water flown under the bridge. So, let us not go back to an issue of speculation which was there some time ago.

As regards what will be the areas of discussion, I think I have listed them but I will list them again. It is all aspects of economic and trade cooperation. For those of you who are interested, our trade this year has expanded I think about 38 per cent compared to last year. As you are aware, perhaps our goal is to have a trade of about 20 billion US dollars by 2015. Last year we were somewhere around 8.8 billion. This year in the first six months it was a little above six billion US dollars. So, there has been an increase. Trade will be a major area of discussion. The entire expanse of energy issues, hydrocarbons will be areas of discussion. As regards science and technology, we have a robust exchange between our Department of Science and Technology and the concerned Russian agencies. So, these will all be areas. There will also be some areas relating to banking, there are areas relating to civil aviation, and a whole host of areas. If you would like further details, I will share them with you.

Question: Ruble and Rupee used to be a huge controversy. Has it been sorted out with the Russians now?

Official Spokesperson: This is an old story.

Question: During Mr. Rogozin’s visit, will issues relating to Kudankulam nuclear reactor 3 and 4 and nuclear liability law be discussed and resolved?

Official Spokesperson: Mr. Rogozin is an important leader of Russia. He was here, if you remember, last time in July and at that stage these matters were raised. While these do not form part of the India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological and Cultural Cooperation, we do expect as two important leaders during high-level meetings they will always have issues to discuss and we do expect this to be an issue of discussion between them but not as part of Inter-Governmental Commission. They will also have a bilateral meeting separately and we expect that all issues including this which is an important issue of our cooperation will figure.

New Delhi, October 12, 2012.

The twelfth meeting of the India-Russia Inter-governmental Commission on Military Technical Cooperation was held in New Delhi today. The Indian delegation was led by the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony and the Russian delegation was led by Shri AE Serdyukov, Defence Minister of the Russian Federation.

During the meeting of the Commission, which was conducted in a spirit of mutual cooperation and understanding, the two sides expressed readiness to take all necessary measures to further expand the cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis.

The Commission endorsed the Protocols of the meetings of the Working Group on Shipbuilding, Aviation and Land Systems, (WG SALS) and the Working Group on Military Technical Cooperation (WG-MTC) which were held in New Delhi on 27-28 August, 2012 and 30-31 August, 2012 respectively. The Commission appreciated the work done by the Co-Chairmen and Members of both the Working Groups and noted with approval the significant progress made in promoting bilateral military technical cooperation between the two countries.

The Commission noted that during the period under review, the two countries have taken various steps to deepen interaction in the development of defence technologies, modernization of military equipment and joint manufacture of military-purpose products. The two sides confirmed that such cooperation involves the strengthening of interactions between the Armed Forces, defense industry enterprises and research agencies of the two countries.

The Commission reviewed and discussed the status of some of the major issues in Military Technical Cooperation. Earlier, immediately after his arrival this morning, Mr. AE Serdyukov visited Amar Jawan Jyoti at India Gate and laid a wreath in the war memorial. Later he was accorded a tri-services Guard of Honour at the Lawns of South Block. Shri Antony also hosted a lunch in honour of the visiting Russian Defence Minister and his delegation.
534. Opening Remarks by External Affairs Minister at the Joint media interaction following the 18th India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission Meeting.

New Delhi, October 15, 2012.

Your Excellency Dmitry Rogozin, Deputy Chairman of the Russian Federation, Friends from Media,

I held wide-ranging and very substantive discussions today with Deputy Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation, His Excellency Mr. Dmitry Rogozin. This was my third meeting with H.E. Mr. Rogozin in six months. It reflects the attention he pays to relations with India. We are thankful to him for his keen interest in promoting our relationship.

India’s relations with the Russian Federation are a key priority of our foreign policy. The Inter-Governmental Commission is the main mechanism that helps us to comprehensively review our special and privileged Strategic Partnership. We recognised that even though there has been a significant increase in bilateral trade of 38% in the first half of this year, our trade linkages have not kept pace with our cooperation in several strategic spheres.

Today, we discussed our policy level concerns and willingness to facilitate greater exchanges between our businesses. We agreed to make greater efforts to stimulate trade with a resolve to overcome any hindrances at the Governmental level.

Friends,

We welcome Russia’s formal membership of the World Trade Organisation. We hope that this would result in greater trade and investment flows bilaterally. Our growing economy and major initiatives in terms of the national manufacturing policy and infrastructure development projects such as the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor offer good prospects for Russian investors and businesses. In this context, I also informed Deputy Chairman Rogozin of the measures taken recently to liberalize foreign direct investment norms in prospective sectors of retail, civil aviation, telecommunication and insurance.

We reviewed our robust collaboration in the field of Science & Technology and welcomed the operationalization of the offices of the India-Russia Joint Technology Centres in our two countries. We also emphasised on strengthening contacts in the IT and hydrocarbons sector. We see the energy sector as an important area for expansion of cooperation between our two countries.

The first meeting of the Joint Working Group on Modernization and Industrial Cooperation was held earlier in August this year. It is a promising new area where both countries can harness potential benefits based on strong and knowledge-based comparative advantages.

We welcome the organization of the Festival of Russia in India and the ‘Days of Moscow’ in Delhi, to be held later this month. We envisage these as important events for deepening our people to people contacts and for mutual understanding.

The meeting today also laid the groundwork for the forthcoming visit of His Excellency Mr. Vladimir Putin, President of the Russian Federation, for the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit.

Thank you.

Joint Media Interaction of External Affairs Minister and Deputy Chairman of Russian Federation after the meeting of the 18th session of the India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission.

New Delhi, October 15, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen of the media. I welcome you to this media interaction. As usual, we will begin with opening remarks.

May I now request the External Affairs Minister of India to make his opening remarks?

External Affairs Minister of India (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Dmitry Rogozin, Deputy Chairman of the Russian Federation; Members of the Russian Delegation and the Indian Delegation; Friends from the Media:

The first meeting of the Joint Working Group on Modernization and Industrial Cooperation was held earlier in August this year. It is a promising new area where both countries can harness potential benefits based on strong and knowledge-based comparative advantages.

We welcome the organization of the Festival of Russia in India and the ‘Days of Moscow’ in Delhi, to be held later this month. We envisage these as important events for deepening our people-to-people contacts and for mutual understanding.

The meeting today also laid the groundwork for the forthcoming visit of His Excellency Mr. Putin, President of the Russian Federation, for the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit to be held in the month of November.

Thank you, Your Excellency.

Deputy Chairman of Russian Federation (Mr. Dmitry Rogozin): I would like to return the compliment and say that it is a pleasure to work with you.

The Russian side has a positive estimate of the result of our mutual work. The session has passed in an atmosphere of friendship, openness, dialogue and mutual understanding, and we are out to take mutual decisions.

Of course it is very important to set the goals for trade, economic, scientific, technical, and cultural cooperation as well as to promote new joint projects. The best indicator of that is the raising of the volume of our interaction, as said by our political leaderships, and achieving a strategic goal to raise the volume of our turnover to 20 billion US dollars by 2015.

Of course in the situation of economic instability and turmoil we can see that we have all the opportunity to achieve this strategic goal by our relations of Russia and India. And the example to that is the growth of our turnover, which has increased by 30 per cent since January to August as compared with the last year in the same period. Currently this figure is more than seven billion dollars and we expect it to be raised to ten billion dollars by the end of 2012. It is a very important psychological milestone for us and we believe that we can achieve it.

Now I would like to speak about some practical results achieved at the session of our Commission, which agreements we have achieved. First we will continue our closest technological cooperation within nuclear energy. The first unit of the Kudankulam Nuclear Power Plant is ready to be launched as we expect that the second unit would be able to be launched at the end of the next year.
I would like to once more highlight the idea which I have expressed in many publications in the Indian media. It is that the Russian experience in the nuclear energy is very rich including the negative experience which the USSR has. And we have learnt our lessons from that. So, the new nuclear power plant in Kudankulam is the safest in the world. The requirements for safety and security are of the highest level.

In the new situation which was described by Minister Krishna, that is Russia’s accession to the WTO, we have exchanged our views and investment projects, the existing and the forthcoming, which would help us to achieve and develop the investment cooperations on their own.

It is very important to understand the responsibility and liability of both our countries equating the favourable and stable investment climate for as far as mutual investments are concerned. We should allow our business community to see the green light in order to begin active interaction and conclude major conference of the territories of our two countries.

And so I would like to express the hope that we will be able to resolve the situation, the current difficult situation in the Russian investments in the company Titanium Products Pvt Ltd and the company System Shyam Teleservices in India.

And we have objectively accepted and acknowledged that we yet have not learnt to fully implement the huge potential of our intervention in high-tech fields. I gave an example and I would repeat it that one job, for example, in the air industry creates sixteen more jobs in the related fields and industries. So, we will have to follow the huge steps to the possibility of developing our cooperation and interaction in the high-tech field which would allow Russia and India to have achieved certain independence in that industry.

And of course I cannot but mention the current annual Russian-Indian Forum for Trade and Investments which is going to take place today in New Delhi which is very important for our relations and which hosts many existing investors and businessmen, but not only them, also those investors who are new. And we will be always supporting the work of this Forum because it is very important for the Russian and Indian relations that not only the selected business people would be present there but also the middleclass. It is very important that the middleclass community would establish the direct connections which would help us to achieve the new quality of our economic relations with India and also of our political relations which are based on mutual trust.

Official Spokesperson: The two Ministers have agreed to take a few questions. Question (Indian Media): My question is for the Indian Foreign Minister. Sir, we heard about Kudankulam Nuclear Plants? I was wondering if cooperation on Kudankulam 3 and 4 was discussed. There seem to be differences of opinion under which agreement 3 and 4 should be constructed. What is the way forward? Was that discussed?

External Affairs Minister: Of late, Kudankulam has come up in a major way in the media. You may recall that a roadmap for construction of Russian-designed nuclear power plants in India was signed during the visit of the then Prime Minister Putin to India in 2010. We believe that if we have to sustain our strong economic growth, we have to constantly address the issue of energy security in which nuclear energy plays a very critical and important role. This is true for all our nuclear energy partners. We see a large and growing role for Russia in the development of nuclear power plants in India both in terms of equipment and technology. Technical experts from both sides continue to hold regular discussions on issues pertaining to all aspects of our cooperation in this field. Today we did discuss the preparatory work for Units 3 and 4 of the KKNP. The credit agreement for Units 3 and 4 was finalized between our agencies in July this year. A further techno-commercial agreement is still being negotiated by our experts, and I have no doubt we will come to a mutually acceptable resolution on this issue.

Question (Russian Media): My question is to both the co-chairmen. This problem has been touched upon already. We said that the inter-governmental level of our achievements, the inter-governmental level agreements, is developing quite well between Russia and India. However, the relations between our business circles are not that good, and there are problems that might be emerging. It is enough to remember the problems with the Systema company. And the question is what would the governments of the two countries do so that business would be confident that its activities would be protected, and would take full part in the development of Russia and India relations, especially in the middle business.

Deputy Chairman of Russian Federation (Mr. Dmitry Rogozin): I would like to say that the main things that we have to... (Inaudible)... on are the three main characters. The question that has been asked is very important and I have mentioned already that in the relations between Russia and India, not only the selected business people and companies should take part, it should be an event en masse because people should have the belief in the ideals of the relations between the two countries and should gain good result from it including the material benefit. What to do? We have to take into account three factors. First, I would like to say that the governments should demonstratively, and I would like to highlight this word demonstratively, help the business representatives to solve the issues that emerge during this contact with bureaucracy because business is indivisible from the state, business is citizens, business is people who create products, it is our taxpayers. So they cannot be regarded separately from the State as well. So, the Governments of India and Russia should work to support this people, it is very important to support. And I would like to say that the Government of Russia should support both Indian and Russian business circles as well as the Government of India should do the same, support Indian and Russian business circles, to create the positive climate of our interaction because good money can be made only in calm situation. If there are scandals, they would scare of the business communities. So, I repeat that we need to help business solve its matters because the government should protect business.

The second factor, we should never reconsider the rules of the game after the game has begun, and we should follow the rules till the game is over, and only then should we go back to the discussion. It is important to fulfill the agreements achieved.

The third factor which we have also mentioned and discussed with the Minister of the Foreign Affairs of India is that the cooperation in high technological field should be moved from only military to the civil cooperation which would allow the middle and small business to enter this field of industry because satellites, aircraft, communication systems, can be positive and profitable not only for the military specialist but for civilians as well, which would help us to raise the technological cooperation between all the layers of business including small and middle, as I have just said. This is what should be aimed at.

External Affairs Minister: I entirely agree with the Deputy Prime Minister that it is necessary for the Governments to demonstrate that they have the will to pursue the relationship and then take this relationship and add economic content to this relationship. So far the political relationship has been on very solid ground. Now, coming to economic relationship, I think efforts are being made by both Governments and by both businesses that it is necessary taking the size of our economies into consideration and then looking at the figures that are available with us for this year, I think it is far far below the potential that is hidden in the Indian economy and of course the Russian economy. It is necessary for our businesses not to be intimidated by certain obstacles which do come up in a democratic society where we have the due process of law and where anyone can take a matter to a court of law and thereby delay the movement of that particular project. Now that Russia has entered the World Trade Organization, this certainly will provide a huge impetus for businesses in both of our countries, major, medium and small businesses. The Government of India is fully with these businesses so that they could pursue the policy of enlarging the economic cooperation.

One particular issue which often comes up is the Systema controversy. That is right now in a court of law pending adjudication. So, it would not be fair for me to make any comment. But that is a ... (Inaudible)... I think the courts will give its finding. Depending upon the findings given by the courts of law, we can work out a strategy as to how we can pursue what we have conveyed to the peoples of both countries that the economic relationship is going to become stronger between our two countries. We will have to await the outcome.

Official Spokesperson: With that we come to the end of this interaction. Thank you very much.
536. Press Release on the 18th India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission Meeting.

New Delhi, October 16, 2012.

The Eighteenth Session of the India-Russia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological and Cultural Cooperation (IRIGC-TEC) was held in New Delhi on October 15, 2012. The Indian side was led by the Minister of External Affairs and the Chairman of the Indian side of the Commission, H.E. Mr. S.M. Krishna. The Russian side was led by the Deputy Prime Minister of the Government of the Russian Federation and the Chairman of the Russian side of the Commission, H.E. Mr. D.O. Rogozin.

2. During the meeting, the entire spectrum of India-Russia trade, economic, scientific, technological and cultural cooperation was reviewed. Both sides expressed optimism at the increase in bilateral trade turnover during the year. It was, however, acknowledged that the level of economic engagement was not commensurate with the potential which exists. The meeting was marked by a constructive approach towards resolving some outstanding concerns related to specific investments and projects. The main outcomes of the Inter-Governmental Commission (IGC) discussions are:

- It was agreed to carry forward the initial momentum gained from the newly constituted Working Group of Modernization and Industrial Cooperation. The focus of this new mechanism, which held its first meeting earlier this year, is to harness benefits from newer and innovative commercially-viable technologies.

- In addition to traditional sectors for bilateral trade and investment, newer arenas were identified for future growth and development. Some of these include civil aviation, infrastructure, audio-visual & entertainment services and micro, small & medium enterprises.

- The two sides agreed to bolster greater inter-regional cooperation between the two countries, encouraged by the recent successful visits from either side by official representatives and business communities of certain regions/States.

- The conclusion of a long-term purchase agreements for LNG between Indian and Russian energy companies in the past one year indicates that further synergies can be achieved in the energy sector.

- With the conclusion of over 500 joint projects in the field of Science & Technology, this remains one of the important pillars of the IGC framework. The opening of the two India-Russia S&T Centres in Moscow and Gurgaon in the last year can contribute in a constructive manner to deepen this engagement.

The next session of the IRIGC-TEC will be held in Moscow in 2013.

DPM Rogozin visited India on 13-15 October 2012. He was accompanied by senior officials of the Russian Government and more than 80 business representatives. During his visit, DPM Rogozin called on the Prime Minister. He also co-chaired the 6th India-Russia Forum for Trade and Investments (Oct 15, New Delhi), an active B2B forum between the two countries, along with the Indian Co-chair, the Commerce, Industries and Textiles Minister H.E. Shri Anand Sharma.

The interactions on October 15 also served to review the preparations for the forthcoming visit of the President of the Russian Federation, H. E. Mr. V.V. Putin to India for the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit.

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

1. I am delighted to join you for this sixth Indo-Russian Dialogue promoted by the Observer Research Foundation and RUSSKIY MIR. It is indeed a challenge to bring any fresh insights to such an august gathering of specialists and cognoscenti. Many of you have lived through the extraordinary years of our relations with Russia. I thought what might be most useful would be for me to share with you some perspectives on the current state of our relationship, which remains from Indian perspective perhaps the most vital, most decisive of our strategic partnerships.

2. We celebrate this year the sixty-fifth year of diplomatic relations between India and Russia—these relations even pre-date India’s independence! With the Soviet Union, independent India had one of its most enduring partnerships, which reached its zenith with the Indo-Soviet Treaty of Friendship that we signed in 1971. Even today, in this dramatically re-defined post-Cold War world, our relations with Russia remain a key priority for India’s foreign policy, and one which adds decisive value to our national capacities. We also like to believe that India continues to be as relevant to Russia. Our ‘special and privileged’ strategic partnership today rests on a strong edifice built upon traditional pillars of cooperation. Besides, Indo-Russian ties enjoy tremendous support in the public and across the political spectrum, in India as well as in Russia.

3. The timing of this event is excellent; this is the season of Russia in India. Last month, we hosted Deputy Prime Minister Rogozin, who visited India to co-chair our bilateral Inter-Governmental Commission, which incidentally is one of the largest and most elaborate mechanisms we have with any country in the world. In case you think that is a cliché, just come and see our Inter-Ministerial on Russia. Every Department of Government of India is there. The last round was another occasion to review our cooperation in every sector, to have candid exchanges and to constructively address some of the challenges that confront us. Earlier in the month, the Russian Defence Minister also came across to co-chair the military-technical commission, which assessed the state of health of our defence partnership. Again, Russia is the only country with which we have such a mechanism of annual ministerial review of defence relations; underlying its special role in defence perspective. And of course, we were privileged to see a scintillating display of Russian culture, music and the Bolshoi, for the Festival of Russia and Days of Moscow in Delhi that concluded just this month. We are now in the thick of preparations for the visit of President Putin to India next month. The annual summit mechanism we have with Russia is again unique, and reflects the multi-dimensional nature of our strategic partnership, of which President Putin is himself one of the architects. His visit will therefore be both symbolic and substantive, indeed as his previous visits have been.

4. In our strategic partnerships, we have today a tripod or 4 legged stool – political dialogue (starting from the highest level) which encompasses sharing of views – to counter terrorism cooperation; defence, civil, nuclear energy and space. Estimates say that close to 70 percent of our military hardware remains of Russian origin. And it is still necessary to have a reliable partner for hardware as it provides the wherewithal to deal with challenges. More importantly, we have moved to a phase of joint design and development, and of multi-year joint collaboration programmes, with substantive sharing of critical technologies. This is what makes our defence partnership unique and will sustain it over the next decade. I foresee this relationship diversifying and deepening as both India and Russia embark on modernizing their defence capabilities. We often hear rumblings in the media, both here and in Russia, whenever a big-ticket defence deal does not go the Russia way or when Russia collaborates with others. I am confident that our ties are much too mature to be shaped by individual deals in India’s competitive defence space, or by Russia expanding horizons.

5. Russia is equally a valuable partner in our national civilian nuclear energy programme. Despite the challenging events in recent times when the safety of nuclear technology has globally come in for extra scrutiny, Unit 1 at Kudankulam will be commissioned shortly and will be a tangible first milestone of our nuclear cooperation. Enough scientific studies have been undertaken and experts have given us credible assurances on the high safety and security parameters of this plant.

6. Similarly, in the space sector, we have collaborated on technologies which can integrate into platforms that India is developing. Access to the whole spectrum of GLONASS signals by Indian agencies is a major component of our space cooperation. This is matched by robust cooperation on important projects like Chandrayan 2, the Human Space Flight and YOUTHSAT.

7. So much for strategy. As we are all aware it is economy which makes the world go round. We therefore need, as was mentioned, to get over nostalgia for the past and look to the future which will be moulded by economic realities. What will determine the future of our economies is how rapidly we can innovate and improve our productivity and efficiencies and manage resources. With a carefully nurtured qualified talent pool and a network of reputed institutions, our cooperation in the sphere of Science & Technology has produced achievements we can be proud of. The Integrated Long Term Program for S&T cooperation is again a unique model which we have tried to replicate in other global scientific ties. I understand we have already undertaken more than 400 joint projects in areas ranging from basic sciences to cutting edge technologies. We again see scope for further improvement since, at least India, needs to play catch up with other countries who are investing heavily in research & development. A major challenge is also how to apply these from the laboratory to the assembly line and use them for the greater public good. The great record of Russian science (just recall the extraordinary achievements of the Academicians) makes this a partnership of great value.

8. In this very optimistic scenario, a major disappointment has been the inability of our trade and economic ties, led by our private players, to match the strategic ties led by our Governments. The fact that our private sectors are still not enthused enough to make major forays into each other's trillion plus dollar economies, defies reason. The Governments keep trying to create the right enabling conditions. We have for instance, identified a few sunrise industries which we can focus on: these include pharmaceuticals, information technology and space-based navigation systems for civilian purposes. In terms of logistics, the Government of India has been vigorously pursuing the idea of streamlining the North-South Trade Corridor which can link Mumbai to St. Petersburg, with a 40 percent cut in cost and time. We are pushing for a joint investment fund that could promote infrastructure projects in both countries. The Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade and Economic Cooperation as well as the B2B India-Russia Trade Forum, which meet annually, have been making efforts to come up with such creative solutions to meet the increasingly stiff task of raising our trade levels from the current around US dollar 10 billion to US dollar 20 billion by 2015.

9. We also seem to be making incremental progress, at a pace below expectation, might I say, in the hydrocarbon sector, where immense potential lies buried literally under the ground. Indian companies have proven their technical competencies in the past and are currently operating in many corners of the world. With over a decade of joint operations, our oil & gas entities are ever keen to explore Russia's vast energy resources and this will prove vital for both our future energy supply security, and equally, for Russia's energy demand security.

10. I would add that I believe Russian capability can be used in other areas – for better understanding of geology, for the development of gas reserves in India, and as a partner for pipeline development. We need to give urgent importance to our own energy sources and I am glad we are talking to other countries about new possibilities of reserves in the Indian Ocean basins and research on exploration of gas hydrates.
11. We need to work closely together with our Russian friends to push some major investment projects. While we seek to constructively engage on some investment episodes which have become irritants, we must ensure that they do not become deterrents for further forays. We need to look beyond and capitalize on the opportunities which will come with Russia’s accession to WTO and by the expansion of the Eurasian Economic space, a vision which President Putin himself is pioneering. We hope to start focussed discussions soon on a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA) with the Customs Union between Russia, Kazakhstan and Belarus.

12. On the bilateral front, therefore, the narrative of our relationship in this 65th anniversary year, is of “continuity with enriching changes”, a qualified take on one of the sessions, which I am told shall be discussing India-Russia ties.

13. On the global stage, Russia remains India’s trusted friend and confidante. Russia’s overt support for India’s permanent membership of the UNSC, the NSG, SCO and the APEC are extremely vital for us. Moreover, Russia has often tried to persuade others while endorsing India’s credentials. This is an outcome of the unique tradition of political proximity that we have cultivated over the years. At the ground level of course, our Foreign Offices frequently interact to discuss and coordinate positions on issues of regional and international interest. We have held discussions on the situation in South Asia, and on the developments in West Asia and Central Asia. We will continue our close consultations.

14. During this dialogue, I understand that the some global themes are also being analysed through the prism of India-Russia relations. I would be very interested to hear of the outcomes of these discussions on issues of contemporary relevance. Let me touch briefly on a few of these.

15. At the Delhi Summit earlier this year, we made an attempt to define the role of the BRICS in articulating issues of concern to the developing world, and to demonstrate our capacity to deal with issues of global peace, stability and development. Our leaders have endorsed an ambitious Action Plan at the Delhi Summit to take our cooperation forward. The BRICS countries today comprise new growth poles in a multi-polar world. As part of BRICS, we continue to serve as a catalyst in finding solutions to global challenges - the role of Russia in this forum is critical.

16. At the Foreign Office level, we have been having regular consultations on Afghanistan, especially before the major international conferences. Russia has been appreciative and encouraging of India’s capacity-building and developmental efforts in Afghanistan. Both our countries also have largely similar views on the developing situation there and the solutions that need to be sought. We appreciate the role played by Russia on this under the SCO framework, which we believe can play an important role in post-2014 Afghanistan.

17. I am sure our Russian colleagues would share their take on the Arab Spring. Our posture in the Security Council has been guided by our long standing ties with the region, our desire not to interfere in the internal affairs of States and our stance of being non-prescriptive. We have called for restraint in the use of coercive measures against people who should be permitted to freely articulate their aspirations. We believe that societies cannot be re-ordered from outside through military force and that people in all countries have the right to choose their own destiny and decide their own future.

18. It is deeply encouraging to see that India-Russia contacts include annual events like this one- focussing on the independent opinions of our vibrant civil societies, on the meeting of our minds. I wish the 6th Indo-Russian Dialogue all success.
538. Joint Statement on the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit: “Partnership for mutual benefit and a better world”

New Delhi, December 24, 2012.

The President of the Russian Federation, H.E. Mr. Vladmir V. Putin, paid an official visit to India on December 24, 2012 at the invitation of Prime Minister of the Republic of India H.E. Dr. Manmohan Singh for the Annual Summit between two countries. During the visit, President V. Putin met the President of India H.E. Mr. Pranab Mukherjee and the Prime Minister of India, H.E. Dr. Manmohan Singh. The Chairperson of the United Progressive Alliance Ms. Sonia Gandhi and the Leader of Opposition Ms. Sushma Swaraj called on President H.E. Mr. V. Putin.

The Prime Minister of India and the President of the Russian Federation stressed the importance of further progressing the special and privileged strategic partnership between the two countries. They expressed satisfaction that the year 2012 was marked by an intense bilateral dialogue, regular top and high-level meetings and multifarious cultural activities to mark the 65th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and the Russian Federation. The two leaders reviewed the progress made in all important areas of cooperation, including in sectors such as energy, trade, high technology and military-technical cooperation. The sides noted that they shared common views on all the important issues of regional and international cooperation.

The sides welcomed the conclusion of bilateral documents on Foreign Office consultations; cultural exchanges; science, technology and innovation; telecommunications; financing of projects and promoting investments. Significant contracts were also concluded in the sphere of military-technical cooperation.

The sides welcomed the reinvigoration of parliamentary exchanges and noted the visit by a delegation of the Russian State Duma Group of Deputies on December 4-8, 2012 to India as also the scheduled visit by a delegation led by the Chairperson of the Russian Federation Council to India in February 2013.

Promoting Trade and Investment

The sides expressed satisfaction at the substantial increase during 2011 and 2012 in bilateral trade and agreed to enhance efforts to achieve the target of US $20 billion bilateral trade by 2015. India welcomed Russia’s recent accession to the World Trade Organization and the both sides agreed that it provided further opportunities to augment bilateral trade and investment and business-to-business linkages. In this context, they called upon Russia-India Chief Executive Officers Council’s meeting at the earliest.

The sides agreed to work out a list of priority investment projects and a road map for their implementation. They favour discussions between India and the Eurasian Economic Commission on a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement between India and the Customs Union of the Republic of Belarus, the Republic of Kazakhstan and the Russian Federation.

The sides noted the outcomes of the successful meeting of the 18th session of the India - Russia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technical and Cultural Cooperation on October 15, 2012 in New Delhi. They welcomed the outcome of the first session of Joint Working Group on Modernization and Industrial Cooperation held in New Delhi on August 27-29, 2012, aimed at greater mutual participation in modernization, infrastructure development and industrial projects in the two countries. They also welcomed recommendations of the Joint Working Group on trade and economic cooperation. They stressed on further opportunities in the fields of pharmaceuticals, power, steel, food products, automobiles, engineering goods, fertilizers and directed the respective authorities to promote and facilitate bilateral trade and investment.

Deepening Energy Partnership

The sides reviewed the progress in bilateral cooperation in the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and reiterated their commitment to implementing the Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Russian Federation on cooperation in the construction of additional nuclear power plant units at Kudankulam site as well as in the construction of Russian designed Nuclear Power plants at new sites in the Republic of India, concluded on December 5, 2008; the Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Russian Federation on Cooperation in the Use of Atomic Energy for Peaceful Purposes and the Road Map for the Serial Construction of the Russian designed Nuclear Power Plants in the Republic of India, concluded on March 12, 2010.

The sides noted with satisfaction the progress in regard to the commissioning of the first unit of the Nuclear Power Plant at Kudankulam and agreed to take the necessary steps to expedite the completion and commissioning of the second unit. Expressing satisfaction over the signing of the Protocol for the grant of State Credit from the Russian Federation to the Republic of India for works, supplies and services for construction of Units 3 & 4 at Kudankulam and related fuel supplies, the sides agreed to conclude expeditiously the negotiations on the techno-commercial offer for the construction of Units 3 & 4. The sides also reiterated their commitment to incorporating the best technology in construction of nuclear power plants with a view to ensuring and maintaining the highest safety standards. The sides welcomed the outcome of the first meeting of the Joint Working Group between Department of Atomic Energy and State Corporation Rosatom in the field of peaceful uses of nuclear energy held in Moscow in July 2012.
Both sides noted the complementarities between India and the Russian Federation in the energy sector as a major buyer and supplier of hydrocarbons and reviewed the ongoing efforts to establish joint cooperation ventures between Indian and Russian companies. They confirmed their intention to continue the implementation of the Inter-Governmental Agreement on Cooperation in the hydrocarbon sector signed on December 21, 2010. The Indian side reiterated its interest in equity participation through ONGC-OVL in existing and new projects in Siberia, Russia’s Far East and the Arctic Shelf.

Indian Oil PSUs expressed interest in acquiring equity stake in discovered / producing assets and in proposed LNG liquefaction projects in Russia along with Russian oil and gas companies as well as in procuring Russian crude oil and off-take of LNG for India. The sides agreed to intensify efforts to enhance mutual investments in exploration and production of oil and gas in both the countries and joint ventures in upstream and downstream activities in India, Russia and third countries.

The Indian side noted the difficulties being faced by Imperial Energy and hoped that the ensuing tax reforms would help the Company to turn around.

The sides noted that to promote exploration and production cooperation between the two countries, it was essential to source oil and gas from Russia and leverage the market and downstream business in India with involvement of respective oil and gas companies of both the countries, ONGC Videsh in Russia for upstream business and Rosneft in India for downstream business.

Both sides noted that the gas supply to India by Gazprom Group will be a stable and reliable source of resources for the development of Indian gas market. Both sides welcomed the conclusion of long term LNG Sales and Purchase Agreement for the supply of 2.5 MMTPA of LNG between “Gazprom Marketing and Trading Singapore” and GAIL and expressed hope for continuation of cooperation in the sphere of LNG supply.

Science and Technology Cooperation

The sides noted with satisfaction that both Moscow and Delhi-NCR branches of the India-Russia Science & Technology Centre (IRSTC) had been set up and were working in close coordination to intensify interactions between Indian and Russian scientific/industrial institutions and shared the view that the IRSTC could play a prominent role in successful commercialization of Indian and Russian technologies in the two countries. The sides encouraged the ongoing dialogue on identified technology platforms which are of mutual benefit.

Both sides noted with satisfaction that the Memorandum of Cooperation between Ministry of Science & Technology, Government of India, and the Ministry of Education and Science of the Russian Federation in Science, Technology and Innovation had been concluded, to support bilateral projects. In addition to the flagship Integrated Long-Term Programme (ILTP) for cooperation in the areas of science, technology and innovations, the sides agreed that this MOU would provide an effective mechanism, particularly for universities and academic, research and industrial institutions, to collaborate. The sides expressed satisfaction over the implementation of the project in the area of technology solutions for fly ash management and utilization.

Education

The sides reviewed the status on recognition of diplomas of Indian students studying in Russian educational institutions. Expressing satisfaction at the ongoing educational exchanges between the two countries, the sides agreed to accelerate the conclusion of Inter-Governmental Agreement on mutual recognition and equivalence of educational documents and degrees.

Cultural and humanitarian exchanges

In the context of the rich cultural heritage and their mutual appreciation and interest for each other's culture, arts and the centuries-old bonds of friendship between India and Russia, the sides appreciated the joint celebrations of the 65th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and the Russian Federation and supported continued holding of annual reciprocal cultural festivals alternately in India and Russia. The sides welcomed the signing of Cultural Exchange Program for 2013-2015. They also encouraged enhanced cooperation between the think-tanks and academia of the two countries.

Both sides welcomed the increase in the exchange of tourists. The Indian side informed the Russian side that the number of tourist visas issued to Russian citizens travelling to India increased by 24% in 2011 and were expected to increase by further 20% in 2012. The Russian side also noted that the number of tourists from India to Russia more than doubled in 2012 as compared to 2011.

Promoting Ties in Space

The sides agreed to continue their mutually beneficial cooperation in the space sector, including lunar exploration and establishment of ranging station for satellite navigation.

Stepping Up Military-Technical Cooperation

Both sides emphasised that the traditionally close cooperation between the two countries in the defence and military-technical field was a major pillar of the India-Russia strategic partnership and a reflection of the trust and confidence that has built up between the two countries. The sides welcomed the outcomes of the Twelfth Meeting of the India - Russia Inter-Governmental Commission on Military Technical Cooperation held on October 10, 2012 in New Delhi. They expressed satisfaction at the regular bilateral interactions, ongoing military-technical cooperation and ‘INDRA’ exercise between the defence forces of the two countries held in August 2012 and in December 2012. The sides also noted that the frigates INS “Teg” and INS “Tarkash” were commissioned and delivered by Russia to India in 2012. The sides also took note of the progress made in the joint development and production of high technology military equipment and projects such as Fifth Generation Fighter Aircraft, Multi-Role Transport Aircraft and BrahMos Supersonic Missile. Both sides discussed measures required to ensure expeditious delivery of the aircraft carrier “Vikramaditya” to India. The Russian side assured that requisite measures would be taken in this regard.

Coordination on International and Regional Issues

The sides reaffirmed their will to work closely with the aim to consolidate central role of the United Nations in maintaining global peace and security and promoting economic and social advancement of all peoples. They stressed that international efforts to address global threats and challenges should be based on the rule of the law anchored in the UN Charter to ensure their legitimacy, impartiality, transparency and accountability. The two sides agreed to continue consultation and coordination on international and regional issues so as to support efforts for strengthening global peace, security and stability. They also expressed satisfaction at their cooperation in the UN including in the Security Council during India’s presence as a non-permanent member since January 1, 2011. Both sides reaffirmed the need for UN Security Council reform in order to make it more representative and effective in dealing with emerging challenges and agreed that any expansion of the Security Council should reflect contemporary realities. In this regard, the Russian Federation reiterated its strong support to India for a permanent seat in a reformed UN Security Council.

Combating Terrorism

The Prime Minister of India and the President of the Russian Federation recalled the Moscow Declaration between India and Russia on International Terrorism signed on November 6, 2001 in Moscow, and reaffirmed that international terrorism is a threat to peace and security, a grave violation of human rights, and a crime against humanity. Both sides reaffirmed the need for all States to combine efforts to vanquish terrorism. They agreed that there was no justification whatsoever for any act of terrorism, and those multi-ethnic democratic countries like India and Russia were especially vulnerable to acts of terrorism. The sides strongly condemned those who provide safe havens and sanctuaries for terrorism and reiterated that States that aid, abet or shelter terrorists are as guilty of acts of terrorism as their actual perpetrators. India and the Russian Federation reaffirmed the central role of the United Nations in the combat against international terrorism and in this context called for an early completion of the negotiations on the UN’s draft Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism.

Supporting Disarmament and Non-Proliferation Efforts

India and Russia, as responsible states, possessing advanced nuclear technologies, share the objective of preventing proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery, including preventing their possible acquisition by terrorist groups. Both sides agreed on the need for all states possessing nuclear weapons to accelerate concrete progress on the steps leading to global nuclear disarmament in a way that promotes international stability, peace and undiminished and increased security for all.

Both sides welcomed the recent bilateral consultations on disarmament, non-proliferation and export control issues held in Moscow in August 2012, which allowed exchange of views and assessments on a range of current issues. Both sides expressed interest in the strengthening of multilateral export control regimes as an important component of the global non-proliferation regime. Russia also took into positive consideration India’s interest in full membership in MTCR and Wassenaar Arrangement. The Russian side reiterated readiness to assist and promote a discussion and positive decision in the Nuclear Suppliers’ Group on India’s full membership in the NSG, and welcomed India’s intention to seek full membership. India underscored its determination to actively contribute to international efforts aimed at strengthening nuclear non-proliferation regime.

While recognizing the inherent right of states to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, India and the Russian Federation stressed the need for all states to comply with their respective obligations on non-proliferation. The sides support the central role of the IAEA and its safeguards system in promotion of peaceful uses of nuclear energy, in accordance with its statute. The sides intend to support international efforts aimed at promoting peaceful uses of nuclear energy as part of a proliferation-resistant architecture of international cooperation, based on strict implementation of non-proliferation obligations. As supplier states, the sides support multilateral approaches to the nuclear fuel cycle at the IAEA.

Both sides support international efforts for ensuring the peaceful uses of outer space through appropriate confidence building measures and legally binding measures. Strengthening Security Cooperation in Asia and the Indian and Pacific Ocean Regions

The sides noted that the economies in the Indian Ocean and Pacific regions were increasingly becoming the main drivers of global economic growth and prosperity and that it was important for India and Russia to work towards the creation of a transparent, open and inclusive regional architecture and equitable cooperation in the Asia Pacific region based upon the universally agreed principles of international law and giving due consideration to the legitimate interests of all States.

The sides underlined that they view the mechanism of the East Asia Summits as a leaders-led key forum for dialogue on broad strategic political and economic issues of common interest and concern with the aim of promoting peace, stability, and economic prosperity in Asia-Pacific. They underscored the importance of enhancing mutual understanding and ensuring peace, stability and security in the region in addressing trans-national and non-traditional security issues, including terrorism, extremism, weapons of mass destruction proliferation, illicit drug trafficking, organized crime as well as the need for strengthening maritime security in accordance with the universally accepted principles of international law.

The sides stated that the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) had emerged as an important factor for regional security, stability and cooperation in the Eurasian region. The Russian side reiterated its support to India's intention to join the SCO as a full-fledged member and stood for joint efforts with other SCO members to accelerate the process of India's entry into the Organization.

The sides stated that there are multifaceted formats of regional cooperation successfully functioning in the Asia-Pacific Region such as the mechanism of interaction between Russia, India and China, which promotes strengthening positions of our countries in global and regional affairs and assists to shape common approach to urgent world problems.

The sides noted the successful holding of the 11th Russia-India-China trilateral Ministerial meeting on April 13, 2012 in Moscow and agreed to advance practical cooperation in trilateral format in areas such as emergency response, health care, energy, agriculture, business, innovation and high technology. The Indian side conveyed it would host the next Ministerial meeting in 2013.

The sides noted the successful conduct by Russia of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Summit in Vladivostok in 2012. Russia reaffirmed that India’s potential joining of APEC would further promote and intensify trade and investment cooperation in the Asia-Pacific region. Russia reiterated its support for India’s membership in APEC after consensus within APEC on expanding the Forum’s membership is reached.

The sides underlined the importance of the ASEAN regional forum (ARF) and the ASEAN Defence Ministers’ meetings – Plus (ADMM-Plus) as key components of a robust, effective, open and inclusive regional security architecture.
Promoting Cooperation among Emerging Economies

The sides welcomed the successful conduct of the fourth BRICS summit in New Delhi on March 29, 2012. They noted that BRICS play an important role in a multi-polar world order and a more harmonious international system based on international law, equality, mutual respect, cooperation, coordinated action and collective decision-making. BRICS countries have also played an important role in promoting international economic and financial stability. Both sides reaffirmed their commitment to the Delhi Action Plan of 2012 BRICS Summit as a solid base for progressive development of BRICS. The sides are convinced that the forthcoming Durban Summit will contribute to strengthening of the role of BRICS in the world arena.

Situation in Syria

The sides expressed concern over the deteriorating security situation and continued violence in Syria and called upon all the parties to stop violence and engage in all inclusive national dialogue in order to resolve the conflict through peaceful political means on the internationally approved political and legal basis including the UN Security Council Resolutions 2042 and 2043 and the Joint Communiqué of the Geneva Action Group.

Stabilizing the Afghan Situation

The sides support the efforts made by the Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan to establish a peaceful dialogue with the armed opposition, provided that the process goes on under the Afghan leadership and that the fighters meet the redlines enunciated by the international community: the recognition of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, renunciation of violence and breaking with al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations. They consider it necessary to continue the UN Security Council sanctions regime as an essential anti-terror tool.

The sides noted with satisfaction the growing global understanding of the important role played by the neighbouring states of Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, states and organizations of the region, and urged to focus the efforts in the region on the development and improvement of sound structures of regional cooperation, like the SCO, CSTO and SAARC amongst others. In this regard, they also recalled the holding of the Delhi Investment Summit on Afghanistan in June 2012 to promote investments into Afghanistan. They expect that the international community in their efforts in this regard will respect the decisions taken by the countries of the region in the framework of these organizations.

The two sides recognised that the main threat to Afghanistan’s security and stability is terrorism, and that this threat also endangers regional and global peace and security. In this regard, they recognised the regional dimensions of terrorism and extremism, emphasizing the need for joint and concerted efforts and cooperation among the regional countries to address the challenge of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, including the dismantling of terrorist sanctuaries and safe havens, as well as disrupting all financial and tactical support for terrorism.

The sides recognise that drug production and narcotrafficking are the major source of funding for terrorists’ networks that requires collective action against the producers and traffickers of illegal drugs. They agreed to continue to take effective measures against the illegal production and trafficking of opiates and other narcotics. To this end, the two sides pledged to focus on the implementation of the Paris Pact Vienna Declaration.

Iran’s Nuclear Programme

The sides expressed concern over the situation emerging around Iran’s nuclear programme. They reiterated their call for a comprehensive and long-term settlement of the situation through exclusively political and diplomatic means by promoting dialogue. The sides noted in this context that unilateral sanctions are counter-productive. They recognized Iran’s right to develop research, produce and use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes in conformity with its international obligations. They urged Iran to comply with the provisions of the relevant UN Security Council Resolutions and extend full cooperation to the IAEA.

Recovery and Strengthening of Global Economy, Reforming the International Financial Architecture

The two sides noted that the global economy continued to face multiple challenges and agreed that multilateralism was indispensable to resolve these challenges. They support the G20 as the premier forum for international economic cooperation in playing a greater role in global economic governance. Both sides emphasised the need to better coordinate macroeconomic policies of the G20 members to ensure strong, sustainable and balanced growth in the global economy. India welcomed Russia’s Presidency of the G20 and both sides agreed to intensify consultations and coordination on the G20 process during the Russian Presidency.

Both sides reiterated the need for a more representative and legitimate international financial architecture, with an increase in the voice and representation of emerging market economies and developing countries. The two sides underscored the need to push ahead expeditiously with the reform of the IMF agreed in 2010, so that it becomes the basis for the Fifteenth General Review of quotas to be completed no later than January 2014.

The sides emphasised the need for strengthening the international monetary system – one that is resilient to future turmoil – that can serve the interests of the world community and support the development of emerging market economies and developing countries.

Environment/Sustainable Development

The two sides welcomed the outcome of the UN Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20) held in Rio de Janeiro from June 20-22, 2012 and agreed to work together for the expeditious implementation of the follow-up processes agreed therein. They stressed the importance of enhancing international efforts to combat climate change under the aegis of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change. The sides expressed satisfaction at the results of the 18th Conference of the Parties of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change/ 8th meeting of the Parties to the Kyoto Protocol held in Doha, Qatar, from November 26 to December 8, 2012. Russia expressed its appreciation for India’s hosting of the 11th Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity in Hyderabad, India, on October 8-19, 2012.

The India-Russia Summit was marked by an atmosphere of traditional friendship and mutual understanding. The President of the Russian Federation expressed his appreciation to the leadership of the Republic of India for the hospitality and warm welcome in New Delhi and invited the Prime Minister of the Republic of India to pay an official visit to Russia. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

540. Statement by the Prime Minister to the media at the 13th India-Russia Annual Summit.

New Delhi, December 24, 2012.

Distinguished Representatives of the Media

Ladies and Gentlemen

It is my great pleasure to welcome His Excellency President Vladimir Putin to India for the 2012 India - Russia Annual Summit. President Putin is a valued friend of India and the original architect of the India-Russia strategic partnership. I conveyed to President Putin our deep appreciation for his long-standing and personal commitment to this partnership.

This morning, we undertook an extensive review of our multi-faceted bilateral cooperation, especially in energy, defence, space, trade and investment, science and technology, education, culture and tourism. The documents signed during this visit will further strengthen the framework for our cooperation.

The development of our nuclear energy programme has been a key pillar of our strategic partnership. Construction of Unit 1 of the Kudankulam Nuclear Power Project is now complete, and power generation will commence shortly. India appreciates deeply the support extended by Russian engineers and scientists in this project. We look forward to the completion of Unit 2 next year.

Negotiations for the construction of Units 3 and 4 at Kudankulam have made good progress. We intend to continue implementing the Roadmap for cooperation in the nuclear energy sector that was signed during President Putin's visit in 2010 as the then Prime Minister of Russia.

Our energy cooperation also extends to the oil and natural gas sectors. I conveyed to President Putin India's interest in deepening cooperation in this area, including through mutual investments and joint projects in third countries.

Russia is a key partner in our efforts to modernize our armed forces and enhance our defence preparedness. A number of joint design, development and production projects are underway in high technology areas. We expressed satisfaction that these projects are progressing well.

I congratulated President Putin on Russia's accession to the World Trade Organization. Russia's deeper integration into the global economy will present more opportunities for the business communities in both countries. Our bilateral trade has grown by over 30% this year. There is still untapped potential in areas such as pharmaceuticals, fertilizers, mining, steel, information technology, civil aviation, telecommunications, infrastructure, food processing, innovation and services, which we will work to exploit. We have asked our inter-governmental and business level groups to recommend specific steps for enhancing bilateral trade and investment flows.

Our science and technology cooperation remains robust. President Putin and I welcomed the operationalization of the India-Russia Joint Science and Technology Centres in India and Russia, which can assist the development and commercialization of promising technologies, including in nano-technology, biomedicine and super-computing. I particularly welcome the agreement on cooperation in using the GLONASS satellite navigation system that has just been signed.

We also discussed regional and global issues, on many of which there is a marked congruence in our approach. Our consultations in international fora, such as the UN Security Council and BRICS, have deepened during the year. I congratulated President Putin on Russia’s assumption of the Chair of G-20. We look forward to working closely with Russia in promoting reform of global economic and international structures of governance.

India and Russia share the objective of a stable, united, democratic and prosperous Afghanistan, free from extremism, terrorism and external interference. We reviewed the ongoing developments in Afghanistan, and agreed to work together against threats posed by extremist ideologies and drug trafficking. We also discussed the situation in West Asia, and agreed to continue consultations.

This year marks the sixty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Russia. We deeply value Russia’s steadfast friendship and support for India, unaffected by global developments. This relationship has a special place in the hearts and minds of Indians and India remains committed to further deepening it.

I once again extend a very warm welcome to President Putin and his delegation, and wish him and the people of Russia the very best for the New Year.

Thank you
SPAIN

541. Press Release on the Visit of External Affairs Minister to Spain.

New Delhi, April 17, 2012.

External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna will visit Spain from 19th to 21st April 2012 for bilateral discussions with Mr. Jose Manuel Garcia-Margallo, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation of Spain. During his visit to Spain, External Affairs Minister will meet Mr. Artur Mas, President of the Government of Catalonia, and Mr. Gilbert Saboya Sunyé, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Principality of Andorra. External Affairs Minister will also call on His Majesty the King Don Juan Carlos of Spain.

2. Relations between India and Spain are cordial. There have been regular high level Ministerial and official visits from both sides. India-Spain economic, trade and investment relations have grown substantially in the last few years and the India-Spain bilateral trade in the year 2011 stood at US $ 5.84 billion. Spain is the 13th largest investor in India with total FDI at US $ 820 million. Spain was also the Partner Country at the 17th edition of the Technology Summit and Technology Platform organized by the Department of Science and Technology in New Delhi in November, 2011. The Chief Minister of the Basque Province, Mr Patxi Lopez, visited India in March 2012 to see projects being implemented by his Province in India and to seek business opportunities. He was accompanied by a large business delegation. The Basque Province and Catalonia contribute substantially to the trade turnover with India. India has also helped in the setting up of the Casa de la India in the University of Valladolid in Spain. The Casa constitutes a new platform for the dissemination of Indian culture in Spain.

3. The External Affairs Minister will interact with representatives of the Indian community, which is estimated to number about 50,000 in Spain.

4. During his visit to Spain the External Affairs Minister will chair a Conference of Heads of Indian Missions based in Europe. Ms. Preneet Kaur, Minister of State for External Affairs, will also address the Conference.
542. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson and Joint Secretary (Europe West) on visit of the King of Spain.

New Delhi, October 23, 2012.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon friends, thank you very much for coming this afternoon. I have one announcement to make. I have with me Joint Secretary (Europe West), Ms. Ruchi Ghanashyam, who will speak to you on the topic of the announcement that I have to make.

The announcement is about the visit of His Majesty King Juan Carlos I of Spain to India. He will be on a state visit to India from October 24 to 27. He will be visiting Mumbai and Delhi during the course of that visit. While in Delhi the King of Spain will be accorded a ceremonial welcome on 26th October. That is his day of engagement, and he will have several other engagements on 26th of October. These engagements of course will include delegation-level talks with the Prime Minister. The President of India will host a banquet in his honour, and we will have several calls and meeting which will be explained by my colleague.

As you are perhaps aware, India and Spain have approximately a five billion dollar bilateral trade. This represents a growth area as far as bilateral trade is concerned of about 18 per cent over the previous year. Spanish investment in India is about 1.15 billion dollars and Indian investment in Spain is about 605 million Euros. We hope that the visit of the King of Spain will carry forward the process of high-level interaction between our two countries and deepen the relations.

I have nothing further to announce, and I will ask Joint Secretary (Europe West) to speak a little bit about the visit and then respond to any questions that you may have on the forthcoming visit. Over to you, Ruchi.

Joint Secretary (Europe West) (Ms. Ruchi Ghanashyam): Thanks Akbar, and thank you all for coming here today.

JS (XP) has just given you the brief outline. I think he left the various calls in Delhi to me. These would include the call by Hon. Vice-President, by Hon. External Affairs Minister, call by the Hon. Chairperson of UPA and the Hon. Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha. His Majesty will leave Delhi on 27th October.

He will be accompanied by senior Cabinet Ministers as well as a team of Spanish businessman from the infrastructure, transport, services, energy, industry and technology sectors. Discussions would focus on bilateral, regional, and international issues of mutual interest. Given the strong economic delegation accompanying His Majesty, discussions are likely to have a strong economic and investment related focus as well.
As JS (XP) already explained, India and Spain have a bilateral trade close to US dollars five billion which represents a growth of almost, this was in 2011, 18 per cent over 2010. Spain has been a reliable partner in terms of investments as well. Spanish investments in India amount to over 1.15 billion US dollars, while India also has investments of around 605 million Euros in Spain.

Some discussions may also take place over the defence sector. India and Spain have common concerns over terrorism. Spain has also suffered terrorist attacks, for example the March 2004 attack on a crowded commuter train in Madrid. Both countries are concerned about the threat of piracy.

Spain is dealing with the debt and Eurozone crisis which has also affected a number of countries in Europe as also many countries around the globe. However, Spain is a 1.3 trillion dollar economy with a broad industrial base and strength in a number of areas of interest to India.

India and Spain also have a very good, robust, vibrant ongoing cooperation in the area of culture. There is a lot of interest in Indian culture in Spain. The Spanish royal family has a long and abiding interest in Indian culture. The Casa de la India is a unique platform for dissemination of Indian culture in Spain. The Cervantes Institute promotes Spanish language in India. The Sixth India-Spain Tribune Meeting was recently organized in New Delhi by the Indian Council of World Affairs.

These are some of the important areas that bind India and Spain together. The visit of His Majesty is expected to give a fillip and a further boost to our bilateral relations with Spain.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: We will begin with questions on the visit of King Juan Carlos, and then move on to anything else that you would like to ask.

Question: Do we have any plans to get Picasso’s La Guernica from the Madrid Museum and organizing any Spanish festival in India? A lot of people have read Cervantes’ Don Quixote in the childhood. Anything connected with that? We see a lot of Spain in films in Tamil films and all that. But are you doing anything about that?

Joint Secretary (Europe West): I do not think I would be in a position to comment on what the Spanish Embassy may be planning to do India. There is a lot of ongoing activity which I have outlined. The visit of His Majesty would surely encourage further exchanges in the cultural arena between the two countries.

Question: I am from Spanish News EFE. I have a couple of questions. One of them is, India and Spain are discussing the debt and Eurozone crisis. In that case, what would be the Indian advice to Spain at this moment? Second, I would like to know if India has any comment to make about the perspectives in the Basque Country and Catalonia in which we have regionalist leaders talking about a referendum. The same thing is happening now in Scotland. But I do not know if India has any official position over these issues.

Joint Secretary (Europe West): The Eurozone crisis is an important crisis that is engaging the attention of world leaders. So, as I mentioned, we would be very much looking forward to the perspectives of Spain and how Spain is dealing with this. As for internal issues in Spain, I do not think I would like to comment on that.

Question: You said that the Spanish royal family has this long and abiding interest in Indian culture. Can you illustrate it a bit?

Joint Secretary (Europe West): This is not His Majesty’s first visit to India. He was the Chief Guest at the Republic Day celebrations in 1982. Prior to that, they have made private visits as well. They take a lot of interest in India. It is not a hidden interest. They have a lot of interest in India. This helps in cementing the two nations, the two peoples together.

Question: Can you elaborate a little bit more as to why he is going to Mumbai?

Joint Secretary (Europe West): Why would the Spanish side choose to go to Mumbai? That would be speculating. So, I do not know if I should really be commenting on that. All I would say is that Mumbai is an important commercial centre of India, and His Majesty is accompanied by a strong economic and business team.

Question: You mentioned that there would be some talk of cooperation in the defence sector. What kind of cooperation do we have? Do we have anything at this point and how are we planning to take it forward?

Joint Secretary (Europe West): There is some ongoing cooperation. But I think it would be incorrect for me to go into the details of what kind of defence areas we may be discussing about. It is a little premature at this stage for me to get into the details.

Question: You also spoke about concerns both countries have regarding terrorism and piracy. What is the kind of cooperation that we can expect in terms of terror cooperation and cooperation with regard to piracy?

Joint Secretary (Europe West): We are talking to a number of countries on international cooperation on terrorism. India and Spain will also definitely look at this issue which is an issue that affects everyone around the globe.

Question: What is the ongoing defence cooperation between the two countries?
Official Spokesperson: I think the areas of cooperation at this stage are very minimal. The idea that she was trying to indicate was that there will be discussions because the Defence Minister is here in the team. The outcome will be provided to you when we have an outcome document of the visit. At this stage we do not want to further add to what is available in the public domain on that.

Question: I think they are part of this consortium, EADS on MMRCA? Has Spain raised this issue with India on the MMRCA? Germany has already said that it is not a closed deal for them?

Official Spokesperson: If I can mention, the last time we had high-level consultations was when the External Affairs Minister visited Madrid, I think it was sometime in April, and at that stage this issue did not come up. And if your question is further that whether they will raise it, I think we will have to wait for an answer for that.

Thank you very much.

New Delhi

October 26, 2012
India and Spain today signed an Audio visual Co-production Agreement seeking to improve cooperation between the two countries in the audio visual sector. The Agreement was signed between Smt. Ambika Soni, Minister for Information & Broadcasting and Mr. Jose Garcia Margallo Y. Marfil, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Cooperation, Kingdom of Spain. The agreement establishes a legal framework for relations regarding cooperation between the two countries in the audio visual field thereby facilitating the development of the audio visual industry. The framework for co production includes feature films, documentary and animation films.

The agreement provides opportunities for both the countries to pool their creative, artistic, technical, financial and marketing resources to co-produce films. The co-production would provide an opportunity to create and showcase ‘soft power’ of our Country. It would also lead to generation of employment among artistic, technical as well as non-technical personnel engaged in the arena of film production including post-production and its marketing, thus adding to the country’s GDP. The utilization of Indian locales for shooting raises the visibility/prospects of India as a preferred film shooting destination across the globe. It will also lead to inflow of foreign exchange into the country and transparent funding of film production.

545. Press Release of the Ministry of Finance on the Mutual Agreement between India and Switzerland for liberal interpretation of the Identity Requirements for providing information under DTAA.

New Delhi, April 30, 2012.

Mutual Agreement between the Competent Authorities of Republic of India and the Swiss Confederation for liberal interpretation of the identity requirements for providing information as per Article 26 of the Agreement for the Avoidance of Double Taxation (DTAA) with respect to income as amended by the 2010 Protocol was signed on 20th April, 2012 by Mr. Sanjay Kumar Mishra, Joint Secretary, Foreign Tax & Tax Research division, Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT), Department of Revenue, Ministry of Finance for the Indian side and Mr. Jürg Giraudi, Head of the Division of International Tax Affairs, Swiss Federal Department of Finance, Switzerland. After approval of the Cabinet on 23rd March 2012, this Mutual Agreement has been signed on 20th April, 2012 but the liberal interpretation to Article 26 of the DIM as agreed upon in this Mutual Agreement will apply from the date on which the amending Protocol which was signed on 30th August, 2010, has come into effect i.e., 01.04.2011.

The salient features of this mutual agreement are:

• As per the existing treaty, the requesting State has to compulsorily provide the name of the person under examination and the name of the foreign holder of the information as part of the identity requirements without which the information will not be shared by the other country. This was a restrictive provision and not in line with the international standards.

• Switzerland, now, has agreed to provide liberal interpretation on the identity requirements that it is sufficient if the requesting state identifies the person by other means than by indicating the name and address of the person concerned, and indicates to the extent known, the name and address of any person believed to be in possession of the requested information.

• This Agreement is beneficial to India because it gives liberal interpretation to the identity requirements for exchange of information which India will be seeking from Switzerland and is in line with international standards. The conditions as clarified by Switzerland, will enable India to get information even if we have only limited details regarding the person having bank accounts in Switzerland.

546. Response of the Official Spokesperson on India-UK relations.

   New Delhi, February 8, 2012.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesperson stated the following:

“Relations between India and UK are warm and friendly and have stood the test of time. India appreciates cooperation extended by UK in a number of areas, which have contributed to India’s overall development efforts, particularly through capacity building, exchange of best practices, knowledge sharing and sharing of technology and technical expertise. The bilateral cooperation between India and UK has been and remains mutually beneficial.

The spokesman was referring to the media reports of adverse reaction in the United Kingdom to India choosing French fighter aircraft for a multi-billion dollar purchase for the Indian Air Force.”
Shri Anand Sharma, Commerce, Industry and Textiles Minister who is in London for the 8th round of India-UK Joint Economic and Trade Committee (JETCO) Meeting, today held official meetings with his British counterpart Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, Dr. Vince Cable and the Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. George Osborne in addition to leading the Indian deliberations at the JETCO. Shri Anand Sharma and Dr. Vince Cable addressed the JETCO meeting. The FICCI and CII have led industry delegations of leading businessmen from India to the meeting. The JETCO was established on 13 January 2005 in New Delhi to steer the strategic economic partnership between the two countries following the historic Joint Declaration “India-UK towards a new and dynamic partnership” between Prime Ministers Dr. Manmohan Singh and Tony Blair in September 2004 in London. The JETCO has been conceived as a business driven institutional framework to enhance trade and investment both ways. Shri Anand Sharma and Dr. Vince Cable had led the respective delegations at the 7th JETCO meeting last year in New Delhi. Today’s meeting saw both industry and Government come together for healthy discussions in the Joint Working Groups on the themes of Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering, Education and Skills Development, Investment and Innovation and Logistics. The outcomes of these deliberations were presented by the leaders of the groups in the Plenary session. Outcomes of the discussions in the Britain-India Infrastructure Group (BIIIG), which has been meeting separately were also taken onboard during the Plenary Session.

Both sides agreed to concentrate on Education and Skills Development and innovation and healthcare technology, particularly cardiology. In the advanced manufacturing and engineering sector the meeting identified several projects like collaboration between BAE systems and Mahindra & Mahindra, JV between Hindustan Aeronautics Limited and Rolls Royce and collaboration between Bhushan Power & Steel and CDE Asia Limited for immediate implementation. The Ministers also participated in the release of a Compendium on partnerships in Skills and Education and the launch of a dedicated website of the UK-India Skills Forum.

During the bilateral meetings with Dr. Vince Cable and George Osborne Shri Anand Sharma highlighted the scope for greater cooperation between the two countries in trade and investment, particularly in critical areas like infrastructure, healthcare, skills development, advanced manufacturing and innovative technologies. Shri Sharma referred to the need for improving the regulatory environment for investments. He pointed out that Indian companies who want to acquire companies in the UK have been facing considerable delay and long legal hassles. He highlighted the concerns of Indian companies who want to visit UK for business meetings and also the long delay in obtaining Visa by Indian nationals. Shri Sharma also flagged the issue of the restrictions imposed on non-EU immigration into the UK which is adversely affecting the operations of Indian companies in the UK. He specifically referred to the UK Border Agency treating Intra Company Transfers of IT experts, professionals and highly skilled workers as prospective immigrants which has affected has badly affected the performance of Indian companies operating in the UK. He also expressed concern that this move may force Indian companies, especially IT companies to relocate to other European capitals. Shri Sharma appreciated the UK Government’s intention to reduce net immigration “to tens of thousands” and clarified that Indian experts coming to the UK leave the country after completion of their contractual obligations with their employers in the UK and therefore they cannot be treated as economic migrants. He highlighted the vast contributions of Indian professionals to the UK economy. He also informed the Chancellor that stoppage of Post Study Work Permits to students has not found favourable to Indian students who are not able to recover the cost of their education in the UK universities and therefore they are now looking for options to study in other countries. He stressed that this development is expected to impact the UK universities where at present over 40,000 Indians students have been studying.

Dr. Vince Cable emphasised the British Government’s desire to further strengthen the ties with India. He highlighted the importance of economic collaboration by protecting and creating jobs through trade and investment for economic recovery. He referred to the Global Investment Conference which the British Government is organizing at Lancaster House one day before the London Olympics started, as an initiative to drive the world economy out of the crisis. It is understood that Prime Minister David Cameron had personally invited Shri Anand Sharma to attend this Investment Conference. Dr. Cable thanked Shri Sharma for agreeing to take part in the conference and the Panel discussion on the theme “Regional Growth, Opportunities, Trade and Foreign Direct Investment”. He also discussed about the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to London during this year at a mutually convenient time as it is will arrive at important decisions to further push the ties.

Mr. George Osborne told Shri Sharma that for the British Government led by the Conservative party, enhancement of relations with India has been a top priority. He added that this was reiterates by Prime Minister David Cameron on several occasions including last month in New Delhi during his televised address at the India Today Conclave and the launch of ‘Great Britain’ campaign in India. It would be UK Government’s endeavour to create a long lasting partnership with India in all areas of polity for building our two economies stronger. He underlined that UK and India are close allies in the comity of international business and coordinate common issues in fora like WTO, IMF, G-20, etc. Mr. Osborne also briefed Shri Sharma about the sovereign debt crisis in the Eurozone and the decisions arrived at the recent summits in Brussels for the return of Europe-led global growth and recovery. He also referred to his fruitful meeting with Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Finance Minister, in New Delhi during the UK-India Economic and Financial Dialogue in the beginning of this month where several issues of mutual interest were discussed. He clarified that the UK Government thereafter has taken the decision not to make any change in the Intra Company Transfers for the next two years and that there will not be any increase in the salary cap for such transfers. He acknowledged the contributions of Indian people and praised the performance of Indian companies. He added that UK remains keenly interested in getting highly qualified professionals from India.

In his address at the JETCO plenary session of over 150 businessmen from both countries at the Royal Society here, Shri Anand Sharma congratulated the Joint Working Groups in identifying concrete projects and tangible results which are critically important for India’s development and inclusive growth. He urged them to focus on implementation of the identified deliverables, building upon the decisions taken during the New Delhi meeting. He expressed satisfaction that trade and investment between the two countries have been growing despite the global economic crisis and serious sovereign debt crisis in the Eurozone. He underlined that India is committed to continue to grow in the trajectory of robust growth for the next 25-30 years. He reiterated that the Government of India is committed to create investor friendly environment in the country through the FDI route, implementation of the new National Manufacturing Policy and creation of enabling financial framework for investment outward investment by Indian companies abroad and for foreign companies in India. Shri Sharma invited the British companies to investment in the infrastructure development projects in various parts of India including the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor and Bangalore-Chennai corridor.
Joint Press Statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of UK and the Finance Minister of India after the Fifth Round of UK-India Economic and Financial Dialogue.

New Delhi, April 2, 2012.

We, the Finance Ministers of the UK and India, met today in the fifth round of our annual Economic and Financial Dialogue. The talks included senior representatives of our Finance Ministries and regulatory bodies. We discussed ways to strengthen our mutual cooperation and further boost trade and investment between our two countries.

Both sides agreed that while the global economy has stabilized in recent months, growth will remain subdued and at risk from a series of threats. UK and India share a common commitment to play their part to support the recovery, ensure financial stability and restore confidence. Both countries remain determined to deliver necessary fiscal consolidation plans to secure sustainable public finances.

Both sides welcomed the exchange of ideas in financing infrastructure as part of the Dialogue, noting that both countries share a common aim of increasing the role of institutional investors in infrastructure financing.

Both sides also discussed the importance of developing deep and efficient capital markets to support infrastructure financing in India. Foreign capital can play an important part in this process.

Both sides supported the progress on the Reserve Bank of India’s (RBI) roadmap for foreign banks in India and UK side welcomed the desire by the Indian side to resolve outstanding issues, including those on tax, of the RBI’s subsidiarisation proposals for foreign banks.

Both sides discussed the steps that are being taken to simplify and harmonise financial services legislation including through the work of the Financial Sector Legislative Reforms Commission (FSLRC) in India, and the UK’s ongoing implementation of the recommendations of the Independent Commission on Banking. Both sides agreed that there was a clear benefit to sharing experiences on this and welcomed the ongoing technical collaboration to assist the FSLRC in carrying out its mandate.

Both sides welcomed the Cannes Action Plan for Growth and Jobs agreed at the November 2011 Cannes Summit and are making progress in implementing these commitments, which remain fully relevant to the shared objectives of strong, sustainable and balanced growth. Both sides emphasized the importance of investment, in particular in infrastructure, to strengthen the global recovery and rebalance demand.
Both sides are committed to ensuring that the IMF is adequately resourced to play its systemic role in the international financial system in support of its entire membership and that the quota and governance reforms of the IMF are implemented within the agreed timelines.

Both sides agreed to remain committed to pursuing the financial regulatory reform agenda according to the timetable agreed in G-20 in an internationally consistent and non-discriminatory manner. This will be monitored by the Financial Stability Board through its Coordination Framework for Implementation Monitoring. Both sides discussed the joint approaches to meeting these commitments and will continue to work together to strengthen the global financial system.

Both sides recognized the need for countries to sign the Multilateral Convention on Mutual Administrative Assistance in Tax Matters and engage in automatic exchange of information where legally required to improve tax compliance and decrease tax evasion.

Recognising the importance of open trade for the global economy, India and UK reaffirmed their commitment to refrain from protectionism. Both sides signaled their commitment to the WTO and agreed to consider new approaches to taking forward the Doha round, with a clear focus on delivering outcomes for the least developed countries.

Both sides confirmed their intention for India and the UK to continue to work closely to develop ever stronger links across a wide spectrum of issues in pursuit of the ambitious mutual aspiration to achieve a step change in two way trade. India and the UK welcomed the 40% year on year increase in the export of goods from the UK to India and the increase by 35.05% of exports from India to UK in 2011. Both sides continue to work towards enhancing this growth.

Both sides agreed to remain fully committed to resolving the remaining issues and are working towards concluding a mutually beneficial India-EU Broad based Trade & Investment Agreement at the earliest.

Both sides recognized the important role that small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) play in underpinning economic growth and employment in both our countries, and discussed the challenges they face, particularly in raising finance, and resolved to work together to promote trade and investment between the SME sectors of the two countries.

Today’s dialogue reaffirmed the continued strength of the UK-India economic and financial relationship. Both sides agreed to continue to work closely throughout the year to follow through on their commitments and look forward to the next round of talks in 2013.
Joint Press Conference of External Affairs Minister and Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of the United Kingdom.

New Delhi, November 8, 2012.

Deputy Secretary (XP) (Shri Bishwadip Dey): Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen. I welcome you all to today's media event.

We will first have opening remarks by the honourable Ministers after which the floor would be open for questions. May I request Hon. External Affairs Minister Shri Salman Khurshid to make his opening remarks.

External Affairs Minister (Shri Salman Khurshid): Thank you.

I am delighted that we have with us Mr. William Hague, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of United Kingdom, a friend of India and a person that you are all familiar with, outstanding friend of our country. For me, I am privileged to have someone from my old University join me here in these august surroundings. I am indeed delighted that I am welcoming His Excellency as the first serving Foreign Minister in our country after I took office. I look forward to a very very significant and a very wholesome relationship of our working together both for bilateral and for multilateral issues.

We have discussed a wide range of subjects today and if I was to start talking about them, we would be here for well past lunch time. But the strengths that we have, we have emphasized those in the areas in which we need to move forward and look forward to moving forward. We have emphasized, we have looked at our partnership strengths, in the areas that include trade and investment, security, defence, education, science and technology. We do hope that in view of our enhanced strategic relationship, we will continue to move forward and further strengthen cooperation in strategic areas and to address all sensitive issues that concern us both and concern the world.

India has become the third largest investor in the UK, and that is good news. There are now 700 Indian companies in the UK. UK is the largest market in Europe for Indian IT services. UK is also the third largest inward investor into India. So, trade and investment is obviously the most important plank of our growing bilateral relationship.

Security, defence, and particularly counter-terrorism cooperation form again a very important aspect of our relations. To this expanding and ever expanding list we have added cyber security cooperation as well, a subject very dear to Secretary’s heart. We recently held the India-UK Cyber Security Dialogue in London last month and Secretary Hague and I welcomed this new initiative.
during our discussions. The Joint Statement on Cyber Cooperation will be issued immediately after this press interaction. This is an emerging area of cooperation between us that we will give high priority to.

I look forward to continuing this relationship and our discussions over lunch when we will have a chance to discuss regional issues and some more global issues.

Thank you very much.

Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of UK (Mr. William Hague): Thank you very much indeed. I am delighted to return to India and I am very grateful to my new counterpart His Excellency Shri Salman Khurshid for the warm welcome he has extended to me today. And I am pleased to be among the first Foreign Ministers to have the chance to discuss with him the many pressing challenges that we face together.

On our election in 2010, the British Government made clear that we would invest significantly in many ways in the UK-India relationship to build a stronger and wider and deeper partnership together. For us this is an essential pillar in our broader strategy to build far closer relations with the powers of the South and the East and the world. I have often said that I believe that 21st century more than any previous period will be shaped by India.

Since 2010 our partnership has truly become stronger, wider and deeper already, and we are on course to hit our target of doubling trade by 2015. British companies are leading the way, investing in India in key sectors such as energy, telecommunications and education. The largest single foreign investments into India are British by Vodafone and by BP. As the Minister has said, this is a two-way process. Indian companies have chosen to invest more in the United Kingdom than in the whole of the rest of the European Union combined with great success as Tata’s investments in companies such as Jaguar and Land Rover have shown.

Beyond business, the finest minds in our two countries are increasingly working together for the benefit of both our nations and the world. Our joint Government-led research funding has now passed 100 million pounds compared to one million pounds three years ago. I am delighted that each year over 30,000 ambitious young Indians choose the United Kingdom for their higher education. And as home to four of the world’s top ten Universities, I am confident that Britain offers these students the very best in their pursuit of knowledge.

I am also pleased by the progress we are making to strengthen our civil nuclear cooperation both commercially and through our research institutions. We have also agreed, as you have heard, a communique to steer our future cooperation on cyber security. This agreement confirms our shared commitment to the core principles of liberty, transparency, freedom of expression and the rule of law in cyberspace.

Our diplomatic networks play a vital role in creating opportunities for partnership. Since 2010 we have agreed to open two new Deputy High Commissions in Hyderabad and Chandigarh. The British diplomatic presence in India is now more extensive than that of any other nation, and we hope to develop this further over the coming years. And our recent decision to re-engage with the Government of Gujarat now offers us the chance to strengthen our ties across the breadth of India.

Our partnership is not limited to cooperation on British or Indian soil. We have worked increasingly closely together on matters of international security, not only cyber security as we mentioned but counter-terrorism and the security of chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear materials. We have also worked closely together with India during her tenure on the United Nations Security Council, and we look forward to the time when India has a permanent seat on the United Nations Security Council. We also support India’s membership of the International export control regimes.

I know that we will discuss a range of other foreign policy issues later including Afghanistan and also other issues in India’s neighbourhood on which we greatly value India’s counsel and cooperation.

We will discuss, I am sure, the situation in Syria where the British Government, we are appalled by the regime’s brutal repression. I welcome India’s support over recent months for a stronger role for the UN in bringing an end to the violence in Syria. I think we are both committed to pursuing a peaceful political transition and working to support the work of the UN-Arab League Special Envoy Lakhdar Brahimi in his efforts to achieve this.

So, ours is a genuine partnership of equals between the UK and India that we have done a lot to build up over the last two and a half years. But there are many more exciting opportunities, and we look forward to taking this on to the next stage and to being a partner of choice for India in many areas over the years to come.

Thank you.

Deputy Secretary (XP): Hon. Ministers have kindly agreed to take a few questions.

Question (Mr. Shailendra Wangu, ETV): My question is addressed to Secretary of State. Sir, what has changed now after twenty years that made UK to lift their travel advisory to the State of Jammu and Kashmir.
Secretary of State: What has changed is the situation on the ground. We take our travel advice very very seriously in the UK and we only change it if the facts have changed. Our travel advice is never political. It seeks to give genuine travel advice for the safety of travelers across the world. There has been an improvement in the situation. It is possible to say that people can travel to certain places that have been too difficult or dangerous for them to go to for a long time. That is obviously a good development. Our advice is always based on our understanding of the facts, and that is true in this case.

Question (Ms. Parul Malhotra, CNN-IBN): Mr. Foreign Secretary, there has been again speculation about the UK cutting development aid to India. Can you confirm if that indeed has been decided post 2015 and did it come up when you discussed issues with Salman Khurshid Sir and Mr. Chidambaram?

And to the External Affairs Minister, what is India’s position on British aid? A former Minister, at that time Minister, said in Parliament that he felt this was peanuts. So, do we actually welcome British aid or we would much rather see it being used in other countries?

Secretary of State: Thank you for that question which I think is designed to create an argument between us, but it need not do so.

In the British Government this is the responsibility not of me but of my colleague Justine Greening the International Development Secretary. She has been here recently discussing these things. We have not been discussing this today although I did discuss it with the Finance Minister earlier today. I think the Governments of the UK and India has agreed on the way forward on this issue and my colleague Justine Greening will make a statement about this in the very near future. So, I do not want to preempt or cut across what she is going to say. You would not have long to wait to hear how we intend to proceed. We have had, she has had in particular, good and thorough discussions with our Indian colleagues.

External Affairs Minister: I can only add to you that if we did not discuss it, it did not merit discussion. We discussed a lot of trade, investment, cooperation, international, bilateral, multilateral. And I think that is how we see our relationship grow. Aid is the past and trade is the future. So, we are looking at the future. Every era, every moment in history has its own uniqueness and peculiarity and I think we should look at the immense potential that we have together. We are comforted in the knowledge that we seem to be working in the right direction and we certainly look forward to major things happening in the future.

Question (Mr. Sanjay Majumdar, BBC): In the absence of any clearly identified opposition group, are you concerned that radical Islamic groups could end up dominating the situation on the ground in Syria?
And to the Minister of External Affairs, are you comfortable with this idea of trying to unify the opposition groups in Syria and force out the Assad regime?

Secretary of State: I am concerned that the longer the crisis in Syria goes on, the greater is the opportunity for extremist groups to gain a foothold or to increase their strength or to recruit foreign fighters into Syria. This is why it is so important, so urgent to achieve a resolution of this crisis. And this is the case that we make to our colleagues on the Security Council including to Russia and China who vetoed our last resolution attempting to address this in July.

So, this is a danger. It is a serious danger. It is one of the reasons why it is important for opposition groups to work together as we are encouraging them to do. As you know, there is a meeting taking place in Doha. Our own Special Representative from the United Kingdom is at that meeting, is working with them. We want to see in the future a free and democratic Syrian in which everybody will be able to discuss their differences, stand for election against each other. But in this terrible crisis for their country it is important that they come together with a common platform and a common ability to negotiate about the future. So, we strongly encourage them to do that. That is part of seeking a peaceful resolution to the crisis.

It remains of course a desperately urgent crisis. The humanitarian situation is deteriorating all the time. In the absence of a resolution of the crisis we will continue to step up our humanitarian assistance. We will give non-lethal support to the opposition and to opposition groups particularly in communications, equipment, water purification equipment, equipment that saves lives. And we will work with other countries on the day after Assad, what happens after Assad, because Syria will need a lot of help at that point. And we will be ready to provide some of that help.

External Affairs Minister: I think that I need not add too much to that. Stakeholders and people who have taken greater interest in Syria have the support of all peace-loving people. We do want a resolution and a quick resolution because the situation is beginning to look alarming. We have an interest in peace and we will continue to support all efforts that are being made to bring a peaceful resolution. It is a very difficult situation and we do not want to make it more difficult by adding anything that would not be very helpful. So, I think at present it is best to go by the efforts that are being made by the UN and to support the UN efforts. And in a sensitive manner whatever one can communicate between stakeholders to ensure that we move forward in the direction is something that we will continue to do.

Question (Ms. Parul Chanda, The Asian Age): Both Indian and UK are dealing with the issue of radicalization of a certain section of their population and its consequent fall-out, terrorism. Can India and UK work together to deal with issues arising out of radicalization and how?

External Affairs Minister: I would like to put on record our appreciation for the sensitive cooperation that we have seen from United Kingdom. At different levels we are constantly in touch. This is a common concern for both of us and certainly it is for all our partners in the rest of the world. Of course you have to remain one step ahead of unwholesome forces which I hope that we will be able to do. There are issues that each nation has to tackle for itself vis-à-vis its own population. And I think that there are many ways in which my own personal experience is that UK does that wonderfully well in terms of inter-community bonding and social factors that emerge because of changing circumstances. We do the same for ourselves. We are a much larger country and, therefore, the effort required is much greater. Their effort would be perhaps more limited in terms of numbers that are involved. But I think we are both sensitive about these issues and we are addressing them both internally as well as bilaterally where there is a bilateral concern. I would say that there is no reason for anyone to feel concerned unduly. Matters are being taken care of, being addressed and addressed with reasonable success.

Secretary of State: This is a very important point. We have emphasized of course the tremendous economic opportunity and educational opportunities for our countries. But we have also been determined in recent years to intensify our cooperation on matters which helped maintain the security of the citizens of our countries. So, we have improved our cooperation on counter-terrorism in many different ways. We have discussed that this morning. We are also clear that we can continue to do more in that area. We hope there will be official level talks in the near future about this. Both our countries have terrible and tragic experience of terrorist attack. Both of us, therefore, have experience in the importance of counter-terrorism cooperation. Part of that of course is countering radicalization. Again there are lessons that we can share with each other. And that can be an important part of our discussions on these issues. So, yes is the answer to your question.

Deputy Secretary (XP): With that we come to the conclusion of this media event.

Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

New Delhi, November 8, 2012.

India and the United Kingdom upgraded their relations to a Strategic Partnership in 2004. As part of the India-UK Strategic Dialogue, it was agreed that the Foreign Ministries of our two countries would work together on areas of common interest in the cyber domain. The United Kingdom organised the London Conference on Cyberspace in 2011, which was attended at the Ministerial level by India. Subsequently, India and the United Kingdom have held the first structured dialogue on cooperation on cyber issues in October 2012.

Both India and the United Kingdom share the core principles of liberty, transparency, freedom of expression and the rule of law which apply in cyberspace. We have a shared interest in enhancing our bilateral cooperation in this area.

We have agreed to conduct our Cyber Dialogue in the following areas:

- Enhancing international cooperation to reduce the risk of threats from cyberspace to international security.
- Strengthening our bilateral cooperation to tackle cyber crime.
- Further strengthening our bilateral operational partnerships to identify and respond to threats from cyberspace and raise our mutual resilience.
- Collaborating on building skills and capacities to tackle threats from cyberspace and to use ICT for the objective of economic and social development.
- Using existing cooperation between our universities and business communities to develop synergy in research and development on cyber issues.
- Creating a global multilateral, democratic and transparent system of internet governance with participation of all stakeholders.

India and the United Kingdom agreed to conduct their Cyber Dialogue on a bi-annual basis to achieve these objectives.
New Delhi, November 22, 2012.

The 8th meeting of the India-UK Joint Working Group on Counter Terrorism was held on November 20, 2012 in New Delhi.

India and the UK upgraded their relationship to a Strategic Partnership in 2004. The discussions of the JWG were held in an atmosphere of trust and mutual understanding. The two sides shared their respective threat assessments and informed each other of the measures taken by their governments to strengthen counter terrorism policies and structures. They also discussed the follow up on the Mumbai terror attacks of 26/11. The two sides also exchanged views on international developments, coordination in international fora and their bilateral cooperation in the area.

The meeting was co-chaired by Mr. Asoke Kumar Mukerji, Special Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, India and Mr. Robert Hannigan, Director General, Defence and Intelligence, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, UK. The delegations comprised of representatives from relevant ministries and agencies of the two countries. The next meeting of the JWG will be held in the UK in 2013 on mutually convenient dates.

552. Fourth Session of the Indo-Ukrainian Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological, Industrial and Cultural Cooperation Kiev, June 1, 2012.

Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri E. Ahamed, led an inter-ministerial delegation to Ukraine for the Fourth Session of the Indo-Ukrainian Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological, Industrial and Cultural Cooperation, held on 31 May-01 June 2012 in Kyiv, after a gap of nine years. The official delegation included representatives from the Department of Science & Technology, Ministry of Commerce & Industry, Department of Fertilizers and Department of Pharmaceuticals. Shri Ahamed was also accompanied by a twenty-strong business delegation from the Confederation of Indian Industry (CII). Mr. Petro Oleksiiovych Poroshenko, Minister of Economic Development and Trade led the Ukrainian delegation.

2. Shri Ahamed called on the President of Ukraine H.E. Mr. Viktor Yanukoyvych on 31 May 2012. The Foreign Minister of Ukraine, H.E. Mr. Kostyantyn Gryschenko, who had visited India in November 2011, was also present during the call on President Yanukovych. The talks were held in a friendly and constructive atmosphere. Issues of mutual interest, including the proposed visit of the President to India, were discussed.

3. Shri Ahamed had a separate meeting with H.E. Mr. Petro Oleksiiovych Poroshenko, Minister of Economic Development and Trade of Ukraine, during which the relations between the two countries in the agreed areas of cooperation were reviewed. H.E. Mr. Poroshenko accepted the invitation of Shri Ahamed to visit India. On 1st June 2012, the two Ministers signed the Protocol of the Fourth Session of the Indo-Ukrainian Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technological, Industrial and Cultural Cooperation.

4. At the Fourth Session, the two sides reviewed the current status and future prospects of cooperation in trade and investment, heavy engineering, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, mining and metallurgy, science and technology, power generation, transportation, agriculture, education, culture and tourism. Major decisions taken during the Session include the setting up of Joint Working Groups in mining and metallurgy, pharmaceuticals and healthcare, and fertilizers. The two sides expressed satisfaction with the ongoing multi-sectoral bilateral cooperation. Both sides, however, emphasized the need to tap the vast untapped potential of cooperation in various sectors. The constructive deliberations during the Fourth Session had been a major step forward in charting the way ahead in this regard.
5. The business delegation accompanying Shri Ahamed included representatives from the pharmaceutical, tourism, steel, power, aviation, heavy engineering, automobiles and other sectors.
Statement of Prime Minister to the media during the State Visit of President of Ukraine.

New Delhi, December 10, 2012.

Distinguished representatives of the media,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have great pleasure in extending a very warm welcome to His Excellency Mr. Viktor Yanukovych, President of Ukraine, on his first State Visit to India. His visit takes place as we celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Ukraine.

President Yanukovych and I have undertaken a comprehensive review of our bilateral relations. I conveyed to the President my satisfaction at the renewed vitality in our partnership in recent years and thanked him for his personal efforts and commitment to strengthen India – Ukraine relations. We have now agreed to forge a Comprehensive Partnership between our two countries.

Ukraine’s expertise in defence technologies is well established and offers synergies with our own defence technology base. Our two countries are already undertaking a number of defence cooperation projects. The defence cooperation agreement that we have just signed establishes a new framework for expending this cooperation.

India’s linkages with Ukraine in the field of space science date back to the commencement of our space programme. I am pleased that we are currently cooperating on advanced space launch vehicles. We have also broadened our scientific cooperation to draw upon the rich science and technology base that both countries possess. Today’s agreement on science and technology cooperation will facilitate deeper engagement in this important area.

President Yanukovych and I also exchanged views on nuclear energy and nuclear safety, where we can learn a great deal from each other. The unfortunate Chernobyl accident has given Ukraine valuable insight and knowledge in dealing with this critical issue. Through the Agreement that has just been signed between the nuclear regulatory authorities of both sides, we have agreed to share our experiences in nuclear safety and radiation protection. I also complimented President Yanukovych for his initiative to host the Kyiv Summit on Safe and Innovative Use of Nuclear Energy in April 2011 on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Chernobyl accident.

Our discussions also focused on our bilateral commercial relations. Both of us noted that our bilateral trade has more than doubled in the last five years to nearly 3 billion dollars, though it is heavily weighted in favour of Ukraine. We agreed to further strengthen our commercial relations and make them more broad-based and balanced. We have identified a number of areas such as fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, information technology, mining and heavy machinery for special attention. In this regard, I also conveyed to President Yanukovych India’s interest in visa arrangements to facilitate travel by businessmen, professionals, students and people between the two countries.

President Yanukovych and I also exchanged views on regional and global issues. We also agreed to intensify our consultations in international forums. I have no doubt that this visit by President Yanukovych will set India-Ukraine relations on a firm course.

I once again extend a very warm welcome to President Yanukovych on his visit to India.
1674 INDIA'S FOREIGN RELATIONS–2012

554. Joint Statement issued during the State Visit of President of Ukraine on “Forging a Comprehensive Partnership between India and Ukraine”

New Delhi, December 10, 2012..

1. His Excellency Mr. Viktor Yanukovych, the President of Ukraine is paying a State Visit to India from 09-12 December 2012 at the invitation of the President of India. President Yanukovych is accompanied by a high-level delegation comprising ministers, senior officials and leading representatives of the Ukrainian business community. During his stay in New Delhi, President Yanukovych held bilateral meetings with the President of India, H.E. Mr. Pranab Mukherjee and Prime Minister H.E. Dr. Manmohan Singh. The Vice-President of India, H.E. Mr. Hamid Ansari, External Affairs Minister H.E. Mr. Salman Khurshid and the Leader of the Opposition H.E. Mrs. Sushma Swaraj called on the Ukrainian President. The Ukrainian dignitary also addressed the Indo-Ukrainian Business Forum jointly hosted by the apex Indian chambers of commerce, the Confederation of Indian Industry (CII), Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) and Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India. President Yanukovych is also visiting the city of Bengaluru.

2. The two sides signed agreements in the fields of legal assistance, defence cooperation, science and technology, nuclear safety and standardisation.

3. The two sides held detailed discussions in a friendly atmosphere, reviewed the status of bilateral cooperation and exchanged views on regional and international issues of mutual interest. They noted the significance of the visit, marking twenty years of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Ukraine. The sides acknowledged the accumulated potential of cooperation over the past decade and noted that President Yanukovich’s discussions with the Indian leadership had infused fresh vigour into the bilateral relationship. They agreed on having regular high level political contacts to maintain the momentum generated by the visit.

4. The two sides agreed on the imperative to develop a meaningful relationship of bilateral engagement by better leveraging significant complementarities existing between the two countries in key areas of mutual interest, such as civil nuclear cooperation, defence and space technology, fertilizers, healthcare and pharmaceuticals, agriculture and food security, industrial engineering and mining. They agreed to enhance interaction at the political, official and business levels to achieve this objective. Given the existing enormous potential to enhance ties between the countries, the two sides felt that it was time for India and Ukraine to forge a comprehensive partnership and agreed to draw up a joint action plan for this purpose.
5. Trade and Economy

6. The two sides reviewed the current level of bilateral trade of around USD three billion and noted the significant growth of nearly 50% in 2012 as compared to 2010. They agreed to make all-round joint efforts to enhance the bilateral trade further. Both sides also took note of the decisions taken during the fourth session of the India-Ukraine Intergovernmental Commission held in June this year in Kyiv. They agreed to streamline the existing mechanism for trade and economic dialogue on a regular basis and reaffirmed their intention to boost bilateral investment. They emphasised the need for the Intergovernmental Commission to meet regularly on an annual basis and directed that its fifth session be held in 2013 in New Delhi. The sides further directed that all constituent working groups of the Intergovernmental Commission should meet before its next session. The two sides agreed that there was a need to facilitate broader engagement and more active contacts between business persons. In this context, the Indian side stressed the need to facilitate business visas.

7. The two sides noted that the current level of bilateral investment did not reflect the true potential of the commercial relationship and underlined the need for an active dialogue at the government and business levels on a regular basis to realize the enormous potential for bilateral investment flows and technology transfers. Recognizing the technological and engineering prowess of Ukraine and flagging India’s liberalized policy of attracting foreign investment, the Indian side invited the Ukrainian side to consider investing in India’s infrastructure development and the modernisation of its industries, especially in the steel and power sectors. The Ukrainian side raised the issue of market economy status for Ukraine in the context of anti-dumping proceedings. The Indian side stated that this issue was under examination.

Nuclear Sector

8. The two sides welcomed the signing of the agreement between the Atomic Energy Regulatory Board of India and the State Nuclear Regulatory Committee of Ukraine. They also emphasized the central role of the IAEA in strengthening international standards on nuclear safety. The Ukrainian side welcomed the assistance given by the Government of India to Ukraine in mitigating the impact of the Chernobyl tragedy, especially the grant of USD 1 million, which was announced during the Kyiv Summit for Safe & Innovative Use of Nuclear Energy in April 2011.

Defence Sector

9. The two sides welcomed the signing of the defence cooperation agreement and expressed confidence that this would open new vistas of cooperation especially in the areas of research and development; joint design and development of systems and equipment; export to third countries; and transfer of technology. The agreement would also facilitate regular dialogue between the two sides in new areas of cooperation and smooth implementation of ongoing projects.

Space sector

10. The sides expressed satisfaction over the growing cooperation between their space establishments, particularly in the area of semi-cryogenic engine technology for large lift-off capacities. The sides noted the successful implementation of the framework agreement signed in 2005 and expressed the confidence that this cooperation would continue to grow.

Fertilizers

11. Both sides agreed that there was enormous scope for cooperation in the field of fertilizers of which Ukraine is one of the leading producers and India one of the leading importers. Both sides agreed to explore the possibility of long term mutually beneficial cooperation in this regard and noted that active discussions between the relevant government agencies and private entities were ongoing. The two sides agreed, in particular, to facilitate India’s investment in the field of chemical fertilizers in the territory of Ukraine.

Pharmaceuticals

12. The Ukrainian side appreciated the contribution of the Indian pharmaceutical industry to the health sector of Ukraine where it ranks amongst the top suppliers of cost effective and quality medicines. The Ukrainian side acknowledged the positive response of the Indian side in assisting it to meet with health emergencies. Both sides agreed that cooperation in the pharmaceutical sector would continue to play an important part in their bilateral relations. The sides discussed the setting up of joint ventures and establishing medical standards. The Ukrainian side welcomed the further inflow of Indian investments in the pharmaceuticals sector. The sides agreed to study the issue of streamlining the process of registration of Indian pharmaceutical products and facilitating access to the Ukrainian market.

Science and Technology

13. Both sides welcomed the conclusion of the bilateral agreement for cooperation in science and technology. They noted with satisfaction that 10 joint research and development projects are being implemented under the Programme of Cooperation in Science & Technology for the period 2012-14 in the areas of astrophysics, renewable energy, chemistry, materials science, medical science and biotechnology. The two sides confirmed their readiness to hold the sixth joint meeting of the India-Ukrainian Committee on Scientific and Technological Cooperation in 2013 and to facilitate regular exchanges of young Indian and Ukrainian scientists.

Education and Culture

14. The Ukrainian side welcomed the establishment of the ICCR Chair of Indian Studies at the Institute of International Relations of the Taras Shevchenko National University in Kyiv. The two sides agreed that it was essential to promote regular exchange of academics and encourage study of topics of mutual interest which would serve to deepen mutual cooperation and understanding. They agreed to further enhance the cultural links between the friendly peoples of the two countries. The sides agreed to hold the Days of Ukrainian Culture in India in 2013 and the Days of Indian Culture in Ukraine in 2014.

15. Recognizing that the number of Indians studying in Ukraine has grown considerably over the past five years, with more than 3500 Indian scholars pursuing higher studies, the two sides agreed to negotiate and conclude agreements for mutual recognition of medical and non-medical degrees and to promote mutual educational exchanges. The Indian side requested the Ukrainian side to facilitate the issue of visas to Indian students and also their registration by local authorities.

16. The two sides welcomed the scholarships made available by India under its Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation programme as also those offered through the Indian Council for Cultural Relations in diverse fields.

Facilitation of travel

17. The two sides welcomed the entry into force of the inter-governmental agreement on visa free travel for diplomatic passport holders as a major step towards a comprehensive visa facilitation regime between the two countries. They agreed to consider extending similar facility for holders of official passports. Both sides agreed to start discussions on draft texts of agreements on visa simplification and on social and other issues related to migration and to submit the relevant information on action taken to the fifth session of the Intergovernmental Commission.

