I conveyed to the Nepalese leadership that terrorism is a common threat to India and Nepal and our security concerns are interlinked because of an open border. We are also concerned about smuggling of Fake Indian Currency Notes (FICN) to India through Nepal. I also asked for the early formalization of the revised Extradition Treaty and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT).
that have been pending for last five years as these would enable better coordination and cooperation between the security agencies of the two countries.

The Prime Minister assured us that Nepal would address all of India’s security concerns and would not allow Nepalese territory to be used for any anti-India activity. The Nepalese side also conveyed that the revised Extradition Treaty and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty were pending approval.

I told the Nepalese leadership that it is essential to formalize the boundary strip maps for agreed sector of India Nepal boundary covering 98% of the total boundary, which had been initialed by Surveyors of both the sides. This would create a better frame of reference for boundary management.

I conveyed to the leadership of Nepal that Nepal must develop an environment of trust and confidence to attract investment from India and conveyed that Indian investors, who provided capital and employment opportunities in Nepal should be given all due protections. I conveyed that formalization of the Bilateral Investment Protection and Promotion Agreement (BIPPA) and the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) at an early date would go a long way in building investor confidence.

India is the largest investors in Nepal. Indian companies are eager to do more to promote Nepal’s industrial manufacturing capabilities. In this context, I referred to the harassment being meted out to some of the larger Indian joint ventures in Nepal. The Government of Nepal assured us that it would look into the issues raised by Indian joint ventures. Deputy Prime Minister Adhikari assured me that his government would amicably resolve issues concerning United Telecom Limited (UTL) -an India Nepal Joint Venture in the field of Telecommunications- at an early date in accordance with the earlier understandings between the two governments.

I conveyed our serious concern on the attacks on our Ambassador and requested Government of Nepal to provide adequate safety to Indian diplomats and diplomatic premises in Nepal. The Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister of Nepal assured that his Government would ensure the safety of Indian diplomats and diplomatic premises in Nepal.

On the issue of the Indian contract teachers in Nepal, the Deputy Prime Minister of Nepal promised to work for providing a dignified and honourable solution to the issue of contractual Indian teachers in recognition of their service to the development of human resources in Nepal.

I reviewed the progress in areas of bilateral interest with the Nepalese leadership. We were happy to note that that the dates for the next meeting of Home Secretaries of the two countries is being finalised shortly. We also agreed that other outstanding bilateral issues could be discussed at the meeting of the two Foreign Secretaries which is to be held shortly in New Delhi.

245. Remarks by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna to media at the end of his visit to Kathmandu.

Kathmandu, April 22, 2011.

Friends from media,
Ladies and Gentlemen!
Good afternoon to all of you.

It is an honour and a privilege for me to be in this beautiful city, the capital of Nepal. This visit brought back fond memories of my visit in January 2010. In last two days, I have had very useful meetings with the political leadership in Kathmandu.

You are aware of my meetings with the President Rt. Hon’ble Dr. Ram Baran Yadav and Prime Minister Rt. Hon’ble Mr. Jhala Nath Khanal and the delegation level talks with Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Mr. Bharat Mohan Adhikari. The meetings were useful and cordial. The Nepalese leadership briefed me about the internal developments in Nepal and about the efforts being made towards completing the peace process and drafting of the new Constitution in Nepal. India has an abiding interest in the success of Nepal’s transition to inclusive, multi-party democracy and the completion of the peace process. A peaceful, democratic and prosperous Nepal is in the interest of the Nepali people, of India and of our region. India is committed to assist the Government and people of Nepal in these processes of historic change in Nepal.

I emphasized the need to complete the peace process at an early date and that it was essential to move ahead with resolution of other political issues. I was assured by the Nepalese leadership that they recognized the crucial importance of preserving the professional integrity and apolitical nature of the Nepal Army.

Both the President and Prime Minister of Nepal expressed deep appreciation for India's support to Nepal's peace process and emphasized that India must continue to play a supportive role for consolidation of democracy in Nepal.

I met Nepalese leaders across the political spectrum including the former Prime Minister and Chairman of UPCN (Maoists) Mr. Pushpa Kamal Dahal ‘Prachanda’, former Prime Minister and senior UML leader Mr. Madhav Kumar Nepal and the President of Nepali Congress Mr. Sushil Koirala. I also met the senior leaders of the Madhesi parties. In my discussions with the leaders in Nepal on the present state of bilateral relations they stressed their commitment to good relations between Nepal and India. I assured all the leaders of the strong commitment that India has for a stable, prosperous and democratic Nepal and our support to the Constitution drafting process while strengthening the democratic institutions and an inclusive democratic process.

Today, I inaugurated the new Chancery building at the Indian Embassy. I am happy to see that we have finally built a building that reflects the growing prestige of India at the regional and global level, and is commensurate with the profile of India in Nepal and the relationship between our two countries. It would enable us to provide better services.

I also visited Birgunj to lay the foundation stone for the Integrated Check Post (ICP) being built with GOI assistance of NRs 137 Crores in Birgunj. The ICP at Birgunj would be the counterpart of a similar ICP being built at Raxaul, the foundation stone for which was laid by Minister for Home Affairs of India Mr. P. Chidambaram on 24 April 2010. I also laid the foundation stone for the Birgunj-Thori road. The 53 Kilometere long road is one of the 19 roads totaling 605 kms being built under Phase I of the Terai Roads project with GOI assistance of NRs 1100 Crores. Both these projects would be extremely important for enhancing Nepal's connectivity with India and providing physical infrastructure to the people of Nepal. These projects are a part of the India-Nepal Cooperation Programme which has an imprint in all districts of Nepal with over 400 projects with a total outlay of NRs 5800 Crores in the sectors of education, health, agriculture, roads and bridges and others such infrastructure.

The Nepalese side agreed that India's continued assistance was vital for Nepal's economic development and assured us that all required assistance to ensure timely completion of these projects and adequate security to Indians working on these projects will be provided.

I conveyed to the Nepalese leadership that terrorism is a common threat to India and Nepal and our security concerns are interlinked because of an open border. We are also concerned about smuggling of Fake Indian Currency Notes (FICN) to India through Nepal. I also stressed the importance of the early formalization of the revised Extradition Treaty and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) that have been pending for over six years as these would enable better coordination and cooperation between the security agencies of the two countries.

The Prime Minister of Nepal assured us that Nepal would address all of India's security concerns and would not allow Nepalese territory to be used for any anti-India activity. The Nepalese side also conveyed that the revised Extradition Treaty and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty were pending approval.

I stressed to the Nepalese leadership that it is essential to formalize the boundary strip maps for agreed sectors of India Nepal boundary covering 98% of the total boundary, which had been initialed by Surveyors General of both the sides. This would create a better frame of reference for boundary management.

I conveyed to the leadership of Nepal that they must develop an environment of trust and confidence to attract investment from India and Indian investors, who provided capital and employment opportunities in Nepal should be given all due protection. I conveyed that formalization of the Bilateral Investment Protection and Promotion Agreement (BIPPA) and the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) at an early date would go a long way in building investor confidence.

India is the largest investor in Nepal. Indian companies are eager to do more to promote Nepal's industrial and manufacturing capabilities. A delegation from Nepal India Chamber of Commerce and Industry (NICCI) met me and appraised me of their difficulties. In my discussions with the Nepalese leadership, I referred to the harassment being meted out to some of the larger Indian joint ventures in Nepal. The Government of Nepal assured us that it would look into the issues raised by Indian joint ventures. Deputy Prime Minister Adhikari assured me that his government would amicably resolve issues concerning United Telecom Limited (UTL) - an India Nepal joint venture in the field of Telecommunications- at an early date in accordance with the earlier understandings between the two governments.

I conveyed our serious concern on the attacks on our Ambassador, which is completely contrary to the rich tradition of hospitality that Nepal is known for and requested Government of Nepal to provide adequate safety to Indian diplomats and diplomatic premises in Nepal. The Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister of Nepal assured that his Government would ensure the safety of Indian diplomats and diplomatic premises in Nepal.
On the issue of the Indian contract teachers in Nepal, the Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister of Nepal promised to work for providing a dignified and honourable solution to the issue of contractual Indian teachers in recognition of their service to the development of human resources in Nepal.

I reviewed the progress in various areas of bilateral interest with the Nepalese leadership. We were happy to note that the dates for the next meeting of Home Secretaries of the two countries are being finalized shortly. We also agreed that other outstanding bilateral issues could be discussed at the meeting of the two Foreign Secretaries which is to be held shortly in New Delhi.

I am convinced of the significance and the great potential of India-Nepal relations, which is heightened in these times of rapid change. Relations with Nepal are and will continue to be a matter of the highest priority for India.

Thank you.

247. Felicitations from Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh for Baburam Bhattarai on his appointment as Prime Minister of Nepal.

New Delhi, August 29, 2011.

Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, has conveyed his warmest felicitations to Rt. Hon. Baburam Bhattarai on his election as the Prime Minister of Nepal, wishing him all success in the task of consolidating the democratic gains made by the people of Nepal.

PM wrote to say that, 'India attaches the highest priority to its relations with Nepal. Our relations are special and characterized by intense people-to-people interaction and an open border. Indian remains committed to providing all assistance in building a more stable, democratic and prosperous Nepal, which will add to the security and prosperity of the region'.

The Prime Minister of India has extended a most cordial invitation to PM Bhattarai to visit India at his convenience, at dates to be decided through diplomatic channels, adding that he looked forward to working with the latter to "strengthen and deepen the close civilisational and fraternal links" between India and Nepal.

248. Statement by the Ministry of External Affairs welcoming 7-Point Agreement reached among political parties in Nepal.

New Delhi, November 2, 2011.

Government of India welcomes the 7-Point Agreement reached among the political parties in Nepal to take the integration and rehabilitation of the Maoist combatants to its logical conclusion. This Agreement provides a firm basis for successfully concluding the remaining aspects of Nepal’s peace process. We congratulate the people and the political parties in Nepal for their commitment to peacefully resolving outstanding issues in a spirit of consensus and for displaying enlightened leadership. India fully supports these efforts to pave the way for Nepal’s transition to a pluralistic and inclusive multi-party democracy.

The Statement was referring to Nepal’s political parties agreement on the peace process, constitution writing and power sharing. Besides settling the vexed issue of a deal for former Maoist combatants, the parties also agreed to prepare the first draft of the Constitution by the month end. The parties were also understood to have worked out a power sharing arrangement after the elections to be held under the new Constitution.
On behalf of the Government and people of India, and on my own behalf, I extend a warm welcome to you on your first visit to India as the Prime Minister of Nepal.

We feel honoured to receive you soon after you have assumed your new responsibilities.

Excellency, your association with India goes back to your student days at the College of Architecture in Chandigarh, the School of Planning and Architecture and then the Jawaharlal Nehru University in Delhi.

Your life has been one of struggle and sacrifice. You have fought against the status quo, and today you have joined the mainstream of Nepal's political life.

We are very happy to see you guide the destiny of Nepal, a close friend and neighbour, at this important juncture.

India and Nepal share bonds of kinship and cooperation that are defined by geography and enriched by history. Our peoples have travelled across open borders for decades. Generations of Indians and Nepalese have grown up taking this freedom of movement for granted.

We owe it to our people to build upon this foundation for the development, progress and prosperity of both our countries. The peoples of our countries are extremely talented, enterprising and have a remarkable ability to cope with adversity. Our region therefore has great potential and the time has come for us to realise this potential through cooperative effort.

India has long considered it a privilege to join Nepal in its plans for economic and social development. We both face the same challenge of development. It is in our enlightened self interest that we work in harmony and conduct our affairs with complete transparency. We must understand that by helping each other we only help ourselves. Our prosperity, security and welfare are interlinked.
Nepal is passing through a crucial phase in its quest for peace, stability and multi-party democracy. There should be no foreign interference in this process. The people of Nepal must take their decisions themselves. They have done so in the past and on every occasion have emerged even stronger.

We have full confidence in the wisdom and resilience of the people of Nepal to forge consensus through dialogue and understanding. We are with the people of Nepal in this journey and are ready to provide whatever assistance possible as per the wishes of the people of Nepal.

Distinguished guests, I request you to join me in a toast to:

- The good health and personal well-being of the Prime Minister of Nepal Dr. Baburam Bhattarai and Madam Hishila Yami,
- the continued progress and prosperity of the friendly people of Nepal;
- and everlasting friendship between India and Nepal.

250. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Finance on the meeting between Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee and the visiting Nepalese Finance Minister Barsha Man Pun.

New Delhi, October 22, 2011.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee assured the Finance Minister of Nepal Mr Barsha Man Pun of India’s full cooperation and support in building-up various projects in Nepal. Shri Mukherjee gave this assurance when Mr Pun called on him in his office here today. Shri Mukherjee asked his Nepalese counterpart only to prioritize these projects so that they could be taken-up accordingly.

The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee said that construction work on building Integrated Check posts on Indo-Nepal border has already started on Indian side and asked Mr Pun to get it expedited on Nepal side as well. He said that these check posts once operational would help in both i.e. in expediting the customs clearances as well as immigration clearances in an efficient manner. Shri Mukherjee said that Bilateral Investment Promotion Agreement (BIPA) signed between two countries yesterday would also help in providing necessary institutional frame work for the investors from both sides. However, Shri Mukherjee asked Mr Pun to ensure safety and security of Indian businessmen visiting Nepal for promoting trade and investment between two countries.

The Finance Minister of Nepal Mr. Pun assured Shri Mukherjee about the safety and security of Indian businessmen visiting Nepal. He sought support of the Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee in completing various projects in Nepal. He also assured that finalization of DTAA between two countries would also be got expedited. He thanked Shri Mukherjee for all his support to Nepal and invited him to visit Kathmandu at the earliest.

Shri Mukherjee thanked Mr Pun for his invitation and again assured the support of India in best possible manner.
Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the increase in the trade between India and Nepal.

New Delhi, October 22, 2011.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles, Shri Anand Sharma has expressed satisfaction that bilateral trade between India and Nepal has increased from US$ 1985 mn in 2009-10 to around US$ 2700 in 2010-11 registering an increase of around 36%. Exports from Nepal to India have also grown from US$ 452mn in 2009-10 to US$ 476mn in 2010-11 (an increase of around 5.3%). During his meeting with his Nepalese counterpart Shri Mr. Anil Kumar Jha, here today, Shri Sharma singled out hydro power sector for increased cooperation between the two countries. “It is estimated that sale of electricity from the 40,000 MW hydropower potential of Nepal can generate revenues of more than 10 billion US$ per annum. Nepal could also attract a lot of investment in manufacturing/services sector by overcoming its present power shortage” Said the Indian Minister.

Shri Sharma noted that in the recent past, several Indian private companies/ Joint ventures have been able to secure survey licences for development of about 8,200 MW hydro power projects in Nepal at an estimated cost of Rs.82000 crores. “It is important that the projects are started as early as possible” Shri Sharma said. Indian Minister also pointed out the problem of local disturbances for the Indian Investors.

The Minister also informed that the Government of India has accepted the Nepalese request for use of Vishakhapatnam port and rail route through Singhabad (India) — Rohanpur (Bangladesh). Approval of Government of Nepal for the Letter of Exchange (LOE) sent in this regard is awaited. Nepal’s request for further facilitation of Nepal- Bangladesh trade through Kakarbhitta-Phulparsi-Banglabandha route had also been agreed.

The meeting also explored India providing Buyers Credit to Nepalese Government agencies for large project exports, especially in the infrastructure sector such as roads, bridges, railways, power lines, sewerage plants, water treatment plants and housing from India. The credit can be provided under National Export Insurance Account (NEIA) through EXIM Bank for a maximum period of 5-8 years.

Indian firms are the biggest investors in Nepal accounting for about 47.5% of total approved foreign direct investments. There are about 150 operating Indian ventures in Nepal engaged in manufacturing, services (banking, insurance, dry port, education and telecom), power sector and tourism industries. Indian joint ventures in Nepal have contributed significantly to increase in Nepal's exports to India. They also provide direct employment to around 30,000 Nepali citizens and indirect employment to more than twice that number. Both Governments have finalized the bilateral investment protection and promotion agreement. Shri Sharma stressed that problems faced by Indian Business in Nepal. He pointed out that Surya Nepal, a subsidiary of ITC Limited, India had to shut down permanently its ready made garment production because of long running labour problems. He also touched upon the problems faced by GMR group. Such incidences will, over a period of time, have a negative effect, Shri Sharma added.

Fact Sheet on MOU/Agreements signed during the visit of PM of Nepal October 21, 2011

(i) Memorandum of Understanding between Government of The Republic of India and Government of Nepal regarding Indian grant assistance for the Goitre Control Programme in Nepal

A Memorandum of Understanding between Government of The Republic of India and Government of Nepal regarding Indian grant assistance for the Goitre Control Programme in Nepal was signed today (October 21, 2011). Foreign Secretary Shri Ranjan Mathai signed the Memorandum of Understanding on behalf of Government of India and Mr. Mr. Purushottam Ojha, Secretary, Ministry of Commerce and Supply, Government of Nepal signed the agreement on behalf of Government of Nepal.

Under the Memorandum of Understanding, Government of India will provide `1.875 Crores (Nepali Rs.3 Crores) to Government of Nepal for the control of Goitre and other Iodine Deficiency Diseases in Nepal under the heads of Re-iodisation Subsidy, Packing Subsidy, Transportation Subsidy and Advocacy Subsidy. The Government of Nepal shall procure iodised granular salt from India for distribution in various parts of Nepal focusing on 22 districts categorized by Nepal as remote and inaccessible. The implementation of the Programme will be monitored by a Programme Monitoring Team of four members, consisting of two representatives of Government of India and two representatives of Government of Nepal. During the period 1973-2010, Government of India has provided grant assistance of `41 Crores to Government of Nepal for the control of Goitre and other iodine deficiency disorders in Nepal. Iodine Deficiency Diseases are a major health problem and it is hoped that this assistance will help reduce incidence of Goitre and other Iodine Deficiency Diseases in Nepal.
(ii) Dollar Credit Line Agreement between Government of Nepal and Export-Import Bank of India

A US$ 250 million Dollar Credit Line Agreement between Government of Nepal and Export-Import Bank of India was signed today (October 21, 2011). Chairman and Managing Director of Export-Import Bank of India, Shri T.C.A. Ranganathan and signed the Agreement on behalf of Export-Import Bank of India and Shri Lal Shankar Ghimire, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Finance signed the Agreement on behalf of Government of Nepal.

The credit line will be used to finance infrastructure projects such as highways, airports, bridges, irrigation, roads, railways and hydropower projects and carry a concessional rate of interest of 1.75% p.a., with repayment period of 20 years, inclusive of 5 years moratorium.

It may be recalled that during the visit of the President of Nepal, H.E. Dr. Ram Baran Yadav in February 2010, Government of India has agreed to extend the line of credit of US$ 250 million from EXIM Bank of India to the Government of Nepal on similar terms and conditions as the earlier Line of Credit of US $ 100 Million extended to Nepal.

(iii) Agreement between the Government of Nepal and the Government of India for the Promotion and Protection of Investments

A Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Federal Republic of Nepal was signed today. Hon’ble Finance Minister has signed the agreement on behalf of India and Mr. Anil Kumar Jha, Minister for Industry on behalf of Government of Nepal.

The Agreement seeks to promote and protect investments from either country in the territory of the other country with the ultimate objective of increasing bilateral investment flow. The agreement requires each country to encourage and create favourable conditions for investors of the other country to make investments in its territory and to admit investments in accordance with its laws.

The term investment includes every kind of asset including intellectual property rights in accordance with laws and regulations of the country in which the investment is made. Principles of Most Favoured Nation Treatment and National Treatment (NT) have been asserted in the agreement. Investments from either country in the territory of the other country are to be accorded NT and MFN treatment which means that the investment shall be provided treatment which shall not be less favourable than that provided by the country to investments of its own investors or investors from any other country. Besides, investors are to be provided MFN treatment in respect of returns on the investment.
Provisions have also been made in the agreement for grant of compensation to the investors whose investments suffer losses owing to war, armed conflict, a state of national emergency, etc. and such investors shall be accorded treatment by the host country, no less than the treatment accorded to its own investors or investors of any third state.

The Agreement provides that nationalisation or expropriation of investments shall not be resorted to except in public interest and in accordance with law on a non-discriminatory basis and against fair and equitable compensation. The agreement also provides for free repatriation of funds of an investor of either country.

The agreement provides elaborate dispute resolution mechanism to guide settlement of disputes between and investor and a host Government as well as between the two Governments. Dispute resolution mechanism includes resource to negotiations, conciliation and international arbitration.

The Agreement shall remain in force for a period of ten years. Thereafter, it shall be deemed to have been automatically extended unless either Contracting Party gives to the other Contracting Party a written notice. With respect to investments made prior to the date of termination of the Agreement, the provisions of the Agreement shall continue to be effective for a further period of ten years from the date of its termination.

It is hoped that the Agreement would serve as a catalyst in boosting investment flows between the two countries.
253. Remarks by Foreign Secretary on arrival at Kathmandu

Kathmandu, November 26, 2011.

It is a great pleasure for me to be in your beautiful country. This is only my first visit to Kathmandu after assuming charge of Foreign Secretary of India. My current visit is to prepare for the visit of our Finance Minister, Shri Pranab Mukherjee, who will be arriving in Kathmandu tomorrow. The Finance Minister and Finance Minister of Nepal are to sign the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) which will replace the old Agreement signed in 1987. I will be accompanying the Indian Finance Minister in his meetings with the leaders of Nepal.

I look forward to meeting the Chief Secretary of Nepal, Mr. Madhav Ghimire to review progress in the implementation of the agenda agreed upon during the recent visit of the Prime Minister of Nepal to India, and of ways to expand and strengthen our bilateral ties. Our Prime Ministers met again in the Maldives and agreed that action should be taken to take forward bilateral cooperation.

India has an abiding interest in the peace, stability and prosperity of Nepal, and this motivates our wish to expand the cooperation between our two nations.

I do hope to make more visits to this country and to see more of it in the future.

Thank You

New Delhi, November 27, 2011.

'It is an honour and a privilege to be in this beautiful city, the capital of Nepal. It brought back fond memories of my previous visits. It has been a very busy but most useful visit to Kathmandu.

During the visit, I called on the Prime Minister Rt. Hon’ble Dr. Baburam Bhattarai and will call on the President Rt Hon’ble Dr. Ram Baran Yadav and I also had bilateral consultations with my counterpart Hon’ble Mr. Barsaman Pun, the Finance Minister of Nepal where we reviewed bilateral economic cooperation and discussed ways and means to expand the economic relations between the two countries. I briefed Rt Hon’ble Prime Minister on the progress made on implementation of the rich and vast agenda agreed upon during the visit of the Prime Minister of Nepal to India as contained in the Joint Press Statement.

As you know, I am here primarily to sign the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) as was agreed during the visit of Prime Minister of Nepal to India on October 20-23, 2011. I am happy that we have revised the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement today. The revised DTAA will provide tax stability to the residents of India and Nepal and facilitate mutual economic cooperation as well as stimulate the flow of investment, technology and services between India and Nepal. In the revised DTAA the threshold withholding tax rates on dividends, interest, etc., are rationalised to reflect the present day situation and developments in the area of international taxation.

India has 81 such DTAA s. In line with the best practices followed, we have incorporated in this DTAA also, the provisions for effective exchange of information, assistance in collection of taxes between tax authorities and the anti-abuse provisions to ensure that the benefits of the Agreement are availed of by the genuine residents and not misused by third country residents. In the area of exchange of information, the revised DTAA provides for internationally accepted standards including sharing of bank information and sharing of information without domestic tax interest. Further, the information received can be shared with other law enforcement agencies with the consent of the information supplying country.

India hosted the most useful meeting of the Joint Commission of Water Resources in New Delhi two days ago. The Commerce Secretaries are going to meet next month. We are also working to fix the dates for holding the next meetings of Secretaries for Home Affairs and Ministers of Water Resources. We have sought preliminary inputs from Nepal as a prelude to the review of treaties and agreements to be undertaken by the Foreign Secretaries. We have agreed that the Bilateral Joint Commission should be convened at an early date to review the entire gamut of the bilateral relationship including the requests from Nepal for Indian assistance for implementation of priority development projects.

I will also have discussions with leaders from a wide cross section of political parties including the President of Nepali Congress Mr. Sushil Koirala, former Prime Minister and Chairman of UCPN (Maoist) Mr. Puspha Kamal Dahal ‘Prachanda’, former Prime Minister and Chairman of CPN (UML) Mr. Jhala Nath Khanal and Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Home Affairs and President of MJF-Loktantrik Mr. Bijay Gacchadar. I conveyed to the leadership that Government of India welcomes the 7-Point Agreement reached among the political parties that provides a firm basis for successfully concluding the remaining aspects of Nepal’s peace process. We congratulate the people and the political parties in Nepal for their commitment to peacefully resolving outstanding issues in a spirit of consensus and for displaying enlightened leadership. India fully supports these efforts to pave the way for Nepal’s transition to a pluralistic and inclusive multi-party democracy. I assured the Nepalese leaders of India’s strong and continued commitment of support to Nepal in its transition to a democratic, prosperous, peaceful and stable future.

India has an abiding interest in the success of Nepal’s transition to multi-party democracy and the completion of the peace process. A peaceful, democratic and prosperous Nepal is in the interest of the Nepali people, of India and of our region. India is committed to assist the Government and people of Nepal in these processes of historic change in Nepal.

I am convinced of the significance and the great potential of India-Nepal relations, which is heightened in these times of rapid change. Relations with Nepal are and will continue to be a matter of the highest priority for India.

Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee, who specially visited Kathmandu for this occasion signed the agreement with his Nepalese counterpart, Barshaman Pun ‘Ananta,’ in the presence of Prime Minister Baburam Bhattarai. Mr. Mukherjee told journalists, “The revised DTAA will provide tax stability to the residents of India and Nepal and facilitate mutual economic cooperation as well as stimulate the flow of investment, technology and services between India and Nepal.” The agreement has been welcomed by the private sector in Nepal. Sujeev Shakya, head of BEED, a consultancy and financial advisories firm, said: “This is positive and was required as India is our biggest business partner. It will pave way for greater investment, transparency, and allow both countries to avail of each other’s comparative advantages.” He said that since tax rates were lower in Nepal, investors who had paid taxes in India would not have to do so in Nepal and those who paid taxes in Nepal would only have to pay the differential amount back in India.

It may be recalled that this agreement comes soon after the signing of the Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement (BIPPA) by the two countries during the visit of Nepalese Prime Minister the previous month. The two agreements together are expected to encourage further Indian investment in Nepal, which in turn would lead to greater exports and help bridge the growing trade deficit with India. India accounts for more than 45 per cent of foreign direct investment in Nepal, while two-thirds of Nepal’s trade is with India.

In the course of his daylong visit, Mr. Mukherjee called on President Ram Baran Yadav, and Prime Minister Dr. Baburam Bhattarai. He also met Maoist chairman Pushpa Kamal Dahal ‘Prachanda,’ Nepali Congress president Sushil Koirala and senior leader Sher Bahadur Deuba, and leaders of Communist Party of Nepal (Unified Marxist Leninist) and Madhesi Front.

Mr. Mukherjee also took the opportunity to welcome the 7-point agreement and assured Nepal of India’s abiding interest in “the success of Nepal’s transition to multi-party democracy and the completion of the peace process.”

255. Exchange of lists of Nuclear Installations and facilities between India and Pakistan

New Delhi, January 1, 2011.

India and Pakistan today exchanged, through diplomatic channels simultaneously at New Delhi and Islamabad, the list of nuclear installations and facilities covered under the Agreement on the Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations between India and Pakistan.

The Agreement, which was signed on December 31, 1988 and entered into force on January 27, 1991, provides, inter alia, that the two countries inform each other of nuclear installations and facilities to be covered under the Agreement on the first of January of every calendar year. This is the twentieth consecutive exchange of such lists between the two countries, the first one having taken place on January 1, 1992.

New Delhi, January 25, 2011.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan H.E. S. M. Qureshi, called the External Affairs Minister, Shri S. M. Krishna on telephone today evening, to convey felicitations on the occasion of India’s Republic Day. The Ministers had a brief exchange of views on bilateral relations. Referring to the forthcoming meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan in Thimpu, the Ministers hoped for a positive outcome. EAM reiterated his invitation to FM Qureshi to visit India at a mutually convenient date, to carry forward the dialogue process. FM Qureshi stated that he looked forward to visiting New Delhi. He also thanked EAM for his letter of condolences on the assassination of Governor Salman Taseer. EAM said that it was a tragic incident and once again conveyed his deep sympathies to members of the bereaved family.
257. Press Release on the meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan in Thimphu.

February 6, 2011.

In pursuance of the mandate given by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan, following their meeting in Thimphu in April, 2010 and the meeting of the Minister of External Affairs of India and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan in Islamabad in July, 2010, the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in Thimphu on February 6, 2011, to carry forward this process. The Foreign Secretaries had useful and frank discussions on the steps required to be taken in this context. They agreed on the need for a constructive dialogue between India and Pakistan to resolve all outstanding issues.

They affirmed the need to carry forward the dialogue process. They will brief their respective Governments on their discussions.

Media reports said that during the talks between the two foreign secretaries Pakistan, as was the case in the past, insisted on resuming the composite dialogue on all the subjects, while India was insisting on talks on specific issues like terrorism. New Delhi felt that instead of taking up all issues, both sides should concentrate on issues where there was the largest area of agreement with a view to reach a settlement. There should not be any time line, said India, in response to Pakistan’s desire for a result oriented approach.

"We are resuming our contact after interregnum of some time. We have a number of issues to be discussed. As we have always said, dialogue between India and Pakistan is necessary and a must if we are to satisfactorily resolve the outstanding issues between our two countries," said Ms. Nirupama Rao. "We have a number of outstanding issues. So, we are going into this with an open mind and constructive attitude," she added.

On the other hand Pakistan Foreign Secretary Bashir said "My expectations are that we should be working towards continued engagement." "Where there is dialogue, both raise issues of concern to them. This is particularly true of India and Pakistan since 1947". Media quoted unnamed sources pointing out that Samjhauta Express blasts and Mumbai attacks should not be equated. Pakistan too had declined to raise the pitch on Samjhauta though it felt this was one issue on which India can be pushed.
258. Interview of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao with the Pakistan T.V.

Thimphu, February 8, 2011.

PTV: Madam, thank you very much for your time. What is the future of Pak-India relations?

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): I do not have a crystal ball in front of me. I am not a fortune-teller. But if you are asking me what is the future I would like for India-Pakistan relations it is that I would like a future in which Indian children and Pakistani children can look forward to a life of peace and good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

PTV: People are looking at the Foreign Secretary talks between you and Mr. Salman Bashir and they are thinking what you have decided. Foreign Secretary: Obviously the media would want to know what we have decided and when the time is ripe you will be informed also about what the outcomes are. But let me tell you that the discussion I had with Mr. Salman Bashir in Thimphu was extremely positive. It was useful, it was constructive.

PTV: Madam, are Kashmir, water related issues and all these are part of the dialogue?

Foreign Secretary: All outstanding issues are part of the dialogue including what you have just said.

PTV: Madam, India has not yet shared investigation of Samjhauta incident with Pakistan. Would you like to comment on it? Foreign Secretary: Yes, I will certainly comment on it. The investigation into the Samjhauta blast is ongoing. I know that your Spokesman has made some comments on this. I want to say that we are a law-abiding country, and justice will be done. Those responsible for perpetrating this crime - this is an act of terrorism that happened and we condemn all acts of terrorism - whoever is responsible for it, would be dealt with. So, please understand that as a law-abiding country, as a country that is very proud of its democratic institutions, that is the way we look at it. The investigation process is on and when that is complete and we are ready to share relevant evidence with Pakistan we will do so. Our Home Minister has himself said that.

PTV: Madam, what is your message for those people in India and Pakistan who want peace and stability in the region and friendship between the two countries?
Foreign Secretary: For those people in India and Pakistan who want peace, who want good neighbourly relations, and who want dialogue between the two countries I will say - May their tribe increase! PTV: Thank you very much, Madam.

259. Interview of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao with the TV channel 'Times Now'.

Thimphu, February 8, 2011.

Times Now (Ms. Prema Sridevi): Madam. Both India and Pakistan have said that the talks have been successful, the talks have been fruitful. Now, the next step. How are you going to take the talks forward?

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): We intend to remain in touch in the near term to decide on the sequence of steps that we need to take before the visit of Foreign Minister Qureshi. So, that is the work that we will be engaged in. This is a result-oriented process. We definitely want to engage, each side wants to engage the other, to talk about the outstanding issues in the relationship. And as the two Prime Ministers spoke about in Thimphu last year, we want to reduce the trust deficit and create an atmosphere of better confidence and a more positive environment in which we can discuss the outstanding issues as well as the nitty-gritty. Essentially we are going to roll up our sleeves and we are going to get to work.

Times Now: As far as India is concerned, what are the primary concerns going to be this time?

Foreign Secretary: There are lots of concerns about the relationship. There are primary concerns obviously as they relate to terrorism. Pakistan will seek to define it in another way. They will talk, they have been talking about Kashmir. Each side may look at it from a certain angle. But I think what is the take away from the talks that we have had in Thimphu this time is that we are prepared to look at the issues and engage with each other in a comprehensive manner looking at all the issues. No issue will be left out of the dialogue.

Times Now: As far as 26/11 is concerned, what is India’s main concern going to be, what is India going to really ask Pakistan this time?
Foreign Secretary: 26/11 is obviously a very important issue on which certain answers have been sought from Pakistan and certain evidence has been sought from Pakistan and there is an ongoing trial of the accused in Pakistan that we want to see finished and justice to be done. So, this is an ongoing communication between the two sides. We have been exchanging notes about it. They have asked to send a Judicial Commission. We have said we would like to send a Commission also because we also have a very legitimate interest in seeking more information and evidence and details about this whole conspiracy behind the Mumbai attacks. So, we hope to see some results out of this. Obviously the people of India are looking very anxiously at this whole process because naturally we need closure on this, we need satisfactory closure, we need for Pakistan to recognise the fact that India's concerns are not rhetorical, certainly not. This is not about rhetoric. This is about the lives that have been lost, victims of terrorism, people whose lives have changed because of what happened in Mumbai. So, we owe it to them to get results.

Times Now: As far as Pakistan is concerned, we have been asking more information as to what India has been doing regarding the Samjhauta blast probe. Now, what is India going to give back to Pakistan in terms of investigation, in terms of evidences, in terms of more details as far as Samjhauta blast is concerned?

Foreign Secretary: On the Samjhauta blast probe, we have told Pakistan that this is an ongoing investigation. There is a challan that has been now filed and there is an investigation that is going on. At this moment obviously we cannot share anything because the investigation is ongoing. But once the investigation is complete we would, and Home Minister Mr. Chidambaram has said that, be in a position to share whatever relevant evidence there is with Pakistan. So, Pakistan understands that position. I have explained it to Foreign Secretary Bashir also.

Times Now: Also, people like Hafiz Saeed had recently held a Kashmir solidarity day where anti-India slogans were shouted. How is India seeing this? Are you also going to raise concerns on people with such backgrounds being given a platform in Pakistan to air their views against India? Do you think this is really going to augur well as far as bilateral relations between both the countries concerned?

Foreign Secretary: You have to understand that Hafiz Saeed is not my interlocutor and he can never be an interlocutor on the India-Pakistan relationship. I think intelligent people on both sides understand that, and I think you should also understand that. You are creating a larger than life figure out of an inconsequential person. And there is no point in giving him the oxygen of publicity.

Times Now: Pakistan Foreign Affairs Spokesperson had said that India is using terror as propaganda against Pakistan. Yesterday we spoke to Pakistan Foreign Secretary regarding those comments. We asked his comments on it and he said whatever the Spokesperson had said is in line with what Pakistan has been saying all through about. How do you see that statement?

Foreign Secretary: Obviously he has to defend his Spokesperson. He is not going to come before television and criticise his Spokesperson. Be realistic, be real as the slang goes. But the fact is that we have explained our position very clearly on Samjhauta and they understand that position also. I am not going to comment on what the Spokesperson said. Perhaps it should not have been said on the eve of talks such as this. But understand also that on both sides we should not try and kill this process. This is a process that we are trying to revive. It has been in a somewhat moribund state for some time now. We are trying to revive it. Let it learn to breathe on its own a little. And we will have to be very careful and take very calibrated steps as we move forward. And we must understand that there have been many shadows on this relationship. There has been a period of darkness in this relationship. Now we are trying to see how we can chart a course forward, chart a way forward. And I think peace-loving people in both countries, and I am sure Times Now is also a peace-loving constituent as far as we are concerned, would wish us well.

Times Now: Pakistan Foreign Minister did not come for these talks. We were given to understand that MoS instead would be coming and he also did not turn up. Do you think that Pakistan was inadequately represented as far as these talks are concerned? Foreign Secretary: I think they are having a cabinet reshuffle in Pakistan and apparently that is why there was no Ministerial representation. In Nepal also the cabinet is being formed. So, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan and the Foreign Secretary of Nepal were representing their respective governments. This is not unusual in multilateral events.

Times Now: My last question. You are going to the US. Regarding Tri Valley, there are so many students who are again suffering, lot of students are still having radio tags on them.

Foreign Secretary: Eighteen students.

Times Now: Yes. What are you going to do about that?

Foreign Secretary: Are you asking me whether I am going there to free those students?
Times Now: Are you really going to do anything to help those students? Are you going to take it up?

Foreign Secretary: Obviously I will discuss this issue with the State Department. We have periodic consultations with the US State Department, with my counterpart Under Secretary Bill Burns. I am looking forward to these meetings. This is not a single-issue relationship, I am sure you understand that. We have a very important strategic and global partnership with the United States. We have had a very successful visit of President Obama to India. We want to build on those understandings. We have a very large Indian community in the United States that is doing extremely well, that has brought pride and glory to India. So, we must celebrate these affirmatives in the relationship also.

The Tri Valley episode is an unfortunate episode and it has involved some very unscrupulous individuals who ran this racket, this so-called university, and attracted very innocent, hapless, unsuspecting students to study there. So, this whole thing has now, the fact that this was illegal and the fact that our students have been duped is now known to all. So, there is an investigation which the immigration and customs enforcement authorities in US are engaged in at the moment. You must understand that there are certain laws in every country. The US is a democracy just like us. They are a country governed by the rule of law. Their laws would apply in this case also.

Radio-tagging as far as we are concerned, there is a cultural disconnect. It seems very alien, very foreign to us when somebody is walking round with that monitor on their ankles. So, I wish that had not happened. But the US authorities tell us that this is something that they do, they have been doing it in other cases also. That is where the matter rests. There is an investigation going on and obviously we cannot seek to interfere in that process, please understand that. I will not be able to wave a magic wand when I go to Washington and see that the whole investigation is tied up and everything is set at rest. That is not going to happen, let us be realistic, let us be pragmatic. But I will represent to the US Government that we are concerned that this has happened, and there are many youngsters - I am not just talking of the 18 who are radio-tagged, there are over a thousand young people whose lives have been affected by that. What about their future? Where can they be adjusted? Will they get admitted to other legitimate universities since they went with correct documentation? They were not illegal immigrants. That should be understood. They went with all the right visas and documents. So, our expectation and our effort will be to convey and to impress upon the US authorities that something should be done to help these students who are basically innocent.

260. Interaction of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao with Media at Thimphu.

February 8, 2011,

Question: Ma'am you held talks with your Pak counterpart on 6th. We have seen the brief statement. What next?

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): Somebody in the Pakistani press said 'something old, something borrowed, something new'. Anyway, what next? Obviously we are looking at Foreign Minister Qureshi's visit to India and how we set the stage for that visit and the kind of preparations that we need to make. Essentially as you would have seen from the press statement, we had a good meeting, we had a useful meeting, a constructive meeting. We discussed how to take the dialogue process forward, that this is the best way forward, and how to chart the course ahead. So, let me put it this way. In the next few months things are not going to remain dormant obviously. There will be activity.

Question: So, it is no more step by step, it is now full blown, is it?

Foreign Secretary: That is simplistic to say that. We can do one thing at a time. We are not multi-armed. Whatever we do, whatever meeting we have, we will have one meeting, we will have another meeting, it will be like that. There will be a sort of a sequence.

Question: So, first is Home Secretaries meeting.

Foreign Secretary: I am not saying that. But obviously let us put it like this. Let us not get mechanical. India-Pakistan relations is not like Mechano or something that you are putting together. But there are issues to be discussed, put it this way. And when you say all outstanding issues are going to be discussed, you will obviously have to discuss every outstanding issue. Therefore, who discusses the outstanding issues? There are number of stakeholders. Number of government departments would be concerned. So, it has to be a comprehensive exercise, put it that way.

Question: So, under composite dialogue various Secretaries would be meeting.

Foreign Secretary: I am not going to get stuck in terminology.

Question: Not terminology, but various Secretaries would be meeting.

Foreign Secretary: When we had the meeting in February last year, you remember when I briefed the press, and even in June we said that there are steps that we could take, confidence building measures, addressing the trust deficit, promoting better people-to-people exchanges, making it easier for trade and business exchanges, dealing with the subject of terrorism and the counter-terrorism measures that you need to put in place, narcotics, trade across the LOC which is ongoing as you know where you have to talk about how to facilitate this trade in a better fashion so that it becomes easier to transact this trade. So, we have a lot of issues. Then there is Sir Creek, then the issue of Siachen, then Jammu and Kashmir, peace and security, then the promotion of friendly exchanges that is promotion of people-to-people exchanges, let us put it that way. So, there is a lot of activity, a lot of interaction that had been in a sense put in abeyance for many months now. So, the intention from both sides is to resume this process. I am being as frank as I can under the circumstances. I do not want to say more. You will understand my constraints.

Question: All the issues that you have mentioned are part of composite dialogue also.

Foreign Secretary: 'What is in a name?' as they say.

Question: But will it smell as sweet?

Foreign Secretary: You know your Shakespeare. You know, roses always come with thorns.

Question: Any idea about how soon the visit by Qureshi will take place? Have they made any commitments on the dates?

Foreign Secretary: We have to decide mutually what the dates would be. The idea is we should prepare for the visit properly and we should have the right atmosphere, we should be able to build a little more confidence, there should have been more interaction. So, I suppose by the middle of the year. I think probably your people were saying that since there is no date, it means that there is some hassle or there is some complication. There really is nothing.

Question: They have just said that they have not made any commitments on the date.

Foreign Secretary: But Mr. Bashir also said that his Minister was looking forward to this visit and it is very much on the cards. I know at some stage Mr. Qureshi has been talking that I do not want to come for a photo op. Neither do we want a photo op obviously. India-Pakistan relations are not about photo opportunities. They are about real, hard issues which need to be discussed. So, let us not have any illusions either. We should not be assuming that we have solved everything and everything is fine. We should understand that this discussion, this dialogue between the two sides is going to be a long one, and it will take time for issues to be resolved. The difficulty levels also should not be underestimated. I know, all of you do not do that. You all know the subject through and through, perhaps as well as we do.
Question: Are there any firsts in the list which are the issues?

Foreign Secretary: You want to extract confessions from me but I am not going to say anything. But an issue like terrorism obviously concerns us. And Pakistan, let me tell you, said it is equally important for them. It is not like they said, why do you talk about terrorism. They said it is equally important for them, they also want to discuss this. So, I do not think there is any problem about discussing counter-terrorism.

Question: Did you get any sense whether the Army is involved. Last time in July everything was going well. Last moment, things went wrong. Is the Army involved?

Foreign Secretary: What I was told was that all institutions of the Pakistan Government are supportive of dialogue with India.

Question: In sequencing issues like peace and security, Siachen, they all come at the last stage?

Foreign Secretary: It is a ladder you have to climb.

Question: But we can say dialogue is back on track.

Foreign Secretary: Yesterday I said when the time is ripe to have that, it will be done. There will be a sequence. And you know the things that need to be done quickly will be done first and the things that need more preparation will be done a little later. But we hope to have all this well in place before Mr. Qureshi's visit. That is as much as I can say.

Question: Madam, will Afghanistan be an issue that can be discussed and some sort of common ground found?

Foreign Secretary: Why not? One of the ideas that came up was that why should we be just stuck with discussing these issues, why cannot we discuss more issues? Why cannot we discuss cooperation in the United Nations for instance? Why cannot we discuss the situation in our region?

Question: But UN, we cooperate quite a lot.

Foreign Secretary: On many issues. But in an institutionalised way, in a structured way why do not we do that? Even on Afghanistan, Afghanistan is a neighbour of Pakistan, is a neighbour of India. Rightfully speaking, I mean if things were absolutely normal, nobody should quarrel with the idea that both of us should be concerned about what happens in Afghanistan. And if there is scope for us to cooperate in Afghanistan to help the people of Afghanistan and to bring stability in Afghanistan, why not contemplate the issue. Nothing should be ruled out I think.
Question: But do we have any common interest? I know we want stability and all that. Pakistan wants a clout there and to reduce our presence.

Foreign Secretary: Let me only tell you when we discussed it what I was told is that Pakistan also wants stability in Afghanistan, they do not want extremism, they are against radicalism, and they would like Afghanistan's independence to be preserved, and without any interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs. And if you look at the principles, those principles are principles that we all talk about including India.

Question: Madam, in July 2010 Pakistan came with this all-or-nothing approach which led to whatever that happened there. This time in the talks on Sunday have you noticed any shift in their position as far as dealing with politically sensitive issues are concerned? Like are they still insisting on having a timeline for discussing these issues?

Foreign Secretary: I do not think we got into that sort of a bind about timelines. The idea was we will set in motion a process; we will chart a way forward; we will prepare for Mr. Qureshi's visit; and we will engage with each other in a comprehensive way covering all outstanding issues. It was done like that. So, in a way we do not know why in July on their side there was some string that snapped. That is all I can say. It is like you are playing an instrument and some string snapped.

Question: On the last day.

Foreign Secretary: On the last day. Let us put that behind us. Even EAM, when he spoke to Mr. Bashir said we could have done so much if we had agreed at that time. In June the Foreign Secretaries had essentially worked out a very good sort of way forward. But anyway let us move forward now. Let us not look behind.

Question: Madam, did they raise the Samjhauta blast and Hindu terror?

Foreign Secretary: They talked about Samjhauta and said that they would also be interested in knowing what happens about the investigation.

Question: What was our response to that?

Foreign Secretary: We said there is an investigation ongoing; our Home Minister Mr. Chidambaram had said on record that as and when the investigation is completed - because under our laws until investigation is completed you are not going to be able to share evidence. So, once that is done and whatever relevant evidence is there, we would share it with Pakistan because a number of Pakistanis died in that blast. So, Pakistan government has been asking us about it.
Question: Madam, when you say that before Mr. Qureshi comes things would be in place. Do you mean to say that the schedule would have been set or some meetings would have taken place?

Foreign Secretary: Some meetings would have taken place. Hopefully you are going to see some activity and you will have enough to write about. So, I need not tell you everything now.

Question: About 26/11, what is the progress? They talked about the investigation and trial process and all that. Did they get back to you on the December 17 note which you sent them?

Foreign Secretary: Recently, I think February 3, they sent us a response.

Question: Could you clarify it?

Foreign Secretary: They asked us some questions about our Commission. We wanted to send a Commission. They said on the face of it we do not know under what law and under what provision you want to send this Commission because in their mind, they were asking questions as to why this Commission is being sent. And they have added that if you can let us know the law, regulation under which you want to send this, we could look at it.

Question: And what about NIA?

Foreign Secretary: That is what some reports are referring to as NIA. But when we spoke to Pakistan, when we communicated the request to Pakistan we said it is a Commission that wants to go. We did not spell out who is going.

Question: And their Judicial Commission we had sought certain clarifications. Did they reply on what they would be doing?

Foreign Secretary: They have provided some answers to that. But we would like this to be governed by the principle of comity. It is a legal parlance: 'comity', that is reciprocity, respect for each other's laws, jurisprudence. It is there in the OED, you can look it up.

Question: Meaning both sides should allow.

Foreign Secretary: Reciprocity.

Question: There was this comment made by their Foreign Minister yesterday. He gave an interview to Gulf News saying that it is time for India to have a fresh look at the issue and probably it is time also to make Kashmiris a part of the India-Pakistan dialogue. How would you react to that?
Foreign Secretary: If you are going to ask me to react to everything they say, there is an audience he is addressing in Pakistan obviously, that is all I can say. As far as we are concerned, when India and Pakistan meet to discuss this there is an established way of dealing with it. We discuss it bilaterally, we discuss it between the Foreign Ministries of the two sides. But we discuss it just between India and Pakistan. The people of Jammu and Kashmir are part of the Indian system. There are two parties involved in this - India and Pakistan. There can be no third party. But while I am answering this I also want to say this that I think all of us I am sure are on the same side on this, and that applies to Pakistan also. We should not kill this process now. So much effort has gone into it. So much hard work has gone into it. Let it be able to breathe a little.

Question: Madam, has Samjhauta been a blessing in disguise for the peace process?

Foreign Secretary: Has it been a blessing for the peace process? I do not know. It is a difficult question to answer. But the line we have taken, and I have told the Pakistani journalists also, terrorism is terrorism, an act of terrorism wherever it happens is an act of terrorism, period. That is how we look at it.

Question: Madam, you said that yesterday that Kashmir was discussed. I just want to know one thing. Are the two sides thinking of something out of the box?

Foreign Secretary: I am certainly not at that stage.

261. Agreed Outcome of India Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks in Thimphu.

February 10, 2011.

In pursuance of the mandate given by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan, following their meeting in Thimphu in April 2010, the Minister of External Affairs of India and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan had met in Islamabad in July 2010 to review the current state of the bilateral relationship and discuss steps to promote trust and confidence between the two countries. The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met in Thimphu on February 6, 2011 to carry forward this process. They briefed their respective Governments. The two sides have agreed on the following:

(i) They have agreed to resume dialogue on all issues following the spirit of the Thimphu meeting between the two Prime Ministers.

(ii) The Foreign Minister of Pakistan will visit India by July 2011 to review progress in the dialogue process with his counterpart. This will be preceded by a meeting of the two Foreign Secretaries.

(iii) They have agreed that prior to the visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, meetings at the level of respective Secretaries will be convened on Counter-terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial); Humanitarian issues; Peace & Security, including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; promotion of friendly exchanges; Siachen; Economic issues; Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project; and Sir Creek (at the level of Additional Secretaries/ Surveyors General).

(iv) Dates of the aforementioned meetings will be fixed through diplomatic channels.

The agreement was reached during a 90-minute meeting between Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao and her Pakistani counterpart Salman Bashir in Thimphu on 6th February on the sidelines of SAARC meeting. The details were revealed on 10th February after both sides had briefed their governments. Media reports said that the Secretary-level talks would as in the past be held on eight subjects.

The subjects on which talks were counter-terrorism (progress in Mumbai trial included), humanitarian issues, peace and security, including confidence building measures, Jammu and Kashmir, promotion of friendly exchanges, Siachen, economic issues and the Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project. The issue of Sir Creek would be discussed at the level of Additional Secretaries or Surveyors-General.

Speaking to the media in Thimphu, Ms. Rao hinted at the talks incorporating a new subject - Afghanistan. "Why not? One of the ideas that came up was that why should we be just stuck with discussing these issues, why cannot we discuss more issues? Why cannot we discuss the situation in our region," Ms. Rao said when asked whether both sides were prepared to discuss coordination of positions on Afghanistan.

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir briefing the journalists on return to Islamabad said in Islamabad that the resumption of "full spectrum dialogue" with India, was a "significant breakthrough" with implications beyond the bilateral relationship. The process - which he described as 'Work in Progress' - would begin in March with a series of "carefully sequenced meetings" on all issues over the next three months, leading to a review meeting at the Ministerial level. Factoring in the skepticism triggered by similar thaws in the past which ended in the deep-freezer, Mr. Bashir sought to toe a pragmatic line, stating that while the two countries were dealing with difficult and complex issues, it was important to show that both had the ability to work through them. "It requires patience, responsibility and political will."

As to why the Samjhauta Express blast and Indian role in the turmoil in Balochistan was not included in the segment on counter-terrorism in the document on the outcome of the meeting - particularly since the Mumbai terror attack was mentioned - he said: "It is in our interest to have a special focus on Mumbai under the rubric of counter-terrorism."

Stating that communication between the two countries on the issue was voluminous enough to build an archive, he added that if inclusion of Mumbai provided a degree of comfort to the Indians, then so be it. "That does not prevent us from raising our concerns…. We have nothing to hide. We want to expose the reality behind terrorism—."

To a question on whether Pakistan was open to the Indian suggestion to include Afghanistan-related issues in bilateral dialogue, Mr. Bashir noted that the worst thing that can happen to Afghanistan and this region is if Indo-Pak rivalry was super-imposed on an already volatile country. Asked to identify the difference between this thaw in bilateral relations and earlier spells of warmth, he indicated that the attempt this time was to look for common denominators without compromising on national interest. A recurrent thought that he articulated pertained to impact of Indo-Pak relations on regional stability at a time when the centre of gravity in geo-politics is shifting to the greater Asian region. Stating that the resolution of the Kashmir issue as per the aspirations of the Kashmiri people was crucial for a self-propelling peace process, he refused to be drawn into commenting on Indian remarks that the geography of the sub-continent would not change. "We will deal with it when we talk on this issue."
In response to a question the spokesperson said:

"We have seen remarks made by the Spokesperson of Pakistan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee report "Avoiding water wars: Water Scarcity and Central Asia's Growing importance for stability in Afghanistan and Pakistan".

The Indus Waters Treaty is an example of mutually beneficial cooperation between the two countries, which has withstood the test of time for the past fifty years. India has always strictly adhered to the provisions of the Treaty, even during times when hostilities have broken out between the two countries.

As we embark on re-engagement between the two countries, it is important that we eschew rhetoric that does not create a conducive environment for a comprehensive, sustained and serious dialogue."

New Delhi, March 25, 2011.

Letter to President Zardari-

New Delhi, March 29, 2011.

1. The India-Pakistan Home/Interior Secretary level Talks were held in New Delhi on March 28-29, 2011. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Gopal K. Pillai, Home Secretary of India, while the Pakistan delegation was headed by Mr. Qamar Zaman Chaudhary, Interior Secretary of Pakistan.

2. The meeting was held in pursuance of the decision taken in Thimphu (Bhutan) in February 2011 by the Governments of Pakistan and India, to resume the dialogue process and in the backdrop of Bilateral meeting between the Home Minister of India and the Interior Minister of Pakistan held in Islamabad on June 25-26, 2010.

3. The meeting was held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

4. Both sides exchanged views on the decisions taken in the last round of Talks held in Islamabad in 2008. It was agreed that it was important for both sides to remain engaged on outstanding issues and henceforth the Home/Interior Secretary level Talks would be held bi-annually.

5. Both sides agreed to set up a Hotline between Home Secretary of India and Interior Secretary of Pakistan to facilitate real time information sharing with respect to terrorist threats.

6. Both sides reiterated their commitment to fight terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and reaffirmed the need to bring those responsible for such crimes to justice.