UN Security Council

18. The two sides expressed their commitment to intensified negotiations on UN Security Council reform, including the expansion of permanent and non-permanent categories of its members so as to better reflect contemporary geopolitical realities. The sides noted that the G-4 proposal for reform and expansion of the UN Security Council also includes enhanced representation of Eastern European states among the non-permanent members. The Ukrainian
The Indian side expressed support for India’s candidature for permanent membership in an expanded UN Security Council. The Indian side expressed its support for the candidature of Ukraine for a non-permanent seat of the UN Security Council for the term 2016-2017.

Nuclear non-proliferation

19. Acknowledging India’s track record, Ukraine welcomed India’s efforts to contribute to global non-proliferation regimes, including its aspirations to obtain membership in international export control regimes and the Nuclear Suppliers’ Group.

Counter terrorism efforts

20. Both sides stressed the need to strengthen the international legal regimes to fight terrorism and, in this context, called for early adoption of a UN Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. Condemning extremism in all its forms and committing to continue to counter global terrorism, the sides agreed to work together to address this challenge. Reaffirming that international terrorism is a threat to global peace and security, the sides condemned those who support terrorism and underscored that those aiding, abetting and sheltering terrorists were as guilty of acts of terrorism as their actual perpetrators. They stressed the need to work jointly towards eliminating the menace of terrorism including exchange of information, data, financing of terrorism and related matters.

21. The Indian side thanked the Ukrainian side for its constant support in its fight against terrorism and for condemning the 2008 Mumbai terrorist attack. The Ukrainian side agreed that all those involved in this heinous crime should be swiftly brought to justice, wherever they may be.

Situation in Afghanistan

22. Both sides supported the emergence of a peaceful, democratic and prosperous Afghanistan. In this context, they underlined the need to effectively combat the menace of terrorism. The two sides supported the transition of security and governance currently under way in Afghanistan and called for capacity building of the Afghan National Security Forces and other institutions. Both sides supported an Afghan-led, inclusive and transparent peace process that adheres to the red lines agreed to by the Government of Afghanistan and the international community, i.e. respect for Afghan constitution, renunciation of violence and terrorism, and severance of ties with terrorist organizations.

Situation in the Middle East

23. The two sides discussed a range of regional and international issues of mutual concern including the conflict in Syria.
24. The two sides expressed concern at the deteriorating security situation and continued violence in Syria. They called on all the parties to stop the violence and engage in an all inclusive national dialogue in order to resolve the conflict through peaceful political means on the internationally approved basis of the UN Security Council Resolutions 2042 and 2043 and the Joint Communiqué of the Geneva Action Group.

25. The two sides expressed satisfaction at the candid and comprehensive exchange of views on global, regional and bilateral matters. They agreed to further intensify this dialogue.

26. The President of Ukraine thanked the Indian leadership for the warm hospitality extended to him and the accompanying delegation. He invited the President and the Prime Minister of India to visit Ukraine. The invitations were accepted with gratitude.

INDIA’S FOREIGN RELATIONS - 2012

SECTION-X

INDIA AND THE UN
Welcome Remarks by External Affairs Minister during the visit of UN Secretary General to India.

New Delhi, April 27, 2012.

Your Excellency Mr BanKi-Moon,

Secretary General of the United Nations,

I welcome you back to New Delhi, a city you know fairly well. A city from where you began your illustrious diplomatic career. We, in India, are delighted that a friend of India continues at the helm of the United Nations for a second term.

As a founder member of the UN, India values your dedication to the efforts of the UN and the leadership that you have provided to the organization.

As a mark of our firm commitment to multilateralism, India places great importance on working closely with you on the various global issues of peace and development.

The winds of change in the Middle-East, the worrisome situation in Syria, the dispute between Sudan and South-Sudan, the situation in Afghanistan are all issues where you have taken keen interest, and we look forward to work with the UN.

The fight against piracy, the need for international cooperation in counter-terrorism and the forthcoming major negotiations on sustainable development are for us a matter of priority. We look towards the UN, with its unique legitimacy as a universal forum, in facing these global challenges.

As a democracy with a firm commitment to human welfare and socio-economic development, including the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals we appreciate your efforts to build bridges between developing and developed countries and give voice to the world’s poorest and most vulnerable people.

Let me assure you Mr. Secretary General that India is deeply committed to the United Nations and to strengthen its ability to play a central role in global affairs. You can be confident of India’s support for you personally and for the United Nations.
Internet is a living entity, expanding, changing and evolving continuously. It has already become a critical resource affecting all activities of mankind.

2. It is evident from the interventions today by various stakeholders that we all share a common goal for the internet to foster free expression, innovation and expansion to enable it to respond to growing demands. India is committed to tapping the tremendous potential of cyber space and the tremendous opportunity it provides and to creating a citizen-centric and business-centric environment to connect all human beings to the information highway. However, given the nature of IT networks, continuous coordination is required by all stakeholders including governments to maintain its open character. India wishes to emphasise the need for global coordination to ensure that internet continues to be a free and secure medium for the whole world.

3. The World Summit on Information Society (WSIS) has recognized the need for an open and inclusive process involving all stakeholders, including countries and communities to voice concern on the international public policy issues pertaining to Internet and its Governance. WSIS has also mandated the process for Enhanced Cooperation to enable Governments on an equal footing to carry out their roles and responsibilities pertaining to the Internet.

4. The process of Enhanced Cooperation has been brought up in various fora by several countries including India, Brazil & South Africa (IBSA), reflected in the IBSA Joint Statement at the Open consultations on Enhanced Cooperation on December 14, 2010, and the G77 in the various meetings of the UN, including the annual session of the UN Committee for Science & Technology Development (CSTD) under the ECOSOC and the UN General Assembly (UNGA).

5. The Tunis Agenda mandates that Internet Governance should be multilateral, multi-stakeholder, democratic and transparent. It aims at keeping the Internet sustainable, robust, secure and stable and at promoting developmental agenda through the Internet.

6. There are major cross-cutting public policy issues such as internet freedom, cyber security, privacy of data, reliability of internet service, accessibility to trouble shooting, content, piracy, etc. that need to be discussed and addressed at some platform involving all stakeholders, if the objectives of the Tunis Agenda are to be attained.
7. India had made a statement during the 66th session of the UNGA, where we had made a proposal for setting up of a Committee on Internet related Policies (CIRP). This proposal may be seen in the light of the mandate enshrined within the Tunis Agenda.

8. India believes in the freedom of Internet and free deliberations on public policy for Internet Governance. In the light of the strategic nature of the Internet and its expansion, taking a global view in the overall interest of the global community on the issues of the public policy for Internet Governance would be the right approach. India would be pragmatic and flexible in its approach.

9. We would like a discussion on all aspects of internet governance that have been raised so far, without prejudicing the outcome. We consider that the setting up of a Working Group on Enhanced Cooperation will be an important step forward and we would like this to be included in the UN SG’s report to the UNGA later this year.

10. The internet can and should be effective medium to inclusive growth in all countries, particularly developing countries. E-governance, e-commerce, infotainment, resource mapping and meteorological and other essential services are extremely useful tools for development and should be made accessible to all countries.

11. The ability of the existing internet infrastructure to be used globally for delivering programmes for development requires a free and secure internet. Creating a democratic internet governance structure will ensure a balance between private commercial and public policy interests and address developmental concerns.
558. Media Interaction by Foreign Secretary on India's priorities at 67th UNGA.

The current UNGA Session commenced on 18 September. This year, the General Debate including the addresses by the Heads of delegation is taking place from 25 September to 1 October. External Affairs Minister is scheduled to address the General Debate in the morning of 1 October. He will arrive in New York tomorrow.

The present UN General Assembly Session is taking place at a time when the world is facing continued economic and financial uncertainty and the Middle East and North Africa region continues also to be in a state of flux. During this GA session, India will actively pursue measures aimed at strengthening multilateralism while ensuring that the interests and concerns of the developing world form the basis of these endeavours. A major part of India’s efforts will be directed towards maintaining development as a centerpiece of the UN’s priorities.

During the 67th UNGA, our efforts will be to ensure that the post-2015 development agenda retains its focus on poverty eradication and inclusive growth. We will be pro-active on the evolution of the Sustainable Development Goals in an intergovernmental process visualized at Rio+20, ensuring the primacy of development and addressing environmental and social concerns of developing countries. We will also seek the early implementation of the financing strategy and the facilitation mechanism for transfer of technology to support sustainable development.

We will work on consolidating the progress achieved till date in the process of UN Security Council reform with a view towards its early realisation. In this regard, we hope to proactively engage with members in the intergovernmental negotiations on Security Council reform and to strive for an early expansion of the Council in both permanent and non-permanent categories of its membership. Yesterday, I participated in the G-4 Ministerial Meeting where we took stock of the progress achieved in the last year and considered how to take the process forward in this General Assembly. We agreed to inject greater political momentum and work together to give an impetus to the reform process.

We will continue to stress the need for a proactive campaign against terrorism and will work towards an early adoption of a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. As Chairman of the UN Security Council’s Committee on Counter Terrorism, we will urge all member states to ensure zero tolerance towards terrorism and to take urgent action to prevent and combat terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. We propose to focus on the issue of terrorist financing at the Counter Terrorism Committee’s special meeting scheduled for November 2012.
Consistent with our long-standing policy, we will continue to emphasise India’s commitment to universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable nuclear disarmament, in a time-bound manner, as embodied in the Rajiv Gandhi Plan of Action.

India attaches high priority to combating piracy off the coast of Somalia. While continuing our anti-piracy operations in the Gulf of Aden, we will urge the international community to address the serious problem of seafarers being taken hostage by pirates and the consequent humanitarian problems being faced by them and their families. India is also chairing the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia (CGPCS) from September-December 2012 and we will use this opportunity also to highlight our concerns as well as to seek to achieve progress at the UN in the global fight against piracy.

India will hold the Presidency of UN Security Council in November 2012. It may be recalled that we last presided over the Council in August 2011. This time around, we plan to have a thematic debate on piracy, as well as a Meeting on the working methods of the Security Council during our Chairmanship.

External Affairs Minister will be participating in several high-level events during this segment of the General Assembly. These include: (i) a Ministerial Meeting of the India-Gulf Cooperation Council on 28 September; (ii) the annual Commonwealth Foreign Ministers Meeting on 29 September; (iii) a high-level meeting to commemorate 15 years of the Convention against Chemical Weapons on 1 October; and (iv) the informal meeting of SAARC Foreign Ministers on 2 October. He is scheduled to meet US Secretary of State Hilary Clinton on 1 October.

External Affairs Minister will also take part in events on 2 October at the UN being organized at the initiative of India on the occasion of the International Day of Non-Violence. While in the US, EAM will travel to Brown University on 28 September to deliver a lecture on India-US relations. He will also travel to Milwaukee and visit the Sikh Temple in Wisconsin on 4 October where he will meet with relatives of the victims of the Gurdwara attack that took place last month.

External Affairs Minister’s visit to New York for the 67th UNGA Session will enable India’s voice to be articulated and heard again in this important body, which is seeing the presence of a number of other world leaders. It will also enable External Affairs Minister to exchange views with many of his counterparts both in informal and formal settings.

Thank you.

Question: Response on the President of Pakistan reference to J & K in his UNGA address.
Foreign Secretary: Well, we have seen the reference to Jammu and Kashmir in the statement of the President of Pakistan. You know, our principled position on the issue has been consistent and is well known. The people of Jammu and Kashmir, which is an integral part of India, have peacefully chosen their destiny in accordance with democratic practices and they continue to do so. Question: Russian support for India’s UNSC candidature and does it help the G4 as a whole.

Foreign Secretary: You see, on the G4 process, we have in fact issued a communiqué...a press statement after our meeting yesterday. I think it should be available. That, I think, clarifies where we are going as part of the G4 process. What I was referring to was a reference, which the Russian Foreign Minister made during a BRICS FMs meeting which I attended on behalf of India.

There, while debating this issue on the general title of UN Security Council reform which was part of a larger discussion on reform of institutions of global governance; we also discussed the IMF and other issues.

In his statement, the Russian Foreign Minister made a categorical statement that he supports India’s candidature for permanent membership of the Security Council. So this is the context in which that statement was made.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. President,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am privileged to address the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Let me begin by congratulating you, Excellency, on your election to the distinguished office of President of the 67th session of the UN General Assembly. I would like to assure you of our constructive support to your work over the course of the coming year.

Mr. President,

We are assembled in New York at a time when we are faced with multiple global challenges that transcend national boundaries.

Developing countries are still to recover from the downturn in the global economy. Their quest for poverty eradication and sustainable development remains an uphill task. Food and energy security as well as health and education for their population remain daunting challenges.

The West Asia and North Africa region is seeing unprecedented socio-political upheaval. The question of Palestine remains unresolved.

And, threats emanating from terrorism, maritime piracy, drug trafficking and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction continue to multiply.

These challenges demand that we act to work for solutions in a concerted and coordinated manner. This is the only path to success.

Mr. President,

At the RIO +20 Summit, the international community renewed its commitment to sustainable development, recognizing poverty eradication to be the greatest global challenge.

And to act on this score, it unequivocally reaffirmed the sanctity of the RIO principles.

India remains committed to addressing Climate Change through a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities.
We are hosting the 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity in Hyderabad in less than two weeks from now. We seek the support of Parties to fashion an outcome that harmonizes a strong biodiversity action with our basic development objectives.

Mr. President,

The process to develop a set of Sustainable Development Goals has begun. The MDGs must be integrated in the new framework so that the unmet development priorities continue to be the main focus.

In the interim, with still three years to go for the MDG target date of 2015, it is imperative to ensure that all efforts towards the achievement of the MDGs are made.

In the global discourse on the post-2015 development agenda, the focus ought to be on the word ‘development’. It ought to be firmly entrenched in the understandings and principles of Rio+20 and be anchored in the intergovernmental process in the UN.

Priority must be given to the challenges of poverty, employment, food and energy, water, health, environmental sustainability, unsustainable lifestyles and above all, economic growth.

Ensuring gender equality and women’s empowerment is essential to the pursuit of building inclusive societies. It is also an imperative for building strong and resilient economies. We are happy to support the efforts of the United Nations.

We also need to pay particular attention to upgrading the skills of the youth and ensuring employment opportunities. Children and youth are our future. We need to invest in them to reap the demographic dividend to secure our future.

India remains firmly committed to scaling up our development partnership with Africa, including through the framework of the India-Africa Forum Summit.

Similarly, we will continue to build on our commitments for enhanced cooperation with the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, and the Small Island Developing States within the framework of South-South Cooperation.

Mr. President,

India is a multi-religious, multi-ethnic and multi-lingual society. Our civilizational ethos has been underpinned by peaceful coexistence and tolerance, values that Mahatma Gandhi placed at the core of India’s national life. These principles are enshrined in our Constitution that provides the foundation for our secular, democratic and inclusive polity.
Mutual respect for deeply held religious sentiments is the bedrock of tolerance and coexistence. Unfortunate recent events have highlighted the need for enhanced dialogue among faiths and civilizations. Violence cannot lead to greater understanding. It is necessary to uphold norms of peaceful international discourse. In particular, the safety and security of diplomatic personnel should be fully respected.

Mr. President,

Terrorism remains one of the most potent threats to international peace and security.

The international community must adopt a ‘zero tolerance’ approach towards terrorism and focus on efforts to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism including its invidious network of epicenters, training facilities and financing.

It is high time we demonstrated the necessary political will and agreed on a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism to strengthen the normative framework against the increasingly sophisticated and globalized terrorist challenge.

India continues to be gravely concerned by the menace of piracy and armed robbery at sea. Apart from major economic and commercial consequences of this scourge, it has serious humanitarian implications for the large number of seafarers held hostage by the pirates.

The need of the hour is once again concerted international action, under the UN auspices, with special attention being paid to address the welfare of seafarers and their families.

Mr. President,

Peacekeeping and disarmament are among the most unique pursuits of the UN because they embody the promise and innate potential of the organization to make the world a better place.

India has a proud history of participation in UN peacekeeping operations dating back to the 1950s, having taken part in as many as 43 peacekeeping operations.

The challenge before the international community today is to ensure that UN peacekeeping is adequately resourced and enabled to meet the realities of today, including in post-conflict and peacebuilding contexts. In this regard, we are hopeful that progress will be made in all outstanding issues between Sudan and South Sudan.

India is committed to achieving a nuclear weapons-free world. The principles of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan of 1988 for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner remain relevant even after more than two decades.

There is need to forge a renewed consensus on non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. There is also need for meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines.

Measures must be taken to reduce nuclear risks, including the grave risks posed by terrorists gaining access to weapons of mass destruction, thus strengthening nuclear security.

The Conference on Disarmament – the international community’s sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, deserves our support in discharging its mandate of negotiating treaties on issues on the international disarmament agenda.

Mr. President,

The crisis in Syria continues unabated and is a matter of serious concern for us. Any further militarization of the crisis can have catastrophic consequences for the region.

We urge all parties to commit themselves to resolving the crisis without any further bloodshed through an inclusive, Syrian-led political process that can meet the legitimate aspirations of the Syrian people. We support the efforts of the UN and urge all sides to cooperate with the Joint Special Representative, Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi, in good faith.

Support for the Palestinian cause has been a cornerstone of India’s foreign policy. We were privileged to receive President Mahmoud Abbas in India earlier this month. We support their aspirations for enhanced status at the United Nations. It is imperative that there be an early realization of a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Road map and relevant UN resolutions.

Mr. President,

India desires constructive and friendly relations with all its neighbours. We have a vision of a peaceful, stable and prosperous region with enhanced cooperation and connectivity linking us with Central Asia, the Gulf and South-East Asia.

Within South Asia, we have sought to enhance bilateral relations individually with each of our neighbours and through the aegis of the SAARC.

We have embarked on a resumed dialogue process with Pakistan and advocate a step-by-step approach to normalizing our bilateral relations.
An unwarranted reference has been made to Jammu and Kashmir from this podium. Our principled position on the issue has been consistent and is well known. The people of Jammu and Kashmir have chosen and reaffirmed their destiny repeatedly through India’s well established democratic processes. We wish to make it abundantly clear that Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India.

India supports the Government and people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous country. We are ready to partner with the Afghan people as they rebuild their country in accordance with their own priorities and national circumstances.

The continuing existence of safe havens and sanctuaries for terrorists beyond Afghanistan’s borders is the major impediment to the restoration of peace and security in Afghanistan.

India is committed to creating an enabling environment where the Afghan people can live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation.

Mr. President,

The United Nations and the norms of international relations that it has fostered remain the most efficacious means for converting today’s challenges into opportunities.

We need to, however, ensure that the architecture of global governance reflects contemporary realities. Sticking to structures designed at the end of the Second World War only constrains multilateralism from delivering on its promises.

The most important and decisive step towards remedying this situation pertains to the UN Security Council, which must be expanded in both permanent and non-permanent categories.

The reformed Council must include countries that are capable and willing to bear additional burdens relating to the maintenance of international peace and security and be able to sustain global campaigns against new and emerging global threats.

Let me also stress that we must address, sooner rather than later, the incongruity of the lack of permanent membership from Africa.

Equally, India will promote and lend her weight for enhancing the voice and participation of developing countries in decision making in global economic and financial institutions.

The IMF’s quota reform process must be accelerated with altered quotas reflecting contemporary economic weight.
Mr. President,

Speaking in this Assembly, on 14 October 1968, Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi, said, "The United Nations is the trustee of the world's peace and represents the hopes of mankind. Its very existence gives a feeling of assurance that the justice of true causes can be brought fearlessly before the world. This Assembly and the agencies of the United Nations should, in all that they do sustain those hopes and promote the causes of peace."

These words remain true to this day.

Let me conclude by assuring you Mr. President and the members of the General Assembly that India will continue to abide by the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and strive to strengthen the United Nations.

I thank you.

560. Statement by External Affairs Minister at the High Level Meeting of the Organization for Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) on “Fifteen Years of the Chemical Weapons Convention: Celebrating Success, Committing to the Future”

New York, October 1, 2012.

H.E. Mr Ban ki-Moon, UN Secretary General

H.E. Mr. Ahmet Uzumcu, Director General of the OPCW

Excellencies

Ladies and Gentlemen

It is a pleasure to address this special meeting to mark 15 years of the Chemical Weapons Convention. This meeting provides us with an opportunity to take stock of the achievements and the challenges that lie ahead in the task of full and effective implementation of the Convention.

India views the Convention as a unique, multilaterally-negotiated and non-discriminatory disarmament instrument, which serves as a model for the elimination of an entire category of weapons of mass destruction. As an original signatory to the Convention, India attaches the utmost importance to the success of the Convention and its full and effective implementation. The international legal norm against the use of chemical weapons anywhere must not be breached.

Disarmament is a primary goal of the Convention and should remain the priority till the complete destruction of all chemical weapons. We have demonstrated our commitment and sense of responsibility by destroying all our chemical weapon stockpiles under OPCW verification within the timeframe prescribed by the Convention. Timely destruction of chemical weapons by all States Parties is critical for upholding the credibility and integrity of the CWC. We call on the remaining possessor States to fulfil their obligations within the shortest possible time.

India is the third largest country in terms of industry declarations and recipient of one of the highest number of industry inspections every year. We have implemented all our industry-related verification obligations. We also believe that the future verification efforts should continue to be guided strictly by the provisions of the Convention, without an undue burden on industry. Apart from National Implementation, which India views as key, Assistance and Protection as well as international cooperation are of interest to a large number of State Parties and deserve greater attention.
India has contributed to the working of the OPCW through participation in several of its subsidiary bodies, namely the Scientific Advisory Board, Advisory Body on Administrative and Financial Matters and Confidentiality Commission. Our National Authority has played a key role in the discharge of our CWC obligations and in international cooperation and assistance programmes. We are privileged that the Permanent Representative of India to the OPCW is currently chairing the Executive Council.

The accession of 188 State Parties to the CWC is commendable and must spur our efforts towards universal adherence of the Convention. We commend the role of the Director General and the OPCW for their efforts in ensuring the smooth implementation of the Convention and for advancing the common goal of a world free of chemical weapons.

Thank you.
561. Address of External Affairs Minister at a Special Event to commemorate the International Day of Non Violence held on the sidelines of 67th UN General Assembly.

New York, October 2, 2012.

His Excellency Mr Vuk Jeremic, President of the General Assembly, Ambassador Nazareth,
Permanent Representatives of Pakistan and South Africa,
Permanent Representative, Ambassador Hardeep Puri,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen.

It is a great privilege for me to preside over the celebration of the International Day of Non Violence at the United Nations today. I am delighted to welcome the President of the General Assembly amidst us. I thank His Excellency for sparing his valuable time to be with us.

It is an honour to be here to celebrate at the United Nations, the temple of multilateralism, the ideals of someone, who was perhaps the best possible proponent of "Vasudhevakutumbakam"-the world is one family.

The world has known innumerable greats who won celebrated military victories. However, there is only one person who won the world’s greatest battles for emancipation and empowerment not by waging war but by waging peace.

Mahatma Gandhi’s arsenal included no arms and ammunition, but only “truth force” or satyagraha, which he described as, ‘a force born of truth and the love of nonviolence”, his moral equivalent for a war.

When he was evicted from a moving train at a railway station in South Africa on 7 June 1893, a spark was lit which was to change the course of world history.

Excellencies and Ladies and Gentlemen,

Mahatma Gandhi is an ideal amalgam of so many opposing yet inspirational traits. He respected tradition, and yet he was also an iconoclast.

He was a political strategist who shunned conventional politics and held no office. He was deeply religious, but his was a religion that drew from every faith, a religion that was all inclusive.

He embodied spirituality, but his was a spirituality rooted in an abiding concern for the poor and the deprived, of service to and empowerment of the disadvantaged and underprivileged.

He was impatient for cataclysmic change. Yet, he shunned violence in any form as an instrument to force the pace of change.

In his own words “nonviolence is mightier than the mightiest weapon of destruction, devised by the ingenuity of man”.

It is true that the world of today is vastly different from the world that Mahatma Gandhi lived in. But conflict and inequality continue to be an inevitable part of the human condition.

Mahatma Gandhi’s greatest lesson to the world was that this need not be destructively so.

Conflicts can be resolved and inequalities can be contained. And, worthy means are needed for achieving worthy ends.

The Gandhian way is a real, live option, an option that informs and illuminates. We must have the courage and strength of mind to follow in his footsteps.

It is my fervent hope that the world will embrace Gandhian truth and action and that leading global multilateral fora, such as the United Nations, continues to be among its torchbearers.

I eagerly look forward to hearing Ambassador Nazareth on his thoughts on the ‘non violent revolutionary’.

Thank you.
562. Statement by E. Ahamed, Minister of State at the General Debate of the Second Committee of the 67th UNGA.

New York, October 8, 2012.

Allow me to begin by congratulating you and your bureau on assuming the leadership of the Second Committee.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

The task before the Second Committee this year is well laid out.

The key outcomes from the RIO+20 Summit on Sustainable Development Goals, Financing Strategy, Technology Mechanism, Strengthening of UNEP and the High level Political Forum need to be pursued as agreed at Rio and implemented in a time bound manner.

Rio identified poverty as the greatest global challenge of our times and renewed our commitment to attaining the MDGs by 2015.

Achievement of these millennium aspirations must receive our highest priority and not slip even as we start working on the post-2015 development agenda.

Given that there are still more than a billion people worldwide who continue to live in extreme poverty and hunger, the post-2015 development agenda must be weaved around the absolute imperative of poverty eradication.

The post-2015 development agenda must remain anchored in the Rio principles, in particular common but differentiated responsibilities and equity.

The inter-governmental process on Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) must be based in New York so that we can ensure inclusivity and wider participation of developing countries.

As we sit down to fashion the SDGs, we must do so with a clear idea in mind that they would form the crux of the Post-2015 agenda.

Discussions on the Post-2015 agenda have also seen some articulation on bringing in new issues including peace and security in the development framework.

We recognise that these are important issues and concerted efforts must be made to address them.

However, they should not be mixed with core development challenges as that would severely undermine efforts at achieving sustainable development.
Mobilisation of resources, be it ODA, technology transfer, trade or FDI, is critical to support the MDGs. In the post-2015 development agenda these issues must be brought to the centre of the development debate.

We recognise that the development landscape has changed over the years. There are new actors such as the private sector, private foundations and civil society, all of which are now playing a significant role in development.

South-South Cooperation also has seen enhanced action and it must be allowed to grow within its own space and in accordance with its own principles. It cannot, however, be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,

The 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity is underway in India.

We urge all Parties to work for a strong development oriented outcome and for early implementation of the Nagoya Protocol to ensure equitable sharing of the benefits of biodiversity.

Climate Change remains one of the most pressing challenges of our time.

India looks forward to a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome at the upcoming 18th Conference of Parties of the UNFCCC at Doha.

The central and essential deliverable at Doha is the Second commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol.

This must begin on January 1, 2013 along with a meaningful completion of work under the track on Long Term Cooperative Action.

Moreover, the process and outcome of the Durban Platform, which has just commenced its work, must be, as agreed in Durban, under the Convention and in full accordance with its principles and provisions, in particular the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities.

The principles, provisions and the structure of the UNFCCC must be respected and form the basis of any international cooperation on climate change.

Mr. Chairman,

In spite of spirited efforts, the global economic situation remains one of deep concern. Unemployment, food and energy concerns are running high.

The continuance of economic vulnerabilities and new and emerging challenges with intertwined complexities of globalisation demand an urgent reform of the structures of global governance.

It is imperative that developing countries are given due voice and participation in the decision making structures of the global economic and financial institutions, especially the Bretton Woods Institutions. This would also address core concerns of the LDCs, SIDs, LLDCs and countries in Africa on debt sustainability, financial assistance, trade and development.

And, here at the United Nations, it is imperative that we move urgently on reform of the Security Council by expanding it in both categories, permanent and non-permanent, revitalize the General Assembly and strengthen the ECOSOC.

Mr. Chairman, in these uncertain times, the Second Committee has to assume a larger role in fashioning and guiding the global development agenda. Under your leadership, I am confident that it would meet its expectations. I thank you.
Mr. President,

I am privileged to address the General Assembly today. Allow me to begin by congratulating you on assuming the Presidency of the 67th General Assembly.

The Secretary-General's annual Report on the Work of the Organization covers the wide spectrum of issues that inform the activities of the United Nations. It underscores the global and interdependent nature of the challenges we face. It shines a spotlight on the unfinished agenda of development and reform. It points to the turbulent times we live in. It reinforces our conviction that the need of the hour is genuine multilateralism.

The socio-political upheaval in West Asia and North Africa since last year has unleashed profound change and transition that the region is still coming to terms with. India is very concerned at the escalating situation in Syria. We support UN efforts to find a solution to the crisis through dialogue and an inclusive, Syrian-led political process.

It is a matter of regret that the question of Palestine remains unresolved and we support their request for an enhanced status at the United Nations. India firmly supports the aspirations of the Palestinian people to achieve a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel.

Mr. President,

Even as we approach the finish line of 2015 for the Millennium Development Goals, there is already haste to look at the post-2015 agenda.

The quest for poverty eradication and sustainable development remains salient as ever. Significant roadblocks still stand in the way of food and energy security, health and education for much of the developing world.

Countries are only tentatively emerging from the shadow of the worst economic and financial crisis since the Great Depression. The magnitude of the challenge is driven home by the fact that more than a billion people worldwide continue to languish in extreme poverty and hunger.

One thing abundantly clear is that unmet development priorities must be well integrated in the new post-2015 framework. The RIO +20 Conference handed us a robust agenda on sustainable development. We must now train our energy on the best way to implement it in an inter-governmental setting.

As we embark on a process of framing Sustainable Development Goals, crucial issues such as that of resource mobilization, be it ODA, technology transfer, trade or FDI, must find appropriate priority and be enshrined in the principles of Common but Differentiated Responsibilities (CBDR) and equity.

On Climate Change, India will work with others to design a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome at the upcoming 18th Conference of Parties at Doha, Qatar.

We ourselves are currently hosting the 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity. Our expectation is that all Parties will work for a strong development oriented outcome and for early implementation of the Nagoya Protocol to ensure equitable sharing of the benefits of biodiversity.

In so far as our development partnership initiatives go, we are resolved to carry forward and expand our multi-faceted and vibrant cooperation with Africa, including through the framework of the India-Africa Forum Summit.

Similarly, we will continue to build on our commitments for enhanced cooperation with the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, and the Small Island Developing States within the rubric of South-South Cooperation.

Mr. President,

The international community has long acknowledged the ever present and pervasive threat posed by terrorism. No country, city or region is immune from this global scourge.

And yet, regrettfully, we have failed ourselves by continuing to procrastinate on concluding the Comprehensive Convention against International Terrorism. It is high time that member-states summoned the necessary political will to agree on the CCIT as a sound legal framework for the fight against terrorism.

We need concerted global action. Such action should be predicated on ‘zero tolerance’ towards terrorism and aimed at systematically dismantling the infrastructure of terrorism.

Mr. President,

India has a proud and time-tested association with UN peacekeeping dating back to its very inception. We have contributed over 130,000 personnel so far to this flagship endeavour of the United Nations.

As peacekeeping moves forward, we must remain mindful of the challenges of operating in increasingly complex environments. Particular attention should be paid to ensuring that complex mandates are matched by adequate resources so as to get the job done safely and effectively. In this process, it is of utmost importance that there is real, effective, and continuous consultation with Troop-Contributing Countries in framing and implementing mandates.

It is also not lost on us that to be enduringly successful, peacekeeping requires to be seamlessly dovetailed with peace-building efforts. The UN needs to pay better attention to evolving a cogent and coherent peace-building framework that takes into account the capacities at hand and the complexities on the ground.

Mr. President,

One final word on the Secretary-General’s internal reform efforts. We have taken note of the initiatives to modernize and reform the Secretariat, including through large-scale business transformation projects such as the new enterprise resource planning system (Umoja), International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) and the Capital Master Plan. While each involves considerable investment, we see them as important drivers in modernising the UN.

Nevertheless, it is our deep-rooted conviction that the relevance of the United Nations ultimately hinges on more fundamental reform of its governance architecture that is frozen in another era that perpetuates the rights of the haves of the mid-1940s.

It is only through such governance reform that the UN can truly invigorate action on issues of pressing global concern, be it peace and security, climate change, development, or human rights.

Let me therefore conclude, Mr. President, by raising something inexplicably does not find mention in the Secretary-General’s report. That is, the important issue of Security Council reform where intergovernmental negotiations have seen much movement and a clear affirmation by an overwhelming majority of the member-states for expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent categories.

We regard the omission of the progress made in the intergovernmental negotiations on the issue as a significant drawback of the Secretary-General’s report. We further hope to see it corrected in future reports.

In terms of the process itself, India looks forward to capitalizing on the momentum so far to see real, fruitful and productive negotiations in the current session of the General Assembly on this important reform.

I thank you.
INDIA’S FOREIGN RELATIONS- 2012

SECTION-XI
INDIA AT THE UNITED NATIONS
(i) SPEECHES IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL
(ii) SPEECHES IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY & OTHER FORA
INDIA AT THE UNITED NATIONS
(i) SPEECHES IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL
Thank you.

At the outset, let me thank you, Madame President, for presiding over this important meeting. I would also like to place on record our appreciation for the participation of Commissioner Ramtane Lamamra and distinguished Ministers from Kenya, Uganda and Azerbaijan in today’s meeting and for their valuable statements. I would also like to thank USG Lynn Pascoe for his briefing.

2. Madame President, the situation in Somalia is at a crossroad. Two decade long instability and insecurity have taken their political, economic and social tolls and will require concerted long-term commitment of the international community to assist the Somali people in their efforts for restoration of peace, security and economic development in their country.

3. Madame President, the effective engagement of the international community during 2011 helped tide over the worst phase of the humanitarian crisis in Somalia. Some quarter of a million people, however, remain at risk and there is a need to persevere with our efforts to deal with the problem.

4. On the political front, the extended transition period has seen adoption of a comprehensive roadmap by the Transitional Federal Institutions in accordance with the June 2011 Kampala Accord. The implementation of the roadmap is critical, in particular the drafting and adoption of the Constitution, its endorsement by a Constituent Assembly, and parliamentary reforms, with a view to ending the transition in a timely manner by August 2012.

5. In this regard, we have noted that several concrete measures have been taken by the TFG. We welcome that the Technical Committee, comprising of representatives of the TFIs and regions and the international community, has met twice and agreed to track the progress through four sub-committees. On the other hand, the TFIs have missed a number of deadlines in implementation of the roadmap. The recent developments concerning the Speaker have the potential to derail the implementation of the roadmap and are, therefore, of serious concern. We, therefore, urge all stakeholders to resolve their differences and expedite the implementation of the roadmap.

6. On security front, we commend AMISOM and the TFG forces for the gains made against Al Shabaab. We also commend the Troop Contributing Countries for the sacrifices made by their soldiers in Somalia. Still, Al Shabaab has shown that it is capable of carrying out almost daily attacks, including against high profile targets. In this connection, we welcome the operations being undertaken by the Kenyan and Ethiopian forces in coordination with the AMISOM and TFG forces.

7. There is also a need for this Council to take further measures in support of the TFG to restrict the resources that Al Shabaab earns from use of ports and export of charcoal. We request that the Secretary General may submit a report to the Council on the requirements, in terms of naval and other assets, that would be required for the international community to be able to interdict vessels that visit Kismayo and other ports and profit Al Shabaab and pirates in Somalia. Such a report would allow the Council to take an informed decision on the request of the African Union concerning use of ports by Al Shabaab and pirates.

8. Madam President, since AMISOM is the mainstay of the efforts of the international community for dealing with the security situation in Somalia, it is necessary that AMISOM be further strengthened. AMISOM continues to face serious resource gaps. This Council should expeditiously and favourably consider the recommendations of the African Union and TCCs for the support extended by the United Nations and international community to AMISOM. Its funding must be made adequate, secure and predictable. It is also necessary to provide AMISOM with enablers and force multipliers like helicopter units, transport and engineering capabilities to AMISOM. We support their inclusion within the UN support package.

9. There is also a need for expanding the TFG forces and strengthening their capacities for long-term stability and security in Somalia. New recruitments have to be undertaken as well as full training and provision of proper equipment.

10. We call on the member-states to make uncaveated contributions to the UN and AU Trust Funds for AMISOM and enhance support for TFG forces. For its part, India contributed US$ 2 million to the AU and UN Trust Funds without any caveats for AMISOM operations in 2011. We stand ready to provide further support to AMISOM.

11. Madame President, piracy off the coast of Somalia remains a serious problem facing the international community. As of 31 October 2011, the Somali pirates held 19 ships and 331 hostages. Combating maritime piracy is, therefore, an important issue intrinsically linked with the security situation in Somalia. So far, TFIs have paid little attention to this problem. We think that the benchmarks on piracy in the roadmap on transitional tasks should be expeditiously implemented by TFIs including in fields as demarcation of Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ), establishment of operational coastguard and navy, adoption of a legal framework against piracy, hostage-taking, payment of ransom, etc. We also stand ready to help in capacity building of the TFIs and the states in the region for effective measures against piracy off the coast of Somalia.
12. Further, given the growing scope and expanding coverage of the problem, the international community has to think about adopting a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy. In our view, such a strategy should involve:

- UN-led anti-piracy force to conduct naval operations. This would help in greater coordination in anti-piracy operations by various naval forces.

- Enactment of national laws on priority to criminalize piracy as defined in the UN Convention of the Law of the Sea.

- Effective sanitization of the Somali coastline along with identifying of safe corridors and buffer zones.

13. India has already taken several steps including anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since 2008 and has also deployed its ships in Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. This has helped neutralize several attempts of piracy. While we will continue our counter-piracy operations, there is also an urgent need for the international community to address the serious problem of hostage-taking by pirates and consequent humanitarian problems faced by the hostages and their families.

14. In conclusion, Madame President, the situation in Somalia calls for enhanced engagement of the international community with the Somali federal and regional authorities to comprehensively address the multitude of problems in political, security, humanitarian and counter-piracy fields. This Council should stand ready to take the lead in all these efforts.

Thank you, Madame President.
Thank you, Madame President.

At the outset, I would like to thank the South African delegation for organising today’s Debate. I would also like to put on record our sincere thanks to you, Madame President, and to President Jacob Zuma for chairing this session. I would also thank the Secretary General and the representatives of the African Union and the sub-regional organisations for their valuable statements. The presence of so many high-level dignitaries from capitals testifies to the importance of today’s discussions.

2. We appreciate the initiative of the South African delegation to organise a workshop of the interested stakeholders in preparation for today’s meeting which put in clear terms the steps that are required for enhanced cooperation between the United Nations and the African Union. These are also reflected in the resolution that is before the Council for adoption today and which we are privileged to have co-sponsored.

3. Madame President, as much as two-third of the active items on the Council’s agenda concern Africa. About three-fourth of the Council’s time is spent on African issues. It would, therefore, be no exaggeration to say that the success of the efforts of this Council in Africa will determine in significant measures its overall effectiveness in the implementation of its Charter-mandated role as the principal organ of the United Nations for maintenance of international peace and security.

4. In this connection, it is important for us to listen to Africa and its organizations so that the Council’s activities are not only based on Africa’s needs but also complement those of African countries and organizations. Cooperation with Africa will also enable the Council act with better understanding of the situation on the ground that would establish Africa’s ownership of the solutions and promote lasting peace and security on the African continent.

5. Indeed, Madame President, Chapter VIII of the UN Charter recognizes the importance of the regional organizations and their role in matters relating to international peace and security. The Charter also provides a broad framework for this Council’s cooperation with the regional organizations. We, therefore, support the strengthening of partnership between the United Nations and the African Union.

6. We think that this partnership should be based on long-term strategic and operational perspectives taking into consideration the complementarity of strengths that the two organisations possess. The focus should be on capacity-building of African Union’s peace and security architecture so that the AU becomes a more effective and capable partner of the UN system. In this connection, we welcome the establishment of the UN Office to the African Union (UNOAU) which should facilitate systematic and broad-based cooperation between the two organisations. We expect the Office to expeditiously establish formalized structures of interactions with different AU bodies and sub-regional organizations. Other steps, like annual dialogue between this Council and the AU Peace and Security Council, the SG’s Ten Year Capacity-Building Programme for the AU, linkages between the UN and AU Secretariats, etc are also welcome and should facilitate regular consultation.

7. Madame President, the African Union has already proven beyond any doubt its ability to address the African problems. The AU High-level Implementation Panel for the Sudan has facilitated dialogue between the CPA parties. We continue to support its efforts for peace and security in Darfur through the Darfur Political Process (DPP). Similarly, AMISOM is the mainstay of international efforts to stabilize the situation in Somalia. The UN-AU Hybrid Mission in Darfur (UNAMID) has greatly helped in the improvement of the situation there, including through community welfare programmes.

8. For the success of these missions and for undertaking other joint missions in future, it is necessary that there be better understanding between the UN and AU at strategic and operational levels. This Council should be more forthcoming in extending support to the AU in critical areas of financial resources, force-multipiers and force-enablers as may be required by these missions.

9. Madame President, for an effective and enduring cooperation between the UN and the AU, it is necessary that the Council not adopt a selective approach to this cooperation. Partnership should not be restricted only to the areas of the Council’s convenience but also extend to areas where there may be differences, and be based on mutual respect. This requires a mindset change in approach and demands expansion of the permanent membership to make the Council reflective of contemporary realities and increased representation from developing countries, including Africa. This will not only make this Council more representative but also enhance its ability to successfully address the challenges that the international community faces today.

10. Conscious of the AU’s role in handling African issues concerning not only peace and security but also social and development-related, India has institutionalized its cooperation with the African Union. I would like to recall here the historic visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Addis Ababa in May 2011 to participate in second Africa-India Forum Summit signifying the importance of our relations with African states. Given the similarity of our objectives with those the AU, the summit further deepened the India-AU development partnership and also peace and security cooperation. India has contributed US$ 2 million, out of which US$ 1.5 million through the AU, without any caveats for AMISOM operations. India is also providing credit lines of US$ 5 billion for the next three years to help Africa achieve its development goals. India will provide an additional US$ 700 million for establishment of new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions. India is offering 22,000 scholarships in various areas of capacity building to African nationals during the three year period of 2011-14.

11. Madame President, all these activities will enhance AU’s institutional capacity, and help this Council as well, in dealing with African issues in partnership with the AU.

Thank you.
566. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri during Briefing on the Middle East (Syria) in UN Security Council on January 31, 2012

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organiseing this meeting at the request of the League of Arab States. I also take this opportunity to welcome in our midst today the Chair of the League's Ministerial Committee and Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Qatar, His Excellency Bin Jasim Bin Jaber Al Thani, and the Secretary General of the League of Arab States, Dr. Nabil El-Asrabi. I would like to thank them for their comprehensive briefings on the League's efforts to resolve the crisis in Syria. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Syria for his statement. Participation of the US Secretary of State, the Foreign Minister of France, the Foreign Secretary of the UK, the Foreign Ministers of Guatemala, Portugal and Morocco and Minister of State of Federal Foreign Office of Germany in today's meeting testifies to the importance of the subject of our discussion and deserves our appreciation.

2. Mr. President, Chapter VIII of the UN Charter provides for this Council's cooperation with the regional organisations for maintenance of international peace and security. In this context, we welcome today's meeting and think that it provides us a good opportunity to understand the role the League of Arab States is playing in resolution of the problem in Syria.

3. Mr President, the Syrian Arab Republic has historically played an important role in the Middle East by virtue of its geographic and strategic location, its diversity, and the genius of its people. Developments in Syria have implications for peace and stability in the wider region. We have, therefore, called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of the Syrian society since the beginning of the protests in March 2011. The problem in Syria is not merely security-related; it is primarily political and economic and emanates from the Syrian people's desire to play a greater role in shaping their destiny. Resolution of this problem cannot be found in violence or armed struggle and its violent suppression. Nor can a solution be reached through prescriptions from outside. The Syrian people demand and deserve empowerment so that a Syrian-led and Syrian-owned political solution can be found in an atmosphere free of violence and bloodshed.

4. Unfortunately, during the last ten months we have witnessed an increasing level of violence that has taken a heavy toll of civilians and security forces and caused destruction of civilian infrastructure. We unequivocally and strongly condemn all violence irrespective of whoever the perpetrators are and whatever justification is proffered. We also condemn all violations of human rights and rights of expression and peaceful assembly. India holds these rights among the fundamental values that should be respected while ensuring stability and security of the society. India, along with its IBSA partners, conveyed this message clearly to the Syrian leadership when an IBSA delegation visited Damascus in August 2011. This message was also contained in the Council's PRST issued in August 2011 under India's Presidency.

5. We see the efforts of the League of Arab States in Syria in light of our support for a political resolution of the crisis. We had noted that the deployment of the League’s Observer Mission across several areas in the country had had a calming effect and are disappointed that the Mission was suspended on 28 January on account of a serious deterioration in the form of continuing violence. The report of the Observer Mission that the League made available to the Security Council clearly states that there is an armed element to the opposition which is also responsible for a number of violent acts. The continued presence and deployment of the Observers could have helped reduce the violence and present a more accurate picture of developments especially since the monitors had also confirmed that a lot of information in the media is exaggerated and misleading. The report of the Observer Mission also made an important point that the mission needs to be accompanied by a political process to address the grievances of the Syrian people, something that we strongly support.

6. Mr President, we are firmly of the view that all sides need to cooperate with the League of Arab States. A political process must begin without any further delay. The process should be led by the Syrians and should respect Syria’s sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity. The League of Arab States, as an important regional organisation, should play its required and historic role in promoting political dialogue among the Syrian parties. This dialogue can build upon the package of political reforms already announced by the Syrian leadership and also bring about necessary changes to the package of political reforms so that it finds acceptance among all sections of the Syrian society. The outcome of this dialogue cannot be prejudged. The outcome should also be acceptable to the widest segment of Syrian society for it to resolve the present crisis and be enduring.

7. Mr President, the international community, including this Council, should play a constructive role in the process of political dialogue among the Syrians. In this context, we welcome submission of a draft resolution to the Security Council. We will engage with fellow Council members so that the Council can speak with a unanimous voice in support of the initiative of the League of Arab States to expeditiously resolve the Syrian crisis.

Thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, Debate on UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) at the United Nations Security Council on February 08, 2012

Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to thank ASG Edmond Mulet for his briefing and for the Secretary General’s comprehensive report on UNMIK covering the period October 2011 to January 2012. I would also like to thank H.E. Mr. Vuk Jeremic, Foreign Minister of Serbia, and Mr. Enver Hoxhaj for their statements.

2. Mr President, we commend SRSG Zarif and UNMIK for their continuing efforts towards improvement in the situation in northern Kosovo and for the services the Mission is rendering in areas such as document certification, mutual legal assistance, determining the fate of missing persons, protection of architectural and religious sites, promoting UNESCO’s activities, facilitation of Kosovo’s interaction with INTERPOL, other international bodies and non-recognizing states. These services serve to better the lives of all Kosovars and should be continued in accordance with Security Council Resolution 1244 and other relevant decisions.

3. Mr President, as the Secretary General’s report notes, the situation in northern Kosovo continues to be tense and potentially unstable. In order to deal with this volatile situation, we urge all UN bodies and international agencies to use persuasion and negotiation rather than force. Further, all sides must try to avoid taking unilateral steps to change the status quo. All sides should show creativity in finding a compromise on the contentious issues. In this connection, we appreciate the helpful position taken by the Government of Serbia on the issue of roadblocks and also on the proposed holding of referendum in northern Kosovo.

4. Mr President, we applaud the concerned parties as well as the European Union for successfully holding two rounds of dialogue in Brussels in November-December 2011 despite the prevailing tensions. We have noted that these talks have resulted in forward movement on the agreements reached previously and also in a new agreement on integrated management of crossing points. We hope that the implementation of these agreements would further facilitate daily lives of the Kosovars.

5. We have taken note with satisfaction that the lead prosecutor of the EULEX Special Investigative Task Force to investigate the allegations of organ trafficking has assumed office and has started his work in earnest. We reiterate our stand that a thorough and impartial investigation should be carried out into all aspects of this matter.
6. In conclusion, Mr President, I would like to express our support for SRSG Zarif and UNMIK. Other agencies in Kosovo – OSCE, KFOR, EULEX, etc – should continue to cooperate and coordinate with UNMIK in accordance with their respective mandates.

We reiterate the call to the parties to resolve all issues concerning Kosovo through consultation and dialogue without resort to unilateral action. Only thus can the aspirations of all Kosovars be met and lasting peace and stability be established in the region and create the enabling environment for socio-economic development.

Thank you.

Thank you, Mr President.

2. I would also like to join other colleagues in welcoming H.E. Mr Eamon Gilmore, Tanaiste and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade of Ireland to the Security Council. I also thank him for his comprehensive briefing on the activities of the OSCE and its priorities in the months to come.

3. Mr President, India supports the role of regional organisations in maintenance of international peace and security and their cooperation with the United Nations under Chapter VIII of the Charter. Article 54 of the Charter enjoins upon these organisations to keep the Security Council fully informed of their activities for maintenance of international peace and security. We, therefore, welcome the briefing by the OSCE’s Chairman-in-Office.

4. Mr President, Minister Gilmore has covered a wide canvas of issues, several of them concerning our immediate and extended neighbourhood. Naturally, these are of great interest to my delegation. We appreciate the work OSCE has been doing for promotion of security in its politico-military, economic, environmental, and human dimensions. It has addressed a wide range of security-related concerns, including arms control, confidence- and security-building measures, human rights, national minorities, democratization, policing strategies, counter-terrorism and economic and environmental issues. They have contributed to managing some of the important problems in the post-Cold War world.

5. In the last decade or so, the OSCE has expanded its activities significantly in our neighbourhood under the Asian Partners for Cooperation (APC) and Asian Contact Group. We have noted OSCE’s cooperation with the ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF), of which India is a member, on matters related to confidence building measures and preventive diplomacy. We also welcome OSCE’s partnership with Afghanistan in border security management and electoral assistance.

6. Mr President, we wish great success to the OSCE in its efforts and activities towards promotion of understanding, peace and security among member and partner countries. We also extend our good wishes to the Irish Chairmanship of the OSCE and to Minister Gilmore personally and hope that, under his stewardship, the OSCE will continue its important work.

Thank you, Mr President.
Thank you, Mr President,

Since the beginning of the crisis in Syria in March last year, India has been concerned at its implications within and outside Syria. We have been mindful of the important role that the Syrian Arab Republic has historically played in the Middle East. We think that prolonged instability and unrest in Syria have serious implications for peace and stability in the wider region. We have, therefore, since the beginning of the protests, called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of Syrian society.

2. We strongly condemn all violence, irrespective of whoever the perpetrators are. We also condemn all violations of human rights. India holds the rights of expression and peaceful assembly among the fundamental values that should be respected, while ensuring stability and security of society.

3. India has conveyed this message to the Syrian leadership, both bilaterally as well as along with its IBSA partners. We have impressed upon the Syrian side the urgent need to abjure violence and pay heed to the aspirations of the people of Syria. This message was also contained in the Council's PRST issued in August 2011 under India's Presidency. Unfortunately, the situation has continued to deteriorate. We have also witnessed several terrorist attacks in different parts of the country. Resort to violence by all sides in the crisis remains unabated.

4. We are firmly of the view that a political process for resolution of the present crisis should be led by the Syrians themselves. We believe that the main role of the international community, including this Assembly, is to facilitate engagement of the Syrian Government with all sections of Syrian society for an inclusive political process, taking into account the legitimate aspirations of all Syrians while ensuring respect for the country's independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

5. The League of Arab States, as an important regional organisation, should play its required and historic role in promoting political dialogue among the Syrian parties. Our support for the resolution adopted by this Assembly today is in accordance with our support for the efforts by the Arab League for a peaceful resolution of the crisis through a Syrian-led inclusive political process.

6. I would, however, like to express our regret at the procedure followed in this Assembly during the week in discussing the situation in Syria. Exceptions to established procedures are best avoided to maintain the credibility of any institution. Also, it would do us immense good if there is greater readiness from all quarters to negotiate a text with a view to reaching a consensus.

7. Mr President, my delegation notes that the resolution just adopted expressly reaffirms that all countries should refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State or act in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations. The resolution also condemns all violence, irrespective of where it comes from, and calls for serious political dialogue between the Syrian government and the whole spectrum of the opposition under the auspices of the League of Arab States. We believe that the leadership of Syria is a matter for the Syrian people to decide. We call on all opposition forces in Syria to peacefully engage in constructive dialogue with the authorities.

6. In this connection, Mr President, we have noted the decision of the Syrian leadership to hold a referendum on a new draft constitution on 26 February and organise multi-party elections within next three months. We hope that this decision will create a new environment for peace and facilitate a political process.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to welcome you to the Security Council and thank you for presiding over this session. I also want to commend your delegation’s leadership in organizing this timely debate and for preparing a comprehensive concept paper for our deliberations today. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his briefing on the subject and his several important initiatives to address the problems of transnational organized crimes in West Africa and the Sahel region. I would also like to thank Mr Yuri Fedotov, Executive Director of the UNODC, for his valuable statement.

2. Mr President, while countries in West Africa and the Sahel are more democratic today than in the past and have achieved respectable rates of economic growth, they continue to suffer from a number of problems which have political, security and socio-economic dimensions. The importance of an enduring peace, security and stability in West Africa and the Sahel region cannot, therefore be overemphasized. Addressing these problems will not only help the region but also have a positive effect on democracy and development in Africa as a whole. A number of countries in the region, including Mali, Senegal and Guinea Bissau, face crucial elections this year. We hope that elections will be held in a peaceful manner and further strengthen the roots of democracy in these countries and the larger region.

3. Over the last year, several problems in the region have got accentuated. The conflict in Libya has created new problems of proliferation of armed groups and weapons and thus exacerbated existing problems. These problems transcend national boundaries and may pose long-term threats. Transnational organized crimes, including illicit drug trafficking, piracy in the Gulf of Guinea and arms trafficking are undermining efforts of the governments and international community to ensure peace and stability.

4. The military operations carried out ostensibly for the protection of civilians have clearly resulted in millions of civilians in the Sahel, Maghreb and West African regions being adversely affected. They have resulted in deterioration of security, economic and humanitarian situations in the entire region. In a relatively short period of time, the countries in West Africa and the Sahel have had to contend with the influx of nearly half a million returnees as well as the large inflow of arms and ammunition. The loss of remittances and high unemployment among the youth has exacerbated security problems as well as food insecurity and nutrition crisis. These have put tremendous burden on governments in the region and strained their limited capacity to deal with transnational organized crimes. Recovery from the after effects of these conflicts will require concerted action by the international community.

5. Mr President, a number of problems including proliferation of arms, terrorism, illicit drug trafficking, etc have a regional dimension and need to be tackled through regional cooperation. Illicit drug trafficking and its growing links to financing of terrorism, proliferation of weapons as a result of conflicts in Cote d'Ivoire and Libya, piracy in the Gulf of Guinea, etc demand action at the national and regional levels with the constructive assistance of the international community. The United Nations should lead the international efforts and focus on institution and capacity building and provision of adequate resources to the national authorities and regional and sub-regional organizations.

6. A comprehensive strategy to deal with the problems should include the creation of effective government institutions, particularly in the fields of security, law enforcement, SSR and DDR. Countries concerned should implement all legal and administrative measures to combat organized crime and related issues in accordance with Resolution 1373 and other relevant regional and international instruments. The promotion of democracy and the rule of law will not only help establish peace and security but also help in socio-economic development. Development and employment generation programmes should be undertaken so that the youth can be weaned away from criminal activities and their energies channelized properly.

7. Simultaneously, the strategy should facilitate regional cooperation under the auspices of the relevant regional and sub-regional organizations such as the AU and ECOWAS. In this connection, we welcome the efforts of the UN through UNOWA and UNODC to create synergies with the governments and regional organizations to tackle transnational organized crimes.

8. It is necessary that regional initiatives by ECOWAS and ECCAS should be implemented fully and technical support extended to develop coherent action plans for addressing transnational problems. Steps of regional and sub-regional organizations like the AU plan of action on drug control and crime prevention for 2007-12, ECOWAS Regional Plan of Action to Address Illicit Drug Trafficking, Organized Crime and Drug Abuse for 2008-2011, ECOWAS Counter-terrorism Strategy and West Africa Coast Initiative are welcome and need to be fully implemented.

9. In conclusion, Mr. President, we think that the UN should become a more effective partner of the AU in resolution of African conflicts. The relevant UN agencies should support the regional and sub-regional organizations and assist in their capacity building and in facilitating their implementation. The UN offices in the region, including UNOWA, UNOCA and UNOAU, should look into practical and concrete ways to strengthen the efforts of the national governments and regional institutions and bring greater coherence and coordination.

I thank you.

I thank you, Mr. President, for convening today's debate on the situation in Timor-Leste. I would like to extend a warm welcome to H.E. Mr. José Ramos-Horta, President of Timor-Leste, in the Security Council and thank him for his statement. I also thank the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Timor-Leste, Ms. Ameerah Haq, for her comprehensive briefing.

2. The Secretary General's latest report has provided us an opportunity to reflect on the latest developments as the UN Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT) prepares to drawdown by the end of this year.

3. Mr. President, it is a matter of great satisfaction that the overall situation in Timor Leste remains calm and stable and the country is firmly on path to long-term peace, stability and development. We are encouraged by President Horta's assessment of the progress achieved so far.

4. This year would be an important milestone for the consolidation of democratic transition in Timor-Leste. As the country marks the tenth anniversary of restoration of its independence, presidential and parliamentary elections are scheduled later this year. The continued and active engagement of all political parties in the democratic processes and the forthcoming elections are an encouraging indicator of Timor-Leste's abiding commitment to democracy.

5. We are happy to note that there has been a steady progress towards organizing these elections and an enabling legislative framework has already been put in place. We are appreciative of the technical and logistical support extended by the UN and the international community towards holding these elections.

6. We compliment the Policia Nacional de Timor-Leste (PNTL) for its efforts towards institutional development and capacity building. The PNTL has successfully assumed the responsibility for the conduct, command and control of all police operations in the country. Forthcoming elections would be the final litmus test of its preparedness to maintain law and order in the country. As the transition progresses, it is important that UNMIT remains steadfast in its support to the PNTL in accordance with the wishes of the government.

7. Moving ahead, it is critical that there must be necessary legislative and operational framework in place for a clear delineation of authority between the military and the police so that they can effectively discharge their responsibilities under the overall command and control of civilian government.
8. We support the efforts of the government for enhanced regional engagement and for addressing developmental challenges confronting the country. We have noted with satisfaction that the overall economic growth, including proceeds from the oil and gas sector, continues to remain robust. Government’s continuing focus on infrastructure and capital development would certainly be helpful in ushering rapid socio-economic transition in the country.

9. As UNMIT moves towards a drawdown by end 2012 and the government assumes full responsibility for various processes, the UN system and agencies present in the field must work in a coherent manner. All critical aspects related to transition - downsizing of UNMIT’s police component post-elections, implementation of the Joint Transition Plan and contours of future UN engagement - must be decided in close consultation with the government. It is important that the transition must be guided and have the ownership of the Timorese government. We look forward to the UNSG’s report after the elections.

10. Mr. President, India attaches great importance to its relations with Timor-Leste and we have sought to contribute to the country’s development by providing expertise and training in areas of our competence and where we see complementarities in their application. India has extended its support to the Government of Timor Leste, including through assistance for purchase of equipment and materials related to socio-economic development and in human resources development sector. We are also partnering with the Government of Timor-Leste under the IBSA framework.

11. The progress achieved so far gives us confidence that we are moving in the right direction and UNMIT is well on path to become a success story. We appreciate the efforts by UNMIT, the international community and bilateral partners towards peace, stability and development in the country. We support the 3 Secretary General’s recommendation for extension of UNMIT’s mandate till end December 2012 at the current authorized levels.

12. Before I conclude, Mr. President, I would like to express our deep appreciation for the leadership of SRSG Ms. Haq and the dedication and hard work of her team in supporting the government and people of Timor Leste.

Thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank SRSG Margot Wallstrom for her comprehensive and valuable briefing and also for the report of the Secretary General on Sexual Violence in Armed Conflict. We welcome the SRSG’s efforts and share the principles and objectives outlined by her. I would also like to thank the USG for DPKO and the representative of the NGO Working Group on Women and Peace and Security for their statements. We think that the deliberations today will promote our common interest in the subject.

Mr. President,

India has been actively participating in the debates of the Council on the agenda item ‘Women and Peace and Security’. This is a cross-cutting issue having multi-sectoral dimension, and requires the active participation of all Member States. I would, therefore, like to thank you, Mr President, and the delegation of Togo for organizing this open debate that affords an opportunity to Member States to discuss the progress made in the implementation of Security Council Resolutions 1820, 1888 and 1960 and contribute to our ongoing consideration of the subject.

Mr President,

Today, it is estimated that close to 90% of current casualties in wars and situations of armed conflict are civilians, with the majority being women and children. Obviously, women bear a disproportionately large share of the burden of conflict, but have a marginal say in matters of war and peace. This is perhaps a function of the gender imbalance in our societies, reflected in positions of power and influence.

Despite this, women should not be viewed solely as victims of war. They also have to assume the key role of ensuring family livelihoods in the midst of chaos and destruction, and are particularly active in the peace movements at the grassroots level and cultivating peace within their communities. Therefore, the absence of women at the peace negotiating table is unconscionable.

Mr. President,

Some of the aspects highlighted by the landmark UNSC resolution 1325, in particular, the greater participation of women in areas of conflict prevention, peace negotiations and post-conflict reconstruction, are central to the issue.
Some solutions would need to emerge from the conflict affected societies themselves. Others are more long term and structural. They involve, inter alia, the encouragement of democratic ideals and practices, effective improvements in the economic and social conditions, and expansion of opportunities for education and productive employment. Situations of conflict vary. Each has its own causes and consequences. Clearly, there cannot be off-the-shelf remedies or panaceas. We need to take practical and effective steps to mitigate the impact of conflict on women and to enhance their ability to restore and preserve peace.

Mr. President,

It is a matter of deep regret that the international community has to repeatedly debate the issue of sexual and other forms of violence against women and girls in situations of armed conflict.

This abhorrent behavior has to be unequivocally, unambiguously and resolutely condemned, whether perpetrated by the parties to the armed conflict or others.

There should be no tolerance for gender-based violence. All such cases must be investigated and perpetrators prosecuted.

Some argue that human rights law and international humanitarian law do not offer enough protection to women and children. Such postulation is a bit extreme. Women’s rights and needs have received the attention they deserve in the codification of international law.

The challenge is their effective implementation, and availability of adequate resources for capacity building wherever required. This alone will ensure the real impact of our efforts on the ground.

Mr. President,

By definition, it is States that are parties to the treaty-based system of international law. By and large, they respect them, and when they do not, penalties arise through the provisions of the relevant treaties.

The most egregious crimes against women in times of conflict, however, have been and are committed by non-state actors, often warring against governments; they obey no laws and are, as experience has shown throughout the last decade, immune to coercive and punitive measures.

This Council, therefore, needs to consider, in practical terms, how the non-state actors, which are responsible for the bulk of the crimes that continue to be committed against women, can be effectively tackled. Mr. President,

On the UN side, there has been modest progress in areas such as gender mainstreaming in peacekeeping operations and training of peacekeeping personnel on gender perspectives. In this context, we commend SRSG Wallstrom for having brought a new synergy in addressing the issue of sexual violence in the situations of armed conflict.

My country has taken a lead in this process and been conscious of the need to incorporate essential elements of the gender mainstreaming policy in the pre-deployment training of its peacekeepers. India's formed police unit of 100 personnel in Liberia was the first of its kind among UN peacekeeping operations. As the largest troop contributing country in UN history, we are proud of the exemplary record of our peacekeepers. I might add that we are willing to increase our contribution of Female FPUs.

Mr. President,

The Secretary General has, in his report, referred to efforts to establish a framework of early warning indicators with specific reference to sexual violence in situations of armed conflict.

The UN has also come up with a set of indicators as global markers of progress in the implementation of Resolution 1325. We have taken note of these efforts.

The development of such indicators, benchmarks and guidelines should involve a process of broad inter-governmental scrutiny and approval before their eventual adoption.

In this connection, one has to be cognizant of the difficulty in obtaining credible and verifiable data from conflict situations.

Mr. President,

India will continue to contribute positively to UN efforts in protecting vulnerable sections, particularly women and children, in conflict and post-conflict societies.

I would also like to emphasize that the international community needs to enhance cooperation by providing new and additional financial resources, sharing of experiences, and capacity building in the areas of justice and the rule of law.

Mr. President,

The women and children in our lives assure our future. They must live in security. While there is much talk of the need to safeguard the interests of women and children, there is less talk of cooperative effort to ensure sustained economic growth which alone can eradicate the poverty and deprivation that cause their exclusion. Several studies point out that most of the global poor are women. Globalization has affected both men and women, but women bear the double burden of inequality and marginalization.
Empowering them is, therefore, both crucial and urgent. In considering the role of women in peace and security, this Council, I am certain, will bear in mind this wider perspective of women empowerment, development and peace.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President,

At the outset, let me join others in commending you and your delegation for organizing this meeting on an issue that is becoming a major threat to maritime navigation, trade and economic activities in the Gulf of Guinea. I would also like to thank USG Lynn Pascoe for his briefing and for the Secretary General’s report on the UN Assessment Mission on the subject. I would like to place on record our appreciation for the representatives of the Gulf of Guinea and the Economic Community of West African States for their valuable statements.

2. Mr President, the problem of piracy in the Gulf of Guinea was first discussed in the Security Council during the Indian presidency of the Council in August last year. Since then, there have been several new acts of piracy in the Gulf of Guinea and the problem has assumed greater proportion. Its impact is being increasingly felt by all littoral states and the seriousness is demonstrated by the participation of a number of delegations in today’s Debate. I thank all participants for sharing their assessments with us.

3. Mr. President, piracy off both coasts of Africa shows the instability prevalent in the regions and the reach of organized terrorist and criminal groups. They are targeting oil and chemical vessels as well as oil drilling platforms in the Gulf of Guinea and employing severe violence against their captives. The region produces more than 5 million barrels of oil per day and three-quarters of world’s supply of cocoa. Pirate attacks are thus adversely affecting the emerging oil industry of the region as well as the commercial shipping and mariners.

4. The Secretary General’s report states that piracy in the Gulf of Guinea is already causing economic loss of US$ 2 billion, which is a significant amount when compared to annual GDPs of countries in the region. As the regional stakeholders have said in their statements today, a large number of unemployed youth are becoming attracted to the business of piracy and maritime robbery. The evolving business model of piracy involves low cost and risk, but yields high returns. While socio-economic issues like poverty, unemployment, etc may be abetting piracy, main reasons have to do with limited institutional capacity of the countries in the region. Addressing problems like proliferation of weapons, poor naval infrastructure, weak law enforcement and prosecution systems, etc have to become integral to counter-piracy efforts. Otherwise, like piracy off the coast of Somalia, piracy in the Gulf of Guinea can fast assume intensity and proportion of an organized cartel in the countries of western Africa.

5. Mr President, India has been at the forefront of highlighting the menace of piracy off the coast of Somalia and stressing the urgent need for the international community to work towards a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy. India is also concerned about the surge in piracy in the Gulf of Guinea, including its economic and social cost. While the two situations are quite different in proportion at this stage, it is quite possible that the failure of the international community to act decisively against piracy off the coast of Somalia could have spawned a new surge in piracy in the Gulf of Guinea.

6. Time has now come for the attention that this Council has been paying to the problem to translate into a concrete plan of action. This being a regional problem, it is necessary that action should involve full cooperation of the international community, led by the United Nations, with the countries of West Africa and regional and sub-regional organizations. In this connection, we welcome the steps that have been taken like establishment of sub-regional coast guard network in West and Central Africa, ECCAS strategy on maritime security, establishment of Regional Centre for Maritime Security in Central Africa (CRESMAC), creation of Gulf of Guinea Commission (GCC) and the Maritime Organization of West and Central Africa (MOWCA).

7. These initiatives have helped to create a platform for the governments to formulate a collective approach to the problem. Also, ECCAS maritime security strategy has yielded positive result in the Zone comprising Cameroon, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon and Sao Tome and Principe. These efforts should be intensified and include joint counter-piracy efforts like patrolling and surveillance of the coastal waters, sharing of information and intelligence and capacity building of naval forces. In addition, strengthening of legal system to ensure effective and expeditious prosecution is also critical.

8. Sustained and full implementation of these efforts, Mr President, will be helped by greater coherence among the regional states and organizations. In this connection, we welcome the Secretary General’s proposal to facilitate a regional summit of Heads of State. The United Nations should also assist in mobilization of resources. UN agencies in the region, particularly UNOWA and UNOCA along with UNODC and IMO, have an important role to play in regional counter-piracy efforts, as also in addressing related problems of terrorism, illicit trafficking of drugs and proliferation of weapons as they all conspire together to destabilize the region.

9. In conclusion, Mr. President, India stands ready to contribute to international efforts aimed at increasing effective cooperation among States in the region to tackle the threat of piracy and armed robbery at sea.

Thank you, Mr President.

Let me begin by congratulating the UK delegation on the assumption of the presidency of the Security Council for the month of March. I would also like to put on record our appreciation of Ambassador Kodjo Menan and the delegation of Togo for their stewardship of the Council during the month of February.

2. Mr President, the political, security and humanitarian situations in Somalia and their consequences, particularly the problem of piracy and hostage-taking, are of serious concern for the international community. Today’s Open Debate is, therefore, a timely endeavour to comprehensively address the situation in Somalia. We appreciate the delegation of the United Kingdom for organizing this meeting and thank you personally, Mr Minister, for presiding over this meeting. I would also thank the Secretary General and his Special Representative Augustine Mahiga for their comprehensive and valuable briefings.

3. Mr President, few days back more than fifty countries, including my own, participated in the London Conference on Somalia. The Conference served a useful purpose in reiterating the support of the international community for comprehensive stabilization of the situation in Somalia, while taking stock of the progress made so far in political, security and humanitarian fields. The Conference also reminded us of the difficult challenges that lie ahead.

4. The last one year has been a mixed bag for Somalia. There have been significant gains made by AMISOM and Kenyan and Ethiopian forces in securing Mogadishu and other areas in south and central Somalia. The extended transition period saw the adoption of a comprehensive roadmap by the Transitional Federal Institutions in accordance with the June 2011 Kampala Accord. The effective engagement of the international community also helped tide over the worst phase of the humanitarian crisis. Still, millions continue to suffer from the crisis and the implementation of the roadmap has left much to be desired. In spite of the pressure it is under, Al Shabaab with its recent affiliation to Al Qaeda remains a serious threat to peace and stability in Somalia and the larger region.

5. There is, however, an opportunity today in Somalia that has not been available for years. The TFIs can consolidate the gains made by AMISOM and TFG forces by urgently addressing the issues of governance and basic services in areas recovered from Al Shabaab. This would also result in emergence of organized economic activities and employment generation. For this to materialize, the international community has to persevere and continue its support for the people of Somalia.
6. AMISOM being the mainstay of security-related operations in Somalia deserves our continued support. In this connection, we welcome the adoption of Resolution 2036 by the Council, which provides for force enablers and multipliers for AMISOM and also expands the UN support package. The resolution will make available more sustainable and predictable resources for the TCCs and assist in the full implementation of the new Strategic Concept of AMISOM, including its limited maritime component. This would help AMISOM sanitize the Somali coastline and deprive Al Shabaab of revenues earned from port facilities and export of charcoal. We hope that the Council will agree to include naval assets for CoE reimbursement when it considers the extension of AMISOM mandate later this year. India made an uncaveated contribution of US$ 2 million in 2011 to the AU and UN Trust Funds for AMISOM. We stand ready to provide further support to AMISOM.

7. In parallel with AMISOM operations, Somali stakeholders have to build on the gains in the field of security through progress on the political track. The TFIs should rid themselves of internal divisions and focus their energies on implementing the Kampala Accord and the Roadmap. The drafting and adoption of a new Constitution and its endorsement by a Constituent Assembly in a timely manner as per the Garowe Principles should remain a priority task. This process should be as broad-based as possible taking into consideration the traditional social structure and security situation on the ground.

8. Mr. President, piracy off the coast of Somalia remains a serious problem for maritime security and trade. A large portion of the world’s trade, including India’s estimated at about US$ 120 billion annually, passes through the Gulf of Aden. Piracy off the coast of Somalia is adversely affecting this trade, costing several billions due to re-routing of vessels into safer routes and increased costs of insurance and security. As we speak, a number of seafarers, including 33 Indians, remain hostage to pirates. Their humanitarian condition remains a source of serious concern to the government and people of India. What is more worrisome is that attacks by pirates have been increasing in spite of counter-piracy operations.

9. Given the growing scope and expanding coverage of piracy off the coast of Somalia, the international community has to think about adopting a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy. Such a strategy should involve effective sanitization of the Somali coastline, enactment of national laws on priority to criminalize piracy as defined in the UN Convention of the Law of the Sea and UN-led anti-piracy force to conduct naval operations and to coordinate anti-piracy operations by various naval forces. India, on its part, continues to undertake anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden and has deployed its ships in the Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. So far, the TFIs have paid little attention to this problem. We expect the TFIs to expeditiously implement the benchmarks on piracy in the roadmap on transitional tasks. We stand ready to help in capacity building of the TFIs and the states in the region for effective measures to combat piracy.

10. In conclusion, Mr President, for lasting peace and security in Somalia, economic development has to form an integral part of our efforts. The international community should expand its development assistance to Somalia so that the Somali people directly benefit from the peace dividend. India, on its part, will continue to extend help to Somalia in capacity building through human resource development. We have recently increased the number of scholarships for Somali students and experts. We have also contributed in the information technology sector in Somalia. We will continue to partner with Somali authorities as they work towards turning a new page.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to join others in thanking SRSG Mariano Fernandez for his comprehensive briefing on recent developments in Haiti and for presenting the Secretary General’s report on MINUSTAH.

2. Mr President, despite periods of political uncertainty and resultant instability during the last year, Haiti has made notable recovery from the devastating earthquake of January 2010. Today, people living in camps are less than the number last year; more than 1 million people have been relocated so far, several hundred schools have been rebuilt, health services have improved and more than 100,000 temporary shelter units have been built to accommodate 400,000 affected persons, emergency food assistance now covers 4 million Haitians and 5 million cubic meters of debris have been removed. This would not have been possible without strong commitment and support of the international community. We commend the role played by the United Nations and its agencies as well as the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission.

3. The security situation has also improved though it remains fragile and suffers from insufficient policing capacity. Moreover, the country witnessed peaceful transfer of power last year reflecting on the faith of the Haitian population in democracy. The IMF noted in December 2011 that the economic situation in Haiti is improving and predicted positive GDP growth for the year 2012.

4. Progress in recovery and reconstruction has, however, been slowed down due to the continuing political uncertainty aftermath of elections last year. The delay in government formation for several months, lack of understanding between the two important organs of the government and avoidable controversies are unfortunately affecting the overall gains made on the recovery front. This has affected the donor confidence and OCHA’s appeal was funded only 55 per cent in 2011. The political infighting has also delayed adoption of a number of legislative measures and preparations for elections to the Senate and local bodies appear stalled. The resignation of Prime Minister Conille last month has further exacerbated political tensions. We hope that the process of parliamentary approval for the new Prime Minister and formation of a new government will be completed soon.

5. Mr President, the need of the hour is for the Haitian leaders to set aside their differences and work collectively for an effective administration that can implement reforms necessary for economic growth and strengthen the capacity of rule of law institutions. Political stability is fundamental to effective governance, which alone can stimulate development, investment and confidence of the international community.
6. Given the prevailing situation, the role of MINUSTAH continues to be critical for recovery efforts, for ensuring overall security and stability and for capacity building of Haitian national institutions, particularly the national police. This will also help the national authorities deal with the reported emergence of new armed groups belonging to the disbanded army. We commend the leadership of MINUSTAH, its peacekeepers and engineers for doing excellent work in most demanding circumstances. MINUSTAH has provided security for the distribution of humanitarian assistance to some 4.3 million Haitians and helped provide temporary shelter to 1.5 million people. Military engineering companies have played a significant role in removal of rubble, repair of roads and setting up of temporary shelters. MINUSTAH’s important role in assisting the authorities respond to the epidemic and hurricane can hardly be overemphasized.

7. We hope that the Haitian national institutions will gradually assume larger role and ultimately take over MINUSTAH’s responsibilities. Against this backdrop, MINUSTAH should focus its efforts on supporting the political process, capacity building and consolidation of Haitian national institutions, including the national police force. Future force configuration of the Mission should be based on the overall improvement in the security situation as well as stabilization of the political and socio-economic situations.

8. Mr. President, India has contributed 3 Formed Police Units (FPUs) to MINUSTAH totaling 458 personnel. The performance of the Indian units has been widely appreciated in view of their exemplary dedication and devotion to duty. India also made a modest contribution to the efforts of the Haitian authorities to deal with the devastating earthquake in 2010. In the immediate aftermath of the earthquake, India made a cash contribution of US$ 5 million to the Government of Haiti towards relief measures as a token of our solidarity with the people of Haiti. India is also contributing US$ 500,000 every year since 2009 to the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF), which continues to play an important role in recovery work in Haiti. We have also undertaken a waste management project under a joint IBSA (India-Brazil-South Africa) initiative. In addition, India will soon undertake a project for construction of low cost housing units.

9. In conclusion, Mr President, the continuing support of the international community coupled with stable and effective governance remains critical for sustainable peace, security, stability and development in Haiti. We remain committed to continue our support for the efforts of the Haitian authorities to rebuild the country. It is our hope that Haiti would soon emerge out of its current problems and move towards stability and development.

I thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, Debate on Situation in the Middle East: Challenges and Opportunities, at the United Nations Security Council, on 12 March 2012.

Thank you, Mr President.

Let me begin by welcoming you, Mr Foreign Secretary, and other Ministers to the Security Council. I would like to thank the UK delegation for organizing today’s Debate to discuss developments in West Asia and North Africa over the last year. I would also like to thank the Secretary General and other distinguished speakers and you, Mr President, for the valuable statements. We have listened carefully to the views expressed and hope that today’s deliberations will help the international community develop a more coordinated and consensus outlook to the serious challenges posed by developments in the region and beyond.

2. Mr President, for more than a millennium now, societies in West Asia and North Africa have played an important role in world history. By virtue of the genius of their peoples, their strategic location and, more recently, their natural resources, these societies have attracted considerable interest from far and wide. Over centuries, countries in the region have built multifaceted socio-economic and strategic linkages with the rest of the world. Developments in the region have implications within and beyond the region and they naturally are of interest to the international community.

3. The relationship between India and the Arab world is unique with age-old historic and cultural connections. The impact of the Arab and Islamic world on India itself has been profound and far-reaching; giving rise to a composite culture that is rich in its diversity and enduring in its essential unity. The region is home to over 6 million Indians with some of our largest economic and trade linkages. It is also the most important source for our energy needs and, being in our extended neighborhood, vitally important to India.

4. The unrest in West Asia and North Africa, which began more than a year ago, has its roots in the desire of people to play a greater role in shaping their destiny, politically and economically. These aspirations will not be met through violence or armed struggle. Nor can a solution be reached through prescriptions from outside. In fact, given the history of foreign interference, such prescriptions will not only be suspect in the eyes of various segments of society but may also have the potential to exacerbate the problem.

5. Mr President, in dealing with developments in West Asia and North Africa, the international community needs to use all the tools of diplomacy at its disposal and be there to assist the concerned countries in transiting to an inclusive and participatory polity while maintaining social stability and cohesion. Since the exact nature of grievances varies from country to country, there cannot be one set of measures that can be applied to all of them. The solutions of the problems in each country have to take into consideration the society’s particular circumstances and the genius of its people. However, what is certain is that solutions cannot include intervention through military force or arming of the civilian population. Such a course of action will only fuel further bloodshed and instability and create new marginalized groups. This also risks breeding extremism and intolerance whose adverse consequences will be felt in the region and beyond.

6. I would like to recall what the Father of the Indian Nation, Mahatma Gandhi said, and I quote, “Non-violence is the greatest force at the disposal of mankind”. Even during the course of the last year, we have seen that wherever changes have taken place without violence, not only has normalcy returned faster, the changes have been accepted by society as a whole. We are, therefore, of the considered view that the political leaders of the concerned countries in West Asia and North Africa should resolve the problem through inclusive internal political processes that meet the aspirations of their people in an atmosphere free of violence and bloodshed. The principles of national sovereignty, political independence and territorial unity and integrity must be respected. The international community should, including through the auspices of the United Nations, use diplomatic leverages and make available technical assistance in fields such as political, security and justice sector reforms, drafting of new constitution and legal frameworks, electoral institutions and conduct of elections, etc. Actions based on selective or partial interpretations of a mandate of the United Nations must be avoided to ensure that long-term political reconciliation is achieved among various sections of society through peaceful inclusive political processes.

7. Mr President, the international community also needs to be galvanized to expeditiously resolve the long-pending problem of the West Asian and North African region, namely the Arab-Israeli conflict, including Israeli-Palestinian problem. This problem cannot be allowed to be lost in the din and pre-occupations of other developments in the region. Quite apart from the fact that without resolution of this conflict, developments in West Asia and North Africa cannot be adequately addressed, we seriously run the risk of violence if the people of Palestine feel marginalized and sense a complete loss of attention to their plight. Their protests may get radicalized unless concrete action is taken to end the occupation of Arab lands so that all peoples in the region can live in peace in their respective homelands and build cooperative relations. Moreover, the call of the international community for democratic and political reforms sounds hollow to Palestinian and other people in the region living under occupation. In this connection, some important and immediate measures need to be taken, including end to all settlement activities and favourable consideration by this Council of the Palestinian application for membership to this Organization.

8. Mr President, as the world’s largest democracy, India supports measures by the countries in the region to address the grievances of their people in an atmosphere free of violence and bloodshed. India stands ready to share its experiences with the concerned countries in building democratic and plural political institutions and to partner with them in such fields as drafting of new constitutional and legal frameworks, judicial and security sector reforms, creation of impartial and independent electoral institutions and conduct of elections, human resources development, including training and technical assistance, etc.

9. India will continue to support this Council in meeting the challenge of assisting the countries in West Asia and North Africa so that they can implement required political reforms without recourse to violence and violation of fundamental human rights and build an inclusive political system that enables participation of all people. This alone will create long-term peace, security and stability within the region and beyond.

I thank you.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for scheduling today’s debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I thank Ambassador Zahir Tanin, PR of Afghanistan for his statement. I would also like to thank Mr. Ján Kubiš’, UNSG’s Special Representative for his briefing and to the Secretary General for his latest report on Afghanistan.

2. Mr. President, It is now more than a decade since the international community came together to assist Afghanistan with the shared goal of eliminating terrorism and the safe havens and sanctuaries from where it is emanating, right from the source and to set the country firmly on the path to security, recovery, reconstruction and development. The progress made since then cannot be underestimated. However, the journey is far from over and much more needs to be done.

3. The last few months have witnessed important high-level regional and international engagements on Afghanistan. The Istanbul Conference provided a new impetus to regional cooperation. The outcome of the Bonn Conference, as embodied in the Bonn Conference Conclusions, was an expression of the international community’s determination and political commitment to sustained long-term engagement with Afghanistan. The upcoming Conferences in 2012, including the NATO Chicago Summit in May on security, the follow-up Ministerial Conference in Kabul in June on regional cooperation, and the Tokyo Conference in July on development, will be instrumental in working out clearly defined and tangible commitments in the critical areas of security, governance, trade promotion, investment, development and regional cooperation. Afghanistan today confronts major challenges in these areas and will need considerable assistance for a long time, even beyond the transition period, to address these challenges.

4. First and foremost, concerns on the security front continue to remain paramount. The security gains achieved during the last decade are still tenuous and fragile. Terrorist violence shows no signs of receding and civilian casualties attributed to anti-government elements have continued to rise over the last five years, hitting a peak in 2011. Terrorism continues to find sustenance and support from a dangerous osmosis of ideologies, ambitions, training and operations among the syndicate of terrorism in the region with suicide terrorism as its main technique, and targets not limited to Afghanistan. We need concerted action to isolate and root out this syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al Qaida, Taliban, Laskar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups operating mainly from outside Afghanistan’s borders.

5. Afghanistan needs assistance and support to build its capacity to tackle the critical challenges of terrorism, including suicide terrorism, the religious extremism that fuels it, and the drug trafficking that sustains it. We must ensure that Afghanistan's security is ensured through non-interference in its internal affairs. As Afghanistan moves ahead with the transition process, we must take into account the conditions on the ground and the capacity of Afghanistan's security forces to preserve sovereignty, independence and territorial unity and integrity of their nation. We support all efforts for strengthening of the Afghan National Security Forces and this must go hand-in-hand with strengthening of their training and equipping, financing and development of their capabilities beyond the transition period.

6. Mr President, India fully supports an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned inclusive and transparent process of reconciliation as opposed to an internationally-led process, accompanied by an inclusive political process and intra-Afghan dialogue that should include renunciation of violence, cutting of ties to terrorist groups, abiding by the Afghan constitution with its protections for human rights, including the rights of women. It is important that any political settlement does not jeopardize the hard won gains of the last ten years and is acceptable to all constituents of the Afghan nation. It is also important that the ongoing transition must remain Afghan-led and Afghan-owned, must be multifaceted and should ensure the protection and promotion of the human rights of all Afghans and lead to the strengthening of the Afghan state and its institutions.

7. With the gradual drawing down of international forces from their combat role, there are already signs of a transition recession. We need to find ways and means to ensure that Afghanistan does not feel abandoned by a withdrawal of assistance, at least in terms of quantity, if not quality, of international assistance required, post-2014. Afghanistan needs a comprehensive strategy for its domestic/national development that takes into account its Least Developed Country status, its land-locked situation, three decades of conflict and a continued existential threat to its future from terrorism. Such a strategy should include security cooperation, official development assistance, capacity-building and education, trade access, and foreign investment commensurate with its needs. I am happy to state that India is contributing in each of these areas. This is also the approach that we advocate for the Chicago, Kabul and Tokyo Conferences. We also need greater coherence, coordination and further streamlining of the international community's development-related efforts, including aligning of assistance with the Afghan national priorities.

8. In this context, we are appreciative of the comprehensive review of the UNAMA's mandated activities and the UN's support in Afghanistan and the UNDP's intent to channel 80% of its assistance through on-budget support. India appreciates and supports the work of UNAMA.

9. Mr. President, India has age-old historical, cultural, civilizational and economic ties with our neighbour, Afghanistan. During the last decade, our relationship has been renewed and consolidated by our partnership in the rebuilding and reconstruction of Afghanistan. India has pledged up to US $2 billion in development and humanitarian assistance. India signed a Comprehensive Strategic Partnership Agreement with Afghanistan last October, looking at 2014 and beyond. The Agreement creates an institutional framework for our multi-faceted relationship, in the fields of political and security cooperation, trade and economic cooperation, capacity-building and education, and social, cultural, civil society and people-to-people relations. In November, 2011, we eliminated base line customs duties on virtually on imports from Afghanistan, and in December, a consortium of 7 Indian public and private sector companies were awarded the bid for 3 blocks of the Hajigak iron ore reserves.

10. We are happy to note the enhanced focus on regional cooperation. Today our investments in Afghanistan require a framework of regional collaboration for their success. SAARC, of which Afghanistan is a full member, is an important vehicle for regional economic cooperation within the South Asian region. Cooperation linking our region with Central Asia through Afghanistan could be a critical confidence building measure.

11. We firmly believe that Afghanistan’s growth strategy has to be built upon its comparative advantage of abundant natural resources and its strategic geographical location. These would have to be the building blocks of our vision for Afghanistan as a hub linking Middle East and West Asia with Central and South Asia through trade and transit routes, railways and highways, energy pipelines and electricity networks, economic projects and cross-investments. This cooperation should not be only between governments, but have civil society and business as stakeholders. In this context, we are prepared to make long-term investments in Afghanistan as we have done with Hajigak.

12. In conclusion, Mr. President, India believes in a strong, independent, sovereign, stable, united, democratic and prosperous Afghanistan at lasting peace with itself and its neighbours. We look forward to a future for Afghanistan where the Afghan people can live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation. We must continue to work together with renewed vigour and unity of purpose towards strengthening efforts of the Afghan government in seeking solutions that are inclusive and led by the Afghan people themselves. It is with this spirit that India will continue to remain engaged with the international community’s efforts in Afghanistan.

Thank you.
578. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, briefing on the 1737 Committee concerning Iran, at the UN Security Council, on March 21, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I would join other colleagues in thanking Ambassador Nester Osorio for presenting the 90-day report of the 1737 Committee. We commend his stewardship of the Committee and as also the professionalism with which the Committee has been implementing its mandate.

2. Mr President, the Panel of Experts is mandated to assist the Committee in the implementation of the relevant resolution and has to work under the direction of the Committee. We appreciate the work, including outreach activities, that the Panel has been doing and encourage it to continue its work in strict compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council in an independent, objective, transparent and impartial manner. The Panel should also brief the Committee regularly on all its activities.

3. During the reporting period, the Panel has submitted several reports, including a quarterly update on the implementation reports of the Member States submitted during the period from 1 November 2011 to 31 January 2012. We thank the Panel for these reports, which we are carefully studying. In January this year, three members of the Panel visited India. They had a useful exchange of views with the concerned authorities in New Delhi.

4. Mr. President, India has consistently supported the right of all nations to peaceful uses of nuclear energy in accordance with relevant international treaties to which they are a party. Iran should fully cooperate with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to restore the confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear programme. In this connection, we welcome the recent exchanges between Iran and the IAEA. We hope that the outstanding technical issues concerning the Iranian nuclear programme will be resolved peacefully through Iran’s cooperation with the IAEA. We also welcome the decision to resume talks between the P5 +1 and Iran. These talks should serve as an important confidence building measure and help avoid escalation of the situation.

5. Mr. President, India supports the full implementation of relevant resolutions of the Security Council concerning the Iranian nuclear issue. While implementing these resolutions, it is necessary that all efforts should be made so that legitimate trade and economic activities do not suffer.

6. In conclusion, Mr. President, we support the Chair's intention to hold an open briefing along with the Coordinator of the Panel of Experts in April 2012 for interested member-states on implementation procedures. This briefing will also serve as a useful opportunity for the members of the Committee and the Panel to get views of the wider UN membership.

I thank you.
Thank you, Madam President.

Madam President, India has consistently supported all efforts to resolve the Syrian crisis through an inclusive Syrian-led political process that meets the legitimate aspirations of all sections of Syrian society. To this end, we have given our full support for the mission of Joint Special Envoy Mr Kofi Annan. Earlier this morning, our Minister of External Affairs spoke to Mr Annan and underscored India’s support for his mission.

2. Madam President, it is a matter of satisfaction that Mr Annan’s efforts over the last six weeks have resulted in cessation of violence. We welcome this development and also the commitment of the Government of Syria to the six-point plan proposed by Mr Annan. We expect that the Syrian opposition too will adhere to the relevant parts of this plan, renounce violence and cooperate fully with Mr Annan.

3. We have voted in favour of the resolution today so that an advance team of the UN supervision mission may be deployed expeditiously to monitor the cessation of violence. We hope that all parties, including the opposition, will implement their commitment and cooperate with the mission. It is also necessary that the mission carries out its work impartially, fairly and independently with due respect for Syria’s sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

4. Madam President, for the success of the Annan plan and observer mission, it is necessary that it is accompanied by an inclusive Syrian-led political process. The cessation of violence should create a conducive environment for such a process to start as early as possible. We have noted the commitment of the Government of Syria to such a process. We expect that the opposition will also engage seriously in this process so that the crisis is resolved without any further bloodshed, and that peace, stability and security is re-established and the people of Syria are able to focus their energies on socio-economic development.

5. Madam President, for the success of the Annan mission, it is also necessary that all countries in Syria’s neighbourhood and beyond facilitate, and extend their support for, a political resolution of the Syrian crisis under the auspices of the Joint Special Envoy. India, for its part, will continue to extend full support for the impartial implementation of Mr Annan’s six-point plan.

Thank you.
Thank you, Madam President.

India welcomes the initiative taken by the U.S. to convene a meeting of the UN Security Council on nuclear security. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his briefing.

India fully shares international concerns on the serious threat posed by nuclear terrorism and clandestine proliferation to international security. In recent years, there has been heightened awareness of the threat of terrorists and traffickers seeking access to nuclear material and technologies for malicious purposes. Addressing this threat requires sustained and effective international cooperation to supplement responsible national actions. India’s resolution at the General Assembly on measures to deny terrorists access to weapons of mass destruction adopted by consensus since 2002 and the recently extended work of the Council’s 1540 Committee are important in this regard. So are international legal instruments on nuclear security - the Convention on Physical Protection of Nuclear Material and its 2005 amendment, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism. We support the Universalization of these instruments and the central role of the IAEA in strengthening the international global nuclear security architecture.

We welcome the successful outcome of the Nuclear Security Summit held in Seoul 26-27 March 2012, which sets new benchmarks for nuclear security and new frameworks for international cooperation. India’s Prime Minister participated in the Seoul Nuclear Security Summit. India has contributed to the Nuclear Security Summit process including by hosting a Sherpa Meeting in New Delhi this year. While nuclear security is primarily a national responsibility there are benefits by supplementing responsible national actions through sustained and effective international cooperation.

We have made progress in the establishment of the Global Centre for Nuclear Energy Partnership. The physical infrastructure for the Centre is being set up and cooperation agreements have been signed with several countries and the IAEA. ‘Off-campus’ courses are already underway. India will contribute 1 million US dollars to the IAEA’s Nuclear Security Fund for the years 2012-13 and will participate in the Agency’s 2013 International Coordinating conference of various nuclear security activities, including the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism of which we are a member. India intends to host a 1540 workshop during this year to strengthen its implementation.

We believe that the best guarantee for nuclear security is a world free of nuclear weapons. The Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan tabled nearly twenty five years ago remains the most comprehensive and elaborate proposal to achieve the objective of global nuclear disarmament in a time-bound framework. Attaining the goal of a nuclear weapon-free world will require commitments embedded in an agreed multilateral framework involving all states possessing nuclear weapons. This should include measures to reduce nuclear dangers by reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in security doctrines and by increasing universal restraints on the first use of nuclear weapons. Working towards the common goal of a world free of nuclear weapons would require a steadfast commitment to multilateralism, which has proven its worth in the case of conventions banning two other categories of weapons of mass destruction. The UN disarmament machinery, especially the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, should play its role. We support the early commencement of negotiations in the Conference of Disarmament in Geneva on a Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty, envisaged since 1993 as a significant contribution to non-proliferation in all its aspects. States should fully and effectively implement the obligations arising from the agreements or treaties to which are parties. The role of the Security Council should be in accordance with the Charter and applicable provisions of international agreements which provide for such a role.