7. Pakistani side provided updates on the ongoing trial and investigation in Pakistan on the Mumbai Terror Attacks. Pakistan conveyed its readiness, in principle, based upon the principle of comity and reciprocity, to entertain a Commission from India with respect to Mumbai Terror Attack investigations. Modalities and composition in this connection will be worked out through diplomatic channels. Dates for the visit of the Judicial Commission from Pakistan in connection with Mumbai attack trial will be conveyed by India within four-six weeks. NIA and FIA will continue to cooperate in the Mumbai Terror Attack investigations.

8. India provided information on the on-going Samjhautha Express blast case investigation. It was also agreed that after filing of report in the court, updated information will be shared with the concerned Pakistan authorities.

9. Both sides noted and welcomed the release of prisoners and fishermen by each other since the last round of Talks. It was agreed that both sides would release by April 15, 2011 those civilian prisoners/fishermen who have completed their sentence, whose nationality status has been confirmed by the respective Governments and whose travel documents have been received. Complete list of prisoners in each others' custody will be exchanged by both sides on July 1, 2011.

10. Both sides agreed that the problem and issues of the inadvertent crossers should be viewed sympathetically, and in a focused and sensitive manner. Accordingly, both sides also agreed to task the Coast Guard of India and Pakistan Maritime Security Agency to work on setting up a mechanism for release of inadvertent crossers (fishermen) and their boats on the same lines as the inadvertent crossers on land. The Group will submit its report to the Home/Interior Secretaries before the next round of Talks.

11. Both sides commended the work done by the Judicial Committee on Prisoners for the release, repatriation and humane treatment of prisoners and agreed on the need for its continuation. The next meeting of the Judicial Committee would be held from April 19-23, 2011 in Pakistan.

12. Both sides shared the concern of the growing menace of Narcotics/Drugs and agreed that cooperation between NCB of India and ANF of Pakistan should be enhanced to ensure an effective control on drug trafficking. It was further agreed that Talks between DG, NCB and DG ANF would be held annually. Indian side accepted the invitation for DG NCB to visit Pakistan in May 2011 for talks with DG ANF.

13. The MoU on Drug Demand Reduction and Prevention of Illicit Trafficking in Narcotics Drugs/Psychotropic Substances and Precursor Chemicals and related matters’ as finalized will be formally signed at the next DG level meeting of NCB-ANF in May 2011.

14. It was decided that CBI and FIA will schedule a meeting to work out the technical details of moving forward on issues of, human trafficking, counterfeit currency, cyber crimes and Red Corner Notices (RCNs).

15. Both sides agreed to set up a Joint Working Group to examine the modalities for streamlining the visa procedure/modalities and for giving a final shape to revision of the Bilateral Visa Agreement.

16. The Interior Secretary of Pakistan invited the Home Secretary of India for the next Home/Interior Secretary level Talks in Pakistan. The invitation was accepted.

17. Both sides agreed that the visit of the Interior Minister of Pakistan to India will take place on mutually convenient dates, to be decided through diplomatic channels.
266. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs condemning tragic assassination of Pak Federal Minister Shahbaz Bhatti.

New Delhi, March 2, 2011.

We convey our heartfelt condolences to the bereaved family, the people and the Government of Pakistan on the tragic assassination* of H.E. Shahbaz Bhatti, Federal Minister of Minority Affairs of Pakistan. We condemn this dastardly crime. In this difficult hour, our prayers and thoughts are with the bereaved family and the people of Pakistan.

267. Statement by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to the media on the visit of Pakistan Prime Minister Yusaf Raza Gilani.

Mohali (Punjab), March 30, 2011.

I am very grateful to Prime Minister Gilani for having accepted my invitation to join me in watching this beautiful game of cricket. Cricket has been a uniting factor, it has brought our two Prime Ministers together and I dare say that's a very good beginning. Whatever be the differences between our two countries we have to find pathways to resolve them. And Gilani Sahib and I have had extensive discussions on all outstanding issues and we have reaffirmed our resolve that there are difficulties on the way but we will make every honest effort to overcome those difficulties. And the message from Mohali is that the people of India and Pakistan want to live in peace and amity and that the two Prime Ministers have committed their Governments to work in that direction.

268. Statements by Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan.

Chandigarh/Mohali (Punjab), March 30, 2011.

Pakistan Prime Minister: Fist of all I want to thank the Prime Minister for inviting us to watch the cricket match. We watched both the teams playing. All the people of both the countries enjoyed watching them play. It is a game. I think apart from winning or losing a game, this victory has been for the game of cricket.

This is a victory of both the countries. It provided us an opportunity to the two countries to gather together and talks on its sideline. We had an opportunity to talk and talk on all the issues and it is our determination to resolve all the issues. I also congratulate the Prime Minister for resuming the composite dialogue. It was a promise at Thimphu. It is the Thimphu spirit the the talks between the Home Secretaries, which were held yesterday had been a great success and sent out a good message.

By the grace of God next month next month Commerce Secretaries will meet and this way eight rounds will be completed and then the foreign ministers will meet. We want that both the countries resolve their problems themselves. We do not want that we are not able to resolve our issues. We have the ability and capacity to resolve our all issues. By the Grace of God talks have been held on all our issues and Prime Minister has been magnanimous to say that we are all prepared to resolve our issues by ourselves. We want that a positive message should go from both our countries. Our common enemies are poverty, hunger, disease, unemployment. Lack of development, and infrastructure—we should give our attention to these problems. By the Grace of God, the Prime Minister's attitude to our problems is that, and he said this earlier also, that we both want our issues to be resolved, so that both the countries prosper and progress leading to development.

Chandigarh/Mohali (Punjab), March 30, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good evening. As you are aware, at the invitation of Hon. Prime Minister of India, Prime Minister Gilani of Pakistan arrived today morning. Both Prime Ministers watched the match together. PM also hosted a dinner in honour of the visiting dignitary. Foreign Secretary Smt. Nirupama Rao is here to brief you about the visit of Prime Minister of Pakistan, as also the exchange of views, the discussions between the two Prime Ministers. I would also like to introduce our High Commissioner to Islamabad, Mr. Sharad Sabharwal, who has joined the Foreign Secretary.

I will request Foreign Secretary to make an opening statement and thereafter she will take a few questions. She has just fifteen minutes for this interaction. So, you please bear with us.

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): Thank you, Vishnu.

I know all of you are following the cricket match and the excitement surrounding it. I wanted to say that our Prime Minister and the Prime Minister of Pakistan have had a very wide-ranging conversation today on various issues that are of relevance to the relations between India and Pakistan. I think it would be fair to say that just as we spoke of a Thimphu spirit last April when the two Prime Ministers met on the margins of the SAARC Summit, it would be appropriate to say that there is today a Mohali spirit that pervades our relationship and that this is an extremely positive and encouraging spirit that has been generated as a result of today’s meeting.

As I said, this was a wide-ranging conversation and it took place against the backdrop of what is a sporting contact, a cricket match between our two countries. And indeed sporting contacts such as this epitomise the essence of people-to-people exchange and the spirit of a good game, a constructive - it may be a competitive game but it is also a constructive game, it has a constructive spirit that surrounds it. It truly is cricket, to use that phrase. So, as I said, sporting contacts epitomise in many senses the substance, the essence of people-to-people contact between two countries such as ours. And I think they contribute a great deal to cementing understanding and friendship between the two countries.

In their conversation today the two Prime Ministers also spoke about the importance of such exchanges as those between the parliamentarians of the two countries. The Chairman of the Rajya Sabha and the Speaker of the Lok Sabha have invited their counterparts in Pakistan to send a parliamentary delegation to India. This we believe also can be an extremely good channel of friendly exchange between the two countries, and will help in many ways contribute to strengthening dialogue between two democracies such as ours. And across the political spectrum I think it contributes to better understanding.

As you know, a dialogue process has been set in motion between India and Pakistan after a certain interregnum. The Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan have just concluded a very positive round of discussions. There are a number of issues flowing from that meeting which we intend to follow up on, and that will in a sense also generate a positive momentum. The Commerce Secretaries of the two countries will meet the next month -in April- in Islamabad. This will be followed by a series, a sequence of other meetings including those between our Surveyors General, our Defence Secretaries. We will also of course have the meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries. I will meet with my counterpart towards the middle of this year. And this will be followed by the meeting of the two Foreign Ministers of the two countries.

So, I think we have begun this year, 2011, with a very positive agenda of contact and exchange between India and Pakistan. It is a good augury for the future. And indeed the meeting of our two leaders here in Mohali today has once again reaffirmed the intention of both Governments to take forward the process of dialogue because dialogue is a process through which we can understand each other better, through which we can resolve outstanding issues, and the goal of this dialogue is normalisation of relations, a pervasive and a more permanent process of normalisation in an uninterrupted manner.

Thank you and I will be happy to take your questions.

Question: India Pak dialogue has been hostage to the issue of terror. Do you think that the dialogue process has really crossed that hurdle now and we can have a sustained dialogue irrespective of the progress on the terror issue?
Foreign Secretary: I would like to emphasise that in the course of the dialogue that we have commenced with Pakistan and indeed even in the meeting that the two Prime Ministers had today, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh reiterated, let me say this, reiterated the need for an atmosphere free of violence and terror in order to enable the true normalisation of relations between India and Pakistan; and let me also add that Prime Minister Gilani shared this sentiment. So, I think you must put all this in proper context.

Question: on nature of the conversation

Foreign Secretary: The two Prime Ministers were here to watch the semi-finals of the World Cup, as you know, between India and Pakistan. And as I said, they had a wide-ranging conversation. These were not talks, if you were to look at it in the orthodox sense of the word, it was a wide-ranging conversation in which they touched upon a number of issues of relevance to the relationship.

Question: On impact of the meeting between both PMs

Foreign Secretary: I think every such meeting between the leaders of the two countries generates an extremely positive momentum. And when we speak of dialogue, I have been using the word reengagement several times over and I would like to emphasise that this is reengagement between India and Pakistan. But the political level contact and the leadership level meetings between the two countries and the understanding that is generated as a result has a very positive impact on the relationship.

Question: On desirability of sporting contacts.

Foreign Secretary: I would like to emphasise that both Prime Ministers, and in fact at the dinner just now, both the Prime Ministers spoke to the guests present. And one of the points that they emphasised was how good sporting contacts can be between the two countries and once they are resumed the positive impact that they will create for generation of better understanding. So, definitely we would like to see sporting contacts between the two countries resumed. In fact, Prime Minister Gilani also mentioned that it would be very nice if our cricket team could go across to Pakistan and play the Pakistan side in a match in Pakistan.

Question: Madam, did Prime Minister Gilani extend an invitation to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to visit Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary: Yes, he did extend an invitation to our Prime Minister to visit Pakistan. It was at the dinner when Prime Minister Gilani spoke about this and I am sure that this will need to be discussed and finalised through diplomatic channels. But as I said, an exchange of visits between leaders, more contact, more dialogue, more conversations of this nature, are in themselves a very very positive phenomenon.

Question: You mentioned the wide-ranging conversation. Could you specify some of the issues that were touched upon in this conversation?

Foreign Secretary: I want to emphasise one aspect in this. I think what came across, the sense that all of us got who were present at this very important occasion was that as two neighbours India and Pakistan have to engage with each other directly in order to seek cooperative solutions to the problems that confront the two countries; that there are challenges and there are opportunities. And what are the challenges and opportunities? I think the focus was on development, on economic growth, on trade, on access to technology, on health, on education, all the issues that concern the future of people in both these countries, and that we should seek a cooperative strategy, a cooperative set of solutions to confronting the challenges that we are faced with and that we should avail of the opportunities before us to enable us to confront these challenges.

Question: Has any regional issue been discussed?

Foreign Secretary: Not to the best of my knowledge. Of course, I have not had a read-out on the entire range of issues that were discussed. But they did speak of how India and Pakistan can develop cooperative solutions to the problems that confront both our region and in the global sense also. They talked about developments in the Middle-East. Both India and Pakistan have large numbers of our people who work in the Middle-East, who earn a livelihood in the Middle-East, and therefore, instability and turbulence in that region affects our people. Therefore, India and Pakistan need to be also talking to each other about these sorts of issues.

Question: It is a straight question. Have we forgotten 26/11 or what happened in India or is it all behind us? Since, now we have started talking at the level of Commerce, Foreign and Home Secretaries, has India forgotten 26/1?

Foreign Secretary: No, you cannot say we have left behind 26/11. I think, as I mentioned earlier, our Prime Minister had said that it is very important that there should be an atmosphere free of terrorism and violence, if genuine normalisation is to be achieved between the two countries. In the talks that were held between the Home secretaries we raised the question of 26/11 and we have repeated that in the on-going trial and investigations that it is very important that the evidence is scrutinised properly and that those responsible are brought to justice. So, it is very important that there should be proper closure. Now proper closure does not mean that we set it aside or we have brushed it under the carpet. Not at all!

Question: Has a date been agreed to for PM's visit to Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary: Not any immediate date that I can convey to you at this moment. But I think the intention is to stay in touch to keep up the contact. And as the dialogue process develops, I think there will be further directions from the leadership level naturally to impart positive momentum to it.

Question: I just wanted to know if there were any areas of difference.

Foreign Secretary: As I said, they were here to watch the cricket match. They sat together watching it before dinner, and then they had a dinner meeting, that conversation over dinner. And they are back now watching the final moments of the cricket match. So, that really provided the setting and, in a sense, the locale for this meeting today. So, in a sense I would put it this way that the game of cricket provided the impetus for this meeting. And that game and the manner in which it is being played between the two sides I think has set a sort of a very positive trend that a game played well, played in a spirit of sportsmanship, can indeed provide very a good example for how we can expand contact in a number of fields.

Question: You were talking of Mohali spirit, you were talking of closure. My question relates to both of these. We in Punjab have been the biggest sufferers of Pak inspired terror? Should we just forget about it?

Foreign Secretary: I think your question is an important one. I think the emphasis here is on getting people to reconnect with each other, and that is people in bordering States also of the two countries. The other thing I would like to mention, since you have brought up the issue of Punjab, Prime Minister mentioned in his conversation with Prime Minister Gilani over dinner that one of Prime Minister Gilani's forefathers, Mian Mir, was involved in the setting up of the Golden Temple which is an abode of peace. And I think that is really the signature for this meeting, it is about peace, it is about reconciliation, it is about healing wounds. I think that is the takeaway from this meeting.

Question: Will India play a cricket match in Pak soon?

Foreign Secretary: Please address that to the cricketing authorities. As I said, we are for sporting contact between the two countries, between India and Pakistan.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

270. Speech of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the dinner hosted in honour of Pakistan Prime Minister Yusaf Raza Gilani.

Mohali (Punjab), March 30, 2011.

Cricket has become a unifying factor and I think one thing which we can agree is that the sporting links between our two countries should be normalized as early as possible.

We live in the world of great uncertainty. What is happening in the West Asia—no one could imagine only a month or two ago. And all this makes it all the more necessary that India and Pakistan, placed as we are strategically in this region, should both together exchange views and evolve a cooperative strategy on how to deal with the highly uncertain regional and global environment we live in today. It goes without saying that if oil prices rise, if there is unrest in West Asia it would affect both of us, both our countries, enormously as I mentioned to you this afternoon. It is therefore very important that the two countries should increasingly look at all these developments from the point of view of our peoples' needs, their aspirations and how working together we can find cooperative strategies to deal with these massive challenges that we face.

What has happened in Japan is unthinkable—a tsunami followed by nuclear tragedy and that followed by nuclear tragedy. But in this increasingly integrated world, peace and prosperity are both indivisible. And we are neighbors. Destiny requires that we should find cooperative solutions to all the problems that we face. When we met in Thimpu last year we both agreed that trust deficit is one area where we need to act, and act fast enough, to create a new climate in which cooperative modes of thinking will flourish and take us on the path of progress.

That you have honored me in accepting my invitation to join me in watching this beautiful match, I am very very grateful to you. India and Pakistan face enormous challenges but also enormous opportunities. Our biggest enemy is poverty, ignorance and disease. If we work together to find cooperative solutions, if we do not allow ancient animosities to affect the possibility of working together in the contemporary setting of our region and the world, I dare say we can write a new chapter in the history of development cooperation in this subcontinent of ours.

Prime Minister, we had a very elaborate and extensive exchange of views on all outstanding issues and the message that should go from Mohali is that the Prime Ministers of both countries are agreed that they are determined to find cooperative solutions to all the outstanding issues that we face. If there are difficulties we have the will to persevere, we have the will to overcome.
And in you we have a leader, a Prime Minister who inspires confidence. As I mentioned to you, you come from a family with the great tradition of Saint Miyan Mir who laid the foundation stone of the Golden Temple, the abode of peace. And God has given me this opportunity and I sincerely hope and pray that under your distinguished leadership democracy will flourish in Pakistan. And that we will find peaceful and productive ways of engaging our two countries in the diverse areas which have enormous bearing on the future of our two countries and the wellbeing of our two people.

With these words I once again extend to you a very warm and cordial welcome. Though your stay here is very brief but you would have sensed how the love for sports is something which unites the people of our two countries and we should build on that.

And if we have to bridge the trust deficit, it is essential that at all levels we should work together. Political personalities must visit each other's countries more often. Official contacts must be increased; civil society contact must be increased. And I am very happy that the presiding officer of our Lok Sabha and the presiding officer of the Rajya Sabha have sent invitations to their counterparts in Pakistan to come and pay a visit. I dare say in moulding the future climate of opinion, parliamentarians have a very crucial role to play. I sincerely hope that parliamentarians from India and Pakistan would set in motion a process of permanent reconciliation between our two countries so that we can realize the aspirations of our people for a life of dignity and self-respect. Once again, my grateful thanks to you sir for accepting my invitation.

permanent reconciliation between our two countries so that we can realize the aspirations of our people for a life of dignity and self-respect. Once again many thanks to you, sir, for accepting my invitation.

271. Interview of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao by Mr. Karan Thapar for TV Programme 'India Tonight'.

New Delhi, April 5, 2011.

Interviewer (Shri Karan Thapar): Hello and welcome to India Tonight. Have Indo-Pakistan relations turned a page and opened a new chapter, or is that the triumph of euphoria and sentiment over substance? That in a sense is the key issue I shall explore today with the Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao.

Mrs. Rao, I want to quote to you something that you said after the two Prime Ministers had met at Mohali. According to The Hindu you said, "This is reengagement. It is about peace, it is about healing wounds, it is about reconciliation. It is a good augury for the future". Those are not just positive but very strong words. What do you say to critics who say you may be overegging the pudding?

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): I certainly do not look at it that way. I think the fact that our two Prime Ministers have met at Mohali generated a very positive impact. And I think every such meeting not just builds atmosphere but it also creates a sense of direction, a sense of positive orientation. Now let us look back at Thimphu. They met in Thimphu in April, our two Prime Ministers, and everybody spoke of a Thimphu spirit and the decision to reengage with Pakistan and to create, if I may use a clichéd term, a roadmap for the way forward. And what we sought to do at Mohali and what the two Prime Ministers indeed through their meeting were able to convey was that at the leadership level, there is a sense of commitment to looking at the entire process of India-Pakistan relations, stressing the need for sustained, serious and comprehensive dialogue. And what is the goal of this dialogue you may ask. The goal of this dialogue is normalisation of relations, something that has eluded us for the last sixty years.

Interviewer: In that quotation, you spoke about healing wounds. Have the deep wounds of 26/11 been healed; or is it your position that the time has come to move on; or at least to widen the scope of subjects that the two countries discuss with each other? Which of these three is it?

Foreign Secretary: Yes and no. I think my answer would bridge both these concepts. The wounds of 26/11 have not healed as yet. I think we would do wrong to the people who lost their lives and the families who continue to grieve as a result of what happened so tragically in Mumbai, if we were to say that 26/11 is behind us. There is an ongoing trial in Pakistan; there are questions still to be answered; there is evidence to be scrutinised; there is need for agencies in both countries to cooperate better in this regard. The Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan have just had a good meeting, a positive meeting. So, we are trying to build on that. Obviously the wounds of 26/11 will not heal easily. I think there is sentiment in this country in India and there is grief still which has not died. Let me put it this way. Our grief cannot die when it comes to 26/11. Interviewer: You said, ‘Yes and no’. What is the ‘yes’ side of the answer? You have given me in a sense the ‘no’ side. What is the ‘yes’?

Foreign Secretary: The yes side is that, you mentioned it in your question, we have to engage with each other across a wide range of issues that need to be addressed.

Interviewer: And that has started.

Foreign Secretary: And that is commencing.

Interviewer: So, there is a sense in which India is taking a clear, firm step forward. We are moving on.

Foreign Secretary: Yes. And as our Prime Minister has said very aptly and he said this a few years ago, there is a road that we need to walk down in this process of normalisation and a road is made by walking and we are beginning that process of walking.

Interviewer: Now, the decision to invite the Pakistan Prime Minister to Mohali took everyone by surprise and some newspapers have said that it was a decision taken by the Prime Minister and possibly even the MEA was not onboard when the decision was taken. Is there any truth in that?

Foreign Secretary: The decision was obviously the Prime Minister's. And we in MEA, since we in a sense are practitioners of the policy that the Government sets down in this regard, are obviously part of this process.

Interviewer: But this was a personal decision of the Prime Minister.

Foreign Secretary: It was a decision of the Prime Minister and I think it was a very good and timely and effective decision.

Interviewer: Did it take you by surprise?

Foreign Secretary: I have always sensed and I have always supported the vision of the Prime Minister about relations with Pakistan, about the need for the two countries to sit down by themselves, India and Pakistan, without assistance from anybody else to have a serious dialogue. So, I think it fitted very well into this process. And it was completely in consonance with the vision that Prime Minister has outlined for India-Pakistan relations.
Interviewer: It is in other words a decision that you and your Ministry totally endorse.

Foreign Secretary: Absolutely.

Interviewer: There is a certain amount of speculation particularly when something as important as this is announced and takes everyone by surprise that perhaps there was western, perhaps in particular American pressure on India to take a decisive step forward to push Indo-Pakistan relations down that road, as you are saying they need to walk together. Was there any sense in which the western world was leaning on us?

Foreign Secretary: Not at all. I do not believe there was any leaning on India. Look at it this way. We are not a country that in a sense is influenced by pressure of that sort. I spoke about the conviction that Prime Minister has about this relationship and the path that he would like both countries to take when it comes to normalisation. So, no question of pressure.

Interviewer: Let us then come to the actual talk that the two Prime Ministers had at Mohali. As Foreign Secretary, how would you identify the positives of that conversation?

Foreign Secretary: The positives of that conversation are basically that now that we have a sequence in terms of meetings that we plan to see completed over the next few months, we must keep in mind that there is a goal here, which as I said is normalisation of relations, that we must be prepared to discuss all the outstanding issues, all the complexities that have in a sense complicated the relationship all these years. And how do we do it? The approach that the Government of India has consistently maintained is that we need a graduated approach, we need to take one issue at a time, and at the same time understand that we have to address a trust deficit in the relationship, that we have to build a better atmosphere in relations between the two countries. And how do we do that? More people-to-people contact, address the humanitarian issues, look at trade, look at the play of market forces, build better connectivity, and very importantly, address the issue of terrorism and violent extremism that has been directed against our citizens from across the border because otherwise alienation trumps friendship.

Interviewer: I come to some of the specific subjects that may or may not have been discussed at Mohali but did Pakistan or does Pakistan share your graduated approach? Are they happy with that? Are they reconciled to it, if I can put it like that?

Foreign Secretary: When we say graduated approach we have never at any moment said we are shying away from discussing complex issues.
Interviewer: That must have reassured them hugely.

Foreign Secretary: I think Pakistan understands that position.

Interviewer: All right. Let us then come to certain important specific subjects. Was 26/11 specifically and terror in general discussed? If it was, what did the Pakistani Prime Minister say to Dr. Manmohan Singh?

Foreign Secretary: As I said in my briefing to the media at Mohali, this is a conversation that the two Prime Ministers had while watching the match at Mohali. It was not talks in the orthodox sense of the word. They were able in their conversation to discuss a number of outstanding issues. And the issue of terrorism and the issue of our concerns about violent extremism were raised by our Prime Minister, and they did have a discussion about this issue and the concerns that we have about this.

Interviewer: Did you get reassuring responses on terror and 26/11 from Mr. Gilani?

Foreign Secretary: The Pakistanis have been saying for some time that they are equally concerned about the threat of terrorism, that it affects them very deeply; and I concede that point. It does affect people in Pakistan today also. But as far as our concerns on terrorism are of relevance in this dialogue, and they are very relevant, we have consistently sought to put across to Pakistan that they must understand the depth of the seriousness and our concern on this issue. And I think that point has been driven home through the series of meetings that we have had with Pakistan in recent months including at this particular meeting.

Interviewer: So, you do sense that understanding from the Pakistani side today.

Foreign Secretary: I would say there is much more awareness from Pakistan as far as this issue is concerned.

Interviewer: The second critical issue obviously would have been Kashmir. Did the two Prime Ministers discuss Kashmir? And this time what did our Prime Minister say to the Pakistani Prime Minister on the subject?

Foreign Secretary: Let me put it this way. The issue of Kashmir has triggered conflict between India and Pakistan and we have seen that over the last sixty years. The pages of history have been written on this. And how do we move forward on this? Are we going to be imprisoned by the history of the conflict that has occurred between India Pakistan on this issue, or are we going to see how - despite the dividing lines of history, the political frontiers - we are going to tackle the issue of better relations between the two countries, despite our differences, and even when it comes to Kashmir. Let us look at economic contact, let us look at people-to-people contact, let us look at more confidence building. There was a process that we began before 26/11. And I think the gains from that process, the confidence that we were to build through that dialogue should not be lost sight of.

Interviewer: And did our Prime Minister find that on all these issues related to Kashmir he got warm, encouraging responses from the other side?

Foreign Secretary: I think the two Prime Ministers have a very good rapport between themselves and the communication flowed easily between the two when they met at Mohali.

Interviewer: They could speak freely and openly to each other.

Foreign Secretary: I believe so.

Interviewer: This is perhaps your third or fourth meeting with Prime Minister Gilani. How do you assess him? What is the view the Indian Government has of Prime Minister Gilani?

Foreign Secretary: Well, he is an elected representative of his people; he is the Head of Government in Pakistan; and he represents the democratic forces, if one can put it that way, in Pakistan. If you look at Pakistan, of course there are many problems that confront that country. There is endemic violence; there is turbulence; there are economic difficulties. But also there is a vocal judiciary, there is a media that debates very vociferously on a number of issues that concern relations with India, and there are professionals who man the Ministries. And we deal with all of them. That is the outlook that we have on relations with Pakistan at this point of time. But we have expressed our concern all along that even within this scenario there are voices, there are groups, there are individuals in that country that have an agenda, a rather destructive agenda, that speaks of violence and extremism directed against India. And these are the voices that need to be curbed, need to be controlled, if our relations are to really make significant progress.

Interviewer: To use the phrase that Dr. Manmohan Singh several years earlier once used to describe General Musharraf, is Mr. Gilani someone you feel in your bones you can do business with?

Foreign Secretary: We are certainly engaging the Government of Pakistan at this point of time, and Prime Minister Gilani and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh have a positive relationship, have good rapport between themselves. And I think all this is a sum of positives.

Interviewer: So, that is a yes.
Foreign Secretary: That is a yes.

Interviewer: What about the military in Pakistan? You know and I know that it is a shadow that lurks over the civilian government; the civilian government itself is pretty weak. This time round, when perhaps a new chapter is opening, does the civilian government in Pakistan have the support of General Qayani, General Pasha and the military establishment? Or once again are you a little concerned that there may be differences between these two?