India has never been a source of proliferation of sensitive technologies and we are determined to further strengthen our export control systems to keep them on par with the highest international standards. We have already adhered to the guidelines of the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG) and the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR). As a country with the ability and willingness to promote global non-proliferation objectives, we believe that the next logical step is India’s membership of the four export control regimes.

All states have the right to develop and utilize nuclear energy for peaceful purposes in accordance with the international obligations they have undertaken. Given India’s growing energy demands, we see nuclear energy as an important component of our energy mix. We are taking forward our three stage nuclear programme based on a closed fuel cycle, with new safety features and proliferation-resistant technologies. Our goal is nuclear energy generation of 62,000 MW by 2032. We are determined that our expanding nuclear power programme will follow the highest standards of nuclear safety and security.

Madam President, we hope that this meeting of the Security Council would help draw attention to the challenges posed by nuclear terrorism and reinforce national and international commitments to strengthen nuclear security and contribute to the enhancement of the global nuclear security architecture. We are thus happy to join the consensus on the PRST to be issued today.
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative of India at the UN Security Council open debate on the Middle East, on 23 April 2012.

Thank you, Madame President.

I would like to begin by thanking Under Secretary General Lynn Pascoe for his comprehensive briefing on developments in the Middle East, particularly on the Palestinian question, during the last one month. I also would like to thank the Permanent Representative of Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine for their useful statements.

Madame President,

2. The Middle East peace process is undoubtedly passing through one of the most difficult times since the signing of the Oslo accord. The continuing stalemate in the peace process is undermining the gains made so far. In fact, dramatic developments in West Asia and North Africa since the beginning of 2011 appear to have pushed the Palestinian issue on the back burner. Ironically, this is happening at a time when the international community is supporting the democratic aspirations of other people in the region.

3. If the present stalemate is allowed to continue and Palestinian aspirations denied, we run the risk of a sharp deterioration in the situation. The lack of trust between parties, primarily due to intensification of Israeli settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territories, needs to be seriously and urgently addressed. In this regard, we call for a renewed commitment of Israel and the Palestinian Authority to the accepted principles for settlement of the Palestinian issue in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, the Oslo Accords, the Arab Peace Plan and the Quartet Principles. The parties should take urgent steps to recommence negotiation for realising the aspiration of the Palestinian people to have a state of their own, living side by side and at peace with Israel. In this regard, the complete cessation of settlement activities is of utmost importance. At the same time, all violence against civilians, irrespective of their source and cause, must stop. The international community, particularly the Quartet, must redouble its efforts to bring the parties to the negotiating table. We hope that the meeting that took place between the Palestinian and the Israeli negotiators on 17 April will facilitate their efforts towards commencement of direct talks.

Madame President,

4. As I have said, if there is one issue that has become the major hindrance to the peace process, it is Israel’s illegal settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territories. Several reports, including those of OCHA, have clearly shown that the intensification of these activities is not compatible with the two-state solution. In fact, it is destroying the very possibility of the two-state solution. Settlement activities have also exacerbated the humanitarian problems of the Palestinian people in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. They have led to violence and aggravation of tension between the Israeli settlers and the Palestinian population. We, therefore, reiterate our call for Israel to stop all settlement activities.

5. Indiscriminate violence not only puts the lives of civilians in real danger, but also leads to a vicious cycle of violence. We condemn all these attacks that cause harm to the civilian population and damage civilian infrastructure, and call for their full cessation.

6. The humanitarian situation in Gaza due to the continuing blockade and restrictions on exports is constantly aggravating the living conditions of the civilian population. As has been brought out in several reports of the UN agencies, poverty and aid dependency have increased. Demands for emergency services like health, water, sanitation, education and temporary shelter have overstretched UNRWA’s resources. While we welcome some steps in easing restrictions and blockade, much more is required to be done urgently.

7. There is also a need to enhance the level of humanitarian assistance for civilians in Gaza and West Bank. This should be done through the established channels. At the same time, the capacity of these channels should be increased. On its part, India is continuing its development cooperation with Palestine through untied direct budgetary support of US$ 10 million for last two years, training of personnel in various areas, annual contributions of US $ 1 million to UNRWA and projects under the IBSA fund.

Madam President,

8. Formation of a unity government and implementation of the reconciliation agreement between the Palestinian factions signed last May are important for strengthening the administrative and security achievements made by the Palestinian Authority, despite severe financial crisis. It will not only bring all Palestinian factions together but also ensure establishment of one authority for the whole of the Palestinian territories. An early action on this front will help reaching a political common ground essential for future democratic processes in Palestine.

Madame President,

9. The Palestinian question remains at the core of Arab-Israeli conflict. Resolution of this issue should be a priority for the international community. India has been steadfast in its support for the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders side by side and at peace with Israel, as per the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet Roadmap. For achievement of this dream, India will continue to support all efforts, including the Quartet's.

10. At the same time, it is also important not to lose sight of other Arab lands under the Israeli occupation for a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israeli problems.

I thank you.
Thank you, Madam President.

At the outset, let me join others in thanking you for organizing this open debate on threats to international peace and security posed by illicit cross-border trafficking and movement. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his briefing.

2. Madam President, trafficking by non-state actors in nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, their means of delivery and related materials and the movement of terrorists and their funds challenge international peace and security. Moreover, there are situations where international peace and security is exacerbated by illicit cross-border trafficking in arms and drug trafficking. In such cases the Security Council pronouncements have invariably listed these exacerbations and sought to control them.

3. At the same time there are a number of UN bodies and agencies which have their identified and Charter-mandated areas of specialization in connection with illicit cross-border trafficking and movement. It is important that this Council respects the mandates of other organs of the United Nations and its specialized bodies.

4. Of late, there has been a concerted push to bring several global issues onto the Council's agenda under the pretext of their affecting international peace and security. This needs to be avoided. The Charter provides for clear division of responsibility between the General Assembly, the Security Council, ECOSOC and specialized bodies and we must respect this separation of functions in letter and spirit.

5. General norm-setting must necessarily belong to relevant organs and agencies of the United Nations. The Security Council should step in only where there is threat to international peace and security and in the context of specific situations as in conflict and post-conflict situations, and sanctions regimes established pursuant to resolutions 1540, 1373 and 1267/1989 under Chapter VII of the Charter.

6. The UN has played a seminal role in capacity building of member States. States do need assistance to fulfill their international commitments and strengthen their internal institutions, including on law and order and securing their borders. Such an exercise must always be demand driven and Member States led. We commend the efforts and commitment of the relevant UN agencies in developing capacities of countries in conflict and post conflict situations. Commitment to capacity building of States in different sectors requires greater financial and technological support, and we should be willing to provide the same to them.

7. However, the connected issue is how the relevant UN agencies can help interested Member States secure their borders against illicit cross-border trafficking and movement. The first fundamental principle in this regard is respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity of the State seeking assistance; second, the donors and relevant UN agencies must respect the prerogative of the concerned member-state to secure its own borders; and third, assistance in capacity-building must be provided only upon request and as mutually agreed.

8. Madam President, the challenges we are discussing today are global in nature. Their inter-linkages make them even more complex. They call for strong collaborative action involving all member States, in a manner that is legitimate and appropriate.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by congratulating you and the delegation of Azerbaijan on assuming the Presidency of the Security Council for the month of May. I will like to assure you of my delegation’s full cooperation and support. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of the United States and her delegation for their able stewardship of the Council during April.

2. Mr President, recent developments between Sudan and South Sudan, including cross-border military operations and damage to economic infrastructures, particularly to oil facilities, have caused us serious concern. These developments have the potential to threaten peace and stability and lead the two countries towards war. This will seriously set back the socio-economic and political developments that the countries require to overcome the effects of decades-long civil war. There is, therefore, an urgent need to avoid war and resolve the outstanding CPA issues peacefully through political dialogue and negotiations.

3. The African Union’s High-level Implementation Panel (AUHIP) led by President Thabo Mbeki has been facilitating dialogue between Sudan and South Sudan for a few years now. In its briefings to the Security Council, the Panel has outlined realistic frameworks that it has developed for resolution of various outstanding CPA issues. Serious negotiations based on those frameworks can help the two countries not only resolve the issues but also build an enduring relationship based on mutual cooperation and respect for their independence, unity and territorial integrity.

4. Mr President, India has been consistently supporting the AUHIP in its efforts to facilitate negotiations between Sudan and South Sudan and the resolution of all outstanding issues so that they develop into two economically viable and politically stable states at peace with each other. Our vote in favour of resolution 2046 today is an expression of our support for the efforts of the AUHIP and in line with the request in the African Union Communiqué of 24 April 2012.

5. We hope that the adoption of this resolution will strengthen the efforts of the AUHIP to facilitate a negotiated settlement of all outstanding issues. We urge the two countries to end all hostilities between their military forces as well as by various armed groups operating in the region and urgently resume negotiations under the auspices of the AUHIP.

I thank you.
Allow me, at the outset, Mr. President, to extend you a very warm welcome to the Security Council. Your presence in the Council is indeed a defining moment, as Azerbaijan assumes the Presidency of the Security Council for the first time in its history. I would also like to express our deep appreciation to you, Mr. President, and to your delegation for organizing today's meeting on this important subject of threats to peace and security caused by terrorist acts and for chairing this meeting.

I would also like to acknowledge the participation of ministers and high officials of Germany, Togo, Colombia, Morocco and Russian Federation in today's meeting. Their participation and valuable statements underscore the importance of the subject for the international community. Our thanks are also due to the Secretary General for his comprehensive and insightful briefing.

Mr President, terrorism today constitutes the most serious challenge to international peace and security. Over the years, the visible landscape of international terrorism has changed vastly. In our globalized world, terrorists are also globalized in their reach and activities and are able to wage an asymmetric warfare against the international community. Terrorists have established linkages with transnational organized crime, and their veritable nexus with drug, human and arms trafficking, are now well established. Terrorist financing, illicit money laundering, drug trafficking and illicit arms trade remain intertwined in a complex web of toxic relationships.

There is also a growing risk of weapons of mass destruction of different kinds falling into the hands of terrorists, which will only exacerbate the existing and grave security challenge to the international community.

In today's internet-based age, there is also increasing misuse of cyberspace and related technologies by terrorists and their supporters for the purposes of recruitment, training, financing, planning, preparation and incitement of their activities.

An effective counter-terrorism strategy, therefore, requires greater international and regional cooperation than the international community has so far been able to achieve. International cooperation and concerted action against terrorists and their sponsors, including the complete dismantling of terrorist safe havens, sanctuaries, training grounds and financial and ideological support structures, are the critical imperatives to defeat this scourge.

Mr President, my own country, India, has faced the scourge of terrorism for several decades. And, indeed, our entire region, South Asia, has been wracked by the activities of the biggest terrorist actors in the world, be they Al Qaida, Lashkar-e-Taiba, Jamat-ud Daawa, elements of Taliban and others. Terrorism, extremism and radicalization continue to pose a serious challenge to peace, progress and prosperity in the region.

8. India condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, irrespective of the motivation that may be invoked to justify them. We have been in the forefront of global counter-terrorism efforts. India is part of all major global initiatives against international terrorism, including the FATF.

9. We fully support all efforts, which strengthen international and regional cooperation, and most importantly, help ensure the effective implementation of relevant Security Council resolutions, including 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) and a comprehensive and integrated implementation of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

10. We also endorse the two consensus benchmarks that have been reflected in the Outcome Document adopted on 28 September 2011 by the Special Meeting of the Counter-Terrorism Committee of the Security Council, which is being chaired by India since January 2011. The Outcome Document is a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of states in their counter-terrorism efforts. It raises the benchmark in the fight against terrorism to a higher level and urges all Member-States to ensure ‘zero tolerance’ towards terrorism and take urgent action to prevent and combat terrorism in all its forms and manifestations through the full and effective implementation of resolution 1373 and other relevant international instruments. We urge all UN member-states to strive to implement this approach in their counter-terrorism efforts.

11. Mr President, we believe that terrorism cannot be countered by law enforcement means alone. Prevention is also critical, and effective responses will necessarily include other aspects of legal and social policy. Among these, development, education, social integration, tolerance, rule of law and respect for human rights are among the key components of such responses. The Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy is a wholesome document that incorporates various aspects in its four pillars and provides guidance to member States in implementing global strategy in a balanced and integrated manner.

12. Mr. President, despite various daunting challenges in the fight against terrorism, significant progress has been made over the past decade, by strengthening cooperation, enhancing solidarity and facilitating dialogue among Member States in their efforts to counter the terrorist threat.

13. The UN has played a seminal role in capacity building of member States. States do need assistance to fulfill their obligations under UN anti-terrorism conventions to which they are a party, as well as Security Council counter-terrorism and other relevant resolutions. We commend the efforts and commitment of the relevant UN agencies, including Security Council’s subsidiary bodies, in developing capacities of countries in this regard.

14. While the Security Council has remained steadfast in its fight against international terrorism, it must enhance further the level of international cooperation to counter this threat decisively. We encourage the subsidiary bodies of the Council with counter-terrorism mandates to continue to enhance their ongoing dialogue with Member States, donors and beneficiaries on the facilitation of technical assistance for capacity-building, at the national, sub-regional and regional levels.

15. We also welcome the recent initiative of the Secretary General for Member-States to consider creation of a United Nations Counter-Terrorism Coordinator and express our willingness to fully engage in all deliberations aimed at further improving cross-institutional coherence and effectiveness of UN counter-terrorism efforts.

16. Mr President, India has long held the belief that the UN also needs to strengthen its counter-terrorism normative framework through the adoption of a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. I can only echo the call of the Secretary General that the time has come for the CCIT to be adopted.

I thank you.
585. Statement by Mr. Vinay Kumar, Minister, Permanent Mission of India to the United Nations at the Security Council briefing on UNMIK on May 14, 2012

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me join others in thanking SRSG Farid Zarif for his comprehensive briefing on the situation in Kosovo and the activities of UNMIK. I also want to thank H.E. Mr. Vuk Jeremic, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Serbia, for his statement outlining his country’s perspective on the situation in Kosovo. We have also carefully listened to the statement of Mr. Enver Hoxjaj.

2. Mr. President, the Secretary General’s report on UNMIK for the quarter ending 15 April 2012 has brought out in detail the ground situation in Kosovo. We would like to congratulate Serbia for getting the EU Candidate-Country status in early March this year. We also note that the EU has launched a feasibility study for a Stabilization and Association Agreement with Kosovo in late March. These mark the most positive political developments during the reporting period, flowing from concrete progress in the EU-facilitated dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina.

3. We are happy to note that in February in an EU-facilitated dialogue, the parties reached an agreement on Kosovo’s regional representation and cooperation. We hope that differences in the use of the footnote concerning Kosovo’s status and their mutually exclusive interpretations will be resolved soon by mutual agreement and understanding. Conclusion by the parties of a technical protocol, providing an operational dimension to the agreement on integrated management of crossing points, is also a welcome development.

4. Mr. President, we are seriously concerned by the overall security situation in Kosovo that was marked by political tension as well as by criminal incidents, including the attack on a diplomatic Embassy. Compared to the same period last year, there was also an increase in crimes affecting minority communities. These crimes including damage to Serbian Orthodox churches and household properties have serious implications for inter-communal relations in Kosovo. In this connection, we suggest that the concerns of the Serbian Orthodox Church about transfer of security responsibilities at Devic should be paid heed to.

5. We urge UNMIK to continue to prioritize adequate protection of Serbian religious and cultural heritage in Kosovo, particularly in view of the significant resistance that has been noted in the Kosovo Albanian population against legislative measures and their implementation aiming at the protection of Serbian cultural and religious sites and the gap between the commitments made by the Kosovo authorities in this area and their implementation.
6. Mr. President, with respect to the rule of law, UNMIK should continue to provide document certification services of civil nature and facilitate the interaction of the Kosovo authorities with INTERPOL and other organisations. UNMIK should also remain engaged in the missing person issue and other measures for confidence building between the communities. We also welcome the adoption of a law by the Albanian Parliament to facilitate cooperation with the EULEX Special Investigative Task Force, led by John Clint Williamson, allowing the Task Force to fully implement its mandate.

7. In conclusion, we encourage UNMIK to continue to implement its mandate in status neutral manner in strict accordance with resolution 1244 and other relevant decisions of the Security Council. This will help us realize the hope of the Secretary General that the trends of tension and confrontation which have become discernible in the last year will gradually subside and the positive trends of dialogue will strengthen. To that end, leaders on both sides should exercise their leadership in a manner in which tension may be reduced and which can promote a climate conducive to dialogue and mutual understanding.

I thank you.
586. Statement by Mr. Vinay Kumar, Minister, Permanent Mission of India to the United Nations at the UN Security Council debate on the situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina on May 15, 2012.

Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to welcome High Representative Valentin Inzko to the Council and thank him for his comprehensive briefing and the report on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representatives of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia for their statements.

2. Mr President, it is a matter of satisfaction that during the period of the report, there have been positive political developments in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Parties reached a broad agreement that facilitated the formation of the Council of Ministers after nearly 15 months of stalemate following the October 2010 elections. The Presidency of the Bosnia and Herzegovina has been meeting regularly and taken a number of foreign policy decisions that should promote the country’s eventual Euro-Atlantic integration.

3. It is also commendable that progress has been registered on the global fiscal framework and two key EU-related laws on State Aid and Census were adopted. The agreement on unblocking of the state-level electricity transmission company is also a welcome development.

4. The joint declaration of the Foreign Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Montenegro and Serbia on cooperation to protect and promote the rights of refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons should serve as an important confidence-building measure. Such cooperation will not only promote regional cooperation but also facilitate their common aspirations for Euro-Atlantic integration.

5. Mr President, we have noted that none of the outstanding items among the five objectives and two conditions necessary for the closure of the Office of the High Representative has been fulfilled so far. We are, however, glad that the 9 March agreement on defence and state property has the potential for an acceptable and sustainable resolution of the issue of apportionment of property which will meet two of the five objectives and two conditions. In addition, progress in the ongoing discussion on the future of Supervision of Brcko can help meet another of the five objectives.

6. We hope that the Bosnian parties will continue their engagement in the spirit of compromise and maturity to address fiscal problems so that the currently deteriorating economic prospects are reversed and the country returns to the path of high growth of pre-recession years.
7. Through their continued presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the EU and NATO military missions have carried out an important role in reassuring its citizens of safety and security, even when the political situation is sometimes tense. We commend the efforts.

8. Mr President, as I have said in our previous meetings, Bosnia-Herzegovina is a novel experiment in building a new nation from the rubble of civil war that the peoples of former Yugoslavia had to endure in the 1990s. It is never easy to build a multi-ethnic, multi-lingual, multi-cultural and multi-religious country. The problems that have been mentioned in the report and briefing of the High Representative are bound to be encountered on the path of building a nation inhabited by people of different faiths, ethnicities and languages. Our own experience over the last six decades has convinced us that though the path of building such a nation is long and arduous, the fruits are well worth the efforts.

9. Resolution of the problems facing the Bosnian peoples, therefore, calls for patience, determination and mutual accommodation. Unilateral actions, mutual suspicion, rhetorical statements and violation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace will only vitiate the political and social atmosphere and delay the achievement of their goals. We would, therefore, urge the leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina as well as the international community to persevere in spite of the problems that are encountered.

10. In conclusion, Mr President, I would like to highly commend the work being done by High Representative Inzko in assisting the people and leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina in their nation-building endeavours. We fully support his efforts.

I thank you.

*****
Thank you very much, Mr. President.

Let me begin by congratulating you, Mr. President, and the delegation of the People’s Republic of China on assuming the presidency of the Security Council for the month of June. We wish you success and assure you of my delegation’s full support and cooperation. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Azerbaijan and his delegation for their successful stewardship of the Council during the month of May.

2. I also want to thank the Prosecutor, Mr. Luis Moreno Ocampo, for his briefing today. We have taken note of his 15th report on the situation in the Sudan, submitted pursuant to paragraph 8 of Resolution 1593 of 31 March 2005.

3. Mr. President, India is not a signatory to the Rome Statute and not a member of the International Criminal Court (ICC), for reasons that are well known. I need not reiterate those.

4. India strongly condemns all acts of violence committed against civilians. We believe that the right to life is one of the fundamental rights, and the foundation of any social order. It is the obligation of all States to take appropriate measures to protect the life of their citizens, while maintaining social order. The concerned States must also bring to justice those responsible for violations of this right.

5. The continuing conflict in Darfur is one of serious concern. We support all efforts to bring this conflict to an end. We also support the activities of UNAMID aimed at protecting civilians and, in cooperation with the African Union’s High-level Implementation Panel led by President Thabo Mbeki, to restore an enduring environment of peace and stability in Darfur. An inclusive political process to address the legitimate aspirations of all sections of the Darfuri population will go a long way in resolving this conflict.

6. Mr. President, all parties have to accept that there is no military solution to the conflict in Darfur. We call upon all parties to join the political process without preconditions and without any further delay. In this connection, it is necessary that this Council seriously consider measures against those who have so far refused to join the peace process. It is also important that the proceedings in the ICC should be undertaken in a manner consistent with its obligations and should assist the efforts aimed at ending the conflict in Darfur. Any suggestion that has the effect of creating new obligations for States and regional organizations which are not parties to the Rome Statute will not be legally sound. Nor will such suggestions serve the purpose of peace in Darfur. As such, we cannot support suggestions.
7. In conclusion, Mr. President, India will continue to support all diplomatic efforts for an early establishment of peace and security in Darfur that will afford all sections of the Darfuri population opportunities for socio-economic development and peaceful co-existence through an inclusive political process.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank Ambassador Nester Osorio for presenting the 90-day report of the 1737 Committee. We commend his stewardship of the Committee, as also the professionalism with which the Committee has been implementing its mandate.

2. Mr President, I would like to welcome the submission of the final report by the Panel of Experts, which was issued as an official document of the Security Council last week. We also welcome the extension last week of the mandate of the Panel till 9 July 2013.

3. We expect that the Panel will continue to work under the direction of the 1737 Committee and assist the Committee in the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Security Council. We appreciate the work, including outreach activities, that the Panel has been doing and encourage it to continue its work in strict compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council in an independent, objective, transparent and impartial manner. The Panel should also continue the practice of briefing the Committee regularly on all its activities.

4. We also support the Chair's intention to hold an open briefing along with the Coordinator of the Panel of Experts in July 2012 for interested member-states on their mandates and to answer questions that member-states may have. We think that the briefing will also provide an opportunity for the Committee and the Panel to get views of the wider UN membership.

5. Mr. President, India has consistently supported the right of all nations to peaceful uses of nuclear energy in accordance with relevant international treaties to which they are a party. Iran should fully cooperate with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to restore the confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear programme. In this connection, we welcome the recent exchanges between Iran and the IAEA, including the visit of the Director General of the Agency to Tehran. We hope that the outstanding technical issues concerning the Iranian nuclear programme will be resolved peacefully through Iran's cooperation with the IAEA.

6. We also welcome the talks between the P5 + 1 and Iran held in Istanbul and Baghdad during the last two months. We think that these talks should continue and hope that the parties will be able to make progress in the next round scheduled for next week in Moscow.
7. Mr. President, India supports the full implementation of relevant resolutions of the Security Council concerning the Iranian nuclear issue. While implementing these resolutions, it is necessary that all efforts should be made so that legitimate trade and economic activities do not suffer. 8. Before I conclude, Mr President, I would like to assure Ambassador Osorio of my delegation’s continued cooperation to facilitate the work of the 1737 Committee.

I thank you.
589. Statement by Mr. Vinay Kumar, Charge d’Affaires, at the UN Security Council briefing on UN Peacekeeping Operations, on June 20, 2012.

Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to thank USG Herve Ladsous and the Force Commanders of MONUSCO, UNIFIL, UNMISS and MINUSTAH for their statements. We have carefully noted their views, and think that their perspectives, based on experience gained on the ground while implementing this Council’s resolutions, are important and will help the Council in its work.

2. Mr President, as the nature of threats to international peace and security has changed over decades, so have the challenges facing peacekeeping missions. Three briefers today head missions, which are not deployed to keep peace between States, but within States. They have to keep peace not between two conventional armies, but deal with threats posed by armed groups, where it is not easy to distinguish a combatant from a civilian. They have to neutralize threat not to an easily identifiable boundary, but to state institutions and civilians. Moreover, they are called upon not only to keep peace but also help in building national institutions and carry out functions which normally belong to national governments. And for their effective operations, they need to gain the confidence not only of the host governments but also of communities in which they are deployed.

3. Under these circumstances, the rules of engagement and concepts of operations have to be adjusted to suit the particular circumstances prevailing in the host countries. As they say, no one size will fit all situations. Standardization should aim at optimal performance, not to achieve the sameness of equipment. And the need to maintain objectivity, neutrality, impartiality and fairness assumes even greater importance.

4. In this connection, Mr President, it is important to keep in mind that several UN peacekeeping mandates have included tasks that raise questions on the fundamental tenet of consent. These place peacekeepers in difficult legal circumstances, as the Force Commander of UNMISS mentioned in the context of his area of operation, and thereby hamper effectiveness. The principle of national ownership needs inform all that we undertake through the peacekeeping and peacebuilding activities of the United Nations.

5. Mr President, the peacekeeping missions today are tasked with mandates that have been compared with Christmas tree. Peacekeepers are asked to achieve what many of us as States have struggled for decades, if not centuries, to implement, even while resource gap continues to be the singular reality that constraints the reach and ambit of peacekeeping operations. We therefore have to keep in mind that provision of resources, in man and in material, commensurate with the mandates is necessary not only for the operational effectiveness of peacekeeping missions but will also have a direct bearing on the credibility of this Council's mandates. The UNMISS Force Commander gave us a concrete example of resource constraints during the Jonglei crisis in December 2011.

6. Peacekeeping missions today are a part of the overall composite efforts wherein the international community has to pool resources of its various institutions and organizations to mount these operations. Statements by the Force Commanders of MONUSCO, UNMISS and MINUSTAH underscore the vastness of their mandates. The success of such missions strength will depend not only on peacekeepers' performance but on the collaborative nature of the venture. Assessments of peacekeepers' performances cannot, therefore, be isolated from the efficacy of overall peace process. Leadership at the headquarters and in the field and coherence of objectives among various stakeholders, and not only the posture and operations of peacekeepers, will determine overall performance and achievement of the tasks mandated to the peacekeeping missions.

7. In this connection, we have noted the idea of composite force formations. Though this appears to be a logical option, the need for contingents functioning as coherent units must also be borne in mind. Our policies in this regard must evolve gradually with reality checks at each step.

8. Mr. President, preserving and supervising peace agreements, restoring basic governance, and seeding the skeletons of institutional framework are peacekeeping's chief accomplishments. The larger peace process must contribute and capitalize upon the stabilization achieved by the military components. Tasks ranging from law and order and the rule of law to national institution building cannot be entrusted to the military components alone. Strategies must be devised with sufficient details, resources, and implementation plans to address each phase of peace process.

9. Mr President, UN peacekeeping is truly a unique enterprise that involves global burden sharing. The partnership between the UN Secretariat, troop and police contributing countries, and the Security Council underpins this exercise. It derives sustenance from our respective abilities to contribute positively to this venture. It requires a great deal of willingness to account and accommodate views and concerns of each.

10. Protection of civilians to a life of dignity, security, and opportunity is indeed a task that deserves much more than what the international community has committed thus far. Leaving it to the hands of peacekeeper alone remains a half measure at best. Our efforts in this regard must begin from where we faltered rather than to attempt universal thematic constructs.
11. Mr President, as the largest contributor of peacekeepers in the UN’s history, we are conscious that much has changed since the first peacekeeping missions were launched more than five decades ago. The challenge before us is to build upon the legacy of peacekeeping and to ensure its relevance to current realities. We must remind ourselves that it is a small cost in front of the noble goals we have set ourselves to achieve. Our capacity to effectively implement the mandates of UN missions will depend on provision of adequate resources, rational mandate generation and sourcing of expertise from countries having experience most relevant for the conditions in which peacekeepers are deployed. This we must keep in mind and act accordingly.

12. Before I conclude, Mr President, I would like to pay homage to those peacekeepers, including from my country, who laid down their lives while serving in UN Missions.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organizing today’s debate on the Protection of Civilians in Armed Conflict. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his report on the subject and for his incisive statement. Our thanks are also due to the USG for OCHA, the ASG for Human Rights and the Director of the ICRC for their statements.

2. Mr President, it has been India’s consistent view that the protection of its population is the foremost responsibility of every State. The Right to Life is the foundation of any social order and is one of the fundamental rights enshrined in the constitutions of a vast number of UN member-states, including my own, from which no derogation is permissible even in times of emergency.

3. India’s commitment to the right to life is demonstrated at international level as well. More than five decades ago, much before this term came into common usage in this Council, Indian soldiers defended the civilians of Congo as part of the UN mission. Since then, our men and women in uniform have been at the forefront of turning this Council’s word into deed, including through the services of the UN’s first female formed police unit. We remain at the cutting edge of many UN operations where civilians are under threat. India, thus, brings to this table, Mr President, a quantum of experience in actually protecting civilians in peacekeeping missions that is unique in its relevance and in its variety and depth.

4. Mr President, the Security Council has been considering the protection of civilians as a thematic subject since 1999 and has adopted a number of resolutions. This issue has also been incorporated in the Council’s resolutions on women, children, the protection of humanitarian workers, conflict prevention and sexual exploitation. A number of country-specific resolutions also have provisions aimed at the protection of civilians. These resolutions, taken together, have raised awareness and strengthened the international legal framework for protecting civilians in armed conflict. Unfortunately, notwithstanding the development of international humanitarian law and efforts of the international community, the civilians continue to suffer disproportionately during armed conflicts.

5. It is, therefore, necessary to take stock of what we have achieved and where we have failed and why. The latest report of the Secretary General has identified four challenges - enhancing compliance by non-state armed groups; enhancing protection by UN Peacekeeping and other relevant Missions; improving humanitarian access; and enhancing accountability for violations.
6. Mr President, a study undertaken by OCHA and the DPKO makes it clear that the major share of the blame for failures lies with the Security Council itself which has been unable, over more than a decade, to develop a clear understanding of the nature and extent of the problem; has been unable to give clear directions about what it wants and how the DPKO should operate; and has not given credence to the voice of countries whose troops are actually deployed on the ground. As the report succinctly states ‘the confusion over the Council’s intent is evident in the lack of policy, guidance, planning and preparedness’.

7. Mr. President, it is important for the Council to act urgently to address this situation. As was made clear by the Force Commanders of UN missions in their briefings to the Council last week, the primary gap facing the peacekeepers for protecting civilians is the lack of adequate resources. Without adequate number of well-trained troops, equipped with adequate equipment, assets and enablers, the Council cannot hope to realize its aspirations for the protection of civilians in armed conflict. In this context, my delegation thinks that the Council’s responsibility does not end with the generation of mandates. The Council should be held accountable if unachievable mandates are generated for political expediency or if adequate resources are not made available.

8. At the normative levels, Mr President, there are several other issues that the Council needs to consider in the context of the role it has assumed for the protection of civilians in armed conflict.

9. First, the protection of civilians when applied as a basis for Security Council action must respect the fundamental aspects of the UN Charter, including sovereignty and integrity of Member-States. Any decision to intervene that is associated with political motives distracts from the noble principles and needs to be avoided. Also, the response of the Council and international community must be proportional to the threat involved.

10. Second, the principle of protection of civilians must be applied in a uniform manner to all parties to a conflict. Failure of the Council to enforce accountability of armed groups has served to exacerbate the situation in several instances and must be addressed.

11. Third, in the implementation of the Council’s mandate for protecting civilians, there is the need to ensure the responsibility while protecting. The recent actions of some organizations and member-states have brought to the fore a considerable sense of unease about the manner in which the humanitarian imperative of protecting civilians has been interpreted for actual action on the ground. Monitoring of the manner in which the Council’s mandates are implemented has, therefore, assumed great significance and importance.

12. Fourth, to enable States to fulfill their responsibility to protect their populations, national capacities need to be strengthened, where needed, without political or extraneous motives. This calls for enhancing support for socio-economic development and promoting inclusive political institutions. This also calls for patient work rather than media-driven deliberations and actions.

13. Fifth, the Council must resist the temptation to resort to its Chapter VII powers instead of promoting pacific settlement of disputes under Chapter VI. In this connection, the Council must also respect the international legal institutions, and not make use of them for political purposes like regime change.

14. In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to stress that Council’s responsibility for protecting civilians does not end with a military or police response. Civilians require humanitarian wherewithal for survival. This requires a more integrated and holistic view. In this process, multiple stakeholders should be involved, not just the military. An engagement between warring factions in a conflict situation in a nationally owned and inclusive political process is of paramount importance. This inclusive approach to national reconciliation, anchored in state sovereignty, is the only way to move forward and ensure the protection of civilians in an effective, pragmatic and enduring manner.

I thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, at the UN Security Council debate on UNAMA, New York, on 27 June 2012.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I join others in thanking you, Mr. President, for scheduling today's debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I would like to thank, in particular, Ambassador Zahir Tanin, PR of Afghanistan, for his statement. We also thank the UN Secretary General for his latest report and are appreciative of the briefings by Mr. Hervé Ladsous, Under Secretary General, and UNODC Executive Director Yuri Fedotov.

Mr. President,

2. India shares a privileged, historical and civilizational relationship with Afghanistan. During the last decade, our relationship has been renewed and consolidated by our contribution to the rebuilding and reconstruction of Afghanistan. India has pledged up to US $ 2 billion in development and humanitarian assistance. We remain unwavering in our commitment to assisting the people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous nation.

3. With the first meeting of the India-Afghanistan Partnership Council in New Delhi in May 2012, the process of implementation of the India-Afghanistan Comprehensive Strategic Partnership Agreement has been set in motion. This process will further intensify our broad-based development assistance to Afghanistan in a wide range of sectors, which have been identified by the government of Afghanistan as priority areas for reconstruction and development. We will continue our engagement in reconstruction and rehabilitation projects in alignment with the Afghan National Development Strategy.

4. We are fully cognizant that the economic viability of Afghanistan depends on its fuller integration into its neighbourhood, so that it can regain its historical role as a land-bridge between South Asia, Central Asia, the Middle East and Eurasia.

5. We fully support the efforts for regional confidence-building as a critical component of international efforts to support Afghanistan as it takes forward the task of national reconciliation even while it assumes full responsibility for security.

6. India fully supports an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned inclusive and transparent process of reconciliation as opposed to an internationally led process, accompanied by an inclusive political process and intra-Afghan dialogue, renunciation of violence, cutting of ties to terrorist groups, abiding by the Afghan constitution with its protections for human rights, including the rights of women.

7. At the Kabul Ministerial Meeting of the Istanbul process, India expressed its willingness to take the lead in the implementation of two Confidence Building Measures (CBMs), “Chambers of Commerce CBM” and “Commercial Opportunities CBM”. Further, India will be hosting the Delhi Investment Summit on Afghanistan in New Delhi tomorrow i.e. 28 June. The objective of this Summit is to attract foreign investment into Afghanistan in the light of new opportunities opening up in various sectors in that country. The Summit will include presentations by the Government of Afghanistan and others on the investment climate and opportunities in Afghanistan and panel discussions on cross-cutting issues as well as sector specific themes. Potential regional and international investors, including Indian companies, will participate in the event.

8. We see the Delhi Investment Summit as a critical link between the Istanbul Process and the Tokyo Conference on 8 July. The Summit will also be helpful in countering the current narrative of anxiety of withdrawal and in reversing it with a narrative of opportunity and hope.

9. We are doing so while fully cognizant that these CBMs require an atmosphere of security in the country and in the region. Amidst the ongoing transition, the security gains achieved during the last decade in Afghanistan are still tenuous and fragile. The security concerns continue to remain paramount.

10. The principal problem in Afghanistan remains the existence of terrorism, drawing upon ideological, financial and logistical support from beyond Afghanistan’s borders. We need concerted action to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al-Qaida, Taliban, Lashkar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups.

11. We also need to create an enabling environment where the Afghan people can live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation.

Mr. President,

12. Moving forward, we need sustained international commitment to strengthen the Afghan government’s capacity for governance, security and economic development. Enhanced developmental assistance and foreign investments in Afghanistan and building regional linkages are critical in ensuring an irreversible transition in that country.

13. The Secretary General’s latest report rightly observes that the serious challenges confronting Afghanistan ‘must not, however, be under-played, with the military drawdown and an unexpected reduction in development assistance giving rise to uncertainty about the sustainability of such gains’.

14. We support the good work being done by UNAMA. The international community as a whole must continue to work together with renewed vigour and unity of purpose towards strengthening the efforts of the Afghan government in seeking solutions that are inclusive and led by the Afghan people themselves. I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organizing this meeting to discuss the activities of UNOCA, particularly in the context of the threat posed by the Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA). I would also like to thank SRSG Abou Moussa and Ambassador Madeira for their briefings. We have taken note of the Secretary General’s reports on UNOCA and the LRA, and on a regional strategy for the LRA-affected areas.

Mr. President,

2. Countries in Central Africa are making steady progress to overcome the negative effects of decades of instability and conflicts. The region has seen overall political stability. Timely elections have been held in several countries, which have further strengthened democratic institutions. Countries are pursuing economic reforms, which have resulted in robust economic growth in the region. They are also cooperating with regional and foreign partners in addressing their common challenges like proliferation of weapons, transnational organized crimes and terrorism. The African Union (AU) and Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) too have continued to play a crucial role in addressing these problems in partnership with UNOCA and UNOAU.

3. Despite these positive trends, Mr President, the region continues to grapple with effects of conflicts of the past. Overall socio-economic indicators still remain poor and the precarious security and humanitarian situation in the Sahel is adversely impacting on the region. The activities of terrorist groups such as Boko Haram, armed groups and transnational crime networks, illicit drug trafficking, and maritime piracy and robbery at sea in the Gulf of Guinea continue to threaten the security and stability of the region.

4. Mr. President, it is in this context that the activities of UNOCA assume significance, particularly in the areas of conflict prevention, early warning and addressing socio-economic challenges. We commend UNOCA and SRSG Abou Moussa for their active engagement with national governments and with regional and sub-regional organizations. UNOCA should further strengthen this collaboration and assist the efforts of governments and organizations in the region so that regional cooperative frameworks developed to deal with these common challenges are fully implemented.

5. The focus of this Council should lead to galvanizing the international community to provide adequate resources for the national and regional endeavours, particularly in strengthening of national capacities with regards to civil administration, police and security forces, SSR and DDR processes and socio-economic development. Given the fragility of political institutions in several countries, it is also important for the national and regional authorities to pay attention to the need for inclusive political processes, including electoral reforms.
Mr. President,
6. Piracy in the Gulf of Guinea is a major threat to maritime navigation, and trade and economic activities in several countries in Central and West Africa.
We have noted the progress made towards a coordinated approach to address this problem, including the establishment of a Multinational Coordination Centre for Maritime Safety and Security in Equatorial Guinea. We hope that the proposed summit-level meeting will be held soon to work out a regional strategy.
Mr. President,
7. It is a matter of serious concern that LRA activities have increased this year, particularly in the Central African Republic and the DRC. The LRA remains a potent threat and its criminal activities have uprooted over 445,000 persons from their communities in the Central African Republic, the Democratic Republic of Congo, South Sudan and Uganda. While countries like Uganda with support from regional and foreign partners have undertaken a number of measures to address the challenge posed by the LRA, a lot still remains to be done. In this connection, we have taken note of UNOCA’s efforts and the launch of the AU-led Regional Cooperation Initiative against the LRA earlier this year. We hope that the AU will continue to work closely with the affected countries so that the Regional Task Force may be expeditiously deployed in the three identified sectors.
8. We agree with the Secretary General’s view that any effective strategy on the LRA should focus on strengthening the capacity of national authorities, including their security forces, to expand the authority of the state, and focus on overall socio-economic development in the affected areas. International humanitarian, development and peacebuilding assistance to the LRA-affected areas should address the underlying causes for activities of armed groups. The national programmes for disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration (DDRRR) activities should be supported with provision of adequate resources and be reinforced by a long-term plan for employment generation among the affected communities. It is also important that serious efforts be made to eliminate the remaining active groups and target the leadership of the LRA to bring them to justice. External assistance to the affected countries should be apolitical in nature and respect national sovereignty in policy as well as operational matters.
9. In this connection, it is important that UN Missions in the region should not be burdened further without augmentation of their resources in man and material. Without commensurate increase in resources, expansion of Mission mandates will not result in operational effectiveness.

10. In conclusion, Mr. President, India stands ready to contribute to efforts to address the challenges of countries of Central African region, particularly in the fields of capacity building and human resource and socio-economic development. I thank you.
Thank you, Madam President.

Let me begin by welcoming you, Madam President, to the Security Council and thanking the Colombian delegation for organizing today's open debate. Our thanks are also due to the Secretary General, Ambassadors Gasana and Momen and the representatives of the World Bank for their valuable statements. I also want to put on record our appreciation for your delegation for the useful Concept Paper to anchor our deliberations today.

2. Madam President, the nature of conflicts today is much different than in the past. Their intra-state nature, need for managing natural resources, transnational organized crime, illicit trafficking in drugs and weapons, and regional dimensions demand an approach that is capable of building upon the gains of stabilization. Institutions of core governance, youth employment, transitional justice, national reconciliation, electoral support, and constitution building are tasks that need coherent and sustained assistance from the international community. This, in turn, requires political will, allocation of adequate resources and readiness for long-term engagement.

3. It is in this context that peacebuilding, once described as the “missing middle” between peacekeeping and durable peace, assumes importance. Setting up of the Peacebuilding Commission (PBC) six years back reflected the collective desire of the international community to assist post-conflict countries on a long-term basis in their transition. Despite its advisory role, the Commission and its Organizing Committee have done work worth our commendation in mainstreaming peacebuilding.

4. Given the wide range of tasks the PBC is expected to administer, it is not surprising that it faces several challenges. In our view, willingness of the international community to provide adequate resources is the first and a necessary condition for successful peacebuilding efforts in post-conflict countries. Second, greater coherence among various UN organs under the aegis of the Commission is required to enhance its ability to carry its agenda forward. In this connection, I would like to mention that the organizational context of peacebuilding continues to lack uniformity. Some peacebuilding efforts are being managed by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, others by the Department of Political Affairs and yet others by the UN Resident Coordinator system. Clearly, the peacebuilding policy-making needs a suitable address in this organization today.

5. Madam President, it is also important to keep in mind that peace in post-conflict societies cannot be restored unless citizens are free from fear and want, and institutions of governance perform effectively. The capacity for effective governance, in turn, depends on the existence of institutions that enable these authorities to respond effectively to people’s aspirations. This general political aphorism is substantiated by the experience of the international community in its peacekeeping and peacebuilding efforts during the last two decades.

6. We, therefore, think that the core institutions of governance are the key to sustainable peace. They must be rooted locally rather than being imposed from above. Their local relevance and inclusiveness will make all the difference in the governance process. It is, therefore, important for the PBC to align its objectives with national priorities and ensure that all plans and programmes are implemented under national leadership and through national institutions so that gains are sustainable even if slow. The Commission must also draw from experiences most relevant for the prevailing socio-economic conditions in the countries on its agenda. An effective measure of the success of peacebuilding efforts will be the Commission’s success in promoting inclusive political processes, national reconciliation and security sector reforms.

7. Madam President, peacebuilding anchored firmly in the overall peace process will deliver the best results. This requires the international community to make available a predictable and appropriate level of resources over extended periods. Our advocacy must be accompanied by matching commitments in resources.

8. UN’s capacity to assist national institutions is contingent upon the Secretariat and the Funds and Programmes having skills and expertise that are relevant to these societies. SG’s Civilian Capacity Review, we believe, is a step in making this process inclusive and representative. We firmly believe that the nimbleness of recruitment and deployment are not the sufficient conditions for performance delivery. Those willing to invest lives in the field must be valued. Our in-house experts who have gained valuable insights by spending time in the DRC, Darfur, Sudan and in other challenging locations should be the pivots of all our endeavours. Our efforts, at the same time, must be demand driven and nimble for the changing times rather than supply driven. Our ways of selecting police and military officers on secondment need to be simplified. Communication methods with Member States have stagnated with old times in this regard. Representative nature of our institutions will ensure the collective spirit of our enterprise including in DPKO and DFS.

9. In conclusion, Madam President, I would like to stress that as a responsible global citizen having wide experience of nation-building which are most relevant for countries on the PBC agenda, India will not be found lacking in responding to challenges of the peacebuilding process, including under the aegis of the Peacebuilding Commission.

I thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me at the outset thank SRSG Farid Zarif for his briefing on the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK). I would also like to thank H.E. Mr. Ivica Dacic, Prime Minister of Serbia, and Mr. Hashim Thaci for their statements.

2. Mr. President, the reporting period has seen several important developments. It is a matter of satisfaction that the conduct of Serbian presidential and parliamentary elections inside Kosovo went off in a peaceful and orderly manner thanks to the efforts of UNMIK and other international organizations especially OSCE in establishing an appropriate modality for such voting that was acceptable to all sides.

3. We also welcome the expression of the requisite will from both Belgrade and Pristina to resume the EU-facilitated dialogue once a new government assumes office in Belgrade in order to discuss the implementation of agreements reached so far and also take up new subjects. In this regard, we particularly welcome the statements of President Tomislav Nikolic reaffirming Serbia’s commitment to honour all agreements reached in the dialogue and also his readiness to engage in talks with the Pristina leadership in the future. We hope that the talks will resume soon and result in concrete progress on the contentious issues.

4. Mr. President, the issue of missing persons is an important humanitarian issue and we hope that with direct support and encouragement by UNMIK it will be possible to make further progress on this issue.

5. We have taken note of the steps taken by the EULEX Special Investigative Task Force to investigate the allegations of organ trafficking, including the recent adoption by Albania of a law on cooperation with the Task Force. We reiterate our stand that a thorough and impartial investigation should be carried out into all aspects of this matter.

6. Mr. President, we share the Secretary General’s assessment that the situation in the northern part of Kosovo continues to be fragile and requires constant vigilance and restraint on all sides to reduce the potential for instability. We note with concern that during the reporting period a number of inter-communal violent acts took place in June-July. The attack on buses transporting Serb children is a matter of serious concern, as also the continuing violence and crime against Serbian minority including the murder of a returnee couple. We share the Secretary Generals’ view of the need for genuine outreach by Kosovo institutions, in particular the police. We urge the international organizations present in Kosovo, particularly K-FOR and EULEX to exercise their authority to prevent the recurrence of such incidents and ensure the safety of the minority.

7. In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to express appreciation that UNMIK has continued to implement its mandate in an impartial and status neutral manner and facilitated cooperation between Pristina and Belgrade, the communities in Kosovo, KFOR, EULEX and the OSCE. We commend and support SRSG Zarif and UNMIK for their contribution towards improvement in the situation in northern Kosovo and for the services the Mission is rendering in areas that betters the daily lives of all Kosovars. The Mission should be continued in accordance with Security Council Resolution 1244 and other relevant decisions. Other agencies in Kosovo – OSCE, KFOR, EULEX, etc – should continue to cooperate and coordinate with UNMIK in accordance with their respective mandates.

I thank you.

Statement by Mr. Vinay Kumar, Charge d’Affaires, at the UN Security Council briefing on Syria, on 30 August 2012.

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, let me welcome you, Mr. President, to the Security Council and thank you for presiding over this meeting. I would also like to thank the Deputy Secretary General, the High Commissioner for Refugees and the Ministers from Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon and Turkey and from Colombia, Morocco, Togo and the United Kingdom for their participation and statements.

2. Mr. President, since the beginning of the crisis in Syria in March 2011 the situation has been steadily deteriorating. More than 2.5 million people are in the need of humanitarian assistance. More than 1 million are internally displaced and more than 200,000 are refugees. The continuing military operations by all sides have prevented timely and adequate delivery of humanitarian assistance to those in need. Efforts of the international community have so far failed to address the crisis, which is increasingly affecting the region as a whole.

3. It is unfortunate that neither side to the Syrian conflict has implemented its obligations under the six-point plan, which was endorsed by Security Council resolutions 2042 and 2043. The conflict has got increasingly more militarized, which has also been exploited by well-known terrorist groups. A number of terrorist acts have been committed against state institutions and public infrastructure. There have been gross violations of human rights by all sides. Unfortunately, the Syrian parties, instead of seriously commencing a Syrian-led political process, have pursued a military approach to realize their objectives.

4. Mr. President, we strongly condemn all violence and violations of human rights irrespective of who their perpetrators are. We also condemn in the strongest terms possible the terrorist acts that have been and continue to be committed in Syria. We call upon all parties, Syrian as well as foreign, to dissociate themselves from terrorist groups and ensure that no space or justification is provided for terrorist acts.

5. Mr President, under the prevailing circumstances in Syria, there is an urgent need for the international community to close its ranks and send a united message to the Syrian parties to walk back from their military approach and resolve the crisis through an inclusive Syrian-led political process. There is no other way to bring about a sustained cessation of violence in all its forms by all parties. This is also the only way to end human rights violations and create an atmosphere for safe and unhindered delivery of urgently needed humanitarian assistance. Any further militarization of the conflict will not only make a political solution more difficult to reach but also exacerbate the humanitarian situation. In this connection, any militarization of the humanitarian situation will worsen the security situation as well as humanitarian conditions for millions of Syrians, and must, therefore, be avoided.

6. In order to assist the Syrian parties change their course and address the crisis through political dialogue, it is important that all parties, inside and outside Syria, fully abide by their obligations under resolutions 2042 and 2043. The parties must be prevailed upon to implement the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the Final Communiqué issued at Geneva on 30 June.

7. India firmly believes that it is critical for the United Nations to remain strongly engaged with the Syrian parties and other actors in the search for a way forward. Unilateral action of any kind will not resolve the crisis. It will only exacerbate the problem and cause greater instability and violence even beyond Syria’s borders. We also believe that the leadership of Syria is for Syrians to decide through a democratic process. The task of the international community, anchored in the United Nations, is to assist the Syrian parties in this process.

8. Mr President, India has consistently called for and supported international efforts to assist the Syrian parties to resolve the crisis and bring about peace through dialogue and political processes. Accordingly, we strongly supported the efforts of Joint Special Envoy Kofi Annan. We welcome the appointment of Mr Lakhdar Brahimi as the Joint Special Representative, and urge all sides, Syrian and foreign, to cooperate with him in good faith so that the Syrian crisis can be resolved without any further bloodshed.

I thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me at the outset thank you for organizing today’s Open Debate on the issue of Children and Armed Conflict. I want to congratulate Ms Leila Zerrougui on her appointment as the new SRSG for Children and Armed Conflict. We wish her great success and look forward to closely working with her. I would also like to thank our briefers today for their statements.

2. Mr. President, children constitute a third of humanity and the most important third as they represent our future. Being also the weakest and most susceptible, it is imperative that all of us nationally and as members of the international community act for their well being and development. Situations of armed conflict, per-se, are situations of suffering but children tend to be the worst affected. We, therefore, firmly believe that the international community has the responsibility, and indeed the obligation, to do its utmost to provide succor to children affected by armed conflict.

3. We have engaged constructively in the ongoing efforts to make the United Nations more relevant and effective in the area of children affected by armed conflict. We have also actively engaged in the work of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict to address the plight of children in situations on the agenda of the Security Council.

4. As the largest contributor to UN peacekeeping operations over the past six decades, Indian peacekeepers have been at the forefront of creating an environment of peace and security in which national authorities can fulfill their obligations towards the most vulnerable sections of those affected by the armed conflict. Based on our wide-ranging experience, we wish to stress that the major challenge is the question of resources. While some members of the international community never tire of pushing to expand the mandate, they are unwilling to provide adequate resources even for meeting the requirements of the agreed mandate.

5. Mr. President, since the adoption of resolution 1379 that brought the issue of Children and Armed Conflict on the Security Council’s agenda in 2001, significant progress has been made and the United Nations deserves credit for the same. However, a lot more remains to be done. As the new SRSG commences her work, we think that it is the right time to take stock of the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Council and consider the way forward. We are sure that today’s debate will allow reflection on the functioning of the UN processes and mechanisms, and help us identify gaps and address them.
6. Let me, therefore, underscore our key concern, which has also found an echo in the words of several delegations that have spoken before me today. We believe that the earlier this is addressed, the better the result will be for children in armed conflict. This will also help rebuild the consensus that the issue had so far had in this Council. And I must add that is important.

7. OP16 of resolution 1379 requested the Secretary General to report on situations that are on the Security Council’s agenda or that may be brought to the attention of the Security Council by the Secretary General, in accordance with Article 99 of the Charter, which in his opinion threaten the maintenance of international peace and security. All subsequent resolutions, including resolution 1882 that makes reference to other situations of concern, draw their legitimacy from OP16 of 1379. In spite of this clearly spelt out mandate, the Secretary General’s reports include situations which do not meet the threshold of armed conflict or threat to the maintenance of international peace and security. The fact that the legal Counsel also has issues with such referencing should have led to their removal, not the continued inclusion of such situations with a blasé disclaimer. This should be rectified and the mandate strictly adhered to.

8. Mandate creep also distracts from urgently addressing the plight of children in situations of armed conflicts that are on the Council agenda, where lack of resources is the critical problem for relevant UN entities.

9. The monitoring and reporting mechanism of the UN envisages the involvement and close cooperation with the country concerned. In addition to ensuring the veracity and reliability of data collection, developing such capacity will significantly assist the country concerned in its fight against impunity and ensuring accountability. It is also important that UN access to armed groups is carried under the cooperation framework between the UN and the concerned government. This will be in keeping with both the letter and the spirit of the Council’s resolutions.

10. Mr. President, it is important that there is regular and substantive consultation between the Working Group on children and armed conflict and the SRSG on the implementation of the relevant resolutions, including of provisions concerning listing, delisting, persistent perpetrators, impunity and accountability, etc.

11. In conclusion, let me reiterate India’s strong support for the UN on issue of children and armed conflict and reaffirm that India will continue to work closely on the issue of children and armed conflict with a view to increasing efficiency, cost effectiveness and impact of UN efforts and those of Member States in dealing with this important issue.

I thank you.
Mr. President, I join others in thanking you for scheduling today’s debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I would also like to extend a very warm welcome to Dr. Zalmai Rassoul, Foreign Minister of Afghanistan to the Security Council and thank him for his statement. We also thank the UN Secretary General for his latest report and are appreciative of the briefing by Mr. Ján Kubiš, UNSG’s Special Representative for Afghanistan.

Mr. President,

2. Afghanistan is in midst of a critical phase of transition wherein it assumes responsibility for security and governance with the drawdown of the ISAF by end 2014. The sustained commitment of the international community to Afghanistan is essential if it is to stand on its own feet.

3. During the last one year, the international community’s has renewed its commitment to Afghanistan at conferences at Bonn, Chicago and Tokyo and at the regional level in Istanbul and Kabul. The Delhi Investment Summit of June 28 hosted by India was also an endeavour to contribute to this effort by calling attention to the role and potential for foreign investment and domestic private sector development in providing a narrative of opportunity and employment to counter the anxiety of the ISAF drawdown.

4. As we assist Afghanistan in attaining its long-cherished goal of self-reliance, we also need to bear in mind that the infrastructure of terror is still intact in the region. The Secretary General’s report rightly notes that ‘little has changed in the underlying dynamics to mitigate a deep-seated cycle of conflict’. Further, a diminished international presence will have a large financial impact in many areas which, at least in the short term, may even exacerbate predatory behaviour.

5. Afghanistan continues to face an existential threat from terrorism, drawing upon ideological, financial and logistical support from beyond its borders. The security situation remains fragile and has been compounded over the last two months by a sharp increase in the variety, spread and intensity of attacks by the Taliban and their backers. Moreover, cross-border shellings have caused large-scale disruptions to normal life and have sparked public outrage. The ANSF is ill-equipped to repel this challenge without substantial assistance from the international community. We need concerted action to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al-Qaeda, Taliban, Lashkar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups.

6. We welcome the pledges of $16 billion of financial aid through 2015 and to sustain support through 2017 at, or near, levels of the past decade at the Tokyo Conference. At the same time, we are conscious that these figures represent a base-line or minimum requirement for Afghanistan to sustain itself.

7. The Tokyo Mutual Accountability Framework is a noble effort, which we fully support. However, we must not forget that true mutuality can only be achieved at equal levels of capacity. Good governance requires a strong state that has full control over its territory, which is not yet the case in Afghanistan. While good governance must be a necessary component of international assistance to Afghanistan, it is not enough. It must be complemented by strong leadership, the strengthening of the ANSF, and the development of an investment regime in Afghanistan that protects the national interest while promoting investment.

Mr. President,

8. India visualizes its partnership with Afghanistan as needs-based and long-term, not conditions based or transitory. We remain unwavering in our commitment to assisting the people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous nation.

9. During the last decade, India has pledged up to $2 billion in development and humanitarian assistance. We have managed to carry out some of the most economical and cost-effective projects in Afghanistan. The $500 million assistance announced by Prime Minister of India in May 2011 is being spent from 2012-2015. The projects under consideration will be in line with the projects suggested under the National Priority Programmes of the Government of Afghanistan. The pace and nature of the utilization of the present and future Indian assistance will be determined by the preference, comfort level and absorptive capacity of the Afghan government.

10. As Afghanistan takes forward the task of national reconciliation even while it assumes full responsibility for security, we fully support the efforts for regional confidence-building as a critical component of international efforts to support the country. Enhanced developmental assistance and foreign investments in Afghanistan and building regional linkages are critical in ensuring an irreversible transition in the country. The Istanbul ‘Heart of Asia’ process was an important step in that direction. India has also partnered in this regional consensus towards the stability and prosperity of Afghanistan by leading the two Commercial Confidence Building Measures, i.e. the Chambers of Commerce and Commercial Opportunities CBMs, initially agreed upon for implementation in the Istanbul process.

11. In our view regional cooperation on projects of multilateral scope and benefit could give an impetus to this scenario. We are fully cognizant that the economic viability of Afghanistan depends on its fuller integration into its neighbourhood, so that it can regain its historical role of a land-bridge between South Asia, Central Asia, the Middle East and Eurasia. The development of transport infrastructure and transit arrangements linking Afghanistan to the North, South, East and West, including, through the Chabahar port, would benefit not only Afghanistan but the entire Central Asian region by creating trade, transit and investment linkages. 3

Mr. President,

12. Moving forward, we need sustained international commitment to strengthen Afghanistan government’s capacity for security, governance and economic development. We need to create an enabling environment where the Afghan people could live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation.

13. We support the good work done by UNAMA. It is important that amidst the cutback in UN foot-print in Afghanistan and reconfiguration of UNAMA due to budgetary constraints, all efforts should be made to avoid adverse impact on its operational capacity and mandate implementation.

Thank you.

Let me begin by congratulating you on presiding over this High Level Meeting on peace and security in West Asia and North Africa. I also want to thank the UN Secretary General and the Secretary General of the League of States for their valuable statements.

2. Mr. President, developments in West Asia and North Africa have played a major role in shaping the history of the world since ancient times. The region has been the birthplace of major religions of the world and of great civilizations. By virtue of the genius of its peoples, its strategic location and its natural resources, the region has been a focus of considerable interest internationally. It is, therefore, not surprising that the momentous transformation in several countries of the region since late 2010 has been of great interest to the world at large. It has been a general aspiration that these transformations should be peaceful and lead to inclusive and democratic outcomes within these countries.

3. The League of Arab States, as the most important regional organization predating the United Nations, has played a significant role in the unfolding of events in the region, and guided the involvement of the international community in these events. Chapter VIII of the UN Charter recognizes the importance of the regional organizations and their role in matters related to the maintenance of international peace and security. The Charter also provides a broad framework for this Council’s cooperation with the regional organizations, while clearly stating the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security.

4. The cooperation between the Arab League and the United Nations started in early 1950’s. Both organizations have benefited from the convergence of objectives to maintain international peace and security, despite occasional differences. Enhanced partnership between UN agencies and the Arab League at institutional level in the fields of human development, capacity building, and empowerment of women and youth have been of great benefit for the countries of the region. There is a need now for further strengthening the existing cooperation to help the countries in the region in meeting the aspirations of their people for playing a greater role in shaping their destiny. India stands ready to cooperate in this regard.

5. Mr. President, it is important to underline here that this Council’s cooperation with regional organizations, particularly with the League of Arab States, should avoid selectivity. Also, cooperation with one regional organization should not come at the cost of another. The objective of peaceful resolution of conflicts should determine the actions of the Security Council. All UN activities, including its cooperation with 2 regional organizations, should be consistent with the provisions of the UN Charter. Both organizations should use all tools of diplomacy to assist the concerned countries in transiting to an inclusive and participatory polity while maintaining social stability and cohesion. The cooperation should encompass all relevant issues related to international peace and security, particularly the fight against terrorism. The principles of national sovereignty, political independence, unity and territorial integrity must be respected. It is also important that peculiarities of each situation are kept in mind.

6. Mr. President, if there is one issue that requires immediate attention of both the United Nations and the League of Arab States, it is the Arab-Israeli conflict, including the Israeli-Palestinian issue. This issue cannot be ignored while we focus on recent developments in the region. There can be no durable peace in West Asia without a just and comprehensive settlement, based on the realization by the Palestinian people of their inalienable right to a state of their own with internationally recognized borders, living side by side and in peace and security with Israel. We, therefore, urge this Council as well as the Arab League to urgently facilitate the resumption of the Middle East Peace Process.

7. Mr. President, the League of Arab States has been playing an important role in resolving the Syrian crisis. We fully support the peaceful resolution of the conflict through a Syrian-led inclusive political process, based on firm rejection of any military intervention. We urge all sides, Syrian and foreign, to cooperate with Joint Special Representative Mr. Lakhdhar Brahimi in good faith so that the Syrian crisis can be resolved without any further bloodshed.

I thank you.
599. Statement by Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, Acting Permanent Representative, at the UN Security Council debate on MINUSTAH, on October 03, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me at the outset, welcome you to the Security Council, and congratulate Guatemala and you personally on the assumption of the presidency of the Security Council for the first time ever. We have very fruitful cooperation with the Guatemalan delegation, and thank the Permanent Representative and his delegation for organizing today’s debate. I would also like to express our sincere thanks to SRSG Mariano Fernandez for presenting the Secretary General’s report on MINUSTAH and for his briefing on recent developments in Haiti.

2. Mr. President, we are encouraged by the developments in Haiti during last few months, including the appointment of Prime Minister Laurent Lamothe and its ratification by the Parliament in May. These developments have ended the political uncertainty and underscored the collective resolve of Haiti’s leadership to work in a constructive manner to address various issues related to governance, economy, elections and reconstruction. We commend the steps taken by the new government for improving the law and order situation, attracting foreign investment, promoting new industrial projects, and combating smuggling. We also commend the steps for resolving differences between the executive and legislative branches of the government, and hope that the newly established constitutional court, the electoral council, and the Superior Council of the Judiciary will satisfactorily settle the outstanding issues.

3. In order for these steps to succeed, Haiti requires continued support of the international community. In this connection, we commend MINUSTAH for assisting the Haitian national police in ensuring stable security situation across the country. We think that international support needs to be enhanced, particularly in the implementation of the 2012-2016 Haitian National Police Development Plan. We hope that the local elections due since last year will be held soon, and help in rebuilding democratic institutions at the gross root level.

4. Mr. President, while there has been substantial progress in resettling the internally displaced persons and addressing their humanitarian needs, a number of challenges continue to face recovery and reconstruction efforts. Nearly 400,000 persons remain dependent on humanitarian assistance for their basic survival. Assistance is also required to fight the cholera epidemic. For long-term improvement in the situation, the international community needs to align its efforts with Haiti’s national development priorities. In this regard, we welcome the creation of the Housing and Public Buildings Construction Unit in the Office of the Prime Minister, which will contribute to the improved coordination and effective implementation of humanitarian programmes. We also welcome the new Integrated Strategic Framework for the period 2013-2016 drafted by MINUSTAH in consultation with the Haitian authorities.

5. Mr. President, MINUSTAH and its leadership have played an important role in the positive developments in Haiti. MINUSTAH has not only helped Haitian stakeholders in resolving their differences, it has also lent its hand in capacity building and recovery efforts of national institutions, and in ensuring overall security and stability in the country. With the Haitian national institutions assuming greater role, MINUSTAH should gradually hand over its core functions to the Haitian National Police and focus on long-term stabilization and development goals. In this context, we support the recommendation of the Secretary General to narrow MINUSTAH’s activities to a core set of mandated tasks that are achievable within a reasonable timeframe. MINUSTAH’s drawdown should, however, be based on the evolving situation in the country rather than a fixed timeline.

6. Mr. President, India has remained a major contributor to MINUSTAH with three contingents of the Formed Police Units. Our FPUs are playing an important role in maintaining peace and stability in Haiti, including the guarding of the Presidential Palace. In addition, the Indian FPUs have arranged blood donation camps for the benefit of the Haitian people and earned their goodwill.

7. India remains committed to supporting Haiti in its reconstruction activities. In September 2012, India donated US$ 5 million to the Government of Haiti for construction of 500 low cost housing units for the victims of the January 2010 earthquake. Earlier, India had donated US$ 5 million in cash as disaster relief assistance. India has also been contributing US$ 500,000 annually since 2009 to the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF), which continues to play an important role in the recovery work in Haiti. India is also cooperating with Haiti in capacity building and human resources development by offering scholarships under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme.

8. In conclusion, Mr. President, let me state that while Haiti has come a long way since the devastating earthquake of 2010, the international community should continue its engagement so that Haiti is able to achieve sustainable peace, security, stability, and development. As Haiti assumes the Chair of the Caribbean Community next year, we convey our best wishes to the government and people of Haiti, and also assure them of our continued partnership.

I thank you.
600. Statement by Mr. E. Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs, in the Security Council Meeting on Sierra Leone, on October 09, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by thanking the Guatemalan delegation for organizing today's briefing on the special court for Sierra Leone. Having started my career as an advocate, the topic under discussion is of special interest to me.

2. I would also like to thank the President of the Special Court, Hon. Justice Shireen Avis Fisher, for presenting the report on the activities and achievements of the Court since the last briefing to the Security Council on 16 July 2009.

3. Mr. President, the Special Court was established in the year 2000 by Security Council resolution 1315 at the request of the Government of Sierra Leone. Since its establishment, the Court has successfully carried out its mandate set out in the Statute of the Court. Three of the four main cases have been completed, and the last case is in the final stages of judgment at the Appeals Chamber.

4. Keeping in view its track record, we hope that the Special Court would successfully accomplish its mandate by 30 September 2013 when the Appeals Chamber is expected to give its verdict in the Charles Taylor case. We appreciate the efforts of the United Nations and the international community to assist States, upon their request, in restoring peace and stability, including through the fight against impunity.

5. Mr. President, the enforcement of sentences with the assistance of the Government of Rwanda is a good example of international cooperation in furthering the cause of justice. We have also taken note of the Court's outreach activities, witness protection, and archive development programme, including through the capacity building initiatives that will strengthen national judicial institutions in Sierra Leone. We also appreciate the creation of a Peace Museum that would contribute to the efforts aimed at national reconciliation in the country.

6. As the Special Court prepares for closure, focusing on the residual issues such as enforcement of sentences, protection of witnesses, and preservation of archives of the Special Court assume great importance. In this regard, there is a need to continue support to the Special Court as well as to the Residual Special Court.

7. Mr. President, India has a long history of cordial relationship with Sierra Leone. India played a major role in the UN Assistance Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL) till 2001. Since then, India has continued to partner with the Government of Sierra Leone in its reconstruction efforts. India has extended loans and credit lines worth US$ 94.45 million during the last few years to enable Sierra Leone procure agricultural equipment, and modernize and expand its National Telecommunications Network (SIERRATEL). Our partnership has included the restoration and rehabilitation of six potable water and solar street lighting projects. As part of our bilateral cooperation programme, India is providing 45 training slots to Sierra Leone this year. India has also offered to set up an India-Africa Information and Communication Technology Centre in Sierra Leone.

8. Before I conclude, Mr. President, let me convey our best wishes to the Government and people of Sierra Leone as they prepare for national elections next month. The successful conduct of the elections will be a major milestone in post-conflict peacebuilding in Sierra Leone, which should help in the process of national reconciliation and further consolidation of democracy in the country. India remains committed to continue its partnership with the Government of Sierra Leone, particularly in capacity building and human resources development.

I thank you.

*****
Thank you, Mr President.

Let me begin by thanking Under Secretary General Jeffrey Feltman for his comprehensive briefing. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine for their valuable statements.

2. Mr President, the Arab world has been undergoing unprecedented transformation during the last two years. Democratic aspirations of people in several countries are being addressed through national political processes. It is, however, regrettable that the Palestinian question and the related Arab-Israeli issues have largely remained unaddressed and unresolved. Also, the Palestinian application for full membership of the United Nations submitted more than a year ago has not evinced any positive action from this Council, despite overwhelming support from the UN member-states.

3. The issue of Palestine is facing the real danger of getting relegated to the sidelines. The current period of stalemate in the Middle East Peace Process is perhaps one of the longest since the signing of the Oslo Accords 19 years back. The efforts of the Quartet can at best be described as feeble and have failed to break the stalemate. If this situation continues, the international community will risk destabilization in the region.

4. We, therefore, call for serious efforts to arrest this trend. If there is one decision that can help revive the Peace Process, it is an end to settlement activity in the occupied Palestinian territories. The settlement activity in the West Bank and East Jerusalem are creating a new ground reality and threaten the very premise of a two-state solution. Settlements, road blocks and the related infrastructure of occupation have also exacerbated the humanitarian problems of the Palestinian people and adversely affect the normal functioning of Palestinian state institutions. We join others in urging Israel to stop its settlement policy without further delay.

5. Mr President, the blockade of Gaza has entered its sixth year, and is causing severe hardship to the population. The humanitarian situation continues to deteriorate, and essential services, economic activities and infrastructure development have been disrupted. Israel should immediately lift the blockade and allow the resumption of normal socio-economic activities in Gaza so that the Gazans can rebuild their lives and reduce their dependence on external assistance.

6. The recent measures taken by Israel, including transfer of tax revenue, increase in work permits to the Palestinian population, visits of Palestinian families to meet Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli detention, etc., are positive. These measures are, however, inadequate to address the magnitude of the problems, and need to be built upon to promote mutual trust and confidence between the parties. In this connection, Mr. President, it is important to avoid violence on all sides, and ensure that legitimate security interests of all parties are met.

7. We note the reconciliation process between the Palestinian factions, which is crucial. We hope that efforts towards the promotion of reconciliation will bear fruit soon, leading to the formation of a Unity Government, holding of elections, reunification of Palestinian state institutions, and measures for reconstruction and development of Palestinian society.

8. The financial crisis that the Palestinian Authority is currently facing is eroding the significant progress made by the Palestinian Authority in building state institutions. There is an urgent need to support the Palestinian Authority to meet its budgetary shortfalls. In this regard, we welcome the commitment shown by the international community at the recently held meeting of the Ad-Hoc Liaison Committee on 23 September.

9. On our part, Mr. President, India has continued to support the Palestinian state building efforts. President Abbas visited India in September this year. During the visit, three agreements were signed for establishment of an Information and Communication Technology Centre of Excellence in Palestine, provision of technical and vocational education training equipment and services for the Palestinian Ministry of Labour, and construction and equipping of two secondary schools in Asera Al Shamalyeh and Abu Dis. India will also contribute US$ 10 million to Palestine's budget for this year, as we have done in the two previous years.

10. During the visit of President Abbas, India reaffirmed its firm support for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel. We strongly support all efforts towards realization of that objective, including Palestine's enhanced status in this organization as announced by President Abbas during the General Debate of the 67th session of the UN General Assembly last month.

11. Mr. President, we remain seriously concerned at the deteriorating situation in Syria. We strongly condemn all violence and violations of human rights irrespective of who their perpetrators are. We also condemn in the strongest terms the terrorist acts that have been and continue to be committed in Syria. We call upon all parties to dissociate themselves from terrorist groups and ensure that no space is provided for these groups. We urge all parties to cooperate with Joint Special Representative Mr Lakhdar Brahimi to resolve the crisis without any further bloodshed through an inclusive, Syrian-led political process that can meet the legitimate aspirations of the Syrian people.

12. Before I conclude, Mr. President, let me state that while the Palestinian question remains at the centre of the Arab-Israeli conflict, there are other Arab lands under occupation. A final and comprehensive settlement of all Arab-Israeli issues is necessary for enduring peace in the region. India stands ready to play its part in our collective endeavours to achieve a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President

At the outset, I would like to thank the Guatemalan delegation for organizing today’s debate on the situation in Somalia.

As the new authorities start their work in Mogadishu, it is a good time to deliberate upon the progress achieved so far, the challenges that lie ahead, and how the international community can continue its support for the government and people of Somalia.

We have carefully noted the views expressed by SRSG Augustine Mahiga, and I would thank him for his valuable statement.

Mr. President,

During the course of last year there has been remarkable progress in the process of stabilization of political, security and humanitarian situations in Somalia. This has created a historic opportunity that must be seized for the full restoration of peace and stability in Somalia after two-decade long conflict.

The adoption of a provisional constitution, formation of the new parliament, elections of the President and the Speaker, and appointment of the new prime minister clearly reflect the collective resolve of the Somali people to move from the transitional institutions to a more representative government that can meet the legitimate aspirations of all sections of Somali society.

These important milestones would not have been possible but for the coordinated and concerted efforts of the international community, including the African Union and the United Nations.

The important role played by SRSG Mahiga in the successful completion of the transition process deserves our special appreciation.

Our congratulations are also due to the new Somali leadership, particularly H.E. Mr. Hassan Sheikh Mohamud, the new President of Somalia. It is a matter of immense pride for us that President Mohamud spent a few years studying in India in the late 1980’s.

Mr. President,

The gains on the political front have been made possible by the impressive achievements of AMISOM and the Somali forces on the security front.

Thanks to AMISOM, Mogadishu is today firmly under the control of the Somali authorities.
Last week, AMISOM and the Somali forces secured the strategic towns of Kismayo and Wanla Weyn from Al Shabaab. The support of the international community to AMISOM operations has been instrumental in these successes. We commend all troop contributing countries, in particular Uganda, Burundi and Kenya, for their commitment to the Mission and for the sacrifices their troops have made.

Mr. President,

In order to consolidate the gains made, the new government in Somalia has to embark upon building effective state institutions that can pursue national reconciliation, provide the rule of law, revitalize economic activities, and restructure and strengthen the security forces.

It is also necessary to expeditiously implement the pending tasks of the Road Map. In this regard, we welcome the six-point policy framework set out by President Mohamud, and call upon the international community to fully support the implementation of the framework.

Mr. President,

AMISOM remains the mainstay of the international community’s efforts for stabilization of the security situation in Somalia. AMISOM and the Somali security forces have continued to expand their control in all four sectors of operations. Still, Al Shabaab remains a major threat to peace and stability in Somalia, and has turned to asymmetrical warfare.

The changing security situation demands further augmentation of resources for AMISOM, including enablers and force multipliers.

We, therefore, support the request made by the AU for a technical roll over of four months, continuing the current support package. We also support the expansion of the logistical support package to cover the deployment of additional civilian personnel and to include naval assets for CoE reimbursement.

The latter is crucial to safeguard the supply routes of AMISOM and to prevent Al-Shabab from benefitting from illegal maritime trade and piracy.

Mr. President,

Maritime piracy off the coast of Somalia and the humanitarian plight of hostages held by pirates remain a major cause of concern for India.

Much of India’s trade passes through the Gulf of Aden, estimated at over US $160 billion annually.

Indians constitute 7% of the world’s seafarers and a consequence of piracy has been the tremendous human cost that these seafarers have had to pay. According to the Secretary General’s latest report, 259 hostages from 18 ships are still held by pirates. Of these, 43 are unfortunately Indian nationals.

We hope that the international community will provide full assistance to the new government in Somalia to implement the comprehensive set of measures to counter piracy as identified in the roadmap.

Mr. President,

India and Somalia share two millennia of civilizational exchanges across the seas. Not many years ago, India made a major contribution to peacekeeping in Somalia through its significant involvement in UNOSOM-II.

Last year, following our Prime Minister’s announcement at the second India-Africa Summit, India made a financial contribution of US $ 2 million to AMISOM. This year, we are making another contribution of US $ 1 million.

We have also continued to extend help to Somalia in capacity building through human resources development, and have recently increased the number of scholarships available for Somali experts and students to utilize in Indian academic institutions. We have also contributed to the development of the information technology sector in Somalia.

Mr. President,

As Somalia moves on to a new phase of pacification and peacebuilding, the continued support of the international community will remain critical for its success.

I would like to assure the new government of Somalia of India’s continued support for our common endeavours to put Somalia back on to the path of peace, stability, and prosperity.

I thank you.
603. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, at the UN Security Council, explaining India’s Vote on Resolution on African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) on November, 07 2012.

Now, I would like to make an EoV in my national capacity.

The important role played by AMISOM in the remarkable progress that Somalia has achieved this year in political and security stabilization can hardly be overemphasized. Thanks to AMISOM, Mogadishu is today firmly under the control of the Somali authorities. Over the past few months, AMISOM and the Somali forces have also been making steady gains in other areas of Somalia, and have secured the strategic coastal town of Kismayo from Al Shabaab. We commend all troop contributing countries, in particular Uganda, Burundi, Djibouti, and Kenya, for their commitment to the Mission and for the sacrifices their troops have made. We also note the significant contribution of the Ethiopian troops operating under the African Union strategic concept.

2. Support of the international community to AMISOM has been instrumental in these successes. It is, therefore, necessary for the international community to remain steadfast in its support and, in fact, enhance it in order that the new Government of Somalia is fully supported in military and civilian matters to stabilize the areas liberated from Al Shabaab, establish administrative structures, and launch socio-economic development programmes.

3. We have voted in favour of Resolution 2073 extending the mandate of AMISOM for four months, as requested by the African Union. While the resolution extends the UN logistical support package to cover an additional 50 civilian personnel as requested by the African Union, we are disappointed that the resolution could not respond to other critical requests made by the AU, like the maritime component and the review of arms embargo.

4. We hope that the Council will address these issues when it next considers AMISOM’s mandate after strategic reviews by the AU and the UN.

Thank you.

**********
Now I would like to make a statement in my national capacity.

I also would like to join others in thanking the Prosecutor, Mrs. Fatou Bensouda for her briefing today.

2. At the outset, let me state that India is not a party to the Rome Statute, for reasons that are well known. I need not reiterate them here. We, however, support the rights and obligations of the States that are members of the ICC.

3. India strongly condemns all acts of violence committed against civilians. We believe that the right to life is one of the fundamental rights and should be the foundation of any social order. It is the obligation of all States to take appropriate measures to protect the life of their citizens, while maintaining social order. The concerned States must also bring to justice those responsible for violations of this right.

4. During the conflict in Libya there were deaths and destruction on a massive scale by parties to the conflict. In the post-conflict scenario, proliferation of weapons has emerged as a major problem posing threat to stability in Libya as well as in the larger region. The Libyan government has to confront this challenge by undertaking an inclusive political process aimed at achieving national reconciliation, peace, security and stability in the country. In this connection, we welcome the progress achieved towards establishing democracy in Libya, and commend the people and Government of Libya for holding elections to the national congress. We hope that peace, stability, and socio-economic development will soon return to Libya.

5. The international community, including the Security Council and the ICC, should fully assist the Libyan authorities in this process. This inclusive approach to national reconciliation, anchored in state sovereignty, is the only way to overcome the problems that Libya is presently facing.

6. We have noted that the Prosecutor’s comments today, and expect that she will carry out a thorough and impartial investigation of the situation in Libya in an impartial and transparent manner. The Council had referred a situation and, therefore, a report on the investigation of the situation so referred is important. All those responsible for committing alleged crimes should be held accountable. Political or other non-judicial considerations should not exonerate anybody from prosecution for the crimes committed.
7. Last, but not the least, it is also important to ensure that all actions by the ICC Prosecutor should fall strictly within the ambit of Resolution 1970, particularly paragraph 6 of the resolution that concerns the States that are not parties to the Rome Statute.

Thank you.

I join others in extending a very warm welcome to H.E. Juan Luis Gutieres, Minister for Foreign Affairs & Cooperation of Timor-Leste in the Security Council and thank him for his statement. I would also like to thank the Acting Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Timor-Leste, Mr. Finn Reske Nielsen for introducing the Secretary General’s report.

2. The visit of Security Council’s mini-Mission to Timor-Leste last week, in which India also participated, offered the Council members an opportunity to interact with the government and see first-hand the progress that the country has made towards sustainable peace and security.

3. Timor Leste has made multi-faceted progress since the establishment of United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor Leste (UNMIT) in 2006. The year 2012 has been an important milestone in the consolidation of democratic transition in Timor-Leste. This year, the country celebrated the tenth anniversary of restoration of its independence. Presidential and Parliamentary elections were also held in a calm and stable security environment. Timorese police and armed forces have conducted themselves professionally and in a responsible manner. We compliment the Policia Nacional de Timor-Leste (PNTL) for its efforts to continue to strengthen its institutional development and capacity building. The final certification of full reconstitution of the PNTL has taken place recently and this marked the end of UNPOL’s operational support to the PNTL.

4. We appreciate the resilience and determination of the Timorese people and its leadership in taking their country forward firmly on path to long-term peace, stability and development. The active engagement of all political parties in the democratic process is an encouraging indicator of their abiding commitment to democracy. We would also like to commend the UNMIT for its overall support towards this end and making the Mission a successful story.

5. As stated by Ambassador Basso Sangqu, the PR of South Africa, who led the Council’s Mission and indicated in Prime Minister Gusmão’s letter to the UNSG, there has been an unambiguous message from the Timorese people that the country should no longer remain on the Council’s agenda and UNMIT withdraws as planned by the end of this year. We are particularly pleased that there is consensus amongst all stakeholders for UNMIT to withdraw as scheduled.

6. As UNMIT draws down, it is important that the contours of the post-transition UN presence should be finalized in accordance with the wishes and priorities of the government. Timorese ownership and leadership is essential for building upon the progress achieved so far.
7. We have noted with satisfaction that the overall economic growth, including proceeds from the oil and gas sector, continues to remain robust. The Government's continued focus on infrastructure and capital development would certainly be helpful in ushering rapid socio-economic transition in the country. The international community must support the Government in its efforts towards socio-economic development, poverty eradication and strengthening of its institutions.

8. India attaches very high importance to its relations with Timor-Leste. We have sought to contribute to the country's development by providing expertise and training in areas of our competence and where we see complementarities in their application. India has extended its support to the Government of Timor Leste towards its socio-economic development and in human resources development sector. We are also partnering with the Government of Timor-Leste under the IBSA framework. India fully supports the efforts of the Timorese government to expand its bilateral and regional cooperation.

9. Before I conclude, I would like to express our appreciation for the leadership of Acting Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Timor-Leste, Mr. Finn Reske during this transition and the dedication of his team in supporting the government and people of Timor Leste.

Thank you.
I will now make a statement in my national capacity.

At the outset, I would like to welcome High Representative Valentin Inzko to the Council and thank him for his comprehensive briefing and the report on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

2. It is a matter of satisfaction that during the period of the report, there has been peace and stability in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Political developments are, however, of serious concern. There has been little progress in the country’s Euro-Atlantic integration. Negative rhetoric has adversely affected economic prospects. These issues need to be addressed by political entities within the framework established by the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

3. We commend the conduct of local elections on 7 October, and hope grass root democratic institutions will promote nation-building, inter-community harmony, and the rule of law. The joint declaration of the Foreign Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Montenegro and Serbia on cooperation to protect and promote the rights of refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons, signed earlier this year, should serve as an important confidence-building measure. Such cooperation will not only promote regional cooperation but also facilitate their common aspirations for Euro-Atlantic integration.

4. We have noted that the progress on outstanding issues for closure of the Office of the High Representative has been somewhat slow. We are, however, glad that a recent state property ruling by the BiH Constitutional Court has laid out guiding principles for the resolution of the state property issue. We also welcome the closure of the Brcko Final Award Office on 31 August.

5. Through their continued presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the EU and NATO military missions have carried out an important role in reassuring its citizens of safety and security, even when the political situation is tense. We commend the efforts of EUFOR and support the extension of its mandate.

6. As I have said in our previous meetings, Bosnia-Herzegovina is a novel experiment in building a new nation from the rubbles of civil war that the peoples of former Yugoslavia had to endure in the 1990s. It is never easy to build a multi-ethnic, multi-lingual, multi-cultural and multi-religious country. The problems that have been mentioned in the report and briefing of the High Representative are bound to be encountered on the path of building a nation inhabited by people of different faiths, ethnicities and languages. Our own experience over the last six decades has convinced us that though the path of building such a nation is long and arduous, the fruits are well worth the efforts.

7. Resolution of the problems facing the Bosnian peoples, therefore, calls for patience, determination and mutual accommodation. Unilateral actions, mutual suspicion, rhetorical statements and violation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace will only vitiate the political and social atmosphere and delay the achievement of their goals.

8. The General Framework Agreement for Peace and its implementation have ensured peace and security in Bosnia and Herzegovina over the last 17 years. Nothing should be done to undermine the Peace Agreement’s foundations or roll back reforms undertaken to implement it. We would, therefore, urge the leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina as well as the international community to persevere in spite of the problems that are encountered. We hope that the Bosnian parties will engage in the spirit of compromise and maturity to address political problems so that the Peace Agreement and its implementation are strengthened. They should also take concerted steps so that currently deteriorating economic prospects are reversed and the country returns to the path of high growth of pre-recession years.

9. In conclusion, I would like to highly commend the work being done by High Representative Inzko in assisting the people and leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina in their nation-building endeavours. We fully support his efforts.

I thank you.

Joint Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative on behalf of Chairs of UNSC Committees 1267, 1989 and 1540, during a joint debate on the briefing by Chairmen of Subsidiary Bodies of the UN Security Council on Counter-Terrorism on November 14, 2012.

Terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction continue to pose a serious threat to international peace and security. It therefore remains important to ensure close cooperation and effective coordination between the Counter-Terrorism Committee, the “Al-Qaida Sanctions Committee” and the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540 (2004).

The three Committees continue, moreover, to attach great importance to effective coordination and cooperation between their respective expert groups the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (CTED), the Monitoring Team of the Al-Qaida Sanctions Committee and the Group of Experts assisting the “1540 Committee”.

The three Committees welcome the continuing efforts of their expert groups to cooperate on outreach activities and country visits conducted within their respective mandates; enhance cooperation with international, regional and subregional organizations; increase exchange of information; participate in joint meetings; and engage in reciprocal representation, as appropriate.

I am pleased to report that cooperation between the expert groups has increased in some areas. The Committees commend this increased cooperation. While striving to enhance their cooperation in accordance with their respective mandates, the expert groups should also continue to strengthen their outreach activities.

The need to strengthen capacities remains a key concern of many States faced with emerging counter-terrorism challenges. This is particularly true in respect of the challenges posed by exploitation of technological advances by terrorists and non-state actors. This includes but is not limited to the use of the Internet as an effective communication channel and for the public outreach. In this regard, the three expert groups can play a pertinent role. The Committee’s groups of experts can play a pertinent role in advising States seeking assistance in building counter-terrorism capacity.
The three Committees welcome all efforts aimed at enhancing the visibility of United Nations counter-terrorism activities and at strengthening cooperation, coordination and coherence among United Nations entities with a view to promoting transparency and avoiding duplication. The three Committees also note the invitation extended to the Secretary-General — in General Assembly resolution 66/282 of 12 July 2012, adopted within the framework of the review of the United Nations Global Strategy — to provide Member States with greater detail on the proposal for creating a United Nations counter-terrorism coordinator. The Committees look forward to the discussions to be held on this proposal, including within their respective mandates on further improving cross-institutional coherence in United Nations counter-terrorism efforts.

Outreach and country visits

The coordinated outreach activities and country visits of the expert groups are important tools for the three Committees in facilitating full implementation of their respective mandates. These tools strengthen dialogue with Member States, help to improve understanding of the distinct, yet complementary roles of the three Committees, and assist them in the implementation of the relevant resolutions.

I am pleased to report on some areas in which cooperation between the expert groups has been increased. Since May 2012, all three expert groups were represented at over a dozen workshops and other outreach events, and more meetings were attended by two of the groups. For example, at the request of the Secretariat of the Eastern and Southern African Anti-money-laundering Group (or “ESAAMLG”), representatives of CTED and the “Al-Qaida Monitoring Team” organized a half-day workshop, on 25 August 2012, for the Chairpersons and members of the ESAAMLG Review Group for Post-Evaluation Implementation Plans. Their presentations focused on States’ obligations pursuant to the relevant Security Council resolutions. The Monitoring Team’s presentation focussed on the practicalities of implementing the Al-Qaida assets-freeze sanctions measure, and the CTED presentation focussed on the practical and operational elements of freezing pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001).

CTED and the Monitoring Team also conducted two joint visits and, in the course of their joint constructive dialogue with Member States, provided advice to two Member States concerning their respective implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions (focusing on freezing actions and, in close cooperation with UNODC, legislative drafting).

The Monitoring Team and CTED also continued to participate jointly in events hosted by non-United Nations bodies: for example, in the periodic meetings of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), during which the two expert groups notably participated actively, within the framework of their respective mandates, in the discussions on the revision of the FATF standards. All three expert groups participated, on 28 September 2012, in a high-level meeting on countering nuclear terrorism organized by the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force (CTITF) Office.

Since their acceptance (along with that of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime) as observers to the Middle East and North Africa Financial Action Task Force (MENAFATF), CTED and the Monitoring Team have begun the practice of making presentations on each other’s behalf, where possible, in order to facilitate engagement with as many partners as allowed by the available time and resources, and always bearing in mind their distinct, yet complementary roles. Several recent country visits conducted by CTED on behalf of the CTC included the participation of a representative of the Monitoring Team and, where applicable, of the “1540 Committee” Group of Experts.

Cooperation with international, regional and subregional organizations

Since May 2012, the coordinated approach to organizations agreed upon by the three expert groups continues to be enriched by the significant contributions made by CTED and Monitoring Team representatives to conferences involving a large number of international, regional and subregional organizations. Continued participation in such events enhances cooperation between and among the Security Council Committees and the participating organizations and also serves to promote full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions. The outcomes of this interaction are used by the expert groups to refine the modalities of information exchange, enhance coordination on technical assistance facilitation and explore the potential for further sub-regional cooperation.

The CTITF continues to provide a platform for enhanced cooperation by the three expert groups, not only among themselves, but also with over 30 United Nations organizations, agencies and programmes concerned with various aspects of counter-terrorism. The expert groups also participate in the Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism Initiative (I-ACT), which is co-chaired by CTED. The Monitoring Team and CTED have also assumed leading roles in other working groups: for example, CTED as co-Chair of the Working Group on Border Management relating to Counter-Terrorism and the Monitoring Team as co-Chair of the Working Group on Countering the Use of the Internet for Terrorist Purposes. The relevant expert groups have also worked proactively within the framework of the CTITF Working Group on Dialogue, Understanding and Countering the Appeal of Terrorism.

The Monitoring Team and CTED experts participate jointly in meetings of FATF-Style Regional Bodies such as the Asia/Pacific Group on Money Laundering and in the donor-group discussions held in parallel with such meetings, in order to maximize their respective efforts to facilitate delivery of technical assistance to States. This practice has also led to increased coordination in the provision of expert comments on the legislation of those bodies’ member States.

Exchange of information

Exchange of information among the expert groups is carried out on a regular basis. The three groups share information about forthcoming meetings and relevant activities with a view to coordinating activities while bearing in mind their distinct, yet complementary roles. CTED regularly shares with the other two groups the monthly reports submitted by its Executive Director to the CTC (including information on its recent missions, country visits and technical assistance activities), while the experts of the “1540 Committee” prepare information notes on the Committee’s outreach events and post them on the Committee’s website.

Joint meetings and reciprocal representation

The three expert groups continue to hold joint meetings where appropriate, whether involving the heads of each team or the expert teams, in order to prepare for country visits and relevant workshops and to exchange information on particular themes or activities in specific regions or countries. The CTITF Office continues to be invited to participate in these joint meetings.

In addition, the CTC extends invitations to the other two expert groups when arranging briefings by visiting officials from intergovernmental organizations or when organizing thematic briefings of mutual interest.

Further information concerning the activities and mandates of the three Committees and their expert groups may be found on their respective websites:
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative (in his national capacity) during a joint debate on the briefing by Chairmen of Subsidiary Bodies of the UN Security Council on Counter Terrorism on November 14, 2012.

Now, I would like to make a brief statement in my national capacity.

2. As Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee, it has been India’s constant endeavour to provide a political direction to the work of the Committee and a greater momentum to efforts in bolstering member states’ ability in confronting the scourge of terrorism.

3. The international community needs to step up its collective efforts with real cooperation among member states to confront the scourge of terrorism squarely and decisively. We need concerted action against terrorists and their sponsors, including the complete dismantling of terrorist safe havens, sanctuaries, training grounds and financial and ideological support structures. We need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism.

4. India fully support all efforts, which strengthen international and regional cooperation in counter-terrorism, and most importantly, help ensure the effective implementation of relevant Security Council resolutions, including 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) and a comprehensive and integrated implementation of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

5. We welcome the listing of the Haqqani Network by the 1988 Sanctions Committee. This Group has also targeted Indian interests in the past. The unity of the international community is critical in isolating such terror groups which threaten peace and security in our region, and other parts of the world. The Monitoring Team needs to put greater focus to examine the linkages between Al-Qaida and Taliban comprehensively and objectively, which pose a serious threat to international peace and security.

6. It is critical that all sanctions regimes established by the Security Council should ensure swift, fair and transparent procedures in their decision-making. The process of listings as well as de-listings needs to be guided by the same set of principles – fairness, credibility and transparency.

7. India has an unwavering commitment to support international efforts to prevent non-state actors and terrorists from acquiring WMDs and their means of delivery. The international community must continue to strengthen its efforts to eliminate the risks relating to sensitive materials and technologies falling into the hands of terrorists and non-state actors. The international response to the threat needs to be national as well as multilateral and global.

8. India believes that meeting new proliferation challenges requires fresh approaches for evolving a more cooperative and consensual international security order that effectively addresses genuine proliferation concerns. As announced by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the Seoul Nuclear Security Summit in March this year, India will be hosting a 1540 Committee workshop on ‘Building New Synergies on Nuclear Security’ from 30 November-1 December, 2012. In this workshop, India intends to bring together important stakeholders for a brainstorming session for building synergies that would contribute to the overall objectives of nuclear security.