Foreign Secretary: I do not believe we underestimate the complexities involved in the relationship. And there is of course the background, the experience that you build up over the years about dealing with a particular country. Now, what the Government of Pakistan tells us and our interlocutors tell us - and we have to basically judge this on the basis of what they tell us and also our assessment of the environment itself in Pakistan - what is conveyed to us is that the policy of dialogue with India to seek a peaceful resolution of outstanding issues is a policy that is the Government of Pakistan's policy and it is a policy that is shared or is endorsed by all the institutions of government including the army. This is the message that we are getting consistently in the last few meetings.

Interviewer: So, you believe General Kayani is on board.

Foreign Secretary: Well, we can only go by what the Government of Pakistan is telling us at the moment. We do not have any direct dealings with the army of Pakistan.

Interviewer: But for now, you are prepared to accept what you are being told.

Foreign Secretary: Well, we are preparing to go into a process of dialogue with utmost seriousness and with sincerity.

Foreign Secretary: Two quick questions. Many people feel that maybe the time has come for there to be sporting contacts, for an Indian cricket team to visit Pakistan. The last time when Indian cricket team went in 2004, it sort of changed the atmosphere. The ICC President, a Minister in your own Government Sharad Pawar, has publicly said that the ICC would want cricketing contact. Is the Indian Government now prepared for an Indian cricket team to visit and play in Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary: An Indian cricket team has been invited by Prime Minister Gilani to go and play in Pakistan. But let me talk about the general issue of sporting contacts. It is not as if sporting contacts were completely fractured between India and Pakistan in the last few years. We have had many many requests and we process them in the Ministry of External Affairs for teams from Pakistan to come here and play hockey matches or kabaddi matches.
Interviewer: But we have not gone there.

Foreign Secretary: It is not that we have forbidden our teams from going there. Security is always an issue and we always like to be sure about security when we allow our teams to go there. But when it comes to cricket, I think cricket sometimes becomes an instrument of diplomacy in such situations.

Interviewer: Hence my question.

Foreign Secretary: And therefore, why not promote cricketing contacts? We have seen how cricket matches have been played between India and Pakistan in the past. People in both countries have supported the idea of such contacts.

Interviewer: I am going to take that answer as a positive one. Why not promote cricketing contacts, suggests that you are open to an Indian team visiting Pakistan.

Foreign Secretary: We are definitely open. Of course, this has to be discussed between the cricketing fraternities on both sides and taken forward.

Interviewer: What about a visit by the Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan? He has had several such invitations. The Business Standard has now in a formal lead has suggested that in fact he should hasten and go quickly. Many people feel that Dr. Manmohan Singh's reluctance to go in 2006, 2007 is one reason why the back channel which people thought was coming to fruition did not actually achieve success. This time round, is our Prime Minister ready and willing to visit Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary: Our Prime Minister has been invited by Prime Minister Gilani to visit Pakistan. Obviously a visit of this nature has to be very carefully prepared. We will have to do a lot of groundwork between the Foreign Ministries of the two sides, between the two Governments. We have a series of meetings, a timetable of meetings in the next few months which will culminate in the visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India. So, we have some work to be done. In the meantime, in the interregnum, we will obviously be talking about the possibility of such a high-level visit to Pakistan with the Pakistan side through diplomatic channels. But timing is not decided as yet.

Interviewer: If I understand you correctly, a date has not been set, it may not be anywhere near being set. But from everything else you are saying, it seems to me as if this time round the Indian Prime Minister is keen to go and it is possible he may go, which is why you are trying to see how quickly it could happen.

Foreign Secretary: No, I would put it this way. I think the possibility exists. I do not rule out the possibility of a visit. As far as timing is concerned, it is not Thirdly I would like to say there is a lot of preparatory work that still needs to be completed before we can have such a visit.

Interviewer: But that work is beginning surely, isn't it?

Foreign Secretary: That work is beginning.

Interviewer: It is not that you are talking about it but not doing the work.

Foreign Secretary: We are doing the work, we are doing the work.

Interviewer: Foreign Secretary, let us come briefly to the dialogue the two Home Secretaries had just before Mohali. They have agreed to exchange Commissions with each other to further investigate 26/11. They have set up a hotline. They are going to meet biannually. And there is also some possibility of cooperation between India's CBI and NIA and Pakistan's FIA. How significant is all of that?

Foreign Secretary: Very significant, very positive, very constructive. The meeting of the Home Secretary and the Interior Secretary went very well. India and Pakistan were meeting to discuss these issues after an interregnum of more than two years, it has been a long time, and they were able to discuss a number of issues - the Mumbai trials, they talked about Samjhauta Express, they talked about cooperation as you said between the NIA and the FIA, and also on the drugs and narcotics front what kind of cooperation, the hotline, the visit of the judicial committee looking at the issue of prisoners, and of course as far as the Mumbai trials are concerned, on the principle of comity and reciprocity the exchange of Judicial Commissions.

Interviewer: So, all of this is actually very significant.

Foreign Secretary: Extremely so.

Interviewer: It is a real, genuine, positive meeting.

Foreign Secretary: Yes, and I think it is a very encouraging start to this process of dialogue and reengagement.

Interviewer: Two quick questions. The Hindustan Times has reported that the Indian Commission that will sometime in the near future visit Pakistan, would not have access to suspects and witnesses but will only have access to police investigators. Is that true? And if it is true, is that a cause of concern?

Foreign Secretary: I spoke about the principle of comity and reciprocity. Now their Judicial Commission is to come here. What they tell us is that they would like access to the Metropolitan Magistrate and the Investigating Officer, and possibly to a few doctors who had conducted the post mortems.
Interviewer: And we want reciprocal treatment.

Foreign Secretary: We are guided by the principle of reciprocity and comity and we would expect the same from Pakistan.

Interviewer: So, in fact, the Hindustan Times story may well end up being wrong.

Foreign Secretary: (Smiles) Well, do not be guided by media reports on such issues.

Interviewer: The second area of concern is India’s request for voice samples of the 26/11 accused. Already a lower court in Pakistan has refused it but Pakistan is now appealing to a higher court. That appeal will depend critically on the strength of case a Pakistani prosecutor puts up. How confident are you that the Pakistanis will put up a good, effective case and not fob you off?

Foreign Secretary: We do not want them to fob us off obviously on this. We are very serious about this matter. When the Home Secretary met his counterpart this was reiterated. And as you know, when our Home Minister was in Pakistan last June and when he spoke to Mr. Rahman Mallick this point was emphasised. So, we would like the Pakistanis to treat this with the utmost seriousness.

Interviewer: But are you confident they will?

Foreign Secretary: We would expect that they should treat it with the utmost seriousness.

Interviewer: So, it is expectation rather than confidence.

Foreign Secretary: Well, it is up to them to act with seriousness and commitment when it comes to acceding to our request.

Interviewer: Foreign Secretary, after the two Prime Ministers met, the Commerce Secretaries will meet, the Defence Secretaries will meet, then the Foreign Secretaries will meet, and finally the Foreign Ministers will meet. Even though India is reluctant to call this the resumption of the full-scale composite dialogue, isn’t that really what it amounts to?

Foreign Secretary: It is reengagement, I called it that. I am not getting stuck on nomenclatures, I have said before. But we are talking of a serious dialogue, a sustained dialogue, a comprehensive dialogue.

Interviewer: Comprehensive is the new word.

Foreign Secretary: A comprehensive dialogue. That is the way we look at it.
Interviewer: Not composite but comprehensive.

Foreign Secretary: Comprehensive and in an uninterrupted manner.

Interviewer: My last question. I began with this in my introduction, let me now put it to you bluntly. Has a new page turned, has a new chapter opened in our relationship?

Foreign Secretary: We are inscribing the pages of history here. I think it is too early to say that we have opened a new chapter. I do not want to get stuck in rhetoric or language of that nature. I think we are making a serious and sincere effort to reduce divergence, differences in our relationship and to build convergence.

Interviewer: And your fingers are crossed.

Foreign Secretary: I hope for the best.

Interviewer: Foreign Secretary, a pleasure talking to you.

Foreign Secretary: Thank you so much.

272. Response of External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna to questions on reports of presence of foreign troops in Pakistan Occupied Kashmir.

New Delhi, April 6, 2011.

We have seen media reports on the subject*. Government closely and regularly monitors all developments along our borders, which can have a bearing on our security. We continuously review and take all measures necessary to ensure the safety and security of our people, as well as, territorial integrity of the nation."

* Shri Krishna was responding to media reports about the presence of Chinese troops in Occupied Kashmir, who were engaged in various projects of strategic value in that area, which was a cause for concern.
Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to reported plea taken by Tahawwur Hussain Rana in a U. S court.

New Delhi, April 14, 2011.

"It is our expectation that all those responsible for the Mumbai terrorist attack will be brought to justice expeditiously. This position is shared by the international community at large, particularly those countries whose nationals were killed during this horrific attack. Meanwhile, Government has embarked on a dialogue process with Pakistan with the aim of normalising relations. This dialogue will naturally seek to address our terrorism related concerns, particularly with respect to the Mumbai terrorist attack. This issue figured prominently in the recently concluded Home Secretary-level talks as also in various recent interactions with the Government of Pakistan. Clearly, there is no dilution of our position in this regard".

Tahawwur Hussain Rana, a key accused in the 26/11 Mumbai terror attack case, had taken a plea in the US court that he had acted at the behest of Islamabad and its spy agency Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI), and not the Lashkar-e-Taiba. "We will certainly take it up," External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna told reporters while replying to a question. "We are in constant touch with the Pakistan government through our diplomatic channels," Mr. Krishna said. However, he added that the dialogue process with Pakistan would continue. "These are two different aspects. Peace talks will go on, cricket matches will go on and simultaneously our relentless efforts will continue to bring to justice all those responsible for the heinous crime," the Minister said.

"There are no contradictions in that position," Mr. Krishna said when asked if the revelations made by Rana would have an impact on India-Pakistan peace talks. "I have said that both these things will have to go on," he said. Referring to efforts made by India to extradite Abdul Rauf, a Pakistani national detained in Chile on suspicion of his involvement in the conspiracy behind the IC-814 hijacking in December 1999, Mr. Krishna said: "Our intelligence agencies have already deputed personnel to go to that country and then make an assessment whether it is the same person who was responsible for the hijacking. If it is so, necessary follow-up action would be initiated." Media quoted sources in the Home Ministry in New Delhi to suggest that the disclosures only corroborated what India had been stating about the role of ISI in the 26/11 attacks. David Coleman Headley, an American citizen of Pakistani descent and an accomplice of Rana, was also arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for his involvement in the attacks.

Members of the India-Pakistan Judicial Committee on Prisoners visited Pakistan from 18-23 April 2011 and visited jails in Karachi, Rawalpindi and Lahore. The members of the Committee are Justice (Retd) Mr. Nagendra Rai, Justice (Retd) Mr. Amarjeet Chaudhary, Justice (Retd) Mr. A. S. Gill and Justice (Retd) Mr. M. A. Khan from the Indian side and Justice (Retd) Mr. Abdul Qadeer Chaudhary, Justice (Retd) Mr. Fazal Karim, Justice (Retd) Mr. Nasir Aslam Zahid and Justice (Retd) Mr. Mian Muhammad Ajmal from the Pakistani side.

2. During the visit, the Pakistani side shared the lists of Indian Fishermen and civilian prisoners. Consular Access was conducted in respect of some of the fishermen and prisoners on the spot. Further it was recommended by the Committee to reconcile the figures of the prisoners and the fishermen at the earliest and to allow consular access to rest of the fishermen and prisoners in the second week of May 2011.

3. The Committee appreciated the release of 89 fishermen by Pakistani authorities and 1 Pakistani fisherman and 44 civil prisoners by Indian authorities. The Committee also appreciated the recommendations of the Home/Interior Secretary level talks held on 28-29 March 2011 at New Delhi to task the Coast Guard of India and Pakistan Maritime Security Agency to work on setting up a mechanism for release of inadvertent crossers (fishermen) and their boats on the same lines as the inadvertent crossers on land. The Group will submit its report to the Home/Interior Secretaries before the next round of Talks.

4. The Committee suggested that the Nationality verification process should be facilitated and all those prisoners who have completed their sentences and whose travel documents are available should be repatriated to their respective countries at the earliest.

5. The Committee also recommended humane approach in dealing with the cases of fishermen, women and juvenile prisoners, prisoners terminally ill or suffering from serious illness or physical disability and mentally disabled persons.

6. The Committee also recommended that all the prisoners shall be provided legal aid at all stages of their cases by the respective government.
7. The Committee suggested that the next visit to Indian jails by the Committee may be scheduled preferably during the second half of June, 2011 subject to the confirmation of dates by both the sides through diplomatic channels at an early date.

275. Agreed minutes of the 5th round of talks on commercial and economic cooperation between the Commerce Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

Islamabad, April 28, 2011.

The 5th round of India-Pakistan talks on Commercial and Economic Cooperation was held on 27-28 April 2011, in Islamabad.

2. The Indian delegation was led by Commerce Secretary, Rahul Khullar and the Pakistan delegation was led by Zafar Mahmood, Secretary, Commerce, List of participants is annexed.

3. Both sides agreed that increase in trade and economic engagement would help not only in the mutual quest for national development, but also contribute to building trust between the two countries. The discussions were guided by the mutual desire to realize the full potential of bilateral trade. To facilitate this objective, they agreed to make efforts to create an enabling environment for trade on both sides. The two sides also agreed to encourage greater engagement between the private sectors of the two countries.

With this in view, the following decisions were taken:

(i) To build confidence, dispel misunderstandings and allay and misapprehensions, it is essential that government in both countries support the business communities in promotion of bilateral trade. Further efforts would be made to make the bilateral trading environment more business friendly. Necessary outreach activities would be undertaken to bridge information gaps relating to the trade environment and economic opportunities.
To promote trade, both tariff and non-tariff barriers (NTBs) need to be reduced/removed. It was decided to establish a working Group (WG) specifically dedicated to address and resolve clearly identified sector-specific barriers to trade. The WG would comprise technical experts and representatives of regulatory bodies directly concerned with the clearly identified barriers. The first meeting of the WG shall be held by September 2011.

Both sides appreciated the significant progress made in developing physical infrastructure for trade through the Wagah-Attari land route. Closer coordination needs to be ensured to open the second gate and new dedicated roads for passenger and freight traffic. The India side intimated that its new Integrated Check Post is expected to be fully functional by October, 2011. To facilitate the coordinated effort of both sides, it was agreed that the Joint Technical Group for promotion of trade and travel would meet in June 2011 and thereafter every month to ensure adherence to the October 2011 timeline on both sides.

Both sides agreed to expand trade through Wagah - Attari by inter-alia
(a) increasing trading hours taking advantage of the new infrastructure
(b) expeditious clearance of cargo and
(c) facilitating movement of large vehicles and containerized traffic.

It was also agreed that Pakistan side would remove its present restrictions on trade by land route as soon as the infrastructure to facilitate mutual trade is completed. The timeline for this purpose would be before October, 2011.

It was noted that an informal and effective Customs liaison arrangement is already operating at Wagah-Attari. It was decided to formalise the arrangements in the form of a Customs liaison Border Committee which would meet at least once in two months to resolve any operational issue at the field level.

For harmonization in customs procedures, facilitation of trade consignments, exchange of trade data and information, both sides agreed that the Sub Group on Customs Cooperation would meet in New Delhi before 15th June, 2011. Nodal officers shall be notified by both sides before 15th May, 2011 to establish regular direct contact by email/fax/telephone on all matters relating to delay in clearance of trade consignments, trade document requirements, and other customs cooperation. It was agreed that Pakistan would send a draft Customs cooperation agreement within a month.

(viii) It was decided to undertake a new initiative to enable trade to electricity between both countries. To this end, a group of experts from both sides would examine feasibility, scope and modalities of such trading. Inter alia, the group may also address itself to issues such as suitable site (s) and routes for transmission lines, funding mechanisms and other related issues. The composition of the Group would be finalized before the end of June 2011 and the first meeting would be scheduled by October 2011.

(ix) Both sides also agreed to work out how to initiate and substantially expand trade in all types of petroleum products. A group of experts from both sides would be set up for this purpose before 15 June 2011. The Group would inter alia discuss trade arrangements, building of cross border pipelines and use of road/rail route, including the Munabao-Khokrapar route. The Group’s first meeting would be held before September 2011.

(x) A new initiative to promote bilateral trade in Bt. Cotton seeds was identified. This would help Pakistan’s farmers and its textile industry by significantly raising cotton yields and ensuring better cotton security. It was agreed to take this process forward by enabling Business-to-Business contact and governmental regulatory clearances.

(xi) Cooperation in the information Technology (IT) sector would be encouraged through the private sector route.

(xii) Pakistan recognized that grant of MFN status to India would help in expanding the bilateral trade relations.

(xiii) It was informed by Pakistan side that it would take immediate necessary steps to ensure that non-discriminatory trade regime is operationalized at the earliest. The consultative process in this regard has been set in motion and information from all stakeholders including business chambers and trade bodies is being collected to replace the present “Positive list” with a “Negative list”. It was agreed that this process would be completed by October, 2011.

(xiv) Both sides expressed the intent to explore the possibility of entering into a mutually agreed preferential trade arrangement to further promote bilateral trade by extending tariff concessions on products of export interest to both countries.
(xv) Both sides agreed that facilitating grant of Business Visas was essential to expansion of trade. It was noted that during the recent meeting of the Home Secretaries, it was decided to set up a joint Working Group to look at the Visa regime. Suitable inputs would be provided by both sides to this JWG, to realize the goal of easier access to Business Visas. In this regard the possibility of effective involvement of private sector through officially recognized joint chambers would be explored.

(xvi) While appreciating the need for business-to-business contact, both sides desired to create an enabling environment and encourage Chambers of Commerce and Industry on both sides to form officially recognised Joint Chambers at the apex and regional levels.

(xvii) Both sides agreed on the desirability of promoting bilateral investments and removing any impediments for such investments.

(xviii) On opening of bank branches in each other’s countries, both sides agreed that banking channels are important and the process needs to be fast tracked.

(xix) Trade Development Authority of Pakistan (TDAP) and its counterpart organization, India Trade Promotion Authority (ITPO) will collaborate on trade promotional activities. TDAP will send a draft MOU to ITPO for mutual cooperation by June 2011.

A Joint Working Group on “Economic and Commercial Cooperation and Trade promotion” will be co-chaired by the Joint Secretaries of the respective Departments of Commerce. Implementation of decisions taken in this round and any other trade promotion issues that may arise from time to time will be reviewed by this JWG.

Commerce Secretaries of both countries would meet bi-annually to oversee the functioning of this JWG. The talks were held in a very cordial and constructive atmosphere.
276. Joint Statement on India-Pakistan Talks on Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage.

Islamabad, May 13, 2011.

Under the resumed dialogue process between India and Pakistan, delegations of the two countries met in Islamabad from 12-13 May 2011 to discuss the Tulbul Navigation project/Wullar Barrage. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Javed Iqbal, Secretary, Ministry of Water and Power, Government of Pakistan and the Indian delegation was led by Mr. Dhruv Vijai Singh, Secretary, Ministry of Water Resources, Government of India. Secretary Singh and members of the Indian delegation also called on Syed Naveed Qamar, Minister for Water and Power, Government of Pakistan.

2. The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere. The two sides reiterated their commitment to bilateral engagement in a spirit of constructive cooperation. They discussed their respective positions on the Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage while reaffirming the commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.

3. Both sides emphasised the need for an early and amicable resolution of the issue within the ambit of the Indus Waters Treaty. In order to address the concerns of both countries, it was agreed that the Indian side shall forward comprehensive technical data to Pakistan within one month. The Pakistan side shall examine the said data and furnish its views to the Indian side by 15 September 2011. Both sides further agreed to take the matter forward in the light of the outcome of such technical consultations and in accordance with the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty.

277. Joint Statement issued on Pakistan - India Talks on Sir Creek Issue.

Rawalpindi, May 21, 2011.

Under the resumed dialogue process between Pakistan and India, delegations of the two countries met in Rawalpindi from 20-21 May 2011 to discuss the Sir Creek Issue. The Pakistan delegation was led by Rear Admiral Shah Sohail Masood, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Defence. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. S. Subba Rao, Surveyor General of India. During the visit, the Indian delegation also called on Lt. Gen. Syed Athar Ali, Secretary Defence.

2. The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere. The two sides discussed the Pakistan-India land boundary in the Sir Creek area and the delimitation of International Maritime Boundary between Pakistan and India.

3. Both sides exchanged non-papers in order to take their discussions forward, with a view to finding an amicable settlement of the issue. They agreed to meet again at a mutually convenient date.

It may be recalled that the last meeting on Sir Creek, in May 2007, had seen the two countries discuss the delimitation of the maritime boundary as well as the delineation of the boundary in Sir Creek in the light of the results of a joint survey conducted earlier that year. Maps and charts, which showed respective positions on the twin issues, had been exchanged. The joint survey of Sir Creek - a 96-km strip of water in the Rann of Kutch marshlands - was conducted from mid-January, 2007, as per an understanding reached between the two sides in May, 2006, to undertake an exercise that would verify the outermost points of the coastlines of both countries with regard to the equidistance method.

Having triggered the Indo-Pakistani War of 1965, the disputed marshland, which separates Pakistan's Sindh province from Gujarat on the Indian side, has been the bane of the fishermen of both countries as they are often caught straying into contested waters, ending up in long prison stints that are further stretched if there is a freeze in bilateral relations.

navigation. Moreover, it held that the project was beneficial for Pakistan as well as to firm up lean-season water supplies for its proposed projects and the Mangala dam in the PoK region.

Pakistan, on the other hand, contested India's position and called it a “storage project” and charged India with violation of the provisions under the Treaty. Though the Pakistani media reported that the Indian delegation had walked out of the talks on the first day, but both sides maintained that that was far from true and flagged the joint statement as evidence of the effort to move forward on the issue.
278. Joint Statement issued on Defence Secretary Level Talks between India and Pakistan on Siachen.

New Delhi, May 31, 2011.

The Defence Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan on Siachen were held on May 30-31, 2011 in New Delhi. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Pradeep Kumar, Defence Secretary, and the Pakistan delegation was led by Lt. Gen (Retired) Syed Athar Ali, Defence Secretary. The Defence Secretary of Pakistan also called on Shri AK Antony, Defence Minister of India.

2. Both sides welcomed the ongoing dialogue process. The discussions were held in a frank and cordial atmosphere, contributing to an enhanced understanding of each other’s position on Siachen. They also acknowledged that the ceasefire was holding since November 2003. Both sides presented their positions and suggestions towards the resolution of Siachen.

3. The Pakistan side presented a non-paper on Siachen.

4. Both sides agreed to continue the discussions in a meaningful and result oriented manner. They agreed to meet again at a mutually convenient date in Islamabad.

Media quoted sources in Pakistan delegation to suggest that a non-paper was handed over to the Indian side towards the conclusion of the discussions which would be perused in due course. While the Pakistan side sought to push for demilitarising the glacier, described as the highest battleground in the world, India had conveyed that Islamabad needed to dismantle the terror camps operating on its soil.

Among the issues that remained to be sorted out, according to unnamed official sources was modalities to authenticate the 110-km Actual Ground Position Line in the Saltro-Ridge-Siachen region. The Indian Army holds a dominant position on the ridge.

Islamabad, June 3, 2011

In pursuance of the decision taken during the Pakistan-India Interior/Home Secretaries level talks held in New Delhi on 28-29 March 2011, the first meeting of the Joint Working Group was held in Islamabad on 2-3 June 2011 to examine the modalities for streamlining the visa procedures and to finalize the draft of Bilateral Visa Agreement. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Nasar Hayat, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Interior, Government of Pakistan while the Indian delegation was led by Mr. G.V.V. Sarma, Joint Secretary (Foreigners), Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India.

The discussions were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere.

The two sides discussed details and modalities of visa facilitation with a view to easing travel for nationals of either country desiring to visit the other.

The two sides also discussed amendments in the existing visa agreement and agreed to continue the discussions on the new visa Agreement in the next meeting of Joint Working Group at New Delhi before the end of August, 2011 for finalization at the next Home/Interior Secretary level talks in Islamabad.

Security Provided to ship MV Suez released by Pirates and safe return of Indian sailors.

Response of Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the role of Indian navy ships in providing security to MV SUEZ.

New Delhi, June 17, 2011.

In response to questions the Official Spokesperson said,

The Indian Navy coordinated with other navies in the region so that security cover could be provided to MV Suez, the ship which was released by pirates recently and which has crew comprising, among others, of Indian and Pakistani nationals. One of our warships, INS Godavari, also closed on MV Suez and monitored her progress.

On June 18, 2011, the Spokesperson said:

"Somalian piracy is a global challenge and menace, which requires a well coordinated response by the international community. MV Suez that was seized in August 2010 has sailors from Egypt, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and India. During the preceding months, concerned Indian entities have been coordinating with their interlocutors overseas, which has led to the safe release of the sailors and the ship. MV Suez is now heading for Oman. Insinuations to the contrary by a few voices, stem from lack of appreciation of facts, and are totally baseless.

On June 18, 2011 India lodged Protest against Pakistan Navy Ship 'Babur's' risky manoeuvres:

India lodged a protest* today with the Government of Pakistan through the High Commission of Pakistan, New Delhi against the violation by Pakistan Naval Ship (PNS) Babur of relevant regulations on navigational safety as contained in the 'International Regulations for Prevention of Collisions at Sea' and Article 10 of the 'Agreement between India-Pakistan on Advance Notice on Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troops Movements 1991' involving INS Godavari on high seas. PNS Babur by its risky manoeuvres jeopardised the safety of INS Godavari and its crew.

On June 17, 2011, the Naval Adviser of the Pakistan High Commission was summoned to the Ministry of Defence and our serious concern on this incident was conveyed.

EAM relieved at safe return of Indian sailors, appreciates Pak assistance

June 23, 2011

On June 23 in a statement on the release of Indian sailors EAM S M Krishna said:

"The six Indian sailors, who were in captivity of Somali pirates abroad MV Suez, are now headed home from Karachi. We are relieved that their ordeal has ended and they would soon be safely back with their families. We appreciate the timely help extended to them and sailors of other countries, by the Pakistani navy.

However let us not forget that the ordeal of over five hundred sailors from across the world, who are still in captivity of the pirates, is not yet over. The scourge of piracy requires a well coordinated response by all..."
entities, especially navies of more than two dozen nations that provide security to sea faring vessels in piracy infested waters."

* Pakistan had accused the Indian vessel of hampering humanitarian operations being carried out by PNS Babur and making "dangerous manoeuvres," which resulted in the two ships "brushing past" each other. After Pakistan protest against what it called "the aggression by INS Godavari towards PNS Babur," India on 18th June lodged a similar protest with the Pakistan High Commission about its naval vessel. "PNS Babur, by its risky manoeuvres, jeopardizing the safety of INS Godavari and its crew."

(Both countries cited violation of regulations on navigational safety contained in the 'International Regulations for Prevention of Collisions at Sea' and Article 10 of the 'Agreement between India-Pakistan on Advance Notice on Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troops Movements 1991').

The Indian Navy had described reports of aggression by INS Godavari as incorrect. This incident was said to have happened in the Gulf of Aden while MV. Suez was being escorted towards Oman.

On 16th June, the Indian Navy had put out a statement claiming that it had been tasked to escort m.v. Suez that very morning. "On reaching m.v. Suez, INS Godavari made every effort through all available means and channels to communicate with Suez. However, the Master of m.v. Suez did not respond." After confirming that m.v. Suez was being escorted by other warships deployed in the Gulf of Aden, INS Godavari returned to its task of protecting two other merchant vessels carrying 21 Indians.

I would also like to briefly reflect on resumption of our dialogue process with Pakistan as mandated by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and his Pakistani counterpart, in April 2010 at Thimphu.

In the preceding months, meetings of Home Secretary/ Interior Secretary; Commerce Secretaries, Water Resources Secretaries; Additional Secretary/ Surveyor General on Sir Creek and Defence Secretaries on Siachen, have already taken place. We have had a useful exchange of views and have gained a better understanding of each other's positions. We have always approached our discussions in an open and constructive spirit.

Next, Foreign Secretary Rao will be heading for Islamabad to meet her counterpart. The agenda of discussions is already known to you. Her visit and discussions would carry forward the dialogue process with Pakistan. We also expect to have a meeting of Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan by July this year.

We hope to narrow the trust deficit between our nations and pave the way for normalization of relations by addressing all outstanding issues and concerns, particularly those pertaining to terrorism. This menace has to be dealt with firmly and transparently, for the common good of India and Pakistan, as well as, the region beyond.

We have to be patient, realistic and positive. As Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh has said on more than one occasion, peace and prosperity of South Asia is interlinked. We owe it to ourselves and generations to follow, to do what it takes, to embark on the path of peace and development.

282. Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to OIC’s incorrect description of Indian state of J&K.

New Delhi, June 22, 2011.

“We have seen reports that the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) has again chosen to refer to Jammu & Kashmir incorrectly, in an invitation to an Indian invitee to an OIC meeting. This is most regrettable*.

The state of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. We totally reject any reference or description to the contrary.”

283. Statement by Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao on arrival in Islamabad.

Islamabad, June 23, 2011.

I am very pleased to be in Pakistan on the invitation of my distinguished colleague, Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir. This is an important visit as it marks the penultimate leg of the resumed dialogue process before the visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India by July 2011.

I bring with me the best wishes of the people and Government of India for the people and Government of Pakistan. We wish to see a stable, peaceful and prosperous Pakistan.

During my stay in Islamabad, I am looking forward to my meetings with Foreign Secretary Bashir. We hope to discuss the issues that have been mandated to us by our leadership, namely Peace & Security, including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges.

I have come to Pakistan with an open mind and a constructive spirit in order to work towards building trust and confidence in our relationship and thereby leading to an eventual normalization of relations for the well being and prosperity of our two peoples.

* India was objecting to a letter from the Organisation of Islamic Conference which referred to Jammu and Kashmir as an "occupied" State.

Islamabad, June 24, 2011.

Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir

Well, Good afternoon Ladies and Gentlemen,

Thank you for your patience. Let me first of all welcome Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao to Islamabad. We welcome her for many reasons. It was some years ago that we started a process and I think that process is now well on its way. Her visit provided us an opportunity to fulfill the mandate that was given to us by our respective Prime Ministers. And I think on the whole before I say anything more I would like to ask the Spokesperson to read out the text of the Joint Statement that we have agreed to issue.

(Joint statement was read out)

I think the issuance of this Joint Statement indicates that we have had a very productive and constructive engagement which was forward looking and imbued with a sense of purpose. I must underscore here that the quality of the engagement really matters and we have every reason to be satisfied with that quality. Of course, all three segments that have been mentioned in the Joint Statement were the subject of deep deep conversations. I wish to thank here, the Foreign Secretary, my colleague from India, for showing not only great professional ability, sensitivity and understanding. With these words, I would request her to say a few words.

Foreign Secretary (Mrs. Nirupama Rao)

Good evening to all of you. Thank you for your patience and waiting for this press briefing. Over the last one and a half days, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Mr. Salman Bashir and I have had discussions on a wide range of issues.

The Joint Statement that was issued at the conclusion of our talks has just been released to all of you. In our discussions, we were guided by the vision of our two Prime Ministers to build trust and confidence by discussing various issues in an open and constructive manner and in a forward looking manner.

We have been fully conscious of the complexities in our relationship and the consequent need to take incremental steps to promote mutual confidence and understanding. In doing this, we are inspired by our goal of the eventual normalization of the India-Pakistan relationship and the resolution of outstanding issues through peaceful, sustained and serious bilateral dialogue. The shadow of the gun and the violence it has unleashed has caused untold sufferings for our people in these years past. This needs to end. The ideology of military conflict should have no place in the paradigm of our relationship in the 21st Century. Indeed, this relationship should be characterized by the vocabulary of peace; on ground cooperation in the interest of our peoples, growing trade and economic interaction as well as people to people contacts, and on this let me emphasize, in an atmosphere free of terror and violence.

The talks that we have held this time were not an event in isolation but part of a dialogue process which is building greater trust between us. We also took this opportunity to exchange views on preparation for the meeting of our Ministers of External and Foreign Affairs in New Delhi next month. This has been a positive meeting and I thank Foreign Secretary Bashir and his colleagues for what has been a constructive and substantive discussion. I thank you.

Q: My question is to both Excellencies. Can you please highlight the specifics of the discussions? I am asking this with regard to a move towards the solution of the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. What was specifically discussed during these three rounds of talks? Thank you

Foreign Secretary Bashir: I think first of all you ought to recognize that we have started again a very substantive process which has various components. Of course the Foreign Secretaries are entrusted with dealing the issue of Jammu and Kashmir as well as peace and security, CBMs and now also friendly exchanges. On the Kashmir Issue we have had deep conversations. This is a process as you would note that we would like to take forward. Of course, there are well known positions of both countries on this issue but nonetheless we have agreed to continue to further discuss matters specifically relating to to Jammu and Kashmir with a view to finding common ground. I think the key point here is carrying forward the engagement and making it more purposeful. But that's not all. I think the decision to reconvene the Working Group on LoCs, CBMs on the issue of facilitating further the travel and trade arrangements is all directed to take this process forward with a view to creating more comfort and relief for the Kashmiri people.

Foreign Secretary Rao: I think we have to build peace and reconciliation step by step. As I mentioned in my earlier remarks, we must do away with the shadow of the gun and extremist violence because it is only in an atmosphere free of violence that we can discuss the resolution of such a complex issue. The convening of the LOC CBMs Working Group, I think, is a very important step because I have always maintained that people are at the heart of our relationship and we must help the people of Jammu and Kashmir to connect with each other, to trade, to travel more easily and essentially I think this is the process we need to build on, to strengthen, to sustain. And I think the benefits of that process will be there for all of us to see as time goes by.

Q: My question is from both the Foreign Secretaries. What about 26/11. Madam Secretary, did you talk about 26/11 terror attacks because there continues to be a tardy progress on the investigations into this issue. Have you raised this with Mr. Bashir? And Mr. Bashir have you changed your mind about India's evidence as just being a piece of literature?

Foreign Secretary Rao: Let me say on the issue of 26/11 which was obviously of critical importance for us. We have already had very useful discussion between the Home and Interior Secretaries of the two countries. That meeting has had very good outcomes. And I did follow up on those discussions. We did talk about matters relating to the 26/11 trial and the pending issues relating to it. And we had good discussions on this matter. I continued to underline and emphasize India’s concern that we must have satisfactory closure because that will enable us to move on with the process of normalization.

Foreign Secretary Bashir: As the Indian FS has just said this is a matter that has been the subject of talks and engagement between our respective departments i.e. the Interior Ministry and the Home Department of Government of India. I think there has been two way communication between them and I think that the spirit prevails and these communications, we hope, will result in something that is useful. Having said that, I would like to add that while we do understand the concerns in India about Mumbai Incident, we hope and expect that this issue in a generic sense i.e. the issue of terrorism requires objectivity; requires to be addressed in a collaborative approach. I believe that has been the spirit of the engagement between our respective departments. And the Foreign Secretaries agree that it was necessary. Terrorism poses a threat to the two countries and to civilized societies. It must be eliminated. I think that certainly is the sense and the purpose in which this and other related issues were discussed.

Q: I will be obliged if the worthy Foreign Secretaries, would like to say something about the progress made in the Samjhota express incident?

Foreign Secretary Rao: Well let me say on the Samjhota Train blast issue, this also formed the subject matter of discussion between the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan when they met a few months ago. And we have stated very clearly that once the investigation is completed, we will share the outcomes with the Government of Pakistan.

Foreign Secretary Bashir: That certainly is the case. All such matters which relate to the two incidents which are in the terror category are being dealt with by the Interior and Home Secretaries level engagement. I think that is a positive development as far as I can see.

Q: This is to both of you. Can you please say something about the specifics as regards to the CBMs. Whether you have agreed to open new trading points? Whether there are chances of increasing the frequency of the bus service? And what are the specifics for the liberalization of Visa regime?
Foreign Secretary Rao: Well all these ideas were discussed in our meeting. And as the Joint Statement has stated there will be a meeting of the Cross LOC CBMs Working Group very shortly, before the visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India. All these issues that you have referred to including the increase in the number of trading days, the issuance of travel permits, making travel easier, banking facilities, the bus transportation links including road connectivity form the part of Cross LoC CBMs. And they are very much on the agenda of discussion.

Unlike in the past the two Foreign Secretaries decided to jointly address the news conference after first announcing separate briefings. That the news conference was in addition to the joint statement it was taken to be a signal that there was a bonhomie at the talks.

The Indian officials clarified that Foreign Secretaries remarks that "the ideology of military conflict should have no place in the paradigm of our relationship of the 21st Century" and should be replaced with a "vocabulary of peace," was not a reprimand. "We have resurrected this process; let us not run this aground by rushing to conclusions." The need to remove the shadow of the gun was a recurrent line that Ms. Rao took but without finger-pointing. To a question on the discussions on Jammu and Kashmir, she said peace and reconciliation had to be built step by step and "only in the absence of the gun can we discuss such issues." On specific cross-Line of Control (LoC) confidence-building measures (CBMs), the working group will meet next month to strengthen and streamline trade and travel arrangements and propose modalities for additional measures. The group will look at the demand for more trading days, additional routes, reducing red tape, and specifying the 21 items of trade to ensure that only goods made in Jammu and Kashmir are traded.

While the joint statement did not mention any tangible steps that would be taken immediately, it suggested a process that would be set in motion to create a space for making larger-than-baby steps acceptable. It was with this aim of creating a favourable public opinion for more people-to-people contact that the statement spoke about reducing hostile propaganda against each other. According to Indian officials, people are at the heart of the statement amid a growing realisation that the two countries can either remain permanently bogged down by history or learn from their past. Maintaining that this would be a painstakingly slow process, the two sides advocated patience, with Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao stating that the edifice of this relationship had to be built brick by brick. In a bid to promote people-to-people contact, the statement hinted at the possibility of a liberalised visa regime besides more avenues for business and sporting contacts, and facilitating visits to places of pilgrimage. Media exchanges, sports tournaments besides contacts between think-tanks and military institutions like India’s National Defence College and Pakistan’s National Defence University were being considered.

"We have been fully conscious of the complexities of our relationship and the consequent need to take incremental steps to promote mutual confidence and understanding," Ms. Rao said. And, to a pointed question on Jammu and Kashmir, Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir articulated a similar resolve to continue talking till a common ground was found. On terrorism, while India called for a satisfactory closure of the Mumbai terror attack case, Pakistan brought up the Samjhauta Express blast. Mr. Bashir said terror should be addressed with objectivity and called for a collaborative approach while laughing off a question on whether he still stood by his observation that terrorism-related evidence provided by India was "literature."

Islamabad, June 24, 2011.

Under the resumed dialogue process, the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India met in Islamabad, on 23-24 June 2011 for bilateral talks on Peace and Security including CBMs, Jammu and Kashmir and promotion of friendly exchanges. Three sessions of talks were held.

2. The talks were held in a frank and cordial atmosphere. Both sides reiterated their intention to carry forward the dialogue process in a constructive and purposeful manner.

3. The issues of Peace and Security, including CBMs, were discussed in a comprehensive manner. Both sides emphasized the importance of constructive dialogue to promote mutual understanding.

4. They noted the ongoing implementation of various Nuclear and Conventional CBMs. They also decided to convene separate Expert level meetings on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs to discuss implementation and strengthening of existing arrangements and to consider additional measures, which are mutually acceptable, to build trust and confidence and promote peace and security. The dates for the Expert level meetings will be determined through diplomatic channels.

5. The Foreign Secretaries noted that both countries recognize that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and they reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations. They agreed on the need to strengthen cooperation on counter-terrorism.

6. The Foreign Secretaries exchanged views on the issue of Jammu & Kashmir and agreed to continue discussions in a purposeful and forward looking manner with the view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences.

7. Both sides agreed to convene a meeting of the Working Group on Cross-LoC CBMs to recommend measures for strengthening and streamlining the existing trade and travel arrangements across the LoC and propose modalities for introducing additional Cross-LoC CBMs. The Working Group will meet in July 2011.

8. Both sides agreed to the need for promoting friendly exchanges between the two countries. They noted with satisfaction the progress made towards finalization of the Visa Agreement which will help liberalize the visa regime and facilitate people-to-people, business-to-business and sports contacts.
The two sides also discussed measures for promoting cooperation in various fields including, facilitating visits to religious shrines, media exchanges, holding of sports tournaments and cessation of hostile propaganda against each other.

The Foreign Secretaries agreed that people of the two countries are at the heart of the relationship and that humanitarian issues should be accorded priority and treated with sensitivity.

The Foreign Secretary of India called on the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, H.E. Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar.

The Foreign Secretaries will meet again in New Delhi, on a date to be decided through diplomatic channels, to prepare for the meeting of the Foreign/External Affairs Ministers in New Delhi in July 2011.

Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to the gratuitous references by OIC to Indian State of J&K.

New Delhi, July 1, 2011.

“We note with regret that the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) has once again chosen to comment on Jammu and Kashmir and India’s internal affairs in the Resolutions adopted, during the 38th Session of the OIC Council of Foreign Ministers held in Astana, Kazakhstan from June 28-30, 2011.

Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and the OIC has no locus standi in matters concerning internal affairs of India, which is the largest democracy and home to the second largest Muslim population in the world. We reject all such references/resolutions.”
Extract relevant to Pakistan from the Interview of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao by Mr. Karan Thapar for Devil's Advocate.

New Delhi, July 2, 2011.

Interviewer: (Mr. Karan Thapar): Hello and welcome to Devil's Advocate. Where do relations with Pakistan stand and has the Nuclear Suppliers Group betrayed India? Those are two of the critical issues ...(Inaudible)... in an exclusive interview with the Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao.

Foreign Secretary, let us start with Pakistan. There is a view that the resumption of dialogue with Pakistan has been more to Islamabad's interest than Delhi. One, it has lessened the pressure on Pakistan in terms of terror; it has allowed that country to raise Kashmir; it has raised the domestic profile of the government; and it has helped internationally. What has this process done for India?

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): The process is of benefit to both countries. I do not think you can seek to create a profit and loss statement when it comes to relations between India and Pakistan in the current context. The fact is that the commitment to engagement is based on our shared geography, as Prime Minister said the other day in his conversation with the newspaper editors. And given the shared geography and the fact that there are enormous complexities in the relationship and there are problems to be resolved, it makes sense to engage, it makes sense to resume the dialogue, it makes sense to discuss the complex issues.

Interviewer: In other words you are saying that talking to Pakistan is a necessity even if there are not immediate gains from the talks from India's standpoint.

Foreign Secretary: I definitely believe that this is a process that is going to take time. I think it would be impractical and unrealistic to expect dramatic breakthroughs just in one round of talks or two rounds of talks.

Interviewer: Let me put to you what critics of this talks process say. They say that the 26/11 trial is stalled in Rawalpindi; the judge has been changed four times; you have been repeatedly asking for voice samples; you have not got them and you have no idea when you will get them; and most importantly, even the permission given by the Home Secretary in March for an investigative commission has not been taken up by the Pakistanis. So, all you have got is verbal assurances but nothing substantive and concrete.

Foreign Secretary: The point to ponder over in this context is the approach you take to these matters. There is no doubt that on the 26/11 trial we need satisfactory closure, as I mentioned in Islamabad the other day. We need progress in the trial and we need concrete results. There is no doubt about that. And those concerns have been adequately and more than adequately communicated to the Pakistanis even in this round. And let me tell you what kind of ...

Interviewer: Can I interrupt? You are not getting any progress. Former Home Secretary G.K. Pillai to Rediff.com just a couple of days ago has said that the process has not moved an inch.

Foreign Secretary: Well, it depends on how you look at it. From one angle certainly it has not moved an inch. I am not denying that. There has been a very glacial pace to this whole process as far as the 26/11 trials are concerned. But let me tell you what kind of feedback we got from the Pakistanis at this round. And they spoke of the need to discuss all the serious and substantive issues between the two countries and that terrorism was at the forefront of this.

Interviewer: In other words, you see a change in Pakistan's attitude.

Foreign Secretary: I think the prism through which they see this issue has definitely been altered.

Interviewer: And you see that as a positive outcome.

Foreign Secretary: I see that as an outcome that we must take note of, that we must take cognisance of.

Interviewer: In other words this was a window of opportunity that we need to take advantage of.

Foreign Secretary: I think when they speak of the fact that non-state elements in this relationship need to be tackled, that we must look at safe havens and sanctuaries that we must look at fake currency, we must look at all the aspects that are concerned with the business of terror, I think that is a concrete development.

Interviewer: You are putting a positive gloss on what you heard from Islamabad when you visited recently. But let me put this to you, in May and June there was enormous evidence ...(Inaudible)... Headley ...(Inaudible)... how Rana trial ...(Inaudible)... in America which suggested conclusively ISI involvement in 26/11. He provided proof of ISI funding, of ISI training, of ISI instructions, he even named Major Iqbal as an ISI handler. Home Minister Chidambaram said that this was prima facie proof of ISI involvement. But Rehman Malik, the Pakistan Minister of Interior has gone on record to dismiss everything Headley said. He says the man is not trustworthy. So, what you are getting is not positive outcomes, it is not positive responses, you are getting denials.
Foreign Secretary: Let me say that we should not read literal outcomes into all this. The fact is that we are engaging each other, India and Pakistan, on all issues including the 26/11 trial. And when I met my counterpart Salman Bashir in Islamabad a few days ago, these are the very issues that I raised with him.

Interviewer: You raised with him what Headley had said.

Foreign Secretary: I did raise that and I said we need to get satisfactory answers on these linkages.

Interviewer: Does Salman Bashir accept what Headley said?

Foreign Secretary: Let me tell you, the aim here, and it is not just the aim of India I think it applies to the whole global community, the strategic link between the Pakistani state and militancy and terror needs to be broken.

Interviewer: But to begin with, does Salman Bashir accept that there is a strategic link?

Foreign Secretary: Well, he is not going to say that in so many words to me. I think it would be unrealistic for me to expect that the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan is going to say that. But let me say that the fact that we are discussing the threat, the scourge, the evil of terrorism and the fact that it has ramifications that extend into the entire region, I think is a development we must take note of. I am not being Pollyanna, I am not trying to sound over optimistic about this.

Interviewer: You sound very generous towards the Pakistanis.

Foreign Secretary: I think that is again your interpretation, Karan. That is not my interpretation and I do not believe that is the way diplomatic negotiations are transacted. I think we have to be realistic. We have to understand the difficulties in the terrain.

Interviewer: When you raised Headley, did he accept that Headley has provided proof of ISI involvement? The former Foreign Secretary Shahryar Khan was willing to accept it when he came to India. Does the present incumbent accept that what Headley said is trustworthy or does he take the Rehman Malik line on this visit?

Foreign Secretary: First of all I think you are approaching this from the angle as if to suggest that the only focus of my discussions with Salman Bashir in Islamabad last week was the 26/11 trial. There is a Home Secretary-Interior Secretary process which is under way. They have had a good round of talks. There are outcomes from those talks. There is follow-up actually in process at the moment. So, I did allude to all this in my discussions but we also discussed peace and security, we discussed the issue of Kashmir which has always formed a part of the dialogue, let me say that. Somehow the impression is being created that we have given away the store by discussing Kashmir. I completely refute that allegation.

Interviewer: I totally accept that, Madam. Very happy that you are talking so openly and fully about the discussions you have had with Salman Bashir. Let me put to you what once again critics might say. They say, on the one hand there is David Headley revealing in detail the nature of the ISI involvement in 26/11, on the other hand Pakistan Government investigations make no mention whatsoever of any connection between Lashkar and intelligence agencies and officers. Critical people like Sajid Mir and Muzammil Bhat, the chief Lashkar military tactician, do not even feature in the charge-sheet. And Pakistan has taken no steps to pursue the 20 fugitives wanted for their role as crew of the boat that came to Bombay. So, Pakistan is verbally very reassuring but when you look at the concrete steps that they are failing to take, the gap gets wider and wider.

Foreign Secretary: I have said it and I say it again we do need closure on all these issues. These are issues of paramount concern to India and very legitimately so. And I think Pakistan is fully aware of this. The rounds of talks that we have had in recent months, and I refer especially to the Home Secretary level talks, have served the purpose of communicating and articulating these concerns very graphically to the Pakistanis. And the fact is that we have sustained the dialogue on these issues, while I agree with you, concrete results seem to be very far off. We have not seen anything actually happening on the Mumbai trial and that is the point of great concern to us. But let me ask you a question. Does it mean that dialogue is not an option that we should pursue with Pakistan?

Interviewer: This is very interesting that you should bring that very question up because the point I was going to make is that as I ...(Inaudible)...., and I suspect as the audience ...(Inaudible)...., they will say to themselves that what the Foreign Secretary is really saying is that the previous position that India had taken after 2008 on 26/11 that there can be no dialogue with Pakistan until there is substantive delivery on 26/11 and terror, that position has changed. Even if the Government does not agree to it upfront, the Government has decided that now it can no longer refuse talks, it needs to engage with Pakistan in the hope that engagement will produce the result that earlier ...(Inaudible).... did not produce. Has that change taken place?

Foreign Secretary: I think you have to look at policy-making in a dynamic situation. I do not think you are making policy in a laboratory. You take into account the surrounding environment. You take into account the success of a certain approach or not. Did that approach (of not talking) yield too many dividends? Well, you have to make your assessment of that. I think the decision to reengage with Pakistan and to talk about the issues that divide us, that create a gulf between us, to reduce the trust deficit, as the two Prime Ministers said, I think is a very realistic approach to dealing with problems with Pakistan.

Interviewer: Absolutely! I mean ...(Inaudible)... the fact that the world changes, time moves on, and policy needs to move on as well.

Foreign Secretary: Especially for us in South Asia.

   New Delhi, July 27, 2011.

   I am delighted to welcome the Foreign Minister of Pakistan Her Excellency Hina Rabbani Khar and members of her delegation, to India, for bilateral talks.

   At the outset, I would also like to congratulate her in person, on her appointment as the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, and wish her all the very best.

   I look forward to working closely with her, in forging a peaceful and cooperative relationship between India and Pakistan, which is in the interest of peace and development of both our countries, the region and beyond. We owe this to ourselves and to the generations to follow.

   Excellency, let me categorically state that we would like to see a stable, peaceful and prosperous Pakistan and wish the people of Pakistan well. The challenges and aspirations of all us South Asians are similar. I visualize a resurgent South Asia, proudly marching forth on a path of development, in a terror free and harmonious atmosphere.

   I wish you a wonderful visit to India and would once again like to welcome you to the historical capital city of New Delhi.

Her Excellency Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan and I, along with our delegations, have held very useful discussions today. The talks were held in a cordial and positive atmosphere. We have had detailed and fruitful exchange of views on all issues of mutual interest and concern. We have reviewed the progress in the dialogue process since its resumption in February 2011. We have also deliberated on the way forward.

2. I must say that I am satisfied at the progress achieved in this round of the resumed dialogue. The outcomes have been as per our expectations. Above all, we have reaffirmed our commitment to resolve all outstanding issues through a comprehensive, serious and sustained dialogue. While being fully cognisant of the challenges that lie ahead, I can confidently say that our relations are on the right track. We have some distance to travel, but with an open mind and a constructive approach, which has been demonstrated in this round of dialogue, I am sure we can reach our desired destination of having a friendly and cooperative relationship between the two countries.

3. We have agreed on a Joint Statement which you will have soon. Nevertheless, I would like to highlight a few important points:

i) We have agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations. We have also agreed on the need to strengthen cooperation on counter-terrorism to bring those responsible for terror crimes to justice.

ii) On Jammu and Kashmir, we will continue discussions with a view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences. Meanwhile, for the welfare of the people on both sides of the LoC, we have announced additional measures on cross-LoC travel and trade. Details are given in the Joint Statement.

iii) We have agreed that increase in trade and economic cooperation between the two countries would be mutually beneficial and have noted with satisfaction the outcome of the Commerce Secretary level talks held in Islamabad in April 2011. In this context, we have decided to resume the work of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission.

iv) We will therefore continue our dialogue process.
We have also decided that the two Foreign Ministers will meet again in Islamabad in the first half of 2012 to review progress in the dialogue process.

Let me once again thank the Foreign Minister of Pakistan for coming to New Delhi and for her leadership in the dialogue process. I am satisfied at the outcome of our talks. We are listening carefully to each other and giving serious consideration to the ideas and proposals from both sides that are on the table. I also confident about our future course of our relations, which has to be normalised for peace progress and prosperity of our two countries and the region.

New Delhi, July 27, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): The Joint Statement is already on the website but we will try to get you hard copies also.

You already have got a perspective from the External Affairs Minister and the Foreign Minister about how the talks have progressed. We have here Foreign Secretary of India and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan to interact with you and take a few questions. I would also like to introduce my counterpart Director General and Spokesperson of the Pakistani Foreign Office Mrs. Tehmina Janjua who has so graciously agreed to help me out with the interaction. There will be three questions on each side and the first question will go to the Pakistani side.

Question (Pakistani Media): It was indeed encouraging to see the statement by the Ministers today. The Ministers stated in the Joint Statement that they will continue discussions on Kashmir for finding convergence and narrowing down divergence. Can you specify how there will be convergence in the views especially with the Kashmiris yesterday they spoke to us they feel dissatisfied. A brief question about the cooperation or intention of cooperation against counterterrorism. What are the dimensions of this cooperation?

Pakistan Foreign Secretary (Mr. Salman Bashir): I think we have had a very productive meeting of the two Ministers. Of course we take some satisfaction as the Foreign Secretaries for having participated in the preparatory work. The Joint Statement that you have is of almost four pages. It is comprehensive. It is forward-looking. It in a way signifies the intent of both Pakistan and India to adopt a cooperative mode to address all matters that will take our relationship forward. So, as far as your question about narrowings down divergences and broadening convergences, I think that is indicative of the desire of the two sides to get to a deeper level of engagement on all issues. There are no simple, straight answers to some of these problems that have seemed to be intractable. It is only through a deeper level of engagement that we build understanding, we build more trust, and we move towards the resolution of the issues that have bedevilled the relationship. But we do that with a clear purpose in mind and that is, as the Foreign Minister of Pakistan said, to establish friendly, cooperative, good neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India.

Similarly, on the counterterrorism aspect, it is a matter of satisfaction that there have been good meetings between the two sides, that is the Secretaries of Interior and Home; and more recently at Thimphu the two Ministers responsible for Interior and Home Affairs have met. In fact the Home Minister of India, some of you may recall, had visited Islamabad last year. There is an agreed plan on the modalities for further cooperation. I believe the Joint Statement refers to the cooperation on counterterrorism between the relevant Departments and agencies. So, this is a matter of interest not only to India but also to Pakistan. I think it is certainly Pakistan’s intention to broaden this cooperation on all such issues with India, as we do with the rest of the world.