9. The success in the fight against terrorism goes hand-in-hand with progress in strengthening counter-terrorism cooperation and exchange of information at the international, regional and sub-regional level. Our collective endeavour should be to enhance coherence and synergy among different counter terrorism structures that are dealing with the issue of terrorism at the UN. The 1267/1989 Committee, the 1373 Committee, and the 1540 Committee of the Security Council must continue to further strengthen their ongoing efforts in the fight against terrorism.

I would like to make a second statement on behalf of the Counter-Terrorism Committee.

I have had the honour to chair the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001) since the beginning of 2011. It gives me great pleasure to brief the Security Council on the work of the Committee since the previous briefing, held in May this year.

The Committee continues to be guided in its work by the relevant Security Council resolutions, especially resolutions 1373 (2001), 1624 (2005) and 1963 (2010), and continues to play a critical role in promoting and facilitating their implementation.

As mentioned in this year’s Programme of Work, the Committee is organizing a special meeting, with Member States and relevant international and regional organizations on “Preventing and Suppressing Terrorist Financing” which will be held on 20 November at United Nations Headquarters in New York. Previous special meetings of the Committee, focusing on various major counter-terrorism-related themes, have been held in New York, Washington, D.C., Vienna, Almaty, Nairobi and Strasbourg.

This year’s special meeting will focus on raising Member States’ awareness of the terrorist financing threat; drawing attention to the related best practices (including the revised FATF Recommendations) and their relevance to the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001); discussion of experiences and effective measures in addressing the related challenges; and helping to ensure that combating terrorist financing remains a priority for Member States. The speakers will include representatives of invited Member States and international, regional and sub-regional organizations. I encourage Member States to actively participate in this meeting.

Furthermore, as part of its outreach efforts, the Committee will also explore the possibility of collaboration with the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).

In June this year, the Committee conducted an interim review of CTED, in accordance with resolution 1963 (2010), which stipulated that the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate would continue to operate as a special political mission under the policy guidance of the Counter-Terrorism Committee for the period ending 31 December 2013.
The Committee, through CTED, has also been constantly improving its analytical tools to monitor and assess the progress in implementation of resolutions 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) around the world. Having developed Preliminary Implementation Assessments of the entire UN membership and achieving considerable progress in stocktaking, the Committee has agreed to revised assessment tools including the Overview of Implementation Assessment (OIA) and the Details of Implementation Survey (DIS). These tools are designed to further enhance thoroughness, consistency, transparency and even-handedness in the Committee's stocktaking process with a view to identifying States' strengths and challenges in countering terrorism worldwide.

The Committee continues to focus on region-specific discussions and on issues identified in the 2011 Global Survey (S/2009/620, annex). The Committee also continues to organize and participate in discussions and workshops on thematic issues. Some of the major thematic issues considered by the Committee during the last six months include the challenges in adopting and implementing counter-terrorism measures for effective cross-border control of SALW, the FATF revised recommendations and the role of central authorities in enhancing international counter-terrorism cooperation.

CTED has also been active in conducting a number of workshops on specific topics, aimed at a specific regional audience. Important workshops organized during this period include the Practitioners Seminar - The role of the Prosecutor on Terrorist Cases (Algiers, 5-7 June 2012), the regional seminar for Southeast Asian States on international joint investigations (Kuala Lumpur, 26-28 June 2012), the workshop for Member States of the Maghreb and the Sahel on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1624 (Rabat, 17-19 July 2012), the South-East Europe workshop on countering violent extremism (Istanbul, 1-2 October 2012), the first expert meeting on the establishment of an operational freezing mechanism (Amsterdam, 22-24 October 2012) and the 4th regional workshop on preventing abuse of non profit sector (Buenos Aires, 14-16 November 2012).

In addition, the Committee and CTED continue to enhance their ongoing dialogue with Member States, donors and beneficiaries on the facilitation of technical assistance for capacity-building, at the national and subregional levels. Since the last briefing to the Security Council, CTED on behalf of the Committee has conducted eight assessment missions to Member States: Argentina, Canada, Djibouti, Finland, Norway, the Russian Federation, Sweden, and Uruguay.

I would like to emphasize that the Committee and CTED have continued, and will continue to pay close attention to the question of respect for human rights and the rule of law in the counter-terrorism measures taken by States, in accordance with the relevant mandates conferred by the Security Council.
The Committee and CTED continue to work closely with the relevant Working Groups of the CTITF, United Nations Centre for Counter-Terrorism and the Global Counter-Terrorism Forum in order to support, coordinate and complement each other's counter-terrorism endeavours.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, the Committee will continue to play a critical role in the global fight against terrorism, and will strive to do so in a more strategic and transparent manner so that it can more effectively contribute to the global counter-terrorism effort within the scope of its mandate.

I should like to conclude by expressing my sincere appreciation to Mr. Mike Smith, Executive Director of CTED, and to his team, for their excellent work on the Committee’s behalf, and to thank the Secretariat for its continued support.
Let me begin by thanking Deputy Secretary General Jan Eliasson for his briefing on piracy and armed robbery at sea as well as on the annual report of the Secretary General on piracy off the coast of Somalia.

2. Even though the problem of piracy is as old as the history of maritime navigation, the international community is today facing it in unprecedented and growing dimensions. Starting off from the coast of Somalia, this threat now looms over an area of more than 2.8 million square miles, posing the patrolling naval forces with a formidable task.

3. Piracy is not only a threat to the freedom of maritime navigation, it is causing destabilizing effects on global and regional trade and security. The negative humanitarian impact of this threat on seafarers who are the lifeline of maritime shipping can no longer be ignored.

4. The Secretary General’s successive reports present an alarming picture. Despite increased naval presence, pirate attacks off the coast of Somalia have continued, with little change in the level of violence employed by the pirates against seafarers and others. As of 22 August 2012, the Somali pirates still held 11 ships and 188 hostages, including 43 Indian seafarers. The problem is also intensifying in the Gulf of Guinea.

5. Given the adverse impact of acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea has on maritime trade, seafarers and security, India attaches high priority to combating piracy, including in waters off the coast of Somalia and the Gulf of Guinea. India has actively supported international efforts at the operational level, including through the participation in anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since 2008 and has also deployed its ships in the Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. Operations by the Indian Navy have helped neutralize several attempts of piracy.

6. While we will continue with counter-piracy operations, there is also an urgent need for the international community to address the serious problem of seafarers being taken as hostages and consequent humanitarian problems faced by them and their families. It requires active cooperation in the sharing of information, evidence and intelligence in the investigation, prosecution and sentencing of suspected pirates as well as in efforts to achieve an early release of seafarers that are held hostage by pirates.

7. Though naval ships deployed in the Gulf of Aden pursuant to the establishment of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia (CGPCS) have successfully thwarted several piracy attempts and provided security escorts to merchant marine in these waters, the growing scope and expanding coverage of the problem indicates that the naval operations alone may not be sufficient, and there is a need to adopt a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy, that includes efforts to deter pirates and the effective prosecution of pirates.

8. Any effort for prosecution and imprisonment of pirates cannot succeed without the effective involvement of the States in the region. Capacity building not only of Somalia but also of other States in the region is an essential component of this strategy. We commend the efforts of UNPOS, UNODC and UNDP in this regard, and urge them to continue their efforts. Their assistance to the States in the region should focus on four main areas - legal reforms to criminalize piracy, capacity building for prosecution and trial of piracy cases, effective law enforcement, and improvement of prison infrastructure in Somalia and States in the region.

9. India is of the firm view that steps to disrupt land-based pirate activities and the associated financial flows are absolutely necessary in a multi-dimensional counter-piracy approach. Therefore, it is essential to investigate and prosecute individuals and networks that provide the leadership, support and financial flows for the sustenance of piracy. This would require a broader criminal legislation, covering crimes of extortion, kidnapping, conspiracy, money laundering and financing of pirate activities, as also active collaboration and sharing of information and intelligence between private sector, States and relevant international organizations.

10. It should also be kept in mind that combating maritime piracy is an important issue that is intrinsically linked with the security situation in Somalia and in the States around the Gulf of Guinea. We hope that the new Government of Somalia will fully implement the counter-piracy measures delineated in the roadmap and will be supported by the UN and the international community. We also encourage States in the Gulf of Guinea and the region to continue taking all collaborative efforts, including through regional organizations, in combating piracy and armed robbery in the Gulf of Guinea.

11. In conclusion, we would like to note that the increased presence of international and national naval forces have led to varying success rates of piracy attempts in different areas. For example, action by the Indian navy has ensured that there has been no successful act of piracy in the area just off the western coast of India for over a year. Such trends require that the High Risk Area for piracy should be regularly reviewed in a transparent manner based on confirmed incidents of piracy. This is an absolute necessity for coastal states in the region and should be given due priority.

12. In addition, we fully endorse the conclusion of the Deputy Secretary General that three challenges require our immediate attention – better information sharing and trust building among countries and agencies involved in counter piracy efforts; stronger capacity to prosecute piracy-related cases; and the establishment of a framework governing the use of privately contracted armed security personnel on board vessels to ensure appropriate regulation and accountability. We look forward to the Secretary General’s next report, including on measures for the implementation of the Presidential Statement that the Council will adopt today.

Thank you.
I shall now make a statement in my capacity as the representative of India.

2. At the outset, I would like to thank Ambassador Jose Filipe Moraes Cabral, Permanent Representative of Portugal, and his delegation for co-authoring the concept note for today’s open debate. I would also like to put on record our deep appreciation of Ambassador Cabral’s stewardship of the Informal Working Group on Documentation and Procedural Questions during the year 2012. His active involvement and guidance has enabled the Working Group to consider several issues related to the Council’s working methods in order to promote transparency and greater involvement of elected members in Council’s work.

3. The Security Council is mandated by the UN Charter with the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. What and how the Council does to discharge its responsibility is, thus, of interest to the entire international community, not only to Council members, let alone the permanent members.

4. Over the years, there has been growing realization that the Council’s composition, rooted in the situation obtaining in 1945, as well as its Working Methods are both divorced from contemporary reality of international relations. These are exemplified by the fact that the Council has shown little interest in consulting with those affected most by its decisions and in adopting transparent and inclusive rules of procedures that remain ‘provisional’ even after the Council’s existence for six and a half decades. The Council has also not acted to harness the capabilities of the wider UN membership. Its all too evident eagerness to apply methods of coercion under Chapter VII to the neglect of provisions under Chapters VI and VIII has proved to be counter-productive in resolving several crises, even while it has sought to expand the definition of peace and security with a view to encroaching upon the Charter-mandated roles of other UN organs.

5. Let me briefly share India’s perspective on how the Security Council could better its performance. First, the permanent members of the Security Council must recognize, not only individually but also collectively, that the Council must be reformed to make it reflect the contemporary realities of the international system. Second, the international community as a whole must be cognizant that enlarging the Security Council to reflect contemporary geopolitical realities would improve its representative character and grant greater legitimacy and credibility to its decisions. And third, there is need for real improvement in its working methods to enhance the Council’s effectiveness and efficiency.
believe that cosmetic changes to working methods alone will not help. Real improvements need change in both process and approach, which requires reform of the composition of the Council.

6. Insofar as the working methods of the Security Council are concerned, the first and foremost necessity is to make them transparent and inclusive. Access to documentation and information is an issue of particular concern, and the tendency of holding closed meetings that have no records should be curbed.

7. During the last two years, we have strongly supported efforts in the Informal Working Group aimed at improvements in the Council's working methods. Some specific points include the following:

One, the Council should amend its procedures so that items do not remain on its agenda permanently.

Two, the reporting cycle should be practical and result-oriented so that issues do not come for consideration so routinely as to bog down the limited time that the Council has at its disposal.

Three, the mandate cycle should be streamlined to spread work throughout the year.

Four, Articles 31 and 32 of the Charter must be fully implemented, by consulting with non-Security Council members on a regular basis, especially members with a special interest in the substantive matter under consideration by the Council.

Five, ‘penholders’ should allow greater and systematic participation of elected members as ‘co-penholders’.

Six, non-members should be given systematic access to subsidiary bodies of the UNSC, including the right to participate.

Seven, participation of Troop and Police Contributing Countries in decision making concerning peacekeeping operations must cover the establishment, conduct, review and termination of peacekeeping operations, including the extension and change of mandates, as well as for specific operational issues.

Eight, countries having specific interest in a particular agenda-item must be consulted before an outcome document on that item is adopted.

Nine, the Council should concentrate its time and efforts on dealing with issues concerning its primary responsibility concerning international peace and security as mandated by the UN Charter, rather than encroaching upon the mandate of the General Assembly.

Ten, before mandating measures under Chapter VII of the Charter, the Council should first make serious efforts for pacific settlements of disputes through measures under Chapter VI. In this connection, the Council must also improve its cooperation with regional organizations, particularly with the African Union, since a large volume of the Council's work concern the African continent. Such cooperation must be serious and include providing assistance for the AU’s capacity building as per their requirement, not only when some permanent members deem it in their interest.

8. It is our expectation that these ideas will be pursued by Council members in the coming months so that views expressed by the wider UN member-states find resonance in the Council's work and working methods.

9. In conclusion, let me reiterate India's considered view that genuine reform in the working methods of the Security Council requires a comprehensive reform in the membership of the Council, with expansion in both permanent and non-permanent categories, not only improvement in its working procedures. This is essential both for the credibility and continued confidence of the international community in this institution.

Thank you.

I will now make a statement in my national capacity.

Let me at the outset thank SRSG Farid Zarif for his briefing on the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK). I would also like to thank H.E. Mr. Ivan Mrkic, Foreign Minister of Serbia, and Mr. Enver Hoxhaj for their statements.

2. There have been several positive developments during the reporting period. Technical discussions on the implementation of agreement reached so far in the EU-facilitated dialogue resulted in Serbia’s endorsement of the technical protocol on the implementation of the agreement on the joint management of crossings. Serbia also engaged with the EU to help clarify the ambiguity concerning Kosovo’s participation in regional fora. We welcome these developments, and hope that the sides will soon resume substantive engagement within the framework of the EU-facilitated dialogue to resolve the contentious issues.

3. Despite the relative calm that prevailed during the reporting period, there has not been substantial change in the situation with regard to minority communities. Recurring security incidents affecting them need to be urgently addressed in order to promote inter-community harmony and facilitate their return. UNMIK should continue, together with the other international presences, to encourage the Kosovo authorities to address the problems adversely affecting minority communities and their cultural and religious sites. In this connection, UNMIK’s continued support for UNESCO remains critical.

4. The issue of missing persons is an important humanitarian issue and we hope that with direct support and encouragement by UNMIK to the ICRC it will be possible to make further progress on this issue.

5. We have taken note of UNMIK’s continued monitoring of the ongoing ‘Medicus’ human organ trafficking trial before the District Court of Pristina. The trial should take place in a free, fair and transparent manner, and the international presences in Kosovo led by UNMIK should render full assistance to the process.

6. In conclusion, I would like to express appreciation that UNMIK has continued to implement its mandate in an impartial and status neutral manner and facilitated cooperation between Pristina and Belgrade, the communities in Kosovo, KFOR, EULEX and the OSCE. We commend and support SRSG Zarif and UNMIK for their contribution towards the improvement in the situation in northern Kosovo and for the services the Mission is rendering in areas that betters the daily lives of all Kosovars. The Mission should continue to implement its mandate in accordance with Security Council Resolution 1244 and other relevant decisions. Other agencies in Kosovo – OSCE, KFOR, EULEX, etc. – should also continue to cooperate and coordinate with UNMIK in accordance with their respective mandates.

I thank you.
I shall now make a statement in my national capacity

At the outset, I would like to thank the Deputy Secretary General for his presence and remarks at this important Open Debate under the Agenda Item of Women and Peace and Security.

The fact that more than 50 countries have expressed their interest to speak in today's debate reflects the importance and resonance of this issue.

I would also like to thank the Under Secretary General and Executive Director of UN Women Madame Michelle Bachelet and DPKO USG Herve Ladsous for their detailed briefing.

I also thank Ms. Bineta Diop, President of Femmes Africa Solidarite, for sharing their insights and other Council Members for their contribution to this debate.

Resolution 1325 highlighted the impact of armed conflict on women and the need for effective institutional arrangements to guarantee their protection and full participation in peace processes.

India has consistently held that greater participation of women in areas of conflict resolution, peace negotiations, peacekeeping and post-conflict reconstruction is the sine qua non for lasting peace and security.

India welcomes the report of the Secretary General and its call for enhanced participation, representation and involvement of women in prevention and resolution of armed conflict and in peacebuilding, as well as a stronger commitment to address challenges to such engagement of women at all levels.

In the same vein, let me add here that the three pillars of lasting peace, namely, economic recovery, social cohesion and political legitimacy, cannot be achieved without the active engagement of women.

It is more than a decade now since resolution 1325 was adopted. Results remain mixed with important gaps remaining in fully realizing its provisions. India attaches high importance to ensuring concrete action in this area. The Secretary General's report has identified areas where further specific actions can be taken.

India firmly believes that the national governments have the primary responsibility for taking requisite action in developing national strategies and implementing them in pursuance of resolution 1325. The UN needs to support and supplement, as appropriate, the efforts of the national government in this regard. We also believe that civil society, including women organizations, is a valued partner in such efforts.
India believes that there are clearly no ‘off-the shelf’ remedies or ‘manuals’ that can be applied to armed conflict and post-conflict situations. Approach to each conflict situation will need to take into the account the specificities of that situation.

As the concerned country moves from the armed conflict phase to the conflict resolution and post-conflict phase, there is a need to assist it, as required, in the key task of strengthening government institutions and integrating the gender perspective in government policies in areas such as security, justice, governance, public administration, economic recovery, basic services, etc.

Capacity building is thus essential for ensuring better governance and stabilization of post-conflict situations. The UN should focus its efforts in this area.

We, therefore, support UN efforts to deploy greater number of women protection advisors and gender advisors in its Missions. It is necessary to ensure adequate geographical representation and experience relevant for deployment areas in selection of such advisors.

UN field missions and country teams must have greater coherence and coordination to ensure optimal utilization of available gender expertise. There is also the need to allocate additional resources for UN missions to fully implement their mandates.

Equally pertinent is the role played by civil society in internalizing the provisions of resolution 1325 while addressing issues in various conflict zones. This should, in particular, encourage local communities to step forward and assume their rightful role in conflict resolution.

Their feedback and inputs on specific needs and requirements of women may be appropriately used in developing and implementing appropriate intervention strategies.

The promotion and protection of the human rights of women and girls in armed conflict continue to pose a pressing challenge. There should be zero tolerance for gender-based violence. All cases of gender-based violence must be promptly investigated and their perpetrators prosecuted.

We agree with those who call for increased deployment of female military and police personnel in United Nations peacekeeping operations, and for appropriate training to enable them to effectively discharge their responsibilities.

India is the largest troop contributing country in UN history. India was the first country to deploy a full female peacekeeping unit of 100 personnel in Liberia in 2007. We have offered to contribute more such units.

We are very proud of the exemplary record of our peacekeepers, both men and women in the protection of women, children, and the weak in conflict situations.
In conclusion, let me reaffirm India’s commitment to positively contribute to UN efforts in the area of women and peace and security. We also see the civil society and local communities as valued partners in this endeavour.

Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to congratulate you and your delegation on assuming the Presidency of the Security Council for the month of December. I wish you great success in your stewardship of the Council and assure you of my delegation’s full support and cooperation. I would also like to thank the colleagues for their appreciation of India’s presidency last month.

2. I thank Special Adviser Jamal Benomar for his comprehensive briefing on recent developments in Yemen, including Secretary General’s recent visit to Sana’a to mark the anniversary of the signing of the GCC brokered agreement. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Yemen for his valuable statement.

3. Nearly a year back when the Security Council adopted resolution 2014, Yemen was facing a serious situation on the political, security, and humanitarian fronts. On the one hand, Yemeni people’s aspirations for democratic transformation and stable and secure future were thwarted due to divisions among the political class. On the other, extremists and terrorist groups, some linked with the Al Qaeda, were expanding their presence in various parts of the country, particularly in the south. Clashes among various factions of the military led to the death of several hundred Yemenis.

4. By virtue of the unanimous support of the international community, anchored in the Security Council, the efforts of the GCC succeeded in the signing of an agreement between the main Yemeni parties. It is a great tribute to the Yemeni people and their leadership that the country is making steady progress in the implementation of the transition agreement.

5. We commend President Hadi, whose leadership of the transition process has made immense contribution in turning the situation of despair into the hope of a stable, secure, democratic and prosperous Yemen. We also would like to congratulate Yemeni people for their determination to resolve current challenges through inclusive Yemeni-led political processes. India stands by the people and Government of Yemen in their journey towards a stable, secure, prosperous, and democratic future.

6. Despite significant progress made during the last one year, Yemen continues to face multiple political, security, economic and humanitarian challenges. The political situation remains delicate. The political parties and regional stakeholders are yet to overcome differences over important issues, including transitional justice and reconciliation. The fragility of the situation has compounded the humanitarian situation affecting nearly 10 million Yemenis.

7. Al Qaeda and affiliated militant groups continue to carry out attacks against government institutions and officials. The tribal militias also continue hostilities in the southern and northern parts of Yemen. We strongly condemn all terrorist acts and violence in Yemen, and urge all groups to lay down their arms and join the political process to address their grievances. We also fully support Yemen’s political independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. We call upon the international community to continue its assistance to the Government of Yemen in its fight against terrorist groups and in its efforts to stabilize the security situation.

8. We have noted that the Yemeni government has taken several important initiatives to restructure the armed forces, appoint a new electoral commission, and resume economic activities. The preparatory committee for the National Dialogue Conference is engaged in a serious and inclusive dialogue among all stakeholders, and is in its final stages of work. Political parties are actively engaged in dialogue to resolve differences over draft law on Transitional Justice and National Reconciliation. We hope that the National Dialogue Conference will ensure the involvement of all stakeholders, including youth and women groups, al Houthis, the southern movement, and civil society. We also hope that these initiatives will pave the way for holding the referendum on the constitution in 2013 and elections in the beginning of 2014 as envisaged in the transition agreement.

9. India has a long and historical relationship with Yemen. We have partnered with Yemen in humanitarian, human resources development and capacity building areas. In addition to its engagement under the Friends of Yemen Group, India would be happy to look at specific proposals for cooperation from Government of Yemen, particularly in the field of training, capacity building, entrepreneurship development, small and medium enterprises, education and information technology within the bilateral cooperation arrangements. India has also provided consignment of rice worth of US $ 2 million and would be sending very soon, another consignment of wheat worth the same amount. In addition, India would also be supplying medicines worth US $ 2 million to Yemen.

10. India also stands ready to offer concessional Lines of Credit (LOCs) for projects and programmes considered urgent and necessary by Yemen under the umbrella of credit lines for the LDCs. The Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC) provides another framework for India’s cooperation with Yemen.

11. In conclusion, let me reiterate that the continuing support of the international community is crucial to Yemen as it consolidates the gains that have been made during the last year. We would like to wish the friendly people of Yemen continued progress, peace and prosperity, and reassure them of India’s support as the country traverses through a crucial phase in its history.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me at the outset thank Judge Meron and Judge Joensen for their briefings and their assessment on the work of the two Tribunals and the Residual Mechanism. We also appreciate the briefings given by the Prosecutors of the two Tribunals. I would also like to thank Ambassador Gert Rosenthal and the delegation of Guatemala for their contribution as the Chair of the Council’s Informal Working Group on International Tribunals.

2. Mr. President, we welcome the progress made by the two Tribunals in expediting their work. We are reassured by the assessment of Judge Meron and Judge Joensen that the preparations for the commencement and the functioning of the Residual Mechanism are on track. We have noted that the Arusha Branch of the Residual Mechanism commenced its work from 1 July 2012, and hope that The Hague Branch of the Residual Mechanism will begin its work on 1 July 2013, as scheduled.

3. We appreciate that Judge Meron has undertaken a variety of reforms to improve the functioning of various sections of the Tribunal. As a result, all trials will be completed by 2013 except a few which came before it later.

4. We are happy to note that the ICTR has completed work at the trial level with respect to 92 of 93 accused persons, and the one remaining trial judgement will be delivered before the end of 2012. While appellate proceedings have been concluded in respect of 44 persons, the remaining appeals are projected to be completed by the end of 2014.

5. We also commend the efforts of the two Prosecutors for undertaking outreach initiatives, including training, aimed at strengthening the capacity of national systems to handle referred cases effectively.

6. We have listened carefully to the concerns raised by the Presidents of the two Tribunals in relation to their ability to keep pace with their work while adhering to expected timelines. The Judges have pointed out that trials and appeals continue to be affected by staffing shortages and the loss of highly efficient staff members. We share the concerns expressed by the Judges, especially on the need for retaining adequate and experienced staff.

7. Mr. President, careful consideration should be given to the suggestions made by the Judges on how to address these challenges. Any functional, operational or institutional issue in the implementation of the Completion Strategy or the Residual Mechanism should be addressed by the Council in consultation with the Council's Informal Working Group on International Tribunals.

8. The Judges have also raised the issue concerning the relocation of acquitted persons and those who have already served their sentences. Some of them are living in safe homes in Arusha for a long time. This is an important humanitarian issue and needs to be resolved soon.

9. Mr. President, we welcome the cooperation extended by all States concerned with the Tribunals, which is vital to ensure the completion of the mandates of the Tribunals as well as for the successful implementation of the Completion Strategy and Residual Mechanism. We hope that the remaining three fugitives indicted by the ICTR would be located soon and surrendered to the Residual Mechanism to stand trial.

10. The two Tribunals should continue to implement their mandate strictly in accordance with the principles of justice, impartiality and fairness. There should be no political consideration in their work.

11. In conclusion, Mr. President, while we believe that the support of the Security Council to the two Tribunals is crucial at this critical juncture, we urge both Tribunals to take all necessary measures to keep the trial and appeal schedules on track. In this connection, we support the extension of the tenure of some of the judges as requested by the Presidents of the two Tribunals. This will pave the way for the completion of trials and appeals of the remaining accused and a smooth transition to an efficient Residual Mechanism.

I thank you.
Thank you Mr. President.

The Security Council Committee pursuant to resolutions 751 (1992) and 1907 (2009) is the oldest Sanctions Committee among Council's subsidiary bodies, and completed two decades of its existence.

2. This Sanctions Committee is unique in that it is mandated to cover two countries in the Horn of Africa, namely Somalia and Eritrea. Resolution 751, adopted in 1992, imposed arms embargo on Somalia and established a Sanctions Committee to oversee its implementation. The mandate of the Committee has since been expanding to include new provisions of arms embargo, assets freeze and travel ban through resolution 1844 (2008).

3. In 2010, the Committee was mandated by resolution 1916 to oversee the provisions connected with the delivery of humanitarian assistance to Somalia. The resolution 2026 also imposed a ban on exports of charcoal and mandated the Committee to monitor its implementation.

4. With respect to Eritrea, the Committee is mandated to oversee the implementation of targeted measures imposed by resolution 1907 in 2009. The mandate was expanded to include new provisions of resolution 2023 adopted in 2011.

5. Given this background, the work of the Committee is complex in terms of mandate as well as politically sensitive. During my two years as the Chairman, the Sanctions Committee pursued its mandate with full cooperation of the Committee member.

6. The Committee, however, continues to face significant challenges in overseeing the sanctions regimes of both Somalia and Eritrea. These include issues related to technical violations of the arms embargo, objections by humanitarian partners to the reporting requirement, questions about the working of the Monitoring Group, and in some cases, non-cooperation by member states with the Monitoring Group.

7. In view of these issues, it was my sincere effort to promote transparency and equity in Committee's decision making. I convened regular meetings with the Special Representative for Somalia, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, representatives from the World Food Programme and UNICEF. I also encouraged Somalia, Eritrea and interested member-states of IGAD to participate in Committee meetings, to interact with the members and to express their views over the monitoring of the sanctions regime. My effort was always towards building consensus and utmost transparency.

8. Both in 2011 and this year, the Sanctions Committee invited Somalia and Eritrea to interact with the Committee immediately after the submission of the Final Reports by the Monitoring Group. Also, I encouraged free and frank discussions in the Committee over the reports and recommendations of the Monitoring Group. I held several meetings with the member-states including Permanent Representatives of Somalia and Eritrea. In these meetings, I emphasized on the implementation of sanctions regime and cooperation with the Sanctions Committee.

9. During the last two years, the Committee met 18 times in informal consultations. It approved 25 requests for exemptions to the arms embargo pursuant to paragraph 3 of resolution 1356 (2001) and 26 requests for exemptions to the arms embargo pursuant to paragraph 11 (b) of resolution 1772 (2007). It approved two travel ban exemptions to the same person in 2012. I must also state here that the work of the Committee has increased exponentially in comparison to the previous two years.

10. Mr. President, during the course of the last two years, there has been remarkable progress in the process of stabilization of political, security and humanitarian situations in Somalia. This has created a historic opportunity that must be seized for the full restoration of peace, security and stability in Somalia. In addition, the overall political and security situation in the Horn of Africa continues to improve with the increasing cooperation and reconciliation among member-states.

11. In this context, the next Chairman of the Sanctions Committee on Somalia and Eritrea would need to continue the Committee’s engagement with not only Somalia and Eritrea but also other states in the region. In the short term, the Committee will also have to take a view on the issue of the large quantity of charcoal found in Kismayo and surrounding areas. I am convening a meeting of the Sanctions Committee shortly to discuss the issue with the Monitoring Group.

12. Mr. President, it is my considered view that sanctions should be a measure of the last resort by the Security Council and must fully comply with the provisions of the UN Charter. Sanction regimes of the Security Council must not be an end in themselves, but instruments for the promotion and maintenance of peace and security in the region. In their implementation, the sanction regimes must ensure that they have the intended impact and do not exacerbate the suffering of the population. As such, it is necessary to keep these regimes under constant review and adjust the measures to suit the objective and also keep pace with the changing situation on the ground in the countries concerned.
13. In view of the developments in Somalia during the last year, I think time has come for this Council to review the sanctions regime in the Horn of Africa. This should be done taking into consideration the views expressed by the regional states as well as the African Union.

14. In conclusion, Mr. President, on my personal behalf and also on behalf of my delegation, I would like to express our sincere appreciation to all colleagues in the Security Council for reposing faith in my Chairmanship of the Somalia-Eritrea Sanctions Committee for last two years. I would also like to thank all members of the Committee, their experts, and the Secretariat for their valuable support, especially to the Secretary of the Committee and his team.

I thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President,

Let me at the outset, welcome you to the Security Council, and congratulate the delegation of Morocco for arranging today’s meeting. Your personal presence here, Excellency, and that of other dignitaries clearly underscore the importance of the evolving situation in the Sahel region for peace and security in the region.

2. I would also like to thank Secretary General Ban Ki Moon and Special Envoy Romano Prodi for their briefings. We hope that today’s deliberations will help the United Nations in addressing the multifaceted crisis in the Sahel in an integrated and comprehensive manner, as has been mentioned in the useful concept note prepared by your delegation.

3. Mr. President, the Sahel region has long faced several challenges in the political, economic and humanitarian spheres. Many countries in the region are also confronted with governance issues due to the absence of adequate institutional capacity. Over the past year, the situation has aggravated due to the crisis in the neighborhood, as is most acutely shown by the developments in Mali. The proliferation of weapons, activities of rebel and terrorist groups, and transnational organized crimes, including illicit drug trafficking, have taken a heavy toll on the region.

4. Apart from the political and security problems, the humanitarian situation in the region has also worsened due to extreme climatic conditions and insufficient rainfalls that have negatively affected the agricultural harvest. More than 18 million people in the region are suffering from severe food and nutrition crises this year.

5. Extremist and terrorist groups have taken advantage of the adverse political, security and humanitarian situations, and are consolidating their position, particularly in the northern Mali. These groups have weakened the State institutions, indulged in serious human rights violations, and damaged and destroyed many sites of cultural, historic and religious significance. Activities of Al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM), Ansar Dine and Boko Haram in the northern Mali has turned the area into a regional hub of terrorist groups. Several countries in the region are seriously threatened by their activities. More than 400,000 have been displaced by the fighting in the northern Mali.

6. Clearly, the time has come for the international community to seriously address the multiple crises in the Sahel and support the initiatives of regional and sub-regional organizations. Given the complexity of challenges facing the region, the response requires a holistic approach. The United Nations should play the leading role in the process, and we appreciate the Secretary General's initiatives like the High Level Meeting on the Sahel in September this year and the appointment of the Special Envoy. We look forward to the Secretary General's report on an integrated strategy for the Sahel, as requested by the Security Council. We think that the strategy should be developed with the full involvement of the countries in the Sahel and the regional and sub-regional organizations, such as the African Union, ECOWAS, CENSAD, and the Arab Maghreb Union.

7. In the immediate term, the priority should be the stabilization of the security situation. This requires dealing with the threats of secessionist, extremist and Al Qaida-linked terrorist groups. Political dialogue should be pursued with those willing to renounce terrorism and lay down arms. A secure environment will also facilitate the implementation of programmes for national reconciliation and delivery of humanitarian assistance.

8. We, therefore, support an expeditious response from the Security Council to the request of ECOWAS and the AU for the deployment of an African-led International Support Mission in Mali (AFISMA). The deployment of AFISMA should be in parallel to an inclusive political process led by the Malian authorities to address the legitimate grievances of the people in the northern Mali. We also urge the international community to redouble its efforts to meet the challenges of food insecurity in the northern Mali and provide adequate resources to the humanitarian agencies working in the region.

9. Given the expanding activities of terrorist networks and armed groups in the region, the United Nations should also assist the affected countries in strengthening the capacities of security agencies and in enhancing cooperation at the regional level towards more effective border control, combating illicit trafficking in arms and drugs and organized crime and terrorism.

10. Mr. President, the implementation of all strategies should give primacy to national ownership by capacity building of national institutions, and respect the sovereignty, independence, unity and territorial integrity of the countries concerned. Apart from the provision of resources, there should be better integration and coordination among the UN and other agencies on the ground to ensure effective implementation of the strategy.

11. In conclusion, Mr. President, the renewed attention of the international community on the Sahel is a welcome development. We expect this attention to translate into concrete action on the ground to address the challenges. India, on its part, remains committed to partner with the countries in the region, the UN, the AU and other organizations in the implementation of an UN-led integrated strategy for the Sahel.

I thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me at the outset thank you, Mr. President, and the delegation of Morocco for organizing this briefing today on UN peacekeeping operations, a subject that is of great interest to my country. My thanks are due also to Under Secretaries General Mr. Herve Ladsous and Ms. Ameerah Haq for their detailed briefings.

Mr. President,

Today’s debate reflects the enduring relevance of UN peacekeeping operations in fulfilling the Charter obligations towards the maintenance of international peace and security. Peacekeeping has not only withstood the test of time for over six decades now, but has, in fact, expanded its mandate and reach.

India has partnered with the United Nations in peacekeeping operations since its very inception in the 1950s. Over 100,000 Indian soldiers have served in over 40 peacekeeping missions with distinction. Even today India is one of the largest contributors to these missions, and we remain committed to this global enterprise.

Mr. President,

The nature of conflict has changed significantly over the past few decades, and so has the mandate of peacekeeping missions. It is no longer restricted to keeping peace between warring parties, but includes peacebuilding and nation building tasks.

Unfortunately, resource allocation has failed to keep pace with the mandate expansion, and peacekeeping missions are called upon to do more and more with less and less. It is, therefore, not surprising that the past few years have been operationally challenging for peacekeeping. An unusually large number of peacekeepers have lost their lives in the service of peace mandates, and the missions are overstretched due to shortage of personnel and equipment. Our briefers have mentioned some of these challenges.

Mr. President,

During our two years on the Security Council, we have seen incessant efforts to expand mandates of peacekeeping missions without any concrete measure to bridge the mandate-resource gap that should be the real cause of concern to us. The concept of inter-mission cooperation is promoted not to increase the effectiveness of peacekeeping missions, but to cut down the resources available to individual peacekeeping missions. Cross borrowing of equipment across missions in recent times is a part of this trend.
Mr. President,

My delegation agrees that if there are several missions deployed in a region, cooperation among neighbouring missions, including through exchange of information, coordinated strategies for cross-border illicit trafficking of weapons, drugs and combatants, integrated approaches to disarmament, demobilization and rehabilitation etc. can enhance their effectiveness. Similarly, the adoption of regional and sub-regional strategies can help in the delivery of humanitarian aid.

Mr. President,

As the Council has already been doing, resource management strategies with a cross-border perspective in crisis situations can be continued. Management of weapons collected from demobilized combatants could also be conducted better in regional settings. These measures, however, need to be crafted in consultation with the mission leaderships and host countries; they cannot be imposed from headquarters.

However, an overly resource-centric orientation of inter-mission cooperation will diminish its usefulness. Headquarters-driven sharing of critical mission assets will also compromise the ability of field commanders for mandate delivery. Moreover, the implementation of intermission cooperation is faced with substantial legal, political, and financial challenges.

First, the collective consent of host-nations in a disturbed neighborhood is a challenging prospect with implications for the overall peace process. Second, the transfer of troops and equipment across missions would need to address financial issues since budgetary allocations are mission-specific. Third, such transfers would involve legal complexities pertaining to immunity, privileges, and safeguards. And fourth, troop-contributing countries will have to calibrate their positions on a case-by-case basis. Amending the MoU templates may not resolve this matter to the satisfaction of one and all.

In conclusion, Mr. President, as a long-standing troop contributor, India is ever ready to shoulder peacekeeping initiatives. We do support the potential of inter-mission cooperation as a mechanism to enhance information exchange and integrated strategies in a regional context.

I thank you.

619. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, in his capacity as Coordinator of the NAM Caucus in the Security Council on December 18, 2012.

The Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Caucus in the Security Council expresses its grave concern regarding the continuing illegal Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

NAM condemns the recent provocative announcements by Israel, the occupying Power, to construct 3,000 settlement units on confiscated Palestinian land in an area east of Occupied East Jerusalem, now widely known as the so-called “E-1” plan, in addition to declarations regarding the construction of another 3,600 settlement units.

NAM stresses that Israel's settlement activities constitute grave breaches of international humanitarian law and violate numerous United Nations resolutions, including resolutions of the Security Council. This issue also remains the foremost obstacle to peace, impairing the all efforts to revive credible peace negotiations aimed at bringing an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive peace.

It is widely acknowledged that Israeli settlement activities undermine the contiguity, integrity, viability and unity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and jeopardize the prospects for physically achieving the two-State solution based on the pre-1967 borders. Settlement activities and illegal actions by extremist Israeli settlers are also causing extensive physical, economic and social devastation throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

NAM rejects these illegal actions, which have deliberately intensified after the international community's reaffirmation of its support for the two-State solution with the General Assembly's adoption of resolution 67/19, which, inter alia, accorded to Palestine the status of nonmember observer State in the United Nations. NAM calls on Israel to immediately cease its settlement activities and to abide by all of its legal obligations.

The NAM Caucus in the Security Council will continue to call for the Council to uphold its Charter responsibility towards the maintenance of international peace and security, including with regard to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Today, NAM also calls on the parties to return to the path of peace on the basis of the longstanding terms of reference of the peace process, including relevant Security Council resolutions, for the achievement of a just and lasting final settlement.
Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organizing this meeting to discuss the activities of the United Nations Regional Office for Central Africa (UNOCA) in the implementation of its mandate. I would also like to thank SRSG Abou Moussa for his comprehensive briefing. Our thanks are also due to him for the Secretary General’s report on UNOCA and the Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA).

2. Mr. President, we appreciate the efforts of countries in Central Africa to overcome the negative effects of decades of instability and conflicts, including through bilateral and regional cooperation. UNOCA has been effectively coordinating those efforts and has facilitated a number of meetings and promoted greater international attention to the region. We welcome and support these activities.

3. We have noted that the region has had overall politically stability, and successful elections were held in two countries during the reporting period. Socio-economic trends, however, present, a mixed picture. The region as a whole has high incidence of youth unemployment and poverty, and limited progress has been made in the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). The region continues to face serious challenges, like the proliferation of weapons, transnational organized crimes, illicit drug trafficking and terrorism. There has been an alarming increase in incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea in the Gulf of Guinea. The deteriorating situation in the Sahel region has also aggravated problems for the Central African region. Unless seriously addressed, these problems have the potential to derail the gains made so far and threaten peace, security and stability in the region.

4. The LRA also continues to remain active in the region, particularly in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Central African Republic. It is also reported to have established bases along the CAR-South Sudan border areas.

5. Mr. President, it is in this overall context of the situation in the region that the activities of UNOCA assume significance, particularly in the areas of conflict prevention, early warning, and partnering the countries to achieve their socio-economic development goals. UNOCA should promote regional strategies to comprehensively address the challenges facing the region. UNOCA should further strengthen this collaboration with UNOWA, ECCAS and other UN offices, and assist the efforts of governments and regional and sub-regional organizations.
6. With respect to the LRA, we welcome the steps taken by UNOCA and the African Union towards the implementation of the LRA Regional Strategy. We have noted that SRSG Moussa convened a meeting with national, regional and international partners in July to develop a joint roadmap, and the participants agreed to convene a general coordination meeting every six months to assess progress in the implementation of the Regional Strategy, in particular the five strategic objectives. We welcome the decision that UNOCA and the AU will organize a joint resource mobilization forum to raise additional funds for the implementation of the strategy.

7. The focus of this Council should lead to galvanizing the international community to provide adequate resources for the national and regional endeavours, particularly in strengthening of national capacities with regards to civil administration, police and security forces, SSR and DDR processes and socio-economic development. Given the fragility of political institutions in several countries, it is also important for the national and regional authorities to pay attention to the need for inclusive political processes, including electoral reforms. In this connection, it is important that UN Missions in the region are not burdened further without augmentation of their resources.

8. In conclusion, Mr. President, India stands ready to support and contribute to efforts of the African Union and United Nations to address the challenges of countries of Central African region, particularly in the fields of capacity building and human resource and socio-economic development.

I thank you.
Mr. President, I join others in thanking you for scheduling today's debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I thank Ambassador Zahir Tanin, Permanent Representative of Afghanistan for his statement. I would also thank the UN Secretary General for his latest report, and we are particularly appreciative of the briefing by Mr. Ján Kubiš, UNSG's Special Representative for Afghanistan.

Mr. President, As the year 2012 draws down, today's debate provides us an opportunity for a stocktaking of the collective efforts of the international community in Afghanistan. An overview would indicate that the international community and Afghanistan have achieved important milestones this year on the long road towards peace, progress and security in the country.

At major international conferences in Bonn, Chicago and Tokyo and at the regional level in Istanbul and Kabul, the international community has renewed its commitment for peace, security and development in Afghanistan. The realization of commitments flowing from the Tokyo Conference is essential for Afghanistan's fiscal sustainability and its quest for self-reliance.

The regional cooperation aspect has also received a new momentum under the Istanbul "Heart of Asia" process and other regional processes. The Delhi Investment Summit of June 28 hosted by India was an important endeavour in focussing regional and international attention towards investments in Afghanistan and their potential in providing economic development and stability to Afghanistan during the transition period.

As Afghanistan looks forward to holding simultaneous Presidential and Provincial elections in April, 2014, it would be another important step in consolidation of the democracy in Afghanistan.

Amidst these salient developments, Afghanistan continues to face an existential threat from terrorism. The infrastructure of terror is still intact in the region drawing upon ideological, financial and logistical support from beyond its borders. The syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al-Qaida, Taliban, Lashkar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups, is active in the region and is far from being isolated. While the security situation continues to remain fragile, ISAF draw down has proceeded apace. This has accentuated the uncertainties with the risk of creating a security vacuum coupled with an economic downturn in Afghanistan, which could undermine the hard fought gains we have achieved together during the last decade. The security transition must ensure lasting peace and security for all sections of Afghan society. We have renewed the mandate of the 1988 and 1267/1989 sanctions regimes just two days ago. In the functioning of these sanctions regimes, it is important to ensure that the fight against terrorism should not be diluted. The linkages between Al-Qaida and Taliban are real and cannot be wished away. The recently adopted Security Council resolutions clearly recognize this aspect and have tasked the Monitoring Team to report periodically on this matter.

Mr. President, As Afghanistan takes forward the task of national reconciliation in accordance with the criteria as laid forth in the Kabul communiqué, we fully support the efforts for regional confidence-building as a critical component of international efforts to support the country.

Regional cooperation and connectivity are critical for Afghanistan’s political and economic progress. We are fully cognizant that the economic viability of Afghanistan depends on its fuller integration into the neighbourhood, so that it can regain its historical role of a land-bridge between South Asia, Central Asia, the Middle East and Eurasia. Conscious of this imperative need, India has taken the lead in two commercial Confidence Building Measures under the Istanbul process.

Mr. President, Afghanistan and India have had a long shared history going back over millennia. The two countries are natural strategic partners by virtue of geography and a common vision of peace and cooperation in the region.

President Karzai’s visit to India last month offered us an opportunity to review the entire gamut of bilateral relationship and discuss regional and international issues of mutual interest. During the visit, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh reiterated India’s support to Afghanistan during the crucial period of transition till end 2014 and thereafter.

The implementation of the Strategic Partnership Agreement of October, 2011 between the two countries has already been set in motion with the convening of the first meeting of the Partnership Council on May 1 this year.

During the last decade, India has pledged up to $ 2 billion in development and humanitarian assistance. We have managed to carry out some of the most economical and cost-effective projects in Afghanistan. The $ 500 million assistance announced by the Prime Minister of India in May 2011 is being spent from 2012-2015. The projects under consideration will be in line with the projects suggested under the National Priority Programmes of the Government of Afghanistan. The pace and nature of the utilization of the present and future Indian assistance will be determined by the preference, comfort level and absorptive capacity of the Afghan government.

Mr. President, India remains unwavering in its commitment to assisting the people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous nation.
We support the good work done by UNAMA. As we enter in the New Year, we must create an enabling environment where the Afghan people could live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation. We need to impart added momentum to our efforts for strengthening the Afghan government's capacity for security, governance and economic development. The international community must continue to work with renewed vigour and unity of purpose towards strengthening efforts of the Afghan government in seeking solutions that are inclusive and led by the Afghan people themselves.

I thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by thanking you, Mr. President, for organizing today's open debate on a subject that is of vital importance for the work of this Council. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his statement and report on Peacebuilding in the Aftermath of Conflict. Our thanks are also due in particular to Ambassador Abulkalam Abdul Momen of Bangladesh for his statement today and his able stewardship of the Peacebuilding Commission during the year. I would also like to thank the Secretariat team so ably led by Ms Judy Cheng-Hopkins.

Mr. President, once described as the “missing middle” between peacekeeping and durable peace, the establishment of Peacebuilding Commission (PBC) was in response to the widely felt need of the international community to assist post-conflict societies to attain sustainable peace. The PBC, its organization committee, and its Country-Specific Configurations have done commendable work in mainstreaming peacebuilding in post-conflict countries. This Council's continuous engagement on peacebuilding in recent times has also helped to emphasize the critical role of peacebuilding.

In this context, we welcome the progress made in implementing the Secretary General's agenda for action. Inclusivity, institution-building, and sustained and meaningful international engagement - the priorities identified by the Secretary General are useful guides to peacebuilding ventures in future.

Mr. President, inclusive polity and governance, including provision of basic services, and peace, security and stable social order continue to be the key peacebuilding tasks. Success in the implementation of these key tasks will impact on subsequent efforts at economic and social revitalization. This success, in turn, will depend on the ability of the international community in providing required resources and generating greater coherence among entities, programmes, and field operatives with a view to promoting an integrated approach for sustainable peacebuilding.

We believe that peacebuilding activities should draw from the field achievements. The PBC being an advisory body, expectations are that its Country Specific Configurations will deliver core peacebuilding tasks with agility and nimbleness. With much efforts invested in its mechanisms at the Headquarters, the time has now come to test our abilities to make a difference to the people and societies in post-conflict situations.

Mr. President, inclusivity is a sign of healthy societies. Women and youth should be fully included in peacebuilding activities. Efforts in this regard are, however, demanding and resource intensive. Also, the widening gap between our aspirations and field programmes need to be narrowed down by means of suitable programmes and enhanced resource commitments. My delegation encourages the PBC to work in this regard with international and regional financial institutions so that tangible peace dividends are made available to the population in post-conflict societies. It is also necessary to avoid over-reliance on the supply side of the equation by relegating peacebuilding programmes to a secondary place.

Mr. President, conflicts today are vastly different than those in the past. Their intra-state character, natural resources dimension, transnational crimes, illicit trafficking in drugs and weapons, and their regional dimensions demand an integrated approach. Institutions of governance, socio-economic development, youth employment, transitional justice, national reconciliation, electoral support, and constitution building are tasks that need coherent and sustained assistance from the international community. This, in turn, requires political will, matching resources, and readiness for long-term engagement taking into consideration local conditions.

It is, therefore, important for the PBC to align its objectives with national priorities and ensure that all plans and programmes are implemented under national leadership and ownership and through national institutions so that the gains are sustainable even if slow. It also important that peacebuilding starts from firm foundations of successful peacekeeping.

Mr. President, as a responsible global citizen having wide experience of nation-building which are most relevant for countries on the PBC agenda, India has been a regular contributor to the Peacebuilding Fund. Apart from our participation in peacekeeping missions, we have also partnered extensively with the national authorities in post-conflict countries, particularly in Africa, with a view to supporting their national efforts for peacebuilding, including in sectors such as human resource development, institutional capacity building, information technology, etc. We will continue to partner with the post-conflict countries bilaterally and through the United Nations in meeting the challenges of peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

Mr. President, since this is the last public meeting of the Council this year, let me avail of this opportunity to thank all Council members, the wider UN membership and the Secretariat for their cooperation during the last two years as we made our modest contribution to the maintenance of international peace and security. I would also like to extend a very warm welcome to the five newly elected members – Argentina, Australia, Luxembourg, the Republic of Korea, and Rwanda – and wish them great success during the next two years.

I thank you.
INDIA AT THE UNITED NATIONS
(ii) SPEECHES IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY & OTHER FORA
Mr. President,

Permit me at the outset to congratulate you on your election as President of the Bureau, and on behalf of more than 500 million Indian women, I wish you a sterling innings and hope that you would successfully navigate the Board, in pursuing its goals on gender equality and empowerment of women.

My felicitations to the Executive Director and Under Secretary-General, Madam Michelle Bachelet for her statement and I complement her for an insightful and informative report on the operational activities of UN Women, that has been presented today for consideration by the Board.

Mr. President,

As we begin the second operational year of UN Women, my delegation is happy to note the significant milestones that our newly formed entity has achieved in such a short span of time. I am particularly pleased to learn that UN Women has already contributed to the institutionalisation of 176 new or strengthened policies to advance gender equality, including constitutional amendments, in 50 countries both at regional and global levels.

The stellar role played by UN Women in enshrining rights for women into the Kenyan Constitution, in training and support to the electoral process leading to higher representation for women in the Parliament in Sudan, in having the gender equality law passed in El Salvador, or having gender responsive budget guidelines issued in 17 countries, are all significant milestones in a brief but important journey.

While we must also acknowledge that the year 2011 has been a year of transition for UN women, my delegation is encouraged by these beginnings, that have been made, under the dynamic leadership of Madam Bachelet.

Mr. President,

Representing a country which is home to more than 500 million women, let me quote the President of our country, when she said: No country can achieve its full potential without adequately developing the capabilities of its women.

Mr. President, women in India have played a pivotal role in shaping our national discourse and policy making. Providing equal opportunities and an enabling environment for women has been a steadfast commitment of the Government of India, all along.
Economic empowerment of Indian women at the grass roots level, especially through the Self-Help Groups has been a hallmark of India’s success story. Out of the six million self-help groups in India, more than 80% (about 4.8 million) are women’s groups, which have provided microfinance, employment and livelihood, and have made a defining change in the lives of millions of Indian women at the village level.

In the field of women’s education, which is one of the most critically enabling factors, we have also made significant strides. As per the latest census figures, our female literacy rate rose to 65.46% in 2011, adding more number of women literates than their male counterparts in the last ten years in India!

The 73rd and 74th Constitutional Amendments have revolutionized domestic governance and today, nearly 40% of elected representatives in all village elected bodies are women. We hope to give this movement of political participation by women, further impetus, by increasing the number of seats reserved in Panchayats and City and Town Governments to 50%. Besides, we are slowly but steadily, also moving towards providing for one third reservation for women in our National Parliament.

Mr. President,

Let me now turn to the main agenda of operational activities of UN Women for this session of the Executive Board. My delegation acknowledges that while there is growing recognition that investing in gender equality and empowerment of women is critical to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, given the current financial environment, work on gender equality and empowerment of women does remain chronically underfunded. We hope that the comprehensive resource mobilization strategy being developed by UN Women, would certainly widen the donor base in order to secure the resources required by UN Women in meeting its global commitments.

Being fully cognizant of the funding requirement, let me reiterate Government of India’s firm commitment of five million US dollars to UN Women to provide core predictable funding. Earlier this month, India handed over our contribution of one million dollar to UN Women, taking our contribution to two million US dollars, so far. If we have to ensure that UN Women stands for action, the donor community must make generous contributions to UN Women. We will continue to provide full political and financial support to UN Women and call on others to do likewise.

Mr. President,

In addition to the challenge of funding requirements, we must also explore ways of further improving upon our delivery systems at field level in country specific programmes. As rightly pointed out in the USG’s report, UN country teams, while implementing country programmes must also aim to address the national gender priorities and attempt to harmonise the goals of the UN with the national government’s, so that it does result in stronger national ownership and increased alignment with the UN.

We are also pleased to learn about the series of new initiatives on gender equality and economic empowerment that have been initiated by UN Women. The adoption of a gender marker throughout the UN system to track resources and performance indicators to assess the gender responsiveness of common country programming would certainly contribute to strengthening system-wide accountability mechanisms for gender equality.

Given that South-South cooperation and development of national capacities is a key component of the UN Women implementation strategy, we are particularly pleased to learn from the USG’s report that sharing of success stories and exchange of experiences, in partnership with regional organizations in Asian countries, has facilitated regional cooperation in monitoring strategies to implement commitments of UN Women.

Let me conclude, Mr. President, by reaffirming India’s steadfast commitment to all-round social, economic and political empowerment of our women, whatever effort and resources, the task might take. We assure you that India will always be willing to walk the extra mile, in having the goals outlined in the Strategic Plan implemented at the earliest.

Thank You.
Mr. President,
Permit me at the outset to congratulate you on your election as President of the Bureau. I wish you a sterling innings and hope that you would successfully navigate the Board in implementing its agenda for this year.

We would also like to place on record our appreciation to the outgoing Bureau, which was so ably presided over by Ambassador Edita Hrda, Permanent Representative of Czech Republic, for their commendable role in guiding the work of the Board last year.

My felicitations to the Administrator Madam Helen Clark for her informative statement.

India aligns itself with the statement delivered by the distinguished representative of Algeria on behalf of the Group of G 77 and China.

Mr. President,

2011 was marked by major developments across the globe and several key conferences that not only provided an opportunity for stock-taking, but also served as useful reminders to the international community on the pressing challenges that remain to be addressed on the global development agenda. The 4th UN Conference on LDCs and its proclamation of the Istanbul Plan of Action, as well as the Durban Conference on Climate Change, were all small yet significant markers. While we were able to make some progress at Durban, we must continue to be guided by the principles of equity and Common but Differentiated Responsibility (CBDR).

As we prepare for the Rio plus 20 UN Conference on Sustainable Development in June this year, we must ensure that poverty eradication remains at the center of global development agenda and that the commitments we have made at the previous Conferences, were not just words and should guide us in the way we act at, and make decisions in Rio and on the post 2015 development agenda. We must ensure that effective implementation mechanisms and target monitoring systems are suitably followed up, as an outcome of our conferences.

Given that the last year was marked by major upheavals and deepening of conflict situations across the globe, as pertinently pointed out in UN Secretary General’s address, we must attempt to prevent and mitigate conflicts before they become life threatening. My delegation believes that by virtue of its unique position as the largest development arm of the UN system, the UNDP has a special role in achieving the five generational opportunities outlined by the Secretary General of sustainable development; preventing and mitigating conflicts, human rights abuses and the impacts of natural disasters; building a safer and more secure world; supporting countries in transition; and working to engage the talents of women and young people. In all of these, UNDP should be the force multiplier arm of the UN by fostering national and local capacities, strengthening networks for sharing of knowledge and best practices, promoting national ownership, and by building socio-economic resilience in the most vulnerable developing countries.

Mr. President,

While India has been able to clock an average growth rate of 8.5% in the last seven years, education and health have been important focus areas in our development agenda and there is encouraging news in these sectors. The Right to Education Act is now on the statute books. Enrollment of children in primary schools is near universal and dropout rates are falling.

The National Rural Health Mission has begun to successfully address the large gaps in health infrastructure. Institutional deliveries have increased from 54% in 2006 to 73% in 2009. A major initiative in health for the poor has been the National Health Insurance Plan, which now provides an insurance cover for in-patient treatment to well over 100 million people. We are now building on this experiment and are confident that the Indian model of development would lead us to a path of sustainable growth.

Today’s Board meeting also has on its agenda Item Number three, the issue of Gender in UNDP. Madam President, I am pleased to inform that women in India are playing a pivotal role in shaping our national discourse and policy making. Economic empowerment of Indian women right till the grass roots level, especially through the Self-Help Groups has been phenomenal. Out of the six million self-help groups in India, more than 80% (about 4.8 million) are women’s groups, which have provided microfinance, employment and livelihood, and have made a defining change in the lives of millions of Indian women at the village level. In the field of women’s education, as per the latest census figures, our female literacy rate rose to 65.46% in 2011, adding more number of women literates than their male counterparts in the last ten years in India! Besides, we are slowly but steadily, also moving towards providing for one third reservation for women in our National Parliament.

Mr. President,

Let me now turn to the main agenda of the UNDP segment today on programming arrangements. We need to carefully and strategically consider this second review within the context of the three concurrent initiatives of the new strategic plan, the integrated budget and the agenda for organizational change. We need to comprehensively analyse the pros and cons of the four models being proposed and only after a considered and consensus driven approach, arrive at the most preferred option. As UNDP adapts to the rapidly evolving nature of development cooperation, it will also need to update its operational model to maintain its global reach and capabilities while substantially improving organisational efficiency.

Mr. President,

My delegation is particularly pleased to see the increased UNDP focus on South-South cooperation as an important pillar of development cooperation. We encourage the UNDP to continue to harness the full potential of South-South Cooperation as a useful vehicle for the development of capacities within the South. In this endeavor, India has always shown willingness to lend its technical expertise and experiences of several success stories in the region.

Apart from making the largest contribution to UNDP’s core budget from amongst programme countries, we have successfully partnered UNDP in third countries like Afghanistan. Another effective model of cooperation with the UNDP has been the IBSA Trust Fund, managed by the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation in the UNDP. While we would call upon the UNDP to explore ways and means to further strengthen the Special Unit for South South cooperation, we are also happy to inform that within the IBSA Initiative Framework, we have already concluded several key developmental projects including rural electrification through solar energy systems in Guinea Bissau, improving the health infrastructure services for Children in Cambodia, rehabilitation of health centers and water desalination projects in Cape Verde, besides several others in Palestine, Burundi and Lao PDR. As Chair of the IBSA Trust Fund this year, we are committed to exploring ways to further strengthen this engagement with the UNDP through innovative partnership mechanisms that facilitate development solutions for other developing countries, particularly the LDCs, and other interested developing countries. The global network of UNDP country offices and its knowledge-sharing platforms could be used to effectively channel Indian development experience and technical expertise, where it is needed most.

In concluding, Mr. President, we reaffirm our steadfast commitment and support to UNDP, and India is willing to walk the extra mile in implementing the goals outlined in the Strategic Plan.

I thank you.
Mr. President,

Permit me at the outset to congratulate you on your election as President of the Bureau. I wish you a sterling innings and hope that you would successfully navigate the Board in implementing its agenda for this year.

Madam Administrator, Let me also thank you for your very informative statement. We received a communication from your office that you might be visiting my country in the coming weeks. Let me tell you right here in front of everyone that this is good for us. It symbolizes the simple factor of our close relationship and the fact that we work closely together in addressing several of the issues which of course concern my country, where development is certainly by far the biggest challenge. I am also very happy that the idea for an institute for human development has progressed apace. I see my friend and able colleague of yours, Ajay (Chhibber, Assistant Administrator), sitting out there who has been working very hard on these initiatives and we are appreciative of all of this which has been happening.

Madame Administrator, in the past, over the last year on two occasions when I have spoken at these Board meetings, I have put aside the prepared text which deals with the minutiae of various issues, to basically make 2 or 3 big points and I intend to continue along that line, because I think there is very little which is left, which our colleague from Algeria in the statement on behalf of the Group of 77 has not so very well articulated on behalf of all of us from the developing world.

Madame Administrator and Mr. President, We are in the year 2012 now, three years from our target date for meeting the barest minimum standards for decent life for populations of all over the world, I mean the MDG’s. I think we have a long way to go on achieving many of them, and I am afraid we need to put in a great effort to, in my opinion, at least remove the taint of the most difficult forms of poverty from the world. We owe it to ourselves, we owe it to our future generations and I think that is an absolute imperative for the world in which we live. So my call, in the first instance is again to urge the United Nations Development Programme to remain focussed steadfastly and in a big manner on poverty eradication.

You have pioneered so many of efforts on this, the thoughts on this entire subject and now you need to be strong so that we are able to ensure that we meet the minimum standards of the Millennium Development Goals and further to eliminate the scourge of extreme poverty from the world.

Madame Administrator, Capacity-building is a critical need for developing countries. We have different kind of resources in different countries but we all could do in a great measure, I say so also from my country which has a large resource base, is that we need capacity-building. We need capacity-building in a very big way for ourselves but we also need a huge amount of capacity-building and thinking, on how we can leverage the international system for our benefits and for the benefits of the millions of people who live in the developing world.

Later this year, one of the major events on the United Nations agenda, the Rio+20 Conference, would be held in Brazil. It's focus would be on sustainable development. I think this conference does not come even one day too early. The UNDP for all us in the developing world has been our place for thoughts, our place for ideas and our place for how things can be implemented. I believe very strongly that you are in the best position to help developing countries put forward their ideas, their views and perspectives which are absolutely imperative to them from their national priorities and their national ownership perspective and then help them realise this in terms of the international community. In the past I recall, more than a decade or two ago, without any doubt, developing countries would turn to the UNDP for specific and specialized help not just in terms of the big ticket ideas but also in terms of simple things of training negotiators, providing people who can help you. I would just leave this thought with you.

South-South cooperation has obviously been a buzz word for quite some time. Madame Administrator, you are aware that this is an area in which we as a country, India, are of course very strong. We try to do what we can, given our own huge demands, to share with our own brothers and sisters in the developing world. We are also very happy to cooperate with the UNDP in terms of India-UNDP, but also in terms of something which I think is a very interesting concept, that we put together several years back, where our friends from Brazil and South Africa are also there. These are things that we need to take forward, try and ensure that there is success, and that all these efforts move forward. We are a country which is strongly committed to UNDP, the largest contributor to your core budget from the developing world, and basically my speaking in these Board Meetings is to assure you and to tell everyone how we are appreciative of the fact that you are there, the work that you do and we are strongly with you in the efforts that need to be undertaken in the direction of development and poverty eradication in the world.

We need to carefully and strategically consider the second review within the context of the three concurrent initiatives of the new strategic plan, the integrated budget in the agenda for organizational change. We need to comprehensively analyze the pro’s and con’s for models being proposed and only after a considered and consensus driven approach, and may I add, which includes the member states in this process, the ones who are affected and others too, arrive at the most preferred option. As UNDP adapts to the rapidly evolving nature of development cooperation it will also need to update its operational model to maintain its global reach and capabilities while substantially improving organizational efficiencies.

Madame Administrator, Mr. President and all the senior members of the management who are assembled there, let me once again reassure you of India’s strong support for the UNDP. We also count on you for us.

Thank you

Thank you, Mr President.

The Syrian Arab Republic has, by virtue of its geographic and strategic location and the genius of its people, played an important role in the Middle East throughout recorded history. Even in the modern time, Syria's role in the developments in the Middle East cannot be overemphasized. Prolonged instability and unrest in Syria, therefore, have implications for peace and stability in the wider region.

2. India is deeply concerned with the present situation in Syria that has resulted in the deaths of thousands of civilians and security forces personnel over the last eleven months. We strongly condemn all violence, irrespective of whoever the perpetrators are. We also condemn all violations of human rights. India holds the rights of expression and peaceful assembly among the fundamental values that should be respected, while ensuring stability and security of the society. The problem in Syria being primarily political in nature, India has, from the beginning of the protests, called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of Syrian society.

3. India has conveyed this message to the Syrian leadership, both bilaterally as well as along with its IBSA partners. We have impressed upon the Syrian side to abjure violence and pay heed to the aspirations of the people of Syria.

4. We are firmly of the view that a political process for resolution of the present crisis should be led by the Syrians themselves. We believe that the main role of the international community is to facilitate engagement of the Syrian Government with all sections of Syrian society for an inclusive political process, taking into account the legitimate aspirations of all Syrians while ensuring respect for the country's sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

5. The League of Arab States, as an important regional organisation, should play its required and historic role in promoting political dialogue among the Syrian parties. In this context, we welcomed the deployment of the League's Observer Mission across several areas in the country which had a calming effect on the level of violence and provided a more accurate picture of developments. We have also been supportive of the efforts by the Arab League for a peaceful resolution of the crisis through a Syrian-led inclusive political process. We support the League's call for serious political dialogue between the Syrian government and the whole spectrum of the opposition under the auspices of the League of Arab States. We believe that the leadership of Syria is a matter for the Syrian people to decide.
6. In conclusion, Mr President, we think that for an expeditious resolution of the problem in Syria, the League of the Arab States should facilitate peaceful engagement of all opposition forces in Syria in constructive dialogue with the authorities. We hope that this will create a new environment for peace and promote a political process. This political dialogue should build upon the political reforms already announced by the Syrian leadership with necessary changes so that they find acceptance among all sections of Syrian society.

Thank you.
Madame Chairperson,

I am delighted to be among the peacekeeping community today, once again, for the opening debate of the annual C-34 session to comprehensively review the whole question of peacekeeping operations.

2. Let me begin by thanking USGs Mr. Harve Ladsous and Madame Susana Malcorra for their leadership of UN peacekeeping through the year. A very warm welcome to the newly elected members of the Bureau and to you, Madame Chair, for having steered this process with the fairness, poise, and equanimity of a sage. We once again, repose our faith in your able leadership.

Madame Chair,

3. As the key UN instrument for the maintenance of international peace and security, the year gone by was challenging for the UN peacekeeping and the times ahead portent with things to come. An enterprise that comprised of twenty thousand personnel ten years back, peacekeeping today commands over one hundred thousand persons undertaking tasks that we entrust onto their hands. While it reflects the field realities, this also informs us that the roots of consensus we are able to build today run far deeper. The partnership that has forged this process, therefore, must be valued.

4. The geo-political context of UN peacekeeping has undergone transformational shifts. The global capabilities, economic, political, military, and social capitals are undergoing dynamic shifts. At the same time the field missions are faced with renewed challenges with a professed need for the infrastructure and mechanics of governance. The very architecture of peace and stability and what we build upon it, in situations of conflicts, is the test we are faced with.

5. Being a longstanding stakeholder of UN peacekeeping, India firmly believes in aligning UN’s peacekeeping mechanism as one, ranging from mission planning, mission design, force generation, mandate making, to field implementation. Accomplishments of our peacekeepers during the year have been evidenced in the elections in DRC and Liberia, in the post-election crisis in Cote de Ivoire, and in the transition of South Sudan into a new Nation State. This has been all the more arduous more with dual expectations from the field and the HQs that has increasingly viewed missions as field manifestations of budgetary and accounting exercises.
Madame President,

6. That the UN peacekeeping delivers peace dividends at bare minimum price is recognized well by the international community. Moreover, we simply do not have the alternative to borrow from elsewhere rather than to build upon what has been shaped over six decades. However, contrary to the calls for integration and coherence, the policy instruments today seek to compartmentalize field functions and operations. The premium is on distinguishing rather than on co-locating functions within the larger political process.

7. Our thoughts and theories lack fair representation of the views of wider membership. Our doctrinal approaches are HQs driven with field being a mere recipient. This scenario is both unhealthy and unsustainable. A fair division of intellectual and field burden in UN peacekeeping will strengthen the democratic core of this partnership by making it participative and representative in true sense. Mere enunciation of ideals and their reflection in the mandates kicks in a spiral of unfairness towards the end user who is tasked with its implementation. This challenge will be rectified at the level of the Secretariat and at the stage of mandate making.

8. The financial, operational and logistical necessities of the field need to be objectively assessed before finalizing ambitious agendas. Incorporation of protection agendas to the core of mission mandates without matching commitments to supply critical enablers such as air-assets belies the very intent and purpose of the exercise. Critical political and constitutional processes in DRC had to be undergone without such key enablers. The international community is witness to resources that are genuinely needed for the protection agendas. A realistic estimation of resource needs by the field missions and a streamlining of recruitment, equipments, and MoU processes at the HQs will enhance our collective abilities to function better. We definitely need to hear more about field support than reorganization and reconfiguration which is heavy on evidence and soft on promises.

9. The core challenge is to match our commitments to the principles with the men who can spend years in conflict situations without seeking homeland comforts and with critical enablers. Voices must be apportioned to those who bring field experience to the process.

Madame Chair,

10. As a country that has contributed over 130,000 personnel to UN peacekeeping, we firmly believe that troop’s posture can be determined with their participation only. The founding principles of neutrality, consent, impartiality, and non-use of force continue to constitute the core of UN peacekeeping. Mindful of Indian airmen who used airpower in Katanga during 3 the 60s, today's doctrinal approaches appear of questionable relevance to us. Field orientation is the fountainhead of our legitimacy in defence of Charter objectives of peace and stability. Respect for sovereignty and integrity of states constitutes the very core this organization and our debates rest on. National ownership in our peacekeeping and peacebuilding activities, therefore, is critical for the credible success of our field missions. Madame Chair,

11. UN’s peacebuilding architecture today requires unity and cohesion. Donor priorities on the one hand and the field complexities steeped in the socio-cultural and community contexts render our peacebuilding ecosystem incongruous. Convergence and co-location of peacebuilding initiatives, structures, and numerous UN entities involved in this venture is the call of the day. This will reflect commendably in the SSR and DDR processes on the ground. Our civilian affairs initiatives, likewise, also need to represent geographical composition of this organization and its field realities in a fair manner.

12. Lastly, on the Global Field Support Strategy, as I have outlined earlier, the middle alphabets of the acronym need to find their rightful balance in the overall scheme. This process has steamed ahead with intangible outcomes. Its appeals premised mainly on budgetary, financial and now on personnel grounds undermine the purpose of its origin. Centrality to peacekeeping in GFSS is critical for UN’s peacekeeping architecture.

Madame President,

13. To conclude, C-34 and the peacekeeping community owes a debt to those peacekeepers who have paid the ultimate price in defence of the principles and objective enshrined in the charter of United Nations. We spare our thoughts for them and their families.

I thank you, Madame Chair.
Mr. President,

Thank you very much for giving me the floor and for convening today’s meeting.

Mr. Secretary General, at the very outset, I want to express our deep appreciation for your very strong commitment to sustainable development. You have repeatedly outlined this as one of your top priorities.

I am also very encouraged by your coming here, meeting the members and bringing the Report of your High Level Panel on Global Sustainability into the inter-governmental processes. Indeed, this is very helpful when you call for countries to embrace it.

Mr. President,

The Report begins with a quotation from the Father of the Indian Nation, Mahatma Gandhi - “Earth provides enough to satisfy everyman’s need, but not for every man’s greed”. In our modern context and usage this is a reference to the need for sustainable production and consumption and, of course, life styles. Perhaps, that is the reason why some members in the Panel found it necessary to say that not all members agreed with all aspects of the report.

Be that as it may, we are very honoured and proud that our Minister of Rural Development participated in the Panel and its deliberations in an active manner. We also deeply commend you, Mr. Secretary General, for setting up the Panel and the two co-chairs: President Tarja Halonen of Finland and President Zuma of South Africa.

Mr. President,

The report emphasizes people’s involvement and empowerment. To me this goes to the heart of the over-riding priority of developing countries which is poverty eradication. Please note, I come from a country where we are very proud that with economic growth over the last several years, we have been able to pull millions out of poverty. The guiding principle for our government is inclusive growth and we are very happy that people-centric approach also leads to the hallowed principle of equity. And this needs to remain the underpinning and the most important element to guide us as we develop paradigms for sustainable development.
Mr. Secretary General, I also commend you on having taken forward the issue of Sustainable Energy for All. My delegation was very proud to have been in the forefront of piloting this resolution in the G-77 and later on in the General Assembly. The goal of this effort really needs to be universal access to modern energy for all. We need, of course, to recognize the importance of renewables and other forms of modern energy, but equally, remember that fossil fuels are here and are here to stay for at least quite some time to come.

In the areas of environment, it is absolutely critical for us as we go forward with our newer, greener efforts to clearly recognize historical responsibilities and the principle of common but differentiated responsibility.

Mr. Secretary General, we live in an age of collaboration and cooperation and here I really would like to once again commend you on what you said in your brief statement, your emphasis on science. We fully agree that science, technological development and research for better development of science are really going to be the way forward. For us the critical thing is not only collaborations in science, but our willingness as a global community to share the fruits of science and make them available to all those across the world who need it, in a manner that they can afford, in a manner that they can easily access.

Mr. Secretary General, I want to thank you once again for your initiative which I sincerely hope will get carried into the inter-governmental domain so that it is truly embraced by all as you had rightly called for in your statement.

Thank you very much.
Mr President,

1. I thank you for organizing today’s session and to the Peacebuilding Commission for the work carried out by them during the year. This is also an occasion to extend our warm appreciation to Ambassador Gasana for his able stewardship of the Commission’s work. My delegation also wishes to felicitate Bangladesh on their assumption of the PBC Chair. With Bangladesh at the helm, we see a unique and timely convergence between peacekeeping and peacebuilding tasks and experiences.

Mr President,

2. Peacebuilding and peacekeeping—peacebuilding are and will remain core activities of the United Nations in times to come. The working relationship of the PBC, the newest organ of the UN, with the Security Council and the General Assembly is of critical importance. As a founding member of the Commission since its inception, my delegation favours close, regular, and substantive interaction between the Commission, this Assembly, and the Council, so that the United Nations can deliver coherently when it comes to setting the peacebuilding agenda.

Mr President,

3. Peacebuilding is a cooperative and collective effort. The United Nations requires working with other peacebuilding actors, including international financial institutions. This will have a positive impact on peacebuilding and on the growing need for resources for peacebuilding initiatives. In an arena with many players, the United Nations must, however, be conscious of the need for it to retain the high ground in developing the normative basis for peacebuilding.

4. My delegation stresses that the United Nations must play the central role in identifying a common peacebuilding vision and in acting as a bridge between national authorities and various peacebuilding and development actors. Our unique strength lies in our people on the ground. We must ensure that this unique ability of ours does not remain unspotted while we scout for expertise elsewhere. To retain field relevance, the peacebuilding concepts and frameworks should evolve in due regard to field expertise and inputs.

5. We have made strides in streamlining peacebuilding architecture during the year. Given the challenges on resource front, it is advisable that the existing 2 mechanisms are allowed and encouraged to perform to their optimum potential.
In this regard, the Headquarters should enhance its facilitative role that grants field leadership space for thoughts and action. An approach that overly relies on manuals and guidelines which are constructed in abstract and detached from conflict zones fail in contributing to this aspect of our efforts in the field. My delegation will be keen to see our field expertise leading the process at the Headquarters. The expertise we develop must derive from a geographically diverse catchment. Specialist cadres that are non-representative is a beginning with a weak step.

Mr President,

6. Peacebuilding emerged from peacekeeping. India has been in the forefront of peacekeeping from its inception. We firmly believe that the peacebuilding actors must strive to make the best out of peacekeeping attainments. Like peacekeeping, subsequent peacebuilding components come with inherent challenges be it Security Sector Reform, DDR, Rule of Law, Developmental quests, or economic recovery and employment generation. In this regard, efforts undertaken by PBF need further elaboration in the context of cross-cutting synergies across the UN system.

7. National ownership is the key for success in peacebuilding. The international community has the duty to make available appropriate capacities to national authorities. The solutions and capacities that these authorities seek are those that have been tried and tested in similar environments. Countries that have undergone state-building and democratic transitions hold special relevance to our peacebuilding efforts. It is also the responsibility of the international community to provide the resources in a predictable manner and at an appropriate level over extended periods.

Mr President,

8. India strongly supports the role and relevance of regional players in post-conflict scenarios. We are greatly appreciative of the role of the African Union’s efforts to develop Post-Conflict Reconstruction capacities.

9. The Secretariat and the Funds and Programmes must also do more to become effective players with better coherence.

10. In concluding, I would like to underscore that India has regularly contributed to the Peacebuilding Fund and we are committed to PBC process and will continue to remain fully engaged.

Thank you, Mr President.
Madam Chairperson, I will begin by congratulating you on your election as Chairperson of this meeting. My delegation is pleased with the open, inclusive and purposeful manner in which you have pursued preparations for the Prep Com and the Conference. Please be assured of our full cooperation for a successful outcome. India associates itself with the statement made by Indonesia on behalf of NAM.

2. As with many other States, India’s national security has been adversely affected by illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, which are closely linked to terrorism, transnational organized crime, drug trafficking, piracy and illegal exploitation of natural resources. India believes that combating and eradicating illicit trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW) in all its aspects is a key element in global, regional and national security, and the cornerstone of multilateral efforts to curb illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons is the UN Programme of Action adopted by consensus at the UN Conference on Small Arms in July 2001. As such we attach importance to the Second Review Conference of the PoA to be held later this year.

3. The full implementation of the Programme of Action especially as a means for combating terrorism and transnational crime is a priority of India. India has a robust legislative and administrative mechanism to combat and eradicate the menace of illicit SALW. Our endeavours in this regard have been regularly highlighted through our national reports. We welcome the efforts towards standardisation of reporting format and the online reporting tool introduced during Meeting of Governmental Experts last year. We are pleased to inform that we have already submitted our national report online.

4. Mr Chairman, despite efforts by responsible states and international organisations, illicit trans-border movement of SALW, ammunition and explosive continues to be a major concern. India has more than 15,000 kilometers of land borders with seven neighbours and a coastline of more than 7500 kilometers including island territories. Securing our borders against illicit trade and other threats while facilitating legitimate trade, commerce and people to people links are among the principle objectives of India’s border management policy. A Department of Border Management was created under the central Ministry of Home Affairs to focus attention on issues related to proper management of borders, strengthening institutional coordination and implementation, creating infrastructure like Integrated Check Posts (ICPs), roads fencing and floodlighting as well as the implementation of the Border Development Programme. As a preventive measure against smuggling of illegal arms through ports, container scanning systems have been installed at our major ports. India is committed to bilateral cooperation on border management. For instance, India and Nepal, which share an open border, have a Joint Working Group on Border Management to discuss issues of mutual security concern and take decisions to further consolidate cooperation in combating trans-border crimes. Integrated border management projects have been taken up with Bhutan and Bangladesh as well.

6. At the regional level, India participates in efforts aimed at combating illicit trafficking of SALW and terrorism. This includes our engagements with the SAARC, BIMSTEC and ASEAN forums. In addition, bilateral cooperation and Joint Working Groups have been established with several countries in the region. Capacity building assistance has been provided to police personnel of Nepal, Bhutan, Sri Lanka and Maldives. India has contributed to the UN Regional Centre in Kathmandu and we hope that the work of the Centre would support efforts towards combating illicit small arms and light weapons in the region.

7. Globally, we believe that all States should re-commit themselves to the full and effective implementation of the UNPOA as the main framework for addressing illicit trade in SALWs. Gaps in implementation should be addressed and international cooperation and assistance should be strengthened in line with felt needs. The full implementation of the international tracing instrument must be pursued in parallel in order to prevent illegal transport of SALWs. Second, the inclusive and consensus-based approach developed under UN auspices to implement the POA must be continued with renewed vigour. In this regard India welcomes the return of consensus to the POA process as evidenced by the successful holding of the 4th BMS in June 2010 and of the first meeting of the governmental experts in May 2011. It is important that the upcoming Conference focus on reviewing the implementation of the POA in a comprehensive manner without reviewing or reopening the programme itself.

8. Let me conclude with some brief thoughts on follow-up to the UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects. With regard to the future of the implementation process, we believe that the distinct but related nature of Review Conferences, BMS meetings and expert group meetings should be maintained. The Meeting of Governmental Experts can focus on practical issues that are relevant for implementation at the national, regional and international levels. Issues that require further work to strengthen the political understanding on their implementation can be tackled at a BMS meeting. Proliferation of reports and meetings or burdening the POA with timelines and targets should be avoided. Instead existing follow-up mechanisms should be reinforced and related clearly to the core obligations of the POA. Synergy between different 3 aspects of POA implementation should be strengthened within existing resources. 9. Madam Chairperson, I thank you for this opportunity to share India’s views under Agenda Item 7. Our main message is that we should preserve the consensus driven nature of the POA process while maintaining the focus of international action on the area of illicit trade in SALWs where such action can deliver maximum benefits. India stands ready to contribute to the successful outcome of the Review Conference.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me begin by thanking His Excellency, Mr. Nassir Abdulaziz Al-Nasser, President of the General Assembly for sharing his views on the role and authority of the General Assembly and the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the PGA for his decision to appoint Ambassador Susan Waffaa-Ogoo, Permanent Representative of The Gambia and you, Mr. Alexander Lomaia, my distinguished friend the Permanent Representative of Georgia as Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group on General Assembly Revitalization for this session.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

I welcome your appointment and on behalf of my delegation, assure you of my delegation’s steadfast support as you go about your task of guiding this Group.

I would also like to take this opportunity to express appreciation for the excellent work done by Ambassador Camillo M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius ?ekuolis of Lithuania as Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group last year. Equally, I would like to place on record my delegation’s appreciation for the work done by the Algerian delegation as the NAM Chair on this issue as well as for the other negotiating partners who have worked in a spirit of cooperation. Naturally my delegation wishes to align itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the NAM.

Co-Chairs,

The starting point of my delegation’s position on the issue of General Assembly revitalization is the firm belief that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and in spirit.

The GA should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. This was the role intended for the Assembly in Article 10 of the UN Charter, namely that it discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, the ICJ as well as the Secretariat.
Co-Chairs, My delegation participated actively in the deliberations of the Ad Hoc Working Group on Assembly revitalization in the 65th session. We provided a number of inputs at the meetings held during the last session. These inputs were provided in a spirit of constructive engagement and we are pleased that these were taken on board in the negotiations leading to the adoption of Resolution 65/315. While we are generally happy that Resolution 65/315 has been able to highlight some of the important steps required in our collective journey towards a revitalized General Assembly, we firmly believe, Co-chairs that we still have some distance to travel.

You have in your letter of 7th March called on delegations to provide concrete proposals on the revitalization of the General Assembly. I intend to respond to your call and place on record my delegation’s considered views on some of the important aspects of the issue of General Assembly Revitalization.

First of all, it is critical that we establish a proper relationship of respect for the respective mandates between the General Assembly and the Security Council in the spirit of the Charter.

India joined the Security Council on 1st January last year, after a gap of 19 years. Ever since we have noticed firsthand that the Council’s agenda is, to say the least, overburdened. This is because the Council busies itself with themes which no doubt and are certainly important, but do not appear directly connected to the real and immediate threats to international peace and security. This has left the Council with less time to focus on the real hotspots that constitute the real threats to international peace and security.

At the same time, however, we believe that remedial measures would only be half complete in the absence of serious introspection on what the General Assembly itself can do to mitigate the situation. Clearly, the Assembly will not be empowered merely by strengthening procedures. More important is the presence of political will to take concrete measures to reinforce the role and authority of the Assembly.

I would like this Working Group to lay special emphasis on the intergovernmental nature of the General Assembly. This is absolutely necessary at a time when the challenges to the international system are multiplying. We should abjure the tendency to resort to extraneous mechanisms in the work of the main committees of the General Assembly.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

At the last GA session, we had deviated from our usual emphasis on the matter of selection of the Secretary General since we were in the process of re-electing H.E. Mr. Ban Ki-moon. We did not want to send a signal which could be misunderstood.
However, this matter remains of interest to my delegation and we would like this Ad Hoc Working group to give the attention that this deserves.

We are of the view that the General Assembly must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General. General Assembly Resolution 11 (1) of February 1946 which lays out the “Terms of appointment of the Secretary-General” was the product of an era gone by. The continued circumscribing of the Assembly’s role and responsibilities in the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General needs to change in the interests of the United Nations system in general and the Assembly’s prerogatives in particular. And, as it was the General Assembly which limited its own role, it will have to be the General Assembly that claws back its rightful place in the process of selecting the Secretary-General.

What is to be done?

For instance, the General Assembly adopted resolutions 51/241 of 22 August 1997 and 60/286 of 9 October 2006, which outline in detail proposals on improving the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary-General. Further, the practice established by GA Resolution 11 (1) can be modified to allow for the Council to send a panel of names that the Assembly could choose from as against a single nomination. Additionally, if the member-states attach high importance to the role and responsibilities of the Assembly, we see no reason why the matter should not be “decided by a two-thirds majority” in terms of Article 18 (3) as against the one with a simple majority requirement in Resolution 11 (1). We could also identify objective criteria for the candidatures, including commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter, extensive leadership, administrative and diplomatic experience with due regard being given to regional rotation and gender equality. Equally useful and practical would be to encourage formal presentation of candidatures in a manner that allows sufficient time for interaction with member-states, and also requires candidates to present their views to all member-states of the General Assembly.

Co-Chairs,

I would now like to address two other important issues of relevance to our meeting here today.

First, in our view the Charter provisions clearly reflect the desire of the UN membership to have an international civil service which displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity and which is accountable therefore, if not in higher, but at least in equal measure as the Secretary General is to the General Assembly. In addition, we would welcome closer consideration of procedures for selecting, appointing and confirming the heads of the major Specialized Agencies, Funds and Programmes with a view to ensuring transparency, legitimacy and balanced representation. Second, we believe that the Assembly and other entities that form part of the UN system must reflect diplomatic best practices in its day to day functioning. And here there is a lot of need for interaction and learning to be done from member-states.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In conclusion, let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative and policy-making and representative body of the international community. You can expect India’s constructive support and participation in these efforts.

I thank You.
Hon’ble President of Costa Rica,
Her Excellency Ms. Laura Chinchilla,

Hon’ble Prime Minister of Bhutan,
His Excellency Mr. Jigmi Y. Thinley,

His Excellency Mr. Milos Koterec,
President of the Economic and Social Council,

Madam Chairperson, Ms. Helen Clarke, Administrator, UNDP,

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am honored to be here to speak in this High level Meeting on “Wellbeing and Happiness”: Defining a New Economic Paradigm”. I have not come across a conference where happiness and economic wellbeing have been used in the same sentence. In that sense this is indeed a historic conference and I am truly honored to be part of it.

We deeply commend the efforts of the Government of Bhutan and in particular the leadership of Prime Minister Thinley to bring the idea of Happiness into the larger discourse on sustainable development.

We were happy to co-sponsor the resolution adopted by the UN General Assembly on the subject last year, which has brought us all here today.

Our debate today is most timely.

We are just months away from the Rio Conference, where we would gather to chart a new future: a future free of want and hunger; a future where people live in harmony with nature, a future where social inclusion and development of all are nurtured and deeply valued.

Mr. Prime Minister, your country has been more than a friend to India. In our shared cultural ties, we have had much to learn from each other.

We were indeed honored that you came to Delhi last year to deliver the Prof. Hiren Mukherjee Memorial lecture in our Parliament on Gross National Happiness.

I assure you that your thoughts have given us valuable insights as to what we should do to make our abiding goal of “inclusive growth” as meaningful as you have done for your people.

We share your belief that human development should be based in equal measure on material progress, social inclusion, cultural life and living in harmony with nature.

I am deeply impressed by the words of President of Costa Rica who said that they have given up bullets for ballots. In my country, this reminds us of our own freedom struggle for Independence which was a bloodless revolution.

Madam Chairperson,

The symbiosis between human living and happiness is universal and eternal. Our religions, traditions and philosophies have all taught us to look for inner peace and happiness as the ultimate objective.

Ashoka, the great King of India, promoted peaceful existence based on social welfare, ecological responsibility, impartial justice and respect for all living beings.

But, the huge material progress that we have witnessed since the industrial revolution has cast tremendous pressure on planet Earth. The inherent conflict is not between conservation and development, but between environment and the reckless exploitation of man and earth in the name of high living standards. As Mahatma Gandhi, the father of our nation said “Nature provides enough to satisfy every man’s need, but not every man’s greed.”

In an interdependent world, the answer to these pressing challenges lies in doing things together in a manner that is fair and equitable.

We all have a common responsibility but must accept that massive inequitable consumption of resources by some has created a deficit where there is hardly enough for those whose wants are yet to be met.

This demands that we also accept historical responsibility and agree that our responsibilities today must be differentiated. We must also respect the imperative for equity.

We have made significant progress but are still quite some distance away from achieving the Millennium Development Goals, including eradication of extreme poverty.

We are yet to wipe the tear from every hungry face. There are millions who still live without basic sanitation, health and clothing.

Progress and growth is essential to give these people a life of dignity and respect. This needs to go hand in hand with ecological sustainability and the preservation of social inclusion.
Madam Chairperson,

We do, indeed, need to build a new economic paradigm that can help us achieve this. How else can we move towards sustainable development in an equitable manner unless economic growth, environmental protection and social sustainability nurture and preserve each other?

We must therefore re-evaluate the fundamentals on which our respective civic societies are based and the ideals by which they are sustained.

An ambitious order that seeks to achieve this must not only be harmonious but also inclusive. Such an order should both respect and create choices. 4

The problem for billions of people on this planet is lack of choices. The most effective guarantee for this is the integration of all three pillars of sustainable development on the basis of the Rio Principles. Development process must be participatory in order to allow a full expression of these choices. The process should be inclusive not only at the national level but also at the global level.

We are aware of limitations of the GDP as a measure of economic well-being of the country. However, balancing of economic, social and environmental dimensions in an accounting system of GDP is a challenging notion. The weights attached to each dimension vary over time and space, and differ according to national needs and priorities. Moreover, human well being cannot be captured effectively by any single index.

We should be mindful that, in our quest for additional indicators to complement GDP, we must not move away from inclusive growth. We run the risk of delegitimizing our developmental model if this balance is not achieved.

In fact, an appropriate way is to look at sustainable consumption patterns. The moment is opportune to devise a paradigm for sustainable consumption that is anchored in the Rio Principles.

We need to build effective international partnerships to give effect to these goals.

We must also make global governance truly democratic. The rules of global engagement cannot and must not be the privilege of a few.

I would like to conclude with the words of our father of nation: “I am inviting those people who consider themselves as owners today to act as trustees, i.e. owners, not in their own right, but owners, in the right of those whom they have exploited. I will not dictate to them what commission to take, but ask them to take what is fair.” I can assure you that India will live up to its obligations and global responsibilities in such a fair, equitable and just paradigm.
If we are able to do so, we are well on our way to achieve a sustainable economic paradigm.

I wish happiness to all. Thank You.

Mr. Chairman,

The Indian delegation joins other colleagues in congratulating you on the assumption of the Chairmanship of the UNDC. We also congratulate other members of the bureau on their election. You can be assured of the full support of the Indian delegation in discharging your responsibilities towards a constructive session of the Commission this year. Our delegation would also like to thank the United Nations High Representative for Disarmament Affairs for her interest in the work of the Commission.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Indonesia on behalf of the Non Aligned Movement.

Mr. Chairman,

India attaches high importance to the work of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized deliberative leg of the triad of UN disarmament machinery put in place by the First Special Session on Disarmament. With its universal membership, the Commission provides a unique platform to the international community to discuss pertinent aspects, reach common positions, bridge any differences and adopt concrete recommendations of universal applicability on disarmament issues.

We share the disappointment that the Commission has not been able to achieve consensus on its agenda items for more than a decade now. However, we should bear in mind that the Commission has had several successes in the past when it was able to adopt principles, guidelines and recommendations on specific disarmament issues. We believe that given sufficient political will the UNDC can play an important role in taking forward multilateral disarmament agenda. In the last cycle of meetings there was some progress on the items on the Commission’s agenda even though consensus again eluded us. As we embark on a new three-year cycle of UNDC meetings we call upon all delegations to give a positive impulse to global non-discriminatory disarmament.

Mr. Chairman,

India believes that in the new cycle of work of the UNDC, nuclear disarmament should remain the key agenda item. India attaches the highest priority to nuclear disarmament. India remains committed to the objective of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan of 1988 and the realisation of its vision of a nuclear weapons free world and non-violent world order. As our Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh said in his address to the 66th UN General Assembly, the Action Plan sets out a concrete roadmap for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner. The goal of nuclear disarmament can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework that is global and non-discriminatory. There is need for a meaningful dialogue among all States possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapon in international affairs and security doctrines. Measures to reduce nuclear danger arising from accidental or unauthorised use of nuclear weapons, increasing restraints on the use of nuclear weapons and de-alerting of nuclear weapons are essential steps. The progressive de-legitimisation of nuclear weapons is essential to the goal of their complete elimination.

India is committed to working with the international community to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. The danger of nuclear weapons and related material falling in the hands of terrorists has made the threat more complex and dangerous. While Member States discharge their primary responsibility to strengthen national measures related to nuclear security, it is also important to strengthen international cooperative efforts to address this critical challenge. The IAEA plays a central role in this regard. India has been an active participant in the Nuclear Security Summit process.

India subscribes to a policy of a credible minimum deterrent. We do not subscribe to any arms race including a nuclear arms race. India has espoused a policy of no first use and non-use against non-nuclear weapon states and is prepared to convert these undertakings into multilateral legal arrangements. India has also supported universalization of the policy of no-first use in a global no-first use treaty. We support negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear weapons States against the use and threat of use of nuclear weapons.

India remains committed to maintaining a unilateral, voluntary moratorium on nuclear explosive testing. We are also committed to negotiate a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty to ban the future production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. The future treaty would have to meet India’s national security interests. In accordance with the mandate contained in CD/1299, we believe that CD is the appropriate forum for negotiating the FMCT.

I would like to recall India’s recent contributions to the debate on nuclear disarmament in the UN framework. In 2007 we presented a Working Paper on nuclear disarmament to the UNDC containing specific proposals for consideration of the international community. Our resolutions in the UNGA First Committee titled “Convention on the prohibition of use of nuclear weapons” and “Reducing nuclear danger” are adopted with substantial support. India supports efforts for raising public awareness to generate the necessary momentum for realising the goal of a nuclear weapons free world.