Foreign Secretary (Shrimati Nirupama Rao): Let me add to that by saying that you will see from the context of the Joint Statement the direction that has been established for the future of this relationship. There is full awareness of the levels of difficulty involved in relationships as complex as those between India and Pakistan. I think we must be fully aware of that. But what is also important is for the fog to lift from this relationship. And I think the effort, the kind of impulse that has been generated from the recent meetings is essentially to clear the path, to clear the undergrowth from this relationship, and to set a positive trend for the future. Neither of us underestimates the difficulties involved. There are divergences and that divergence was illustrated yesterday by the meeting you referred to. We have a very different view from Pakistan on that particular event and we have expressed our concerns in a frank and candid manner to the Pakistan's side on this. Having said that, let us not lose sight of the fact that we owe it to the peoples of the two countries to understand that there is a future to be built for this relationship, that there has to be coexistence between the two countries, and it has to happen in the atmosphere free from terrorism, from violence, as I said in Islamabad the other day, free from the culture of the gun. So, I believe the political will is there to craft and to forge a new relationship between the two countries. So, the agenda is one of cautious optimism. We have a lot of work to do but we are determined to move forward.
Question (Indian Media): My question is to Foreign Secretary Salman Bashir. Sir, I am taking the question of Shaukat forward, again on the Hurriyat meeting with the Pakistani Foreign Minister Hina Rabbani. Did it cast a shadow over the talks? And also, the tone and tenor was already set by the Foreign Minister herself when she made the statements on Kashmir. When all the issues were already on the table with India, was there a need to meet with the Hurriyat leaders?

And to Madam Foreign Secretary, was there a certain sense of discomfort in holding talks on Kashmir with the Pakistani side given that they were already holding meetings with the Hurriyat? Does India see it as a parallel structure that has been set?

Pakistan Foreign Secretary: As far as the question of Foreign Minister's meeting with the Hurriyat leadership, I would just like to very succinctly state that in a democratic polity …(Unclear)… kept in mind I believe it is our intention to reach out and I think we should not read more into it. Our Foreign Minister has said that this matter of the meeting of yesterday cannot be construed in any manner including intention and ...(Unclear)… by design, to cast any sort of shadow on today's talks. It is in other words actually to the contrary. So, I think reading more into it is perhaps not warranted.

Indian Foreign Secretary: I will take up from where Mr. Bashir left this argument. You referred to parallel structures. As far as we are concerned the only structure in this relationship is the structure, the bilateral structure that we seek and have sought to establish in terms of the dialogue between our two Governments to cover all outstanding issues in the relationship, and of course Jammu and Kashmir forms very much a part of that discussion. And I would just draw your attention to paragraph ten of the Joint Statement which speaks of the Ministers having held discussions on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and having agreed to the need for continued discussion in a purposeful and forward-looking manner, and that is the emphasis I would like to give in response to you.

Question (Pakistani Media): My question is to both Secretaries regarding the water issues between Pakistan and India. India has been continuously constructing dams on the Kashmir water. We had a treaty in 1960 and Pakistan has a serious concern about that, people of Pakistan have a serious concern about that. My second question is to the Hon. Secretary of India regarding the outgoing Indian Air Force Chief's statement yesterday. Do you think that such statements at the time when the two Foreign Ministers were supposed to meet today were a sort of sabotaging the entire process?

Pakistan Foreign Secretary: On the water issue, I think this is a matter that has been discussed and there is of course an ongoing discussion, consultations on such subjects under the auspices of the Indus Waters Commissioner. That it is also taken up at the right level between the two Governments. I think there is a paragraph in the Joint Statement on this essentially. I think the important thing is that both Pakistan and India have reemphasised or underscored the respective commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty.

Indian Foreign Secretary: I would only add to that by saying that it is the duty of all of you in the media to educate public opinion properly on this issue. I think to indulge in any campaign of disinformation about matters concerning the sharing of waters between India and Pakistan would do our two peoples no service. In fact it does them disservice. And I think you have an equal responsibility to speak the truth on these matters. There is no question of India taking away from Pakistan’s share of the Indus waters as determined under the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960 which has worked very well for both the countries. And once again I would like to say on the part of India that we are committed to the Indus Waters Treaty and to our cooperation with Pakistan in this regard.

As far as the remarks that you referred to, I would only bring you back centre-stage to the discussions held between the two Foreign Ministers today, the very positive content of those discussions, the kind of direction that has been set as a result of these discussions. We are talking about peaceful coexistence that we need to see established between the two countries for the benefit of the two peoples. So, everything we say must keep in mind that aim that is common for both our peoples.

Question (Indian Media): My first question is to the Pakistani Foreign Secretary. Sir, last month in Islamabad it was agreed that Pakistan would not encourage or would not allow anti-India propaganda, and India made the same commitment. And yet, we do not see you take any action against Hafiz Saeed who once again threatened Jehad against India a couple of days ago. We do not see you criticise, in fact we see you defend, Mr. Fai who has carried out anti-India activities in a third country. And we see you encourage the Hurriyat leadership which is a separatist leadership. Do your words not square with your actions?

And for Mrs. Rao the question is, could you elaborate a little bit on this new agreement on strengthening counter terror cooperation? I think the question really is, are we seeing this joint anti-terror mechanism being resurrected in some form or the other?

Pakistan Foreign Secretary: I think there is no question this matter of the propaganda was discussed even today. There was conscious effort made by both sides to refrain from encouraging or allowing anybody to do this. I think there is great clarity on this as far as Pakistan is concerned and I am sure as far as India is concerned. You know, you cannot attribute an individual's views to a state's views. It is important to keep that distinction in mind. Pakistan's position on several issues that are part of these consultations and discussions is well known. Of course, whether it is the Hurriyat or Mr. Fai, our positions on all this is well known. So, I do not think it should be construed as anti-India propaganda.

Indian Foreign Secretary: In the discussions today between the two Foreign Ministers we did emphasise the need for the avoidance of any rhetoric or statements that are not conducive to the reduction of the trust deficit between the two countries. That point was emphasised and this I believe was well taken by both sides. I do not want to go further into comments on the issue that you have raised. Now you know our views on that.

As far as counterterrorism cooperation is concerned, I only would like to draw your attention to the discussions that have been held and that are ongoing between the Home Secretary and the Interior Secretary from both countries. There is a certain medium now that has been established for the exchange of views on matters concerning counterterrorism, and that is the way forward on this. The Home Minister of India and the Interior Minister of Pakistan have also had a meeting in Thimphu a few days ago. So, there is contact, there is communication between the two sides.

But in answer to your question, Parul, no this is not the reestablishment of the anti-terror mechanism. As I said, the recommencement of dialogue and the sequence of meetings that we have had very clearly states how we are approaching these issues. We are approaching them at the level of the Ministries concerned. We are very concerned and we have once again reiterated that concern to the Pakistan side about the need for speedy completion of the Mumbai trial and the need to bring those culpable to speedy justice. So, that has also been a very important focus of our approach on these matters.

Question (Pakistani Media): Madam Rao, when you are coming with investigation on Samjhauta?

Indian Foreign Secretary: You mean when I am coming with ... ?

Question (Pakistani Media): When you are coming with Samjhauta investigation?

Indian Foreign Secretary: On that our position has also been made very clear. I was asked this just last month in Islamabad. Our Home Ministry also made it clear that there is an ongoing investigation into the Samjhauta Express incident, very tragic incident where a number of lives were lost, and when the investigation is complete all relevant details will be shared with the Pakistan side.

Pakistani Foreign Secretary: If you permit of course I just want to make a general point here to enable you to understand what we are trying to do in this process. We want to take this process forward. We agree that it should be a sustained process which is, we believe, in the best interest of our two peoples. But in doing so, we have to make a conscious effort to be respectful to each other and to be mindful of each other’s concerns. But that does not in any way mean that either of us could seek some sort of an advantage over the other. That is not the spirit that would guide this dialogue. And I am sure that is the case. Having said that, let me also state very clearly that we do recognise the need that whatever, as referred to, deeper levels of engagement that can only be possible in the process itself and not through the media. And everything that we do is without prejudice to our known positions. That is the case both countries I think is based on that understanding. So, I think just for your reference point, I think it would probably not be appropriate to try to read more into what is said and what is not said. I think it is more important to understand what it is a work in progress and we are sincere and committed to make it a success. Of course, as the Foreign Secretary said a little while ago, we would seek greater understanding and support from our friends in the press for this dialogue.

Indian Foreign Secretary: I would just like to add that my mind goes back to that day in Thimphu last year when our Prime Ministers met and we call it the spirit of Thimphu, the Thimphu Spirit. And I would like to thank Foreign Secretary Bashir for this also, our efforts over the last few months particularly have been to infuse our dialogue and the various meetings that have taken place with that spirit of Thimphu which was spelt out by the leaders of both our countries - by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh of India and Prime Minister Gilani of Pakistan.

Question (Indian Media): My question is to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary. Sir, you talk of deepening engagement on counterterrorism. Can you tell us why nothing has happened on the Mumbai trials? Not a single arrest, voice samples not coming, and as Parul said, Hafiz Saeed going on lecture tours in your country. I understand that you are talking about a feel good factor, but we do not see any feel good out here.

And to the Indian Foreign Secretary, Madam, I would like to ask in the Joint Statement you talk of ‘expressed satisfaction on counterterrorism issues including progress on Mumbai trials’. Could you tell us how and why we are satisfied on this issue?

Pakistan Foreign Secretary: Of course you are entitled to your views. I detect that in certain cases there is some sort of an impatience that one sees in some matters. But objectively speaking, a lot has happened that is not on the surface or perhaps not readily available for you to come to a more reasoned conclusion. Of course, it is good to have the feel good factor. We cannot be wired in the past. I think it is counterproductive to keep on coming back to a few phrases or a few words. I do not see the purpose of that because it is up to us how we see our future, a future that is definitely interlinked. And I see no point in getting deeper into acrimonies ...(Unclear)... of deeper engagement.

Indian Foreign Secretary: Smita, I was just reading the sentence you referred to. I think you have to read it very very clearly and coherently. It says here, "The Ministers reviewed the status of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction on the holding of meetings". The satisfaction has been expressed on the holding of meetings. Please do not think satisfaction has been expressed in the manner in which you expressed dissatisfaction.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much. This interaction now draws to a close. We appreciate your presence. Thank you.

295. Joint Statement issued following meeting between External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna and Pakistan Foreign Minister Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar.

New Delhi, July 27, 2011.

2. The Ministerial level talks were preceded by a meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan on July 26, 2011.

3. The talks were held in a candid, cordial and constructive atmosphere.

4. The Ministers reviewed the status of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction on the holding of meetings on the issues of Counter-Terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial) and Narcotics Control; Humanitarian issues; Commercial & Economic cooperation; Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek; Siachen; Peace & Security including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; and promotion of friendly exchanges.
5. The Ministers affirmed the importance of carrying forward the dialogue process with a view to resolving peacefully all outstanding issues through constructive and result oriented engagement, and to establish friendly, cooperative and good neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India.

6. The Ministers underlined the need for sustained effort by both countries to build a relationship of trust and mutually beneficial cooperation in conformity with the determination of the people of both countries to see an end to terrorism and violence and to realise their aspirations for peace and development.

7. The Ministers agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations. Both sides agreed on the need to strengthen cooperation on counter-terrorism including among relevant departments as well as agencies to bring those responsible for terror crimes to justice.

8. The Ministers noted with satisfaction the fact that since the resumption of dialogue earlier this year, the process of release of prisoners and fishermen from both sides has continued. In this regard, the Ministers agreed with the recommendations of the Judicial Committee on Prisoners regarding (a) early repatriation of the prisoners who have completed their sentences and whose travel documents are available; (b) adoption of a humane approach in dealing with cases of fishermen, women, elderly, juvenile prisoners, prisoners terminally ill or suffering from serious illness or physical/mental disability and (c) need to monitor the welfare of prisoners in order to ensure their humane treatment.

9. The Ministers attached importance to promoting peace and security, including Confidence Building Measures, between India and Pakistan and agreed to convene separate meetings of the Expert Groups on Nuclear and Conventional CBMs, in Islamabad in September 2011.

10. The Ministers held discussions on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir and agreed to the need for continued discussions, in a purposeful and forward looking manner, with a view to finding a peaceful solution by narrowing divergences and building convergences.

11. On Cross-LoC trade and travel facilitation for Jammu & Kashmir the Ministers decided the following:-

CROSS-LoC TRADE:

(i) List of 21 products of permissible items for Cross-LoC trade will be respected by both sides. The Working Group will review the trading list with a view to further specifying permissible items to facilitate intra-Jammu & Kashmir Cross-LoC trade.

(ii) Both sides will provide adequate facilities at the trade facilitation centres on each side.

(iii) The number of trading days stand enhanced from 2 to 4 days per week. Truck movements shall take place on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, both on Srinagar-Muzaffarabad and Poonch-Rawalakot routes.

(iv) The Designated Authorities will resolve operational issues concerning cross-LoC trade through regular interaction.

(v) Regular meetings between the Chambers of Commerce and traders of both sides will be facilitated.

vi) Existing telephone communication facilities should be strengthened.

vii) The meetings of the Designated Authorities will be held alternately at the Terminal of the Crossing Points on both sides of the LoC every quarter or as and when deemed necessary.

CROSS-LoC TRAVEL

i) Cross-LoC travel would be expanded on both sides of the LoC to include visits for tourism and religious pilgrimage. In this regard, the modalities will be worked out by both sides.

ii) Facilities including waiting area, terminal and clearing procedures at the operational crossing points will be streamlined by both sides for smooth Cross-LoC travel.

iii) The Cross-LoC bus service between Srinagar-Muzaffarabad and Poonch-Rawalakot routes will henceforth run on every Monday.

iv) Application forms and requisite documentation in respect of travel across LoC will be exchanged by email between Designated Authorities of both sides. Such email transfer of application forms will be backed up by hard copies.

v) Both sides will expedite the processing time for applications, which shall not be more than 45 days.

vi) Six month multiple entry cross-LoC travel permits will be allowed by the Designated Authorities after completion of the required formalities at an early date.
Coordination meetings between the Designated Authorities will be held at the Terminals alternately on both sides of the LoC every quarter or as and when deemed necessary.

It was agreed that the Joint Working Group will henceforth meet on a bi-annual basis to review existing arrangements and suggest additional measures for Cross-LoC travel and trade.

12. The Ministers agreed that increase in trade and economic engagement between the two countries would be mutually beneficial. In this context, they emphasized the importance of early establishment of a non-discriminatory trade regime between the two countries, including reduction/removal of tariff and non-tariff barriers. They also emphasised the need for facilitating trade and redressing trade imbalance. The Ministers noted with satisfaction that during their meeting held in Islamabad in April 2011, the Commerce Secretaries of the two countries had decided on a number of important steps to realize the full potential of bilateral trade.

13. The Ministers agreed that discussions will continue on Siachen, Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project and Sir Creek to find a mutually acceptable solution to these issues. They reiterated their commitment to seeking early and amicable solutions to all these issues. They reaffirmed their commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty.

14. The Ministers also agreed that people of the two countries are at the heart of the relationship and that issues of people-to-people contacts and humanitarian issues should be accorded priority and treated with sensitivity. They noted with satisfaction the progress made towards finalization of a revised Visa Agreement which would help liberalise the visa regime and facilitate people-to-people, business-to-business and sports contacts.

15. The Ministers also emphasized promotion of cooperation in various fields including, facilitating visits to religious shrines, media exchanges, holding of sports tournaments and cessation of hostile propaganda against each other.

16. The Ministers decided to resume the work of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission and agreed that the Technical Level Working Groups should hold their meetings to identify avenues of further cooperation in these fields.

17. They reaffirmed their commitment to the goals and objectives of SAARC and agreed to make joint efforts to promote cooperation for regional development in the SAARC framework.

18. It was also decided that the Foreign Ministers will meet again in Islamabad in the first half of 2012 to review progress in the dialogue process.
19. The Ministers agreed to the continuation of the dialogue process and to the convening series of Secretaries level meetings on Counter-terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial) and Narcotics Control; Humanitarian issues; Commercial and Economic cooperation; Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project; Sir Creek (at the level of Additional Secretaries/Surveyors General); Siachen; Peace & Security, including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges. Dates of all these meetings will be decided through diplomatic channels and will be held prior to the next Ministerial meeting.

20. The Ministers noted that Shri Anand Sharma, Hon'ble Minister for Commerce and Industry of India, has extended an invitation to his counterpart, H. E. Makhdoom Amin Fahim, Minister of Commerce of Pakistan to visit India at a mutually convenient date.

21. The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan will be calling on Dr. Manmohan Singh, Hon'ble Prime Minister of India. She will also be calling on Smt. Sushma Swaraj, Hon'ble Leader of the Opposition (Lok Sabha).

Clarification on India-Pakistan Joint Statement
July 28, 2011

In response to a question regarding the India-Pakistan Joint Statement issued following the Foreign Minister level talks on July 27, 2011 wherein paragraph 4, it is mentioned that the "Ministers reviewed the status of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction on the holding of meetings on the issues of Counter-Terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial) and Narcotics Control…….” the Official Spokesperson stated:

In regard to the resumption of dialogue between India and Pakistan in February 2011, the Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan expressed their satisfaction on the holding of meetings, at appropriate levels, on the outstanding issues between the two countries. We categorically reject inferences that there was any expression of satisfaction on "the progress on Mumbai trial". The language of the Statement is very clear in this regard. The holding of the meetings on various issues is a step forward given that for over two years our substantive dialogue had remained suspended and this has been acknowledged in the Statement. It may be recalled that under the resumed dialogue "Counter Terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial)" is the subject of the Home Secretary level talks (as announced on February 10, 2011 in the Agreed Outcome of the Foreign Secretary level talks held on February 6, 2011 in Thimphu). To this we have added Narcotics Control to correctly reflect the scope of Home/Interior Secretary level talks.

India has, time and again, clearly expressed its concern and disappointment with Pakistan about the lack of progress in the Mumbai trial and bringing those responsible for this heinous terrorist attack to justice. The matter was forcefully raised by Hon'ble External Affairs Minister in his meeting with his Pakistani counterpart on July 27, 2011 in New Delhi. This issue was also the focus of the Home Secretary level talks on March 28-29, 2011 in New Delhi and was also taken up vigorously at the Foreign Secretary level talks on June 23-24, 2011 in Islamabad and on July 26, 2011 in New Delhi.
I rise to inform the House of the visit of Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India.

2. Ms. Hina Rabbani Khar, Foreign Minister of Pakistan visited India from July 26-28, 2011 for the Foreign Minister level talks, which were held in Delhi on July 27. These talks were preceded by a Foreign Secretary level meeting on July 26 to prepare the ground for the ministerial meeting. Foreign Minister level talks were held to review the progress of the first round of the resumed dialogue process which commenced after the meeting of the two Foreign Secretaries in February 2011 in Thimphu.

3. Pakistan Foreign Minister and I, along with our respective delegations, met for delegation level talks on July 27. In the discussion, we took stock of the current state of our bilateral relations and reviewed progress in the dialogue process since its resumption. The talks were held in a candid, friendly and positive atmosphere. I reaffirmed India's desire to work with Pakistan to reduce the trust deficit and move forward in a friendly manner. I conveyed that India desires a stable and prosperous Pakistan, acting as a bulwark against terrorism, and at peace with itself and with its neighbours. India wishes to have constructive relations with Pakistan to enable both countries to effectively address our common developmental priorities.

4. I underscored the importance that we attach to the fulfillment of commitments made by Pakistan during the Home/Interior Secretary level talks in March 2011 on the trial and investigation, underway in Pakistan, in the Mumbai terrorist attacks case. I requested Pakistan to act on the assurance given to our Home Minister by Pakistan Interior Minister in June 2010 on the dossiers regarding seven specific individuals and the need to provide voice samples. Pakistan was asked to investigate the linkages with some elements in the Pakistani security agencies that had emerged from the evidence presented in the Tahawwur Rana trial in the United States. I called for credible and effective action against jihadi leaders such as Hafiz Saeed and terrorist groups such as Jamaat-ud-Daawa and Lashkar-e-Tayyaba, who continue to incite violence and hatred against India. I took the opportunity to also convey our displeasure at Pakistan Foreign Minister meeting Hurriyat leaders on July 26, even before bilateral discussions between the two Governments could commence.

5. Pakistan's Foreign Minister stated that we should not let history determine the future course of India-Pakistan relationship. There was a change in mindset in Pakistan which went beyond the present Government or Pakistan People's Party, which traditionally had good relations with India. She mentioned that the good relations between late Mrs. Benazir Bhutto and late PM Rajiv Gandhi were fondly remembered in Pakistan. She maintained that the resumption of dialogue has improved the atmospherics. The meeting of the Foreign Ministers was a culmination of this round of dialogue and re-engagement in itself could be considered a success.

6. On the Mumbai terrorist attacks trial, underway in Pakistan, the Pakistan Foreign Minister requested India to have patience, trust and confidence in the process. According to her, Pakistan was not trying to abdicate responsibility. On the issue of terrorism emanating from territory under Pakistan's control, she said that no country had suffered as much as Pakistan at the hands of terrorists and therefore Pakistan's commitment to fight terrorism should not be doubted. It was not Pakistan's policy to support terrorism in any country. Pakistan was ready to have a dialogue with India on the issue and there was a need for cooperation to combat terrorism. There was an opportunity in the new environment of Pakistan and a consensus that it is in Pakistan's national interest to have good relations with India. On her meeting with Hurriyat leaders, she informed me that Pakistan wanted to engage all the stakeholders.

7. On Jammu & Kashmir, both sides reiterated their respective positions which are well known and agreed to continue discussions for a peaceful and negotiated settlement of the Jammu & Kashmir issue, by narrowing divergences and building on convergences. Meanwhile, in order to facilitate travel and trade across the Line of Control, for the welfare of the people on both sides, we announced some additional Confidence Building Measures, which are listed in the Joint Statement that was issued after the talks.

8. On economic and commercial cooperation, I expressed satisfaction that Pakistan had recognized that grant of Most Favoured Nation (MFN) status to India would help in expanding bilateral trade relations and had also committed to operationalise a non-discriminatory trade regime with India, by replacing the present "positive list" with a "negative list" by October 2011. I called for diligent follow up on decisions taken during the Commerce Secretary level talks held in April 2011. Pakistan Foreign Minister said that Pakistan's approach on the matter was very positive and constructive. Mutually beneficial mechanisms for linkages of trade and commerce could be discussed. To give further impetus to our economic and commercial relations, we agreed to convene the next meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission next year, to be preceded by the meetings of the 8 technical level working groups.

9. On issues like Sir Creek, Siachen and Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage, there have been serious discussions in this round of the resumed dialogue. We have understood better each other's positions but more needs to be done. We decided to continue working together with an open mind and a problem solving approach to eventually arrive at mutually acceptable solutions. We also agreed that the bedrock of India-Pakistan relations were people of the two countries and therefore promotion of friendly exchanges in fields of culture, sports, media, parliamentary exchanges and so on to enhance people-to-people contacts, was of particular importance. In this regard, we acknowledged the need for finalization of the revised Bilateral Visa Agreement and revision of the Bilateral Protocol on visit to Religious Shrines. We emphasized the need to address pressing humanitarian issues like the release of prisoners and fishermen in each other's custody and supported the work of India-Pakistan Judicial Committee in this regard.

10. As an outcome of the talks, it was decided to continue the dialogue process on all issues. In this regard, it was agreed to convene a series of Secretary level meetings on the issues of Counter-Terrorism (including progress on Mumbai trial) and Narcotics Control; Humanitarian issues; Commercial & Economic cooperation; Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage; Sir Creek (at the level of Surveyor General/Additional Secretary) ; Siachen; Peace & Security including CBMs; Jammu & Kashmir; and promotion of friendly exchanges. The exact dates for these meetings would decided through diplomatic channels. We also agreed that the meetings would be completed prior to my visit to Pakistan in the first half of 2012.

11. During her stay in Delhi, Pakistan's Foreign Minister called on Hon'ble Prime Minister and handed over a letter of invitation from Prime Minister Gilani to visit Pakistan. She also called on Smt. Sushma Swaraj, Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha and Shri L.K. Advani, Chairman, BJP Parliamentary Board.

12. The visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan was aimed at resolving peacefully all outstanding issues through a constructive and forward looking dialogue and to establish cooperative and good neighbourly relations between the two countries, in an environment free from terrorism and violence. In this regard, we are committed to build a relationship of trust and mutually beneficial cooperation in conformity with the determination of the people of both countries to see an end to terrorism and violence and to realise their aspirations for peace and development.

Thank you.
297. Statement made by Minister of State Mrs. Preneet Kaur in Lok Sabha in reply to a question on Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 10, 2011.

Ensuring a peaceful and secure neighbourhood is central to India's foreign policy objectives. Government constantly monitors the prevailing and emerging situation in the neighbourhood including Pakistan.

India is committed to resolving all outstanding issues with Pakistan in an atmosphere free from terror and violence. We have consistently conveyed to Pakistan that it must fulfill its solemn commitment of not allowing territory under its control to be used for terrorism against India in any manner. Pakistan's credible and effective action against terrorism is in its own interest and in the interest of the region.

During the meeting of External Affairs Minister with Minister of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan in New Delhi on July 27, 2011, we forcefully conveyed our terrorism related concerns to Pakistan. In the Joint Statement issued after the talks, both sides agreed that terrorism poses a continuing threat to peace and security and reiterated the firm and undiluted commitment of the two countries to fight and eliminate this scourge in all its forms and manifestations and in this regard agreed on the need to strengthen cooperation on counter-terrorism to bring those responsible for terror crimes to justice.

Government remains vigilant and takes all necessary steps to meet our legitimate strategic and security requirements.

New Delhi, August 10, 2011.

Bilateral trade and commerce talks were held between Commerce Secretaries of India and Pakistan on 27-28 April 2011, in Islamabad. The two sides, inter-alia, agreed to improve trade infrastructure and expand trade through Attari-Wagha land route. It was agreed to set up a Working Group to address and resolve clearly identified sector-specific barriers to trade. Both sides agreed to undertake new initiatives to enable trade in electricity and Bt. Cotton seeds as also expand trade in petroleum products. It was agreed that cooperation in Information Technology sector would be encouraged through the private sector. Both sides agreed to facilitate grant of Business Visas to encourage expansion of trade. Pakistan recognized that grant of MFN status to India would help in expanding bilateral trade relations. It agreed to replace its present 'Positive List' with 'Negative List', by October 2011.

Joint Working Groups have been set up for Customs cooperation, trade in electricity and trade in all types of Petroleum Products. A Joint Working Group on 'Economic and Commercial Cooperation & Trade Promotion' to be co-chaired by the Joint Secretaries of the respective Departments of Commerce has been set up for reviewing the implementation of the decisions taken during the meeting of the two Commerce Secretaries and also other trade promotion issues.

Pakistan recognized that grant of MFN status to India would help in expanding bilateral trade relations. It has agreed to replace its present 'Positive List' with 'Negative List', by October 2011.

Joint Statement issued at the end of talks between the Commerce Ministers of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 28, 2011.

1. At the invitation of the Commerce Minister of India, Shri Anand Sharma, the Commerce Minister of Pakistan, Makhdoom Mohammad Amin Fahim is visiting India from 26th September to 2nd October, 2011.

2. After more than three and a half decades, this is the first visit by a Pakistan Commerce Minister to India. Accompanying the Minister is a high level official delegation including the Commerce Secretary of Pakistan; and more than fifty business delegates from Pakistan. The composition of this delegation underscores the importance that both sides attach to this visit and the mutual desire for better bilateral trade and commercial relations.

3. The official level discussions were held today (28th September) between the Commerce Ministers and their respective official delegations. Both Ministers noted with satisfaction that India and Pakistan are entering a new phase of full normalization of bilateral trade relations. This augurs well for enhancing mutual trust and understanding.