Mr. Chairman,

Based on the recommendations of the relevant UNGA resolutions, the last cycle of the UNDC included “Elements of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the Fourth disarmament decade” as one of its agenda item. Regrettably, we were not able to achieve consensus on this agenda item despite the best efforts of the working groups. We are now in 2012, already well into the decade of 2010s, and this agenda item may look dated. However, we believe that there is still room for the UNDC to deliberate this item in the meetings of the current cycle to see if there is greater convergence of views and the possibility of achieving consensus. The draft Declaration could provide the requisite impulse on disarmament issues in this decade and could set an aspirational disarmament agenda for the international community keeping in mind the current global realities.

Mr. Chairman,

In the last two cycles of UNDC meetings as well as between 2001-03 consensus eluded us on the agenda item related to conventional weapons, although the discussions were useful and a large measure of common ground was achieved. We are ready to once more engage in deliberations on “Practical CBMs in the field of conventional weapons”. India supports practical CBM initiatives at unilateral, bilateral, regional and global levels. Such measures can promote a stable environment of peace and security amongst states by building confidence and enhancing transparency. We believe that a step-by-step approach should be adopted, respectful of the sovereign right of States to choose CBMs best suited to their interests.

Mr. Chairman,

Some delegations have expressed their desire to discuss working methods of UNDC in this year’s meetings. We believe that this issue needs to be approached in light of the discussions which have taken place in the UNDC in the past - in 1998, when the decision 52/492 was adopted and in 2006, when UNGA adopted Resolution 61/98 which included additional measures for improving the effectiveness of UNDC’s methods of work. It is up to us Member States to put the decisions we have taken into practice. Discussions related to disarmament machinery have also taken place in the UNGA under the item “Revitalizing the work of CD and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations”.

We believe that the current impasse in the multilateral disarmament machinery is not due to procedural reasons or indeed due to deficiencies in the machinery itself. Proposals that question the viability or relevance of the disarmament machinery and suggest unrealistic alternatives will not lead to productive results in taking forward the agreed multilateral agenda.

My delegation seeks to actively participate in the deliberations in the days ahead with the hope that we will be able to achieve significant results in this cycle of UNDC meetings.

Thank you.
Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record my delegation's happiness at the decision taken by you to convene this meeting to discuss the role and authority of the General Assembly and its relationship to the principal organs of the United Nations and other groups outside the United Nations.

Today's discussion is both important and timely, and so a few home truths are clearly in order.

Let us acknowledge that UN reforms have been a consistent sore spot over the last few years and no specific issue has epitomized this more than GA revitalization.

But what do we do, Co-Chairs?

As true prisoners of habit, we meet every year and steeped in our own convictions, ritualistically recite our mantras on the issue of General Assembly revitalization while refusing to listen to our partners and being resigned to reiteration for its own sake.

But the world outside has moved on in the last few decades in ways no one could have imagined even in their wildest dreams.

So the principal order of business, as far as my delegation is concerned is to determine whether there exists a consensus amongst us here and today that the time has come for the General Assembly, the G-193 to take remedial action.

If we can at least acknowledge that further delay would not only exacerbate the prevailing apathy but also strengthen trends to look for solutions elsewhere, we would have made some progress, if not we can very well make a ritualistic beginning same time next year!

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

At the outset, let me align myself with the statement by Algeria on behalf of the Non-Aligned Group. And let me amplify of some of the main aspects in my national capacity.

India has consistently held the view that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected in letter and in spirit.
The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. This was the role intended for the Assembly in Article 10 of the UN Charter, namely that it discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, the ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, the ICJ as well as the Secretariat.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

A perception that the prerogatives and authority of the General Assembly have been undermined, in particular by the Security Council has not only gained ground, but I believe has entrenched itself.

First, the Council is increasingly encroaching on issues that traditionally fall within the Assembly’s competence, such as the process of standard-setting and codification of international law and by holding of thematic debates on issues that frequently fall within the purview of the General Assembly or the ECOSOC.

Second, the Council’s annual report continues to be a mere statistical compilation of events, a bland summary and listing of meetings and outcome documents which merely informs without educating, illustrates without elucidating. We associate ourselves with such concerns.

As is to be expected, such concerns have led to calls for urgently recalibrating the relationship between the General Assembly and the Security Council.

The Council would therefore do well to eschew the tendency to give extremely creative and permissive interpretations to the consideration of what constitutes a threat to the peace, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression and to the situations under which it can take action under Chapter VII.

And in terms of its reporting obligations, the Council should not only inform the Assembly of the decisions taken, but also the rationale, efficacy and impact of the Council’s decisions, in terms of crystallized take-aways for the membership.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

At the same time, however, we believe that remedial measures would only be half complete in the absence of serious introspection on what the General Assembly itself can do to mitigate the situation.

Clearly, the Assembly will not be empowered merely by strengthening procedures. More important is the presence of political will to take concrete measures to reinforce the role and authority of the Assembly.

Foremost in this regard is the need to properly appreciate and then correctly situate the Assembly within the plurality of multilateral mechanisms that deal with global issues. In our view, the primacy of the Assembly flows from the universality of its membership as well as the diligent application of the principle of sovereign equality of all its members. Ownership therefore, of the Assembly's decisions and activities, is reflected in the degree of participation by member-states. So, if there is a foreboding sense of apathy towards the work done in the Assembly, the member-states are also partly to blame.

If the member-states, instead of engaging in substantive deliberations in the six main committees that could result in setting new norms, spend considerable resources on procedural issues they will only encourage the usurpation of their role by other institutions both within and outside the UN.

We also call for enhancing the oversight role of the Assembly vis-à-vis the UN staff and as reflected in the working of the Fifth Committee.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In conclusion, let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative, policy-making and representative body of the international community.

You can expect my delegation's constructive support and participation in your efforts.

Thank You.
Mr. Chairman, Thank you very much for inviting me and for giving my delegation the great honor and opportunity to sponsor today's event. Mr. Chairman, when I walked in here, I was told by my colleague from the US delegation Ambassador Dicarlo, that she was told “Madam please improvise”. So here goes the sheet of paper that my colleague, Prakash Gupta, prepared for me.

Mr. Chairman, I also want to make another observation. There must be something very good that your Committee is doing, that today, we have many more people who are attending after passing through the visitor’s entrance rather than those of us who sport these blue colored passes. I am very delighted to be able to welcome so many of you - the wonderful people who make New York and other parts of US, their home.

My colleague sitting here, the Acting Head of the Department of Public Information said to me - “India and J azz ? I did not realize you had anything to do with it” and I told him “Friend, I know we are exactly on the other side of the globe, if you look at it with the United States in the center. But you know we are the country, which is not only the great mega diverse country in terms of bio diversity but also perhaps the most mega diverse country, in terms of culture, in terms of ethnicity, and above all, in terms of welcoming everything from all around the world. And I dare say, we not only welcome all of these and give it a home, but give it a loving home. In my understanding, J azz is one of those wonderful things.

It traversed, the seas, the Atlantic ocean and some parts of the Indian ocean, the land route which connects Europe and India, and somehow landed up in the sub continent, more so in particular the city of Calcutta, which was then the reigning city of the British colonial empire, which we were a part in the late 1920s and early 1930s. It found a beautiful home and a home which then later on spread to Mumbai, and has found permanent home and a permanent place in India since then. In terms of perhaps one of the biggest things that we do, which is produce films in Bollywood, the underline theme of the great song and dance sequences that you see, have this wonderful connotation and wonderful relationship of having a base in jazz music, as a result of the inter play which happened in the late 1920s and early 1930s. An inter - play which was greatly facilitated by the presence of wonderful people from the United States, who served in India during the end the 2nd world war, and later on as a cultural Ambassadors of United States.
You know for Jazz we often use the word: improvise. A jazz musician doesn’t necessarily have to read, though he or she has to be trained and needs to know what they are doing. They obviously have a certain parameter in which they perform but they have this ability to transcend, to go beyond that. Indian classical music, in a very interesting sense, does exactly that. It is one of the oldest forms of music in the world, obviously rigid in its own way, but allowing for a great deal of improvisation. So the connections with jazz, is not only the connection of the mind, that improvisation - has been integral to us, and the way we take things dutifully forward. Also when the discovery of Indian music, especially Indian classical music took place here in the west, in the United States in particular, it was jazz musicians who came forward and who adopted and introduced some of the leading lights of Indian classical music and made them available to the wider audience of the world, in particular the United States.

Today we are marking in the United Nations for the first time the International Day of Jazz. This is a great occasion something absolutely wonderful and I am very delighted to see the Chief Archivist, Mr. Morgenstern, representing the history of Jazz. It is very good to welcome you here sir and also welcome of course, to so many of you who are involved in the world of jazz in various ways.

The Government of United States along with a leading foundation are presenting a fantastic and a very large scale concert to honor Jazz today in the evening. It also features two maestros from India. I heard about it several weeks back when the Government of US circulated a note for all members here. And I must say, again, it is something typical of my country, I guess, it is spirituality and the matters of the heart that some of these things come together.

Around the same time, I happened to meet a wonderful person Mr. Susheel Kurien, who hails from India. I met Susheel at a dinner and Susheel and I started speaking about Bombay, Mumbai- the city where he grew up and where I studied, and we spoke about the changes that we notice in Mumbai. Mumbai is a city which quintessentially grew up to become one of the largest cities in the world, one of the major financial heavyweights in the world, center of business industry- equivalent of the Wall Street in our country and quite a large one, if I may say- all of this happened during India’s growth during the period when we were part of British Empire.

I asked him how he sees Mumbai having changed in the last 40-50 years, mentioning that the ones I notice, are the changes that have been captured in the Indian Film Industry. Indian films from the time that they started getting made, which was only a few years after films were launched in the entire world, invariably featured in their music sequences a saxophone player. They also invariably featured a piano. But as I see things having evolved over many years perhaps decades, their music remains very vibrant, it remains very lively, and at the heart and soul of the films. But I notice that the saxophone has tended to be missing. I see also the piano has gone missing, the notes are great, the musicians are being heralded all over the world and they have been winning Oscars and so on and so forth. I believe that in a large way Jazz has contributed to the an India, which also makes for theme of today's panel which is "Unlearning Intolerance: Jazz as a force of education and dialogue", because I think that jazz gave us a unique experience and insight into globalization, into maybe the ethos in the ways of thinking of the people here in the west, but allowed us in India, to imbibe the spirit of cosmopolitanism. We have grown tremendously. The economy has grown. The urban areas have grown. But maybe we have become much more metropolitan. I don't know if I can really draw the distinctions between cosmopolitanism, cosmopolitan behavior and metropolitan behavior but in my own mind, it's the way in which I think about so much of the change in urban India.

But coming to my own story about Susheel, so at the same time when I met Susheel, I spoke to him about Mumbai and then he said, "Hey, you know something, I have just made a film" and I said "Wow, I thought you were one of the achievers of the corporate world, the good Indians who migrated to New York, United States have done well for themselves, Wall Street, the big consultancy firms etc, "he said "yes, yes, I was doing all of that, but I chucked it up a few years back now I play music in a lovely place and I made this film"; I said what was the film, and he said he made a film on the history of Jazz in India!

Believe me, ladies and gentlemen, that there could not have been a more beautiful coincidence than the one I am relating to you. And I really must thank my friends from the Committee on Information, Ramu Damodaran, an old friend of mine, and the Mission of the United States for having agreed to join us and help us in this- for us to be able to bring this to you, to the other side of the world. The entire business of Jazz, as a global medium is being celebrated today and I am extremely happy and delighted and indeed immensely pleased to be able to say "look the exact other side of the world has also provided a home, indeed, a loving home for Jazz".

We are very happy and proud, and very happy that Susheel, you've done something which would allow everybody to know that Jazz, not only spread from various parts of the United States to the other parts of the United States but has actually been a global idiom, and has gone global, and I am very delighted that my country India could have been a part of it. I want to thank you all very much, especially Ambassador Rosemary DiCarlo and her delegation, DPI, the Committee on Information, and above all, you, Ladies and Gentlemen who have joined us here today.
I am sure today will not only be a wonderful experience for all of you but I think that you will take back quite a lot, hell of a lot, if I may say so, from this particular beautiful element which I am very glad we were able to do it, at the United Nations, which quintessentially embodies the spirit of people coming together, the world being one place, and all of us working together on this theme, and indeed as the old Indian saying goes that “the world is indeed one big family”.

Thank You.
Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record the Indian delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by you to convene this meeting.

India has consistently held the view that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the UN is respected both in letter and in spirit. The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the UN in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues.

At the outset, we would like to align ourselves with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Co-Chairs,

The Assembly must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General.

In our assessment, General Assembly Resolution 11 (1) of February 1946 which lays out the “Terms of appointment of the Secretary-General” was the product of an era gone by.

It was an instance when the General Assembly decided to outsource the process of the Secretary General’s selection to the Security Council. Now however with the circumstances having changed considerably it is perhaps the appropriate time for the General Assembly to claw back.

General Assembly resolutions 51/241 of 22 August 1997 and 60/286 of 9 October 2006 which outline in detail proposals on improving the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary-General must be fully and faithfully implemented. The practice established by GA Resolution 11 (1) can be modified to allow for the Council to send a panel of names that the Assembly could choose from as against a single nomination. Additionally, if the member-states attach high importance to the role and responsibilities of the Assembly, we see no reason why the matter should not be “decided by a two-thirds majority” in terms of Article 18 as against the one with a simple majority requirement in Resolution 11 (1).

We could also identify objective criteria for the candidatures, including commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter, extensive leadership, administrative and diplomatic experience with due regard being given to regional rotation and gender equality. Equally useful and practical would be to encourage formal presentation of candidatures in a manner that allows sufficient time for interaction with member-states, and also requires candidates to present their views to all member-states of the General Assembly. Co-Chairs,

On the matter of selection of other Executive Heads in the UN system organizations, our position flows from the clear guidelines in the Charter.

These provisions clearly reflect the desire of the UN membership to have an international civil service which displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity and which is accountable therefore, if not in higher, but at least in equal measure as the Secretary General is to the General Assembly. In addition, we would welcome closer consideration of procedures for selecting, appointing and confirming the heads of the major Specialized Agencies, Funds and Programmes with a view to ensuring transparency, legitimacy and balanced representation.

Co-Chairs,

The primacy of the Assembly flows from the universality of its membership as well as the diligent application of the principle of sovereign equality of all its members. Ownership therefore, of the Assembly’s decisions and activities, is reflected in the degree of participation by member-states. So, if there is a foreboding sense of apathy towards the work done in the Assembly, the member-states are also partly to blame.

If the member-states, instead of engaging in substantive deliberations in the six main committees that could result in setting new norms, spend considerable resources on procedural issues they will only encourage the usurpation of their role by other institutions both within and outside the UN. We also call for enhancing the oversight role of the Assembly vis-à-vis the UN staff and as reflected in the working of the Fifth Committee.

Co-Chairs,

On the issue of the visibility and enhanced public awareness of the work of the General Assembly, our position is two-fold.

First, the member-states need to make the Assembly and its work more relevant to the evolving international system, in other words, the presence of political will to take concrete measures to reinforce the role and authority of the Assembly. We need to properly appreciate and then correctly situate the Assembly within the plurality of multilateral mechanisms that deal with global issues.

Second, there are a number of best practices available in this regard in various international organizations, albeit on a smaller scale. Such best practices could be used as a guide to promote visibility and enhanced public awareness of the work of the General Assembly.

In conclusion, distinguished Co-Chairs let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative, policy-making and representative body of the international community.

You can expect our constructive support and participation in your efforts.

Thank You.

Your Excellency President of the General Assembly,
Your Excellencies Heads of State and Government, Excellency Secretary General of the United Nations,
Excellencies Ministers of Member States,
Distinguished delegates,

Allow me to begin by thanking you Mr. President and the Secretary General for convening this debate on the “State of the World Economy and Finance in 2012”. The United Nations with its convening power and collaborative strength of all member states is uniquely placed to guide such a global discourse.

From the perspective of developing economies, the current crisis, which began in 2008, interrupted a fairly long period in which developing countries experienced broad based growth. Asia was the fastest growing region, but it was not the only one. Growth was fairly broad based with sub-Saharan Africa and Latin America also participating.

These gains in prosperity were interrupted when the crisis of 2008 produced a deceleration in global growth in 2009. At first, it looked as if the crisis had been effectively contained as the industrialised countries and the global economy recovered strongly in 2010. But progress was again interrupted in 2011, with the emergence of sovereign debt problems in Europe, especially in the Eurozone periphery.

These problems persist. The Eurozone is projected to experience a mild contraction in the current year with unemployment at very high levels. There are substantial downside risks if confidence is not restored. The US is in a better position but growth is still weak and unemployment, though declining, remains high.

What is most disturbing is that there seems to be little consensus on how to move forward. Monetary authorities in both the US and Europe have acted boldly to counter recessionary tendencies. This had some effect, but there are serious doubts on whether further space exists to continue these policies. On fiscal policy, there are sharp differences on how to proceed and many distinguished economists argue that fiscal austerity is actually the wrong medicine in the circumstances.

Whatever be the correct balance on this issue, the fact that the policies are not showing results in terms of an early return to growth and a moderation in unemployment creates the danger of “policy fatigue”. This can lead to extreme turns in both politics and policy.

The problem is all the more complicated because we are not dealing with a crisis in one country but in several countries in the industrialized world. Given the high degree of inter-connectedness between these economies, we would get much better results if the response was in the form of co-ordinated national policies. This would also help mobilize domestic public support for difficult policies by showing that they are part of a global effort to deal with the problems, in which other countries are doing their bit.

Unfortunately, the world lacks institutions of global economic governance which could produce the policy co-ordination that is needed. Co-ordination is proving difficult even within the group of Eurozone countries. It is not surprising that it is proving difficult in wider groupings. The G-20, which includes all the major economies both industrialized and developing, is attempting to create a system of mutual consultation that might help to co-ordinate policies across the G-20. However, that effort is still a work in progress. It remains to be seen how effective these mechanisms will prove.

Mr. President,

Slow growth in the industrialized countries is not in itself a problem since these countries currently enjoy very high levels of per capita income. However, it is important to ensure that the slower growth that represents the new normal is managed in a way that ensures greater inclusiveness and social acceptability.

Inequality has risen sharply in these countries and high levels of unemployment combined with inequality create the perception that the system is unfair.

Industrialised countries must also pay greater attention to the need to ensure sustainability of their high levels of consumption. These levels currently involve a carbon footprint per capita which we know is unsustainable. Serious efforts by the industrialized countries to lower their per capita carbon footprint will trigger new technologies which alone can provide a solution to this problem. Over time this will also allow other countries to make their growth patterns more sustainable.

Developing countries face very different challenges. They have much lower per capita incomes and for them growth is essential if they are to raise their population to basic levels of living that will ensure human dignity. The slowdown in industrialised countries after 2008 has had an adverse impact and this must be countered so that these countries can return to the path of rapid growth.

Although developing country growth has slowed down, it is a matter of satisfaction that it has remained more robust than many would have expected. This “growth resilience” reflects the fact that large numbers of developing countries now have stronger human and institutional capacities to grow. These economies are not delinked from industrialised countries; the links are strong, but they operate on a higher underlying growth potential.

Slower growth in the industrialised world will limit the export potential of developing countries. However, faster growth in developing countries as a group is creating new opportunities for trade expansion which would help offset loss of markets in the industrialised world.

The shift in economic weight in favour of the developing world that is taking place is a natural consequence of the process of convergence and should be welcomed. Faster growth in the developing world is not just good for developing countries. It has positive feedback effects on the industrialised world, which could help the recovery in industrialized countries.

Mr. President,

Our experience in India reflects what I have said about the developing world. In the five years prior to the crisis, the Indian economy grew at an average rate of 9%. Following the crisis, it slowed down to an average of just over 7%. We believe India has the potential to grow at rates between 8 or 9 per cent for the next twenty years and to do so in an inclusive manner. There are many challenges we have to face domestically to achieve this target but we believe we can do so. However, we would be greatly helped if the global environment is supportive, and we are willing to work with others to make it so.

What can global community do to restore growth in the developing world? I have already mentioned the need to reach agreement as early as possible on the resolution of the sovereign debt problem in the Eurozone. Early resolution will remove much of the uncertainty which currently pervades financial markets and which affects investor sentiment adversely. Resolution of this uncertainty, and the consequent elimination of downside risks, is actually as important as getting faster growth in the industrialised world.

Growth in developing countries depends critically upon a well functioning international financial system channeling resources efficiently around the world. Given the much higher growth potential in developing countries, a well financial system should ensure a sufficient flow of long term capital towards them.

However, the current state of the global financial system does pose problems. Excessive leverage, built up in the past due to consciously lax regulatory policies, is now sought to be corrected. This is being done at a time when a large part of the banking system of industrialised countries has been weakened by the sovereign debt problems in Europe, and the extent to which it can be recapitalized remains uncertain. The consequent de-leveraging could have an adverse effect on longer term capital flows. Excess liquidity resulting from lax monetary policy in industrialised countries, combined with deleveraging by the banks, could create an excess of short term capital even as longer term capital dries up. This will not be to the advantage of developing countries.

The multilateral development banks can play a major role in correcting these aberrations. Until recently, it used to be thought that private financial markets were efficient and for this reason the financing of productive investment in developing countries could easily be handled by the private sector. The crisis has taught us that many of the assumptions about efficient intermediation were not correct. We also know that in the short run the international banking and financial system will be under strain. This is therefore a time when the Multilateral Development Banks, especially the World Bank, should significantly expand their lending for infrastructure development in the developing economies. Investment in infrastructure would make a major contribution to strengthening the growth potential of developing countries. The scale of the challenge can be appreciated from the fact that if the World Bank is not recapitalised, the scale of IBRD lending from next year onwards will be no higher in real terms than it was ten years ago!

The international community responded promptly to the need to provide additional resources to the IMF after the crisis. A further expansion is being considered to deal with the spillover of the sovereign debt crisis. These resources will be used primarily to assist richer countries. There is surely an equally overwhelming need to recapitalize the MDBs to meet the financial requirements of developing countries for financing infrastructure.

Trade is universally regarded as the most important lubricant for development. It is unfortunate therefore that negotiations to complete the Doha Development Round are languishing. An early conclusion of this Round, in a manner reflecting the priorities of the Development agenda, would send a major positive signal to the global community.

Mr. President,

The economic woes we face today cannot be overcome without the major developed countries taking the lead to stimulate economic growth. There is an urgent need for farsighted leadership which can call for tough decisions while managing popular aspirations.

Steps at the national level must be accompanied by a broader based advance in improving global governance. The most pressing challenge is the reform of the international financial system giving important developing countries more voice and participation in the decision making structures of the BWIs. We welcome the beginning that has been made in this direction. It must be continued further. An equally critical element in global governance is the long pending reform of the UN Security Council so that it reflects contemporary realities and not the world of 1945.

Looking further ahead, the Climate Change negotiations are a major challenge. We must ensure progress in a manner which reflects the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibility which underlie the UNFCCC. Urgent action is needed to operationalize the Green Climate Fund and the Technology Mechanism.

The upcoming UN Conference on Sustainable Development in Rio de Janeiro next month is an opportunity to set a strong agenda for sustainable development including growth, social cohesion and environment protection. Green economy must not come in the way of efforts of developing countries to promote inclusive growth to eradicate poverty.

I thank you.

Mr. President,

Thank you very much. Let me begin Mr. President by felicitating you on your election and please allow me also to compliment all of us in this Assembly here for our sagacity for having chosen someone with the experience that you bring to the table and I am very glad that you will be guiding our deliberations at this session and thereafter. Thank you very much.

Mr. President,

My felicitations also to the other members of the Bureau. I am very delighted to see the Director of the South-South Unit here too. We have excellent partnership with him and his team and we are grateful for all the cooperation that we have received.

Mr. President,

Let me start by saying that we align ourselves with the statement delivered by the distinguished Permanent Representative of Algeria on behalf of the Group of 77.

India welcomes the progress made so far on the implementation of the new directions strategy and the Nairobi outcome document.

Mr. President,

India has a unique experience in nation-building given our large, diverse and complex reality. Our approach to South-South Cooperation has been therefore to share this experience and knowledge in a spirit of solidarity with countries from the South treading similar paths of socio-economic development. South-South Cooperation has therefore been integral to India’s foreign policy and diplomacy from the very beginning.

As early as 1964, India recognized that capacity building is a key development need, and established the Indian Technical and Economic Co-operation (ITEC) Programme as an important means of channelizing India’s technical assistance to fellow developing countries. This flagship programme covers 158 developing partner countries with over 5000 participants being offered training in 200 courses spread across 42 leading institutions each year in a wide range of areas from hi-tech like IT, S&T, pharmaceuticals to agriculture, rural development, SMEs, etc. The ITEC programme is demand-driven and response-oriented.

Apart from countries in our neighborhood, we have a rich agenda of technical cooperation with Africa, a continent with which we have age-old ties, that currently spans several initiatives including the establishment of an India-Africa Virtual University, with 10,000 new scholarships to be available for African students. We also initiated the path-breaking Pan African E-network project and the TEAM-9 initiative focused on West Africa that seeks to bridge the ‘digital divide’ between Africa and the rest of the world.

During the India-Africa Forum Summit held in May 2011 in Ethiopia, we announced additional 5 billion US dollars for the next three years under lines of credit to help Africa achieve its development goals and an additional 700 million US dollars to establish new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions. We have committed for the next three years more than 22,000 scholarships to students from Africa to invite them to study in India.

I am pleased to share that India today has a vibrant and large-scale programme of cooperation with ALL 48 Least Developed Countries across Africa, in our neighborhood in Asia and across the GRULAC region. It spans the entire spectrum of human activity such as agriculture development, information technology, irrigation, aquaculture, disaster management, remote sensing, telemedicine, textile engineering, accounting and finance, clean technologies, rural development, and SMEs.

Another key facet of our joint initiative with countries of the South, has been along with Brazil and South Africa, our IBSA initiative and we are extremely pleased that our partners in this are the South South Unit.

Mr. President,

Let me also flag a few issues which are of importance to our delegation and are being considered before the Seventeenth Session of the High Level Committee:

First, our cooperation with fellow developing countries is premised on the principles of voluntary partnership and are based on national ownership and in line with national priorities of our partners. This is in contrast to ODA, with its attached conditionalities. South-South cooperation is a partnership in solidarity between developing countries involving sharing of experiences, expertise, knowledge and provision of assistance based on capacity to partner. Its paradigm, therefore, is distinct from that of North-South development cooperation. Moreover there should be a clear understanding that South-South cooperation can supplement North-South Cooperation but cannot substitute or dilute the obligation and quantum of North-South aid flows.

Second, formulations on frameworks for operational guidelines for defining South South cooperation, must confirm to and flow from the Nairobi Outcome Document, without references to non UN processes. More importantly, the distinction that these are guidelines for UN agencies and not member states must be made clear right from the outset.

Third, South-South Cooperation requires that developing countries have the policy space for their own development. Given the vast difference in development levels between countries of the North and those from the South, it is important that South-South Cooperation is not straight-jacketed in terms of rigid rules and regulations or policy prescriptions, including those in the name of aid effectiveness. Flexibility and adaptability is the key to the success of South-South Cooperation. These must not be compromised.

Fourth, we welcome efforts to upgrade and strengthen the Special Unit on South-South Cooperation. With the fast paced changes on the South-South cooperation landscape, the United Nations needs to catch up to this new reality by clearly recognising its paradigms and not seek to fit them into the traditional North South aid paradigm. The UN through its network of developmental agencies has a universal presence in developing countries which can be leveraged for enhanced South-South cooperation among developing countries.

Mr. President,

The world has changed and the UN needs to reflect contemporary realities. The rise in cooperation among developing countries is not a transient phenomenon. It is here to stay and its paradigms need to be accepted and acted upon.

Thank You.
Mr. President,

I am happy to participate in today's plenary meeting on the agenda item 130 titled, “Interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union.” We welcome the Secretary General's report on the subject (A/66/770) which is a comprehensive catalogue of some of the modalities and examples of interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and IPU over the last two years. We are also happy to co-sponsor the resolution A/66/L.45 on the subject which amongst other things calls for the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the sixty-eighth session of the General Assembly the item titled, “Interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union.” Let me also place on record, our appreciation for the work done by the Permanent Mission of Morocco in this regard. Mr. President, India is the largest democracy in the world. The success of the democratic principle and all the institutions that it entails has defined my country and its approach to relations with the rest of the world.

No wonder then that we have placed great emphasis on the work of the General Assembly ever since we joined the United Nations. In fact, even as early as the eighth session of the Assembly in 1953, an Indian, Mrs. Vijaylakshmi Pandit had the singular honour of presiding over this august House.

Mr. President, This year-2012 also happens to mark the sixtieth anniversary of the first sitting of the Indian Parliament.

Speaking on the occasion, Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh said, “The story of the Indian Parliament is a story of the human striving for freedom and dignity; for tolerance and equality; for peace and progress. Our Parliament has not just voiced the concerns and aspirations of the Indian people alone, but those of all humankind, of every freedom loving person who seeks a life of dignity and peace. Our Parliament stands as a unique representation of the values that created our Republic – of Unity in Diversity, of Secularism, of Pluralism and of the Rule of Law. How we conduct ourselves, how the Parliament conducts itself, is therefore, a way of showing respect to these values and to the memory of those who created and built this symbol of freedom and dignity. Each one of us owes it to those who sent us here to not only represent their views and their interests, but to do so with dignity, compassion and decorum. Our democracy has passed through many testing times. At every turn the people of India have with great enthusiasm and hope reiterated their faith in the democratic character of our State and reaffirmed the pluralistic character of our polity and society. Among democracies around the world India has one of the highest voter turn-outs in elections. "Mr. President,

The Inter-Parliamentary Union [IPU] which is the world organization of 159 national parliaments has done yeomen service over the last decade or so in promoting closer coherence and interaction with the UN and its activities. The areas in which the IPU has contributed include peace building, human rights, gender equality, economic and social development, international law, achievement of MDGs, protecting the interests of the least developed countries and the like.

Of particular relevance is the role that the IPU and its members are playing and should continue to play in the years to come and which relates to cementing a culture of multilateralism and internationalism in today’s world.

As rightly pointed out by the Secretary General in his report, “Parliaments and their members have a vital role to play in ensuring respect for, and implementation of, international commitments. Parliaments have a wide range of tools at their disposal to ensure that national laws, policies, actions, programmes and budgets reflect the principles and obligations contained in various international instruments.”

This has been most evident in the context of gender issues, in particular the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

We are of the view that such trends must be strengthened and encouraged.

Mr. President,

An important pillar of the on-going interaction between national parliaments and the UN is the practice of various member-states of including legislators as members of national delegations to UN meetings and events.

Many of you would have witnessed active participation by some of India’s finest Parliamentarians in the Assembly, Council and the varied Committees during the period October to November every year. We have found this tradition to be very useful both for the visiting legislators as well as for us here in New York. I am happy to note that this practice finds special mention in the resolution.

Mr. President,

In conclusion, permit me to reiterate that India attaches importance to the role of the IPU and the interaction between the IPU, national parliaments and the UN. We will play our role in pushing this interaction forward.

Thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, at the Annual Session of Executive Board of UN Women on 29 May 2012.

Mr. President,

My felicitations to the Executive Director and Under Secretary-General, Madam Michelle Bachelet for her extremely informative statement and I would also complement UN Women for an insightful report on the progress made on the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women Strategic Plan 2011 - 2013, which has been placed for consideration before the Board.

Mr. President, when we embarked upon the Strategic Plan of UN Women in June last year, we had called for it, to be ‘ambitious, achievable and results oriented’. Today, one year down the line, at the midway mark of the second operational year of UN Women, my delegation is happy to note the significant milestones that the Strategic Plan has achieved under the dynamic leadership of Madam Bachelet, in such a short span of time.

I am particularly pleased to learn that UN Women has made ‘partnerships’ its key underpinning approach while pursuing its mandate and implementing its business model, especially by forging active partnerships with civil society, besides NGOs, academia, media and the business community. We are also happy to learn the unique manner in which social media has been used as part of globally driven communications strategy to achieve an audience of 40 million, through social media alone! The virtuous cycle of normative and operational work of informing and reinforcing the impact has been another value added for UN Women.

Mr. President, the way UN Women has been able to influence policy narratives across the globe, whether it be on issues as women’s rights in the new constitution under consideration in Egypt and Kenya, or services for gender based violence survivors in the occupied Palestinian territory, or in championing the rights of indigenous women in Ecuador, are, all small yet significant, milestones in a brief but important journey. We also appreciate the work being done in India and our South Asian region, including in the SAARC context by UN Women in areas ranging from political participation and leadership, economic empowerment, ending violence against women and gender responsive annual budgeting.

We are also happy to learn that UN Women has been able to lay the foundation of a strong edifice by strengthening capacities of field offices in 33 countries, and basing them on ‘result based plans and effective budgeting’. We also note the success UN Women has achieved in leading, coordinating and promoting the accountability of the UN system in a short time through the adoption of the SWAP framework by 51 entities. For UN Women to play a strong leadership role globally, as well as within the UN system, these are key imperatives for achieving results with limited resources.

Mr. President,

Representing a country which is home to more than 500 million women, let me submit, that women’s economic and political empowerment has been the cornerstone of our policy making, all along. More so, when 69% of our total women population (nearly 405 million women) reside in the rural areas alone. It is in this context, that contribution of rural women to our GDP growth and their central role in poverty reduction has been a key guiding factor in the framing of our national policies.

Economic empowerment of Indian women at the grass roots level, especially through 4.8 million women led Self-Help Groups (SHG’s) has been a hallmark of India’s success story. Covering over 97 million beneficiaries, these have provided microfinance, employment and livelihood, and have made a defining change in the lives of millions of Indian women at the village level.

While SHG’s are aimed at encouraging women to take up self employment, the launching of the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MNREGA) in 2005, which is a gender sensitive nationwide employment scheme, has ensured that at least one third of the beneficiaries are women. Pertinent to point out that so far, 50% of the total person days of employment provided under the scheme have gone in favour of rural women alone.

In addition, as part of our flagship scheme of Indira Vikas Yojana, of the houses which are provided to families below the poverty line, it is mandatory that they are allotted in the name of the female member of the household. This is in recognition of the fact that if economic empowerment of women is to be sustained, ownership of assets by women has to be made essential. Also in our National Food Security Bill introduced in Parliament in December 2011, a specific provision has been made that only a woman can be treated as the head of a household for purpose of issue of ration cards and food entitlement documents.

I am also pleased to inform you that the Government of India has, as a Policy, adopted Gender Budgeting as a tool for mainstreaming gender to ensure translation of Government’s policy on gender equity into budgetary allocations. To institutionalize this process, we have initiated the formation of Gender Budget Cells within all our Ministries and Departments.

Mr. President, on the global scale and within the UN system, let me also point out the stellar role, that Indian women, in the form of a 100 plus ALL women peacekeeping unit, (which is perhaps the first ALL women unit of UN Police in history), have been playing as part of the UNMIL in Liberia since 2007 (in response to UNSC resolution 1325). In addition to providing security to the President's office, the all women Indian peacekeeping contingent provides Liberian children with medication, lessons on using computers and self defense. Since their arrival, there has been a transformative change in women’s participation in the security landscape of Liberia. The numbers speak for themselves. Five years ago, one in 20 Liberian police personnel was a woman. Now, nearly one in five is female! According to UNMIL itself, applications from women to join the police force tripled the year, after the all women Indian peacekeepers arrived.

Mr. President, allow me to flag a few issues of concern to the main agenda of the Annual session of the Executive Board.

First, the regional architecture review being presently considered by UN Women must aim to adapt the existing organizational structure in a manner so as to support the most efficient and effective implementation of its mandate. While my delegation welcomes the decentralised decision making envisaged as a result of this process, the balanced development of capacities at global, regional and national levels should be ensured to serve the critical functions you have identified. Madam President, as you undertake the regional architectural review, you can count on my delegation’s full support for improving the organisational structure of UN Women to make it a more dynamic, decentralized, cohesive and a well connected UN entity.

Second, the report of the progress achieved in the strategic plan has identified a few key challenges that UN Women faced in 2011, especially the systematic exclusion of women from peace negotiations and their economic exclusion. While identification of such critical challenges is important, it may also be worthwhile suggesting approaches to address these challenges in the future strategic plans, so that decision makers are able to factor such approaches during the policy formulation stage itself.

Third, work on gender equality and empowerment of women continues to remain chronically underfunded. If we have to ensure that UN Women stands for action, the donor community must move beyond the political rhetoric of just stated commitments, and transform them into the much needed monetary support for the organization. We hope that the comprehensive resource mobilisation strategy would help in widening the donor base in order to secure the resources required by UN Women in meeting its global commitments. Let me also re-iterate that as part of our stated commitment of five million US dollars to UN Women’s core predictable funding, India has already contributed two million US dollars to UN Women, so far. We will continue to provide full political and financial support to UN Women and call on others to do likewise.

Let me conclude, Mr. President, by reaffirming India’s steadfast commitment to the all round social, economic and political empowerment of our women, whatever effort and resources, the task might take. It is up to us, members of the Executive Board to ensure that Madam Bachelet and her team are given the necessary authority, mandate and resources to deliver. We assure you that India will always be willing to walk the extra mile, as UN Women embarks upon this journey.

Thank You.

641. Statement by Mr. Vinod K Jacob, First Secretary, at the Meeting of the Adhoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly on June 01, 2012.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record the Indian delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by you to convene this meeting.

The Ad Hoc Working Group on GA revitalization is an integral part of the ongoing process of UN reform. One could quite rightly compare our Working Group, just like the Intergovernmental Negotiations on United Nations Security Council reform, to an airside transfer bus or apron bus that is used for transferring passengers from the airport terminal arrival or departure gate to the aircraft.

In our case, the current and yet to be revitalized General Assembly is the airport terminal arrival or departure gate, while the aircraft is the General Assembly we wish to see as a result of the process of the revitalization. Of course, there are no guarantees about snags during take-off and in mid-flight, but try we must!

In this regard, we should thank the Chef de Cabinet of the PGA for his briefing as well as the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management for their insights as well on some critical elements of the revitalization process.

Co-Chairs,

India has consistently held the view that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the UN is respected both in letter and in spirit. The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the UN in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues.

At the outset, we would like to align ourselves with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Before I proceed to elaborate our position on the issue of strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly, permit me to outline our position on the balloting process and the prospective improvements being considered.

Co-Chairs,

India is no stranger to the application of newer and modern technologies to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of electoral processes.

In our considered view, the revitalization process of the General Assembly will benefit immensely if we are able to introduce those technologies that are efficient, and that ensure the security and confidentiality of the voting process.
Co-Chairs,

We call for augmenting the resources to ensure the efficient and successful functioning of the office of the PGA in keeping with its dignity and prestige. In our mind, providing the resources in terms of protocol and security for the PGA needs to be done forthwith.

We also need to find ways and means to institutionalize the existing trust fund established to address the issue of the increasing financial burden associated with the enhanced activities and travel of the PGA. We need to have a sustainable system in place.

Co-Chairs,

There is a palpable desire among the wide UN membership to have a PGA’s office that displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity. We, the member-states should help in this process. There are a number of steps that can be taken in this regard.

First, we need to maintain the fine balance between two factors relevant to the composition of the office of the PGA. On the one hand, we must ensure that the geographical balance of General Assembly membership is reflected in the composition of the Cabinet of the President of the General Assembly. On the other hand, we must apply this principle in synergy with a merit based system that helps the PGA assemble the most effective team.

Second, a certain degree of continuity between the incoming and outgoing Presidents and their Cabinets is necessary. There are many ways to do this, but we believe that the two Presidents are the best judges of how to go about the same.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In conclusion, let me reiterate the Indian delegation’s basic position that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected in letter and in spirit.

We will continue to support your work in the future to ensure the success of our common endeavour to revitalize the General Assembly.

Thank you.

Mr. President,

Let me begin by thanking all the previous speakers for their presentations and useful insights on the concept of Human Security and how to work forward to close the conceptual framework and move towards its implementation.

In this regard, I also thank the UN Secretary General for his comprehensive report (A/66/763) on ‘Human Security’. We also wish to recognize the contribution of Japan in pursuing this debate in the UN.

Mr. President,

While the idea of human security appears obvious and is well captured in the World Summit Outcome document paragraph 143 as freedom from fear, freedom from want and right to live with dignity for all individual in order to fully develop their potential, it is important that we situate this in a conceptual framework in the multilateral context.

The discussions over the conceptual framework for human security have been long and drawn out. This is not surprising since human security issues, and related threats and vulnerabilities naturally vary from one situation to the other. We, therefore, look at the human security framework as one which guides our response to challenges confronting us, rather than a policy goal in itself.

We have, however, made significant progress. We have taken note of the common understanding of ‘Human Security’ outlined in paragraph 36 of the UNSG’s Report. It provides a good basis to carry forward our discussions towards an accepted and clearly articulated ‘common understanding’ on human security.

In fact, India has been stressing many of these elements in our statements on the subject in the past. Today’s deliberation and the new resolution will no doubt help further refine this understanding.

Human security encompasses the inter-linkages between peace, development and human rights. The common understanding of this issue needs to recognize that the primary responsibility for human security rests with States and their Governments.

Governments retain the primary role for ensuring the survival, livelihood and dignity of their citizens. The notion of human security is distinct from the responsibility to protect and its implementation.
The concept of human security must avoid the securitization of the economic and social discourse, and concentrate on capacity building and the empowerment of people.

The concept must be people centric and should go beyond the narrow framework of protection of population from physical security like war and conflict to a much broader framework to encompass multi-dimensional and comprehensive parameters with development as the central pillar. It is evident that absence of development and growth will adversely affect ‘freedom from want’ and ‘freedom from fear’.

From our perspective, the idea of human security needs to eschew the idea of the interventionist approach. The understanding of human security needs to be clearly anchored within the framework of UN Charter and principles of State sovereignty, which are the bedrock of international relations.

Mr. President,

The SG’s report also identifies four areas where human security can bring particular added value to the work of the UN. These are areas which include climate change; post-conflict peacebuilding; global financial and economic crisis and the MDGs; and health and related challenges.

Some of these areas have cross-cutting linkages as well. These identified areas, which by no means are exhaustive, of course, encompass challenges, which are not necessarily confined within national boundaries.

We also live in a world that has a fair degree of globalization. We are cognizant of the complexity associated with this concept and its multidimensional linkages at national, regional and international level.

Therefore, it is imperative to stress the need for genuine international cooperation. The responsibility of the international community is to complement and provide the necessary support to Governments, on their request, to strengthen their capacities to respond to current and emerging threats and challenges.

Such international cooperation must recognize the inherent constraints many developing countries face especially in mobilizing internal and external resources for the socio-economic and developmental activities as also strive for solutions that are embedded in local realities and are based on national ownership. Mr. President,

In India, we are proud of our democratic traditions and civilizational ethos of tolerance, respect and mutual understanding. Democracy and rule of law is the bedrock of our political structure. We are committed to ensure fundamental rights and dignity to every citizen.
In recent years, our efforts for social and economic transformation has, moreover, focused on improvement in quality of life in an inclusive manner i.e. bringing the fruits of economic development to all sections of our society, particularly in rural India and among the vulnerable.

It is our belief that a comprehensive approach to human security is the only way that this concept would help every human being explore his/her potential to the maximum, while pursuing a life of dignity in a safe and healthy environment.

Mr. President,

India has been constructively engaged in deliberations on this issue of human security. I wish to assure you that we will continue to do so and work towards an early implementation of this concept for benefit of all.

Thank You, Mr. President.

shedshed
Thank you, Mr President.

At the outset, I would like to thank you, Mr President, for convening this meeting of the General Assembly. I would also like to thank the Secretary General H.E. Mr Ban Ki-moon, Joint Special Envoy Mr Kofi Annan, the Secretary General of the League of Arab States Dr Nabil El-Araby and the representative of the High Commissioner for Human Rights for their statements on the situation in Syria.

2. Mr President, India continues to remain deeply concerned at the deteriorating situation in Syria. Attacks against civilians and security forces have intensified over the last few weeks and have taken a significant toll. Meanwhile, we have also witnessed a sharp increase in the number of terrorist attacks in different parts of the country. The year-long crisis has also created a difficult humanitarian situation, and as many as a million Syrians are said to be in need of humanitarian assistance.

3. We strongly condemn all violence, irrespective of who the perpetrators are. We also condemn all violations of human rights.

4. Mr President, India has, from the beginning of the crisis in Syria, called for a peaceful and inclusive political process to address the grievances of all sections of Syrian society. We have also been supportive of the efforts by the United Nations and the League of Arab States for a peaceful resolution of the crisis through a Syrian-led inclusive political process. In this context, we have been fully supportive of the efforts of Joint Special Envoy Kofi Annan.

5. The growing militarization of the conflict in Syria will have serious consequences for peace, stability and security not only in Syria but also in the larger region. A military approach to the Syrian crisis will not only further exacerbate the situation and fuel a large-scale sectarian civil war but also cause havoc by aiding and abetting terrorism and proliferation of weapons that will have serious consequences for the entire region and beyond.

6. What is needed, therefore, is that all sides to the conflict recommit themselves to the six-point plan of Mr Annan and cooperate to create an environment conducive for launching an inclusive Syrian-led political process. This also calls for cessation of all outside support for armed groups and serious action against the terrorist groups operating in Syria. Expeditious action is required by all sides to cease violence. Progress should also be made on other aspects of the six-point plan, including provision of humanitarian assistance, access to and release of detainees, and full respect for political and civil rights of all...
Syrians. Only thus can the legitimate aspirations of the Syrian people be met while ensuring respect for Syria’s sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

7. With this objective in view, we believe that the Joint Special Envoy should be given sufficient time, space and flexibility to pursue his mandate. There should be one mediation process led by Mr Annan and his efforts should be fully supported. No action should be taken by any side, inside or outside Syria, to derail the Annan Mission.

8. In this context, we commend UNSMIS and its observers for their work in a difficult situation. All parties should ensure safety and security of observers and provide them an environment in which they can implement their mandate independently, impartially and fairly. All parties should cooperate with the United Nations so that urgently needed humanitarian assistance can be provided to those in need. The concerned parties should also cooperate with the United Nations so that violations of human rights and other crimes, including the recent incident in El-Houleh, are fully investigated and their perpetrators brought to justice.

9. In conclusion, Mr President, I would reiterate India’s full support to UNSMIS and Mr Annan’s efforts to resolve the Syrian crisis through an inclusive Syrian-led political process without any further bloodshed.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President. Let me at the outset congratulate Judge Meron on his assumption of the post of the President of the Residual Mechanism in addition to the continuing post of the President of the ICTY. I also want to congratulate Judge Joensen on assuming the office of the President of the ICTR. We have heard carefully their presentations and assessment of the work of the Tribunals. We also appreciate the briefings given by the two Prosecutors.

2. Mr. President, India welcomes the progress made by the two Tribunals in expediting their work. We are reassured by the assessment of Judge Meron and Judge Joensen that the preparations for the commencement of the Residual Mechanism are on track. We have noted that the Arusha Branch of the Residual Mechanism commence its work from 1 July 2012.

3. We are happy to note that the recommendations made by the Council, including about hiring and retaining qualified interns, during its previous reporting period have brought tangible results and helped the Tribunals progress faster towards the implementation of completion strategy and the commencement of the Residual Mechanism.

4. We appreciate that Judge Meron has undertaken a variety of reforms to improve the functioning of various sections of the Tribunal. As a result, the trial of Mladic, Hadzic and Karadzic has been advanced many months ahead of their expected schedule. Similarly, appeals in some cases have been advanced significantly ahead of their schedule. This is a very positive sign and we congratulate Judge Meron on this welcome development.

5. We are happy to note that the ICTR has completed work at the trial level with respect to 83 of 93 accused persons, while nine accused remain at large. All trials are on track and will be completed by end 2012.

6. We commend the efforts of the Prosecutors for undertaking outreach initiatives, including training, aimed at strengthening capacity of national systems to handle referred cases effectively. This will preserve the legacy of the Tribunals.

7. We also note with satisfaction the progress made in the implementation of the Residual Mechanism. Any functional, operational or institutional issue in the implementation of the Completion Strategy or the Residual Mechanism should be addressed by the Council in consultation with the Council’s Informal Working Group on International Tribunals.

8. Mr. President, it is critical that the Tribunals finish their work on time. We have listened very carefully to the concerns raised by the Presidents of the two Tribunals in relation to their ability to keep pace with their work while adhering to expected timelines until the ‘close of business’. The Judges have pointed out that trials and appeals continue to be affected by staffing shortages and the loss of highly efficient staff members. We share the concerns expressed by the Judges, especially on the need for retaining adequate and experienced staff.

9. Careful consideration should be given to the suggestions made by the Judges on how to address these challenges. This is a practical issue and requires consideration of pragmatic and innovative solutions and we stand ready to work with other members of the Council to solve this problem.

10. Judges have also raised the issue concerning the relocation of acquitted persons and those who have already served their sentences. Some of them are living in safe homes in Arusha for the last 5 years. This is an important humanitarian issue and needs careful consideration.

11. Mr. President, we welcome the cooperation extended by all States concerned with the Tribunals, which is vital to ensure the completion of the mandates of the Tribunals as well as for the successful implementation of the Completion Strategy. We appreciate Serbia’s sustained efforts in this regard and request other States to continue to extend effective cooperation so that the remaining fugitives could be located soon and surrendered to the Tribunals to end impunity.

12. In conclusion, Mr. President, we believe that the two Tribunals have admirably implemented their mandates. We believe that the support of the Security Council is crucial at this critical juncture in the life of the Tribunals. At the same time, we urge both Tribunals to take all necessary measures to keep the trial and appeal schedules on track. This will pave the way for successful trials of the remaining accused and a smooth implementation of an efficient Residual Mechanism.

I thank you.

Mr. President,

My felicitations to the Administrator Madam Helen Clark for her extremely informative statement and insightful annual report and for providing us key perspectives on the agenda for organizational change.

Let me also take this opportunity to complement the team of UNDP for using the ‘new outcome and output indicator’ concept for the Annual Report for the first time. We are happy to note the ‘multiple win’ approach to development that UNDP has worked out as an intersection of the global and national development agenda. Given my own country’s development imperatives, we are also pleased to learn that of the nine focused outcomes, while addressing poverty issues, ‘inclusive growth and social equity promoted through pro poor fiscal policies’ have been successful.

Mr. President, while all these significant strides made by UNDP in 2011 are welcome, we must acknowledge that we are meeting at a time of serious economic crisis and political ferment in the world. The Rio+20 Summit on Sustainable Development has just a few days ago given us “the future we want” and suggested us the means and roadmap to realize it. And let me quote my Prime Minister when he reiterated the need for inclusiveness and cooperation at Rio: “Difficult though it may seem, we have to summon the imagination to balance the costs that we will incur in the present with the benefits that will accrue to future generations”.

As you plan the roadmap for the next strategic plan, we would urge the need for UNDP to consider the following:

First, for UNDP to be successful globally it needs to be firmly rooted in the ‘D’ of UNDP, which is development. Poverty eradication still remains the overriding priority for developing countries. Those living at the subsistence level cannot bear the costs of adjustment and their livelihood considerations are important in determining how scarce natural resources such as land, water and forests are used. For developing countries, inclusive growth and a rapid increase in per capita income levels are development imperatives. It is therefore our considered conviction that poverty eradication should at be the heart of UNDP projects as its primary objective.

Second, strengthening institutional capacity building in developing countries has to be a core focus area of UNDP. We believe that only a strategy that seeks to direct the thrust of the international development effort towards the neediest countries, that are the most vulnerable will provide the greatest dividends for the global development agenda. It is a strategic choice and investment that should be made and sustained by all stakeholders.

Many countries could do more if additional finance and technology were available.
Unfortunately, there is little evidence of support from the industrialised countries in these areas. My delegation believes that by virtue of its unique position as the largest development arm of the UN system, UNDP can become a ‘force multiplier’ by fostering national and local capacities, strengthening networks for sharing of knowledge and best practices, promoting national ownership, and by building institutional capacities in developing countries.

Third, South South cooperation is an important development pivot in sharing information and increasing collaboration in best practices amongst developing countries. Even though ‘South South Cooperation’ continues to be the buzzword in the narrative of the developmental discourse for developing countries, much more remains to be done to give it the ‘muscle’ it needs from the UN system.
We note with concern the limited references to recognition of these initiatives for promoting South South cooperation in the Annual Report of the Administrator and hope that in the future, such reports would attempt to correct this omission and elaborate on South South initiatives.

India’s cooperation with developing countries under the ITEC programme has been an important facet of our multidimensional approach to South South cooperation. Another such model of our cooperation with the UNDP has been the IBSA Trust Fund, managed by the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation in the UNDP, within which, we have already concluded several key developmental projects including rural electrification through solar energy systems in Guinea Bissau, improving the health infrastructure services for Children in Cambodia, rehabilitation of health centers in Cape Verde, beside several others in Palestine, Burundi and Lao PDR. As Chair of the IBSA Trust Fund this year, we are committed to exploring ways to further strengthen this engagement with the UNDP through innovative partnership mechanisms that facilitate development solutions for other developing countries, particularly the LDCs, and other interested developing countries. However, we encourage the UNDP to continue to harness the full potential of South-South Cooperation and would urge you, Madam Administrator, to explore ways and means to further strengthen the Special Unit for South South cooperation.

Fourth, the paradigm construct of South-South cooperation requires that developing countries have the policy space for their own development. It is distinct from that of North-South development cooperation, with the clear understanding that South-South cooperation can supplement North-South Cooperation but cannot substitute or dilute the obligation and quantum of North-South cooperation. Given the vast difference in development levels between countries of the North and those from the South, it is important that development projects under South-South Cooperation are not strait-jacketed in terms of rigid rules and regulations or policy prescriptions. Flexibility and adaptability is the key to the success of South-South Cooperation. These must not be compromised.

Fifth, as we work out the roadmap for the next strategic plan, it is indeed pertinent to frame the discussion in the context of the ongoing Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QCPR), so that we are able to forge synergies within the overall policy framework of the UN System. However, some basic paradigm differences do remain in the contours of the development approach, which must be premised on the principle of “No one size fits all”.

Sixth, the ongoing review of programming arrangements being carried out by UNDP, must flow from the principle that its largest recipients and beneficiaries, where development needs are critically needed and where the teeming millions of poverty struck still reside, i.e. the LDCs and the LICs, should be least impacted. If we all affirm this principle, then we would indeed be able to work out a constructive consensus and give meaningful direction to the programming arrangements for the period 2013-2017.

And finally, economic development, social inclusion of all stakeholders within a state and environmental sustainability are all equally critical as components of sustainable development. The task before us is to give practical shape and content to this architecture in a manner that allows each country to develop according to its own national priorities and circumstances.

To conclude, Madam Administrator, we look forward to the success of the India UNDP partnership that was initiated during your visit to India early this year. Let me once again reassure you of India’s strong support and steadfast commitment to UNDP.

Thank you.

Mr. President,

I would like to take the floor to thank UNFPA for the comprehensive country programme document for India 2013-2017 that has been placed before the Board today for consideration.

We value our long standing partnership with UNFPA which began in India in 1974. Within the overall UNDAF, the seventh Government of India-UNFPA country programme had provided important inputs to the 11th Five Year Plan objectives and various national policies and schemes through advocacy, expanded partnerships and the provision of technical assistance. Given this context, we value UNFPA’s support to our national efforts.

We also note with appreciation the focus in this country programme to build on the national priorities articulated in the approach paper of the 12th five year plan of India. We are particularly pleased to note that UNFPA will encourage South South collaboration, including partnerships with the private sector, promote the generation and sharing of knowledge and assist in fostering innovative solutions.

As pointed out in the CPD, India is experiencing a population ‘bulge’ in the working age group, and in this regard there is the need to invest in the health and development of young people, in order to fully harness the benefits of this demographic dividend. We also welcome the proposal in the programme document to reduce disparities and promote inclusive development through a strategic focus on young people, especially in the five states, where its most needed, and where UNFPA is currently providing support.

As outlined in the approach paper for the 12th five year plan, the Government of India is committed to providing universal access to high quality services and is looking at doubling the expenditure dedicated to health care to 2.5% of our GDP. We are also happy to inform that school enrolment and retention rates have increased across regions and the gender gap has narrowed with more girls attending schools.

The upcoming 12th Five Year Plan Approach Paper calls for achieving “faster, sustainable and more inclusive growth” and we expect that the Government of India-UNFPA country programme of cooperation will contribute to informing policies, practices, programmes, public opinion and to strengthen national capacity to incorporate population dynamics in national plans and programmes with a focus on gender and inclusive growth.
I would like to reiterate our steadfast support to UNFPA in fulfilling our common vision and goals, as we jointly embark upon implementing this country programme. Thank you, Mr. President.
Statement by Ambassador M.S. Puri, Deputy Permanent Representative on Agenda item: 118, UN Global Counter Terrorism Strategy Review at the 66th UNGA on June 28, 2012.

Mr. President,

I will begin by joining others in congratulating Ambassador Guillermo E. Rishchynski, distinguished Permanent Representative of Canada, for his outstanding efforts in facilitating consultations and achieving a consensus resolution on the third review of the UN Global Counter Terrorism Strategy (Strategy) that we are going to adopt later today at the conclusion of this debate.

We also thank the Secretary General for his report A/66/762 on the activities and efforts of the United Nations system in implementing the Strategy.

Mr. President,

Terrorism is a global scourge. It continues to be a pervasive and insidious threat not only to international peace and security but also to the core values of the United Nations.

It is our firm conviction that no belief, justification, political cause or argument can be used to justify acts of terrorism.

We condemn terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, irrespective of its motivations, as criminal and unjustifiable and therefore reiterate that no cause, no matter how seemingly just, can excuse terrorism.

Mr. President,

The adoption of the UN Global Counter Terrorism Strategy in 2006 was a landmark in the fight against terrorism. The Strategy is a unique and universally agreed strategic framework to counter terrorism and is intended to play a pivotal role in guiding counter-terrorism efforts undertaken at the global, regional, sub-regional and national levels.

We support the implementation of the Strategy in a comprehensive and integrated manner in all its four pillars.

The institutionalization of the Counter Terrorism Implementation Task Force (CTITF) in 2009 and the establishment of the UN Counter-Terrorism Center (UN CCT) in 2011 within the CTITF are important steps towards strengthening UN efforts to counter terrorism by providing an umbrella under which different UN entities can effectively support the implementation of the Strategy in a coordinated and coherent manner at the global, regional and sub-regional levels.
We are confident that these will be helpful in streamlining the overall work of the UN system in countering terrorism.

As the principal responsibility for the implementation of the Strategy rests with member States, we hope that these would also provide a useful platform for practical engagement of the CTITF and the UN CCT with member states guided by their individual needs.

With a view to further enhancing transparency and synergies in the UN counter-terrorism architecture, we support consideration of UNSG’s proposal on a Counter-Terrorism Coordinator in a timely manner.

Mr. President,

My own country, India, has faced the scourge of terrorism for over two-and-a-half decades.

And, indeed, our entire region, South Asia, has been wracked by the activities of the biggest terrorist actors in the world, be they Al-Qaeda, elements of Taliban or Lashkar-e-Taiba, Jamat-ud Daawa and others.

Speaking at the General Debate of the 66th UN General Assembly, our Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh said that the fight against terrorism must be unrelenting and fought across all fronts with no selective approaches in dealing with terrorist groups or the infrastructure of terrorism.

Effectively combating this global scourge requires necessary political will of Member States and greater international and regional cooperation. It is imperative that terrorists and their supporters know that the international community is absolutely firm in its resolve to counter terrorism.

I should like to recall that on the 10th Anniversary of the establishment of the 1373 Committee, a Special Meeting of the Counter-Terrorism Committee was held on September 28, 2011 in New York. The Outcome Document adopted by the Committee approved a zero-tolerance approach towards terrorism which is now part of the UN counter-terrorism lexicon.

While combating terrorism, we need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism.

It goes without saying and in fact it is absolutely essential that measures taken by States to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

Mr. President,

We need to impart greater momentum to efforts in bolstering the ability of Member States to confront this global menace through greater international and regional cooperation and capacity building efforts.

India strongly supports all efforts, especially within the purview of the United Nations that strengthen international and regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism, including efforts aimed at supporting the implementation of the Strategy. I am happy to note that this has been the focus of the third review of the Strategy.

We must also continue to strengthen the normative framework at the United Nations.

Time has come for adoption of the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism which has been pending for a long time. The comprehensiveness of implementing the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy will be enhanced with the conclusion of this Convention.

The Convention would also plug loopholes in the international legal framework that UN has developed to counter terrorism. As committed in the Strategy, Member States should make every effort to reach an agreement on the text and adopt the Convention in order to unite behind the global counter-terrorism efforts.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I wish to reassure you that India will continue to effectively contribute to UN efforts in countering terrorism and in supporting the implementation of the Strategy at the international, regional, sub-regional and national levels.

I thank you, Mr. President.
Mr. President,

I would like to take the floor to thank UNDP for the comprehensive country programme document for India 2013-2017 that has been placed before the Board today for consideration.

Within the overall UNDAF, the current Government of India-UNDP country programme provided catalytic impetus to the 11th Five Year Plan objectives and various national policies and schemes through advocacy, expanded partnerships and the provision of technical assistance. Given this context, we value UNDP’s support to our national efforts.

We note with appreciation the focus in this India country programme on the four UNDAF outcomes, namely inclusive growth, governance, sustainable development and gender equality. It is also in consonance with the approach paper for the 12th Five Year Plan of the Government of India, which has also called for ‘faster, sustainable and more inclusive growth.’

The CPD is focused on nine states within India where more than 65% of people below the poverty line, reside. As such, we hope that it would be able to complement Government of India’s efforts in these states in the eradication of poverty. We hope that this country programme would draw upon the lessons learnt from mid term review of the previous country programme, which had pointed out the need to move towards fewer and more strategically focused areas of engagement, longer time frames to achieve results, strengthening policy advocacy, greater state engagement and field based monitoring.

We hope that the Government of India-UNDP country programme of cooperation will contribute to informing policies, practices and public opinion in advancing a stronger inclusive growth driven path and contributing to the poverty-alleviation efforts of our national government.

In our own 11th Five Year Plan, several positive developments have taken place towards fulfillment of India’s commitments to inclusive growth, sustainable development and gender equality. We hope that the country programme for 2013-2017 can help complement these efforts, and we expect UNDP to continue giving support to the thirteen major flagship programmes in India through this country programme. Given the scale, reach and capacity of such programmes, Government of India is committed to contribute to the sustained achievement of key national and globally agreed development goals including the MDGs.
We also hope that UNDP would further build on ‘partnerships’ – as its key approach, when looking at implementing this CPD, including a constructive engagement with all key stakeholders. Such initiatives, including initiatives in South South cooperation would help to develop and sustain strategic partnerships that find innovative solutions to address gaps on both the demand and supply side of development. We also acknowledge with appreciation UNDP’s emphasis to in the country programme to focus on Disaster Risk Reduction in a synergetic manner, by integrating it into the four major national flagship schemes on health, education, roads and employment. We believe that Government’s efforts to improve gender equality and inclusive growth through commensurate investments is an important area for UNDP, to also contribute. These must be done within the framework of overall National policies and programmes.

I would like to reiterate our steadfast commitment to the India – UNDP strategic partnership agreement that was signed recently and we remain committed to supporting UNDP in fulfilling our shared vision for development, as we jointly embark upon implementing this country programme. Thank you, Mr. President.
Mr. President,

It is my pleasure to address the ECOSOC High-Level Segment. On behalf of my delegation, I extend warm congratulations on your stellar leadership in steering the work of the ECOSOC.

The theme of this year’s Ministerial Review shines the spotlight on urgent economic and social concerns that have a particular resonance in today’s turbulent economic climate. The sovereign debt crisis in the Euro Zone continues to cast its shadow on the process of economic recovery, and has further exacerbated an already serious worldwide unemployment problem.

I thank the Secretary-General for the insights offered in his reports before the Council. We concur with his recommendation that macroeconomic policies need to be realigned to give centrality to the goal of full employment. The questions of enhancing productive capacity and employment to eradicate poverty deserve the highest priority in national and international policy-making frameworks. Further, without putting developing countries, especially LDCs, LLDCs, and SIDS, at the forefront of the global development agenda, we cannot realistically expect progress on the Millennium Development Goals.

Mr. President,

Current indicators present a dismal picture. According to the International Labour Organization (ILO), the world is facing a serious jobs crisis with 200 million people without work, an increase of 27 million since the start of the financial crisis. In addition, many more are underemployed or in exploitative jobs, with earnings below subsistence level. 600 million jobs need to be created over the next decade to stave off the crisis—a formidable task under any circumstance. Women and young adults are the worst affected. Between 2007 and 2011, the number of unemployed young people in the 15 to 24 age bracket has increased by an unprecedented 4.5 million.

From the perspective of developing economies, the generation of productive and gainful employment on a scale that is sufficient to absorb the growing labour force is a critical element of the strategy for poverty eradication and achieving sustainable development. Labour is the sole asset of poor people. Perversely, however, in most developing countries, this vital resource is under-utilized and under-remunerated.

The heavy reliance on agriculture, high demographic growth, significant increase in youth unemployment and the impact of the HIV/AIDS epidemic on the labour force has rendered the challenge of full employment that much more difficult. Developing countries face the additional hurdle posed by different trade barriers. Such trade barriers have a deleterious effect on employment growth in developing countries. The destruction of farming livelihoods in the developing world as a result of subsidies in the developed world is a well-documented example. An early conclusion of the Doha Round so as to reflect the priorities of the Development agenda is therefore imperative.

We need to see a significant scaling up of public investment in infrastructure, technology, education, and skills development as well as social spending in order to enhance productive capacity and generate employment, particularly in the LDCs and LLDCs. Multilateral development banks, particularly the World Bank, have a role to play here in expanding lending for infrastructure development in developing countries.

Mr. President,

In India, we are conscious of the crucial role that full and productive employment plays in sustained growth and inclusive development. In the words of our Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, we believe that ‘the most effective weapon against poverty is employment. And, higher economic growth is the best way to generate employment.’

We have introduced one of the largest social security measures in history through the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme. This is one of the most significant direct interventions by the State to generate employment. It makes the right to work a fundamental right by providing 100 days assured wage employment annually to every rural household. It provides a social safety net, infrastructure and access to health in rural areas. At least one-third of the beneficiaries of this programme are women. Today, this scheme reaches one out of every five households in the country.

The government is also implementing the Prime Minister’s Employment Generation Programme to provide employment opportunities to individual entrepreneurs and self help groups, including women, in both rural and urban areas. Financial assistance is provided along with various backward and forward linkages such as entrepreneurship development training, exhibitions, marketing and awareness generation camps.
Under our National Health Insurance Scheme RSBY initiated in 2008, we are providing cashless health cover to people below the poverty line. Today the RSBY covers about 25 million workers in the unorganized sector.

We have exerted effort to scale up our skill development programmes and extend them through the length and breadth of our country. Under the National Skill Development Mission, the government takes a collaborative approach together with the private sector, technology developers, and NGOs. The target is to impart skills to 500 million youth by 2022.

This is particularly relevant in our case as India is experiencing a population ‘bulge’ in the working age group. India has the youngest population in the world; its median age in 2000 was less than 24 compared to 38 for Europe and 41 for Japan. The number of persons below the age of 35 years in India is about 70 percent of our total population. 225 million Indians are between the ages of 10-19 years. Skills development and enhancing productive capacity are therefore critical. If we get it right, it could be a potential demographic dividend for us. However, if not properly addressed, we could be facing a ‘demographic nightmare’.

We have enacted the Right to Free and Compulsory Education Act for providing better education to our youth. We have increased public resources to our major endeavour in education - the Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan which is the national policy to universalize primary education. In addition, the Prime Minister's Bharat Nirman scheme on the six critical areas of rural infrastructure is designed to enhance rural activities and generate more income and rural employment.

Mr. President,

We are meeting here less than a month after the historic Rio+20 Conference on Sustainable Development. Member-states individually and the international community collectively will have to show determined and bold action to pursue the ambitious agenda on poverty eradication and sustainable development set by our leaders in Rio. It is abundantly clear that we cannot afford the luxury of a business as usual approach.

Overcoming the challenges of global unemployment is a pre-requisite to banish poverty and achieve the MDGs. We must take concerted action to create an enabling environment at the international and national level for promoting full employment while improving productive capacity.

I thank you, Mr. President.
650. Statement by India on Kenya’s National Voluntary Presentation at the High-Level Segment of the 2012 Substantive Session of the Economic and Social Council of United Nations, on July 3, 2012.

Mr. President,

I thank you for this opportunity to make a few brief observations on the national voluntary presentation of Kenya.

I would also like to thank the distinguished representative of Kenya for his insightful and comprehensive presentation.

It is clear that Kenya has laid down a strong policy framework for accelerated economic growth and development. The Kenya Constitution 2010 and the Kenya Vision 2030 orient its efforts in a forward-looking and positive direction.

India would like to commend the broad array of initiatives Kenya has unleashed for generating employment opportunities and promoting productive capacity. It reflects Kenya’s strong commitment to eradicate poverty and achieve the Millennium Development Goals.

While noting the impressive strides made by Kenya to propel its development agenda, the presentation today does not shy away from clearly portraying the scope of the country’s development challenge. As in many other developing countries, poverty and high unemployment rates remain amongst the most persistent problems for Kenya.

We in India are familiar with the development challenges facing Kenya. We further share commonalities in our strategies to overcome them. The emphasis on devolved funds resonates with us as we have a similarly decentralized approach that initiates development interventions at the grassroots level so as to empower citizens in their own development and growth. Similarly, we share the emphasis on investment in education, vocational skills training, women’s empowerment, micro and small-scale enterprises.

Mr. President,

The presentation also drew attention to the kind of gaps that exist between the need for resources and their availability. In doing so, it offered a roadmap for the involvement of the international community in terms of technical and financial assistance. We have noted that Kenya is soon drawing up an external resources policy that will provide a framework for mobilizing and utilizing external resources.

India stands ready to further strengthen our robust development and trade partnership with Kenya. As one of the first countries in Africa where India established a diplomatic mission after independence, we have a special engagement with Kenya, which has stood the test of time.

We would encourage the international community to provide full support to Kenya’s development efforts in employment generation, productive capacity and poverty eradication, firmly aligned with its national priorities and policies.

Mr. President,

We would be interested to hear more from Kenya about the kind of support it expects from its international partners in terms of the specific thrust areas and the nature of involvement. We also look forward to hearing about its plans for improving agricultural productivity given the role of rural employment in the overall economy. It will further be of interest to hear from Kenya’s experience of the kind of strategies that have worked so far in employment generation and strengthening productive capacity and those that have not quite had the desired impact.

In concluding, I express the hope that the United Nations will facilitate in disseminating Kenya’s experiences across the world. It has lessons and best practices to share from its efforts, which we feel will be of value for other countries.

I thank you.
Mr. President,

At the outset, my delegation would like to thank the Secretariat for the comprehensive documentation prepared for this segment.

India aligns itself with the statement delivered by the distinguished representative of Algeria on behalf of the G-77 and China.

The Rio+20 Conference on Sustainable Development has just a few weeks ago handed to us “the future we want” and laid out the roadmap to realize it. As we set out on this roadmap and deliberate on how to impart substance to the QCPR process, my delegation would like to submit the following:

First, for UN development system to be successful globally, it needs to respond to the greatest challenge confronting developing countries, namely, poverty. Those living at the subsistence level cannot bear the costs of adjustment and their livelihood considerations are important in determining how scarce natural resources such as land, water and forests are used. For developing countries, inclusive growth and a rapid increase in per capita income levels are critical development imperatives. It is therefore our considered conviction that poverty eradication should be at the heart of UN’s operational activities for development, as its primary objective.

Second, the centrality of gender equality and women’s empowerment in development should find full reflection in the QCPR process. We must seize the opportunity provided by the QCPR to facilitate a policy framework that accelerates the realization of the twin goals of gender equality and women’s empowerment.

Third, developing countries have their own set of ‘needs’ and different ‘context’ based requirements, which the UN development system must find ways to respond to. The operational activities of the UN system must design programming activities that are harmonised with the budgetary and planning cycles of recipient Governments. The UN operational activities should feed into national development plans. The fundamental principles of national ownership and leadership, and deference to national development priorities must be the pivots around which UN development interventions are modeled and implemented.

Fourth, financing for development is coming under increasingly acute pressure. The present global economic slowdown has adversely impacted plans of national governments in developing countries to even consider scaling up developmental financing. And the diminishing quantity of finance available for developing countries, remains a central challenge for the attainment of Internationally Agreed Development Goals, including the MDGs. The requirement of enhanced ODA is all the more critical now, when developing countries are faced with curtailed capital flows, economic slowdown and increased programming requirements. These needs must be met by efforts to increase ODA, promote investment and trade flows, by facilitating transfer of and access to advanced technologies by developing countries, and by expanded and innovative financing of development activities.

Fifth, even though ‘South South Cooperation’ continues to be the buzzword in the development discourse, much more remains to be done to give it the ‘muscle’ it needs from the UN system. South-South cooperation is distinct from North-South development cooperation. It supplements but cannot substitute or dilute the obligation and quantum of North-South cooperation.

And finally, while we plan for the post 2015 development agenda, we should look at strengthening institutional capacity building in developing countries as a key focus area of UN operational activity. In order to be a real ‘force multiplier’, the operational activities of the UN development system should foster national and local capacities, strengthen networks for sharing of knowledge and best practices, and promote national ownership by building institutional capacities in developing countries.

My delegation further believes that the thrust of the international development effort should be directed towards the neediest countries, where the most vulnerable reside. It is a strategic choice and investment that should be made and sustained by all stakeholders.

In concluding, Mr. President, let me once again reassure you of India’s strong support and steadfast commitment to continue sharing our development experience and expertise with our fellow developing countries.

I thank you.
652. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative in Explanation of Vote after the vote on the General Assembly Resolution on Syria on August 03, 2012.

Thank you, Mr President, for giving me the floor.

2. Since the last meeting of the General Assembly on this agenda item, the situation in Syria has steadily deteriorated. Neither side has implemented its obligations under the six-point plan of Joint Special Envoy Kofi Annan, which was endorsed by Security Council resolutions 2042 and 2043. The conflict has got increasingly more militarized and a number of terrorist acts have been committed against state institutions and public infrastructure. There have been gross violations of human rights by all sides. The humanitarian situation has also become dire, and more than two million Syrians are said to be in need of humanitarian assistance. Unfortunately, the Syrian parties, instead of seriously commencing a Syrian-led political process, have pursued a military approach to realize their objectives.

3. We strongly condemn all violence and violations of human rights irrespective of who their perpetrators are. We also condemn in the strongest terms possible the terrorist acts that have been and continue to be committed in Syria. We call upon all parties to dissociate themselves from terrorist groups and ensure that no space is provided for those groups.

4. Mr President, under the prevailing circumstances in Syria, there is an urgent need for the international community to close ranks and send a united message to the Syrian parties to walk back from their military approach and resolve the crisis through an inclusive Syrian-led political process. There is no other way to bring about a sustained cessation of violence in all its forms by all parties. This is also the only way to end human rights violations and create an atmosphere for safe and unhindered delivery of urgently needed humanitarian assistance.

5. Mr. President, we have consistently called for international efforts to assist the Syrian parties to resolve the crisis and bring about peace through dialogue and political processes. Accordingly, we have strongly supported the efforts of Joint Special Envoy Kofi Annan. Even though Mr Annan has resigned, it is important to note that his efforts have put in place a set of valuable documents, which, if implemented, can facilitate a political resolution of the Syrian crisis without any further bloodshed.

6. In order to assist the Syrian parties change their course and address the crisis through political dialogue, it is important that all parties, inside and outside Syria, fully abide by their obligations under resolutions 2042 and 2043. The parties must be prevailed upon to implement the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the Final Communiqué issued at Geneva on 30 June, which have been accepted by the Government of Syria.

7. Mr President, India firmly believes that it is critical for the United Nations to remain strongly involved with the Syrian parties and other actors in the search for a way forward. Unilateral action of any kind will not resolve the crisis. It will only exacerbate the problem and cause greater instability and violence. We also believe that the leadership of Syria is for Syrians to decide through a democratic process. The task of the international community, anchored in the United Nations, is to assist the Syrian parties in this process.

8. Mr President, the resolution that the General Assembly has adopted today makes specific reference to the decision of the League of Arab States of 22 July 2012. Though we do not hold any brief for any particular Syrian leader, we cannot welcome the League of Arab States resolution of 22 July 2012, which openly called for President Assad to step down from power and for other UN members to sever diplomatic relations and contacts with Syria. It is unfortunate that this element of the present resolution was not removed, and hence we have abstained from the resolution today.

I thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to first congratulate you on your re-election as the Chairman for the third session of the Open-Ended Working Group on Aging. We look forward to constructive deliberations under your guidance.

As several delegations have pointed before us, the population of the elderly has been increasing globally, and is projected to increase at a significant rate in the future.

This has been a consequence of increased life expectancy, advancement in technology and health systems, and rural migration and increasing urbanization. These trends have presented significant challenges to policy makers that need to be addressed in a systematic and consistent manner. We are grappling with similar challenges in India as well.

Mr. Chairman,

To address the issues relating to aging, the Government of India has taken a number of steps over the past decade.

In 1999, we first developed a National Policy on Older Persons. This policy mandated State support to ensure financial and food security, health care, shelter and other needs of older persons, equitable share in development, protection against abuse and exploitation, and availability of services to improve the quality of their lives.

The Maintenance and Welfare of Parents and Senior Citizens Act enacted in 2007 strengthened the legislative framework in this important area.

As per the national census, the number of 60+ citizens increased from 77 million in 2001 accounting for 7.5% population to 98.5 million in 2011 accounting for 8.3% population. These figures are projected to increase to 173.2 million by 2026 accounting for 12.4% population in India. Accordingly a need was felt to draft a new National Policy on Senior Citizens.

A new draft was prepared in 2011 and posted on the website of the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment. The draft policy is being finalized in consultation with State Governments and other stakeholders.

Mr. Chairman,

Our approach has been underpinned by a multi-stakeholder approach to enable elderly persons to lead productive lives. This approach recognises and factors in the need for encouraging individuals to make provision for their own as well as their spouse’s old age as well as encouraging families to take care of their older family members. It also involves cooperation with voluntary and non-governmental organizations to supplement the care provided by the family; providing care and protection to the vulnerable elderly people including legal services; providing adequate healthcare facility; promoting research and training facilities to train geriatric care givers and creating awareness about this issue.

The Government also extends financial assistance for setting up of old age homes, day care centres and mobile medical units; counselling units; regional resource and training centres; and training of caregivers; and formation of senior citizens associations.

The Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment has also taken the lead on many important programs, laying emphasis on an integrated scheme for pensions, simpler access to retirement benefits, easier and transparent access to health insurance schemes, travel concessions, extra interest on savings and income tax benefits, etc.

Mr. Chairman,

While the government has taken several important steps, a lot more clearly needs to be done given the scale of the issue. Our approach so far has been sensitive to developments such as the decline of the traditional joint family system in caring for the elderly, the problems faced by elderly women and the rural population, and the recognition that the elderly can contribute beyond a retirement age to their place of work and their communities.

Mr. Chairman,

As a signatory to the Madrid International Plan of Action on Aging, we are committed to take steps that meet the standards of action upheld in the international plan, and are permitted by the economic capacities of the country.

We recognize the scope of the problem, and appreciate this platform to discuss and act as a global community. We consider it important to continue our national efforts, and to strengthen our endeavours as a global community to ensure the welfare and dignity of the elderly, including through respect and promotion of the rights of the older persons, and addressing implementation gaps.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

654. Statement by Mr. Vipul, Counsellor [Disarmament] Permanent Mission of India, to the Conference on Disarmament, Geneva at the Second Review Conference of the UN Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in all its Aspects, at New York, on August 29, 2012.

Madam President,

Please accept felicitations from the Indian delegation on your election as the Chair of the Second Review Conference of the UNPOA. We would also like to congratulate other members of the Bureau on their elections. We appreciate the transparent and inclusive manner in which you have undertaken the preparations for this Conference, including at the Preparatory Committee meeting in March this year, and assure you of our full cooperation for a successful outcome.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Indonesia on behalf of NAM.

Madam President,

India attaches high importance to the UN Programme of Action as the cornerstone of multilateral efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons. As with many other States, India's national security has been adversely affected by terrorism, transnational organised crime, drug trafficking, piracy and illegal exploitation of natural resources, in all of which illicit trade in SALW plays a crucial role. The full and effective implementation of the Programme of Action is therefore a priority for India, especially as a means for combating terrorism and transnational crime. As such this Review Conference which is mandated to review the implementation of the Programme of Action assumes great significance.

It is evident that Member States have made progress in the implementation of the Programme of Action over the past decade. However, it is also true that much remains to be done. Despite the efforts of responsible States and international organizations, small arms, light weapons, ammunition and explosives continue to move illicitly across borders. It is therefore imperative to further strengthen the implementation of the Programme of Action in an inclusive and consensus based manner. In this regard, India welcomes the return of consensus to the POA process as evidenced by the successful holding of the 4th BMS in June 2010, the first Meeting of Governmental Experts in May 2011 and the Preparatory Committee for the Review Conference in March 2012. We hope that a consensus-based approach will mark this Conference as well as follow-up meetings of POA.
Madam President,

India has a robust legislative and administrative mechanism to combat and eradicate the menace of illicit small arms and light weapons. The details of the steps taken by India for implementation of the Programme of Action and the International Tracing Instrument can be found in our national reports. We welcome the efforts towards standardization of the reporting format and the online reporting tool introduced from this year. We used the online reporting tool to submit our national report this year.

As a country with more than 15,000 kilometres of land borders with seven neighbours and a coastline of more than 7500 kilometres, border management is a significant challenge for India. A principal objective of India’s border management policy is to secure our long borders against illicit trade and other threats while facilitating legitimate trade, commerce and people-to-people links. The Ministry of Home Affairs of the Government of India has set up a Department of Border Management to focus attention on issues related to proper management of borders and strengthening institutional coordination and implementation. As a preventive measure against smuggling of illegal arms through ports, container scanning systems are being installed at our major ports. We have established productive bilateral and multilateral avenues of cooperation in controlling illicit trading of small arms and light weapons.

India had the honour to Chair the GGE whose recommendations led an Open-Ended Working Group to negotiate International Tracing Instrument. India’s national report on UNPOA implementation includes information on ITI implementation as well including our marking and record keeping practices. We believe that full implementation of the ITI will go a long way in tackling illicit trade in SALWs, international terrorism and transnational crimes. The ITI recognised the interconnected nature of marking, record keeping and international cooperation. These are the three pillars of successful tracing of illicit SALWs. We encourage full reporting on the implementation of the ITI by Member States as part of their national reports.

Madam President,

Let me now turn to our expectations from this Review Conference. We believe that the Review Conference provides Member States a valuable opportunity to reaffirm the obligations stipulated in the Programme of Action and to reiterate the commitment of States to implement them. It is also an occasion to comprehensively review the progress in implementation of the Programme of Action so as to identify gaps in implementation of the Programme by States and suggest concrete measures which need to be undertaken to fully implement the Programme.
As Member States we should commit to making further substantive progress in the implementation of the Programme by the Third Review Conference. In doing so, we should strive to keep the language in our outcome document(s) consistent with the objective of the Programme of Action i.e. to prevent, combat and eradicate illicit trade in small arms and light weapons. The Review Conference should also indicate the way ahead on strengthening international cooperation and assistance for enabling States which lack the capacity and seek international assistance to implement the Programme. With regard to the next inter-sessional programme of meetings of the POA, we believe that the distinct but related nature of Review Conferences, BMS meetings and expert group meetings should be maintained. Issues that require further work to strengthen the political understanding on their implementation can be tackled at a BMS meeting. The Meeting of Governmental Experts can focus on practical issues that are relevant for implementation at the national, regional and international levels. Proliferation of reports and meetings and indeed new mechanisms or burdening the POA with timelines and targets should be avoided. Instead, existing follow-up mechanisms should be reinforced and related clearly to the core obligations of the POA.

The areas selected for focussed attention in the next cycle should reflect a good balance among priorities of different groups of member states and regions. The selection of some subjects for in-depth consideration in the next cycle should not lead to overlooking the challenges in implementation in other areas. For instance, significant gaps remain in the areas of national controls, international cooperation in combating illicit transfers, transfers to non-state actors etc. There is a need to continue to address these issues in the POA framework.

In terms of our work in the next two weeks, we believe that the preparations you have undertaken for the Conference stands us in good stead. The informal consultations on the four zero drafts presented by you under your own responsibility have indicated the priorities and concerns of various delegations. We believe that they are a good basis on which the outcome of this Review Conference could be arrived at following negotiations in the next two weeks.

Madam President,

In conclusion, let me reiterate the importance we attach to the POA as the main international framework to deal with the issue of illicit trade in SALW. We hope that this Review Conference would be able to preserve the consensus driven nature of the POA process and make concrete suggestions for progress in POA implementation. India stands ready to contribute to a successful outcome of the Conference.

Thank you.

Thank you,

At the outset, let me thank the President of the General Assembly for organizing this interactive dialogue on the report of the Secretary General on the “Responsibility to Protect: Timely and decisive action”. I would also like to thank the Secretary General for his statement as well as the five panelists. I hope that today’s discussion will contribute meaningfully in further clarifying the true ambit and scope of R2P, especially in view of the Libya experience.

2. It merits repetition that almost all aspects of resolution 1973, namely pursuit of ceasefire, arms embargo, and no-fly zone, were violated not to protect civilians because the regime had long back lost its fighting capability but to change the regime. It is the pursuit of the objective of regime change that generated a great deal of unease among a number of us who support action by the international community, anchored in the United Nations, to implement the provisions contained in paragraphs 138 and 139 of the World Summit Outcome Document.

3. It is also worth recalling that the principle of R2P in the World Summit Outcome Document had grown from the troubled conscience of the international community following genocide and ethnic cleansing witnessed in Rwanda and Srebrenica in the 1990’s. In both these places, it was not the lack of advance information, but perhaps of oil, that the important members of the international community decided not to act. And when they chose to do so in Libya, it was in the fulfillment of a larger objective.

4. Mr. President, we must consider all these situations in which the international community acted and those in which it did not to make a consensual understanding of when and how to implement Pillar III of the concept of R2P. Before I comment on the Secretary General’s report, let me emphasize three very fundamental aspects of this concept:

i. First, the R2P cannot be used to address all social evils, including violations of human rights and humanitarian law. Rather it must only be confined to the four identified crimes, i.e., genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing, and crimes against humanity;

ii. Second, the default response of the international community cannot be coercive measures under Chapter VII of the Charter; and iii. Third, in reality the R2P cannot be seen as a pretext for humanitarian intervention, a concept riddled with inconsistencies and driven by selfish motives on the part of the developed nations. R2P cannot turn out to be a tool legitimizing big power intervention on the pretext of protecting populations from the violations of human rights and humanitarian law. It cannot be seen as codifying a system of coercion, providing a tool in the hands of powerful governments to judge weaker states, and encourage regime change primarily on political considerations.

5. As I have reiterated on many occasions, there can be little disagreement on Pillars I and II. The real problem lies with the interpretation and application of Pillar III: the responsibility of the international community to step in when a State manifestly fails to meet its responsibility to protect its population from these four crimes. The Secretary General’s report clearly acknowledges that controversy still persists on aspects of implementation, in particular with respect to the use of coercive measures to protect population.

6. As is clear from the language of Pillar III, it does not envisage application of coercive measures alone, let alone the use of military force. Rather, as the report rightly points out, a range of non-coercive measures is to be adopted under Chapter VI and VIII of the Charter. Resort to Chapter VII, particularly Articles 41 and 42, could be taken only after serious and genuine efforts at the pacific settlement have failed. Even while applying Chapter VII, the use of force should be considered as a measure of last resort. And unilateral action of any kind, let alone the unilateral use of force, is nowhere sanctioned.

7. The report argues that neither the three pillars can be treated as standalone options, nor can they be sequenced. In our view, the three pillars cannot be mixed, and the support aspect, including the capacity building under Pillar II, should take precedence over the response aspect under Pillar III.

8. Mr. President, in my view, the R2P should start with an early political engagement with the parties concerned. Any specific needs of the state concerned should be given due consideration and support. Sufficient time should be allowed to see that the non-coercive measures employed are bringing desired results. It is only when an honest and serious attempt at pacific settlement fails that the international community, acting under the United Nations, should respond with coercive measures. And the response should again be calibrated and gradual, rather than immediate recourse to Article 42.

9. Armed intervention should be a measure of last resort when everything else has failed. Selectivity must be avoided at all cost and the principle must be applied uniformly to all parties to a conflict. Most importantly, whenever the use of all necessary means is authorized, there must be provisions in the resolution for monitoring and reporting mechanisms so that the principles of neutrality, impartiality and proportionality is ensured. In this context, responsibility while protecting (Rwp), as proposed by Brazil, is equally important. If R2P is to regain the respect of the international community, it has to be anchored in the concept of Rwp.

10. I would also like to touch upon another aspect of the report. In many places the report refers to the responsibility of protecting populations from crimes and violations related to R2P. This change in phraseology is not appropriate. There are four crimes clearly identified under R2P in the World Summit Outcome Document, which have also been reaffirmed by Security Council resolution 1674. This normative framework cannot be changed at the Secretariat's sweet will.

11. In conclusion Mr. President, the time has now come to look at both sides of the coin. The responsibility of each state to protect its population from the four crimes is accepted in the World Summit Outcome Document. At the same time, greater focus and further understanding is required on the manner in which R2P can be implemented, especially its Pillar III. A non-judicious application of Pillar III would risk R2P being applied selectively and in an arbitrary manner for extraneous reasons to achieve certain political objectives. The international community also cannot ignore the responsibility of those authorized to protect while they implement the authorization.

12. Finally, the implementation of R2P requires an effective discharge of responsibility and obligations by States under the UN Charter in a balanced and impartial manner. This, of course, requires reform of the Security Council so that it takes into account the contemporary realities.

I thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, Deputy Permanent Representative, at The Second Regular Session of Executive Board of UNDP/UNFPA/UNOPS on September 05, 2012.

Mr. President, let me start by complementing you for your committed leadership in steering the discussions on the programming arrangements in a most purposeful and constructive manner.

I would also like to thank Administrator Ms Helen Clark for her informative statement and providing perspectives on UNDP’s development agenda, and the upcoming QCPR process.

As a country that has one of the longest relationships with UNDP and is the biggest contributor to its core budget among developing countries, we have an abiding interest in UNDP’s contribution and efforts on the global development agenda. I am also happy that just some weeks back, thanks to the active interest of the Asia-Pacific Regional Bureau, the Government of India and UNDP announced a new partnership to establish an International Centre for Human Development in India.

In so far as the current session of the Board is concerned, please allow me to flag three key issues of interest to us as regards programming arrangements for the period 2014-17.

The first is to ensure that the outcome of the current discussions remains guided by the objective of poverty eradication, which is the overriding priority of developing countries. In order to give meaningful direction to the programming arrangements for the period 2014-2017, it is imperative that UNDP resources are directed to where the need for poverty eradication is greatest, and brings benefit to the largest number of those stuck in poverty.

Second, the proposal for using ‘averaging in conjunction with mid term review’ should use the four year averaging concept given that we are covering a four year programming period. We are glad that this view, which is shared by all of us in the Asia-Pacific group, has now also been recommended by the Secretariat to the Board.

Third, per-capita GNI along with size of populations in each country, should have its foremost salience in determining country specific allocations, i.e. the lower the level of GNI per capita and the higher a country’s population, it should continue to get a higher allocation, which must remain focused on poverty eradication and core development imperatives in the area of nutrition, health and education, which incidentally, is also one of the nine established focussed outcomes for UNDP. Our delegation would also like to know in this regard the respective weightage given to the four concepts that are factored in while making country specific allocations.
Mr. President, we must also acknowledge that we are still in a time of an unresolved global economic crisis and political uncertainty in the world. At the recent Rio+20 Summit on Sustainable Development we agreed on “the future we want” and a roadmap, but nothing, by way of means for developing countries to realize the future that they want. As we discuss the roadmap for the next strategic plan and decide on the direction that the UN development agenda should take for the next four years, as part of the QCPR process, we would urge the following:

One, the DP in UNDP should now really become decimating poverty.

Two, strengthening institutional capacity building in developing countries be made another core focus area of UNDP. Many countries could do more if additional finance and technology were available. Unfortunately, there is little evidence of support from the industrialised countries in these areas. My delegation believes that by virtue of its unique position as the largest development arm of the UN system, UNDP can become a ‘force multiplier’ by fostering national and local capacities, strengthening networks for sharing of knowledge and best practices, promoting national ownership, and by building institutional capacities in developing countries.

Three, it is also pertinent to frame the discussion in the QCPR process by forging synergies and strengthening partnerships within the overall policy framework of the UN System while recognizing that “no one size fits all”.

Mr. President, South South Cooperation is being singled out as a new buzzword in the narrative of the developmental discourse for developing countries, however, much more remains to be done to give it the ‘muscle’ it needs from the UN system. For this, the first thing to do is to let it proceed and grow on the basis of its unique characteristics of national ownership and mutually agreed terms. Looking at South-South cooperation as either permitting a dilution or substituting for North-South aid would only serve to shackle it to the detriment of developing countries.

To conclude, Mr President and Madam Administrator, this Board Session, given its agenda, is an important and timely opportunity not just for stock taking but also to constructively contribute to UN’s development agenda. Our suggestions have been made in this spirit and I hope will find resonance in the UNDP community. As Chair of the IBSA Trust Fund for this year, please allow me also to express our thanks to the UNDP and the South Unit for all the support and assistance extended to our three countries in our endeavors to work with the UN on South-South cooperation projects in developing countries across the globe.

Thank you.
657. Statement by Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, Deputy Permanent Representative of India to UN at the Second Regular Session of Executive Board of UNICEF on September 11, 2012.

Mr. President, let me take this opportunity to complement you for your committed leadership in steering the discussions at the helm of this Executive Board, in a most purposeful and constructive manner.

Allow me to express my felicitations to the Executive Director Anthony Lake for an extremely informative statement. The Executive Board Meeting is very timely and important as it provides an opportunity to reaffirm our collective commitment to fulfill the hopes and aspirations of children all over the world.

Mr President, India is a country with home to the largest number of children in the world. And each of these children, epitomises to us, the potential of our nation. It is with this considered conviction that we place the highest importance in investing in them to the best of our abilities and resources, in their well being, their health, education, all round growth and in ensuring that they develop to their fullest potential.

In UNICEF, our Government has found a most reliable and trusted partner to take our initiatives jointly forward. My delegation compliments UNICEF for its initiative “Child Survival - Call for Action” and we remain committed to its success. We also welcome the focus of UNICEF to place children at the heart of sustainable development, especially by focussing on initiatives in primary education, early childhood care and child nutrition.

Government of India and UNICEF are also in the process of finalizing the next country programme action plan (CPAP) for 2013-17 based on the approval of the draft Country Programme Document (CPD) by the Executive Board at the Annual Session earlier in June 2012. We hope that the next phase of programme cooperation with UNICEF will contribute to informing policies and programmes to meaningfully advance the rights of children and adolescents in India. We are committed to pursuing stronger child-centered social policies and placing children at the centre of planning, governance and poverty-alleviation efforts of the Government.

We also note with appreciation the proactive engagement in multi stakeholder partnerships and coordination mechanisms undertaken by UNICEF to promote children’s issues in the development agenda. In collective partnerships with our Government, civil society and private sector, UNICEF has successfully reached out to more than 85 million women in India with integrated health, nutrition and WASH (water sanitation and hygiene) interventions. Our efforts to improve the early childhood care and education (ECCE) outcomes through commensurate investments, is an important area where, we believe, UNICEF can continue to contribute with the requisite technical assistance.

Government of India is also in the process of launching a strengthened and restructured Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS) Programme with enhanced budgetary allocations with a key focus to accelerate the early childhood development outcomes including the nutrition outcomes. We believe that UNICEF can play a significant role in enhancing the effectiveness of the programmes of Government by providing systematic analytical, technical and strategic supports at the critical levels of programme implementation.

Mr President, before I conclude, allow me to also reflect on some key issues in the development agenda of UN’s discourse that we would like to flag for the consideration of the Board:

First, it is pertinent to frame the discussion in the QCPR process by forging synergies and strengthening partnerships within the overall policy framework of the UN System. However, some basic paradigm differences do remain in the contours of the development approach, which must be premised on the principle of “No one size fits all”.

Second, poverty eradication still remains the over-riding priority for developing countries, and therefore within the QCPR process, we also need to place this recognition right upfront, that poverty eradication should continue to be the primary focus of UN’s development agenda even for the next four years, as we still have a large majority of the global population struggling to survive in abject levels of poverty and deprivation.

Third, within UNICEF, we need to leverage the success stories from South South cooperation framework to the benefit of children, especially in the South, where they need it the most. One facet of India’s joint initiative with countries of the South, has been along with Brazil and South Africa, in the form of the IBSA Trust Fund, under which we have already implemented some projects with a special focus on children, include a construction of a Hospital for Children with special needs in Cambodia and delivery of safe drinking water in Cape Verde. Also, UNICEF country teams, while implementing country programmes must also aim to address the national priorities and attempt to harmonise the goals of UNICEF with the national governments so that it does result in stronger national ownership and increased alignment with the UN system.

To conclude, Mr President, my Government remains committed to ensuring the success of UNICEF in achieving the hopes and aspirations of children all over the world, for in their success lies the future of our nations.

Thank You.
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for chairing these discussions of the fifth conference of states parties to the CRPD. I am confident that the discussions today and subsequent panel discussions will contribute to better understanding of the challenges before us.

Mr. Chairman,

The theme of this conference is particularly relevant, focusing on women and children, as challenges faced by them due to disability are often further compounded for them.

Our discussions here help refocus attention to this aspect that requires a coordinated response not only among different government departments but also among relevant stakeholders.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government of India had early on recognized the need for specific policy intervention to support disabled people. Our legislative framework is anchored in the Persons with Disabilities (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Participation) Act passed in the year 1995, before the Convention was drafted.

The Act recognized that persons with disabilities are a valuable human resource and seeks to create an enabling environment that provides them with equal opportunities, protection of their rights and full participation in society, including in areas of education and employment. The nodal Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment works with several ministries to coordinate and implement programs and schemes in the areas of health, education and employment. 1

Mr. Chairman,

This legislation was supplemented by the National Policy for Persons with Disabilities announced in 2006. This policy in fact specifically focuses on issues concerning women and children with disabilities.

Another Act - the National Trust for Welfare of Persons with Autism, Cerebral Palsy, Mental Retardation and Multiple Disability Act was passed in 1999. This Act laid out provisions for legal guardianship of the four categories of the persons with disabilities and for the creation of an enabling environment for them. This Act is also undergoing revision in light of the provisions of the UNCRPD.
In 2010, the Ministry of Social Justice & Empowerment constituted a Committee to harmonise the existing legislation with the provisions of the CRPD. This Committee submitted its recommendations on a revised draft Bill to the Ministry in June 2011. This is presently undergoing consultations among all stakeholders, particularly the States, in whose domain “disability” figures under the Constitution of the country.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government has instituted a scheme of National Awards for empowerment of persons with disabilities as also to encourage others for creating a barrier free environment for the persons with disabilities. Special focus is paid on achievements of, and initiatives pertaining to women with disabilities, particularly those from the rural areas and self-employed women.

The National Plan of Action for Children, 2005 seeks to ensure the right to survival, care, protection and security for all the children with disabilities. The Right to Education Act, 2009 mandates for free and compulsory elementary education to all children with special needs up to the age of 18 years. The Copyright Act has also been suitably amended to facilitate access to students with disabilities.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government has established seven National Institutes (NIs) dealing with different types on disabilities and seven Composite Regional Centers (CRCs) to promote research and conduct training for delivery of services to disabled persons.

The Government also funds a large number of NGOs providing disability services, and has established a National Handicapped Finance and Development Corporation (NHFDC) which provides loans at concessional rates to persons with disabilities for self-employment.

Mr. Chairman,

With a view to further improve implementation of government policies, the Government decided, in principle, in January 2012 to convert the ‘Disability Division’ of the Ministry of Social Justice & Empowerment into a separate Department for more effective liaising with the concerned Ministries/Departments and fulfilment of its responsibilities towards the disabled.

Mr. Chairman,

The Constitution of India ensures equality, freedom, justice and dignity of all individuals and mandates an inclusive society for all, including the persons with disabilities. We remain committed to building an enabling environment so that all persons with disabilities, including women and children, are able to enjoy their rights and realise their full potential.
Mr. President,

First of all allow me to congratulate you on assuming the Presidency of the Sixty-Seventh session of the United Nations General Assembly. I assure you of full cooperation of the Indian delegation in the conduct of the session.

Mr. President,

We recall the wisdom of world leaders who, in the 2005 World Summit, recognized the need for universal adherence to and implementation of the rule of law at the national and international levels, following which, this topic remains on the agenda of the Sixth Committee (Legal) of the General Assembly since 2006.

The General Assembly decided, in resolution A/66/102 of 9 December 2011, to convene a High-Level Meeting on “The Rule of Law at the National and International Levels” on today the 24th of September 2012, and accordingly, we avail this opportunity to express views on this important subject.

Mr. President,

We thank the Co-facilitators, Ambassador Luis Alfonso de Alba of Mexico and Ambassador Carsten Staur of Denmark for their efforts in the process of preparing the outcome document of the High-Level Meeting. We congratulate the Co-facilitators, member States, and other stakeholders, whose active involvement in negotiations led to the finalization of the outcome document. It reaffirms commitment of the international community towards the rule of law and adhering for that purpose to the principles of the United Nations Charter and international law. The document takes stock of the contemporary political, social and economic conditions and stresses upon the implementation of the rule of law related principles in order to achieve the objective of the maintenance of international peace and security, peaceful co-existence and development. The document stresses the importance of continuing efforts to reform the Security Council. We consider it essential to reform the Security Council at the earliest possible in order to make it broadly representative, efficient and transparent.

We thank the Secretary-General for his report (A/66/749) of 16 March 2012, prepared to help Member States in preparation for this high-level meeting. We also recognize the continued work of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit in this endeavor.
Mr. President,

We believe that the rule of law is essential for and central to all. We consider that the law making activity at the national level is exclusively the domain of the national legislature. The States, while enacting their laws, owe the responsibility to focus on the protection and welfare of their population and the economic, social and cultural conditions. India believes that advancement of the rule of law at the national level is an essential tool for the protection of democracy, economic growth, sustainable development, ensuring gender justice, eradication of poverty and hunger and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Mr. President,

We strongly believe in the peaceful handling of any conflict situation in accordance with the applicable legal principles by avoiding any unauthorized intervention in a State’s internal affairs.

We strongly condemn the acts of terrorism wherever, whenever and by whomever committed, which pose a great threat to international peace and security. We stress for collective action in fight against terrorism. We consider it important for the member states to effectively implement the international legal instruments to which they are a party.

Mr. President,

Peaceful settlement of disputes is the key factor in the maintenance of international peace and security and in the promotion of the rule of law. In this regard, we recognize the role of the International court of Justice and other international tribunals. The theme of the general-debate of the current session i.e., the “adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations by peaceful means” becomes more appropriate in the wake of the high-level meeting on the rule of law. We also recognize the role of the International Law Commission, as the highest body, in the progressive development of international law and its codification.

Finally, India reiterates the call for strengthening the capacity of States, especially the developing and the least developed States, in order to enable them to carry out the rule of law related activities and to fulfill their obligations. The rule of law assistance needs to be in line with national priorities of the recipient countries in order to ensure proper utilization and the benefit thereof.

I thank you, Mr. President.
660. Statement by Ambassador Navtej Sarna, Additional Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, at the Special Ministerial Meeting of ECOSOC on September 24, 2012.

Mr. President,

I thank you for organizing this Special Ministerial meeting of the ECOSOC.

We are witnessing unprecedented and daunting economic, social and development challenges. Globalisation has magnified their impact on countries and communities further.

The global economic crisis continues of be a matter of deep concern. Poverty, unemployment, food and energy insecurity and environmental degradation further compound our problems. These are issues that require a coordinated and coherent global response.

In such a situation, the role of ECOSOC in responding effectively to new and emerging challenges assumes far greater salience. It is a principal body of the UN for policy review and dialogue on social-economic issues.

Over the years, this Council has played an important role in advancing a holistic and coordinated approach to global economic and social development taking into account the inter-relatedness of the different goals and targets of major UN conferences. It is also the central mechanism of the UN for the coordination of the United Nations system and supervision of its subsidiary bodies.

Mr. President,

The Rio+20 Conference has laid out a comprehensive sustainable development agenda. We must now get down to its implementation.

The Rio+20 outcome envisages a key role for ECOSOC in achieving a balanced integration of the three dimensions of the sustainable development.

We must work to strengthen the ECOSOC as provided by the RIO Outcome for integrated and coordinated follow up on all the major UN Conferences and Summits in the economic, social and environmental fields.

However, for this to happen, reform of the working methods and agenda of the ECOSOC is most essential. The Council must undertake concrete steps to avoid duplication of work with other organs of the UN, streamline its oversight responsibilities, and impart cohesion and transparency in the functioning of its committees. In this regard, we look forward to the review of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 61/16 on the strengthening of the Council.

The reform is equally critical for achieving the Millennium Development Goals by 2015 and developing a comprehensive Post 2015 Development Agenda, one that truly encompasses the overriding priority of developing countries to meet their basic socio-economic needs.

The Council has done a commendable job in following up on the MDGs. It must now leverage its coordination expertise and prepare itself to work closely with the proposed High Level Political Forum for follow up on the sustainable development goals.

Mr. President,

Addressing the deficit in global governance lies at the centre of the sustainable development agenda. This must be a priority on the agenda reform of the Council. In the present global economic context, there is a clear recognition that global economic governance needs a wide participation from developing countries especially in the decision making structures of the BWIs. We hope that the Council would play a proactive role in achieving this objective.

We deeply appreciate the recent high level policy dialogue the Council has been promoting with the international financial and trade institutions on current developments in the world economy.

Mr President,

We look forward to your leadership in strengthening ECOSOC for it to play a more effective role in meeting global development aspirations. You can count on our full support.

Thank You.
Mr. Chairman,

I thank the Secretary General for organizing this High Level Meeting.

I wish to also thank the Co-chairs of the High Level Group for their insights and recommendations on the way forward on sustainable energy for all.

We are happy that our Minister for New and Renewable Energy H.E. Dr. Farooq Abdullah and Mr. Bunker Roy from India served on the Group.

It, therefore, gives me immense satisfaction that 2012, the International Year of Sustainable Energy for All, has provided an effective platform for raising global awareness on the importance of energy and its role in alleviating poverty, reducing inequality and promoting sustainable development.

Mr. Chairman,

Rio+20 has taken a definitive stand on the three initiatives proposed by the Secretary General and has given clear primacy to one of them i.e. universal access to energy. It is essential that the consensus of Rio+20 will be respected by all and no artificial deadlines, which were rejected in the final outcome document, are brought back in for the other two. We should not re-negotiate Rio+20 here.

Access to energy remains the key to eradicating poverty, which has been reiterated by the Rio conference to be the greatest global challenge. There is a direct correlation between incidence of poverty and energy access and use. It is a key enabler for development.

The world faces urgent challenges related to modern energy services. More than 1.4 billion people, with 400 million in India alone, remain without access to electricity. And nearly 3 billion use biomass to meet their basic daily needs. With such daunting challenges, we cannot but make universal access to energy our primary development goal.

The achievement of the MDGs and implementation of the Rio outcome including on health, education, gender, drinking water, sanitation and environment are critically dependent on energy.

The Rio+20 template provides the consensus around which I would encourage all of us to coalesce. We hope that this template would be given primacy in the Post-2015 Development agenda discussions, and we would be able to come out with a well-defined strategy to provide affordable modern energy services for all.

The challenge is, of course, affordability. When countries are heavily dependent on imported energy, then to talk about sustainability on the one hand and affordability on the other can be a contradiction in terms without impacting directly on subsidy. Further, renewable energy options at this point in time are cost prohibitive. We need an energy paradigm we can all live with, with poverty eradication at its centre.

I hope that the recommendations and policy options proposed by the High-Level Group would be helpful in this regard, since Government policies cannot be done by ignoring ground realities.

Mr. Chairman,

India has huge development imperatives and this demands that we harness all forms of energy.

As a country, we are making all efforts to broaden our energy mix and have a huge program for development of renewable energy, especially solar energy. We are probably the only country having a separate Ministry dedicated to New and Renewable Energy.

We are working on clean technologies for better and more efficient use of fossil fuels and would like to collaborate on R&D for developing such technologies and then making them available at affordable prices in developing countries.

We have also adopted a National Mission on Energy Efficiency to leverage technology and innovation to conserve energy.

We look forward to working with the global community to achieve universal access to energy.

Thank you.
Statement by Mr. Pawan Kapoor, Joint Secretary, at the High-level Meeting on SAHEL convened by the Secretary General on the sidelines of 67th Session of United Nations General Assembly on September 26, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me begin by commending the initiative of the Secretary General to organize this timely high-level meeting on the Sahel to discuss the multitude of challenges that the region is faced with. We hope that today’s deliberations will help crystallize the United Nations approach on the Sahel region.

2. Mr. Chairman, the region has long faced several challenges in political, economic and humanitarian spheres. Over the past year, these challenges have been aggravated by the crisis in the neighborhood. Proliferation of weapons, activities of rebel and terrorist groups and transnational organized crimes have taken a heavy toll on the political, security and humanitarian situation in the region. Existing ethnic and religious differences have been exacerbated, and a large number of people have been adversely affected. The instability in northern Mali clearly demonstrates the seriousness of the situation in the region.

3. Mr. Chairman, the situation has been made all the more worse by the late and insufficient rainfall this year, thereby affecting the agricultural harvest in the region. Almost 5 million people across the region have been affected by food and nutrition crises. It is time for the international community to live up to its responsibility to adequately respond to the multiple crises in the Sahel and support and supplement the initiatives of regional and sub-regional organizations.

4. Mr. Chairman, we believe that the UN strategy should comprehensively assess the situation, clearly identify the problems, and present a holistic approach to tackle the issues in both the short- and long-term. While governance, development, and capacity building of State institutions require long-term planning and an integrated response, the immediate priorities should include stabilization of the security situation by addressing threats of secessionist, extremist and Al Qaida-linked terrorist groups, the provision of humanitarian assistance, and inclusive political processes.

5. In the implementation of the UN strategy, primacy should be given to national ownership by capacity building of national institutions. Regional and sub-regional organizations should be fully involved, and their initiatives should be supported by the provision of adequate resources. There should also be better integration and coordination among the UN and other agencies on the ground to ensure effective implementation of the strategy.

6. Mr. Chairman, the deteriorating situation in Mali is of serious concern to us. Extremist and terrorist groups have consolidated their position, and have indulged in serious crimes igniting sectarian strife. The presence of foreign elements, associated with Al Qaida and Boko Haram, shows that northern Mali is developing into a regional hub of terrorist groups. The international community should urgently address this crisis since it also has the potential to destabilize the larger region.

7. The United Nations should seriously consider the initiatives taken by ECOWAS and the African Union to address the crisis in the Sahel region. India, on its part, is committed to partner with the UN, the AU and other organizations in the implementation of an integrated strategy for the Sahel.

I thank you.
Statement by Mr. Pawan Kapoor, Joint Secretary, on High-level meeting on the Democratic Republic of Congo at the ECOSOC Chamber on September 27, 2012.

At the outset, I would like to thank the Secretary General for his initiative to host today’s meeting on the eastern DRC. We hope that this meeting will facilitate a common understanding among the stakeholders on measures to be taken to resolve the crisis.

2. Since early 2012, Eastern DRC has witnessed serious deterioration in the situation, which has various dimensions, including security, ethnic, illegal trade in natural resources, and a culture of impunity. Activities of the rebel groups, led by M-23, have also had a serious impact on the humanitarian situation. The fighting has uprooted nearly half a million people, including some 220,000 people in North Kivu and 200,000 in South Kivu. More than 51,000 have had to flee to neighbouring Uganda and Rwanda.

3. While the operations of MONUSCO have helped stabilise the situation, a long-term solution calls for addressing the underlying causes that have not allowed the DRC to extend its State authority to its eastern part. While security sector reforms and strengthening of the DRC armed forces are pursued, it is necessary to consider a political dialogue among the countries of the region, particularly between the DRC and Rwanda, so that the legitimate security concerns of all countries are addressed.

4. In this connection, Mr. Chairman, we welcome the initiatives taken by the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region (ICGLR). The enlarged joint verification mechanism should be fully deployed along the DRC-Rwanda borders to ensure that there is no cross-border movement of armed groups. The proposal of the ICGLR for the deployment of an international neutral force should be preceded by political agreement between the DRC and Rwanda. It should also not adversely impact on the mandate of MONUSCO.

5. We also think that the agreement of 23 March 2009 can form the basis for addressing the issue. What is needed is serious involvement of both the DRC and Rwanda to review the agreement comprehensively, including issues that were not addressed fully and the factors that led to the rebellion, like the return of Tutsi refugees, their integration into the FARDC, deployment of newly integrated personnel, and, of course, SSR and DDR processes. Unless these issues are addressed, the continuing instability would help other armed groups, both Congolese and non-Congolese. In this context, a strengthened FDLR would negatively affect Rwandan interests, and lead to larger instability in the region and draw in other countries.

6. Mr. Chairman, India, as a major troop contributor to MONUSCO, remains committed to UN efforts at stabilising the situation in the eastern DRC. We will also continue to be a partner for development of the DRC through bilateral as well as 2 regional and continental level cooperation. Under the second India-Africa Forum Summit, a vocational training centre is proposed to be set up in the DRC. We have also given lines of credit worth US$ 210 million for two hydroelectric projects in the country.

7. In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, we support an active role by the United Nations to facilitate engagement of the concerned countries in the region so that they reach an agreement on the long-term solution to the problems facing the eastern DRC.

I thank you.
INDIA AT THE UN

664. Statement by Ambassador Navtej Sarna, Additional Secretary at the Sudan-South Sudan Consultative Forum meeting at UN Headquarters in New York on September 27, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

At the outset, I would like to thank the Secretary General for hosting today’s session of the Sudan-South Sudan Consultative Forum as well as for his statement. I also thank the representatives of Sudan and South Sudan for their valuable statements.

2. Mr. Chairman, India shares close relations with both Sudan and South Sudan. India has been a major troop contributor to the UN missions in Sudan and South Sudan, UNMIS and UNMISS respectively. India was also the first Asian country to establish its Consulate in Juba in 2007 after the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA). We commend the leadership of Sudan and South Sudan for the implementation of the CPA, which has brought peace and security to the people of the two countries.

3. The continued economic viability of Sudan and South Sudan and their common destiny to live in peace and security require the expeditious resolution of the outstanding CPA issues. We have consistently called for these issues to be resolved through political negotiations between the two countries under the auspices of the African Union’s High-level Implementation Panel (AUHIP) led by President Thabo Mbeki. We believe that the Panel has developed a comprehensive framework for the resolution of all outstanding issues.

4. We strongly commend President Bashir and President Salva Kiir for participating in direct negotiations over the last four days and for signing the agreement earlier today in Addis Ababa on a number of outstanding CPA issues. We also commend the AUHIP and its head, President Thabo Mbeki, for facilitating these strenuous and extended negotiations. We hope that the agreement signed today will usher the two countries into a new era of peace and cooperation. This will also build confidence between the parties and facilitate the resolution of the remaining issues.

5. Mr. Chairman, given the dependence of the two countries on oil exports, it is necessary to resume oil production at the earliest and implement the oil-related financial arrangements. Expeditious steps should also be taken to establish the Safe Border Demilitarized Zone (SDBZ), and operationalize the Joint Border Verification and Monitoring Mechanism (J BVMM) as well as the ad hoc committee to investigate allegations of cross-border violations. These measures will facilitate cross-border trade and ease economic difficulties of a large number of the two people. We also urge the Government of Sudan and the SPLM-North to urgently negotiate political and security issues concerning the Southern Kordofan and Blue Nile states without preconditions.

6. Before I conclude, Mr. Chairman, let me reiterate our full support for the mediatory role of the AUHIP between Sudan and South Sudan. India will also continue its partnership with Sudan and South Sudan in the economic and capacity-building sectors, which will promote the long-term peace, security and prosperity in the region.

I thank you.

*****
My delegation would like to congratulate the President of Yemen H.E. Abdul-Rabbuh Mansour Hadi and his team for their efforts to take Yemen towards a democratic, stable and secure future. We would also like to congratulate the Gulf Cooperation Council and the United Nations for the road map prepared by them for a peaceful political transition in Yemen, thereby preventing the country from entering into more serious uncertainty.

2. We recognize the extraordinary political, security, economic and humanitarian challenges currently being faced by Yemen. We also strongly condemn terrorist acts and violence in all their manifestations in Yemen. India stands by the people and Government of Yemen in their journey towards a secure, prosperous, and democratic future.

3. Excellencies, We believe that core focus in this group should be to assist the Government of Yemen in ensuring peace and stability and create a conducive environment to facilitate rebuilding of institutions and effectively addressing the dire economic and humanitarian crises. In this context, it is also extremely important that a serious and inclusive dialogue continues among all stakeholders in Yemen.

4. India’s approach is to provide Yemen humanitarian aid and assist Yemen in capacity building. India’s bilateral programme with Yemen for training and capacity building and providing assistance continues. In addition to our engagement under the ‘Friends of Yemen Group’, India would be happy to look at specific proposals for assistance from Government of Yemen particularly in the field of training, capacity building, entrepreneurship development, Small and Medium Enterprises, Education and IT within our bilateral framework for cooperation. India is already supplying a crucial consignment of rice and wheat of US $2 million each to Yemen. India also stands ready to offer concessional Lines of Credit (LOCs) for projects and programmes considered urgent and necessary by Yemen once Feasibility Reports on such proposals can be made available to Government of India under the umbrella of Credit lines for LDCs already announced by India during the India-LDC Ministerial Conference in New Delhi in February 2011 and the UN LDC Meeting at Istanbul in May 2011.

5. Yet another avenue open to Yemen in accessing the assistance is the Indian-Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC). Several programmes and projects are emerging under the Indian chairmanship of this grouping of which Yemen was a former Chairman and continues to be an active member.
6. In conclusion, my delegation would like to wish the friendly people of Yemen continued progress, peace and prosperity and reassure them of India’s support as the country traverses through a crucial phase in its history.

Thank you.

Mr. Chairman,

I congratulate you on your esteemed leadership of the Group of 77. I also felicitate Fiji who would be chairing the Group next year.

In recent years, the Group has grown from strength to strength both in terms of achievements and enhanced membership. Our unity and sense of purpose have stood us in good stead. We must continue to do our utmost to preserve these cardinal values.

At Rio+20, we were successful in crafting an outcome with a strong imprint of our development aspirations. Poverty eradication has been unequivocally recognized as the greatest global challenge, and the RIO principles, in particular the principle of Common but Differentiated Responsibilities, and equity have been reaffirmed to guide global action on sustainable development.

The G-77 must now take lead in the implementation of the Rio agenda and in setting the stage for the Post 2015 development agenda.

We must ensure that arguments on changing development landscape and limitations of the economic crisis are not used to dilute agreed principles and commitments. South-South Cooperation cannot be subjected to the tenets of North-South Cooperation. Neither can it be a substitute for it.

Poverty eradication and meeting the MDGs should be our priority up to 2015 and beyond. Our work on Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QCP R), Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Post 2015 Development Agenda must be anchored in these imperatives.

Mr. Chairman,

India is hosting the COP 11 of the Convention on Biological Diversity next month. We are counting on your leadership and the support of the Group to make it a success. With developing countries home to 80% of the world’s biodiversity, our collective interest for an ambitious outcome is self evident. We must work together to bring a strong development perspective to bio-diversity issues and for early implementation of the Nagoya Protocol to ensure that the benefits of biodiversity conservation are shared in a fair and equitable manner.

Mr. Chairman,

In spite of our best efforts, the global economic situation remains one of deep concerns. After the 2008 economic meltdown, it was said that large developing countries would replace the traditional economic engines. This has not happened. Growth in large developing countries is also slowing down.
Unemployment, food and energy concerns remain high. This has further undermined the limited coping capacity of developing countries to shocks and vulnerabilities. It is, therefore, of utmost importance that we collectively undertake growth promoting policies to boost demand and create jobs. With over a billion people in extreme poverty and hunger in developing countries, we cannot afford but to make inclusive growth our priority.

Mr. Chairman,

Globalization has made our economic challenges even more complex. We are affected by decisions that we are not part of. In this scenario, there is a compelling reason to call for reform of global governance. Global economic decision making structures, especially the BWIs must include developing countries. We must continue to press for a development oriented outcome of the Doha Round.

The G-77 has been the pillar of the UNFCCC negotiations on Climate Change. We must remain united in our pursuit of an outcome that is comprehensive, equitable and balanced based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities. We must work for a second commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol as the key deliverable from the Doha COP. We must also push for an early implementation of the Cancun Agreements including the Green Fund, the Technology Mechanism and the Adaptation Committee so as to ensure credible action on all the four pillars of the UNFCCC process—mitigation, adaptation, finance and technology.

India remains acutely aware of the existential threat that Climate Change poses to the Small Island Developing States (SIDS) and believes that adaptation needs of these countries must be met at the earliest.

Mr. Chairman,

The G-77 is a family and we ought to give priority to those who are most vulnerable. We must remain committed to the special needs of the Least Developed Countries (LDCs) countries in Africa, SIDS and the Land-locked Developing Countries (LLDCs). In this regard, it is imperative that the developed countries meet their ODA commitments and fulfill their obligations on technology transfer.

India stands committed to meeting the development needs of our fellow developing countries.

The G-77 has made seminal contribution to shaping multilateralism for the benefit of our peoples. We must continue the good work. You can count on India’s steadfast support today, and always.

Thank You.
667. Statement by H.E. Ambassador Navtej Sarna, Additional Secretary, at the 3rd Ministerial Meeting of Group of Friends united against Human Trafficking on September 28, 2012.

Excellencies,

Allow me to begin by thanking Foreign Minister of Belarus H.E. Mr. Vladimir Makei for organizing the luncheon meeting.

I also commend the important coordinating role played by the Belarus delegation as Chair of the Group of Friends to follow up on the successful adoption of the 2010 UN Global Plan of Action (GPA) against Trafficking in Persons.

Friends,

The GPA mandated the international community to address the problem of human trafficking in a holistic and comprehensive manner through integrated, balanced, coherent, result-oriented and people-centric policies.

It also recognized effective partnerships with civil society, NGOs and private sector as an integral part of this approach. The UN Office on Drugs and Crime has an important role to play in training and capacity building to strengthen law enforcement responses.

Friends,

Extensive national measures are being taken in India.

We are concerned that despite deeper international cooperation, the growing global trend of trafficking in persons has not been arrested. Nature of this problem makes international cooperation indispensable. So we need renewed dedication. We need to focus on vulnerable categories, particularly women and children.

India will be actively involved in the scheduled appraisal in 2013 of the implementation of the GPA to identify gaps and the way forward.

We will continue to work in close cooperation with Belarus, Group of Friends and the international community to combat this challenge.

Thank You.
Mr. Chairman,

This is an important and timely meeting and we would like to convey our appreciation to the UN Secretary General for his initiative to bring together member states to address global concerns on nuclear terrorism.

2. India has taken the lead since 2002 in sponsoring a resolution in the UNGA on “Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring Weapons of Mass Destruction”. This resolution highlights the concerns of the international community with regard to WMD terrorism and calls upon all Member states to take measures aimed at preventing terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction. India expresses satisfaction that this resolution has been adopted by the UNGA without a vote and supports the continued implementation of this resolution.

3. As a victim of terrorism for over three decades, we are fully cognizant of the catastrophic dangers that transfers of WMDs to non-state and terrorists could entail. The international community must join hands in eliminating the risks relating to sensitive materials and technologies falling into hands of terrorists and non-state actors, including through clandestine proliferation networks. The focus on non-state actors should in no way diminish state accountability in combating terrorism, dismantling its support infrastructure or curbing its linkages with WMD.

4. India has taken several steps to prohibit access of weapons of mass destruction to terrorists and non-state actors through measures at the national level as well as participation in international cooperation efforts. India has in place a well-established, stringent and effective export control system based on legislation, regulations and a control list of sensitive materials, equipment and technologies consistent with highest international standards. India is committed to maintaining effective national export controls and is prepared to make its contribution as a full member of the respective multilateral export control regimes.

5. India supports enhancing international cooperation, including through the UN, IAEA, OPCW and other relevant forums to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs. India has participated in the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism and the Nuclear Security Summit (NSS) processes and has contributed, including by hosting a Sherpa meeting in New Delhi in January 2012. We welcome the outcome of the Nuclear Security Summit held in Seoul in March 2012.
6. India is setting up a Global Centre for Nuclear Energy Partnership which will cooperate with the IAEA and other foreign partners. India is contributing 1 million US dollars to the IAEA’s Nuclear Security Fund for 2012-13. We plan to host a 1540 Workshop later this year to build synergies on nuclear security.

7. India believes that the primary responsibility for ensuring nuclear security rests at the national level but national responsibility must be accompanied by responsible behavior as well as sustained and effective international cooperation. All states should scrupulously abide by their international obligations. We believe that sustained efforts are required to address the issues of nuclear safety and nuclear security in a coherent manner that will help ensure the safe and secure peaceful uses of nuclear energy which remains an essential component of the energy basket for a number of countries.

8. India is party to the main international legal instruments on nuclear security, including the Convention on Physical Protection and its 2005 amendment and the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism. We support the universalization of these instruments, recognizing the importance of multilateral instruments that address nuclear security. The IAEA has a central role in the strengthening of the international nuclear security framework and welcome the proposal of the Agency to organize an International Conference in 2013 that would help strengthen coordination and complementarities among various nuclear security activities.

Thank you.
669. Intervention by H.E. Mr. Ranjan Mathai, Foreign Secretary of India at the Meeting of the Group of Friends of the Secretary General on Myanmar in New York on September 28, 2012.

Thank you, Mr. Secretary General, for convening the Meeting of Group of Friends on Myanmar.

Mr. Secretary General,

We fully share your assessment that the political landscape of Myanmar has been significantly transformed during the last one year. In October last year, we received President Thein Sein and were encouraged to hear of some of the plans of the government. We congratulated the government and people of Myanmar in April this year on the peaceful and smooth manner in which bye-elections were held. When our Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited Myanmar in May this year, he again conveyed our felicitations to the President of Myanmar on the reform measures taken by the Myanmar government towards greater democratization and national reconciliation. He also commended the efforts underway on political, economic and social reform that also included peace agreements with several groups and dialogue with various political parties including the National League for Democracy. The participation of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi in the Parliamentary process in recent months has made it more inclusive and it is very welcome that she has assumed chairmanship of the Rule of Law Committee of Myanmar Parliament.

As a close and friendly neighbour, India remains committed to extending all possible assistance and support to the process of national reconciliation and the further strengthening of democracy in Myanmar. We are facilitating Parliamentary exchanges between the two countries by sharing our experience. We have begun a program of introduction to and training on Parliamentary practices and procedures for members of the Myanmar Parliament and Parliamentary Secretariat officials. As many as 80 members will be covered by this program.

As Myanmar confronts multifarious challenges ahead the international community as a whole needs to extend all possible support to the efforts of the government in a spirit of trust and cooperation. The UN agencies and international financial institutions have the opportunity now where they could carry out the entire gamut of their developmental activities. We would also urge that unilateral sanctions should be immediately phased out so that Myanmar’s economic development can be accelerated. India has consistently emphasized the path of engagement with Myanmar to encourage the advancement of national reconciliation as well socio-economic development.
We are working closely with Myanmar on various infrastructure and other development cooperation projects. We have given particularly attention to capacity building and Human Resource Development. We believe Myanmar could play a great role in expanding our engagement into ASEAN. We look forward to Myanmar’s planned Chairmanship of ASEAN in 2014.

In respect of recent developments in Rakhine state, we have noted that the Government of Myanmar has taken steps towards restoration of law and order and ensuring peace and stability in the areas affected by the violence and in meeting the needs of relief and rehabilitation of all the affected communities. The government has also set up a 27 member Investigation Commission comprising people from different walks of life, including members of different religious faiths and political parties, to enquire into the real cause for incidents and to make recommendations. The Government of Myanmar has also demonstrated willingness to cooperate with the international community. We welcome these efforts. The Government of India has also extended assistance of US$ 200,000 towards immediate relief for all the affected. Representatives of all communities have benefitted from this assistance.

We believe that the Good Offices should continue in a manner that supplements and strengthens Myanmar’s own efforts. We will continue to play a constructive role in this process in consultation with other like-minded countries.

Perhaps, time has also come for the Group to consider whether our Meeting should be with the participation of Myanmar. A dialogue on development which will bring in the presence of Myanmar may be the best way forward. I would therefore, join in the sentiments expressed by the Foreign Minister of Indonesia in regard to the annual resolution in the Third Committee.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to begin by congratulating you and your bureau on assuming the leadership of the Second Committee.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

The task before the Second Committee this year is well laid out.

The key outcomes from the RIO +20 Summit on Sustainable Development Goals, Financing Strategy, Technology Mechanism, Strengthening of UNEP and the High level Political Forum need to be pursued as agreed at Río and implemented in a time bound manner.

Rio identified poverty as the greatest global challenge of our times and renewed our commitment to attaining the MDGs by 2015.

Achievement of these millennium aspirations must receive our highest priority and not slip even as we start working on the post-2015 development agenda.

Given that there are still more than a billion people worldwide who continue to live in extreme poverty and hunger, the post-2015 development agenda must be weaved around the absolute imperative of poverty eradication.

The post-2015 development agenda must remain anchored in the Rio principles, in particular common but differentiated responsibilities and equity.

The inter-governmental process on Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) must be based in New York so that we can ensure inclusivity and wider participation of developing countries.

As we sit down to fashion the SDGs, we must do so with a clear idea in mind that they would form the crux of the Post-2015 agenda.

Discussions on the Post-2015 agenda have also seen some articulation on bringing in new issues including peace and security in the development framework.

We recognise that these are important issues and concerted efforts must be made to address them.

However, they should not be mixed with core development challenges as that would severely undermine efforts at achieving sustainable development. Mobilisation of resources, be it ODA, technology transfer, trade or FDI, is critical to support the MDGs. In the post-2015 development agenda these issues must be brought to the centre of the development debate.

We recognise that the development landscape has changed over the years. There are new actors such as the private sector, private foundations and civil society, all of which are now playing a significant role in development.

South-South Cooperation also has seen enhanced action and it must be allowed to grow within its own space and in accordance with its own principles. It cannot, however, be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,

The 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity is underway in India. We urge all Parties to work for a strong development oriented outcome and for early implementation of the Nagoya Protocol to ensure equitable sharing of the benefits of biodiversity.

Climate Change remains one of the most pressing challenges of our time. India looks forward to a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome at the upcoming 18th Conference of Parties of the UNFCCC at Doha.

The central and essential deliverable at Doha is the Second commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol. This must begin on January 1, 2013 along with a meaningful completion of work under the track on Long Term Cooperative Action.

Moreover, the process and outcome of the Durban Platform, which has just commenced its work, must be, as agreed in Durban, under the Convention and in full accordance with its principles and provisions, in particular the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities. The principles, provisions and the structure of the UNFCCC must be respected and form the basis of any international cooperation on climate change.

Mr. Chairman,

In spite of spirited efforts, the global economic situation remains one of deep concern. Unemployment, food and energy concerns are running high. The continuance of economic vulnerabilities and new and emerging challenges with intertwined complexities of globalisation demand an urgent reform of the structures of global governance.

It is imperative that developing countries are given due voice and participation in the decision making structures of the global economic and financial institutions, especially the Bretton Woods Institutions.

This would also address core concerns of the LDCs, SIDs, LLDCs and countries in Africa on debt sustainability, financial assistance, trade and development.

And, here at the United Nations, it is imperative that we move urgently on reform of the Security Council by expanding it in both categories, permanent and non-permanent, revitalize the General Assembly and strengthen the ECOSOC.

Mr. Chairman, in these uncertain times, the Second Committee has to assume a larger role in fashioning and guiding the global development agenda.

Under your leadership, I am confident that it would meet its expectations.

I thank you.
671. Statement by Mr. S. M. Krishna, Minister of External Affairs, at the General Debate of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 01, 2012.

Mr. President,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am privileged to address the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Let me begin by congratulating you, Excellency, on your election to the distinguished office of President of the 67th session of the UN General Assembly. I would like to assure you of our constructive support to your work over the course of the coming year.

Mr. President,

We are assembled in New York at a time when we are faced with multiple global challenges that transcend national boundaries.

Developing countries are still to recover from the downturn in the global economy. Their quest for poverty eradication and sustainable development remains an uphill task. Food and energy security as well as health and education for their population remain daunting challenges.

The West Asia and North Africa region is seeing unprecedented socio-political upheaval. The question of Palestine remains unresolved. And, threats emanating from terrorism, maritime piracy, drug trafficking and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction continue to multiply.

These challenges demand that we act to work for solutions in a concerted and coordinated manner. This is the only path to success.

Mr. President,

At the RIO+20 Summit, the international community renewed its commitment to sustainable development, recognizing poverty eradication to be the greatest global challenge.

And to act on this score, it unequivocally reaffirmed the sanctity of the RIO principles.

India remains committed to addressing Climate Change through a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities.

We are hosting the 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity in Hyderabad in less than two weeks from now. We seek the support of Parties to fashion an outcome that harmonizes a strong biodiversity action with our basic development objectives.

Mr. President,

The process to develop a set of Sustainable Development Goals has begun. The MDGs must be integrated in the new framework so that the unmet development priorities continue to be the main focus. In the interim, with still three years to go for the MDG target date of 2015, it is imperative to ensure that all efforts towards the achievement of the MDGs are made.

In the global discourse on the post-2015 development agenda, the focus ought to be on the word ‘development’. It ought to be firmly entrenched in the understandings and principles of Rio+20 and be anchored in the intergovernmental process in the UN.

Priority must be given to the challenges of poverty, employment, food and energy, water, health, environmental sustainability, unsustainable lifestyles and above all, economic growth.

Ensuring gender equality and women’s empowerment is essential to the pursuit of building inclusive societies. It is also an imperative for building strong and resilient economies. We are happy to support the efforts of the United Nations.

We also need to pay particular attention to upgrading the skills of the youth and ensuring employment opportunities. Children and youth are our future. We need to invest in them to reap the demographic dividend to secure our future.

India remains firmly committed to scaling up our development partnership with Africa, including through the framework of the India-Africa Forum Summit.

Similarly, we will continue to build on our commitments for enhanced cooperation with the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, and the Small Island Developing States within the framework of South-South Cooperation.

Mr. President,

India is a multi-religious, multi-ethnic and multi-lingual society. Our civilizational ethos has been underpinned by peaceful coexistence and tolerance, values that Mahatma Gandhi placed at the core of India’s national life. These principles are enshrined in our Constitution that provides the foundation for our secular, democratic and inclusive polity.
Mutual respect for deeply held religious sentiments is the bedrock of tolerance and coexistence. Unfortunate recent events have highlighted the need for enhanced dialogue among faiths and civilizations. Violence cannot lead to greater understanding. It is necessary to uphold norms of peaceful international discourse. In particular, the safety and security of diplomatic personnel should be fully respected. Mr. President,

Terrorism remains one of the most potent threats to international peace and security.

The international community must adopt a ‘zero tolerance’ approach towards terrorism and focus on efforts to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism including its invidious network of epicenters, training facilities and financing.

It is high time we demonstrated the necessary political will and agreed on a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism to strengthen the normative framework against the increasingly sophisticated and globalized terrorist challenge.

India continues to be gravely concerned by the menace of piracy and armed robbery at sea. Apart from major economic and commercial consequences of this scourge, it has serious humanitarian implications for the large number of seafarers held hostage by the pirates.

The need of the hour is once again concerted international action, under the UN auspices, with special attention being paid to address the welfare of seafarers and their 4 families.

Mr. President,

Peacekeeping and disarmament are among the most unique pursuits of the UN because they embody the promise and innate potential of the organization to make the world a better place.

India has a proud history of participation in UN peacekeeping operations dating back to the 1950s, having taken part in as many as 43 peacekeeping operations.

The challenge before the international community today is to ensure that UN peacekeeping is adequately resourced and enabled to meet the realities of today, including in post-conflict and peacebuilding contexts. In this regard, we are hopeful that progress will be made in all outstanding issues between Sudan and South Sudan.

India is committed to achieving a nuclear weapons-free world. The principles of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan of 1988 for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner remain relevant even after more than two decades.

There is need to forge a renewed consensus on non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. There is also need for meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines.

Measures must be taken to reduce nuclear risks, including the grave risks posed by terrorists gaining access to weapons of mass destruction, thus strengthening nuclear security.

The Conference on Disarmament – the international community’s sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, deserves our support in discharging its mandate of negotiating treaties on issues on the international disarmament agenda.

Mr. President,

The crisis in Syria continues unabated and is a matter of serious concern for us. Any further militarization of the crisis can have catastrophic consequences for the region.

We urge all parties to commit themselves to resolving the crisis without any further bloodshed through an inclusive, Syrian-led political process that can meet the legitimate aspirations of the Syrian people. We support the efforts of the UN and urge all sides to cooperate with the Joint Special Representative, Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi, in good faith.

Support for the Palestinian cause has been a cornerstone of India’s foreign policy. We were privileged to receive President Mahmoud Abbas in India earlier this month. We support their aspirations for enhanced status at the United Nations.

It is imperative that there be an early realization of a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Road map and relevant UN resolutions.

Mr. President,

India desires constructive and friendly relations with all its neighbours. We have a vision of a peaceful, stable and prosperous region with enhanced cooperation and connectivity linking us with Central Asia, the Gulf and South-East Asia.

Within South Asia, we have sought to enhance bilateral relations individually with each of our neighbours and through the aegis of the SAARC.
We have embarked on a resumed dialogue process with Pakistan and advocate a step-by-step approach to normalizing our bilateral relations.

An unwarranted reference has been made to Jammu and Kashmir from this podium. Our principled position on the issue has been consistent and is well known. The people of Jammu and Kashmir have chosen and reaffirmed their destiny repeatedly through India’s well established democratic processes. We wish to make it abundantly clear that Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India.

India supports the Government and people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous country. We are ready to partner with the Afghan people as they rebuild their country in accordance with their own priorities and national circumstances.

The continuing existence of safe havens and sanctuaries for terrorists beyond Afghanistan’s borders is the major impediment to the restoration of peace and security in Afghanistan.

India is committed to creating an enabling environment where the Afghan people can live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation.

Mr. President,

The United Nations and the norms of international relations that it has fostered remain the most efficacious means for converting today’s challenges into opportunities.

We need to, however, ensure that the architecture of global governance reflects contemporary realities. Sticking to structures designed at the end of the Second World War only constrains multilateralism from delivering on its promises.

The most important and decisive step towards remedying this situation pertains to the UN Security Council, which must be expanded in both permanent and non-permanent categories.

The reformed Council must include countries that are capable and willing to bear additional burdens relating to the maintenance of international peace and security and be able to sustain global campaigns against new and emerging global threats.

Let me also stress that we must address, sooner rather than later, the incongruity of the lack of permanent membership from Africa.

Equally, India will promote and lend her weight for enhancing the voice and participation of developing countries in decision making in global economic and financial institutions.
The IMF’s quota reform process must be accelerated with altered quotas reflecting contemporary economic weight.

Mr. President,

Speaking in this Assembly, on 14 October 1968, Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi, said, "The United Nations is the trustee of the world’s peace and represents the hopes of mankind. Its very existence gives a feeling of assurance that the justice of true causes can be brought fearlessly before the world. This Assembly and the agencies of the United Nations should, in all that they do sustain those hopes and promote the causes of peace."

These words remain true to this day.

Let me conclude by assuring you Mr. President and the members of the General Assembly that India will continue to abide by the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and strive to strengthen the United Nations.

I thank you.
672. Statement by Mr. S.m. Krishna, External Affairs Minister, at Open High Level Meeting on ‘Fifteen Years of the CWC: Celebrating Success, Committing to the Future’ at United Nations Headquarters, New York on October 01, 2012.

H.E. Mr Ban ki-Moon, UN Secretary General
H.E. Mr. Ahmet Uzumcu, Director General of the OPCW Excellencies

Ladies and Gentlemen

It is a pleasure to address this special meeting to mark 15 years of the Chemical Weapons Convention. This meeting provides us with an opportunity to take stock of the achievements and the challenges that lie ahead in the task of full and effective implementation of the Convention.

India views the Convention as a unique, multilaterally-negotiated and non-discriminatory disarmament instrument, which serves as a model for the elimination of an entire category of weapons of mass destruction. As an original signatory to the Convention, India attaches the utmost importance to the success of the Convention and its full and effective implementation. The international legal norm against the use of chemical weapons anywhere must not be breached.

Disarmament is a primary goal of the Convention and should remain the priority till the complete destruction of all chemical weapons. We have demonstrated our commitment and sense of responsibility by destroying all our chemical weapon stockpiles under OPCW verification within the timeframe prescribed by the Convention. Timely destruction of chemical weapons by all States Parties is critical for upholding the credibility and integrity of the CWC. We call on the remaining possessor States to fulfill their obligations within the shortest possible time.

India is the third largest country in terms of industry declarations and recipient of one of the highest number of industry inspections every year. We have implemented all our industry-related verification obligations. We also believe that the future verification efforts should continue to be guided strictly by the provisions of the Convention, without an undue burden on industry. Apart from National Implementation, which India views as key, Assistance and Protection as well as international cooperation are of interest to a large number of State Parties and deserve greater attention.

India has contributed to the working of the OPCW through participation in several of its subsidiary bodies, namely the Scientific Advisory Board, Advisory Body on Administrative and Financial Matters and Confidentiality Commission. Our National Authority has played a key role in the discharge of our CWC obligations. and in international cooperation and assistance programmes. We are privileged that the Permanent Representative of India to the OPCW is currently chairing the Executive Council.

The accession of 188 State Parties to the CWC is commendable and must spur our efforts towards universal adherence of the Convention. We commend the role of the Director General and the OPCW for their efforts in ensuring the smooth implementation of the Convention and for advancing the common goal of a world free of chemical weapons.

Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, Excellencies, Distinguished Delegates, Ladies and Gentlemen

I would like to begin by expressing my sincere thanks and gratitude to our hosts, the Federal Security Service (FSB), for organizing this Eleventh Meeting of the Heads of Special Services, Security Agencies and Law-Enforcement Organizations.

As I speak, I also wish to recall the comprehensive deliberations that we have had in the magnificent city of Saint Petersburg last year.

Mr. Chairman,

I avail this opportunity to present before you some thoughts in my personal capacity as Chair of the Counter Terrorism Committee.

To say that terrorism today constitutes the most serious challenge to international peace and security would be both a self-evident truism and an understatement.

No cause or grievance can justify terrorism.

Effectively combating the global scourge of terrorism requires necessary political will of member states and greater international and regional cooperation.

We need to constantly expand the scope of the legal instruments taking into account the changing nature of the threat and expand enforcement efforts to destroy safe havens for terrorists, their financial flows and their support networks. We also need to evolve a powerful counter-narrative to combat incitement and radicalization.

It goes without saying and in fact it is absolutely essential that measures taken by States to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

As Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee, it has been my endeavour to ensure the effective implementation of Security Council Resolutions 1373 (2001), 1624 (2005) and 1963 (2010). All these Security Council resolutions do not only advance counter-terrorism measures adopted by the Council but also advance the implementation of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy adopted by the General Assembly. This in turn enhances cooperation among all nations to combat the scourge of terrorism.
Mr. Chairman,

The UN’s convening power is unparalleled and it has played a seminal role in combating terrorism and capacity building of member States. Our efforts at the UN are now increasingly focussed towards enhancing greater cooperation, coherence and coordination of counter-terrorism efforts amongst various UN entities including the CTED, UNODC and the CTITF Office.

The success in the fight against terrorism goes hand-in-hand with progress in strengthening counter-terrorism cooperation and exchange of information at the international, regional and sub-regional level. The CTC enjoys a close and symbiotic relationship with international, regional and sub-regional organizations and I would like to applaud the efforts of CTED in this regard. I am happy with the CTC’s regular and fruitful exchange of views with the Federal Security Service.

Mr. Chairman

The last one year has been an eventful year for the Committee. I should like to recall that on the 10th Anniversary of the establishment of the 1373 Committee, on 28 September 2011, the Committee organized a Special Meeting at the UN in New York with participation from member-states, UN entities, international and regional organizations.

During the Special Meeting, the Committee adopted an Outcome Document, which is a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of States in their counter-terrorism efforts. It raised the benchmark in the fight against terrorism to a higher level and approved a zero-tolerance approach which is now part of the counter-terrorism lexicon.

Coinciding with this Special Meeting, the Committee issued an updated global survey of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001). The global survey provides a comprehensive overview – on regional as well as thematic basis - of the status of counter-terrorism efforts around the world and evaluates Member States strengths and vulnerabilities, identifies gaps in implementation of resolution 1373 (2001), and recommends further action.

The Committee also issued a global survey of the implementation by Member States of Security Council resolution 1624 (2005) in December, 2011. Both these global surveys suggested regional approaches and recommended areas for improvement.

Next month, the Committee intends to organize with Member States, international and regional organizations including FATF and FATF style regional bodies focussing on “preventing and suppressing terrorist financing”
Further, as part of its outreach efforts, the Committee will also explore the possibility of collaboration with the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).

The Committee, through CTED, has also been constantly improving its analytical tools to monitor and assess the progress in implementation of resolutions 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) around the world. Having developed Preliminary Implementation Assessments of the entire UN membership and achieving considerable progress in stocktaking, the Committee has agreed to a revised assessment tools including the Overview of Implementation Assessment (OIA) and the Details of Implementation Survey (DIS). These tools are designed to further enhance thoroughness, consistency, transparency and even-handedness in the Committee’s stocktaking process with a view to identifying States’ strengths and challenges in countering terrorism worldwide.

Mr. Chairman,

Moving forward, it is important that the mechanism that has been developed to pool the resources and the knowledge of the international community needs to be augmented and made more effective.

I am happy to note the efforts of the Federal Security Service in developing the International Counter-Terrorism Database, which would be an effective instrument in counter-terrorism cooperation for security/intelligence and law-enforcement organizations.

I am confident that our comprehensive deliberations would be helpful in enhancing our understanding of the evolving terrorist threat and in working out appropriate strategies to confront the menace.

*****
Mr. Chairman,

At the outset, I would like to congratulate you for your election as the Chairperson of the Sixth Committee. I also congratulate other members of the Bureau on their election. I assure you of our full cooperation and support.

We would also like to thank the Secretary General for his comprehensive report on “Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism”.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism today constitutes the most serious challenge to international peace and security. Today, terrorists are not only globalized, but are waging an asymmetric warfare against the international community.

India condemns terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. No cause or grievance could justify terrorism. We need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism.

We need to constantly expand the scope of the legal instruments taking into account the changing nature of the threat and expand enforcement efforts to destroy safe havens for terrorists, their financial flows and support networks.

Mr. Chairman,

The UN has played a seminal role in combating terrorism and capacity building of member States. India strongly supports all efforts, especially within the purview of the United Nations that strengthen international and regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism. The success in the fight against terrorism goes hand-in-hand with progress in strengthening counter-terrorism cooperation and exchange of information at the international, regional and sub-regional level.

The Global Counter Terrorism Strategy is a unique and universally agreed strategic framework to counter terrorism. The setting up of the Counter Terrorism Implementation Task Force (CTITF) in 2010 has provided an institutional framework to support the implementation of the Strategy as well as the harmonization of an integrated counter-terrorism approach within the UN system.

In the UN context, an effective and balanced implementation of the Strategy requires greater international and regional cooperation than the international community has so far been able to achieve. We are hopeful that the newly established UN Counter Terrorism Center within the CTITF Office will supplement these efforts, including through capacity building and play a meaningful role in assisting States, at national and regional levels towards achieving these objectives.

We must also continue to strengthen the normative framework at the United Nations. Time has come for adoption of the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism which has been pending for a long time. The Convention will further strengthen the implementation of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

As Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee, it has been India’s constant endeavour to provide a political direction to the work of the Committee and a greater momentum to efforts in bolstering member states’ ability in confronting the scourge of terrorism.

Last year, the Counter-Terrorism Committee, organized a Special Meeting to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the adoption of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee pursuant to that resolution. The Committee adopted an Outcome Document, which is a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of States in their counter-terrorism efforts. The Outcome Document urges all Member States to ensure zero-tolerance towards terrorism.

Next month, the Committee will organize another Special Meeting with Member States and relevant international and regional organizations focussing on "prevention and suppression of financing of terrorism."

Mr. Chairman,

My own country, India, has faced the scourge of terrorism for over two-and-a-half decades. Indeed, our entire region, South Asia, has been wracked by the activities of the biggest terrorist actors in the world, be they Al-Qaida, elements of Taliban or Lashkar-e-Taiba, Jamat-ud Daawa and others. Terrorism, extremism and radicalization continue to pose a serious challenge to peace, progress and prosperity in the region.

Within the framework of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC), we have adopted the SAARC Regional Convention on Suppression of Terrorism of 1987, and its Additional Protocol of 2004 on the financing of terrorism, and the SAARC Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters of 2008. India is working with fellow SAARC countries to strengthen counter-terrorism cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government of India has taken important steps towards strengthening its strategic, legal and operational framework in the fight against terrorism. India is a party to 13 international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols.

The Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act incorporates provisions dealing with all aspects of terrorism including conspiracy and incitement to terrorism. The Act criminalizes raising of funds for terrorist activities, holding of proceeds of terrorism, harboring of terrorists, unauthorized possession or use of any bomb, dynamite or hazardous explosive substance or other lethal weapons.

The Weapons of Mass Destruction (Prevention) Act, 2005 provides detailed measures to prevent weapons of mass destruction or dual use materials from falling into the hands of terrorists and non-state actors.

The Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010 seeks to further streamline monitoring of all foreign contributions received by non-governmental organizations and religious, educational and charitable organizations etc. to prevent their misuse.

India has concluded more than forty bilateral treaties on extradition and mutual legal assistance in criminal matters. India is also an active member of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

Mr. Chairman,

As part of our operational counter-terrorism framework, the National Investigation Agency is mandated to investigate and prosecute offences affecting the sovereignty, security and integrity of India, friendly relations with foreign States and offences under Acts enacted to implement international treaties, agreements, conventions and resolutions of the United Nations and other international organizations. The government has also created and empowered the Multi Agency Centre (MAC) as a dynamic institution for faster intelligence coordination on counter terrorism. A National Intelligence Grid (NATGRID), linking databases for constructing actionable intelligence to combat terrorism and internal security threats, has also been set up. The Crime and Criminal Tracking Network System (CCTNS), covering the entire country, is currently under implementation. The Financial Intelligence Unit-India (FIU-IND) has launched the Project FINnet (Financial Intelligence Network) with the objective to adopt industry best practices and appropriate technology to collect, analyze and disseminate valuable financial information for combating money laundering and related crimes.

Mr. Chairman,

The fight against terrorism has to be unrelenting and fought across all fronts. The international community cannot afford selective approaches in dealing with terrorist groups or in dismantling the infrastructure of terrorism. Terrorism is a Frankenstein monster. Resort to the use of terrorism as an instrument of State Policy is short-sighted. Indeed, those who have taken recourse to it have invariably themselves suffered immensely from it proving the age old dictum that those who play with the sword, also perish by it.

Mr. Chairman,

We must step up our collective efforts with real cooperation among member states to confront the scourge of terrorism squarely and decisively.

Thank you.
675. Statement by Mr. Lal Krishna Advani, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian delegation during the General Debate in the Third Committee on Agenda Item 27 ‘Social Development’ at the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 09, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

At the outset, on behalf of the Indian delegation, I would like to congratulate you and other members of the Bureau on your election and for chairing this important Committee.

I assure you of my delegation’s full support and cooperation in the deliberations and work of this Committee.

We would also like to thank the Secretary General for the various reports under this agenda item and the Under Secretary General for Economic and Social Affairs for his statement.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of G77.

Mr. Chairman,

Since the World Social Summit of 1995, progress has been recorded in all the three major pillars of Social Development, namely eradication of poverty, promotion of full employment and decent work and social integration. However, many challenges remain to be overcome in all three areas.

The Secretary General’s report rightly points out that while many countries have reduced income poverty, they continue to face significant challenges in ensuring access to education, food and other basic goods and services. Moreover, concerns on unemployment, food and energy remain high throughout the developing world. The continuing grim global economic situation has further undermined the limited capacity of developing countries to cope with shocks and vulnerabilities in the global economic system.

It is, therefore, of utmost importance that we collectively undertake growth stimulating policies to boost demand and create jobs. With over a billion people in extreme poverty and hunger, we cannot afford but to make inclusive growth our priority.

At the Rio+20 Summit, the international community renewed its commitment to sustainable development, recognizing poverty to be the greatest global challenge.

The post-2015 development agenda must continue to prioritize the eradication of poverty and all efforts in the next couple of years made to achieve the Millennium Development Goals.
Mr. Chairman,

We agree with the Secretary General that more practical efforts are required to address the domestic financing gaps faced by many developing countries. They need to effectively mobilise domestic resources including, inter alia, through prudent management of natural resources, governance reforms, more effective taxation policies and strengthening financial inclusion.

Moreover, the issue of corruption needs to be tackled on a war footing and transparency and accountability ensured in the working of governments. While this problem afflicts both developing and developed world, its consequences are more severely felt in the developing countries where it undermines the delivery of services and impact the people directly. The generation of unaccounted wealth or black money also has a major debilitating impact on the economy limiting growth and investment in productive sectors.

The UN Convention Against Corruption needs to be ratified by all countries and meaningful cooperation brought about at the international level to recover monies and assets stolen through corrupt practices stashed abroad.

Noting that closing the implementation and enforcement gap remains an important priority, G20 leaders resolved at their recent Summit in Mexico, to pursue those who receive and solicit bribes as well as those who pay them. They also agreed to tracing assets in G20 jurisdictions and denying safe haven to the proceeds of corruption and to the recovery and restitution of stolen assets.

Scaling up efforts to mobilise domestic resources must be complemented by official development assistance which continues to fall significantly below commitments made by developed countries.

Mr. Chairman,

In India, achieving inclusive growth underpinned by empowerment of people, especially women, good governance, and investments in social sectors, education and health, skills training, affordable housing, are a major focus. Since 65% of India’s population is located in rural areas, special emphasis has been placed on rural development initiatives. There are also several programmes targeted to the needs of the women and vulnerable groups.

The Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme is the world’s largest cash for work programme, which responds to the needs of 53 million poor rural households by ensuring them 100 days employment per year. At least 50% of the work is reserved for women. This programme has helped break down social inequalities, empower rural people, build up rural infrastructure and revive economic growth.
Initiatives in the field of education has led to India attaining nearly full enrolment in primary grades of schooling for both boys and girls and narrowing of gender gaps in middle and higher education. Similarly, health interventions have led to increased life expectancy, increased rates of immunization of children, and substantial decline in infant and maternal mortality rates.

Our targets for economic growth are anchored in measurable performance indices relating to poverty, education, health, women and children. These targets, disaggregated State-wise which implement most programmes, have helped monitor, assess and improve them.

Mr. Chairman,

India has a comprehensive legal framework to assist persons with disabilities. We seek to create an enabling environment that provides them with equal opportunities, protection of their rights and full participation in society, including in the areas of education and employment. India was one of the first countries to sign and ratify the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in 2007.

We have around 100 million persons, who are over 60 years of age. We believe that the elderly can contribute beyond retirement to their place of work and their communities. We have taken a number of steps including through enacting legislation to ensure that older persons live a life of dignity.

These measures include supplementing the care provided by the family, providing adequate healthcare facility, setting up old age homes, promoting research and training facilities to train geriatric care givers and providing protection including legal services.

We consider it important to also strengthen our endeavours as a global community to address gaps in the implementation of the 2002 Madrid Plan of Action and other related issues.

Mr Chairman,

Comprehensive and inclusive social development is essential for fostering stable, harmonious, peaceful and just societies and bringing about broad-based improvement in the quality of life of all people.

Let me reaffirm our commitment to all necessary action at the national and international level to translate this aspiration into a global reality.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
676. Statement by Mr. E. Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs, on Report of the Secretary-General on the Work of the Organization at the 67th Session of the UN General Assembly on October 09, 2012.

Mr. President,

I am privileged to address the General Assembly today. Allow me to begin by congratulating you on assuming the Presidency of the 67th General Assembly.

The Secretary-General’s annual Report on the Work of the Organization covers the wide spectrum of issues that inform the activities of the United Nations.

It underscores the global and interdependent nature of the challenges we face. It shines a spotlight on the unfinished agenda of development and reform. It points to the turbulent times we live in. It reinforces our conviction that the need of the hour is genuine multilateralism.

The socio-political upheaval in West Asia and North Africa since last year has unleashed profound change and transition that the region is still coming to terms with. India is very concerned at the escalating situation in Syria. We support UN efforts to find a solution to the crisis through dialogue and an inclusive, Syrian-led political process.

It is a matter of regret that the question of Palestine remains unresolved and we support their request for an enhanced status at the United Nations. India firmly supports the aspirations of the Palestinian people to achieve a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel. Mr. President,

Even as we approach the finish line of 2015 for the Millennium Development Goals, there is already haste to look at the post-2015 agenda.

The quest for poverty eradication and sustainable development remains salient as ever. Significant roadblocks still stand in the way of food and energy security, health and education for much of the developing world.

Countries are only tentatively emerging from the shadow of the worst economic and financial crisis since the Great Depression. The magnitude of the challenge is driven home by the fact that more than a billion people worldwide continue to languish in extreme poverty and hunger.

One thing abundantly clear is that unmet development priorities must be well integrated in the new post-2015 framework. The RIO+20 Conference handed us a robust agenda on sustainable development. We must now train our energy on the best way to implement it in an inter-governmental setting.
As we embark on a process of framing Sustainable Development Goals, crucial issues such as that of resource mobilization, be it ODA, technology transfer, trade or FDI, must find appropriate priority and be enshrined in the principles of Common but Differentiated Responsibilities (CBDR) and equity.

On Climate Change, India will work with others to design a comprehensive, equitable and balanced outcome at the upcoming 18th Conference of Parties at Doha, Qatar.

We ourselves are currently hosting the 11th Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity. Our expectation is that all Parties will work for a strong development oriented outcome and for early implementation of the Nagoya Protocol to ensure equitable sharing of the benefits of biodiversity.

In so far as our development partnership initiatives go, we are resolved to carry forward and expand our multi-faceted and vibrant cooperation with Africa, including through the framework of the India-Africa Forum Summit.

Similarly, we will continue to build on our commitments for enhanced cooperation with the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, and the Small Island Developing States within the rubric of South-South Cooperation.

Mr. President,

The international community has long acknowledged the ever present and pervasive threat posed by terrorism. No country, city or region is immune from this global scourge. And yet, regretfully, we have failed ourselves by continuing to procrastinate on concluding the Comprehensive Convention against International Terrorism. It is high time that member-states summoned the necessary political will to agree on the CCIT as a sound legal framework for the fight against terrorism.

We need concerted global action. Such action should be predicated on ‘zero tolerance’ towards terrorism and aimed at systematically dismantling the infrastructure of terrorism.

Mr. President,

India has a proud and time-tested association with UN peacekeeping dating back to its very inception. We have contributed over 130,000 personnel so far to this flagship endeavour of the United Nations.

As peacekeeping moves forward, we must remain mindful of the challenges of operating in increasingly complex environments. Particular attention should be paid to ensuring that complex mandates are matched by adequate resources so as to get the job done safely and effectively. In this process, it is of utmost importance that there is real, effective, and continuous consultation with Troop-Contributing Countries in framing and implementing mandates.

It is also not lost on us that to be enduringly successful, peacekeeping requires to be seamlessly dovetailed with peace-building efforts. The UN needs to pay better attention to evolving a cogent and coherent peace-building framework that takes into account the capacities at hand and the complexities on the ground.

Mr. President,

One final word on the Secretary-General’s internal reform efforts. We have taken note of the initiatives to modernize and reform the Secretariat, including through large-scale business transformation projects such as the new enterprise resource planning system (Umoja), International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) and the Capital Master Plan. While each involves considerable investment, we see them as important drivers in modernising the UN.

Nevertheless, it is our deep-rooted conviction that the relevance of the United Nations ultimately hinges on more fundamental reform of its governance architecture that is frozen in another era that perpetuates the rights of the haves of the mid-1940s.

It is only through such governance reform that the UN can truly invigorate action on issues of pressing global concern, be it peace and security, climate change, development, or human rights.

Let me therefore conclude, Mr. President, by raising something that inexplicably does not find mention in the Secretary-General’s report. That is, the important issue of Security Council reform where intergovernmental negotiations have seen much movement and a clear affirmation by an overwhelming majority of the member-states for expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent categories.

We regard the omission of the progress made in the intergovernmental negotiations on the issue as a significant drawback of the Secretary-General’s report. We further hope to see it corrected in future reports.

In terms of the process itself, India looks forward to capitalizing on the momentum so far to see real, fruitful and productive negotiations in the current session of the General Assembly on this important reform.

I thank you.
677. Statement Delivered in Hindi By Mr. Dharmendra Yadav, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation on Agenda Item 83: “The Rule of Law at the National and International Levels” at the Sixty-seventh Session of the United Nations General Assembly, on October 10 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your assuming the chairmanship of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly. I also congratulate the other members of the Bureau on their election.

Mr. Chairman

I would like to begin by congratulating the United Nations for having hosted for first time a successful High-Level-Meeting on the Rule of Law at the National and International Levels, last month. In particular, I congratulate the Co-facilitators for their efforts in the process of preparing the outcome document of the Meeting, member States, and other stakeholders, whose active involvement in negotiations led to the finalization of the outcome document.

I thank the Secretary-General for his report A/66/749. I also recognize the sincere efforts of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit in this endeavor.

Mr. Chairman

The outcome document reaffirms commitment of the international community towards the rule of law and adhering, for their purpose, to the principles of the United Nations Charter and international law.

It takes stock of the contemporary political, social and economic conditions and stresses upon the implementation of the rule of law related principles, in order to achieve the objective of the maintenance of international peace and security, peaceful co-existence and development.

The document stresses the importance of continuing efforts to reform the Security Council. We consider it essential to reform the Security Council at the earliest possible to make the body broadly representative, efficient and transparent.

It strongly condemns the acts of terrorism wherever, whenever and by whomever committed. We stress for collective action in the fight against terrorism, which continues to pose a serious threat to the international peace and security.

Mr. Chairman

India believes that the advancement of the rule of law at the national level is essential for the protection of democracy, economic growth, sustainable development, ensuring gender justice, eradication of poverty and hunger and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

We consider that the law making activity at the national level is exclusively the domain of the national legislature.

Mr. Chairman

We thank the Secretary General for his report A/67/290 entitled “Strengthening and coordinating United Nations rule of law activities”, submitted pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 66/102. The report throws light on the achievements and challenges in strengthening the rule of law at the national and international levels through the past year.

We agree with the assertion in paragraph 12 of the report that the challenge lies in ensuring implementation of and compliance with the existing international legal framework. We stress for the honest and effective implementation, by States, of international legal framework to combat terrorism including ensuring denial of safe havens to terrorists in any part of the world.

Mr. Chairman

We took note of the list of sub-topics in paragraph 70 of the report of the Secretary-General and those suggested by some states in an Annex to the report. We consider it appropriate that the Sixth Committee, after due consideration, takes a view with regard to the sub-topics. We prefer to take up fewer topics at one point of time to be able to concentrate in a proper manner.

Mr. Chairman

We reiterate the importance of strengthening the capacity of States, especially the developing and the least developed States, to enable them to carry out the rule of law related activities and to fulfill their obligations.

The rule of law assistance should be in line with the national priorities of the recipient States to ensure proper utilization and the benefit of assistance.

I thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman.

At the outset, let me thank the Secretary General for all his reports under these agenda items and the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) for his statement.

Mr. Chairman,

The World Drug Report 2012 documents the continuing challenges that we face. It notes that while drug consumption has decreased in the developed world, it has increased in the developing world and there are new markets emerging.

While the global illicit drug use is reportedly stable, what is alarming is the reported increase in the non-medical use of prescription drugs and the abuse of new psychoactive substances, not under international control.

Annual quantum of global drug trafficking market over US$ 320 billion starkly illustrates the severity and depth of the problem. Clearly, the international community needs to reinvigorate its efforts in the campaign against drug trafficking.

Mr. Chairman,

India has always supported strong international cooperation to confront the challenges posed by illicit trafficking and abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

We remain firmly committed to the ‘Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem’ adopted at the 20th Session of UNGA in 1998.

The Government of India announced a comprehensive updated National Policy on Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances earlier this year.

India has actively supported the Paris Pact Initiative of the UNODC. We hosted the Expert Working Group on Precursors under the Paris Pact Initiative and the 35th Meeting of the Heads of Narcotics Law Enforcement Agencies of the Asia Pacific Region in 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

India is a licit opium producing country. We have traditionally recognized the therapeutic properties of opium. We also export Opiate Raw Material for medical purposes.

We are committed to the "Principle of Balance" espoused by the UN Drug Control Conventions. While steadfastly fighting drug trafficking, we must not lose sight of the need to ensure their adequate availability for medical and scientific purposes.

Mr. Chairman,

Drug trafficking is one of the most severe challenges that confronts humankind today. That money from drug trafficking finances other forms of criminal activity, including terrorism and transnational organized crime, is well documented. There is deep-rooted nexus between drug mafias, arms dealers and money launderers.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism remains one of the most serious threats to international peace and security.

Effectively combating this global scourge requires necessary political will of member states and greater international and regional cooperation.

While combating terrorism, we need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism. We need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists to gain succor and even legitimacy.

We need concerted international efforts to dismantle the infrastructure of terrorism including its invidious network of epicenters, training facilities and financing.

It is high time that the international community demonstrates the necessary political will to conclude the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism to strengthen the normative framework against the increasingly sophisticated and globalized terrorist challenge.

Mr. Chairman,

Trans-national organized crimes continue to adversely impact many parts of the world threatening the rule of law and hindering economic development. We are deeply concerned about the new emerging areas such as cyber-crime, economic fraud, education related fraud and identity thefts, and their links with other criminal and terrorist activities.

We re-affirm the mandate entrusted to the Inter-governmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of cyber-crime and how to respond to this threat.

It is necessary to have greater coordination among law enforcement and criminal justice institutions at the international level. We also need to place greater emphasis on capacity building and technical assistance, especially in dealing with new and emerging forms of crime.

We strongly advocate the centrality of crime prevention and the criminal justice system to the rule of law and support the UN efforts in this regard.

Mr. Chairman,

India has ratified the UN Transnational Organised Crime (UNTOC) and the UN Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC).

India has enacted strong domestic legislation and entered into bilateral agreements to prevent money laundering, and counter terrorism and organized crime. India is also a member of the Financial Action Task Force.

We welcome this year’s theme chosen by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ) – “violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families”. This topic is of critical relevance. The international community must formulate balanced policies for both the countries of origin and the destination countries to address the issue.

Mr. Chairman,

We are gravely concerned by the menace of piracy and armed robbery at sea. Apart from major economic and commercial consequences of this scourge, it has serious humanitarian implications for the large number of seafarers held hostage by the pirates.

There is need for concerted international action, under the UN auspices, with special attention being paid to address the welfare of seafarers and their families.

Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, I would reiterate our strong support and commitment to the work of the UN system towards a world free of illicit drugs, money laundering, trafficking in persons, illegal arms transaction, transnational organized crime and terrorism.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. President,

Let me begin by congratulating you on assuming the Presidency of the 67th session of the UN General Assembly. You carry an enormous responsibility on your shoulders. I wish you the very best for the year ahead.

Mr. President,

Many of us with long living memories thought that the decade that ended in 2010 was the most challenging the international community had witnessed since the Second World War.

But today we know better.

Never before has the need for enduring calm and certainty in international relations been felt as ardently as in the last few years.

The political upheaval in West Asia, the Gulf and North Africa that began in early 2011 and I feel is still continuing is unprecedented both in terms of scale and impact.

The on-going global financial and economic crisis beginning in the developed world and spreading southwards has exposed the downside of globalization and seriously undermined the Cold War era structures of global governance.

Mr. President,

Our responses to the most challenging socio-political and economic crises of the last fifty years cannot be patchy and half-hearted.

The process should begin here at the UN and must be guided by a sense of urgency.

Mr. President, today itself I was listening to you very carefully when you made your introductory remarks. And I fully agreed with what you said about the urgency of what you propose to do about it today. To quote you, you said this morning “I’m afraid that we are confronted with the choice of either adapting to the new times, or simply being left behind to watch the gap between our duties and our capabilities widen by the day. I am not advocating haste or revolution” you said, Mr. President, “but I am trying to instill a sense of urgency.”
The on-going global financial and economic crisis is certainly asking us to do this immediately.

First and foremost, the deficit in global governance must be addressed. The Security Council of the United Nations with a structure and a set of governing norms that harkens back to the realities of the late 1940s I stress is an anachronism.

In order to make the Security Council reflective of current geopolitical realities, it needs to be expanded in both the permanent and non-permanent categories. A reformed Council must include countries that are willing to bear additional burdens relating to the maintenance of international peace and security and be able to sustain worldwide campaigns against new and emerging global threats including terrorism and piracy.

This is exactly what you stressed when you said that the gap between our duties and our capabilities are widening by the day.

Next, we need to revitalize the General Assembly.

We need to change it from a mere talk shop to a place where transnational issues that impact each and every one of us are addressed swiftly and truly global solutions prescribed.

We are therefore appreciative of the importance that you, Mr. President, have attached to this issue.

You told member-states on the first day of the current General Assembly session on 18 September 2012 and I quote “To revitalize this most universal of multilateral institutions is to renew our faith not only in the UN's programs and purposes, but also in each other. The Member States can count on me” you said, “to assist and facilitate in advancing the revitalization agenda, including the Security Council reform process.”

We welcome your resolve. You can count on India’s support in this regard.

Mr. President,

The starting point of my delegation's position is the firm belief that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and spirit.

The Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. In particular, revitalization must restore the primacy of the UN in development matters.
Mr. President,

Without prejudging the proceedings of the Ad Hoc Working Group that should start soon, I would like to place on record the Indian delegation’s considered views on the two agenda items under consideration today.

I listened very carefully to your introductory remarks. I fully agree with what you said about the need for urgency.

First of all, it is critical that we establish a relationship of respect for respective mandates between the General Assembly and the Security Council in the spirit of the Charter. The Council should not encroach upon the mandate of the Assembly through extremely wide and permissive interpretations of what constitutes a threat to international peace and security, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression and to the situations under which it can take action under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter. The Assembly’s competence in areas such as the process of standard-setting and codification of international law must also be scrupulously respected.

It is clear that the Council’s agenda is, to say the least, overburdened because it has anointed itself with the responsibility of dealing with issues, which though seemingly important, leave it with less time to deal with the real hotspots that constitute the real threats to international peace and security. The balance between the General Assembly and the Council is only one of the dimensions of what needs to be addressed.

Second, the Assembly we believe must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General. The continued circumscribing of the Assembly’s role and responsibilities in the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General needs to change in the interests of the United Nations system in general and the Assembly’s prerogatives in particular.

We could also identify objective criteria for the candidatures, including commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter, extensive leadership, administrative and diplomatic experience with due regard being given to regional rotation and gender equality.

Equally useful and practical would be to encourage formal presentation of candidatures in a manner that allows sufficient time for interaction with member-states, and also requires candidates to present their views to all member-states of the General Assembly.

Thirdly, the Assembly and the other entities that form part of the UN system must reflect diplomatic best practices in its day to day functioning. And it has a lot to learn from member-states in this regard.
Mr. President,

In conclusion, let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative body of the international community.

The General Assembly can expect India’s constructive support and participation in these efforts.

I thank you again, Mr. President.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. Chairman,

Please accept my delegation’s congratulations on your well-deserved election as Chair of the First Committee. We are delighted that a distinguished representative of Indonesia is chairing the First Committee this year. I assure you of my delegation’s full cooperation in pursuing our collective work.

2. India aligns itself with the statement made by Iran on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

3. It is a painful reality that the goal of universal, nondiscriminatory nuclear disarmament remains a distant one. India’s Action Plan of 1988, put forward by Shri Rajiv Gandhi at the Third Special Session of the UN General Assembly, set out a roadmap for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner. The principles contained in the Action Plan remain relevant and valid and India’s Working Paper on Nuclear Disarmament of 2006 retained the spirit and substance of the Action Plan. In order to raise awareness and research about global nuclear disarmament, a National Conference was held in New Delhi on August 21 this year for more than a thousand students and scholars.

4. We believe that the goal of nuclear disarmament can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework that is global and non-discriminatory. There is need for a meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines. India subscribes to a policy of credible minimum nuclear deterrent. We do not subscribe to any arms race, including a nuclear arms race. India has espoused the policy of no first-use and non-use against non-nuclear weapon states and is prepared to convert these undertakings into multilateral legal arrangements. We support negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear weapon States against the use and threat of use of nuclear weapons. We also support a Global No-first Use Treaty. India remains committed to maintaining a unilateral and voluntary moratorium on nuclear explosive testing. We are committed to working with the international community to advance our common objectives of non-proliferation, including through strong export controls and membership of the multilateral export regimes.

5. Without prejudice to the priority we attach to nuclear disarmament, we support the negotiation in the Conference on Disarmament of a non-discriminatory and internationally verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices that meets India’s national security interests. India is a nuclear weapon state and a responsible member of the world community, and would approach these negotiations as such. We share the disappointment that the impasse in the CD has persisted despite strong support for commencement of FMCT negotiations. We must work towards an early start of these negotiations in the CD as part of a comprehensive and balanced program of work and on the basis of the agreed mandate.

6. Mr. Chairman, the conclusion of the Chemical Weapons Convention demonstrated that given a shared political will a universally acceptable non-discriminatory disarmament treaty to eliminate comprehensively an entire category of weapons of mass destruction within a specified time frame under effective international verification can be negotiated multilaterally. The High Level meeting on the CWC, held in New York, was addressed by our External Affairs Minister on 1st Oct 2012. India is fully compliant with its CWC obligations including the destruction of its chemical weapon stockpiles as prescribed by the Convention and we call on the remaining possessor states to complete the destruction of chemical stockpiles as soon as possible.

7. India welcomes the outcome of the 7th Review Conference and hopes that this would allow the state parties to face new challenges facing the Convention in the 21st century including bio-terrorism. We also welcome the consensus reached on the new inter-sessional programme, which got off to a good start this year with a Meeting of Experts focused on international cooperation and assistance, national implementation as well as review of scientific and technological developments of relevance to the Convention.

8. The Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, including the safety of assets in space, should remain a priority. The international legal framework on space security needs to be strengthened to enhance security of space assets for all space users and to prevent the weaponisation of outer space. While universal and non-discriminatory transparency and confidence-building measures can play a useful complementary role, they cannot substitute legally binding instruments in this field.

9. India participated in the negotiations on an Arms Trade Treaty held in July this year. Given the complexities of the issues involved, it was not possible for the Conference to adopt an agreed text. We believe that further work needs to be done and a treaty of this nature involving legally binding obligations should not be rushed through. It is important to bring all stakeholders on board in a manner that promotes the prospects of a treaty that is practical and implementable and is able to attract universal adherence. India is prepared to engage in further work in a consensus based process and outcome. India welcomes the consensus outcome of the 2nd Review Conference of the UN Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All its Aspects

10. Mr. Chairman, India would be presenting its three traditional resolutions for action by the First Committee. The draft resolution on a Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons and the draft Resolution on Reducing Nuclear Danger reflect our belief that progressive steps are needed for the de-legitimization of nuclear weapons and for increasing restraints on the use of nuclear weapons before they are eliminated. Measures to reduce nuclear dangers arising from accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and de-alerting of nuclear weapons are essential steps in this regard. As in previous years we would also be presenting a draft Resolution on Measures to Prevent Terrorists from Acquiring Weapons of Mass Destruction. The High Level Meeting held on September 28 demonstrates that nuclear terrorism remains a priority area for action by the international community. It has been India’s consistent position that without diminishing state accountability for curbing terrorism or its linkages with weapons of mass destruction, the international community must come together to eliminate the risks related to sensitive technologies and materials falling into the hands of terrorists and non-state actors, including through clandestine proliferation networks.

11. Before I conclude, Mr. Chairman, I wish to address the issue of the disarmament machinery. India has welcomed the initiative of the UN Secretary General to focus debate on the revitalization of the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral negotiations. We have participated in the debates in New York and Geneva on this issue. We believe the CD continues to have the mandate, the membership, the credibility and the rules of procedure to discharge its responsibility as the single multilateral negotiating forum. It is up to Member States to make it work by negotiating multilateral treaties that can be implemented universally. Proposals that question the validity or relevance of the CD and weaken established multilateral negotiating institutions must be viewed with caution.
681. Keynote address delivered by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative and Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee of the UN Security Council at the VII PAM Plenary Session in Malta on October 12, 2012.

H.E. Senator, Dr. Fayez Al-Tarawneh, PAM President
Hon’ble Dr. Michael Frendo, Speaker of the Parliament of Malta
H.E. Mr. Tonio Borg, Deputy Prime Minister & Foreign Minister of Malta
Amb. Sergio Piazzi, PAM Secretary General

Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is both a singular honour and privilege for me to address the VIIth PAM Plenary Session. Your aims and objectives are not only complementary but add strength to the efforts of the United Nations to build a world in which there is freedom from fear; a world in which we are free to channel our energies into furthering the common good. Your efforts in the fight against terrorism and bolstering counter-terrorism cooperation are commendable. I avail this opportunity to present before you some thoughts in my personal capacity as Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee.

To say that terrorism today constitutes the most serious challenge to international peace and security would be both a self-evident truism and an understatement. Statistics would indicate that the share of terrorism in global violence is at an all-time high.

Of particular concern to the Mediterranean region is the threat posed by Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) which continues to raise a considerable amount of money from kidnappings for ransom. Al-Qaeda, despite considerable disruption in its leadership, remains a potent and dangerous force.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen,

In confronting the scourge of terrorism, the international community has made considerable progress. Ever since the adoption of UN Security Council Resolution 1373 (2001), most States have now taken steps to criminalize terrorist acts in their domestic laws and regulations. Financial intelligence units (FIUs) and other mechanisms have been set up in many States to guard more effectively against terrorist financing. New systems of border security have been developed. The exchange of information now takes place in a more systematic manner.

I must complement PAM for its pioneering effort in adopting a definition of terrorism as early as 2009. There is now a clear understanding of the acts and actions that constitute terrorism.
Notwithstanding this progress, the efforts of the international community continue to face many challenges. Foremost is the need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists to gain succour and even legitimacy. Progress under mutual legal assistance and extradition cases is still sketchy and is yet to be fully mainstreamed as part of regional and international counter-terrorism efforts.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen,

No cause or grievance can justify terrorism. It has to be confronted with resolute determination, not only by governments, but also by societies at large. Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) as well as the universally agreed Global Counter Terrorism Strategy recognize that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone.

Meeting violence with greater violence can never provide a lasting solution. Such an approach has its inherent limitations. Mahatma Gandhi, I would like to remind you at this stage, said that an eye for an eye makes the whole world go blind. The recent developments in West Asia and North Africa demonstrate that peaceful and non-violent mobilization of a population can be a more effective instrument of social change than violence.

What we need is to promote and ensure a holistic zero-tolerance approach towards terrorism. It is also absolutely essential that any measures taken by States to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

Excellencies, Ladies and gentlemen,

The success in the fight against terrorism goes hand-in-hand with progress in strengthening counter-terrorism cooperation and exchange of information at the international, regional and sub-regional level. The mechanisms that have been developed to pool the resources and the knowledge of the international community needs to be augmented and made more effective.

At the political and operational levels, Member States need to have comprehensive and integrated national counter-terrorism legal frameworks that are anchored in the rule of law and human rights. They also need to take steps to promote inter-agency coordination and the exchange of counter-terrorism information, both at the national and regional/international levels. Dedicated counter-terrorism units and enhance cooperation with INTERPOL would be useful from this perspective. Regional organizations, in particular, are well-placed in advancing these efforts. I would be remiss if I do not acknowledge PAM’s extraordinary efforts in this regard.

The United Nations, with its unparalleled convening power, is playing a seminal role in combating terrorism including through extending technical assistance, capacity building and sharing of best practices among member States. We are working towards strengthening cooperation, coherence and coordination of counter-terrorism efforts amongst various UN entities. The efforts have also been focussed on enhanced engagement among practitioners - prosecutors, police officers, judges, and immigration and border officials so that counter-terrorism efforts are well informed and better coordinated.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

The Counter-Terrorism Committee, which I Chair, adopted a landmark Outcome document in its Special Meeting last year that raised the benchmark in the fight against terrorism to a higher level and approved a zero-tolerance approach which is now part of the counter-terrorism lexicon. Next month, the Committee intends to organize another Special Meeting focussing on “preventing and suppressing terrorist financing”. Further, as part of strengthening its outreach efforts, the Committee is also exploring the possibility of collaboration with the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Moving forward, it is imperative to have the necessary political will to squarely face the challenge of terrorism. We need to expand the scope of the legal instruments and strengthen enforcement efforts to destroy safe havens for terrorists, their financial flows and their support networks.

There has also been an ever increasing need to expand the normative framework to combat international terrorism taking into account the increasingly sophisticated and globalized terrorist challenges. An early conclusion of Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism will further strengthen the implementation of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

We also need to evolve a more powerful counter-narrative to combat incitement and radicalization. We need to inculcate values among our young minds that promote tolerance and respect for diversity and different cultures. We need to have mechanisms to ensure accountability and justice.

In concluding, I would like to quote the great European philosopher Edmund Burke. He said that “All that it takes for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing.” This is the philosophy behind the creation of the United Nations and this organization. It is in that spirit that I am here as Chairman of the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Committee to urge greater cooperation and coordination between our organizations to face this contemporary evil.
682. Statement by Dr. Vishnu Dutt Sharma, Counsellor, on Agenda Item 76 - “Criminal Accountability of United Nations Officials And Experts on Mission” at the Sixth Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 12, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary General for his Report A/67/213 entitled “Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission, submitted pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 66/93.

The Report outlines the information received from member States regarding their national laws establishing jurisdiction over crimes committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission. It also provides information on cooperation among States and with the UN in the investigation and prosecution of crimes committed by such officials or experts.

Mr. Chairman,

We condemn the instances of crimes alleged to have been committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission as reported in paragraph 35 of the Secretary-General’s report. It is imperative that all UN officials and experts on mission perform their duties in a manner consistent with the UN Charter that promotes the image, credibility and integrity of the Organization.

Mr. Chairman,

The General Assembly resolution 66/93 strongly urges all States to consider establishing jurisdiction over crimes of a serious nature committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission, at least where the conduct of the person amounts to a crime both in the host country and the country of his nationality as well. Effective implementation of this element would help fill the jurisdictional gap in respect of member States that do not assert extra-territorial jurisdiction over crimes committed by their nationals abroad.

Mr. Chairman,

The provisions of the Indian Penal Code do extend to extra-territorial offences committed by Indian nationals. Accordingly, the offences committed by Indian officials or experts on mission while serving abroad are subject to the jurisdiction of Indian courts and are punishable under the Indian law. India is committed to punish those who may be found guilty of any misconduct.

The Indian law has provisions for assistance in criminal matters, which enables to seek from and extend to a foreign State assistance in criminal cases. These provisions are part of the Code of Criminal Procedure of India.
India has concluded bilateral treaties with about forty countries on mutual assistance in criminal matters, which are designed to provide and seek assistance in criminal matters that are necessary for the investigation and prosecution of offences.

Mr. Chairman,

Extradition of fugitive criminals and the related issues are dealt under the Indian Extradition Act, 1962. The Act allows for extradition in respect of extraditable offences in terms of an extradition treaty with another State. The Act also allows consideration of an international Convention as the legal basis for considering an extradition request in the absence of a bilateral extradition treaty.

Where there is no bilateral treaty on extradition or mutual assistance in criminal matters with a State, the Government of India can provide assistance on a reciprocal and case by case basis in accordance with the provisions of applicable national laws.

Mr. Chairman,

We are supportive of the strengthening of training materials and awareness-raising messages in order to ensure that the standards and values to be observed by the UN official and experts on mission are clearly communicated and understood.

In this regard, we note with appreciation the information in paragraph 44 of the Secretary General’s report that the training and awareness-raising on United Nations standards of conduct remained central.

Mr. Chairman,

India considers it extremely important that any kind of violation of any national or international law by the UN officials and experts on mission are fully stopped.

We reiterate our view that dealing with the wrongdoings of UN officials or experts on mission, does not require the development of an international convention.

The member States need to ensure that their laws provide jurisdiction and have adequate provisions for prosecuting any such conduct of their nationals serving as the UN officials or experts abroad, and that their laws also have provisions for international assistance for the investigation and prosecution of the crimes committed.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Mr. President,

I am honoured speaking before the UN General Assembly.

At the outset, I would like to join others in thanking the President of the ICTY, Judge Meron and the President of the ICTR, Judge Joensen for their excellent presentations and congratulate them for expediting the work of the Tribunals.

India is committed to global peace, upholding human rights and is steadfast in its support for counter-terrorism.

India welcomes the progress made by the two Tribunals to implement their Completion Strategy.

We are happy that all organs of the Tribunals are ensuring their best efforts to complete their work expeditiously and to prepare for a smooth transition to the Mechanism for International Criminal Tribunals (MICT).

We are also pleased to note that while focusing on their goal of completing their judicial proceedings as soon as possible, through intense trial, referral, and appeals activity and judgment drafting, the two tribunals were equally mindful that the due process is not sacrificed.

It is very reassuring that the preparations for the commencement of the MICT are on track, including the development of a budget proposal for the biennium 2012 and 2013 and a Rules of Procedure and Evidence for the Mechanism.

We welcome the opening of the Arusha Branch of the MICT that has started its operations from 1 July 2012.

We are confident that MICT will make good progress under the leadership of Judge Meron who is also double hatting as the President of MICT.

Mr. President,

We appreciate the close cooperation between the two tribunals and the Security Council.

We are happy to note that the recommendations made by the Security Council pursuant to the request of the Tribunals, including on hiring and retaining qualified interns and other issues has brought tangible results and helped the Tribunals progress faster towards the implementation of completion strategy and the commencement of the MICT.

We appreciate the untiring efforts made by Judge Meron who adopted a variety of reforms to improve the functioning of various sections of the Tribunal.

As a result the trial of Mladic, Hadzic and Karadzic could be advanced many months ahead of their expected schedule. Similarly appeals in some cases were advanced significantly ahead of their schedule. This is a very positive sign and we congratulate Judge Meron for this welcoming development.

We are also happy to note that ICTR has completed work at the trial level.

The Appeals Chamber upheld the decision to refer the first ICTR case to Rwanda for trial and a further six cases of fugitive accused have been referred to Rwanda. It is important that all trials are on track and will be completed by end 2012.

Mr. President,

It is critical to help Tribunals finish their work on time.

We have listened very carefully to the concerns raised by the Presidents of the two Tribunals in relation to their ability to keep pace with their work while adhering to expected timelines until the ‘close of business’.

The Judges have pointed out that trials and appeals continue to be affected by staffing shortages and the loss of highly efficient staff members. We share the concerns expressed by the Judges, especially on the need for retaining adequate and experienced staff.

Judges have also raised the issue concerning the relocation of acquitted persons and those who have already served their sentences. Some of them are living in safe homes in Arusha for the last 5 years. This is an important humanitarian issue and needs careful consideration.

We urge the Secretariat and the Security Council to give careful consideration to the suggestions made by the Judges on how to address this challenge.

This is a practical issue and requires consideration of pragmatic and innovative solutions and we stand ready to work with other members of the Council to solve this problem.

We also commend the efforts of the Prosecutors of the two Tribunals for undertaking outreach initiatives, including training, aimed at strengthening capacity of national systems to handle referred cases effectively.

We would like to see that the legacy of the Tribunals is preserved. We agree with Judge Joensen’s conclusion that the tribunal’s impact will not only be challenging impunity, but also helping to improve the means to dispense justice for an entire region.

Mr. President,

The cooperation of all concerned States is vital to ensure the completion of the mandates of the Tribunals as well as for the successful implementation of the Completion Strategy.

We appreciate Serbia’s sustained efforts in this regard and request other States to extend effective cooperation so that the remaining fugitives could be located soon and surrendered to end impunity.

We also note with satisfaction the progress made in the implementation of the MICT.

Any functional, operational or institutional issue in the implementation of the Completion Strategy or the MICT may be addressed by the Council in consultation with the Council’s Informal Working Group on International Tribunals (IWGIT) and with the assistance of the Office of Legal Affairs.