4. The Ministers agreed to jointly work to more than double bilateral trade within three years, from current levels of 2.7 Billion US dollars per annum to about 6 Billion dollars. This goal shall also be facilitated through the Memorandum of Understanding signed today between the India Trade Promotion Organization and the Trade Development Authority of Pakistan. The MoU shall foster better trade promotional activities, for the benefit of business communities of both countries.

5. The Ministers affirmed that fully normalized commercial links between both countries would strengthen the bilateral relationship and build the bridges of friendship, trust and understanding - for mutual benefit of their people and promotion of prosperity in South Asia.

6. The Ministers mandated their Commerce Secretaries to pursue with vigor the task of fully normalizing bilateral trade relations. They agreed that their countries would cooperate for a high ambition of preferential trade relations under the framework of the South Asia Free Trade Agreement (SAFTA). They noted with satisfaction the joint and collaborative efforts already being made by India and Pakistan to liberalize trade in goods and services under SAFTA. They agreed that all mutual obligations contracted under SAFTA would be implemented with full sincerity.

7. The Ministers appreciated the progress made and roadmap laid for trade liberalization in the April 2011 meeting of the Commerce Secretaries. They further mandated their respective Commerce Secretaries that when they meet in November, 2011 they shall lay down specific timelines to normalize all trade relationships including dismantling of all non-tariff barriers. Full implementation of SAFTA obligations was also mandated. Commerce Secretaries were also directed to prepare the roadmaps for greater preferential trading arrangements between India and Pakistan. Both Ministers agreed that joint and concerted efforts will be made in all areas to create an enabling environment for trade and to encourage greater engagement between the business communities of both countries. They agreed to further promote greater intra-regional connectivity through road, rail, shipping and air.

8. Ministers noted with satisfaction the comprehensive ground covered in the August 2011 bilateral trade review held in New Delhi. This meeting has been an important milestone in identification of issues impeding trade (in sectors such as cement, textiles, surgical instruments) as perceived by the business communities of both countries. Customs arrangements have also been significantly synchronized and both sides are vigorously addressing issues of infrastructure, to further promote bilateral trade through the land route of Attari-Wagah.

9. The Ministers noted that in the past few months, India and Pakistan have constructively engaged towards a liberalized business visa regime. They expressed that they now expect this matter to be expeditiously concluded before November 2011. The new business visa regime would allow multiple entry and could be for a period up to one year. The Ministers expressed the hope that such a new visa regime would rapidly expand the vistas of bilateral commerce. They emphasized that a more secure regional environment would progressively help both countries to keep liberalizing the visa arrangements for businesspersons.

10. Both Ministers reaffirmed that all decisions taken by them and their respective officers to improve trade relations would be closely monitored to ensure adherence to all agreed timelines. Both sides would maintain frequent contact in this mutual quest for a better trade relationship, underpinned on the principles of sincerity, mutual respect and trust. The Ministers agreed that the bilateral trade liberalization process should be uninterruptible and irreversible. They affirmed that both countries would cooperate and work in close coordination at multilateral forum, such as WTO and SAARC, to support each other, thereby strengthening their economies.

At the heart of the India - Pakistan trade relations is the question of Pakistan extending MFN status to India which India granted to Pakistan long back. Though Pakistan Cabinet decided in favour of MFN for India and asked its Ministry of Commerce to move “positively” towards granting Most Favoured Nation (MFN) status to India there are some hurdles to be crossed before the bridge is crossed. However Pakistan in another positive step also announced its intention to move over from the positive list to negative list on trade with India. Currently, Pakistan has given access to 1,940 product lines on its positive list and has 12,000 on the negative list. But half of the items on the positive list are not exported by India or it imports these items.

New Delhi, September 29, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma the Union Minister of Commerce, Industry & Textiles and Makhdoom Muhammed Amin Fahim, Commerce Minister of Pakistan addressed the India- Pakistan business conclave, here today. Shri Sharma during his address stated that “Both of us agreed that a meaningful economic engagement necessarily requires greater movement of business people and there is a need for liberalizing business visa regime. We have urged the concerned officials on both sides to expeditiously conclude the liberal business visa regime by November which will rapidly expand the vistas of bilateral commerce.” Shri Sharma informed that, Minister Fahim has recognized that the grant of MFN status to India would be a key step in expanding bilateral trade relations and the Indian business community has been looking forward to implementation of non-discriminatory market access by Pakistan for India. “We hope that the Minister Fahim would carry home the message of goodwill from Indian business community and secure political mandate for greater trade liberalization with India”, he added.

The Minister expressed the need to look afresh and work together to change the paradigm. He said that this visit is a defining moment which will give an opportunity to look at our relationship with freshness and frankness. The Minister said that he was mindful of the fact that the entire world was watching this visit. He stated that we have to learn from our painful history and learn to co-exist in harmony, peace & friendship. In order to raise the ambition of trade, we must create a conducive environment of trust. This will entail frequent high level visits from the sides, regular exchange of business delegations and an agenda of trade liberalization catalyzed by these exchanges. Commerce Minister said that he has accepted the invitation from Pakistan counterpart and will be going to Pakistan with a big business delegation soon.
The Indian Minister recognized the need to build partnerships which are the defining theme of this age. Shri Sharma said that, “South Asia must not remain a prisoner of the past and find its own equilibrium to realize its true potential”. Early next year, Pakistan will be chairing the SAFTA Ministerial meeting and this meeting holds the potential of giving a new direction to SAFTA regional framework. The Indian Minister urged Minister Fahim to lend his leadership to providing new life and energy to the process of SAARC economic integration. Shri Sharma assured that, “India will reciprocate in equal measure. I heard the Commerce Secretary of Pakistan saying yesterday that we should aspire for an economic community which links SAARC with ASEAN. It is indeed a bold vision and we must strive towards achieving this objective. The first step would be to enforce the mutual obligations contracted under SAFTA at the earliest”.

Shri Sharma later informed that, “Together, we have set a target of doubling trade to reach US $ 6 billion in three years. This indeed is by no means is an extremely ambitious target given the fact that India’s global trade in goods last year stood at US $ 600 billion”. He pointed out that Trade in petroleum, energy and commodities would be significant steps for building long term stake in each other’s economy. Strengthening the border infrastructure remains a high priority for us and I was happy to be informed that the Integrated Check Post which is being constructed at the Attari-Wagah Border at a cost of Rs. 150 crores will be operational by the end of the current year.

302. Appreciation by India of Pakistan’s role in the safe return of Indian Army Helicopter which had strayed across the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir.

It is understood that an army Cheetah helicopter, flying from Leh to Bhimbat, earlier in the day, with four officers on board, strayed across the Line of Control (LOC) due to inclement weather and landed in Pakistan Occupied Kashmir (POK).

Efforts are underway to establish contact with Pakistani DGMO to retrieve the personnel and helicopter. Our High Commission in Islamabad is also in touch with the Pakistani side.

The Indian helicopter which had strayed into POK, was allowed to return to India by the Pakistani authorities, about five hours after it was forced to land in Skardu. The helicopter was allowed to return after the Directors-General of Military Operations (DGMO) of the two countries “exchanged views.” The Pakistan Military spokesman Athar Abbas told the Indian daily The Hindu that the Indian DGMO clarified that the chopper lost its way because of bad weather and the GHQ then decided that it should be allowed to return after refuelling. “The helicopter had come deep into our airspace; about 20 km inside. We followed the standard operating practice (SOP) and sent across a message that it would be shot down if it did not land,” Maj. Gen. Abbas said. The Ministry of External Affairs appreciated the speedy return of the Army personnel and the helicopter. “We are relieved that our officers and helicopter are back in India. We greatly appreciate the manner in which Pakistan worked with us in resolving the matter,” MEA spokesperson said.
303. Press Statements made by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan after their meeting on the sidelines of the SAARC Summit.

Addu (Maldives), November 10, 2011.

Prime Minister of Pakistan (Mr. Syed Yusuf Raza Gilani): Today I had a very good meeting with Hon. Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh. We had the earlier meeting in Thimphu, and we decided to resume dialogue, and we are moving in a positive direction.

Our two Foreign Ministers have met. Our Interior Ministers have met. Our Commerce Ministers have met. Interior Secretaries and Secretaries Defence have also met each other. The Prime Minister and myself have been meeting on the sidelines several times. We have discussed all issues concerning India and Pakistan. We have very openly discussed all issues including all core issues. We have discussed, the Prime Minister and we have been very open.

The two Foreign Ministers were also called in. They were also briefed so that they are the face of the countries and further whenever they have to have interactions with the media they can give you more details. I can only assure that I have discussed all issues, all core issues, and also the issues related to water, related to terrorism, related to Sir Creek, related to Siachen, related to trade, related to Kashmir. We have discussed all core issues, and the Prime Minister has always been open and he said that put all the cards on the table, I am ready to discuss each and every issue. And I think that the next round of the talks would be more constructive, more positive, and will open a new chapter in the history of both the countries.

Thank you very much. Once again I thank the Prime Minister for supporting Pakistan in the Security Council and also for access to the EU market. Thank you very much, Prime Minister.

Prime Minister of India (Dr. Manmohan Singh): Ladies and gentlemen, I have always regarded Prime Minister Gilani as a man of peace. Every time I have met him in the last three years, this belief has been further strengthened.

We have today had a very extensive discussion of relations of our two countries. We started a new process in Thimphu last year. That dialogue process has yielded some positive results. But more needs to be done. And, therefore, we have decided that we will resume this dialogue with the expectation that all issues which have bedeviled the relations between our two countries will be discussed with all the sincerity that our two countries can bring to bear on these talks.
I have always believed that the destinies of people of India and Pakistan are very closely linked, interlinked that we have wasted lot of time in the past in acrimonious debates. The time has come to write a new chapter in the history of our relationship. And I am very happy that Prime Minister Gilani fully endorses this view that we have a unique opportunity, and, therefore, the next round of talks should be far more productive, far more result-oriented in bringing the two countries closer to each other than ever before.

I thank you.

Extract relevant to Pakistan from the media briefing by Foreign Secretary on Prime Minister’s engagement during the SAARC Summit.

Addu City (Maldives), November 10, 2011.

Question: Sir, today there was an important opportunity to speak to the Interior Minister of Pakistan, who today yet again said that India has till now not provided any evidence against Hafiz Saeed or Jamaat-ud-Dawa. As far as Hafiz Saeed is concerned, is it the end of the road for India? How can we achieve our goal of seeing 26/11 perpetrators behind bars or being brought to justice unless anything happens on Hafiz Saeed?

Prime Minister Gilani said Kashmir and Siachen were also discussed. Could you elaborate on what discussion has taken place?

Foreign Secretary: We have provided extensive documentation on Hafiz Saeed and those who are under trial for their involvement in the Mumbai attacks. This evidence has been provided, a number of dossiers have been handed over. We believe there is enough information in that for Pakistan to be able to take forward their case against those seven accused.

As regards your question about Siachen, there is a process of dialogue on various themes. We have plans to have meetings between the Commerce Secretaries, in fact in a few days’ time, meetings between the Home Secretary and the Pakistani Interior Secretary, and the discussions on Tulbul between the Secretaries of Water Resources, perhaps also in December but these have still to be worked out. Prime Minister Gilani did mention that among the other dialogue processes which we have to engage in, Sir Creek and Siachen are among those. He did raise that in that context saying that this is part of the dialogue and we need to make progress on those issues also.

Question: Sir, this is again about Pakistan Interior Minister Rehman Malik equating the demand for justice for 26/11 to the Samjhauta case, linking it up with the Samjhauta case, and also very specifically equating the demand for sending Ajmal Kasab to the gallows and to also giving similar treatment to the accused in the Samjhauta blast. Is there a possibility of India’s case that it is a victim of terror sponsored from across the border getting diluted in the process?

Foreign Secretary: I do not think there is any possibility of India’s case getting diluted. The Samjhauta Express issue to which you refer is a terrible attack that took place in India and there is no question of any cross-border element being involved in that. So, I frankly do not see how these two can be linked in terms of diluting India’s concerns on cross-border terrorism. It is interesting that you have quoted the Interior Minister as having said that Mr. Kasab should be sent to the gallows. It would seem that he then believes that there is evidence against him.

Question: Foreign Secretary, just to start with I would like to ask if India now believes that now Pakistan has taken any steps in terms of cracking down on the groups responsible for 26/11, whether they think that Pakistan is in fact serious about taking the 26/11 trial ahead because it would seem that the fact that the bilateral dialogue has now been resumed comes on the back of positive steps which, I think, you have spoken about, the Prime Minister spoke about. I would like to get your assessment of what are those steps. Secondly, did that long-pending invitation to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to visit Pakistan come up in talks, and is there any date for that?

Foreign Secretary: I think if one were to talk in terms of steps, the fact that Pakistan has now said it would send a Judicial Commission to India to record the statements of the Chief Investigating Officer, the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, and two doctors - that is the list of those whose statements have to be recorded - that this is part of the action being taken by them to make some progress on the case against these people. We have to set up a court, or appoint a judge to receive this Judicial Commission. It seems this is a step forward. They have also indicated that on many of the concerns which we have expressed and which we have expressed again that these could be addressed in the discussions which are scheduled between the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan. So, to that extent, yes there have been some developments even on the cases against those responsible for the Mumbai attacks.

You mentioned resumed dialogue. I would like to clarify that dialogue actually was resumed in the month of February following the Thimphu talks. That first stage, you might say, culminated in the visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India in July. And during the meetings with our External Affairs Minister and subsequently the call on Prime Minister it was felt that we need to take this dialogue forward, and another second round of discussions on all these issues in our bilateral relationship would be resumed or taken forward, whichever you like. But that is where we are. And that is why we place a great deal of importance on the outcomes of these dialogues which are now going to take place. As I said, the Commerce Secretaries’ dialogue, the Home Secretaries’ dialogue, and we have planned also the dialogue between the Water Resources Secretaries on Tulbul.

A mention was also made of the Joint Commission. There is a Joint Commission between our two countries which last met in 2005. It has eight Technical Groups working under it. There is a proposal to get those Technical Working Groups restarted. Some of them have actually met in the past, and their work and their conclusions are available. But if there is need to restart any of those Technical Groups, we will certainly look at it. That is where we are.

In terms of the invitation, Prime Minister Mr. Gilani said that he was very keen that Prime Minister should visit Pakistan, and he put it in very emotional terms saying this would be an opportunity not only to build the relationship between our two countries and put it on a very firm footing, but also gave Prime Minister an opportunity to visit his ancestral home which happens to be on the other side of the border. Prime Minister said that he certainly does look forward to visiting Pakistan and this would be decided by mutual consultation.

Question: Sir, the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan spent nearly forty to forty-five minutes one on one. Overall, did any new initiatives or confidence-building measures figure in the discussions? Also both the leaders struck a very upbeat note promising to start a new chapter in the relations between the two countries. In what areas can we see a breakthrough or a significant improvement in the coming days or months?

Foreign Secretary: The two leaders of course did meet with their delegations as well as one on one. They discussed all issues quite openly. The Prime Minister said there is a need for us to be able to discuss all issues which bedevil our relations or which stand in the way of a normal friendly relationship between our two countries. The Prime Minister believes firmly that ultimately the destinies of us as a people are quite interlinked, and we need to work out a new chapter in our relationships. For this, the next round of our discussions should be made more productive than the first round. But, Prime Minister did mention that there are, as he called it, perennial concerns about terrorism in India. And he stressed the fact that terrorism is a threat to India, it is now a threat to Pakistan also, but acts of terrorism have the capability of being a spoiler in our relationship of setting back any kind of progress that we could make in our dialogue, and that therefore Pakistan needs to address this in all earnestness. These were the specific words Prime Minister conveyed to us.

Question: Sir, if I could just press you a little more on the previous question, both Prime Ministers said that they look forward to, as they put it, a new chapter in India-Pakistan relationship. So, before the next meeting comes, along the way will there be any sort of verifiable steps, maybe action against Lashkar camps in PoK, a decrease in infiltration, can there be steps that we can say are verifiable steps which would indicate that Pakistan is delivering on the content of its interactions?
Foreign Secretary: As I said, the discussions covered all aspects of our relationship. Certainly we would need to be completely satisfied that the Pakistanis are taking the kind of steps that you have mentioned. The Home Secretary will be meeting, as I said, his counterpart from Pakistan hopefully next month. We are hoping it will take place around the third week. These specifics would be discussed at that level. I think what Prime Minister was trying to stress is that there is a past which hangs on us, there is a future which lies ahead of us if we can work together, but we are in the present now and we need to deal with these issues here and now. The idea is to move towards a more constructive agenda. But as I said, Prime Minister made quite clear that our ability to move such a constructive agenda certainly does require dealing with the concerns which we face in the present.

Question: Sir, you said the next round has to be more productive in India-Pakistan talks. Will the next round follow the same structure as that of the Composite Dialogue, or do you plan to rejig a bit, scale it up a bit? Secondly, has the issue of early formalisation of Teesta and Feni water agreements come up during our Prime Minister’s discussions with Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina?

Foreign Secretary: I believe here on this question of what kind of dialogue, I happened to glance at what my predecessor Mrs. Rao answered when she was in Thimphu and she said we do not need to get into nomenclature. So, I can take refuge behind my predecessor’s comments. So, I will just say that this is a resumed dialogue. Certainly the dialogue is to cover, as I said, all outstanding issues in our relationship. And it is structured in a way that you have different Ministries, Secretaries of different Departments involved in different elements of the dialogue. So, certainly we should be going through all of them. The aim is to culminate, as was mentioned by Hon. External Affairs Minister when he met the Pakistani Foreign Minister in July, in a meeting between the two Foreign Ministers perhaps by the end of the first half of 2012. That was the calendar which they had set. That remains as the target.

Question: Foreign Secretary, when Prime Minister Manmohan Singh calls Mr. Gilani a man of peace, it is obviously not an assessment made by an individual, it is an assessment made by the Prime Minister of a country. My question is, what has made him come to the conclusion that he is dealing with a man of peace? And what steps taken by Prime Minister Gilani make him feel that he is a man of peace?

Foreign Secretary: I think Prime Minister’s assessment is based on the frequent meeting he has had with Prime Minister Gilani. He has met him a number of times now. And it is an assessment based on the nature of his discussions... with Mr. Gilani, and our own Prime Minister’s own pursuit of peace, and the fact that he finds a resonance in this. I would presume that is why he has come to this assessment. It is based on a large number of meetings and the desire which Prime Minister Gilani has expressed for resolving all issues between our two countries on the basis of dialogue, and that this dialogue should take place in an atmosphere of peace and free of hostility. This is the express wish of the Pakistanis also.

Question: Sir, the Pakistani Interior Minister kept on saying that India gave us only information and dossiers, not credible evidence. What makes credible evidence for them? Have the two sides ever sat together and discuss what would make credible evidence for Pakistan?

Foreign Secretary: I am not a lawyer, so, I do not have the benefit of being able to make a legal distinction. But, as I said, the dossiers have provided a great deal of information which should give enough leads to the Pakistani authorities to be able to take the case forward. He says that it is mere information. I am not quite sure what is intended. As far as we are concerned, there is enough information in the dossiers which have been provided for the Pakistanis to be able to take action. I would only say that in these dossiers is also the confession of Mr. Kasab. Somebody mentioned that the Interior Minister has declared him fit for being hanged. So, if his confession is a part of the dossiers which we have given on the basis of which he has decided he should be hanged, maybe he finds there is some evidence after all.

I should begin by mentioning my discussions with Prime Minster Gilani. We reviewed the whole gamut of our relationship. We agreed that the resumed round of dialogue should continue. We took note of the encouraging developments in the area of trade, the changing attitude of Pakistan to giving India the status of Most Favoured Treatment and the willingness of Pakistan to discuss all matters including that of terrorism.

So I come back with the expectation that the second round of resumed dialogue which will begin very shortly, will have the advantage of a more informed dialogue.

What will be the outcome of that dialogue, I am optimistic, but India Pakistan relations are subject to accident, and therefore we both recognise that if there is another incident like the Mumbai terror attack, that could give a big setback to the process of normalization*, I think that is fully understood by Prime Minister Gilani.

* Pakistani welcomed the positive trend of interaction and its Foreign Minister Hina Rabbani Khar sounded upbeat with her remarks that Islamabad was willing to bend backward to improve relations with its neighbours. Welcoming the trend she said “the ‘Thimphu spirit’ has given way to ‘Addu hope’. Refusing to react negatively to Prime Minister’s remarks that he would visit Pakistan only if there was forward movement on the Mumbai terror attack case, and that another such strike would be a setback to the accident-prone Indo-Pak relationship, Ms. Khar simply said that “Some statements are made for domestic consumption, but we also heard what he said before the international media. Prime Minister Singh was exceptionally positive. We have managed to create the space we needed to pursue issues meaningfully.” Sounding a positive note she said: “Addu onwards trust deficit is zero or it has shrunk to a large extent and now we need to start building on the trust. We have invested far too much in seeking out hostility towards each other and too less in seeking out peace with each other. I told the Indian Foreign Minister that I am competing with you on positivity.” While flagging the Kashmir issue she avoided its negativity by saying “Pakistan does not want to remain hostage to disputes. We want to resolve issues and don’t want to be pulled backwards.” 307. Joint Statement issued after India – Pakistan talks on Commercial and Economic Cooperation.

New Delhi, November 15, 2011.

The 6th round of India-Pakistan talks on Commercial and Economic Co-operation was held during 14th-16th November 2011 at New Delhi, between Commerce Secretaries of India and Pakistan under the dialogue process which started in 2004.

2. The Pakistan delegation was led by Zafar Mahmood, Secretary, Commerce and the Indian delegation was led by Commerce Secretary, Rahul Khullar.

3. Both sides expressed satisfaction with the overall progress being made to fully normalise the bilateral trading relationship. To take forward the decisions taken during the 5th round of talks in April 2011, many bilateral Groups/Sub-groups were set up. Almost all of these Groups/Sub-groups have met and worked on their specific designated tasks. The Working Group to address sector-specific barriers to trade met in August, 2011. The Joint Technical Group to oversee progress in development of physical infrastructure at Attari-Wagah Land Customs Station has met frequently. The Customs Liaison Border Committee was formalised and has met at bi-monthly intervals and done commendable work in facilitation of all trade consignments. The JWG on Economic and Commercial Cooperation, and the Sub-Group on Customs Cooperation met in August 2011. The first meeting of the Group of Experts on trade in electricity was held in October 2011 and the Sub-Group to facilitate trade in petroleum products is slated to meet in December 2011. Both sides agreed that the momentum of work and the determination to move forward had transmitted positive signals about advancing the bilateral trade agenda. In this context, India welcomed the decision taken by Pakistan to accord Most Favoured Nation (MFN) status to India and to the mandate given for full normalisation of the bilateral trade relations, as also meeting of all legal obligations.

4. The Commerce Ministers of both countries met in September 2011 and gave a clear political mandate to the respective Commerce Secretaries to lay down specific timelines for full normalisation of the trade relationship, dismantling of remaining non-tariff barriers, and full implementation of the legal obligations under the SAARC Agreement on South Asian Free Trade Area (SAFTA). Both sides agreed that Pakistan’s Commerce Minister’s visit to India after 35 years and the political ownership of leaders of both the countries has not only given the trade normalization process further strength and direction but a great hope and confidence to the business community also. They expressed hope that positive developments in the trade track would encourage similar progress in other components of the dialogue process.

5. During the 17th SAARC Summit held at Maldives (9–11 November 2011), the political leadership on both sides directed that the two sides also work on enhancing preferential trading arrangements as part of the shared vision to significantly expand bilateral trade.

6. Pakistan side informed that its Cabinet has given a mandate to the Commerce Ministry for complete normalization of trade with India. It appreciated India’s support in WTO for the EU concession package for Pakistan which would give the Pakistani business community confidence and create an environment of trust and cooperation. The Indian side welcomed the Cabinet decision and reiterated its support for the normalization process and building trust.

7. In context of outcomes agreed in the 5th round of talks, progress was reviewed and further decisions taken as follows:

A. Trade Normalisation:

(i) The move to full normalisation of trade relations shall be sequenced. In the first stage, Pakistan will transition from the current Positive List approach to a Negative List. The consultation process on devising this Negative List is almost complete. A small Negative List shall be finalised and ratified by February, 2012. Thereafter, all items other than those on the Negative List shall be freely exportable from India to Pakistan. In the second stage, the Negative List shall be phased out. The timing for this phasing out will be announced in February 2012 at the time the List is notified and it is expected that the phasing out will be completed before the end of 2012.

(ii) In terms of the clear mandate given by the political leadership, both sides agreed to move towards enhancing the preferential trading arrangements under the SAFTA process. As agreed earlier, bilateral trade can be significantly expanded by extending tariff concessions on products of commercial interest. Both sides designated the Joint Secretaries in their respective Ministries of Commerce as Chief Negotiators for working on how to improve preferential trading arrangements under SAFTA.

B. Trade Infrastructure:

Both sides reviewed the progress made in developing physical infrastructure for trade through the Attari-Wagah land route. It was agreed that the Joint Technical Group overseeing the work would meet at the end of November 2011 and there would be follow-up monthly meetings in December 2011 and January 2012. It was also agreed that all infrastructure construction would be completed and fully operational no later than the end of February 2012. This timeline would coincide with the announcement of the Negative List (See para 7 A (i) above). The new trading regime will thus be applicable to all trade through the land route after the infrastructure at Attari-Wagah is commissioned.

C. New Trade Initiatives:

(i) The first meeting of the Joint Group of Experts to examine feasibility of trade of electricity was held on 20th October 2011 at New Delhi. Central Electricity Authority and Power Grid Corporation of India limited/Power System Operation Corporation Ltd have been designated as the nodal technical agencies from the Indian side. They are interacting with National Transmission and Dispatch Company Ltd of Pakistan to work out the optimal technical solutions for grid connectivity between both countries. A broad understanding has been reached on possible grid connectivity between Amritsar-Lahore to enable trade of up to 500 MW of power. The second meeting of the Experts is scheduled to be held in Islamabad in the first week of December, 2011. It is expected that the Group of Experts will reach a final understanding on grid connectivity at this meeting.

(ii) Regarding trade in petroleum products, it was agreed that the Joint Group would hold its first meeting before January 2012.

D. Non-Tariff Barriers:

(i) A JWG meeting was held in August, 2011; co-chaired by the Joint Secretaries of the respective Commerce Ministries. The Pakistan side furnished a specific list of non-tariff barriers, as perceived by their business community, for sectors such as textiles, leather, cement, agricultural produce and surgical instruments. It was agreed that these would be comprehensively examined on the Indian side and interactions would be arranged between the concerned Regulators and Pakistan’s business community to discuss and find solutions for all issues raised.

(ii) A comprehensive discussion, “Nuts and Bolts of Trade Facilitation”, was organised in Delhi by FICCI, on 29.09.2011. Participants included Pakistan and Indian business delegates, technical experts, representatives of Indian regulatory bodies, and senior government officials. The feedback received was that this seminar had been most useful to address issues raised by businesspersons as well as to dispel misapprehensions. It was clarified that all standards and specifications were non-discriminatory, viz., they applied to all countries exporting goods to India. The discussions also explained how insistence on specific standards by importers was due to commercial considerations and not because of any Government requirement.

(iii) A comprehensive special session was held during this round of talks on matters of concern to Pakistan side. Detailed responses were provided by concerned officers on the Indian side. A summary of issues raised and addressed is at Annexure.

(iv) It was agreed that the JWG would continue interaction to address any clearly identified sector-specific barriers to trade. The Joint Secretaries of the respective Commerce Ministries would convene focused meetings on these issues, as necessary. A delegation comprising officers from various regulatory bodies would visit Lahore/Karachi in the first quarter of 2012 to provide necessary outreach so that businesspersons in Pakistan can be better informed about India’s trade regulations, standards and labeling/ marking requirements.