Mr. President,

We believe that the two Tribunals have admirably implemented their mandates.

We consider that the support of the Security Council is crucial at this critical juncture in the life of the Tribunals.

At the same time, we urge both Tribunals to continue taking all necessary measures to keep the trial and appeal schedules on track. This will pave the way for successful trials of the remaining accused and a smooth implementation of an efficient MICT.

I thank you.

★★★★★
Mr. Chairman,

I congratulate you on your election as Chairman of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly and also I congratulate other members of the Bureau on their election.

Mr. Chairman,

We attach great significance to the work of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (the Commission).

Through its working groups, the Commission has been and is engaged in preparation of legal texts in a number of important areas including the international commercial dispute settlement, transport law, electronic commerce, insolvency, sale of goods and, procurement and infrastructure development.

The legal texts and model laws developed by the Commission are directly relevant to commercial transactions of the individuals, corporations and States and thus have great practical value for all.

Mr. Chairman,

We extend our gratitude to the Commission for its report A/67/17 on its work at the forty-fifth session. During this session, the Commission adopted the draft Guide to Enactment of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Public Procurement. The Guide would be useful for States in updating and revising their existing laws on public procurement and in enacting the new legislations.

In the area of arbitration, the Commission adopted the recommendations to assist arbitration institutions and other interested bodies with regard to arbitration under the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, as revised in 2010. We commend the contribution of the Commission in the field of international arbitration.

Mr. Chairman,

We appreciate the efforts of the Commission towards promoting the uniform interpretation and effective application of its legal instruments. The continued work of the Commission to ensure monitoring the implementation of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, 1958 (the New York Convention) deserves specific mention.
Mr. Chairman,

We also appreciate the efforts of the Secretariat of the Commission in suggesting three sub-topics in Secretary-General’s report A/67/290 for consideration under the agenda item - the rule of law at the national and international levels.

They include: Means of achieving effective coordination of rule-making activities at the regional and international levels; Access to justice through alternative means of dispute resolution and; mutually reinforcing impact of economic development and the rule of law.

The decision as to the inclusion of any topics in the relevant agenda item of the Sixth Committee would however, require a careful examination and deliberations.

Mr. Chairman,

We reiterate the importance of technical cooperation and assistance to the developing countries, specifically in matters relating to the adoption and use of texts, adopted by the Commission, at the national level. We encourage the Secretariat to continue to provide such assistance to the broadest extent possible and to improve its outreach, in particular to the developing countries.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Statement by Mr. Derek o’brien member of parliament and member of the Indian delegation, at the general debate under agenda item 25 on operational activities for development covering QCPR and South South Cooperation in the 2nd committee of the 67th session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 15, 2012.

Mr. President, allow me to first complement the Secretary General on extremely insightful reports on the funding of operational activities of the UN Development system along with Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QCPR) and the state of South South Cooperation.

India aligns itself with the statement delivered by the distinguished representative of Algeria, on behalf of the G-77.

While we welcome the significant strides made by UN Development system and its agencies in recent years, we must also acknowledge that we are meeting at a time of an ongoing economic crisis and political ferment in the world. The Rio+20 Summit on Sustainable Development had just a few months ago, given us “the future we want” and suggested us the means to realize it. As we plan the roadmap on ‘how’ we go about achieving that and imparting substance to the ongoing QCPR process, my delegation would like to submit the following:

First, for UN development system to be successful globally it needs to be firmly rooted in its core focus area, which has primarily to be development related ONLY. Poverty eradication still remains the over-riding priority for developing countries and the greatest global challenge. It is therefore our considered conviction that poverty eradication should be at the heart of UN’s operational activities for development, as its primary objective. In Bengal, the region of India I come from, we call this humanistic philosophy one of ‘Ma, Maati and Manush’- signifying an equilibrium of the universally caring Mother, the Earth that nurtures us and the Human Beings who must be central to our developmental endeavors.

It is therefore important that within the process of the QCPR, which aims to set out the overall policy direction for the operational activities of the UN Development System for the next four years, we acknowledge upfront the enormity of this greatest global challenge, that stills ails several developing countries, and subsequently, lay emphasis on achieving poverty eradication, while planning for future development projects, as its underlying objective.

Second, developing countries have their own set of ‘needs’ and different ‘context’ based requirements, which the UN development system must find ways to respond to. The development operational activities of the UN system must therefore have the ability to respond and adapt to the evolving environment and expectations of individual countries, and the programming activities therefore, needs to be harmonised with the budgetary and planning cycles of recipient Governments.

Third, financing for development is increasingly coming under acute pressure. The present global economic slowdown has adversely impacted plans of national governments in developing countries to even consider scaling up developmental financing. And the diminishing quantity of finance available for developing countries, remains a central challenge for the attainment the MDGs.

The requirement of enhanced ODA is all the more critical now, when developing countries are faced with curtailed capital flows, economic slowdown and increased programming requirements. These needs must be met by efforts to increase ODA, promote investment and trade that is pro-development, and by facilitating transfer of and access to advanced technologies by developing countries, and by expanded and innovative financing of development activities, such as donors putting in place five year plans to scale up disbursements by increasing programme based aid flows.

Fourth, there is a ‘negative impact of policy conditionality’ that is tied into donor driven aid arrangements when planning for development activities. The UN operational activities for development should feed into national development plans and steer clear of conditionality. The fundamental principles of national ownership and leadership, and deference to national development priorities must be the pivots around which UN development activities are modeled and implemented.

Fifth, even though ‘South South Cooperation’ continues to be the buzzword in the narrative of the developmental discourse, much more remains to be done to give it the ‘muscle’ it needs from the UN system. The paradigm construct of South-South cooperation requires that developing countries have the policy space for their own development. It is distinct from that of North-South development cooperation, with the clear understanding that South-South cooperation can complement North-South Cooperation but cannot substitute or dilute the obligation and quantum of North-South cooperation.

Given the vast difference in development levels between countries of the North and those from the South, it is important that development projects under South-South Cooperation are not strait-jacketed in terms of rigid rules and regulations or policy prescriptions. Flexibility and adaptability is the key to the success of South-South Cooperation. These must not be compromised.

India has a unique experience in nation-building given our large, diverse and complex reality. Our approach to South-South Cooperation has been therefore to share this experience and knowledge in a spirit of solidarity with countries from the South treading similar paths of socio-economic development.

A key facet of our joint initiative with countries of the South, has been along with Brazil and South Africa, our IBSA initiative and we are extremely pleased that our partners in this are the now renamed, UN office for South South Cooperation. We therefore welcome efforts to upgrade and strengthen the UN Office for South-South Cooperation..

Sixth, strengthening institutional capacity building in developing countries has to be a key focus area of any operational activity for the development agenda. It is a strategic choice and investment that should be made and sustained by all stakeholders. Many countries could do more if additional finance and technology were available. Unfortunately, there is little evidence of support from the industrialised countries in these areas.

My delegation believes that for the operational activities of the UN development system to be a real ‘force multiplier’, it should foster national and local capacities, strengthen networks for sharing of knowledge and best practices, and promote national ownership by building institutional capacities in developing countries.

Seventh, while we plan for the post 2015 development agenda and impart substance to the ongoing discussions on the Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QCPR) process, we should look at forging synergies within the overall policy framework of the UN System. There are some basic paradigm differences in the contours of the development approach, which the QCPR must identify and attempt to address based on the principle of “No one size fits all”.

And finally, economic development, social inclusion of all stakeholders and environmental sustainability are all equally critical as components of sustainable development architecture. The task before us is to give practical shape and content to this architecture in a manner that allows each country to develop according to its own national priorities and circumstances.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. I would like to express my appreciation for the Report of the Secretary-General in highlighting key issues regarding the advancement of women, and to the speakers for their contribution to this discussion.

Mr. Chairman,

From times immemorial, India has believed that societies and nations, where women enjoy equality, dignity and empowerment, are placed better to achieve well-being of its people and indeed for global peace and harmony. This sentiment is aptly captured in the ancient Indian scripture - Yatra-nariyastu pujyante ramante tatra devta - where women are honoured, divinity blossoms there.

Women constitute half the population and they, therefore, have a pivotal role in the economic, social and political progress of the country. The advancement of gender equality and empowerment of women has been central to India’s political and socio-economic development agenda since our independence.

This principle found expression in our decision to grant full and equal voting rights to women six decades ago in 1950. The principle of gender equality is firmly enshrined in the Indian Constitution. The Constitution mandates that the State adopts special measures for women and children [Article 15(3)].

Our Constitution further recognizes the responsibility of the State to ensure “just and humane conditions of work and for maternity relief” [Article 42]; “renounces practices derogatory to the dignity of women” [Article 51(a)]; and refers to the provision of equal pay for equal work for both men and women in Article 39(d). 2

Mr. Chairman,

As the world’s largest democracy, India has set to herself very clear and visionary goals and objectives such as:

(i) Creating an environment through positive economic and social policies for full development of women to enable them to realize their full potential
(ii) The de-jure and de-facto enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedom by women on equal basis with men in all spheres – political, economic, social, cultural and civil

(iii) Equal access to participation and decision making of women in social, political and economic life of the nation

(iv) Equal access for women to health care, quality education at all levels, career and vocational guidance, employment, equal remuneration, occupational health and safety, social security and public office etc.

(v) Strengthening legal systems aimed at elimination of all forms of discrimination against women

(vi) Changing societal attitudes and community practices by active participation and involvement of both men and women.

(vii) Mainstreaming a gender perspective in the development process.

(viii) Elimination of discrimination and all forms of violence against women and the girl child; and

(ix) Building and strengthening partnerships with civil society, particularly women's organizations.

Mr. Chairman,

We firmly believe that women need to be empowered both politically and economically to fully realize their potential in contributing to our national pursuit of inclusive development.

India proffered 33% reservation for women in rural and urban local governance bodies in 1992 through the 73rd Amendment Act of the Constitution to politically empower women and increase their participation in decision-making.

The Parliament subsequently raised the percentage of women representation to 50% in 2009. More than a million elected women are presently represented in local bodies constituting one of the biggest political mobilizations of women in the world. 3

Mr. Chairman,

The National Policy for Empowerment of Women was unveiled in 2001 and the National Mission for Empowerment of Women was subsequently launched to facilitate coordination and convergence of development programmes for women across several ministries. The National Resource Center for Women provides a central repository of knowledge, research and data on gender issues.
Mr. Chairman,

India’s Eleventh Five Year Plan included significant targeted measures for gender equality and empowerment, with gender being a cross-cutting theme in all development plans. The inclusion and mainstreaming of women received special attention under education, health and skill development programmes.

There is a Joint Parliamentary Committee on Empowerment of Women which ensures that legislations passed by Parliament are gender-sensitive. Since 2005, the Gender Budget Statement has been introduced in the annual Union Budget to reflect budgetary allocations for programmes that benefit women.

Our targeted measures and interventions have brought about visible socio-economic progress for women. Maternal and infant mortality rates have reduced significantly; gender gaps in wage rates have diminished; there is almost full enrolment in primary grades of schooling and narrowing of gender gaps in middle and higher education.

Mr. Chairman,

At least 50% of the work is reserved for women in the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme, which responds to the needs of 53 million poor rural households by ensuring them 100 days employment per year. The scheme mandates equal pay for men and women.

Many Indian provinces have successfully implemented and have created success stories through targeted programmes such as ‘Kanya khelwani’ – education programme for girl child in Gujarat; ‘Bhagya Lakshmi’ and ‘Ladli Lakshmi’ – social and economic security schemes in Karnataka and Madhya Pradesh; ‘J anani Suraksha Yojna’ and ‘Madilu’ in Karanataka and Madhya Pradesh and ‘J anani Shishu Suraksha Yojna’ in Rajasthan to provide health care, nutrition and post-natal care to reduce IMR and MMR; ‘Indira Kranthi Patham’ in Andhra Pradesh for strengthening of Self-help Groups with focus on women empowerment and poverty alleviation and schemes such as free distribution of bicycles for school-going girl children in Bihar, MP and Karnataka.

Mr. Chairman,

Recognizing that rural women can leverage their strength, increase bargaining power and enhance capacities and skills through joint action, the Government has encouraged organization of Self-Help Groups (SHG) – a movement that started as peoples’ initiative, and to channelize resources to these groups.

There are around 6 million SHGs of which 80% (4.8 million) are women’s groups, covering 97.4 million beneficiaries. Women’s Self-Help Groups are, thus, a very important vehicle for economic empowerment.

We are implementing special measures and programmes for disadvantaged groups such as women in extreme poverty, women affected by natural calamities, women in less developed regions, the disabled, widows, elderly women, single women, women heading households, migrants, etc.

Mr. Chairman,

India enacted a comprehensive Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act which recognises that violence can take various forms, including physical, economic, social and psychological.

This Act provides a legal tool for women to fight violence within the family – both marital and familial abuse. The law seeks to provide support to women victim of domestic violence in form of shelter, medical help, compensation, maintenance orders, and temporary custody of children.

There is a comprehensive legislative and policy framework to address the problem of trafficking of women and girls. A draft Bill aimed at providing a safe and secure environment for women at the work place is presently before the Parliament of India.

Media should portray messages and images consistent with human dignity of girls and women and desist from demeaning, degrading and negative conventional stereotypical images of women and on violence against women. The media is being encouraged to evolve self-regulatory mechanisms in this regard.

Mr. Chairman,

Ensuring gender equality and women's empowerment is essential to the pursuit of building inclusive societies. It is also an imperative for building strong and resilient economies.

India reaffirms her international obligations/commitments as set out in the Convention on All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD +5) and other such instruments. International, regional and sub-regional cooperation towards the empowerment of women will continue to be encouraged through sharing of experiences, exchange of ideas and technology, networking with institutions and organizations and through bilateral and multi-lateral partnerships. We reiterate our full commitment to advancing this goal globally and firmly support the efforts of the United Nations, in particular UN Women, which has recorded significant achievements in only two years since its establishment.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
I thank the Secretary-General for his report A/67/116 on this agenda item, which provides information about the law and practice of certain states concerning universal jurisdiction.

My delegation aligns with the statement made by the representative of the Islamic Republic of Iran on behalf of the NAM.

We hold the firm view that those who commit crimes must be brought to justice and punished. A criminal should not go scot free because of procedural technicalities including the lack of jurisdiction.

Mr. Chairman, assuming and exercising jurisdiction is however, a distinct subject in itself. The term “jurisdiction”, in legal parlance, refers to two aspects: first, the rule-making and second, rule-enforcing. The widely recognized theories of jurisdiction include Territorial, which is based on the place where the offence was committed; Nationality, which is based on the nationality of the accused or the nationality of the victim; and Protective, which is based on the national interests affected.

These jurisdictional theories require a connection between the state asserting jurisdiction and the offence, including the nationality of the offender or of the victim or the place of the commission of offence.

We, under the present agenda item, are however deliberating upon a new and different type of jurisdictional theory, namely the universality theory, which lacks proper legal backing at both the national and international levels.

Mr. Chairman, a State invoking the universal jurisdiction claims to exercise jurisdiction over any offender, irrespective of the question of nationality or the place of commission of the offence, or of any link between that State and the offender.

It assumes that each state has an interest in exercising jurisdiction to prosecute offences which all nations have condemned. The rationale for such jurisdiction is the nature of certain offences, which affect the interests of all states, even when they are unrelated to State(s) assuming jurisdiction.
Mr. Chairman,

Piracy on the high seas is the only one such crime, over which claims of universal jurisdiction is undisputed under general international law. We consider that the principle of universal jurisdiction in relation to piracy has been codified in the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea, 1982.

In respect of certain other crimes like genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity and torture etc., international treaties have provided universal jurisdiction. They include among others the Four Geneva Conventions of 1949 and; the Apartheid Convention.

Mr. Chairman,

The question that arises is whether the jurisdiction provided for specific serious international crimes in certain treaties could be converted into a commonly exercisable jurisdiction in respect of a wider range of offences.

Several issues remained unanswered including those related to the basis of extending the application of such jurisdiction, the relationship with the laws relating to immunity, pardoning and amnesty, and harmonization with domestic laws.

Several treaties oblige the states parties either to try a criminal or handover for trial to a party willing to do so. This is the obligation of aut dedere, aut judicare (“either extradite or prosecute”). This obligatory principle should not be confused with the universal jurisdiction.

Mr. Chairman,

We thank the delegation of Chile for submitting a non-paper on this agenda item at the last session. The non-paper has raised the issues related to the universal jurisdiction in a comprehensive manner. We are of the view that consideration of the non-paper in the working group of the Sixth Committee would be of use in giving a direction to our discussion.

I thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. India aligns itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

The Least Developed Countries (LDCs) and the Landlocked Developing Countries (LLDCs) are faced with unique challenges. India has long recognized their special needs and remains fully committed to their cause.

Mr. Chairman,

The response from the international community to the special needs of the LDCs continues to be wanting. In as many as four decades, we have only been able to graduate 3 Least Developed Countries (LDCs) out of the Group. We need to do much more.

And as we once again, today, commit to make the LDCs and the LLDCs equitable shareholders in our socio-economic progress, the question that we must put to ourselves is what we must collectively do?

To which my answer would be: we need to introspect; we need to integrate and we need to end their isolation. We must introspect to fill the gaps in our collective commitment, we must integrate to make them part of global governance, and we must work to end their physical and developmental disconnect with the world at large.

Mr. Chairman, India never professed the concept of a global village, we always believed in the concept of a global family. Our ancient scriptures proclaim “VASUDHAIVA KUTUMBAKAM” that essentially enunciates world as one family. A village may have inequalities and discriminations like rich and poor, privileged and not so privileged, but the family is governed by one principle only, the principle of live and let live, mutual love, affection, and harmony where every member is cared for equally. India remains committed to this mantra of making all nations belong to a one global family. Our spirited effort, therefore, must be, to work for integration, and not allow isolation. Let’s make the LDCs and the LLDCs equal partners in our shared destiny, a destiny they can rightfully own and a destiny then can heartily celebrate.

Mr. Chairman,

With majority of the population in the LDCs suffering from extreme poverty, hunger and disease, no credible action on achieving the MDGs or removing the blight of poverty can be complete without addressing their systemic vulnerabilities.

At the Rio+20 Summit we renewed our commitment to meeting the challenges faced by the LDCs, and this must now translate into concrete action as we move forward.

Poverty eradication, the overriding priority of the LDCs, must be given primacy in the proposed Sustainable Development Goals and the Post 2015 development agenda.

The ongoing impacts of the global economic crisis have hit these countries hard.

Unemployment, slackened economic growth and lack of domestic resources have undermined their socio-economic advancement.

Debt burden, shrinking demand for their exports and dwindling ODA have further aggravated their vulnerabilities.

At Istanbul, the LDCs set for themselves an ambitious target to bring 50% of the countries to the threshold of graduation by the end of the 10 Year Program.

In their aspiration,

Mr. Chairman,

they have legitimate expectations from us, and we must not belie them.

Mobilization of adequate resources to fill the huge financing gap for development in the LDCs should receive our highest attention.

We call upon the donor countries to urgently fulfill their long made ODA commitments of 0.15-0.20% of GNI to the LDCs.

Transfer of technology, capacity building and enhanced economic support measures are equally crucial to strengthen their resource base.
South-South Cooperation support to the LDCs is also important but it cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

The majority of the LDCs are commodity exporting economies. Integrating and enhancing their participation in the global trading network through full implementation of the duty free and quota free market access, therefore, must remain a priority.

At the same time, with urgency, we must push for a development oriented outcome of the DOHA Round to create enhanced policy space for the LDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

As part of South-South Cooperation, we are pleased that the India-LDC partnership has gone beyond technical assistance to include trade, investment and humanitarian assistance.

In keeping with our WTO commitment, we have extended duty free tariff preference scheme to all the LDCs. Our Lines of Credit worth over 5 billion US Dollars to the LDCs since 2003 and Aid for Trade programs have led to significant expansion in the India-LDC trade, with the balance being in favour of the LDCs.

India has set up a dedicated Credit Line of US Dollars 1 billion in support of the Istanbul Program, along with a grant of US dollar 5 million for follow up of the Program. We urge the LDCs to make productive use of it.

Mr. Chairman,

The inherent geographical difficulties of the Landlocked Developing countries have placed them at a distinct disadvantage as far as international trade and economic linkages are concerned. This has been clearly recognized by the Almaty Programme.

Equally important is the understanding that any effective solution for the LLDCs must address the constraints and challenges faced by the transit developing countries that neighbour Landlocked Developing countries.

As we start to prepare for the 10 year Review of the Almaty Programme in 2014, we must focus on addressing the structural weakness of the LLDC economies, through export diversification, developing transport infrastructure and connectivity.

We welcome the recent steps taken at the regional levels to harmonize and consolidate policies to facilitate easy movement of goods from and into the LLDCs.

India has special bilateral cooperation agreements with its landlocked neighbours.
for easy transit of their goods. We accord the highest priority to further strengthening our ties with these countries including through regional initiatives.

We stand committed to meeting the critical infrastructure needs of the LLDCs. We have offered financial assistance worth US dollar 300 million for the construction of the Ethiopia-Djibouti railway line.

We will continue to contribute economic and technical support to the development efforts of landlocked and transit developing countries, as part of South-South cooperation.

We would also urge cooperation for meeting special transit requirements of landlocked regions within a country, which due to geography or political boundaries have similar difficulties in accessing international markets as the LLDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

India never subscribed to the philosophy of the majority happiness of the majority people as we have always believed in “SARVE JANA SUKHINO BHAVANTU”, i.e. happiness for everyone in the world at large. Let’s work to make it possible. We are fully committed, today and always, to strengthening our cherished partnership with the LDCs and the LLDCs.

I thank you.
Mr. President,

I am honoured to address this august assembly at today’s Joint Debate on the New Partnership for Africa’s Development: progress in implementation and international support, causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa including on the decade to Roll Back Malaria in developing countries.

Allow me to convey our sincerest appreciation to the Secretary General for his timely and extremely informative report on the agenda items under discussion today.

Mr. President,

The New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD) articulates both a vision and a strategic socio economic development framework for Africa.

India applauds the progress achieved by Africa in the implementation of NEPAD priorities over the last ten years through multi sectoral initiatives in agriculture, infrastructure, health, education, science, information technology and environment.

However, despite these positive strides, serious challenges remain to be addressed before the African continent can achieve all round development and prosperity.

Extreme poverty, hunger, lack of adequate nutrition, conflicts and other malaises continue to shackle the tremendous potential of the African people.

It is therefore important to acknowledge that addressing Africa’s development needs and challenges requires an unwavering commitment backed by resolute action, not only from within Africa, but equally important, from outside the continent.

It is imperative that the international community remain resolute in its support for Africa through sustained cooperation including transfer of technology, resources, and an enabling international environment.

As has been pointed in Secretary General's report, as a proportion of total OECD global aid allocation in 2011, Africa's share remained virtually unchanged at a mere 37 percent.

Indeed, till date, Africa has received only around half of the pledged increase made at the Group of Eight Summit in Gleneagles.

The international community therefore needs to urgently address this gaping gap between promise and delivery.

In these times of political uncertainty and economic meltdown, it is more incumbent than ever for the continent's development partners to stay the course and help African countries achieve their developmental goals.

Mr President,

The India-Africa partnership is based on firm historical foundations, which over the decades, has grown into one of the most productive and durable partnerships.

Our similar historical experiences have engendered a common worldview. Understanding and sensitivity to each other's strengths, requirements and constraints has given our partnership lasting strength and resilience.

India is today on a path of rapid economic growth.

Africa is also witnessing a phase of robust resurgence. Some of the world's fastest-growing economies are in Africa. Africa is also blessed with a young and dynamic population.

We have, therefore, together with our African friends, transformed our age old and traditional bond into and enduring and multi dimensional relationship.

Our partnership with Africa is aligned with the priorities integral to the development goals of Africa and is built on the foundations of mutual equality and common benefit.

At the 2nd India Africa Forum Summit in 2011, India committed US Dollars 5 billion for the next three years under lines of credit to help our African partners, achieve their development goals.

We also committed an additional US Dollars 700 million to establish new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions.

We also decided to support the development of a new Ethio-Djibouti Railway. line to the tune of US Dollars 300 million in keeping with NEPAD’s priority on infrastructure development.

Following the success of the Pan-African E-Network Project we are working on the establishment of an India-Africa Virtual University, which will help to meet some of the demand in Africa for higher studies in Indian institutions.

We are making available 10,000 new scholarships under this University exclusively for African students.

Our total commitment until 2014 by way of scholarships to African students, including under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme, stands at more than 22,000.

To strengthen trade and investment flows, we have earlier this year in May 2012, launched the India Africa Business Council, whose core sectors of cooperation include agriculture, manufacturing, pharmaceuticals, textiles, mining, petroleum and natural gas, IT/ITeS, financial services (including microfinance), energy, roads and railways.

Given the sheer potential of untapped trade, we have also raised our bilateral trade target to US Dollars 90 billion by 2015 from US Dollars 70 billion set earlier.

We are already making available duty free and quota free market access for goods from 34 LDCs in Africa, which covers 94% of India’s total tariff lines and provides preferential market access on tariff lines that comprise 92.5% of global exports of all LDCs.

Moreover, under the IBSA Trust Fund, with our partners from Brazil and South Africa, we have completed several successful projects in Burundi, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau and Sierra Leone for strengthening of infrastructure and capacity building.

Mr. President,

India’s partnership with Africa also spans capacity building programmes which include medical specialists to tackle pandemics like malaria, HIV and TB.

Our private sector has also invested substantially in pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities in several African countries.

We remain committed to the complete elimination of malaria and would like to thank the Secretary General for enlisting it as one of his top priorities.

Mr. President,

India’s engagement with Africa is built on a strong focus on all round capacity building and contributing to human resource development and facilitating greater intra African cooperation.

We have redirected our age-old bonds of friendship to respond to the contemporary aspirations of our peoples and build a partnership which is increasingly being cited as the ‘beacon of South South cooperation’.

This partnership, indeed, has the potential to strengthen global governance systems and democratise multilateral institutions.

In conclusion, I would like to quote the words of my Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh,

“The 21st century is often described as the Asian century. India wishes to see the 21st century as the Century of Asia and Africa with the people of the two continents working together to promote inclusive globalisation. Events in India and Africa in the middle of the 20th century changed the world. Today, we have a second chance to take charge of our own destiny, and give new meaning to the concept of sustainable, equitable and environment-friendly development.”

I thank you, Mr. President.
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. India associates itself with statement made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77. I wish to speak on sub agenda item 22 (b): International Migration and Development.

Mr. Chairman,

The era of globalisation is an era of unprecedented mobility – mobility of ideas and technologies, of capital and resources, and of people. More people live outside their countries of birth or origin than ever before in human history. Indeed, our planet’s most dynamic economies and societies are those that welcome migrants. A closed economy and a closed mind begin, we must remember, with a closed door. As such, bringing international migration and its impact on the global economy and development to the centre-stage of contemporary discourse is not simply a matter of choice. It is an absolute imperative.

India is happy that a High Level Meeting on Migration is to be held next year, and look forward to it imparting a strong political commitment to international migration as a development paradigm. In this interconnected world, Mr. Chairman, it is no gain saying that free movement of capital, goods, services, labour and technology remains of paramount significance. Managing international migration to transform it into a humane, orderly, and mutually beneficial process is a natural corollary. This, however, remains an acute challenge for all nations of the world.

Such frameworks must also address key issues of brain drain and capacity building in the South, which are certainly not compensated merely through individual earning and his/her willingness to plough some of it back home.

Remittance, however, has had measurable impact on development. UNCTAD studies have pointed out that 10% increase in remittance has led to 3.1% drop in poverty in developing countries. The salience of migration as a development tool could not be more compelling. This also brings us to the long felt need to put in place specialized institutional structures within the UN to attend to the ever expanding ramifications of international migration.

We hope these issues along with intra-country migration, in particular rural-urban migration in developing countries, would receive due attention in the ongoing discussion on the Post 2015 development agenda.
On a different note, Mr. Chairman, of late, in financing conversation globally, remittance has come to be compared or equated with ODA. We do not subscribe to this. Remittance to developing countries may have increased substantially in recent years reaching USD 372 billion in 2011 as per the World Bank, but it cannot be seen anything more than household income.

And surely cannot be passed off as another source of financing for development, for which the imperative is to meet the agreed international commitments.

Mr. Chairman,

International migration, in majority terms, continues to be a North-South phenomenon with migration to Europe and the United States being the most visible. But growing interconnectivity of goods and labor markets today feed multiple migratory circuits across the world. South-South migration in 2010, mostly dominated by labor migrants, was pegged at 73 million, not significantly lower than the 74 million South-North migrants.

The benefits that migrants bring to the destination society are many, and the developed world would do well to clearly recognize and accept this.

It adds to their economic competitiveness, meets the gaps in labor and skilled manpower supply and contributes to intellectual and institutional resource and capacity.

The movement of persons, especially from the South to the North, will continue to be propelled by the structural needs stemming from demography and labour supply gaps.

Mr. Chairman,

In today’s globalised economy, the issue of short term migration especially from an economic perspective needs greater policy support.

There is also the issue of contributions to the Social Security Fund made by migrants in several developed countries which are lost once they leave the country. We must, therefore, work to develop frameworks to ensure portability of pensions and totalisation of social security benefits. These subjects must be brought forth in the ongoing discussion on inclusive social protection policies advocated by the ILO.

Curbing irregular migration is of concern not only in developed countries but also for many of us in the developing world. We clearly understand that such migration also has societal and security ramifications. We also need to work in a concerted manner to address the scourge of trafficking of persons, especially women and children.

Mr. Chairman,

India is perhaps the leading sending, destination and transiting state with a long history of receiving migrants and sending people to other lands. Our composite civilization and free and tolerant society have drawn sustenance from the diversity and co-existence of people coming and settling in India over centuries. We are proud of the achievements of our citizens living overseas and of the Indian diaspora.

The unskilled overseas worker constitutes the most vulnerable section of our emigrant population. We remain committed to strengthen the mechanisms for coordination and cooperation with the Governments of the destination countries to give them requisite social and economic protection.

In recent years, we have taken several measures for protection and welfare of our migrant workers and those of our other citizens and diaspora. We have established the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs, a Ministry exclusively devoted to their interest and welfare. We have set up the Indian Council of Overseas Employment to provide policy direction for recruitment procedures and employment contracts. We have also revamped our emigration rules and set up the Overseas Workers Resource Centre in New Delhi and Indian Workers Resource Centre in several destination countries including the UAE.

Mr. Chairman,

Migration is the oldest poverty alleviation tool. Yet we shy away from clearly recognizing the development aspects of international migration. The main reason for this is the reluctance or unwillingness of the developed world to accept and act on the fact that they have been and are beneficiaries of migration from the South. This needs to change and we all need to work collaboratively for international policies and frameworks to make international migration a ‘win-win’ situation.

We have to move to an understanding that migrants are not a burden; they are much more often an asset and a force multiplier. They need secure status at destination. This would help them realise their full potential, for the benefit of the migrants individually and their families, as well as for the benefit of the society that embracing them.

In respecting and protecting migrants, in giving them opportunities to flower, in integrating them into the social and institutional structures of the host country, we will also be promoting multicultural understanding and making our world a happier and better place. The results can be truly astonishing and dazzling. For evidence, we only need to leave this building and walk around in the wonderful and welcoming city outside – a global metropolis shaped and sculpted by generations of migrants.

I thank you.
Statement by Mr. Ananth Kumar, Member of Parliament, Chairman, Parliament Committee on External Affairs & Member of the Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item 51: International Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space at the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 18, 2012

Mr. Chairman,

I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your election as Chairman of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee to the 67th General Assembly, as also the members of the Bureau on their election. I assure you of my delegation’s full co-operation and support. I would also like to congratulate former Chairman, the Permanent Representative of Romania, Ambassador Simona-Mirela Miculescu for the way she conducted the work of this committee during the 66th session.

Mr. Chairman,

The Indian delegation notes with appreciation that UNCOPUOS continues to be the unique platform at the global level for international cooperation in space activities, and to utilise outer space for peaceful purposes towards serving the humanity under the mandate of the General Assembly. The Indian delegation expresses its satisfaction over the deliberation of the 55th session of UNCOPUOS under the chairmanship of Mr Yasushi Horikawa of Japan, and the work carried out by the two sub-committees of UNCOPUOS.

Mr. Chairman,

While acknowledging the significant achievements of various member states in space endeavours during the last one year, the Indian delegation desires to brief the Assembly on the significant achievements made by India in the field of space since the last Session.

On October 12, 2011, the Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV C-18) precisely placed the Indo-French Joint Satellite “MEGHA-TROPIQUES” and three other auxiliary satellites, JUGNU, SRMSat and VesselSat-1, in their intended orbits. The MEGHA-TROPIQUES satellite is a joint contribution by India and France to the global scientific community engaged in research on climate and weather systems. JUGNU and SRMSat were built by Indian academic institutions, while VesselSat-1 was built by Luxemburg. MEGHA-TROPIQUES will be one of the eight satellites of the Global Precipitation Measurement (GPM) constellation, contributing to the global scientific community’s research to study the dynamics of the climate system.

On April 26, 2012, PSLV C-19, on its twentieth successive successful flight, precisely placed the Radar Imaging Satellite (RISAT-1), India’s indigenously built microwave remote sensing satellite meant for natural resources management, into its intended orbit. RISAT-1 carries a C-band Synthetic Aperture Radar (SAR) payload, operating in multi-polarisation and multi-resolution modes.

On September 09, 2012, PSLV C-21, on its twenty-first successive successful flight, precisely placed the French Earth Observation satellite ‘SPOT-6’ and a Japanese microsatellite ‘PROTERES’, into their intended orbits.

India’s advanced communication satellite, GSAT-10 was successfully launched by Arianespace from Kourou, French Guiana on September 28, 2012. GSAT-10 carries 12 C-band; 6 Extended C-band and 12 Ku-band transponders, and a GPS Aided Geo Augmented Navigation (GAGAN) payload.

Significant progress has been achieved in realising GSLV Mk III, a heavier class launch vehicle, capable of launching 4-ton class communication satellites into a Geostationary Transfer Orbit.

In addition to augmenting the constellation of remote sensing and communication satellites, India is getting ready to launch the first satellite of the Indian Regional Navigation Satellite System (IRNSS), and the first Indian space-based observatory for multi-wavelength observations of the celestial bodies and cosmic sources, named ASTROSAT.

Mr. Chairman,

The Indian space programme continues to integrate advances in space technology and applications with our national developmental goals. India places considerable importance on International Cooperation for peaceful uses of outer space. Currently, formal instruments of cooperation are in place with 33 countries and three international organisations.

Mr. Chairman,

As part of capacity building in the field of space, India hosts “Center for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific (CSSTEAP)” affiliated to the United Nations, which has so far benefitted more than 1100 scholars from 52 countries.

A meeting of India-ASEAN Heads of Space Agencies was organised in Bangalore in June 2012, with the participation of all the ten member countries of ASEAN.

A meeting of India-ASEAN Heads of Space Agencies was organised in Bangalore in June 2012, with the participation of all the ten member countries of ASEAN.

A panel discussion was also organized to discuss the possibilities of space cooperation between ASEAN and India, and challenges in ensuring delivery of the benefits of space technologies to the developmental needs of ASEAN.

In July 2012, India hosted in Mysore the 39th Scientific Assembly of the Committee on Space Research (COSPAR), with the theme “Space - for the benefit of Mankind”, with participation of more than 2000 scientists, researchers and students from 75 countries.
India is an active member of the Committee for Earth Observation Systems (CEOS), and will be hosting the Plenary at Bangalore in October 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

We are proud to mention that India’s Chandrayaan-1 with many international payloads including that from USA, was instrumental in conclusively establishing the presence of water and hydroxyl molecules on the lunar surface. India has performed a unique joint experiment, known as Bi-Static Experiment involving Chandrayaan-1 and NASA’s Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter (LRO) spacecraft on August 21, 2009, for obtaining additional information on the possibility of existence of ice in a permanently shadowed crater near the North Pole of the Moon. Additionally, the analysis of data obtained by the Miniature Synthetic Aperture Radar (Mini-SAR) onboard Chandrayaan-1 spacecraft has provided evidence of the presence of ice deposits near the Moon’s North Pole.

Mr. Chairman,

Indian space programme, aimed at achieving self reliance and developing capability to build and launch communication satellites for television broadcast, telecommunication and meteorological applications, has travelled a long way in achieving these objectives. The Indian Space Research Organization has played a central role in achieving these objectives, successfully operationalizing two major satellite systems namely the Indian National Satellites (INSAT) for communication services and Indian Remote Sensing (IRS) satellites for management of natural resources; also, Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV) for launching IRS type of satellites and Geostationary Satellite Launch Vehicle (GSLV) for launching INSAT type of satellites.

I am proud to mention that the city of Bangalore in Karnataka State, to which I belong, is India’s centre of space activities. With several key programmes and facilities of ISRO, including ANTRIX Corporation Ltd, Satellite Centre, Liquid Propulsion Systems Centre, Telemetry, Tracking and Command Network, Laboratory for Electro-optic Systems, located in the city, Bangalore is India’s aerospace capital in every sense.

Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, the Indian delegation greatly acknowledges the potential of space technology and the need to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. Chairman,

Nuclear disarmament has been a priority for the United Nations since the very first UNGA resolution of 24 January 1946 and India has been consistent in its support for the achievement of this priority objective. India’s first Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was among the first world leaders to champion the cause of nuclear disarmament in the 1950s when the nuclear arms race was rearing its head. Addressing the Third Special Session of the UN General Assembly on Disarmament in 1988, our late Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi proposed an Action Plan for a Nuclear-Weapons-Free and Nonviolent World Order to attain the goal of nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner. We remain committed to the objective of that Plan and the realization of its vision of ushering in a nuclear weapon free and non-violent world order.

As a nuclear weapon state, India is cognizant of its responsibility and our support for global, non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament has not diminished. As Prime Minister Manmohan Singh stated in the Indian parliament in 2007 “The possession of nuclear weapons only increases our sense of global responsibility and does not diminish it.” We believe that nuclear disarmament can be achieved through a step by step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed global and non-discriminatory multilateral framework. There is need for a meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines. Steps for the progressive de-legitimization of nuclear weapons are essential to the goal of their complete elimination.

Measures to reduce nuclear dangers arising from accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons, increasing restraints on the use of nuclear weapons, de-alerting of nuclear weapons, measures to prevent terrorists from gaining access to nuclear weapons are all pertinent in this regard. In a working paper submitted to the UNGA in 2006, India suggested a number of such measures, including reaffirmation of the unequivocal commitment by all nuclear weapon states to the goal of complete elimination of nuclear weapons and specific legal measures such as a Global No First Use Agreement. India’s Working Paper retains the spirit and substance of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan and aims to stimulate debate and discussion on what could be done today to implement the abiding vision of that Plan. With this objective in view, a National Conference was held on August 21 this year in New Delhi with the participation of more than a thousand students and researchers to raise awareness and promote research on global nuclear disarmament.

Without prejudice to the priority we give to nuclear disarmament, we support the negotiation in the Conference on Disarmament of a non-discriminatory and internationally verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices that meets India’s national security interests. We remain committed to maintaining a unilateral and voluntary moratorium on nuclear explosive testing.

Mr. Chairman, India is committed to working with the international community to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, including through strong national export controls and membership of the multilateral export control regimes. All states should fully and effectively implement the obligations arising from the agreements or treaties to which they are parties. India’s position on the NPT is well-known and needs no reiteration.

Nuclear energy remains an essential source of clean and sustainable energy especially for developing countries. Its expansion must be accompanied by enhanced international standards for nuclear safety, nuclear security and reduced proliferation risk. These international standards should be implemented through effective national action. The International Atomic Energy Agency has an irreplaceable role in this respect. India has contributed actively to the Nuclear Security Summit process launched by President Obama in 2010 and we participated in the recent High Level Meeting on countering nuclear terrorism. Our resolution on WMD terrorism in the General Assembly has received consensus support since it was tabled in 2002. We are tabling it on behalf of the sponsors at this session as well.

Mr. Chairman, India’s resolutions in the First Committee give expression to our desire to work with other member states of the United Nations to achieve the goal of nuclear disarmament. We are introducing on behalf of the sponsors a draft resolution on “Reducing Nuclear Danger”. The resolution highlights the need for a review of nuclear doctrines and immediate steps to reduce the risk of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, including through de-alerting and de-targeting of nuclear weapons. Since 1998, the resolution has advocated modest yet critical objectives for the safety and security of mankind. It is a matter of satisfaction that the issues raised by this long-standing resolution are finding greater resonance and recognition in the international community, including through another resolution on the subject.

Further, we have the honour to present on behalf of the sponsors a draft resolution on a Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons. This traditional text reflects our belief that a multilateral, universal and legally binding instrument prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons will contribute to the process of de-legitimization of nuclear weapons and create a favourable climate for negotiations on an agreement on the prohibition of nuclear weapons.
Statement Mr. Derek O'brien, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item 65 – Promotion & Protection of the Rights of Children' at the Third Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 19, 2012

Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. I would like to thank the Secretary-General, the Special Representatives and the Special Rapporteur for their reports under this agenda item.

Mr. Chairman,

I come from India, where one in every five of the world’s children lives. I come from India, where 400 million children and young people below the age of 18 live; this is larger than the population of America, Argentina and Australia put together. I come from India, which manufactures 40 per cent of vaccines used in universal immunization programs across the world, protecting small babies and little children from disease and death. I come from India, where investing in the future of our country’s and our world’s youngest citizens is recognized as not just an economic necessity but a moral imperative.

Mr. Chairman,

The Indian Constitution has several provisions providing for protection, development and welfare of children. These and the provisions of the National Policy for Children 1974 were subsequently updated and crafted in detail in the National Charter for Children adopted by the Government in 2004.

The National Charter for Children is a comprehensive document encompassing the following areas: health, education, protection from economic exploitation and all forms of abuse, protection of the girl child, protecting children with disabilities and the welfare of children of marginalized and disadvantaged communities.

A detailed Plan of Action was drawn up in 2005 focusing on four broad areas: child survival, child development, child protection and child participation. In India, we believe, that civil society needs to partner government in addressing children’s issues.

Mr. Chairman,

Early childhood is the most crucial phase. This is when the foundations for physical, psychological, social and intellectual development are laid. The Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS), the flagship programme of the Government benefits 78 million children below the age of 6 in the area of nutrition, health and education.
Proper nutrition is essential for cognitive development of the young child. These measures include supplementary nutrition to bridge the caloric gap between the recommended intake and average intake of children in low income and disadvantaged communities; regular monitoring of the growth chart; and safeguarding in particular against vitamin A deficiency, to improve the nutritional and health status of children.

ICDS also covers these children with immunization, regular health check-ups and referral services as required as well as provides pre-school non-formal education to 37 million children in the age group of 3-6 years. The Scheme is now being universalised.

Several programmes are being implemented to address infant and child mortality. These include Universal Immunisation Programme, Integrated Management of Neonatal Childhood Illnesses, Total Sanitation Campaign, and the Reproductive and Child Health Programme.

I would in particular like to highlight the success of our Pulse Polio Immunization Programme in partnership with WHO, UNICEF and Rotary International that has led to the significant milestone of India being polio free in 2011.

The Indian Constitution provides for free and compulsory education for children up to the age of 14 years. As part of a public-private partnership, private schools reserve 25% of seats for children from economically weaker sections of society with budgetary support from the government.

Mr. Chairman,

Ending exploitation and violence against children is fundamental to ensuring a healthy future for every child. We have undertaken significant measures towards the creation of a protective environment for children.

To strengthen implementation of the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, the government launched the Integrated Child Protection Scheme in 2009 to cover offences against children which are not presently addressed in the law, and to increase the safety net for the protection of children.

This scheme unified several existing schemes of child protection and has provided better understanding on children’s protection issues beside generating interest among all stakeholders.

The National Commission for Protection of Child Rights was set up in 2007. This was a significant step for speedy trial of offenders committing crimes against children and violating the rights of children.

The Government of India has recently notified a special law for the protection of children from sexual offences. We are also actively combating the trafficking of women and children.
The Government has taken several steps to provide family and community-based care arrangements for children deprived of parental care including sponsorship, kinship, foster care and adoption.

Mr. Chairman,

The eradication of child labour is a priority for the Government of India. We are strictly enforcing the ban on the employment of children under 14 years of age. At the same time, in recognition of the fact that this problem cannot be separated from its socio-economic circumstances, we are also implementing measures to improve the access to education, health and nutrition for children.

Mr. Chairman,

The girl child is one of the most vulnerable members of any society. I am particularly happy to be placing the statement less than a week after the UN observed ‘Girl Child Day’ on October 11th. India, you will be pleased to know, now observes January 24 as “National Girl Child Day”. The occasion is used to generate awareness about the tremendous potential as well as to highlight the challenges faced by them.

The government has taken a number of steps to enhance the status of the girl child. Sex selective abortion and child marriage have been banned in India. Targeted interventions have led to almost full enrolment in primary grades of schooling and narrowing of gender gaps in middle and higher education.

Mr. Chairman,

Rabindranath Tagore, the poet from India and Bengal and the first Asian to win the Nobel Prize for Literature, wrote about children in his most elegant and memorable work, Gitanjali. “Children,” Tagore wrote, “are living beings - more living than grown-up people who have built shells of habit around themselves. Therefore it is absolutely necessary for their mental health and development that they should not have mere schools for their lessons, but a world whose guiding spirit is personal love.”

The child is an instrumental stakeholder in the social contract. We have an obligation to provide a safe and enabling environment for their development. Let me reaffirm our commitment to the promotion and protection of the rights of our children and their children’s children.

Mr. Chairman,

We wish to leave you with the words of Mahatma Gandhi, who had said, “If we wish to create a lasting peace, we must begin with children”.

I thank you.
Mr. Chairman, Thank you for giving me the floor. India associates itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman, We are just three years away from the MDG target year. While there has been progress in several areas, it is clear that many of the targets will remain unmet. A key element in our not being able to realize even the minimum goals that were set for those in the greatest need is the gap in development financing.

We remain deeply concerned that ODA in 2011 declined by almost 3% to US Dollars 133.5 billion, first such fall in global ODA since 1997, and to the Least Developed Countries by 9%. And we also saw new conditionalities to ODA, which undercut already dwindling investment in the productive sectors. The global financial crisis has further exacerbated the financing gap. High unemployment, soaring food and energy prices and dwindling tax revenues continue to plague most developing countries. In this environment, raising domestic financial resources for development has become an arduous task, beyond the means of most developing countries, especially the LDCs, LLDCs, SID countries and countries in Africa. It is essential that growth-promoting policies are pursued to boost resources. Progressive taxation and financial inclusion policies remain equally crucial to address development challenges.

Mr. Chairman, Foreign Direct Investment has long been identified as an engine for development. However, FDI, by itself, is not sufficient for eradicating poverty, hunger and disease in developing countries. In order to maximize development results, FDI needs to form productive linkages with the wider local economy and be consistent with the broader objectives of sustainable development.

The crucial role of international trade in development should not be undermined. Developing countries have long relied on their exports to boost their economies. However, protectionist measures adopted by developed countries, coupled with the uncertainties associated with the sovereign debt crisis, have resulted in reduction in export income for developing countries, especially the LDCs. A balanced and development oriented outcome of the Doha Round is needed, most urgently, to create a level playing field in international trade. Those who profess “Trade not aid” to be the mantra must take lead and show us the way.
The debt levels in several developing countries have now reached unprecedented levels, and their concern must not be made secondary to the Euro zone debt crisis. Concerted efforts to achieve debt relief and sustainability are of utmost importance.

Mr. Chairman, Over the past few years, south-south cooperation has assumed greater salience in development partnership. The increased importance of south-south cooperation should not, however, dilute the pivotal role of north-south cooperation. In a similar vein, it is important to recognize that the developing world, with their significant socio-economic challenges, cannot be expected to meet the obligations of developed countries. South-South Cooperation must be allowed to grow within its own space and within its own principles. It cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

India, on its part, is privileged and committed to share its development expertise with fellow developing countries. Under our flagship development cooperation platform, the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme, we are extending capacity building and technical support to 161 developing countries with around 7400 vocational training slots on an annual basis. Our development partnership in recent years has expanded to include lines of credit and grants to boost economic and trade partnerships.

On a different note, Mr. Chairman, of late, in financing conversation globally, remittance has come to be compared or equated with ODA. We do not subscribe to this. Remittance to developing countries may have increased substantially in recent years reaching USD 372 billion in 2011, but it cannot be seen anything more than household income.

And surely cannot be passed off as another source of financing for development, for which the imperative is to meet the agreed international commitments.

Apart from ODA, technology transfer and capacity building are crucial to enhance capacity of developing countries. At the RIO+20 Summit we have taken crucial decisions on a Finance Strategy and a Technology Mechanism to boost resource support for the sustainable development agenda. Time is of essence and we must move expeditiously on them.

Given the resource gap in financing for development, it is imperative that innovative sources of financing be explored. We, however, see innovative sources as additional to and not a substitute for ODA.

Mr. Chairman,

A comprehensive reform of the global governance is critical to addressing the present systemic weaknesses in the international financial architecture. India has been working hard to ensure that developing countries’ representation at Bretton Woods Institutions adequately reflect their growing economic weight in today’s global economy.

Both the IMF and the World Bank have taken important steps to enhance their governance structures and to increase the voting power of developing countries, and we welcome them. These reforms must be implemented most urgently. We look forward to the comprehensive review of the current IMF quota formula to be completed in January 2013.

More effort, however, is required to ensure that global economic governance and the development agenda complement each other effectively. As we speak of this, it is critical that progress under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change proceed in a balanced and comprehensive manner, based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities. The developed countries who have over-utilized the atmospheric space must take on greater burden, and not subject developing countries to the double whammy of usurpation of their ecological space and shackles on their right to pursue sustainable and inclusive growth.

Mr. Chairman, the financing of the development process is at the core of the global development agenda. It is essential that international community recognizes this and adheres to the principles embodied in the Monterrey Consensus and Doha Review Conference in letter and spirit. I thank you.

Mr. President, Excellencies and distinguished delegates. I am privileged to address the General Assembly.

In Bengali: I bring you greetings from India. We are in the midst of our biggest festival of the year in Bengal, the state of India that I come from, and on behalf of its people, and the people of India, I would like you wish you a happy and prosperous Durga Puja.

Mr. President, At the Rio+20 Summit in June this year, the global community made a solemn promise to craft a future that would truly and really – and not just in some clichéd manner – belong to all; to all of us, every child of Mother Earth. It was a promise to the marginalised to deliver a life of dignity, a life of hope. It was a pledge to us to fight poverty as the greatest global challenge.

With just three years to go to the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) finish line, where do we stand? The task at hand remains a daunting one. More than a billion people in developing countries continue to live in extreme poverty, hunger and hopeless desperation. We need to do much more.

On MDGs, we can take some comfort in collectively having made progress on poverty eradication, primary education, gender equality and sanitation. However, when we introspect, our record on maternal mortality, infant mortality and malnutrition remains a matter of deep and abiding concern. We will have a more populous planet in the 21st century than ever before in human history. Yet, are we doing enough to harness this demographic dividend?

In India, we have pursued the path of inclusive growth for achieving poverty eradication. We have brought down poverty numbers significantly as compared to the 1990 levels. But we continue to be challenged by more than 300 million people living below the poverty line of US$ 1.25 a day. This is equivalent to the population of the United States, Mr President. Excellencies and distinguished delegates; and that should emphasise the enormity of the crisis and the moral obligation that still confronts us.

In primary education, India has achieved near 100% enrolment. In part, this has been due to the Right to Education legislation, which makes eight years of schooling a legal right that the Indian state must ensure to every citizen. The challenge now is to focus on the quality of learning in our schools, and to further narrow the gender gap in secondary and primary schooling. We have for the first time in our history added more female literates than males in the past decade, an achievement that deserves appreciation and of which we are justifiably proud.

However, India is conscious of the health and social development gaps that are yet to be addressed. Our commitment to tackling infant and maternal mortality and augmenting women’s empowerment remains absolute and unflinching. It is part of our nation-building tradition. As Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagar, one of the foremost minds of 19th century Bengal, a pioneer of modern India and among our country’s great champions of gender rights, female emancipation and girls’ education, wrote, “How sad! The country, whose male population is unkind, unreligious and unaware of the distinction between the good and the evil and don’t care about justice and fairness and where abiding the rituals is the chief preoccupation of religion, should not give birth to girls!”

This philosophy, which Vidyasagar explained in the 1850s, 150 years ago, anticipated the enlightenment of the MDGs. The MDGs, Mr. President, represent the most cherished chapter of multilateralism. There should be no let-up in our efforts to achieving them. And the unfinished agenda of the MDGs must find a pivotal place in our work ahead. An inclusive Post-2015 development agenda can only be built if equity and poverty eradication remain its defining contours.

Mr. President,

At the Rio+20 Summit, we discussed practically every aspect of human endeavour and came up with a blueprint for action on sustainable development, one that rightfully integrates economic growth with social inclusion and environmental sustainability.

And to do so we agreed to establish several institutional frameworks: a set of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), developing a Financing Strategy and a Technology Mechanism, strengthening the UN Environment Programme (UNEP) and the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) and setting up a High-level Political Forum on sustainable development. Time is of essence and putting these building blocks in place in the months ahead must be our priority. We have just begun this century, but let us not postpone its most efficacious and necessary achievements to too late in the century. We did that in the 20th century and look how our world suffered.

As we sit down to fashion the SDGs, we must do so with a clear idea that they would form the crux of the Post-2015 development agenda. Dealing with challenges related to poverty, food, energy and livelihoods issues should be our priority. The MDG framework has given us valuable lessons as to what works and what does not. There is little value in trying to reinvent the wheel. The framework of MDG goals should be replicated in the new set of goals.

Mr. President,

Our commitment to the MDGs and the Rio+20 is unwavering. But the global economic situation does not seem to favour us. Slackened growth, high inflation – particularly food inflation – a mounting debt burden and high youth employment are undercutting the development gains made in developing countries. Therefore, it is of fundamental importance that we, as a global community, are able to pull the world economy back on track. Nothing can be more helpful as we do our best to put more resources into and bring greater focus on our development goals.

We must also redouble our efforts to push for urgent progress on the Doha Development Round. Those who profess “more trade and not aid” is the answer to the developmental gaps of our era need to put their words into action. Shibboleths alone cannot do. It is equally imperative to fashion a comprehensive and balanced outcome to Climate Change negotiations, based on the principles of common but differentiated responsibility and equity.

South-South Cooperation must also contribute and it must be allowed to grow within its own space and its own ecosystem, and in accordance with its own principles. It cannot, however, be a substitute for North-South Cooperation. The two processes are complementary. As a world community, we have to avoid limiting “either-or” choices.

Mr. President,

An issue of great import today for sustainable development is the deficit in global governance. Without addressing this, we cannot restructure the 21st century comity of nations as an equitable matrix that serves the cause of all. Decisions by the self-selected few can hardly provide the solutions we seek for the many.

It is crucial, therefore, that developing countries are given due voice and participation in the decision-making structures of the global economic and financial institutions, especially the Bretton Woods Institutions. And, here at the United Nations, it is critical we move urgently on reform of the Security Council by expanding it in both categories, permanent and non-permanent, revitalise the General Assembly and strengthen the ECOSOC.

Mr. President,

The Convention on Biological Diversity, born out of the Earth Summit, remains a seminal global compact on development. Movement on biodiversity goals and actions remains vital to integrate sustainability and equity into our development paradigm.

This past week in India, we successfully concluded the 11 Conference of Parties of the Convention on Biological Diversity. We hope its outcome will help us achieve our collective commitments. I wish to thank all the delegations for their support in making the event a success.

Feeding our people and providing them with sustenance is a challenge that we, in the developing countries, grapple with daily. We are hopeful our biodiversity resources and conservation efforts will help us find new solutions to food security and livelihoods issues.

Mr President,

Space scientists call our Earth the Goldilocks planet – not too hot, not too cold, just right for life. Indeed, in keeping with that imagery, humankind’s evolution and prodigious attainments in the millennia that have passed have been nothing short of a fairy tale. A true miracle, I may say. True, our challenges are many. But given what we have achieved, given the diseases and scourges we have beaten back, given the disasters and calamities we have learnt to protect ourselves against, what we are left with is, frankly, only the last mile.

With our collaborative effort and collective will we can do it. We can fashion a better world for ourselves – and as a legacy for our children and succeeding generations. Acting multilaterally, though institutions and agencies such as the United Nations, we represent hope for millions around the world. This is a hope that seeks only basic necessities of life. This is a hope we cannot betray.

As the great Bengali poet Rabindranath Tagore put it in his eloquent words:

“I slept and dreamt that life was joy/
I awoke and saw that life was service/
I acted and behold, service was joy.”

Let us, as a global community, awaken to service. And to joy.

I thank you.
696. Statement by Mr. Derek O’Brien, Member of Parliament And Member of The Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item: 81 - “Consideration of Effective Measures to Enhance the Protection, Security and Safety of Diplomatic and Consular Missions and Representatives” at the Sixth Committee of The 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 24, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary-General for his report A/67/126 entitled “Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives.”

The report, inter-alia incorporates information received from certain States regarding serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives; and also about the measures taken to ensure that such violations do not take place.

Mr. Chairman,

We consider that the diplomatic and consular missions discharge a very sensitive and high responsibility of promoting exchange of views among nations. These institutions have a pivotal role in the development of friendly relations among nations.

The diplomatic and consular representatives require personal protection in order to discharge their official functions smoothly. So is required the security and safety of missions’ premises to ensure a peaceful and workable environment.

Mr. Chairman,

Granting of protection and privileges and immunities to the diplomatic and consular personnel is not to benefit them individually. It is for ensuring the efficient performance of their official functions.

We draw the attention to the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter concerning the sovereign equality of States, maintenance of international peace and security, and the promotion of friendly relations among nations.

The role of diplomatic and consular missions is crucial in carrying out the purposes of the United Nations Charter by applying the principles enshrined therein.

The protection of the diplomatic and consular missions and representatives is thus the basic foundation of diplomatic and international relations between States.

Mr. Chairman,

We strongly condemn all acts of violence against the security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. It is a serious concern that needs to be addressed effectively.

We firmly believe that crimes against diplomatic agents and other internationally protected persons create a serious threat to the maintenance of normal international relations which are necessary for cooperation among nations.

With the aim of ensuring the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, the international community has concluded international instruments, including the Vienna Conventions on Diplomatic Relations; and on Consular Relations and their Protocols; and the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons including Diplomatic Agents.

Mr. Chairman,

India is a Party to these conventions and protocols. The need of hour for all States parties is to realize the importance of these instruments and to carry out the obligations assumed there-under with a sense of high responsibility. We stress the need for those States that have not already done so to become a party to these instruments.

India believes that it is necessary to uphold norms of peaceful international discourse and in that the safety and security of diplomatic personnel must be fully respected.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, we stress that in addition to the existing international instruments, all measures that are necessary to protect the diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, must be taken at all levels.

I thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary General and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) for their insightful reports. India aligns itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

The deceleration in world trade witnessed since 2008 continued in 2011. The overall global economic recovery continues to be fragile and halting. The prospects for global trade do not appear to be too encouraging.

The sovereign debt crisis in Europe and the recessionary trends in the traditional engines of the global economy have dampened capital markets which are showing signs of acute distress.

Developing countries cannot remain untouched by these economic sentiments. After the 2008 economic meltdown, it was said that large developing countries would replace the traditional economic engines. This has not happened. Growth in large developing countries is also slowing down. Unemployment, food and energy concerns remain high. This has further undermined the limited coping capacity of developing countries to absorb shocks.

It is, therefore, of utmost importance that we collectively undertake growth promoting policies to boost demand and create jobs.

Transforming trade into greater income opportunities through job creation remains a critical development challenge, more so in the present job-less growth scenario with a deficit of 50 million jobs in comparison to the pre-crisis situation. And with over a billion people in extreme poverty and hunger in developing countries, we cannot but afford to make inclusive growth our priority.

Declining global demand and availability of capital, increasing barriers to free trade and mounting debt pose a threat to the international trading and financial systems. Unstable capital flows and volatility in the currency market have further eroded the export competitiveness of developing countries.

To act as an engine of development, the international trade framework should work towards removing barriers that prevent developing countries from fully participating in global trade. Eschewing protectionism and enhancing market access for developing countries are critical in this regard. We welcome the decision of the G-20 to renew its Standstill commitment until the end of 2014 and its pledge to roll back any new protectionist measures.

Mr. Chairman,

We are happy to note that South-South exports rebounded at a much faster pace in 2010, now representing 55% of developing countries’ exports and a quarter of the world exports. We are equally encouraged by the trend of developing countries exploring South-South regional integration to promote economies of scale, diversification and resilience.

The UNCTAD report calls for strict regulation of the financial sector, and focuses on policies that emphasize income growth as the basis for sustainable and balanced development worldwide. We are pleased to note that the G-20 is actively pursuing these policy suggestions.

Mr. Chairman,

Commodities are key export products for a large number of developing countries, especially the Least Developed Countries and have a direct impact on their socio-economic advancement. Growing commodity price volatility is a matter of deep concern for us and is having a negative impact on global food and energy security. At the same time, increasing financialization and excessive speculation of the commodity market have become a factor of economic instability for most developing countries.

Mr. Chairman,

Due to their structural constraints, the LDCs are overwhelmingly dependent on trade as an engine of growth and development. However, their share in global trade in 2011 was only 1.14%. At this rate, the prospect of achieving the Istanbul Programme target of enhancing the share of LDCs in global trade remains a challenge.

We ought to create an enabling international environment to address their limited trading options. In this regard, we call for early implementation of the Duty Free Quota Free market access for the LDCs.

The DOHA Development Round presents a valuable opportunity to make international trade a vehicle for growth and development, and we must push for an outcome that it is fair, balanced and equitable. At the same time, the proliferation of bilateral and regional trade agreements could be made more compatible and coherent with the multilateral system.

We must also be aware of the felt need to modernise the multilateral trading system to meet economic realities and challenges of the 21st century. This brings us to the seminal issue of global economic governance.
A comprehensive reform of the global governance is critical to addressing the present systemic weaknesses in the international financial and trading architecture. India has been working hard to ensure that developing countries’ representation at the Bretton Woods Institutions adequately reflect their growing importance in today’s global economy.

Both the IMF and the World Bank have taken important steps to enhance their governance structures and to increase the voting power of developing countries, and we welcome them. These reforms must be implemented most urgently. We look forward to the comprehensive review of the current IMF quota formula to be completed in January 2013.

More effort, however, is required to ensure that global economic governance and the development agenda complement each other effectively. We look forward to discussing these issues in the run to the Post-2015 development framework.

I thank you.

698. Statement by Mr. Derek O’ Brien, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item 55: Questions Relating to Information at the Special Political and Decolonization [Fourth] Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on October 25, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by congratulating you on your election as Chairman of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee to the 67th General Assembly, as also the members of the Bureau on their election. We wish well and assure you of my delegation’s full co-operation and support. I would also like to congratulate former Chairman, the Permanent Representative of Romania, Ambassador Simona-Mirela Miculescu for doing an admired job in conducting this committee during the 66th session of the General Assembly.

Mr. Chairman,

We welcome the report of the Secretary General on “Questions relating to information” (A/67/307), which provides updates on activities of the Department of Public Information from February to July 2012 in the areas of strategic communication services, news services and outreach services. We also welcome the report of the Committee on Information (A/67/21).

Mr. Chairman,

The DPI has played an important role in spreading awareness about the concept of sustainable development and mobilizing support for the UN Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio de Janeiro, June 20-22, 2012). We also note with satisfaction that DPI has organized various public information activities aimed at promoting important global issues like gender equality, development agenda beyond 2015, action against racism, and counter-terrorism.

Mr. Chairman,

It is heartening to note the collaboration of the DPI with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, Field Support and Political Affairs in organizing a training workshop and an event to mark International Day of UN Peacekeepers. It is important that the Department seek to further deepen and strengthen its collaboration with DPKO and DFS in the coverage and projection of the most noteworthy activities of the UN: often done under extremely demanding circumstances, by UN peacekeepers in strife-torn lands.

We also reiterate the crucial role performed by the UN Information Centers in enhancing the public image of the UN, and in disseminating information, particularly in developing countries. These information outposts act as an interface between the United Nations and local communities, and they need to be further strengthened. India urges the DPI to work closely with host countries in these efforts. We would also support adequate budgetary resources being made available to strengthen public outreach and ensure the effective functioning of Information Centers in the developing world.

We note with satisfaction that Information Centers have collaborated with local partners in promoting important global issues. We would like to encourage them to further deepen their collaboration with local community organizations, while working to advance important UN agendas.

Mr. Chairman,

While concurring with the importance of capitalizing on new information technology and social media like Twitter and Facebook, for reaching new audiences, we would also like to stress the importance of using 360 degree communication, involving the widest range of methods, to make the work of the DPI accessible to all. It is important not to treat the digital media, which in many countries caters to a different segment of society, differently from traditional media, as that would be divisive. The end product offered by DPI needs to be dispensed through the widest spectrum of media channels, ranging from webcasts and podcasts to traditional means of communication like radio, television and print, which remain of especial relevance to the developing world. These so called traditional means of communication remain of tremendous importance in these parts of the world, and must not only continue to be used, but further strengthened, for they provide the means to reach out to the vast majority of mankind.

Among traditional media tools, radio holds a special place. It is still recognized as a major source of information, and is widely used in the developing world. We are of the opinion that there is need to raise awareness about the importance of radio, and enhance international cooperation for improving and diversifying the content of radio broadcasts. We welcome the proclamation by the 36th session of the UNESCO General Conference to celebrate February 13 as the ‘World Radio Day’.

Mr. Chairman,

We appreciate DPI for its outreach programs on remembrance of the Holocaust, victims of Slavery and Transatlantic Slave Trade, and International Jazz Day.

We also commend DPI for its activities under the UN Academic Impact (UNAI) initiatives, aimed at interacting with institutions of higher learning and think tanks in order to build stronger ties between the UN and its diverse global constituencies. UNAI’s events and initiatives on issues ranging from Human Space Flight and Jazz Day to Mandela International Day and current issues and its global response, organized in partnership with organizations and institutions, such as the Young Changemakers and Raindance, the Brookings Institute, and the Queens Museum of Arts, present an excellent example of creativity and innovation in advancing the goals set by the United Nations.

India has always been in the forefront of supporting these initiatives, and has been a committed contributor to the activities of UNAI. India recently co-sponsored the event on the International Jazz Day, organized under the auspices of the Committee on Information on April 30, as part of the UNAI program on “Unlearning Intolerance”, and has also made a financial contribution of US $ 100,000 to the UNAI this year.

A number of Indian Universities are members of the Academic Impact initiative. I am particularly delighted to note that the University of Calcutta, one of our oldest and most cherished, renowned universities, has been designated as Academic Hub by the UN to develop teaching-learning expertise in Peace and Conflict Resolution Studies under the Academic Impact initiative.

Taking India’s engagement with the UNAI to the grassroots, a youth NGO “Young Changemakers and Raindance”, collaborated with the UNAI in organizing an event in Mumbai to mark Mandela International Day on July 18, 2012. Donations were collected to finance scholarship for school children living in slums.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me conclude by conveying India’s good wishes to the DPI. We assure our continued support in fulfilling its charter, especially in its endeavor to project the work of the UN.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
699. Statement by Mr. Bansa Gopal Chowdhury, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation on Agenda Item No: 26 Agriculture Development and Food Security at the Second Committee of the 67th Session of the UN General Assembly on November 01, 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. India aligns itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Food Security, Mr. Chairman, is one of the most pressing issues on the global sustainable development agenda. At the RIO+20 Summit, we identified food security as a key priority in crafting a future for all. This seminal understanding must now be implemented, and also brought forward in the ongoing discussions on the Sustainable Development Goals and the Post 2015 development agenda.

Ensuring food security especially for the poor and the marginalized is a challenge that preoccupies Governments in developing countries foremost. Rising food inflation and food price volatility are seriously undermining our efforts to fight hunger, poverty and malnutrition. The global economic slowdown has only made matters worse.

Recent spikes in global food prices have exposed the inherent limitations of unsustainable market practices, unsustainable consumption patterns and unsustainable farming to deal with food as a basic human need.

Today, we are producing enough to feed the global population. But high food prices, wastage of food, post harvest losses along with host of other systemic macro-economic issues are hampering our efforts to provide food for all. A large number of Least Developed Countries, especially in Africa perpetually remain in food insecurity.

Tackling waste remains critical to addressing food security and the issue must get greater attention in the global discourse on the matter. We waste 1.3 billion tons of food annually, including post harvest losses. This is roughly 1/3 of our annual global food production. If we are able to curb it, we would have enough to feed the 1 billion hungry people we still have to look after.

Mr. Chairman,

Unsustainable consumption patterns, emphasis on producing non-food crops, environmental degradation, and stagnant agricultural productivity has led to a mismatch between global food demand and supply.

There are, however, other systemic issues that are equally responsible for the present global food uncertainties. We have consistently had higher global food prices in spite of bumper crop production.

In recent years, we have seen a surge in the flow of speculative capital into global commodity markets and increase in the number of future traded contracts in developed countries. Excessive speculation has held to spike in prices and high volatility in the market. We must make concerted effort to improve regulation in the world commodity markets.

Mr. Chairman,

Of late, we have seen persistent arguments being made to suggest that food security is a function of aggregate population. We do not see merit in such postulations. For if that was the case, developing countries by virtue of being home to a larger population would have been consuming much more than developed countries. Fortunately, that is not the case. 3

Mr. Chairman,

Agriculture development is a livelihood issue in developing countries. In India, around 70% of our population is dependent on agriculture. Two-third of our agriculture is rain-fed which is totally dependent on the vagaries of nature.

The Government of India has undertaken several measures to tackle food security and agriculture development in an integrated manner. Our national policy for farmers addresses the issue of improving the economic viability of farming; promoting sustainable use of natural resources; empowering small and marginal farmers; and undertaking appropriate price and trade policy mechanisms.

My Government’s commitment to providing food security to every citizen of India remains resolute and unflinching. We are in the process of considering a food security bill that would guarantee subsidized grains to more than 600 million people in India, with special provisions for women and children. In the meantime, the Public Distribution System even though not a universal one is maintained to provide essential commodities which include food grains to the poor.

India has also launched a National Food Security Mission for enhancing production of rice, wheat and pulses. Efforts are being made to shelter the small and marginal farmers from the vagaries of the market through price support initiatives.

India has taken steps for providing crop and cattle insurance. We have also made a beginning in providing information on market intelligence and price analyses to farmers and other stakeholders using Information and Communications Technologies.

Mr. Chairman,

The solution to enhancing global food security lies in global action.

We recognize the need to improve global policy coordination and coherence for food security among countries.
Our collective effort should be to ensure higher investment, greater use of modern technology, and access to farm credit to enhance agriculture productivity and growth. And while doing so, we must specially focus on empowering women as critical agents of change.

Our approach should equally keep in mind the concerns of ecology and environment, the need to empower small and marginal farmers and to give special attention to dry land agriculture. Our bio-diversity resources and traditional knowledge and practices should also be harnessed in an optimal way to feed our people.

The ongoing multilateral trade negotiations, where arguments for liberalizing trade in agriculture products are being put forth, must bear in mind the imperative of providing adequate safeguards to agriculture, food security and livelihood issues in developing countries.

India reiterates its support for the L’Aquila Food Security Initiative and calls upon countries to meet their financial commitments to enhance capacities of developing countries.

India remains committed to sharing its technical assistance to ensure food security of our fellow developing countries. At the India-Africa Forum Summit in Addis Ababa last year, we announced establishing an India-Africa Food Processing Cluster, an India–Africa center for medium range weather forecasting to harness satellite technology for agriculture and fisheries sectors and an India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development. These initiatives are geared towards meeting the food security of the people of Africa.

I thank you.
700. Statement by Dr. Najma Heptulla, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item: 71 - “Report of the International Court of Justice” at the 67th session of the United Nations General Assembly on November 01, 2012.

Mr. President,

I extend my sincere gratitude to Judge Peter Tomka, President of the International Court of Justice, for his comprehensive and detailed report, covering the judicial activities of the Court over the last year. I also thank him and Vice-President Judge Bernardo Sepulveda-Amor for their leadership of the Court over that period.

Mr. President,

India attaches the highest importance to the Court as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. The foremost purpose of the United Nations is the maintenance of international peace and security. The peaceful settlement of international disputes is fundamental for achieving this objective. The Court has fulfilled admirably the task of resolving disputes peacefully since its establishment.

Mr. President,

The Court remains the only judicial body with legitimacy derived from the UN Charter and enjoying universal character with general jurisdiction, whereas other international judicial institutions have competence and jurisdiction in specific areas only. The Statute of the ICJ is an integral part of the UN Charter. This is a unique status enjoyed by the ICJ among the international courts or tribunals.

Mr. President,

As stated in the Preamble to its Charter, one of the primary goals of the United Nations is to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations of international law can be maintained. The International Court of Justice, as the only international Court with general international law jurisdiction, is uniquely placed to fulfill that role.

The report of the Court clearly illustrates the confidence that States have reposed in it, as shown by the number and scope of cases entrusted to it and the Court's growing specialization in complex aspects of public international law. This clearly establishes the universality of the Court.

Mr. President,

During the last year, the Court has handed down four judgements and one advisory opinion. The Court has in one judgement highlighted the significance of the principle of sovereign immunity of States. In another judgement, the Court has confirmed the relevance of the principle of either prosecute or extradite. The Court's docket of pending cases has grown consistently in factual and legal complexity. Presently, the number of pending contentious cases stands at 11, involving States from all over the world.

Mr. President,

Since its inception, the Court has dealt with a variety of complex legal issues. The subject matter of cases before the Court varied widely, including territorial and maritime disputes, environmental damage, violation of territorial integrity, violation of international humanitarian law and human rights, genocide, and interpretation and application of international treaties.

The Court has remained highly sensitive in respecting political realities and sentiments of States, while acting within the provisions of the UN Charter, its own Statute and other applicable international law. The Court has contributed significantly towards settling legal disputes between Sovereign States, thus promoting the rule of law in international relations.

Mr. President,

Through its second function of providing advisory opinions on legal questions referred to it by organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, the Court continues to fulfill the important role of clarifying the key international law issues.

Mr. President,

I am glad to note that the Court has taken significant steps over recent years to enhance its efficiency to enable it to cope with the steady increase in its workload. We are happy to note that accordingly the Court has successfully cleared its backlog of cases, which further strengthens the confidence of States in the Court's competency and efficiency.

Mr. President,

I wish to reiterate, in my concluding remarks, the great importance the international community attaches to the work of the International Court of Justice and to draw the Assembly's attention to the importance of strengthening the functioning of the Court by providing all necessarily required means.

Thank You, Mr. President.
Mr. Chairman,

India shares concerns about the challenges posed by conventional weapons, including small arms and light weapons, to international peace and security. We attach importance to measures aimed at conventional arms control to address these challenges and to make progress on the goal of general and complete disarmament. Since last year’s First Committee meetings significant activity has taken place under the UN auspices on conventional arms. The Review Conferences of Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons and UN Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons and the Diplomatic Conference for negotiating an Arms Trade Treaty were held during this period. India engaged actively and constructively in these meetings.

India associates itself with the statement made by Indonesia on behalf of the Non-aligned Movement.

Mr. Chairman,

We welcome the successful conclusion of the Review Conference of the UN Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons with the adoption of the outcome document by consensus. We attach high importance to the UNPOA as the cornerstone of multilateral efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate illicit trade in SALW. The full and effective implementation of the UNPOA and the International Tracing Instrument is a priority for India, especially as a means for combating terrorism and transnational crime which has adversely affected our national security. We note with satisfaction that the Review Conference reaffirmed the key commitments of States under the UNPOA. The Implementation Plans of the UNPOA and ITI and the Schedule of Meetings for 2012-18 outline the roadmap for the UNPOA for the next few years. It will be important to maintain consensus in the UNPOA process in the coming years while making further progress on both the political and technical aspects of the UNPOA implementation.

India is privileged to be a party to the entire CCW package and attaches importance to the spirit of the CCW which aims to strike a balance between addressing humanitarian concerns arising from the use of certain conventional weapons and the military necessity of such weapons. It remains the only forum of a universal character that brings together all the main users and producers of certain conventional weapons, thus ensuring that the instruments which emerge have greater prospect of making a meaningful impact on the ground. We were disappointed that the CCW Review Conference held in November last year could not adopt the cluster munitions protocol. The draft protocol would have addressed the humanitarian concerns caused by cluster munitions and made a real impact on the ground by bringing into its ambit the States that produce and stockpile the bulk of the world’s cluster munitions.

India remains committed to the CCW process in progressively strengthening the role and principles of international humanitarian law. India supports the vision of a world free of the threat of landmines and is committed to the eventual elimination of anti-personnel landmines. The availability of militarily effective alternative technologies that can perform cost-effectively the defensive functions of anti-personnel landmines will facilitate the achievement of this goal. We support the approach enshrined in Amended Protocol II of the CCW which addresses the legitimate defence requirements of States with long borders.

India has discontinued the production of non-detectable anti-personnel landmines and observes a moratorium on their transfer. We are also contributing to international demining and rehabilitation efforts. India participates in the Ottawa Convention meetings as an Observer. India has shouldered various responsibilities in relation to CCW’s Protocol V on Explosive Remnants of War; for the past two years we have coordinated the work on national reporting.

India supports the two major instruments promoting transparency in armaments, viz. the UN Register on Conventional Arms and the UN Standardized Instrument for Reporting Military Expenditure. India has regularly submitted national reports to the UN Register on the export and import of conventional arms and has contributed to the three-yearly reviews of the Register. India would support efforts for further improving the Register along with efforts towards universalizing participation in it. We also contributed to the work of the GGE on the standardized instrument for reporting military expenditures held in 2011.

India participated in the Diplomatic Conference held in July this year to negotiate an Arms Trade Treaty. Given the complexities of the issues involved it was not possible for the Conference to adopt an agreed text. We believe that further work needs to be done and a treaty of this kind which would be legally binding when in force should not be rushed through. The treaty should make a real impact on addressing illicit trafficking in conventional arms and their diversion to terrorists and other non-State actors. It should establish a balance of obligations of exporting and importing States and ensure that national implementation and domestic jurisdiction are fully respected. It is important to bring all stakeholders on board in a manner that promotes the prospects of a treaty that is practical and implementable and is able to attract universal adherence. India is prepared to engage in further work on an ATT in a consensus based process and outcome.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

I wish to thank the Secretary General for his report on the Implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements and strengthening the UN-Habitat. India associates itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

With more than half the world’s population now living in urban areas, urbanization and its socio-economic linkages have come to occupy the center stage of the sustainable development agenda. The global urban population is likely to increase to 70% by 2050 with developing countries accounting for most of the change. By the middle of this century, developing countries are also projected to double their present urban population. Such demographic dominance of urban areas in developing countries entails new challenges for governments and policy planners.

In the months and years ahead, global efforts to combat poverty, promote inclusive growth and reduce environmental stress will increasingly be determined by the efforts we put in to integrate urban development into our larger socio-economic planning. The RIO+20 Summit held in June this year has given us a clear direction on how to make urban living a sustainable option, and we must take it forward.

Mr. Chairman,

Being a founding member of UN-Habitat, India values its partnership with the organization. Our delegation welcomes the progress made in the implementation of the medium-term strategic and institutional plan for the period 2008-2013, particularly the focus on pro-poor housing as well as basic infrastructure and services.

In this context, we urge upon all entities to contribute to further capitalization of the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation so as to enable UN-Habitat to provide more financial and seed capital support for slum upgrading and prevention.

We are happy that the global community has achieved the MDG target of improving the lives of 100 million slum dwellers well before time. This is very encouraging. We need to continue with our concerted efforts.

Mr. Chairman,

Over the last few decades, India has seen massive shift in its population from rural to urban areas. Presently, Indian cities and towns constitute the world's second largest urban system and contribute to half of our GDP.

Within the next two decades, we are poised to have over 590 million people living in urban areas, producing more than 70 per cent of GDP and accounting for 70 per cent of the new employment created. This growth in urban economic activity, however, requires infrastructure support such as power, telecom, roads, water supply, sanitation, solid waste management and mass transportation.

We are committed to meeting these expectations, and seek a holistic and integrated solution to urban issues. Our National Action Plan on Climate Change comprises a National Mission on Sustainable Habitat as its key component. The Mission looks to promote energy efficiency as a core component of urban planning and urban renewal. Initiatives launched under this Mission serve to advance improvements in energy efficiency in buildings, solid waste management and a modal shift to public transport. The Government of India, in its 12th Five-Year Plan (2012-2017), recognizes the challenges and opportunities of urbanization. We have undertaken several initiatives to cater to the needs of the urban poor.

In 2007, India launched the National Urban Housing and Habitat Policy – an initiative to promote sustainable development of habitat in the country with special attention to urban housing.

An important element of this policy - the Jawaharlal Nehru National Urban Renewal Mission - seeks to integrate the development of infrastructure services in cities. Other programmes such as the Basic Services to the Urban Poor and the Integrated Housing and Slum Development Programme are initiatives for slum dwellers and the urban poor.

An urban poverty alleviation program called the "Swarna Jayanti Shahari Rozgar Yojana" provides gainful employment to those in need through self-employment ventures and opportunities for wage employment.

The National Urban Sanitation Policy, launched by the Government of India, seeks to transform urban India into sanitized and healthy cities.

India has also been actively promoting affordable rural housing through programmes like the "Indira Awaas Yojana", which provide financial assistance for construction and upgradation of dwelling units for the poor with special attention to their basic sanitation needs.

Mr. Chairman, providing clean and healthy living environment in urban areas is a pressing challenge today, especially in developing countries where environmental sustainability and growth must go hand in hand. In my own constituency Unnao, in India, we are facing a severe water and air pollution from industrial activity. We remain committed to addressing them in a holistic and sustainable manner.
Mr. Chairman,

The outcome document of United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, entitled “The Future We Want”, commits to the promotion of an integrated approach to planning and building sustainable cities and urban settlements. With the overall aim of achieving sustainable urban development, the document stresses on the need to strengthen mechanisms to ensure the implementation of the UN-Habitat Agenda. We must now singularly focus to implement these commitments.

Mr. Chairman,

My delegation welcomes the progress made in the preparation for the third United Nations conference on housing and sustainable development – Habitat III.

We fully support the demand for enhanced budgetary resources for UN-Habitat. The recent financial crisis cannot serve as an excuse for donor countries not to fulfill their financial commitments.

Before concluding, Mr. Chairman, I would like to highlight India’s efforts in sharing its experiences and knowledge in housing technology, particularly in field of cost-effective, environment friendly and disaster resistant construction, with fellow developing countries within the framework of South-South cooperation. These initiatives could be further strengthened through triangular cooperation.

I thank you.
Statement by Mr. Bansa Gopal Chowdhury, Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation, on Agenda Item 79 - “Report of the International Law Commission on the Work of Its Sixty-fourth Session- Part-1 A at the Sixth Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on November 02 2012.

Mr. Chairman,

At the outset I would thank Mr. Lucius Caflisch, Chairman of the sixty-fourth session of the International Law Commission, for his detailed and informative introduction to the work of the Commission at its sixty-fourth session on the first cluster of topics, and for guiding the work of the Commission at this session.

I also commend all members of the Commission on a successful and productive session, in which the Commission adopted on first reading a set of 32 draft articles and commentaries thereto on the topic of ‘expulsion of aliens’. The Commission also heard reports by the Special Rapporteurs and had debate on the methodological and substantive issues on the topics of: Immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction; Provisional application of treaties and; Formation and evidence of customary international law. I also thank the Secretariat for their contribution to the work of the Commission.

Mr. Chairman,

We commend the Special Rapporteur Mr. Maurice Kamto on the presentation of the eighth report on the topic of “Expulsion of aliens”, consideration of which by the Commission resulted in the adoption of a set of thirty-two draft articles and commentaries thereto on this topic.

The approach adopted by the Special Rapporteur in dealing with the right of a State to expel an alien and the rights and remedies available to the person subject of expulsion, including the legal consequences of unlawful expulsion is in general acceptable to us.

We recognize, in principle, the right of a State to expel an alien from its territory as provided under draft article 3 as exercised in accordance with the applicable rules of international law, particularly the human rights law. We would like to emphasize that the State concerned must also take into account the minimum standards of the treatment of aliens.

Mr. Chairman,

We found the provision under draft article 13, prohibiting expulsion in order to circumvent an extradition procedure, a convincing one. Although the expulsion and extradition both have the effect of a person leaving the territory of one state for another, however, the legal basis and the laws governing the process and the procedure are altogether different and one cannot be used as an alternate for the other.

Mr. Chairman,

We consider that the issues relating to the suspensive effect of an appeal against an expulsion decision under the draft article 27, recourse to a competent international body and the re-admission of aliens in the expelling State under draft article 29 require further discussion as there is no sufficient State practice in this regard. Recourse to an international body might raise issues relating to competence of such bodies where the expelling State is not a party to the relevant international instrument.

Mr. Chairman,

On the topic ‘Protection of persons in the event of disasters’, we congratulate the Special Rapporteur Mr. Eduardo Valencia-Ospina for submitting the fifth report. The report elaborates upon: the duty to cooperate in the event of disaster under draft article A; the conditions for the provision of assistance under draft article 13 and; the conditions for the termination of assistance under draft article 14.

We appreciate the work of the Drafting Committee and the Commission which resulted in the provisional adoption of draft article 5-bis (Forms of cooperation); draft article 12 (Offers of assistance); draft article 13 (Conditions on the provision of external assistance and; draft article 14 (Facilitation of external assistance).

Mr. Chairman,

India is fully in agreement with the observation of Special Rapporteur that States should observe fundamental humanitarian principles in responding to disasters. The principle of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and non-discrimination as envisaged in draft article 6 should be central to any disaster response.

We would like to emphasize that disaster relief and assistance must start on the premise “respect for the principle of sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence” of the affected State. We stress for the need to ensure that the humanitarian assistance is not forcibly imposed on the affected State and that the concepts of international humanitarian law are not automatically applied, as the duty of protection in the event of armed conflicts differs from that of disaster situations.

Mr. Chairman,

The draft article 12 on ‘Offers of assistance’ confers the right on states and competent international organizations to offer assistance to the affected State.
While, we do recognize the importance of assistance in disaster situations, we are of the view that offers and acceptance of assistance should be viewed as part of international cooperation as opposed to the assertion of any right or imposition of any duty. We do not think that any such obligatory mandate exists in the field of international cooperation and are of the view that the crucial factor in this regard is the consent of the affected State.

Mr. Chairman,

The draft article 11 prohibits the ‘arbitrary withholding’ of consent by the affected State. It is however not clear as to what may constitute the ‘arbitrary withholding’ of consent and that what could be the criteria to determine the inability and unwillingness of an affected State to consent to external assistance.

Regarding draft articles 13 and 14, we appreciate the Commission’s observations that the affected State should be entitled to impose conditions on the provision of assistance and that the termination of relief operations should be ultimately a matter for decision by the affected State.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I once again congratulate the International Law Commission and, in particular, the Special Rapporteurs, for a successful session.

I thank you Mr. Chairman.
704. Statement by Ambassador Sujata Mehta, Permanent Representative of India to Conference on Disarmament, Geneva, on Thematic Debate on UN Disarmament Machinery at the First Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on November 02, 2012.

The thematic debate on UN disarmament machinery has assumed greater importance in recent years. This year in particular the disarmament machinery faces several challenges to its integrity. We believe that there is a need to recommit ourselves to the disarmament machinery set up by the Member States for the UN to discharge its central role and primary responsibility in the field of disarmament in accordance with the Charter.

Mr. Chairman, my delegation associates itself with the statement delivered by Indonesia on this subject on behalf of NAM.

The First Special Session on Disarmament, SSOD-I, created the present disarmament machinery comprising of the triad of First Committee of the General Assembly, UN Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament. This triad is the mechanism by which we give expression and coherence to international efforts in the area of disarmament and international security. At a moment when there is renewed interest in the issue of the revitalization of the disarmament machinery and multilateral disarmament agenda, it is also important to recall that this was one of the motivations that led to SSOD-I. Let me explain India's perspectives on various bodies of the UN disarmament machinery.

We recognize the importance of and are committed to the work of the First Committee which is the main deliberative organ of the disarmament machinery. The First Committee embodies our faith in the benefit of collective action and of multilateral approaches to disarmament and related international security issues. It provides countries with diverse perspectives an opportunity to voice them and submit resolutions on issues of priority to them. We are open to suggestions to strengthen the work of the First Committee including by rationalizing its agenda as well as improving housekeeping and time management.

The UN Disarmament Commission is the only universal forum that provides for in-depth consideration of disarmament issues and can help in building greater understanding and consensus on issues on the international disarmament agenda. The Commission has produced several important sets of guidelines and recommendations for the General Assembly in the past including guidelines on CBMs, verification and international arms transfers. However, in recent years, including this year, the Commission has had to struggle to achieve consensus even on the agenda for its three-yearly cycles. This despite the fact that the General Assembly has decided that nuclear disarmament should remain one of the agenda items for the Commission’s meetings. We appreciate Peru’s efforts as the Chair of this year’s Commission meetings in ensuring consensus on the agenda for the next three years. We hope that all Member States would engage more seriously in the Commission to provide vitality to its work.

The Conference on Disarmament, recognized by SSOD-I as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, continues to have the mandate, the membership, the credibility and the rules of procedure to discharge its responsibility. We do not believe that the continuing impasse in the CD stems from the forum per se or its Rules of Procedure. There is no ‘design flaw’ as CD Secretary General Tokayev noted last week. On the contrary, the CD’s Rules of Procedure provide the necessary assurance to Member States that their security interests are fully protected while they engage substantively with others in the CD on issues that have a bearing on vital national security interests. It is up to the Member States to make the CD work by negotiating multilateral treaties which can be signed, ratified and implemented universally. We believe that proposals which question the viability or relevance of the CD or even suggest unrealistic alternatives need to be viewed with utmost caution.

Mr. Chairman, The UN Secretariat, in particular the ODA, has an important responsibility in assisting States in pursuing the multilateral disarmament agenda. We believe that the ODA should be strengthened to facilitate the implementation of permanent treaty bodies under the UN such as the BWC and CCW. There is also a need to ensure greater coherence between disarmament work in New York and Geneva, including on small arms and light weapons.

There are two related bodies of the UN disarmament machinery to which we perhaps do not give as much attention as we should. These are UNIDIR and Secretary General’s Advisory Board. Both these bodies find their origins in SSOD-I and in their own right play a role in shaping the multilateral disarmament agenda and discharging the important and impartial research function mentioned in SSOD-I. We believe that UNIDIR needs to be enabled fully with resources to realize its potential. The particular way in which UNIDIR was established gives us, Member States, a special responsibility in ensuring its viability. It deserves greater support from the regular budget of the UN so as to maintain its autonomy and impartiality and fulfill its role of providing in depth and long term research on disarmament issues. The Secretary General’s Advisory Board should be made more representative so that it can reflect the broadest range of perspectives. It should take an inclusive and forward looking approach to global disarmament issues.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, I would also like to underline that the UN disarmament machinery cannot be looked at in isolation from the larger architecture of global governance. There is a need for revitalization and reform of the United Nations and its principal organs, the General Assembly and the Security Council, to bring them in line with contemporary realities. India would continue to work towards strengthening multilateralism and UN’s role in accordance with its Charter.

Thank you.

◆◆◆◆◆

Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. India aligns itself with the statement delivered by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

The subject matter of the debate today – Poverty eradication and other development issues - is critical to the attainment of our cherished Millennium Development Goals.

We may take satisfaction in the number of global poor living on US$ 1.25 a day to have come down from 1.8 billion in 1990 to 1.4 billion in 2005 but we still have more than a billion people living in extreme poverty and hunger. With just three years away from the MDG finish line the task at hand remains a daunting one.

At the RIO+20 Summit, we renewed our commitment to sustainable development. In doing so, we recognised poverty eradication to be the greatest global challenge. As we now move forward in framing the Sustainable Development Goals and the Post 2015 development agenda, tackling this development imperative should be our priority.

Without fighting poverty we can hardly make progress on our commitment to address global inequality or to combine sustainable development with equity.

Mr. Chairman,

The ongoing impacts of the global economic and financial crisis, and the faltering recovery, pose persistent impediments to combating poverty. High and volatile food and energy prices continue to erode the policy space developing countries have to advance their development goals.

Ensuring economic growth is, therefore, fundamental to eradicating poverty. Sustained economic growth in developing countries has been the principal instrument of poverty alleviation. In India, we have been singularly successful on this, notwithstanding the turbulence of the 2008 crisis and its aftermath. As per estimate, India would have taken out 188 million people out of the poverty net by 2015 compared to the 1990 level. But we would still be home to the largest number of global poor numbering more than 300 million.

My Parliamentary seat Unnao, situated in India’s most populous state UTTAR PRADESH, is India’s largest constituency. Unnao is an underdeveloped rural district where poverty remains the greatest development challenge. I, therefore, have a deep understanding of poverty and related issues.

We do, however, recognise that growth in itself is not sufficient to distribute opportunities and resources and have, therefore, adopted policies to ensure inclusive growth. This is the overarching objective of our Eleventh Five Year Plan (2007-2012) and without doubt would continue to be so for the future plans as well.

Mr. Chairman,

Recognising that poverty is multi-dimensional in nature, our Government has launched large scale socio-economic programmes and interventions to reduce poverty, fight malnutrition and hunger, reduce infant mortality and promote health and gender empowerment.

With a view to tackle poverty, enhance our food security and upgrade rural infrastructure, India has launched the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Scheme, the largest cash for work programme in the world. The programme guarantees 100 days of work annually to those willing. This pro-job strategy is of particular relevance at a time when the world is confronted with job-less growth.

We are committed to combining growth with equity. Our National Rural Health Mission, School Lunch Programme to fight malnutrition, Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan for universal education and Swabhimaan programme for financial inclusion are all designed to meet this objective.

We have also kept women at the centre of all our development policies and programmes. We have been particularly successful in promoting participation of women in our local governance and have reserved 50% seats for women in our local bodies.

Mr. Chairman,

Strategies for poverty reduction in developing countries must have a key focus on rural development as majority of the people are dependent on agriculture and allied activities for livelihood. We need to enhance investment in irrigation, roads, cold storage and energy access to bolster rural productivity.

Countries must also adopt policies to spur job enhancing growth, undertake social protection measures to assist the poor and induce larger domestic mobilisation of resources through financial inclusion, micro-credit and other policies to boost small enterprise.

Fundamental to job-creation, especially in developing countries, is to pursue skill development and training. In India, we have launched the National Skill Development Mission, a public-partnership initiative to build and upgrade employable skills with focus on the informal sector. The World Bank in 2008 initiated the Rural Migrant Skills Development and Employment Project to support transition of rural workers to urban areas. Such innovative programmes could be productive templates to follow.

Mr. Chairman,

Developing countries, constricted by the global economic slowdown, of which they have become the principal victims, need enhanced resources and policy space to pursue their development aspirations. The 0.7% ODA commitment of developed countries, with some honourable exceptions, still remain unmet.

We remain deeply concerned that ODA in 2011 declined by almost 3% to US Dollars 133.5 billion, first such fall in global ODA since 1997 and to the Least Developed Countries by 9%.

Developing countries, in particular the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, the Small Island Developing States and countries in Africa are in urgent need of an enabling international environment that is conducive for meeting their foremost challenge—poverty eradication. In this context, it is imperative that we move forward on the Doha Development Round, on Climate Change Negotiations to seek an ambitious and comprehensive outcome and on a comprehensive reform of the Bretton Woods Institutions for equitable participation of developing countries.

South-South Cooperation in recent years has complemented global resources targeted at the development agenda, but it cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation. It must be allowed to grow within its own space and in accordance with its own principles.

India has been privileged to share its development experience with fellow developing countries. We remain committed to doing more in the coming years with our partners in the South and stepping up our support to South-South Cooperation.

Let our actions to fight poverty be worthy of our commitment.

I thank you.
Statement by Ms Annu Tandon, Member of Parliament & Member of Indian Delegation on the Annual Report of the IAEA for the Year 2011 at the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on November 05, 2012

Mr. President,

My delegation thanks the Director General, IAEA for preparing the Annual Report for the year 2011, as contained in document (85): note by the SG (A/67/152).

Mr. President,

The increasing global demand for energy, as well as concerns about climate change, volatile fossil fuel prices and the security of energy supplies remain essential factors in deciding an energy mix for any country. This is aptly reflected by the observation in the report that despite the nuclear accident in Japan in March 2011, nuclear power remains an important option not only for countries with existing nuclear programmes, but also for developing countries with growing energy requirements. We note that the IAEA’s post-accident projections of global nuclear power capacity in 2030 are slightly lower than previously projected as some countries have deferred their decisions to introduce nuclear programmes.

Mr. President,

The Fukushima accident elicited a global response towards enhancing nuclear safety with Member States reassessing the safety of existing nuclear power plants. While the results of these reassessments would be further refined as necessary, in the light of new information that might emerge in the future, it is a matter of satisfaction that the data collected by the IAEA and the World Association of Nuclear Operators (WANO) shows that in 2011 the level of nuclear safety among the 435 operating nuclear power plants in operation around the world remained high. However, as Fukushima has demonstrated there is no room for complacency. The IAEA should also take all necessary measures to allay misapprehensions in the public and Member States about the safety of nuclear power plants taking into account the current advances in relevant design and technology areas. Therefore, we would like to call on all the stakeholders to work collectively to continue to enhance nuclear safety. In this context we would like to encourage the IAEA to make concerted efforts for free flow of latest information, technology and equipment pertaining to nuclear safety among the Member States.

Mr. President,

Nuclear Energy has a crucial role to play in achieving the objectives of India’s sustainable economic growth. At the same time India is extensively engaged in development of nuclear technologies in diverse fields extending beyond nuclear power. This includes applications for improved crop varieties, crop protection and radiation-based post-harvest technologies, radio-diagnosis and radiotherapy for diseases, technologies for safe drinking water, etc.

Mr. President,

The nuclear power programme in India is oriented towards maximising the energy potential of available Uranium resources and the utilisation of its large Thorium reserve. We believe that available global uranium resources cannot sustain the projected expansion of nuclear power without adopting the closed fuel cycle approach and subsequent adoption of thorium fuel cycle. In this context we would like to mention the IAEA technical meeting in October 2011 held in India where over 50 experts from 20 Member States deliberated on diverse subjects related to Thorium. The participants noted Thorium's promise in extending the global deployment of nuclear power and concluded that the technology is sufficiently mature for initial commercial deployment. We encourage the IAEA to further engage itself in Thorium fuel cycle. With its excellent physical and nuclear properties Thorium is widely and rightly viewed as the 'fuel of the future'.

Mr. President,

Presently India has 20 operating reactors with an installed capacity of 4780 Megawatts and seven reactors under construction with an installed capacity of 5300 Megawatts. The first unit of the 1000 Mega Watt electrical Pressurized Water Reactor at Kudankulam is very shortly due to attain first criticality. The second unit is to follow soon after. Work is proceeding on four Nuclear Power Plants of indigenous design of 700 Megawatts electrical PHWR type, two each at Rawatbhata, Rajasthan and at Kakrapar, Gujarat. The Prototype Fast Breeder Reactor of 500 Mega Watt Electrical is also in an advanced stage of construction. A number of other reactor projects are under negotiation with prospective foreign vendors for the setting up of NPPs at different sites.

Mr. President,

We are happy to welcome three new members into the fold of INPRO in 2011. India has been associated with INPRO since its inception and has contributed to its progress. We believe that this programme has a great potential towards making nuclear energy accessible in a safe and sustainable manner, particularly to new entrants embarking on this path. The IAEA, through INPRO, should continue to play a central role in the area of development of innovative technology for safe utilisation of nuclear power.

My delegation fully supports other activities of the IAEA undertaken to stimulate innovation in nuclear power through Technical Working Groups for different reactor technologies, small and medium sized reactors and for non-electric applications. The coordinated research projects organized by the IAEA provide an excellent forum for understanding and development of technology.

Mr. President,

India attaches great importance to the IAEA’s work in the fields of nuclear science. We contribute to these activities through participation in the Technical Meetings and coordinated Research Projects and also support the IAEA’s programme in nuclear fusion.

Mr. President,

My delegation believes that the IAEA’s programme and achievements under nuclear applications in food and agriculture, human health and nutrition, water resources management, protection of the environment, and Industry go a long way in meeting the needs of developing countries. We will continue to provide our support to these IAEA programmes including by way of services of experts and offering seats in reputed institutions for training fellows from Member States.

With these comments, we take note of the IAEA’s Annual Report for 2011. India supports the work of IAEA and has cosponsored the draft resolution on the Report of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. Chairman,

I thank the Chairman of the International Law Commission for the presentation of his report concerning the second cluster of topics.

Concerning the topic of “Immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction”, we commend the Special Rapporteur Ms. Concepcion Escobar Hernandez for her preliminary report on this topic. We generally support the work plan devised by the Special Rapporteur. We also recognize the significance of the work done by the previous Special Rapporteur Mr. Roman A. Kolodkin on this topic.

Mr. Chairman,

This topic holds great significance as it is directly related to the performance abroad of the officials of a State. The topic is complex and politically sensitive. We agree with the Special Rapporteur that the substantive issues relating to this topic were cross-cutting and interrelated, but at the same time each and every issue needed to be looked into carefully and in a thorough manner. Consideration of this topic requires a balanced approach taking into account the existing law and practice on the related issues. In this regard, the in-depth examination of the judgement of the International Court of Justice of 3 February 2012 in the Jurisdictional immunities of the States’ case would be desirable which inter-alia identified state practice in respect of immunities before national jurisdictions.

Mr. Chairman,

The issue of relationship between the immunity ratione materiae and immunity rationae personae would also need to be examined by taking into account the State practice and the ICJ judgement in the case, certain questions of mutual assistance in criminal matters. Concerning the applicability of immunity ratione personae beyond troika, we are in favour of identifying a clear criterion in establishing such practice by taking into consideration the judgement of the ICJ in the Arrest Warrant case.

We consider that the established legal order and certain aspects of immunity dealt under the existing international instruments should not be disturbed.

Mr. Chairman,

We congratulate Mr. Juan Manuel Gomez-Robledo for his appointment as the Special Rapporteur for the new topic of 'Provisional application of treaties' and commend him for informal consultations on the topic and presenting thereupon an oral report at the Commission's session.

We support the view that aspects relating to the formation and identification of customary international law do not form part of the scope of this topic.

We are in favour of preserving the regime established under article 25 of the 1969 Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties and not to create new conditions and circumstances for the provisional application of treaties. On the question of the final outcome of the Commission's work, we agree with those members of the Commission who thought it premature to take any decision as to the form of the outcome and that the topic did not necessitate the elaboration of draft articles.

Mr. Chairman,

We commend Special Rapporteur Sir Michael Wood for his detailed Note on the topic 'Formation and evidence of customary international law'.

Custom has been recognized as a source of international law and this is also reflected in the Statute of the International Court of Justice annexed to the UN Charter. Customary principles of international law develop out of behaviour of the States in their international relations through a unique process and are not always easily defined. It may be therefore difficult to advance new rules on the formation and evidence of customary international law. We are of the view that the work of the Commission should be mainly focused on ways and methods concerning the identification of the rules of customary international law and that how the evidence of those rules could be established.

We agree with the Special Rapporteur that elaboration of conclusions with commentaries or guidelines on this topic would be of high practical value for the judges, scholars and practitioners facing the questions of customary international law both at the international and national levels.

Mr. Chairman,

In our view, the work on the codification and clarification of issues concerning the topic of “the obligation to extradite or prosecute” is of great importance given the fact that the obligation is based on the rule that a criminal should not go scot free and should be brought before the justice. The progress on the topic is slow for which the reason in the report appears to be the absence of basic research on whether or not the obligation has obtained the customary law status. In this regard, we would agree with those members of the Commission who are of the view that the absence of the customary nature of the obligation should not pose insurmountable difficulties in the further consideration of the topic.

We consider that the obligation to extradite or prosecute and the concept of universal jurisdiction are not interrelated in the sense that one is dependent on the other and so agree with those members of the Commission who have opined to delink the topic from the universal jurisdiction.

We agree with the observation of the Working Group on this topic that the in-depth analysis would be required of the ICJ judgement of 20 July 2012 in the case Questions relating to the obligation to prosecute or extradite in order to assess its implication for this topic.

Mr. Chairman,

Turning to the topic of Most-Favoured-Nation clause, we commend the work of the ILC Study Group on this topic ably chaired by Mr. Donald McRae.

We appreciate the efforts of the ILC in reviving its work on this topic since 2007 particularly by revisiting the temporal relevance of draft articles on the MFN clause by the ILC in 1978. Since then, the state practice in relation to MFN provision has been, to a large extent, superseded by specific multilateral, bilateral and regional arrangements. The GATT, and resort to the dispute settlement under the investment agreements has resulted in the interpretation of MFN provision in the investment context.

We agree with the Commission’s observation that the reason of the peculiarities of the application of MFN clause in the mixed arbitral decisions is the different nature of the parties to the proceedings, the claimant being a private person and the respondent being a State and that the tribunal acts as a functional substitute for an otherwise competent domestic court of the home State.

We appreciate Commission’s efforts toward providing authoritative guidance on the interpretation of MFN clause. The Commission may in this process consider the studies that have been undertaken by other trade related bodies such as the WTO, UNCITRAL and OECD.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

My delegation would like to thank the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for his report, as well as his presentation before this Committee. His report highlights the central challenges being faced by the UNHCR and the organization’s efforts to address them.

Mr. Chairman,

Refugees and stateless persons are a particularly vulnerable group, having been forced to leave the country of their nationality or origin. As per the latest UNHCR report, there are 10.4 million refugees globally. During 2011, there were 0.876 million new individual claims for refugee or asylum status.

It is, therefore, important that the international community remain cognizant of their plight and extend all help to address the needs of protection, relief and rehabilitation of refugees. In this context, we wish to recall that voluntary return of refugees is the core solution for the refugees and all efforts of the international community should focus on ensuring the creation of conditions conducive to voluntary return.

It is predominantly developing countries that constitute countries of origin as well as asylum. A large number of developing countries with limited resources continue to meet their humanitarian obligations, often risking their delicate economies. Their problems deserve particular attention. International solidarity and burden sharing are the foundations on which refugee protection rests.

UNHCR’s mission, therefore, needs to strengthen cooperation on burden-sharing with host States. Its relationship with Member-States must recognize and acknowledge the in-kind contribution and services of the States hosting refugees.

Mr. Chairman,

The year 2011 and 2012 so far has been notable for a large number of humanitarian emergencies in the Middle-East, West and North Africa that have been and are being commendably handled by UNHCR. Its engagement in emergencies must also clearly take into account an exit strategy to enable the State mechanisms resume their core functions in discharge of responsibilities to their people.

We wish to recall that the fulfillment of UNHCR’s responsibilities in emergency situations requires full cooperation with the affected States as per UNGA Resolution 46/182 and urge UNHCR to adhere to this principle.

Further, such engagement by UNHCR in emergency situations should not adversely impact or reduce its responsibilities towards its core mandate, that of international protection, assistance and help to refugees.

Mr. Chairman,

We remain concerned at protracted refugee situations, and the increasingly challenging environment marked by rising numbers of those seeking refuge and protection. A major adverse impact has been the role of non-state actors in situations of armed conflict, that has prevented humanitarian assistance from reaching the victims of conflict and those seeking refuge and protection.

It is important that the international community squarely address this issue of ensuring that non-state actors to respect the humanitarian framework and machinery.

Mr. Chairman,

Reference is frequently made to mixed migration flows. We need to guard against the intersection of the two constituencies of migrants and refugees as the apprehensions of one should not be transposed on the other. International migration needs to be promoted in a regular non-discriminatory and orderly manner as migrants add value in economic terms both to the destination as well as sending States.

We must therefore develop capacities to maintain a clear distinction between refugees and economic migrants so as to better address the protection needs of the former.

Mr. Chairman,

As per the latest UNHCR report, the number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) was an estimated 26.4 million in end-2011, of whom 15.5 million benefitted from UNHCR in some manner.

The primary responsibility to look after the IDPs lies with national authorities. UNHCR’s involvement in IDPs should, therefore, only be with the concurrence of States concerned with a view to complement the efforts of national authorities.

In case the situation is one of a collapse of national authority, then the UNHCR should take action in conformity with the conditions approved by the UNGA. Such involvement should be based on due consideration of UNHCR’s mandate, modality of intervention, availability of resources and careful examination of all the implications.

Mr. Chairman,

Our view is that the 1951 UN Convention on Refugees, is limited in scope and that international protection needs to be viewed in terms of on-the-ground commitment by host States to provide protection and hospitality to refugees.

Our civilization has an underlying pluralist and tolerant ethos. India has received and has hosted diverse streams of refugees over thousands of years. We shouldered two of the biggest population exodus in recent times – one related to the partition of India in 1947 and the other during the liberation struggle of Bangladesh in 1971.

Even today we are host to some of the largest refugee populations in the world. We have cared for them from our own resources while affording these refugees full protection under our laws. At all times, we have demonstrated our abiding commitment to the principles of protection and non-refoulment.

Mr. Chairman,

India remains committed to working in concert with UNHCR and the international community to address the present and emerging challenges to the international refugee protection agenda in a spirit of cooperation and solidarity.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

❄️❄️❄️❄️❄️
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Secretary-General for his reports and all other reports presented under these agenda items dealing with racism and racial discrimination and rights of peoples to self-determination.

I also thank the speakers for their presentation and contribution to this important discussion.

India associates itself with the statement of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

India is a multi-religious, multi-ethnic and multi-lingual society. Our civilizational ethos has been underpinned by peaceful coexistence and tolerance, values that Mahatma Gandhi, the father of our Nation, placed at the core of India’s national life as he led our struggle for independence.

Mahatma Gandhi had previously experienced the full force of discrimination based on colour during his nearly two decade long stay in South Africa at the turn of the twentieth century. Indians too had to contend with the abhorrent facts of racism and racial discrimination under colonial occupation.

Given this background, and very conscious of the destructive impact that racism and racial discrimination can have on society, the leaders of our freedom struggle ensured that the Indian Constitution enshrined the principles of equality and expressly prohibited discrimination on account of race.

These constitutional provisions are anchored in our comprehensive legal framework and vigorously safeguarded at different levels by our democratic, pluralistic and secular polity, an independent and impartial judiciary, a vibrant civil society and free media.

Mr. Chairman,

The fight against racism and efforts to rid the world of racial discrimination and colonization were, therefore, an important priority of our foreign policy as we gained independence. At the UN, our delegation was actively involved in drafting the Convention on Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD).

While the era of colonialism is well behind us, its legacy unfortunately finds continuing expression in the mindset and behaviour of some individuals, fuelling racial hatred, discrimination and xenophobia.

Despite international efforts, there are still manifestations of racial discrimination and intolerance around the world. We share the concern at the increase in the number of racist incidents in several countries.

We would like to reiterate our firm commitment to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and seek to create more effective measures to enhance its effective implementation.

We also need to take effective measures nationally. Promulgation of appropriate laws and their strict implementation and more importantly, ensuring attitudinal change and inculcation of tolerance through appropriate educational strategies would perhaps provide the surest guarantee against racial prejudice, discrimination and xenophobia.

Mr. Chairman,

The right to self-determination is a fundamental right for people of non self-governing territories and trust colonies. This right allows people to freely choose and establish their governance structures.

India’s contribution to secure the right of peoples to self-determination and our role in the struggle for decolonization has been momentous and vital in ensuring that people who live under subjugation, domination and exploitation, are afforded the right to freely determine their own political status and pursue their economic, social and cultural development.

Mr. Chairman,

Unwavering support for the Palestinian cause has been a cornerstone of India’s foreign policy. We received President Mahmoud Abbas in India in September this year. We support their aspirations for enhanced status at the United Nations.

It is imperative that there be an early realization of a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Road map and relevant UN resolutions. Mr. Chairman,

It must be emphasised here that the right to self-determination cannot be abused for subversive political agendas to encourage secession and to undermine pluralistic and democratic states.
The international community has always agreed that this right cannot be distorted and misinterpreted as extending to component parts or groups based on ethnic, religious, racial or other such narrow lines, to undermine the sovereignty and territorial integrity of state.

Let me add here that ethnic or religious segregation cannot be legitimised on the ground that societies need to be constituted on homogenous lines before they can be tolerant towards diversity and accept multi-culturalism. Such a view will only aid forces of extreme nationalism.

Mr. Chairman,

We totally reject the unwarranted reference made by the delegation of Pakistan to the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir, which is an integral part of the Union of India.

The people of Jammu and Kashmir have chosen and reaffirmed their destiny repeatedly through India’s well established democratic processes. Free, fair and open elections have been regularly held there.

Pakistan’s reference to Jammu and Kashmir is a blatant attempt to divert attention from its dismal record of gross and systematic violation of human rights, including in Pakistan occupied Kashmir. Pakistan would do well to introspect before casting baseless allegations against India.

We would also urge the delegation of Pakistan to refrain from using this forum to detract from the important cause of the Palestinian people and their inalienable rights to self-determination.

Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, the task ahead of us remains challenging but we must firmly believe in the goodness of the human race. Equality and peace are fundamental to our existence. Collective and coordinated action at the international, national and local level is essential and must be vigorously pursued.

We should jointly purge the world of racist, xenophobic and discriminatory practices and facilitate the legitimate right of self-determination for nations seeking freedom.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
710. Statement by Mr. Vinod K Jacob, First Secretary, on Agenda Item 52—“United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (Unrwa)” at the Fourth Committee of the 67th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on November 7, 2012.

Mr. Chairperson,

I would like to begin by expressing the Indian delegation’s appreciation for the work of the Commissioner General, Mr. Filippo Grandi and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA). We would like to thank the Commissioner General for his extremely informative and detailed briefing to the Committee on the activities of UNRWA. We also thank the UNRWA Advisory Committee and the members of the working group on the Financing of UNRWA, for their efforts in support of the Agency.

Mr. Chairperson,

The Arab world has been undergoing unprecedented transformation during the last two years. Democratic aspirations of people in several countries are being addressed through national political processes. It is, however, regrettable that the Palestinian question and the related Arab-Israeli issues have largely remained unaddressed and unresolved. Also, the Palestinian application for full membership of the United Nations submitted more than a year ago has not evinced any positive action from the Security Council, despite overwhelming support from the wider UN membership.

It is, in this context, that the role of UNRWA in providing critical assistance to the Palestinian refugees assumes significance. Today, the Agency is a symbol of the international community’s commitment to the well-being of the Palestinian refugees until a just and durable settlement of the issue is achieved. India commends UNRWA for its exemplary work, carried out under extremely difficult circumstances for the nearly 5 million Palestinian refugees in Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. I also take this opportunity to commend the cooperation of host countries to UNRWA’s work.

We are happy to learn that the Job Creation Programme, undertaken as a part of UNRWA’s Emergency Appeal for 2011, created 22 million employment days in the Occupied Palestine Territory, in addition to using poverty-based targeting methods to ensure that poor and food insecure households were prioritized with eligible families receiving assistance according to their poverty rank and food security gap. We encourage UNRWA to pursue these programmes more rigorously.

Mr. Chairperson,

I would like to take this opportunity to place on record that support for the Palestinian cause has been a cornerstone of India’s foreign policy.
We firmly support the struggle of the Palestinian people to achieve a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel. We will also continue to support Palestine’s bid for full and equal membership of the United Nations.

Bilaterally, India is committed to support the development and nation-building efforts of Palestine. During a recent visit by President Mahmoud Abbas to India in September 2012, MOUs were signed to enhance cooperation in the areas of Information & Communication Technology, vocational training and education. The Government of India also announced a contribution of US Dollar 10 million to Palestine’s budget for this year to help address its financial requirements. During the visit, President Abbas also inaugurated the new Palestinian Embassy building, which had been built with Indian support. The building is a symbol of the enduring friendship between our two countries and its peoples. We have also consistently provided development support to the Palestinian Authority. From the financial year 2009-10, we enhanced our annual contribution to UNRWA to US $ 1 million, in addition to a special contribution of US $ 1 million to UNRWA in response to a flash appeal in 2010. During the last three years alone, India has contributed US $ 10 million annually as untied budgetary support to the Palestinian Authority. We are also offering 100 slots to the Palestinian Authority for capacity building and human resource development under our technical and economic cooperation programme.

Along with our IBSA [India-Brazil-South Africa] partners, we have through the IBSA Trust Fund, invested in several projects in Palestine, which include a multipurpose sports complex in Ramallah, a recently launched center in Nablus for assisting people with severe intellectual disabilities, and also rebuilt and refurbished a cultural and hospital center in Gaza, all in partnership with the Palestinian authorities, to assist them in their endeavors for capacity and institution-building.

Mr. Chairperson,

The report under this agenda item, clearly illustrates the severe challenges UNRWA continues to face.

The immediate challenge before UNRWA that needs to be addressed therefore is the crisis of chronic underfunding. Shortage of funds adversely impacts the quality and maintenance of the existing level of services.

We support the efforts of UNRWA to enlarge the donor base. In spite of the current difficult global economic condition, it is important that the international community continues to show commitment to the cause of Palestine.

Mr. Chairperson,

The blockade of Gaza has entered its sixth year, and is causing severe hardship to the population. The humanitarian situation continues to deteriorate, and essential services, economic activities and infrastructure development have been disrupted. While there has been improvement in restrictions on West Bank and movement of humanitarian supplies and construction material into Gaza, approval of UNRWA projects, restrictions due to the separation barrier, closures, and curfews in the Palestinian territories is causing severe hardships to the affected population. The restrictions on freedom of movement of UNRWA staff members continue to hinder the work of UNRWA.

We call upon Israel to lift the blockade and allow the resumption of normal socio-economic activities in Gaza and facilitate free movement of UNRWA staff.

Mr. Chairperson,

During the visit of President Abbas to India in September this year, India reaffirmed its firm support for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as per relevant resolutions of the UN, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet Roadmap.

We strongly support all efforts towards realization of that objective, including Palestine’s enhanced status in this organization as announced by President Abbas during the General Debate of the 67th session of the UN General Assembly in September this year. We hope that this vision will be realized sooner rather than later.

Until then, Mr. Chairperson, it is imperative upon all of us member states to fully support UNRWA, as the primary source of humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian refugees.

Thank You.

Statement by Mr. Manjeev Singh Puri, Ambassador & Deputy Permanent Representative, at the UN General Assembly General Debate on the Comprehensive Question of Peacekeeping on November 08 2012.

Mr. Chairperson,

Let me congratulate you and the bureau members for organizing today's important General Debate on peacekeeping. Allow me also to welcome Ms. Ameerah Haq the Under Secretary General for the Department of Field Support to the 4th Committee for the first time and commend both the USGs for their briefings. My delegation also aligns itself with the NAM statement.

Mr. Chairperson,

Peacekeeping is UN's flagship activity. Today's debate reflects the enduring relevance of UN peacekeeping in fulfilling the Charter obligations towards international peace and security. Our peacekeepers on the ground remain the sole sentinels of the peacekeeping missions that we conceptualize and mandate here. We salute these silent warriors for tireless efforts that make our work worthwhile here.

Mr. Chairman,

Having withstood tests of times for over six decades now, Peacekeeping has witnessed shifts in its designs and configurations. This evolving and adaptable attribute of UN peacekeeping continues to be its core strength.

The past one year has particularly been challenging for the peacekeepers and an unusually high number of peacekeepers have lost lives in line of protecting the mandates. We pay our tributes to all those who have laid down their lives in the service of international peace and security.

Mr. Chairman,

UN Peacekeeping debates today are compelled to tackle the twin challenges emanating from the field and of the finance. Our evaluations that are based on cost considerations alone do not capture the entirety of mission mandates and our obligations towards international peace and security.

Ambitious mandates, resource overstretch, and field-headquarters gaps continue to challenge the ability of peacekeeping to deliver for examples peacekeepers to continue to protect civilians while supporting national elections and great lakes initiative in DRC within existing resources. My delegation recommends strong field orientation in everything we do and to leverage the expertise available with the TCCs and field experts in peacekeeping.
Peacekeeping today stands on the firm foundations built over decades on the building blocks of impartiality, consent and non-use of force. Alterations in the established rules of the game should not be undertaken with undue haste and without evidences from the ground. Our convictions must emanate from our own belief systems but also from what we observe and learn on the grounds.

My delegation firmly believes in the inter-governmental sanctity of the peacekeeping reform and policy process. Secretariat therefore must continue with efforts to capture views and opinions from the wider membership.

Peacekeeping partnership hinges on the abilities that each brings to the table. Our decision-making mechanisms should reflect this reality. Burden sharing and rewards should be commensurate with the efforts invested by each. We keenly look forward to improvements on this count.

Mr. Chairperson, C-34 remains the sole legislative GA body invested with peacekeeping. It accords us an opportunity to deliberate as a collective. It is in our interests to strengthen the democratic basis of this mechanism and work on our abilities to deliver within its norms and conventions.

Protracted conflicts have often resulted in peacekeeping missions staying in the fields for long periods. Lasting and durable peace requires that we at the UN think through the challenges before launching the missions. Not only do we need to manage the expectations of host populations but also those of ours. The practice of acting first and thinking later with hindsight needs to be curtailed. Peacekeeping is a long haul process and peacebuilding even more.

My delegation would be keen to see greater conversation between our peacekeeping and peacebuilding departments. Objectives of state and institution building require matching commitment in resources. Processes that undertake to keep and build peace can not be set far apart at HQs. Mission priorities should also be aligned firmly with national needs and priorities and are not transplanted from elsewhere.

Peacekeeping reform agenda should strive for greater balance. Police, rule of law, security sector, and disarmament are some critical areas that have received little attention in recent times due to our collective focus on field support. Basic governance, preliminary frameworks of administrations should remain our primary goals in post conflict scenarios. The strategies of development and economic revitalization will not take roots in situations of poor governance and absent administration.

We encourage the Department of Field Support to engage the larger membership in substantive aspects of discussions and deliberations. We must not lose sight of its objectives that are about bringing efficiency to mission 3 operations.
My delegation notes efforts with regard to the Civilian Capacity Review. We firmly believe that this process should be set in the inter-governmental settings and should be membership driven. We continue to encourage its Steering Group to be focussed on benefits to the United Nations and to keep membership updated on its implementation road map.

My delegation welcomes DPKO’s efforts in gender mainstreaming in all peacekeeping missions. India’s all women’s formed-police-unit (FPU) in Liberia have served Secretary General’s goal commendably in this regard. I would like to take this opportunity to reiterate our support to zero tolerance in respect of disciplinary and conduct issues.

Mr. Chairperson,

My country has supported and nurtured peacekeeping since its inception in the 1950s. The universal legitimacy that UN peacekeeping enjoys derives from the sacrifices that our peacekeepers endured. With over 100,000 uniformed personnel in 40 UN peacekeeping missions India remains committed to the work for international peace and security as a partner of the UN.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary General for his various reports under Agenda Items 69[b] and 69[c] the Special Rapporteurs for their reports as well.

Mr. Chairman,

We welcome the report of the Working Group on the Right to Development. The Right to Development is a fundamental link in the web of human rights that mark the social progress and better standards of life for every person.

We were privileged to have the late Dr. Arjun Sengupta, whose contribution in furthering a rights-based approach to development had been noteworthy as the Chairman of the Working Group on the Right to Development.

We note with satisfaction the full integration of the Right to Development into several areas of the work of the UN system such as the follow-up to Least Developing Countries IV, UNCTAD XIII and United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development. Much more, however, remains to be done in the full realization of the Right to Development and its mainstreaming in the work of the UN.

While no one can deny the national responsibility of States to promote the Right to Development, one cannot disregard the imperative of international cooperation essential for creating a conducive environment for the genuine realisation of this right.

We agree with the Report that there is a need to enlarge the constituencies in support of the Right to Development, and that shared responsibilities, human rights-based policy coherence and systemic integration could further strengthen the global partnership for development among Member States, development agencies and the international development, financial and trade institutions.

Mr. Chairman,

With regard to the Secretary General’s report on “Globalization and its impact on the full enjoyment of all human rights”, we believe that the development must be at the heart of the globalization process, and that development must be inclusive and sustainable.

At RIO+20, the international community renewed its commitment to sustainable development, recognizing poverty eradication to be the greatest global challenge. In this context, we must ensure that the approach to development is one that takes into account the needs, priorities, and objectives of the developing countries and its people.

International cooperation and solidarity between States are indispensable for seizing the opportunities and combating the challenges posed by globalization. This concerns all spheres of cooperation, including aid, trade, investment, debt relief, transfer of technology, financing for development, food security, access to medicines, and climate change.

In this regard, the reform of global economic governance is equally vital so as to ensure that all countries and peoples can benefit more equitably from globalization.

Reports of the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Education focusing in particular on technical and vocational education and training, and the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Food provide valuable inputs in meeting the challenges facing us.

Mr. Chairman,

The report of the Secretary General on the steps taken by States to combat intolerance, negative stereo-typing, stigmatization, discrimination, incitement to violence and violence against persons based on religion or belief and the interim report of the Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion or Belief highlights the necessity of States to ensure principles of equality and non-discrimination for all its citizens.

India supports all efforts to build bridges of understanding between nations, peoples, religions and cultures across the many fault-lines that exist in today's world. India's great experiment of a billion people of great diverse persuasion, working together seeking their salvation in the framework of a democracy can offer useful insights for all multi-cultural societies.

Our nation was built on the foundations of deep and abiding commitments to the value of democracy. Pluralism, secularism, multi-culturalism and the principles of equity, social justice and the rule of law are core values of our democratic polity and the bed-rock of our Republic.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism remains one of the most serious threats to international peace and security, and also a major threat to full enjoyment of human rights. Terrorists violate the most fundamental human right of their victims - the right to life. They also infringe upon several other basic human rights. Terrorism is an attack on democracy, human dignity, human rights and development.
Effectively combating this increasingly sophisticated and globalized scourge requires necessary political will of member states and greater international and regional cooperation.

States must take unequivocal and resolute position against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. We need to ensure zero-tolerance towards terrorism. We need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists to gain succor and even legitimacy.

It is, therefore, timely that the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism has focused on the human rights of victims of terrorism. We support the point that the victims of terrorism must be recognized as victims of grave violations of international human rights laws.

Mr. Chairman,

With our democratic, pluralistic and secular polity, an independent and impartial judiciary, a vibrant civil society, a free media and independent national human rights institution, India has been successful in ensuring effective guarantees for the promotion and protection of human rights.

Our vibrant democratic polity also requires that we continuously pursue higher norms and standards, be it in the area of human rights or development. As the world’s largest democracy, India considers it an obligation and a moral imperative to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms of each and every citizen. It will be our constant endeavour to continue to do so.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
713. Statement by Mr. Randhir Jaiswal, Counsellor, on Agenda Item 17: Information and Communications Technologies for Development at the Second Committee of the 67th Session of the UN General Assembly on November 12, 2012

Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor. India associates itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77.

We thank the Secretary General for his reports on the follow-up to the outcomes of the World Summit on the Information Society and other ICT issues.

Mr. Chairman,

Internet has evolved itself into a powerful, ubiquitous, empowering and liberating medium, even though only a fragment of its full potential is known and has been exploited by humankind so far. Internet with its immense transformational potential can provide the means for sustainable and inclusive development.

India is deeply committed to the free growth of the Internet, and is determined on its own and would urge others, to exploit this tremendous opportunity.

Mr. Chairman,

We remain deeply committed to the true spirit of the vision outlined in the Tunis Agenda, i.e. the international management of the Internet should be multilateral, transparent and democratic, with the full involvement of governments, the private sector, civil society and international organizations.

Given the nature of the Internet, we need to put in place a system designed for cyberspace – a system which is collaborative, consultative and inclusive for dealing with all public policies involving the Internet.

It should be evolutionary so as to meet the ever-changing requirements of the Internet space. The processes should evolve through dialogue that is continuous and continuing. The consultations in the process should involve all stakeholders and work to make the digital divide a thing of the past. They must also factor in regional and national sensitivities and divergences.

The system should put in place a mechanism for accountability in respect of crimes committed in the cyber space. A new cyber jurisprudence needs to be evolved, which deals with cyber crime without being limited by political boundaries so that cyber justice can be delivered in real time.

The system of representation should be truly reflective of the ground realities.

We are hopeful that the Second Committee Resolution on ICT this year will make a new beginning to give shape to the Tunis vision of Enhanced Cooperation. We seek support of all Member States for the formation of a CSTD working group on Enhanced Cooperation, with multi-stakeholder participation, as proposed by India in the Resolution, for examining the mandate of the WSIS regarding Enhanced Cooperation and recommending necessary steps to operationalize it. I thank you.
Statement by Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, Deputy Permanent Representative, on Agenda Item 41: Necessity of Ending The Economic, Commercial and Financial Embargo Imposed by the United States of America Against Cuba at the 67th Session of the UN General Assembly on November 13, 2012.

Mr. President,

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to address the General Assembly.

My delegation associates itself with the statements made by Algeria on behalf of the G-77 and Iran on behalf of the NAM.

Mr. President,

This is the 21st year in a row that we are here to consider the resolution tabled by Cuba. In all these years, this Assembly has emphatically rejected the imposition of laws and regulations with extra-territorial impact and all other forms of coercive economic measures that hurt the progress and prosperity of people the world over.

And while doing so, this Assembly has also called upon all States to respect their obligations under the United Nations Charter and international law, as well as repeal and invalidate laws and measures that have “extra-territorial effects” on other States.

In spite its rejection by this august assembly, year after year, the US embargo on Cuba continues to remain in full force. We see this as a violation of the world opinion, and an act that severely undermines multilateralism and the credibility of the United Nations itself.

Mr. President,

The half a century old US embargo on Cuba has brought immense suffering for its people. The embargo, which perhaps, has no parallel in history, is a transgression of the right of a sovereign state to development and to enjoy the freedom of trade, economy and navigation.

The embargo has denied a life of respect and basic standard to the people of Cuba and has severely undermined the progress of the country, including sustaining the Millennium Development Goals, which it achieved long before their adoption. The impact of the embargo during the present global economic slowdown has been particularly severe for the Cuban economy. Spiraling food and energy prices have made matters worse.

The embargo has denied Cuba access to US market, investment, technology, financial services and scientific, educational, cultural and sporting institutions. Cuba has had to pay enormous extra cost for sourcing products, technology and services from third countries located thousands of kilometers away.

The extra-territorial application of the US embargo has discouraged investment, technology transfer and sale and other forms of business collaborations between Cuba and third countries.

The denial of technology and related scientific support, particularly due to extra-territorial application of the embargo, has severely impacted health care, an MDG commitment, in the country. It has also undermined its ability to provide health assistance to developing countries as part of South-South cooperation.

Mr. President,

The report of the Secretary General on the agenda item is illustrative of the detrimental impact the embargo has had on international efforts to undertake socio-economic advancement in Cuba. The UN Resident Coordinator in Havana has noted the high cost and negative impact of the embargo on development and humanitarian cooperation implemented by the UN system.

Mr. President,

There is huge potential for strengthening economic and commercial ties between Cuba and the United States, especially in the tourism sector.

Taking advantage of limited openings under the US Trade Sanctions Reform and Export Enhancement Act of 2000, the US has become the largest exporter of agricultural products to Cuba.

Congressional efforts in the United States to relax or lift the embargo lend further credence to the annual UN resolution calling for lifting of the US embargo.

Mr. President,

People to people contact between the US and Cuba holds immense possibilities to foster better understanding. The steps taken by the US Administration in January 2011 to reduce restrictions on travel and remittances to Cuba are positive developments. However, it is far from making a fundamental change in the complex framework of laws and regulations which are part of the embargo against Cuba. Much more needs to be done.

India joins other nations in calling for an immediate end to the US embargo. India supports the resolution moved by Cuba.

I thank you.

Mr. Chairman,

I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your election as Chairman of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee to the 67th General Assembly, as also the members of the Bureau on their election. I assure you of my delegation’s full co-operation and support. I would also like to congratulate former Chairman, the Permanent Representative of Romania, Ambassador Simona-Mirela Miculescu for the way she conducted the work of this committee during the 66th session.

Mr. Chairman,

The United Nations Scientific Committee on Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR) is the only Scientific Committee in the UN system, and we acknowledge the continued high quality work of the Committee (UNSCEAR) as reflected in its report to the 67th General Assembly.

Mr. Chairman,

A few years ago, UNSCEAR had initiated a new programme of work. Foremost among its deliberations were those related to the issue of attribution of health effects to radiation, and understanding of the uncertainties in the risk assessment for cancer due to exposure to ionizing radiation. India notes with satisfaction the progress made towards the finalization of the scientific annexes on these two very important topics.

The other important issue is that of discharges during nuclear electricity generation. The intended constitution of an expert group to collect and compile data from different countries and its analysis, is a step in the right direction.

Mr. Chairman,

The last decade has witnessed a revival of global interest in nuclear energy. India considers nuclear energy as an essential energy source.

The most unfortunate accident at the Fukushima-Daiichi NPP in March 2011, has once again raised concerns about nuclear safety, which must be addressed to restore public confidence that nuclear energy would be pursued conforming to the highest international standards. It is, therefore, essential to critically analyze the events of Fukushima, including subsequent data on releases of radioactive elements, and exposure to workers and general public using time honoured scientific methodology of UNSCEAR to allay public fears. It is heartening to note that the Scientific Committee has begun this exercise in right earnest.
India has also provided data, based on its independent measurements, for this purpose.

The Fukushima accident has in a way diverted the Committee’s attention from its original plan of work envisaged and approved 2 years ago. It has also strained its budgetary resources, though many countries have offered expert services free of cost to the Committee. It is, therefore, important to strengthen the Committee’s resources to complete these assessments. Since there are several bodies in the UN system which are actively involved in assessment of the aftermath of the Fukushima accident, an overlap in data collection and analyses is inevitable. There is therefore an urgent need for well thought out coordination among different UN agencies.

Mr. Chairman,

The two scientific annexes to the report to the UNGA which Member States, the scientific community, policy makers, regulators and the international legal community are eagerly looking forward to, are on attributability of health effects radiation, especially at low doses, and uncertainties in risk estimation. From the summary of discussions on attributability provided in UNSCEAR’s report to the 67th session of the UNGA, it is clear that only tissue injury like deterministic effects can be attributed to acute radiation exposure of high doses.

As a Committee of the world’s leading experts in various aspects of radiation biology, physics, epidemiology and other related disciplines of science, it is imperative that the Committee addresses the question of mechanism of radiation action at low doses and dose rates. The Committee should periodically review developments in basic sciences and assess their impact on risk assessments or in terms of causal relationship. Such reports, when published for public information, would do a great service to the scientific community.

Mr. Chairman,

The Chernobyl and Fukushima accidents have raised the issue of radiation effects in children. The world is also witnessing increased exposure of children during medical procedures. It is satisfying to note that the committee will be undertaking the assessment of radiation effects in children as a part of its ongoing programme of work.

Collection of data on medical exposure is one of the most difficult tasks, as it is apprehended that in most countries information may not be easily available.
UNSCEAR has to, therefore, join hands with IAEA, WHO and national health authorities to obtain this information through a global medical exposure survey. The data on radiation workers may be relatively less difficult to obtain. India assures its full cooperation in facilitating collection of this data.

A major source of the UNSCEAR’s risk estimates are the epidemiological studies. There are very few studies on human populations exposed to very low level chronic radiation. Epidemiological and genetic studies carried out in India in the population living in high level natural radiation areas of Kerala is one of them. Indian studies indicate no significant increase in the incidence of cancer. Further, recently published Indian studies on incidence of congenital malformation in over 140,000 new born and case control study on cleft lip and mental retardation do not indicate the association of high natural radiation level with Down’s syndrome or other malformations detectable at birth. It is heartening to note that UNSCEAR has initiated the preparation of a scientific document on the epidemiological studies on low level chronic radiation exposures from natural as well as artificial sources of radiation. It goes without saying that these studies will have significant implications for addressing public concerns.

UNSCEAR’s future programme includes some of the issues mentioned by me hereinabove. In addition, it is noteworthy that it will continue work on internal emitters and public information.

Mr. Chairman,

As in preceding years, India is happy to co-sponsor the resolution proposed by Germany on the subject of Effects of Atomic Radiation.

Mr. Chairman,

I would like to conclude by reiterating that India will continue to contribute in every manner possible to the work of UNSCEAR.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Madame President,

At the outset, allow me to extend our sincere felicitations to you on your election as Chair of the 2012 United Nations Pledging Conference. We wish you all success and hope that under your stewardship the Pledging Conference would achieve even greater results.

Madame President

At the Rio+20 Summit on Sustainable Development held just a few months ago, our Heads of State and Government had recognised eradication of poverty as the greatest global challenge and while outlining “the future we want” suggested to us the ways and means to address such challenges.

Any stasis in resource mobilisation or a decline in funding to the development activities of the UN poses a threat to the viability of operational activities and severely circumscribes its ability to work at the country level.

As a developing country, while India has its own plate full of developmental challenges to be addressed, even then, we have always attempted to contribute to increasing the availability of core resources for development activities of the United Nations system.

In keeping with this long-standing tradition, I now have the honour to announce India’s pledges of contributions for operational activities of development for the year 2013.

This list is not exhaustive and we shall be undertaking further commitments to other entities in due course of time.

1. United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) USD 4,500,000
2. United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) USD 900,000
3. United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) USD 500,000
4. United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) USD 100,000
5. World Food Programme (WFP) USD 1,920,000 (Biennium 2013-2014)
6. UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) USD 1,000,000
7. United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC)  USD 300,000
8. United Nations Human Settlements Programme USD 100,000 (UN-HABITAT)
9. Voluntary Fund for Technical Co-operation  USD 100,000
10. Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery  USD 25,000 (VTFCFS)
11. Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Torture (VTFVT)  USD 25,000
12. UN Volunteers  USD 15,000

In addition, we also have a standing 5 year commitment of USD 5 million towards UN Women, of which, USD 2 million has already been contributed so far. I thank you, Madame President.
717. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative of India to UN (in his capacity as President of Security Council) at the Memorial Service in honour of the United Nations personnel who have lost their lives while serving the Organisation from 1 November 2011 to 31 August 2012 (Delivered on 14 November at the United Nations).

H.E. Mr. Ban ki-moon, Secretary General of the United Nations & Madame Ban,
H.E. Mr. Vuk Jeremic, President of the General Assembly, & Mrs Jeremic, Excellencies, colleagues and members of the larger UN fraternity, & most importantly, families of those who have lost their lives defending the cause of the United Nations,

On behalf of my colleagues at the United Nations Security Council, allow me to first salute all the 29 United Nations personnel - civilian, military and police- whom we remember today- for having made the supreme sacrifice in the line of duty- martyrs to the cause of peace.

No cause is greater than the belief and conviction, which our 29 brethren stood for, and laid down their lives for - the cause of global peace, espoused by this cradle of multilateralism - the United Nations.

They were out there performing their official duties, a responsibility that we, member states had mandated them to do, either in the pursuit of peace keeping, peace building or at times, even promoting development in inhospitable terrains- all behind the hallowed blue flag of the United Nations- and yet they had to make that supreme sacrifice.

It is therefore, incumbent that we all come together with the highest sense of respect and gratitude because no ceremony or parade, no hug or handshake is enough to truly honour the sacrifice they have made in the line of duty. We must commit today to ourselves, to do more in serving them and their families, as they served the cause of the UN.

Today’s solemn moment also reinforces the challenges of the high risk environment in which UN personnel are increasingly called upon to perform their assignments. Even though continuous enhancements to staff security, safety systems, emergency preparedness and risk mitigation are being made, the UN still continues to face extremely tragic losses of its own personnel in the line of duty.

It is therefore imperative that the safety and security of UN personnel - civilian and uniformed- must be accorded the top most priority for all involved: the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Secretariat. And all three must work closely with host countries, who bear the primary responsibility for safety and security, to ensure that all measures are in place so that any avoidable casualty can be eliminated. Another thought that I would like to flag for the consideration of this august assembly today is that we must look at building systems, whereby families of those who have laid down their lives in the line of duty, are tended to and well looked after collectively by all of us, including the UN system.

Am reminded of a quote from Francis Quarles in this regard and I quote, “Our God and soldiers we alike adore even at the brink of danger; not before: After deliverance, both alike requited, Our God’s forgotten, and our soldiers slighted”.

Let us today resolve to ensure that this should never happen as I sure that this will not happen.

Amongst the list of 29 brethren whom we remember today, are also two soldiers from my country, Naik Krishan Kumar and Lance Dafadar Ravinder Poonia, and in my national capacity I would like to place on record that their courage and dedication to the cause that they laid their lives for, would never ever be forgotten. While their families have been unable to join us today, allow me to promise the full support of the Indian Government towards any assistance that they may ever require. We stand together with them to honour their commitment to their ultimate sacrifice in the service of peace.

And before I conclude, I would like to complement the UN Secretary General H.E. Mr. Ban ki-moon, for his initiative to make the memorial service an annual event in New York. It not only provides us with an opportunity to remember our fallen colleagues, but also to draw inspiration from their remarkable dedication to work even harder for the collective cause envisaged in the United Nations charter: to keep peace and to promote better standards of life in larger freedom.

For let us always remember that: A UN soldier does not fight because he hates the enemy in front of him, he fights to keep the peace, for that is the only cause he loves and leaves behind!

Thank You.
Mr President,

1. I would like, first of all, to congratulate you, on behalf of the members of the Security Council, on your election as President of the General Assembly.

2. It is for me an honour, as President of the Security Council for the month of November, to introduce the annual report of the Security Council. The presentation of this report is more than a regular reporting exercise pursuant to the UN Charter. The report underscores the importance of the relationship of both principal organs of the United Nations, and provides an excellent opportunity to debate and exchange views with the general membership on the report on the work of the Council. I’m therefore grateful to you, Mr. President to have arranged this meeting for the consideration of the Security Council’s annual report.

Mr President,

3. The report covers the period from August 2011 to July 2012. The introduction to the report was prepared by the delegation of Colombia, which held the presidency in July 2012. I wish to thank Ambassador Nestor Osorio and his team for their efforts in preparing the introduction on which I call your attention as it gives a helpful overview on the different activities under the responsibility of the Council during the reporting period. Allow me also to thank the Secretariat, which prepared the other parts of the report that you have now before you.

4. I would also like to highlight the monthly assessments by each presidency which are mentioned in the report. They contain information, on a monthly basis, on the most relevant activities carried out by the Council on each item of its agenda, thus adding to the overall comprehension of the report. This is an important exercise regularly undertaken on the responsibility of each Presidency aimed at informing the wider membership on the work of the Council and on which I would like to call your attention as well.

Mr President,

5. During the reporting period, the Council adopted 60 resolutions and 25 presidential statements, and issued 83 statements to the press. The Council held 222 formal meetings, of which 205 were public meetings. Open meetings, including open debates, increase transparency in the work of the Council and allow for an enhanced participation by the wider membership and the international community.
6. Presidencies of the Council and of the General Assembly continued throughout this year to meet regularly, and monthly briefings by the Presidents of the Council to the wider membership on the Council’s work continued to be held. Meetings with 2 troop contributors have also taken place as a regular practice, in particular prior to any decision with impact on UN peacekeeping mandates, as a way to enable collecting relevant inputs.

7. These practices represent useful steps to promote a better dialogue with the general membership on the work of the Council and we encourage delegations to make use of these opportunities to increasingly ensure such interaction. The Council continued its implementation of Note S/2010/507 on working methods and sought to reform its working methods further wherever possible, including by better planning and spreading out its workload, ensuring reporting requirements were fit for purpose, the more efficient use of conference resources and more interactive exchanges among Council members. Presidencies have promoted useful practices aiming at increasing efficiency and expediency, such as streamline introductions made by the presidency and video conferences in open briefings or debates to provide updates from the field.

8. Council members have agreed to reduce the use of speakers’ lists and better use Other Matters to discuss issues of concern. Informal interactive dialogues were also held regularly as a useful consultation practice.

9. During the period of the report many of the activities of the Council were centered, as in previous years, on situations in Africa, including Sudan (Darfur), South Sudan, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, Somalia, the question of piracy off the coast of Somalia and in the Gulf of Guinea. The two missions conducted by the Council this year were to Haiti in February 2012 and West Africa (Cote d’Ivoire, Liberia, and Sierra Leone) in May 2012. The Council also held a consultative meeting with the African Union Peace and Security Council in New York in June 2012.

10. The Security Council closely followed the unresolved disputes between Sudan and South Sudan after the latter’s independence in July 2011. After the resumption of fighting on the border, it adopted resolution 2046 in May 2012 to endorse the AU roadmap and demand that parties achieve a negotiated solution for all post-secession unresolved issues in a period of three months. The Council also continued to closely follow the implementation of resolution 2046 and remained seized of the ongoing negotiations between Sudan and South Sudan to resolve the outstanding CPA issues under the auspices of the AUHIP.

11. On Somalia, the Security Council’s strong support to the transition process was instrumental in bringing about the most representative Somali leadership in decades. The joint African Union-UN technical assessment mission resulted in a revised concept of operations for AMISOM, which contributed to a significant improvement in the security situation across the country.

12. The Council considered the events in various countries on its agenda prior to, during and after elections that took place during the period under review.

13. Following developments in Libya and taking note of the Declaration of Liberation, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2016 (2011) on 27 October 2011, reiterating the need for the transitional period to be underpinned by a commitment to democracy and respect for human rights, and terminating the mandates regarding the protection of civilians and the no-fly zone as stipulated in resolution 1973 (2011).

14. The Security Council reacted repeatedly with concern to the worsening security and humanitarian situation in Eastern DRC due to the violence caused by the M23 and all armed groups.

15. Following the deterioration of the security situation in Mali with the 20 March 2012 military coup and the Northern part of the country being occupied by armed rebel and terrorist groups, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2056 (2012) on 5 July to set a comprehensive path to solve all aspects of the crisis. The Security Council also requested the elaboration and implementation of a United Nations integrated strategy for the Sahel.

16. Reiterating its strong condemnation of the 12 April 2012 military coup that occurred in Guinea-Bissau, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2048 (2012) on 18 May, demanding the restoration of and respect for the constitutional order.

17. Developments in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, as well as the ongoing effects of the "Arab Spring", remained prominent on the Council’s agenda.

18. The Council held monthly briefings and consultations on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, and quarterly open debates on the issue. The members expressed concern at the continuing stalemate on the Middle East peace process and urged negotiated settlement of all issues. The Council also heard briefings from the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the OCHA on the human rights and humanitarian situation in the occupied Palestinian territory.

19. The Council closely followed developments in Syria, Yemen, Iraq and Lebanon. One of the main issues considered by the Council was the application of Palestine for membership in the United Nations.

20. Following the adoption of various press statements in 2011, the Council in April 2012 unanimously adopted resolution 2042 (2012), authorizing an advance team to monitor the ceasefire in Syria, and resolution 2043 (2012) establishing the United Nations Supervision Mission in Syria (UNSMIS) to monitor and support the implementation of the six-point proposal of the Joint Special Envoy of the United Nations and the League of Arab States, Kofi Annan. 4

21. With respect to the situation in Yemen, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 2051 (2012), expressing support to President Hadi and the Government of National Unity of Yemen to move the transition process forward, and encouraging the international community to provide active and increasing support to help the Yemeni government meet the forthcoming political, security, economic and humanitarian challenges.

22. The Council also continued to monitor developments in Afghanistan, as well as other counties in the Asian region, including the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Myanmar and Timor-Leste.

23. In Europe, the Security Council followed up on its long-standing interest in exploring means and ways to support Bosnia and Herzegovina in its institutionalisation process; as well encouraging the progress of negotiations in Cyprus; and monitoring the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) and pacific settlement of differences through the Belgrade-Pristina Dialogue.

25. The issue of the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction also figured prominently on the agenda.

26. The Council also considered issues concerning international tribunals for Rwanda and former Yugoslavia, and heard reports from the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court and the President of the International Court of Justice.

27. Other priorities of the Council’s work were the thematic, general and crosscutting issues. Debates and consultations were held on Peace and security in Africa, support for the United Nations Office in West Africa (UNOWA) and the United Nations Regional Office for Central Africa (UNOCA).

28. The Council commended and promoted cooperation with sub-regional organizations and in particular with the African Union via resolution 2033 (2012), which encourages the enhancement of the relationship.

29. The issues of children and armed conflict, women and peace and security, the protection of civilians and post-conflict peacebuilding also figured on the Council’s agenda, with several important debates being held during the period. In August 2011, after an open debate on peacekeeping operations, the Council adopted a presidential statement, which, inter alia, sought to deepen the existing cooperation among the Council, the Secretariat and the troop and police contributing countries. During the reporting period, the Security Council also approved 25 resolutions extending the mandates of various peacekeeping and monitoring missions. In July 2012, the Council held an open debate on “Post-conflict peacebuilding” to consider the Annual Report 5 of the Peacebuilding Commission, which was followed by an interactive dialogue focused on how to meet the Peacebuilding Commission’s full potential and bring all partners together around common strategies.

30. The Council remained seized of the threat posed by terrorism and heard regular briefings from the Chairs of the 1267/1989, 1373, 1540 Committees. In various press statements, the Security Council strongly condemned the terrorist acts that occurred in different locations between August 2011 and July 2012.

Mr President

31. I could go on and on in referring to matters that were under consideration by the Council during this reporting period. But I should rather listen to you and other member-states. I have, therefore, not mentioned several other issues which find detailed mention in the report and may be referred to.

Mr President

32. The annual report you have before you includes an important number of analytical, descriptive and statistical information on the work of the Council, the preparation of which requires a significant effort both by delegations in the Council and the Secretariat.

33. I hope that member-states will seize this opportunity to discuss the report, and I will be glad to take your suggestions back to my colleagues in the Council. There is always room for improvement, and the Council members will benefit from your comments and suggestions.

Thank you.
719. Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative and Chairman, Counter-terrorism Committee at the Special Meeting of the Counter-terrorism Committee With Member States and International Regional and Sub-regional Organization on ‘Preventing and Suppressing Terrorist Financing’ at United Nations Headquarters on November 20, 2012

H.E. Mr. Jan Eliasson, Deputy Secretary General,
Mr. Bjørn Skogstad Aamo, FATF President,
Mr. Mike Smith, Executive Director, CTED,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I warmly welcome you to the third special meeting of the Counter-Terrorism Committee to take place under the chairmanship of India.

Prevention and suppression of terrorist financing lies at the heart of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and promoting and facilitating its implementation is one of the core mandates of the Committee. The resolution requires States to undertake wide-ranging measures aimed at preventing and suppressing terrorist financing. In order to achieve effective compliance, the Committee has encouraged Member States to be guided by the relevant United Nations international instruments, as well as to use the best practices including recommendations of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

The international financial system, represented by the organisations participating here today, is the first line of defence against terrorist financing. The progress that we have been able to achieve so far would not have been possible without the work that FATF, and the FATF-style regional bodies, as well as other international organizations like UNODC, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, have undertaken in recent years, in addition to assisting Member States in implementing the UN instruments that tackle terrorist financing, such as the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, resolution 1373 (2001), resolution 1267 (1999) and resolution 1989 (2011).

With international community’s concerted efforts spanning over a decade, the use and abuse of the formal banking system is more difficult and more expensive for terrorists than ever before. Despite the progress, terrorists continue to exploit advances in technology and have been able to find ways and means in raising and moving funds. It is therefore, imperative for the Member States and the international community to continue to update and strengthen the legal, regulatory and institutional framework in combating this challenge.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen,

The Committee regularly addresses counter-financing of terrorism issues relevant to the implementation of resolution 1373 (2001) through dialogue with Member States on legal provisions; institutional structures; practical applications; human rights issues; and technical assistance needs. Indeed, CTED, acting on behalf of the Committee, is engaged in numerous initiatives which facilitate the delivery of technical assistance to Member States in these areas. The support and participation of the FATF, FATF style regional bodies and relevant international, regional and sub-regional organizations has been crucial to the success of these initiatives and is very much appreciated by the Committee.

FATF is an important and valued partner of the Committee in our common efforts to deal with terrorist financing. It has a leading global role in developing best practices, and promoting the effective implementation of legal, regulatory and operational measures for combating money laundering and terrorist financing.

The Committee also profoundly values the important contribution and regional perspectives that the FATF style regional bodies bring to bear in assisting Member States in meeting this global challenge. Through their unique local knowledge and expertise, these bodies are often best placed to understand the challenges faced in their region and respond effectively to address them.

The Executive Director, Mr. Mike Smith will elaborate in the first session upon the cooperative relationship with the FATF and the FATF style regional bodies and some of the specific technical assistance initiatives CTED is taking forward in this regard.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen,

The Committee recognises that combating the terrorist financing threat is a complex and highly technical undertaking. It is supportive of all efforts to provide assistance to Member States in implementing the UN instruments that tackle this threat in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights law, refugee law, and humanitarian law.

This meeting is intended to contribute to these efforts and provide a forum for a genuinely interactive discussion on the most pressing challenges we face together in our common effort to tackle terrorist financing. It is an opportunity to exchange views, to deliberate on experiences and importantly to identify effective measures that could address these challenges. It is also an occasion to draw attention to best practices including the revised FATF Recommendations and their relevance for the implementation of resolution 1373 (2001) and the relevant capacity building activities and initiatives in this regard.

But most of all, this meeting represents a call, heard, answered and repeated by the number of organisations and Member States represented here today, to further raise awareness of the threat of terrorist financing, to ensure tackling this threat remains an urgent priority and to further work together with a renewed sense of energy and purpose.

Before I conclude, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Mike Smith, Executive Director, CTED and his team on behalf of the Committee for organizing this meeting. We have a comprehensive agenda ahead of us and a diverse array of speakers from member states as well as international, regional and sub-regional organizations. I would encourage all participants to adhere to the time-schedule which would be helpful in having an interactive discussion.

Thank you.
Mr. President,

At the outset, I would like to express India’s appreciation for scheduling this discussion. I also avail this opportunity to commend the German delegation for coordinating inter-governmental negotiations in an excellent manner that has led us to this annual General Assembly resolution on the “Situation in Afghanistan”.

As we have been doing for the last several years, we are happy to co-sponsor this resolution, which is traditionally adopted by consensus.

Mr. President,

Major international and regional conferences on Afghanistan have been held during the last one year against the backdrop of ongoing security transition. The international community’s has renewed its commitment for peace, security and development in Afghanistan at conferences in Bonn, Chicago and Tokyo and at the regional level in Istanbul and Kabul.

As the Afghan government assumes responsibility for security and governance with the drawdown of the ISAF by end 2014, we welcome the pledges of $16 billion of financial aid through 2015 and to sustain support through 2017 at, or near, levels of the past decade at the Tokyo Conference. At the same time, we are conscious that these figures represent a base-line or minimum requirement for Afghanistan to sustain itself.

The Delhi Investment Summit of June 28 hosted by India was an important endeavour in focussing regional and international attention towards investments in Afghanistan and their potential in providing economic development and stability to Afghanistan during the transition period.

Mr. President,

Amidst the ISAF drawdown and accompanying economic downturn, it is indeed worrisome that the infrastructure of terror is still intact in the region. The Secretary General’s latest report notes that ‘little has changed in the underlying dynamics to mitigate a deep-seated cycle of conflict’. Further, a ‘diminished international presence will have a large financial impact in many areas which, at least in the short term, may even exacerbate predatory behaviour’.

Afghanistan continues to face an existential threat from terrorism, drawing upon ideological, financial and logistical support from beyond its borders. The security situation remains fragile and there has been a sharp increase in the variety, spread and intensity of attacks by the Taliban and their backers. Moreover, cross-border shellings of last few months have caused large-scale disruptions to normal life and have sparked public outrage. The Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) are ill-equipped to repel this challenge without substantial assistance from the international community.

We need concerted action to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al-Qaida, Taliban, Lashkar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups.

As Afghanistan takes forward the task of national reconciliation in accordance with the criteria as laid forth in the Kabul communiqué, we fully support the efforts for regional confidence-building as a critical component of international efforts to support the country.

Regional cooperation and connectivity are critical for Afghanistan’s political and economic progress. The Istanbul ‘Heart of Asia’ process is an important step in this direction. Towards strengthening this cooperation, India has taken the lead in two commercial Confidence Building Measures under the Istanbul process.

We are fully cognizant that the economic viability of Afghanistan depends on its fuller integration into its neighbourhood, so that it can regain its historical role of a land-bridge between South Asia, Central Asia, the Middle East and Eurasia. The development of transport infrastructure and transit arrangements linking Afghanistan to the North, South, East and West, including, through the Chabahar port, would benefit not only Afghanistan but the entire Central Asian region by creating trade, transit and investment linkages.

Mr. President,

Afghanistan and India have had a long shared history going back over millennia. The two countries are natural strategic partners by virtue of geography and a common vision of peace and cooperation in the region.

Our bilateral relationship is extensive, multi-faceted and characterized by high level interaction. President Karzai visited India earlier this month. This visit offered an opportunity to review the entire gamut of bilateral relationship and discuss regional and international issues of mutual interest. During the visit, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh reiterated India’s support to Afghanistan during the crucial period of transition till end 2014 and thereafter.

The implementation of the Strategic Partnership Agreement of October, 2011 between the two countries has already been set in motion with the convening of the first meeting of the Partnership Council on May 1, 2012.
During the last decade, India has pledged up to $2 billion in development and humanitarian assistance. We have managed to carry out some of the most economical and cost-effective projects in Afghanistan. The $500 million assistance announced by Prime Minister of India in May 2011 is being spent from 2012-2015. The projects under consideration will be in line with the projects suggested under the National Priority Programmes of the Government of Afghanistan. The pace and nature of the utilization of the present and future Indian assistance will be determined by the preference, comfort level and absorptive capacity of the Afghan government.

Mr. President,

India remains unwavering in its commitment to assisting the people of Afghanistan in their endeavour to build a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous nation.

We support the good work done by UNAMA. It is important that amidst the cutback in UN foot-print in Afghanistan and reconfiguration of UNAMA due to budgetary constraints, all efforts should be made to avoid adverse impact on its operational effectiveness.

Moving forward, we need to create an enabling environment where the Afghan people could live in peace and security and decide their future themselves, without outside interference, coercion and intimidation. The international community must continue to work with renewed vigour and unity of purpose towards strengthening efforts of the Afghan government in seeking solutions that are inclusive and led by the Afghan people themselves.

Thank you.
Mr. President,

My felicitations to the Executive Director and Under Secretary-General, Madam Michelle Bachelet for her extremely informative statement and our complements for a well analysed report on the administrative, budgetary and financial implications and implementation of the Regional Architecture review plan, which has been placed for consideration before the Second Regular Session of the Executive Board.

Mr. President, when we adopted the Decision 2012/4 at the Annual Session on Regional Architecture Review, earlier this year, there were questions on how the process would evolve and even doubts on the transparency of the whole process.

Let me submit, at the outset, that your comprehensive and detailed report on this subject at this Session, coupled with the briefings which preceded this Session, have allayed concerns of most member states, through an extremely well thought out, consultative and transparent process.

As outlined in the conclusion of your report, the regional architecture process is a change management response to the vision of the UN Women Strategic Plan, which sees UN Women achieve a much greater impact than its constituent entities were previously able to do, in the pursuit of results, in particular at the country level, including results achieved through leveraging the capacities of the United Nations system as a whole.

While my delegation broadly aligns itself with the overarching objective of this exercise, and hopes that by the end of 2013 when you envisage to complete the process, the UN Women entity would certainly be a more dynamic, lean, effective and efficient unit, which would partner with national governments in the pursuit of gender equality and women's empowerment.

We also hope that this transition to the new architecture is carried out with the minimum disruptions to operations of UN Women, particularly at the country level, thereby minimising the one off costs and adverse impact on staff, associated with such changes and incorporates flexibility to allow for adaptations to the plan, if opportunities or unforeseen risks to its viability do arise.

Mr. President, allow me to submit that UN Women’s strategic plan needs to have a specific strategy for the special challenges and opportunities in South Asia, along with a specific identification of corresponding structure of implementation, and that this exercise of the review of regional architecture of UN Women should continue to respond to these priorities. These should also include, active partnerships with national governments of countries in South Asia, especially where there are a large proportion of women populations. It is also our considered submission that the proposed architecture of UN Women should not adversely impact or dismantle the South Asia focus of UN Women, and inadvertently subsume it under an overarching ‘all Asia approach,’ which may not take into account the regional specificities of South Asia.

My delegation therefore would like to submit that in the process of the regional architecture being carried out, it would not be desirable to dilute UN Women’s presence at the proposed multi country office in India.

Given this backdrop, we hope that the regional architecture review would affirm to the red lines drawn by you in Para 52 (b) of your report, and therefore attempt to cause least disruptions to the existing operations of the sub regional office in New Delhi, as you plan to expand the future role and scope of UN Women’s operations in the South Asian region.

Mr. President, representing a country which is home to more than 500 million women, women’s economic and political empowerment has been the cornerstone of our policy making, all along.

More so, when 69% of our total women population (nearly 405 million women) reside in the rural areas alone. It is in this context, that contribution of rural women to our GDP growth and their central role in poverty reduction has been a key guiding factor in the framing of our national policies.

In this regard, allow me to place my Nodal Ministry (the Ministry of Women and Child Development)’s sincerest appreciation for UN Women, for their active partnership and constructive advice in the Working Group for the Twelfth Plan Chapter on Women’s Agency and Empowerment. Your agenda of making ‘gender a lived reality’ finds resonance in the overall policy approach of the Government of India, which has also been outlined in the 12th Five Year Plan of my country.

While economic empowerment of Indian women at the grass roots level, especially through the Self-Help Groups has been a hallmark of India’s success story, the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MNREGA), the world’s largest enabling project at grass roots democracy, has helped engender the REAL political and economic empowerment of women by ensuring that at least one third of its beneficiaries are women. During the extremely successful visit of Madam Bachelet to India in October this year, Madame, you witnessed at first, the fruits of the project, which we have achieved in partnership and with the support of UN Women in Rajasthan, where 65000 women counsellors at the grass roots level, have been trained to provide leadership and vision to their community.
Mr. President, we are happy to note the significant achievements that UN Women has achieved within a short operational span of two years, since its inception, under the dynamic leadership of Madame Bachelet.

As the UN embarks upon the process of the Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QCPR) to shape the overall policy direction for the next four years for the UN Development agenda, you can count on our support to ensure that Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment remains a fundamental pillar which is given due weightage in setting the development agenda. In this regard, we are happy to note the evolving text of the QCPR draft resolution under discussion, especially the emphasis on women’s empowerment as outlined within the Chapter IV on National Capacity Building.

My delegation also calls for a comprehensive resource mobilisation strategy to secure the resources required by UN Women in meeting its global commitments. Let me also re-iterate that as part of our stated commitment of five million US dollars to UN Women’s core predictable funding, India has already contributed two million US dollars to UN Women, so far. We will continue to provide full political and financial support to UN Women and count on the support of others, to do likewise.

Let me conclude, Mr. President, by reaffirming India’s steadfast commitment to all round social, economic and political empowerment of our women, whatever effort and resources, the task might take. It is upto us, members of the Executive Board to ensure that UN Women, under the leadership of Madam Bachelet, is given the necessary authority, mandate and resources to deliver. We assure you that in this journey of yours, India would never be found wanting.

Thank You.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

1. Let me begin by thanking the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for inviting me in my capacity as the President of the Security Council for November to address this meeting to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.

2. The Security Council remains committed to a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on the vision of a region where two democratic States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side in peace within secure and recognized borders. The Security Council also remains committed to seeking a comprehensive resolution of other Arab-Israeli issues and in this regard, recalls its previous relevant resolutions and notes the importance of the Arab Peace Initiative.

3. Throughout the past year, developments in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, remained prominent on the Council's agenda. The Council has remained seized of these issues, and continued to receive monthly briefings on the situation from the Secretary-General's Special Coordinator and the Department of Political Affairs and held regular open debates. The Security Council also discussed these issues at a High Level Meeting, during the month of September 2012 on strengthening of the relationship between the Security Council and the League of Arab States. In the context of recent hostilities affecting the Gaza strip and Israel, the Security Council also held a private meeting on 14 November 2012.

4. The application of Palestine for membership to the United Nations was one of the main issues considered by the Security Council and its Standing Committee on Admission of New Members in the last quarter of the year 2011. The issue remains before the Council following adoption of the report by the Committee on Admission of New Members in November 2011. The Security Council also discussed early this year an invitation extended on behalf of President Mahmoud Abbas and the Palestinian leadership for the Security Council to undertake a visit to the region.

5. Over the course of the year, members of the Council expressed concern at, and many condemned, the steady expansion of Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, terming them as illegal under international law or illegitimate. The members also reiterated their view that such actions undermine peace efforts and the viability of the two-State solution, and stressed the need for respect of international obligations in this regard.
6. Despite several commendable bilateral and multilateral initiatives leading to some notable developments, the Council members regret to note that the direct talks between the parties have not resumed. The members have repeatedly stressed the importance of resumption of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, and encouraged both sides to keep direct contact so as to maintain positive momentum towards resumption of dialogue and negotiations.

7. Council members continue to view the situation in Gaza with concern and repeat their calls for the full implementation of Security Council resolutions 1850 and 1860, and in that context they stress the need for a sustained and regular flow of goods and people to Gaza, an end to the smuggling of weapons and rockets, as well as unimpeded provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance throughout Gaza. The Council members also continue to express concern at, and many condemned, the firing of rockets from Gaza into southern Israel. The Council, in a press statement on 21 November, welcomed the ceasefire agreement reached in relation to the Gaza Strip in order to bring about a sustainable and durable cessation of hostilities affecting the Gaza Strip and Israel and expressed their continued support for the ongoing international efforts to consolidate the agreement. The members of the Security Council also deplored the loss of civilian lives resulting from the recent escalation.

8. Council members have noted the results of the most recent Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting on 23 September 2012. In the meeting, the donors based on reports and recommendations from the parties, the UN, the World Bank, the IMF and the Quartet Representative, reconfirmed their assessment that the institutions of the Palestinian Authority are above the threshold of a functioning State. Council members have welcomed this positive appraisal, and stressed the need for continued strengthening of Palestinian institutions. Council members are also cognizant of the importance of continuing financial support to the Palestinian Authority, in view of its critical financial situation.

9. The past year continued to witness historical developments in the Middle East. The momentous changes across the region have emphasized even further the urgency of realizing a peace agreement that ends the Arab-Israeli conflict, including the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and resolves all claims. The Security Council, has thus called upon Palestinians and Israelis to seize the opportunity to reach a peaceful and final settlement.

10. The Security Council expresses the hope that urgent efforts will be made, based on UN Security Council Resolutions 242, 338, 1397, 1515, 1850, the Madrid principles including land for peace, the Roadmap, and the agreements previously reached between the parties, towards a comprehensive resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict. Such a solution should end the occupation that began in 1967 and result in the emergence of an independent, democratic, contiguous and viable Palestinian State, living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its neighbours.
11. The Security Council has recognized the key role of the Quartet in the efforts to re-launch the Middle East Peace Process and the importance of the Arab Peace Initiative as well. Council members have expressed their full support for the continued efforts of the Quartet and its statements, including that of 23 September 2011.

12. The Council urges the parties to work constructively with the Quartet towards this endeavor, and stresses that unilateral actions by either party cannot prejudge the outcome of negotiations and will not be recognized by the international community.

13. The Security Council remains fully committed to a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East based on the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security with mutually agreed and recognized borders. Council members have underscored that a peace agreement between Israelis and Palestinians and the final settlement of all core issues can only be achieved through direct negotiations. Council Members have also reiterated their support for an agreed, just and fair solution to the refugee issue. The Security Council remains committed to upholding its duties and supporting a credible negotiations process between the parties, aimed at the early conclusion of a peace agreement.

14. Finally, the Security Council commends the laudable efforts of humanitarian organizations and agencies on the ground, particularly those of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and its staff. The Council encourages all members of the international community to support the Agency with much needed financial contributions at this critical time.

15. In view of the critical situation on the ground and of the need for progress to be made in the political process, the Security Council will remain seized of the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, and will continue to consider the issue on a regular basis and to act to uphold its responsibilities under the Charter and consistent with the relevant Security Council resolutions on the matter.

16. In conclusion, allow me to assure all Member States of the commitment of the Security Council to the ultimate goal of achieving a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East and to the realization of the legitimate and inalienable rights of the Palestinian people for an independent and democratic State.

I thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President,

At the outset, please allow me to express our appreciation to you for convening this discussion on the Question of Palestine at the General Assembly. I also would like to thank the President of Palestine, H. E. Mahmoud Abbas, for his statement yesterday.

2. I would like to congratulate the leadership and people of Palestine on the upgradation of Palestine’s status in the General Assembly to a non-member observer state. While we have long supported the aspirations of the Palestinian people and leadership for the full membership to the United Nations, the vote yesterday in the General Assembly is an important milestone towards that goal.

3. Mr. President, the Arab world has been undergoing unprecedented transformation during the last two years. Democratic aspirations of people in several countries are being addressed through national political processes. It is, however, regrettable that the Palestinian question and the related Arab-Israeli issues have largely remained unaddressed and unresolved. Also, the Palestinian application for full membership of the United Nations submitted more than a year ago has not evinced any positive action from the Security Council, despite overwhelming support from the UN member-states.

4. For more than two years now, there have been no direct talks between Israel and Palestine. Meanwhile, the situation in the occupied Palestinian territories has been deteriorating due to settlement activities in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. These activities are creating new realities on the ground, and threaten the very premise of a two-state solution. Settlements, roadblocks and the related infrastructure of occupation have also exacerbated the humanitarian problems of the Palestinian people and are affecting adversely the normal functioning of Palestinian state institutions. The Palestinian Authority is also facing a severe financial crisis that could erode the significant progress made by the Palestinian Authority in building state institutions.

5. The blockade of Gaza has entered its sixth year, and is causing severe hardship to the population. The humanitarian situation continues to deteriorate, and essential services, economic activities and infrastructure development have been disrupted. We strongly condemn the violence and deeply regret the loss of human lives during the recent hostilities. We hope both the parties will uphold the ceasefire agreement and implement its provisions in good faith.
6. Mr. President, we hope that the vote in the General Assembly yesterday will pave the way for the resumption of serious, direct talks between the Palestinians and the Israelis. India has a long history of solidarity with the Palestinian people. India was the first non-Arab country to recognize the state of Palestine nearly 25 years back. In his message to the friendly people of Palestine on the occasion of the International Day of Solidarity, our Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh has reiterated India’s unwavering support for the Palestinian People’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and internationally recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel as endorsed in the Arab Peace Initiative, Quartet Road Map and relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions.

7. In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to reiterate India’s continued support for the Palestinian cause.

I thank you.

Mr. Chairman, thank you very much. Mr. Chairman, first of all please allow me to congratulate you on assuming the Chair of the 5th Committee. I am speaking here for the first time under your Chairmanship and I am particularly delighted to see you there. Let me also assure you that when we come at the crunch time of the 5th Committee you shall have our constructive and very strong support. I wish you all the very best on our behalf.

Mr. Chairman, I also apologize to the interpreters as I intend to deviate from, although well-crafted statement, actually to address what I have been hearing in the last hour or so.

Obviously I want to begin by thanking the Missions of Canada and Indonesia for their outstanding work in bringing us to the place where we are today on the Civilian Capacity processes. Also want to note the Secretary General’s Report and the ACABQ’s views and I am very delighted to see the current Vice-Chair and the soon to be Chairman of the ACABQ here. Thank you very much Carlos and I wish you all the best in your endeavours too.

Mr. Chairman, I am, of course, very happy to see Special Advisor Sarah Cliff herself here and briefing the 5th Committee. She has been the pivot of all the work which has gone on here along with her team and having the briefing directly from her and giving us an opportunity to interact with her is of a particular importance.

Let me say another thing right at the outset. His Excellency the Permanent Representative of Pakistan spoke just before me and addressed several issues on the Civilian Capacity Report and the way he believes and his delegation believes things should go forward. I strongly agree with all what he had said especially on the linkages with the peacekeeping and peacebuilding processes and the way the budgetary and financial mechanisms of the Civilian Capacity processes should unfold here at the United Nations. We, of course, align ourselves with the statement delivered on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman, you know governance, basic services, public administration – these are some of the formidable challenges that countries face when in transition from conflict to the lasting peace. Support to national Civilian Capacities in post-conflict situation is obviously critical and the United Nations must engage itself in this process. My delegation has strongly supported the efforts of the United Nations and Ms. Cliff in this regard and we will continue to be strongly there for them and with them in this matter. However, let me repeat what as I mentioned to you the Permanent Representative of Pakistan had mentioned the Civilian Capacity is a critical element but within the overarching framework of peacekeeping and peacebuilding. Their proposal, therefore, cannot be an alternative to peacekeeping or in any way tend to dilute from the budgetary resources and other resources which are available for peacekeeping which is not only the flagship activity of the United Nations but certainly its most critical activity in the service of international peace and security.

Mr. Chairman, I am very glad to see that this process has finally come really into the realm of inter-governmentalness and at the 5th Committee which is the principal deliberative organ for trying to take these particular things forward in an inter-governmental setting.

My delegation strongly believes that this is the way things should go forward. We also believe that the vibrant deliberation in C-34 is particularly critical and will make the outcomes on Civilian Capacity initiative inclusive and more productive. I think I also need to highlight that budgetary, personnel and recruitment aspects of the United Nations approved by the General Assembly need to be adhered to strictly in all circumstances. Transparency, fairness, judicious deployment of scarce resources are priorities, these shall certainly have overriding priorities. I need to use this opportunity to mention that this is particularly important that we work through regular processes and regular budgets. Voluntary fundings, etc. have kick-started many things but it needs to move on to the regular scale and which is the way of doing things here; which is the norm here at the UN which has stood us in very good stead over the past 60 years. I also hear the words flexibility, no bureaucracy, no rigidity, these are very good words and we all subscribe to them but I think we have very good reasons why we have processes and it is particularly important that the processes are neither short circuited nor by-passed. That the processes need to be improved is a matter on which you couldn’t have a stronger voice than mine and you Mr. Chairman and I stand very strongly for the reforms of the United Nations especially its critical organ the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Chairman, let me also allow to elaborate on a few other specific aspects. Now that we are in an inter-governmental setting it is particularly important that the Civilian Capacity initiative moves from these conceptual and thematic stages to the programmatic domain and details are provided to the member states. This, I believe, would allow us to move in a much more inclusive manner with the complete involvement of Member States of the United Nations and also take care of this entire aspect which has so far been the hallmark of most of the issues here which is episodic sharing of information. Of course a great deal of efforts has been made by Ms. Cliff and her team to reach out to countries but it is also useful and particularly important that this is done across the board in what kind of setting here in an inter-governmental and of course in addition to all the individual efforts which are much appreciated and we are particularly fortunate that we have had the opportunity of a very strong interaction with her on this matter including her having visited my country which has been very good. I think I also need to highlight especially since we are here in the 5th Committee that the Civilian Capacity initiative needs a lot organizational address, it needs to be anchored somewhere in the UN that is particularly important. That is what allows for proper processes. Processes can be improved as I said and for proper accountability in the General Assembly and in the United Nations in general. It also allows for due diligence and it allows us to use the various processes that we have the tools at our command to ensure that, you know, the proper verification is done including the issues such as use of NGOs, to minimize reputational risks for this organization, the implications for using budgetary resources, etc. And of course, it goes without saying that duplications under all circumstances should be avoided. It is not only question of efficiency but we also live in a time when financial and other resources are scarce and we need to optimize their utilization here. I also want to make another point and Ms. Sarah referred to in a briefing – the strong outreach to the countries in the South is much appreciated, really much appreciated. I think many of our countries have expertise which is of particular relevance and use and I can say at least on behalf of my country that we have been in the process of making whatever expertise we have available to fellow Member States of the United Nations who may wish to partner with us and in terms of South-South Cooperation and various other fora which would continue to do so strongly through your initiative Ms. Cliff and the Civilian Capacity initiative and all other particular fora. It is my considered view that the Member States in their own domain, i.e. in their own government system have the best of the expertise that we can be utilized and leveraged that would be the top priority and the highest priority in terms of the reach out to where you can source these particular Civilian Capacities. I have spoken I think longer than what I should have but I want to say that I have done so and also I am present here because that we take this initiative to be not just very serious but very important. We consider this as an initiative that has far reaching implications and important and very significant ones. For the way we as Member State as well as the United Nations is there to assist countries within their own national priorities and in keeping with their national ownership priorities at times of post-conflicts.

I want to end by reiterating our very strong support for the initiative of the United Nations and Ms. Cliff and her team.

Mr. Chairman, thank you very much.
H.E. Mr. Anders Fogh Rasmussen, NATO Secretary General

Excellencies,

Ladies and gentlemen,

It is both a singular honour and privilege for me to address NATO and Ambassadors from the Partnership for Peace countries within the framework of the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council. I would like to thank you Mr. Secretary General for the kind invitation and I recall the briefing by Ambassador Gábor Iklody, Assistant Secretary General to the Counter-Terrorism Committee last September.

I avail this opportunity to present before you some thoughts in my personal capacity as Chair of the Counter Terrorism Committee.

Excellencies, Ladies and gentlemen,

Terrorism today constitutes the most pressing challenge to international peace and security. It is a global threat that recognizes no border, nationality, ethnicity or religion. There is hardly any region of the world that has not been scarred by terrorism. The situation is further compounded with the increasing ability of terrorist to inflict catastrophic damage to critical infrastructure.

Terrorists are not only globalized, but are waging an asymmetric warfare against the international community. Terrorists have made borders irrelevant and are adept in exploiting advances in technology. They recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others. Statistics would indicate that the share of terrorism in global violence is at an all-time high.

We all have a vital interest in battling this horrendous scourge. Effectively combating terrorism requires necessary political will of member states and greater international and regional cooperation.

Excellencies, Ladies and gentlemen,

The UN’s convening power is unparalleled and it has been in the forefront of global effort in combating terrorism. Despite gaps, the normative framework agreed at the UN is fairly comprehensive and comprise of UN conventions on terrorism and protocols, the Security Council resolutions 1373 (2001), 1624 (2005) and subsequent resolutions and the universally agreed Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. However, considerable ground is yet to be covered when it comes to implementation.

Terrorism has to be confronted with resolute determination, not only by governments, but also by societies at large. The preventive aspect needs much greater attention than ever before. Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) as well as the universally agreed Global Counter Terrorism Strategy recognize that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone.

Meeting violence with greater violence can never provide a lasting solution. I come from the land of Mahatma Gandhi. He led what is now a nation of over a billion people to freedom through non-violence. The recent developments in West Asia and North Africa demonstrate that peaceful and non-violent mobilization of a population can be a more effective instrument of social change than violence.

We need a holistic zero-tolerance approach towards terrorism anchored in human rights and rule of law. We also need greater outreach and, enhanced cooperation, coherence and coordination of international counter-terrorism efforts as well as amongst various UN entities including the CTED, UNODC and the CTITF Office.

During the last two years, the Counter-Terrorism Committee, which I Chair, has organized three Special Meetings with participation of the wider UN membership and international regional and sub-regional organizations. The Committee organized a Special Meeting in New York last month focusing on prevention and suppression of terrorist financing with participation of the expert bodies - FATF, FATF Style Regional Bodies (FSRBs), IMF and the World Bank. The Meeting was immensely helpful in putting a spotlight on the issue of terrorist financing, which lies at the heart of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001). The Meeting built upon the success of the two Special Meetings held last year - the Strasbourg meeting which focussed on the prevention of terrorism and the commemorative meeting at in New York on the tenth anniversary of adoption of UNSCR 1373 (2001) where the Committee introduced a substantive and qualitative higher benchmark of “zero tolerance” in the counter-terrorism lexicon.

The Committee, through CTED, has also been constantly improving its analytical tools to monitor and assess the progress in implementation of resolutions 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) around the world. The Committee issued updated global surveys of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) last year.

The Committee has also agreed earlier this year to a revised set of assessment tools including the Overview of Implementation Assessment (OIA) and the Detailed Implementation Survey (DIS), which are designed to provide greater objectivity to the Committee’s stocktaking process of identifying States’ strengths and challenges in countering terrorism worldwide.

Excellencies, Ladies and gentlemen,

Notwithstanding the progress achieved so far, the efforts of the international community continue to face many challenges. Foremost is the need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists to gain succour and even legitimacy. Progress under mutual legal assistance and extradition cases is still sketchy and is yet to be fully mainstreamed as part of regional and international counter-terrorism efforts. We need to expand the normative framework and strengthen enforcement efforts to destroy safe havens for terrorists, their financial flows and their support networks.

The success in the fight against terrorism goes hand-in-hand with progress in strengthening counter-terrorism cooperation and exchange of information at the international, regional and sub-regional level. A large number of terrorist plots can be neutralized by international cooperation. The sharing of information is of fundamental importance. The mechanisms that have been developed to pool the resources and the knowledge of the international community needs to be augmented and made more effective.

We have witnessed important progress at the international and regional levels including the recently established Global Counter Terrorism Forum (GCTF). We would need a scaling up of some of the concrete ideas emerging from these processes. In these times of austerity, it becomes imperative to fully coordinate the international efforts and avoid duplication of efforts leading to diversion of resources, which probably could be better used elsewhere.

NATO remains an important partner for the CTC/CTED in our common efforts to deal with the terrorist threat. Further, with its considerable expertise and the resources that NATO has dedicated in confronting the cross-cutting and ever evolving terrorist threat, it stands well-placed in sharing its valuable experience with CTC/CTED and the UN. We need to consider expanding synergies in areas of capacity-building, training and technical assistance.

I am glad that the CTC/CTED and NATO have a healthy interaction and this need to be strengthened further.

Before I conclude, I would like to echo the UNSG’s clarion call: “we must take collective and concerted action to prevent terrorism from posing an existential threat to human kind”.

Thank you

727. Opening remarks by Ambassador Manjeev Sing Puri, Acting Permanent Representative, as the Chair of the 13th Plenary Session of the Contact Group on Piracy Off the Coast of Somalia at UN Headquarters in New York on December 11, 2012.

Excellencies and Dear Colleagues,

It is a privilege and honour for me to chair the 13th Plenary Session of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia today on behalf of India.

Maritime piracy off the coast of Somalia and the humanitarian plight of hostages held by pirates remain a major cause of concern for India. Much of India’s trade passes through the Gulf of Aden, estimated at over US $ 160 billion annually. Indians constitute 7% of the world’s seafarers and a consequence of piracy has been the tremendous human cost that these seafarers have had to pay.

Given the adverse impact of acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea has on maritime trade, seafarers and security, India attaches high priority to combating piracy, including in waters off the coast of Somalia. India has actively supported international efforts at the operational level, including through the participation in anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since 2008 and has also deployed its ships in the Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. Operations by the Indian Navy have helped neutralize several attempts of piracy.

While we will continue with counter-piracy operations, there is also an urgent need for the international community to address the serious problem of seafarers being taken as hostages and consequent humanitarian problems faced by them and their families. This would require active cooperation in the sharing of information for prosecution of pirates as well as in efforts to achieve an early release of seafarers that are held hostage by pirates. 2 During the course of last year there has been remarkable political progress in Somalia. This is a historic opportunity that must be seized for the full restoration of peace and stability in Somalia after two-decade long conflict. We hope that Somalia will continue to accord a high priority to counter-piracy.

There has been a welcome decline in the number of successful piracy attacks in 2012 compared to the previous years. As noted in various reports, the Piracy activity off the coast of Somalia has seen a significant drop this year. This is largely due to successful international counter-piracy efforts, including improving compliance with BMP and security measures, and continued counter-piracy naval action. However, as of 22 August 2012, the Somali pirates still held 11 ships and 188 hostages, including 42 Indian seafarers. The situation, therefore, continues to be fragile and the gains made against piracy could easily be reversed. We therefore, cannot afford to let our guard down at this stage or be complacent.

During its Presidency of the UN Security Council during November 2012, India organised an open debate of the Council on the issue of Piracy on 19 November. The Council adopted a significant Presidential Statement which expressed serious concern at the continuing violence used by pirates against seafarers and stressed the need for greater cooperation among all stakeholders for liberation of hostages and seafarers.

The UN Deputy Secretary General told the Council that three challenges required our immediate attention – better information sharing and trust building among countries and agencies involved in counter piracy efforts; stronger capacity to prosecute piracy-related cases; and the establishment of a framework governing the use of privately contracted armed security personnel on board vessels to ensure appropriate regulation and accountability.

India is a founding member of the CGPCS and we are very happy to be chairing this Plenary Session. This Contact group has played a pivotal role in international community’s response to the threat of the piracy off the coast of Somalia which threatens the freedom of maritime navigation and has a destabilising effect on global trade and security and a negative humanitarian impact on seafarers and their families.

Chairing the Contact Group is largely a collaborative exercise involving the Chair as well as the Chairs of the Working Groups and other participants. I would like to take this opportunity to express our thanks to the Chairs of the five working Groups for their support and as well as Spain which chaired the 12th Plenary Meeting in July 2012. Special thanks are also due to the Netherlands which shared their useful notes on the Contact Group workings with us making our job much easier. 3

In our discussions today, we would be examining the recent trends seen in the incidence of piracy attacks off the Coast of Somalia and in the wider Indian Ocean. We will also review the work done by the five Working Groups of the Contact Group and as well as other Groups since the last plenary meeting in July in coordinating counter-piracy efforts in their respective areas. I look forward to working with you in our deliberations today on how we can address the challenges and make our efforts more successful in taking the work of the Contact Group forward.

AGENDA

The Agenda of the today’s meeting is based on the standard format of the previous Plenary meetings
As you will see from the Agenda placed before you, which was circulated earlier by email that we will today listen to briefing by the Chairs of the five Working Groups of the Contact Group about the important work being done by them in their respective areas.

From the UN, Assistant Secretary General of Political Affairs, Mr. Taye-Brook Zerihoum will brief the Contact Group. We will also get an opportunity to listen to the Somalia’s point of view from the PR of Somalia.

In addition to the five main working groups, we would listen to briefing from the US on the Meeting of Ad Hoc Working Group they had held in Washington on 12 September 2012 on the use of Privately Contracted Armed Security Personnel (PCASP) which was attended by 24 states as well as representatives of the Industry.

UK will also be providing a briefing on Piracy Ransom Task Force whose Final report is will be circulated today.

In the post Lunch Session, we look forward to listening to briefing by the UN Department of Public Affairs DPA on the activities of the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia.

If this Agenda is acceptable then we can proceed with adopting the Agenda.

Mr. President,

I would like to welcome the Secretary General’s report on the program of educational outreach on the transatlantic slave trade and slavery and for his status report on the UN Trust Fund for Partnerships for the Permanent Memorial to and remembrance of the victims of slavery and the transatlantic slave trade. I would also like to pay rich tribute to Ambassador Raymond Wolfe of Jamaica for his tireless efforts on the Permanent Memorial.

Mr. President,

The transatlantic slave trade ravaged the African and the Caribbean nations to satisfy the rapacious economic greed and exploitation of the colonizers. The effects of its violence and human suffering are still visible today.

It is, therefore, imperative that we commemorate the great struggles and battles that have been fought to get rid of this scourge, and pay homage to the victims of slavery and slave trade. The permanent memorial will be a small commemoration for the millions of victims who suffered silently with no hope of freedom before they disappeared into the night.

This memorial will not only serve as a hallmark for us to pay our respect but will also be a reminder for the international community about the grief and tragedy borne by the victims of slavery and the transatlantic slave trade.

We have noted that the first phase of the international design competition for the permanent memorial has been completed. UNESCO has shortlisted designs from a number of proposals received globally. The Permanent Memorial Committee is taking the next steps.

The “United Nations Trust Fund for Partnerships – Permanent Memorial” established to receive contributions to erect the Permanent Memorial has so far only received close to US $ 1.3 million as against the anticipated expenditure of US $ 4.5 million for the construction of the Memorial.

India, with a contribution of US $ 260,000/-, is the lead contributor to the Trust Fund. The international community, in particular those who benefited from the transatlantic slave trade, must come forward and contribute generously to this noble cause. The international community cannot let the idea of this memorial just remain on its design board.

Mr. President,

We also recognize the importance of education of current and future generations about the history, causes and impact of slavery and the transatlantic slave trade. We support the initiatives undertaken by the United Nations in spreading awareness about this important issue.

India welcomes the various remembrance activities and programmes undertaken by the Department of Public Information, including the commemorative activities at the UN in March 2012. We support the efforts of the Department of Public Information to utilize its network of global information centres to build awareness on this issue.

We also welcome the initiatives undertaken by States in reaffirming their commitment to implement paragraphs 101 and 102 of the Durban Declaration aimed at countering the legacy of slavery and honoring the memory of the victims of slavery and the slave trade.

Mr. President,

Let me conclude by quoting George Mason, one of the founding fathers of the United States, who said, “the augmentation of slaves weakens the states; and such a trade is diabolical in itself and disgraceful to mankind”.

We have a chance to pay tribute to the victims who suffered this disgrace by openheartedly contributing to the Trust Fund.

This is, Mr President, the least we can do.

Thank you.