(v) Both sides agreed to initiate the process of a limited MRA as a formal mechanism to address the issues of standards and conformity assessment.

(vi) It was agreed that there was a need to institute a mechanism for redressing grievances arising from clearance of trade consignments at land, sea and airports. Pakistan side proposed that an agreement be concluded between both countries to address the concerns of the business community. Indian side agreed to consider this proposal and undertake further consultations in this matter.

E. Trade facilitation.

(i) Both sides appreciated the work done by the Customs Liaison Border Committee (CLBC) in resolving the operational issues at Wagah-Attari. The CLBC was mandated to undertake a comprehensive overview of the requirements to ensure expeditious clearance of goods including harmonization of customs procedures and to make recommendations to the Joint Working Group on Economic and Commercial cooperation.
(ii) The Sub Group on Customs Cooperation met in New Delhi on 24th August 2011. It discussed issues relating to harmonization in customs procedures, facilitation of trade consignments, and exchange of trade data and information. Nodal customs officers on both sides have been notified. They would maintain direct contact on all matters pertaining to delays in trade consignments, trade document requirements, and other matters of customs cooperation.

(iii) The Pakistan side handed over a draft of the Customs Cooperation Agreement. Both sides agreed that best efforts would be made to finalise the Agreement by 31st January, 2012.

F. Economic Cooperation.

(i) Regarding Bt cotton seed imports from India, it was noted that Government of Pakistan has constituted a committee to examine this issue. The first step may be permitting limited import solely for the purpose of field trials in Pakistan.

(ii) Both sides realized that there is a potential for cooperation in Information Technology, however, lack of information regarding capacity of Pakistani IT companies, difficulty in availability of visa for technical staff and absence of banking facilities has hindered cooperation in IT between the two countries. It was agreed that NASSCOM in coordination with Pakistan Software Export Development Board would facilitate a road show for Pakistani IT companies at Bangalore, Hyderabad and other Indian IT Hubs in February, 2012.

G. Business to Business interactions:

(i) To boost bilateral business confidence for enhanced bilateral trade, both sides agreed to encourage greater interaction amongst the business entities. It was noted with satisfaction that Apex Chambers of Commerce and Industry on both sides have formed a Joint India-Pakistan Chamber at the apex level (FICCI and FPCCI). Similarly, arrangements have been worked out for regional-level Chambers between Bombay and Karachi. It is expected that a similar joint arrangements between the Lahore and PHD Chambers would be worked out.

(ii) It was agreed to give a greater thrust to this B-to-B interaction of trade delegations. It was necessary to expand outreach and information dissemination activities to bridge information gaps relating to bilateral trading environment and economic opportunities. The Indian side noted the Pakistan side’s request for mounting a Trade Delegation comprising representatives of private sector who are responsible for procurement of goods for departmental stores, large retail shopping chains and whole-sale distributors.

(iii) It was noted with satisfaction that India Trade Promotion Organisation (ITPO) and Trade Development Authority of Pakistan (TDAP) had entered into a MOU for collaborative efforts to promote bilateral trade. The possibility of FIEO mounting a trade exhibition at Lahore Expo was also explored; this could be done in February, 2012. TDAP intimated that they would like to organise a lifestyle exhibition in New Delhi in March, 2012 and invited Indian participation at the Agro-Processing Value Addition Exhibition scheduled to be held in Karachi.

H. Other trade related issues:

(i) Both sides agreed that the present visa regime for businesspersons was a significant barrier to the rapid expansion of trade. It was noted that the Interior Ministry of Pakistan and India’s Ministry of Home Affairs had reached a broad understanding to put in place reciprocal arrangements which shall substantially liberalise the visa provisions for business persons. Discussions were held on how there would be further improvements on the understanding already reached. It was agreed that best efforts would be made by the respective Commerce Secretaries to push for further liberalisation of the business visa arrangements. However, with or without enhanced provisions, both sides would work with their respective authorities to ensure that the liberalised visa provisions already agreed to are put in place before the end of December, 2011.

(ii) The issue of promotion of bilateral investment was discussed. It was agreed that both sides would continue efforts to remove impediments to such investments.

(iii) On the opening of bank branches in each other’s countries, it was agreed that the Central Banks of both countries need to further discuss this issue. Actual dialogue needs to take place through a bilateral visit.
8. In conclusion, the Commerce Secretaries of both countries expressed faith in the ongoing process for increase in bilateral trade. Institutional arrangements put in place for promoting bilateral trade and commerce would continue and the concerned working groups shall meet as required, to take forward the charted roadmaps in this 6th round of talks.

9. The 7th round of talks would take place in Pakistan in April/May of 2012.

10. The talks were held in a very cordial and constructive atmosphere.

ANNEXURE

In the bilateral talks held today, a specific slot was allotted for discussing the ‘non-tariff barriers’ perceived by Pakistan side in respect of their exports to India.

Representatives from BIS, Department of Revenue, Ministry of Textiles, Ministry of Health and Family welfare, Department of Agriculture and Cooperation, and Ministry of External Affairs attended the meeting.

within 1-2 months after an application is registered. However, in case of Pakistan site visits, delay mostly occurs because the team is not allowed certain site visits due to security reasons. Pakistan government assured to make required security arrangements so that the inspection visits by BIS team can be conducted in time. Pakistan side was also informed that BIS has been granting renewal licenses for two years to those Pakistani cement manufacturers who have applied for the same.

2. Opacity of SPS measures/ import permit/tolerance non-availability of labs

(i) Indian side stated that the limit specified is 10% and the country of origin needs to certify the total quantity being exported. The only exception is zero tolerance in respect of a phyto-sanitary certificate. It is unacceptable if there is a difference in the quantity specified in the phyto-sanitary certificate vis-à-vis the quantity exported. Pakistan also follows the same procedure in case of phyto-sanitary certificate.

(ii) Indian side also stated that product source is important for SPS concerns. Fresh fruits and vegetables are tested at the laboratory at Attari and consignments are cleared within 6 hours. Further, all perishable consignments are cleared within the same day and no delays are being reported.

3. Food Products–testing and packaging requirements

Indian side agreed to send a team for educating the exporters reg. packaging and labelling requirements as and when requested for by the Pakistani authorities.

4. Textile Consumer Protection Regulations- Testing for Azodyes

Indian side informed that since Azodyes are banned in India, testing Azodyes-Marking and labeling requirements for cloth and Ready Made Garments (RMGs).

for these is a mandatory requirement. Pakistan side informed that Azodyes are banned in Pakistan and therefore, no manufacturer uses them. Testing laboratories are available in Mumbai and Delhi. No complaints of delays have been received. The testing procedure includes drawing of a 25% sample (by weight) only if the consignments are not certified by the country of origin. A certificate by accredited Certification Bodies/ Labs of Pakistan National Accreditation Council (www.pnac.org.pk) is acceptable. Pakistan side was also informed that certificates issued by international accredited labs under the WTO International Accreditation Procedures are accepted. India follows the international protocol for testing. If Pakistan has accredited WTO labs, certificates issued by the same can be accepted. BIS informed that it has not prescribed any mandatory requirements as regards standards on Textiles. However, if any country requires a certificate/license it has to apply for it and the certificate/license will be given after an inspection visit. Indian side informed that marking and labeling on cloth is a must which is a national treatment. As regards RMGs, it is mandatory that the brand name and composition of the garment is specified on the label. Both sides agreed that a delegation comprising various wings of the textile ministry will visit Pakistan and educate the potential exporters of the standards being followed by India.

5. Surgical Instruments – Indian Conformity

Indian side stated that Government of India does not regulate import of surgical instruments and therefore does not insist on any ICAC mark. BIS certification is sufficient; even this is voluntary and not mandatory. It is the buyers who decide on the specific certificates required or these certificates may be made compulsory by inclusion into the tender conditions.

6. Customs Procedure - Indian side stated that no delays have been recorded but if there are any specific cases, the same will be addressed as and when the Pakistani side provides details. Further, the Pakistani side was also informed that all the consignments except which require other mandatory procedures to be followed are cleared within 24 hours. Even those consignments which fault on some customs procedure are cleared immediately with the understanding that the problems will be sorted out in time. Indian side stated that their valuation system is based on the WTO Agreement on Customs value which provides for the transaction value concept and the circumstances for rejection and re-determination of the assessable value. In case of a dispute, an assessment order is issued which can be appealed against through a clearly laid down channel of appeals. Both sides agreed that specific commodities of export interest to Pakistan and their Ports of entry can be identified to facilitate faster clearance of consignments.

At the press briefing the Pakistan Commerce Secretary Mehmood tried to clarify the issue of MFN and said: “MFN is not an award or a degree which we can give to Khullar Sahab. This would not need any notification or a document. Under WTO, members are to grant MFN to each other. That obligation stands and will be completed when there is no list.” He added that the Pakistan Cabinet had given a mandate to the Commerce Ministry for complete normalisation of trade with India. He appreciated India’s support in WTO for the EU concession package for Pakistan which would give the Pakistani business community confidence and create an environment of trust and cooperation. Commerce Secretary Mr. Khullar responding welcomed the Pak Cabinet decision and reiterated the Indian support for the normalisation process and building trust. Mr. Khullar expected bilateral trade to increase substantially in volume once Pakistan moves from the positive list to the negative list. Pakistan presently has a positive list of 1,900 items.

It may be relevant to point out that on November 1 Commerce Minister Anand Sharma had “deeply appreciated” Pakistan’s decision to grant it Most Favoured Nation (MFN) status, stating the move will also help improve political ties between the two neighbours. Mr. Sharma had spoken to his Pakistani counterpart Makhdoom Amin Fahim immediately after the decision was taken by the Pakistani Cabinet. When asked whether the move would help improve political relationship between the countries, he said: “...It will be influencing definitely in positive manner. We need to sustain this in the coming months.” He said that when bilateral economic engagement improves, it brings prosperity and growth to both the partners. Mr. Sharma said Mr. Makhdoom’s September visit here was a major step forward in this direction. Under MFN status, Pakistan will treat India at par with its other favoured trading partners. India has already granted this status to the neighbouring country way back in 1996.

Prime Minister too welcomed this decision of the Pakistan Government and said “Better late than never. I welcome it.” He said “This should have happened 17 years ago!.... As one who believes that, rightly or wrongly, the destinies of countries in South Asia are very closely linked, I welcome the decision of Pakistan to grant us Most Favoured Nation treatment.” The Prime Minister reminded the people that India had granted Pakistan MFN status way back in 1996 but Islamabad failed to reciprocate the gesture because of opposition from Pakistani trade lobbies and religious and hard line political parties, which felt such a move could harm their country’s stand on the Kashmir issue.
308. Excerpts from the Interview of Commerce Secretary Rahul Khullar with the fortnightly FRONTLINE on MFN.

Can you explain the MFN issue and why India could not get this from Pakistan when it had granted the same to Pakistan in 1995?

MFN is a right available to us from the WTO principle of non-discrimination in trade. Currently Pakistan uses a positive list approach, which means only so many goods can be exported, and this is clearly in breach of the principle of MFN enshrined in the WTO.

We have been arguing with them that what is India’s natural right under WTO laws should be given to us. The loss to India and to Pakistan is twofold. From our perspective, the very fact that we are not allowed to export certain goods goes against the principle of non-discrimination in trade and almost singles India out for discriminatory action. Equally, it is not that trade does not take place – it takes place through a third country, which means it goes to the Gulf [countries] or wherever [and] from there to Pakistan. In the end, Pakistan ends up paying higher prices for the goods because there is no direct transaction. How can that possibly do any good to Pakistan?

The moment you do this sort of trade through an intermediary you add on transport cost, which is otherwise unnecessary. For instance, it is cheaper to ship the same goods from here to Karachi instead of going via Dubai, or it is easier to send goods through the Wagah border rather than to ship or airfreight them to Dubai and from there to Karachi. This means the consumer in Pakistan ends up paying higher transport cost and the intermediary profit margin.

What is the official and informal bilateral trade flow? How does the MFN status make any difference?

The formal bilateral trade is $2.5 to 3 billion, while informal trade is at least twice that amount. The latter is legitimate trade going from here to an entrepot centre and from there being routed to Pakistan. So, combining official trade and the trade routed through Dubai, the bilateral trade now stands at $8 billion.

When you are an MFN, the $5 billion is not going to go through Dubai but directly to Pakistan. In a sense, official trade to Dubai will go less by $5 billion. So there is no difference. But the real gain will come from the fact that many people who are not able to export because of the positive list approach will be able to do now, and that will benefit them.

Is Pakistan’s carping on non-tariff barriers (NTB) by India genuine? How will MFN status help solve this irritant on both sides?
I think it is more a perceptional issue. I suspect that their main concern is not NTBs but tariff barriers. For instance, Pakistan would like to export textiles to India. There are no NTBs but there are tariff barriers preventing textile exports. These tariffs are fixed in terms of specific rates and they tend to be high. So what they are seeking is concession on these tariffs.

The real point is that Pakistan needs to move in two different stages. First, it must accept the principle that MFN is the right of all WTO members and if it gives the benefits to all WTO members, why not to India? In the MFN system there is no such positive/negative list and all items are tradable. The tariffs at which they are traded are MFN tariffs.

The second stage is the derogations from MFN, which are legitimate under the WTO's regional trading arrangements (RTAs). Here you can make trade even freer and more open than the MFN trade by entering into a bilateral agreement where you offer tariff concessions. Should Pakistan be willing to do that at a later stage, it will be possible for us to consider bilaterally. If Pakistan wants to join SAFTA [SAARC preferential trading arrangement] and honour its commitments under SAFTA, then it can consider availing [itself] of the concessions we give to other members of the grouping.

So Pakistan should grant MFN status to India and then seek concessions on tariffs. Just as we extended to Bangladesh zero-tariff concessions on textile items recently, at some point of time these matters can get sorted out through negotiations. I don’t think these are NTBs. There was some concern about licensing and standards for export of cement from Pakistan, but many of those issues have been sorted out. I told my counterpart in Pakistan that if they gave lists of sector-specific NTBs they wanted us to address, we would gladly address them.

I join my countrymen in paying respectful homage to the innocent men, women and children whose lives were most tragically snuffed out by the inhuman act of terrorism, inspired and carried out from across our borders, three year ago, on this day, in Mumbai. We also salute the courage and fortitude of the families who lost their loved ones in that senseless act of violence.

I once again call on our neighbor to bring the perpetrators of the crime to speedy justice.

No cause can justify the use of terrorism for attainment of goals, whatsoever they may be! There also cannot be a selective fight against terror. The scourge of terrorism has to be comprehensively fought and eradicated in all its forms and manifestations. It must be realized that use of terrorism as an instrument of state policy, has no place in today’s world and is self destructive.

Issues have to be resolved through a peaceful dialogue in an atmosphere free from terror and violence. India is committed to having a peaceful, friendly and cooperative relationship with all its neighbours for progress and prosperity in our region. We call upon all our neighbours to join us in this endeavour of building a better future for our peoples.

SRI LANKA

312. Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to reports of death of an Indian fisherman due to firing by Sri Lankan Navy.

New Delhi, January 13, 2011.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesperson said:

We have received reports of the death of an Indian fisherman due to firing by Sri Lankan Navy personnel. Our High Commissioner in Colombo has immediately taken up this matter with the Sri Lankan Government and expressed our deep concern and regret at this incident. We have emphasized that resort to firing in these situations has no justification and called on the Sri Lankan authorities to desist from use of force.

The welfare and the safety of our fishermen in the waters between India and Sri Lanka have received very high priority by Government. We have consistently emphasized to the Sri Lankan Government to refrain from firing on our fishermen and scrupulously adhere to the October 2008 Understanding reached between the two governments. We call on the Sri Lankan Navy to exercise maximum restraint and avoid use of force in such situations.

On January 23 Ministry of External Affairs issued another Statement in which External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna condemned the killing of Indian fisherman.

In response to a question the Official Spokesperson said, "We have received reports of the tragic killing of another Indian fisherman allegedly due to use of force by Sri Lankan Navy personnel. The External Affairs Minister has expressed Government's strong and unequivocal condemnation of this violent incident and conveyed his deep sympathies to the family of the deceased.

On receiving the news, Government immediately raised the matter with the Sri Lankan Government both in New Delhi and in Colombo. The Sri Lankan Government was requested to seriously investigate this incident and ensure that it does not recur. We have stressed that use of force must be eschewed in all such situations and have reiterated that the welfare and the safety of our fishermen in the waters between India and Sri Lanka will continue to receive very high priority by Government. The October 2008 Understanding reached between the two governments must be scrupulously adhered to in letter and spirit".

Sri Lanka’s response was to promise a serious investigation into the killing of Indian fisherman by its navy. Sri Lankan High Commissioner Prasad Kariyawasam came out with the promise after a meeting with Joint Secretary (Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and Myanmar) in the Ministry of External Affairs T.S. Tirumurti.

In the meantime Tamil Nadu Chief Minister M. Karunanidhi, had in a letter, urged Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to take up the killing of the fisherman with the Sri Lankan government. External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna sought a detailed report from the Indian High Commissioner on the incident.

The Foreign Secretary of India, Mrs. Nirupama Rao, visited Sri Lanka on 30-31 January 2011. During her visit, she called on His Excellency President Mahinda Rajapaksa and the Hon'ble Minister of External Affairs, Prof. G.L. Peiris, on 31st January 2011. She also met Secretary to the President Mr. Lalith Weeratunga, Defence Secretary Mr. Gotabaya Rajapaksa and External Affairs Secretary Mr. C.R. Jayasinghe.

During the discussions, Foreign Secretary Rao expressed the deep concern of the Government of India at the recent violent incidents in the waters between India and Sri Lanka, which had resulted in the tragic death of two Indian fishermen. She stressed that these incidents should be fully investigated and all steps taken to prevent their recurrence in future. The Sri Lanka authorities emphasized in this regard that it is the consistent policy of Sri Lanka to treat in a humanitarian manner all fishermen, including those from the Indian fishing community, who cross into Sri Lanka waters. Given the very close bilateral relationship between the two countries, any development which impacts on the wellbeing of the Indian fishing community pursuing their livelihoods in the waters between the two countries, is of the utmost concern to Sri Lanka. The Government of Sri Lanka is therefore committed to ascertaining the facts behind the incidents. While continuing with further inquiries, the Sri Lankan authorities have requested that additional information be made available by the Indian side. Both sides agreed that the use of force cannot be justified under any circumstances.

The two sides noted that the Joint Statement on Fishing Arrangements of 26th October 2008, which had put in place practical arrangements to deal with bona fide fishermen crossing the International Maritime Boundary Line (IMBL), had led to a decrease in incidents. They agreed on the need to discuss arrangements...

based on the current situation so as to strengthen the safety and security of the fishermen.

Accordingly, it was decided that the next meeting of the Joint Working Group on Fishing would be convened at an early date, which would, inter-alia, address various issues relating to fishing by the two sides. The Joint Working Group would also address the proposed Memorandum of Understanding on development and cooperation in the field of fisheries. It was decided as well to enhance and promote contacts between the fishermen’s associations on both sides, since such contacts have proved to be mutually beneficial.

315. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the meeting convened by Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao on the question of fishing in the waters between India and Sri Lanka.

New Delhi, February 26, 2011.

A meeting was convened today, under the Chairmanship of the Foreign Secretary, to discuss matters relating to fishing in the waters between India and Sri Lanka. The Chief Secretary of Tamil Nadu, the Director General of Coast Guard, Secretary (Animal Husbandry & Fisheries) of Tamil Nadu, and officials from the Ministries of Defence and External Affairs participated in the meeting.

The meeting was convened against the background of the recent developments concerning the violent incidents in the waters between India and Sri Lanka and the arrests of Indian fishermen. While satisfaction was expressed at the release of the 136 Indian fishermen by the Sri Lankan Government, it was nevertheless emphasised that resort to firing and use of force in such situations, as had happened in January 2011, had no justification.

It was decided that the Governments of India and Tamil Nadu would encourage a delegation of local fishermen’s associations from Tamil Nadu to visit Sri Lanka in March to meet with their Sri Lankan counterparts. Such contacts have proved to be mutually beneficial and should be strengthened.

The meeting welcomed the convening of the Joint Working Group on Fishing proposed for March, which would also discuss the proposed draft Memorandum of Understanding on development and cooperation in the field of fisheries.

The Government of Tamil Nadu referred to the ongoing efforts to inform their fishermen about the need to observe security and safety parameters while engaging in fishing activities in the waters between India and Sri Lanka. Measures to further augment security in the vicinity of the International Maritime Boundary Line were also focussed on.

The Government of Tamil Nadu will finalise the necessary arrangements, in consultation with the Government of India, to facilitate the participation of Indian pilgrims at the St. Anthony’s festival at Kachchativu Island.

The welfare, safety and security of our fishermen will continue to receive the highest priority of both the Central and State Governments.
316.  Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the Construction of a Hospital at Dickoya in Sri Lanka.

New Delhi, March 9, 2011.

An Agreement was signed today 9th March of 2011 in the Ministry of External Affairs, South Block, New Delhi for awarding the work related to construction of 150 bed hospital at Dickoya near Hatton in the Central Province of Sri Lanka. The Agreement was signed by Shri T.S. Tirumurti, Joint Secretary (BSM) on behalf of Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and Shri. K. R. Tirumurahan, Managing Director, Green Valley's Shelters (P) Limited, Chennai.

The hospital will be constructed under grant of Government of India. Government of India has allocated an amount of INR 47.27 crores for setting up of the hospital. Hospital Services Consultation Corporation Ltd (HSCC) India is the Project Management Consultant for the project. The project is expected to be completed in twenty-two months.

Recognizing the need for establishment of a well equipped general hospital at Dickoya near Hatton the Government of India agreed to render assistance to Government of Sri Lanka. The establishment of a new hospital in the Central Province in Sri Lanka will augment the facilities in the existing hospital and provide health services to a large number of people of Indian origin living in this area. India has continued to extend extensive assistance to the Indian Origin Tamils living in that area especially in the area of education, health, housing and public transportation.

New Delhi, March 29, 2011.

The 3rd Meeting of the India-Sri Lanka Joint Working Group on Fisheries was held in New Delhi on March 28-29, 2011. The Sri Lanka delegation was led by Mr. Ranjith Uyangoda, Additional Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs of Sri Lanka and the Indian delegation by Shri T.S. Tirumurti, Joint Secretary (BSM), Ministry of External Affairs of India. The leader of the Sri Lankan delegation called on the Foreign Secretary of India, Smt. Nirupama Rao on 29th March 2011.

Both sides welcomed the convening of the Joint Working Group on Fisheries, the last meeting of which was held in January 2006 in Colombo. The two sides reviewed developments since 2006.

Both sides reiterated the high priority given by their respective Governments to issues of fishermen and their livelihood. They stressed the need for all fishermen to be treated in a humane manner. To ensure the safety and security of fishermen, both sides agreed that the use of force cannot be justified under any circumstances. The need to respect the International Maritime Boundary Line (IMBL) when fishing was stressed by the Sri Lankan side.

The Sri Lankan side informed that the recent violent incidents in January 2011, which resulted in the death of two Indian fishermen, are being further investigated. In this context, the two sides noted that the Joint Statement on Fishing Arrangements of 26th October 2008 had led to a decrease in violent incidents in 2009-2010. They welcomed the Joint Statement issued during the visit of the Foreign Secretary of India to Sri Lanka in January 2011.

The two sides noted that given the socio-economic and livelihood dimensions to the issue, there was need for enhancing cooperation by building on the agreements reached earlier. They agreed on the need to discuss arrangements based on the current situation so as to further strengthen the safety, security and livelihood of the fishermen.

Both sides welcomed the visit of a group of Indian fishermen from Tamil Nadu to Sri Lanka between 20-23 March 2011. They had called on the Hon'ble Minister of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources of Sri Lanka and had also meetings with Hon'ble Minister of Small and Traditional Industries of Sri Lanka and their counterparts from the Northern Province. Recalling the initiatives taken earlier in August 2010 by the fishermen of both countries, where a Sri Lankan fishermen delegation visited India, both sides agreed on the need to foster greater understanding between their respective fishermen and fishermen associations.
Noting the invitation extended by the Indian fishermen to their Sri Lankan counterparts, the two sides agreed that a return visit to India would be important to take this process forward.

Both sides discussed the various regulatory measures being put in place to manage the fishery resources in their respective waters. They noted the growing importance of fisheries to the livelihood of the coastal communities in Northern Sri Lanka. The two sides agreed that a road map needs to be put in place to ensure resource sustainability, livelihood, safety and security of the fishermen of both countries. Both sides also discussed measures to expedite the release of bonafide detained fishermen from both countries.

The draft Memorandum of Understanding on Development and Cooperation in the field of Fisheries was also discussed and it was decided to continue discussion on the draft. The Indian side offered to continue its assistance to the fisheries sector in Sri Lanka, which was welcomed by the Sri Lankan side.

The Indian delegation also thanked the Sri Lankan authorities for facilitating the visit of Indian fishermen and pilgrims to Kachchativu for the festival of St. Anthony earlier this month.
318. Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to the Report on Sri Lankan conflict by panel appointed by UN Secretary General.

April 26, 2011.

In response to questions the Official Spokesperson said,

"The Government has seen the Report of the Panel of Experts appointed by the UN Secretary General to advise him on accountability-related issues in the context of the end of the armed conflict in Sri Lanka in May 2009. The issues raised in the Report* need to be studied carefully. As a first step, we intend to engage with the Government of Sri Lanka on the issues contained in the Report".

319. Remarks of External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna welcoming Sri Lankan Minister for External Affairs Prof. G.L. Peiris.

I am delighted to welcome the distinguished Minister for External Affairs of Sri Lanka Prof. Peiris. It has always been a pleasure meeting Prof. Peiris. I vividly recall my visit to Sri Lanka and the hospitality and the graciousness with which I was received by Prof. Peiris in particular. What touched me most was that throughout my five-day sojourn of Sri Lanka Prof. Peiris was with me. I think that speaks so eloquently about Prof. Peiris's attitude towards India.

Our relationship with Sri Lanka is of critical importance not only to India but to Sri Lanka also. We have always found that in Sri Lanka we have a reliable partner, a steadfast friend of India and we wish well for Sri Lanka. They have gone through very tumultuous times in the last three decades and now they are settling down. India would be willing to do everything that is possible, depending upon the comfort level of Sri Lanka, to help them, to assist them in whatever manner they want us to help them to settle down.

Once again, it is with great pleasure that I extend a very warm welcome to Prof. Peiris.

New Delhi, May 17, 2011.

2. During his visit, the External Affairs Minister of Sri Lanka called on Dr Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of India and met with Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Finance Minister, Shri S M Krishna, External Affairs Minister and Shri Shivshankar Menon, National Security Advisor. Smt Nirupama Rao, Foreign Secretary, called on the visiting dignitary.

3. Delegation-level talks, led by the two External Affairs Ministers, were held on May 16, 2011. The two sides reviewed the entire gamut of bilateral relations. They assessed the developments that had taken place since the visit of the President of Sri Lanka to India in June, 2010 and the bilateral Joint Commission meeting at the level of the Ministers of External Affairs held in Colombo in November, 2010. Issues relating to regional and international issues of common concern were also discussed.

4. Both sides agreed that the end of armed conflict in Sri Lanka created a historic opportunity to address all outstanding issues in a spirit of understanding and mutual accommodation imbued with political vision to work towards genuine national reconciliation. In this context, the External Affairs Minister of Sri Lanka affirmed his Government's commitment to ensuring expeditious and concrete progress in the ongoing dialogue between the Government of Sri Lanka and representatives of Tamil parties. A devolution package, building upon the 13th Amendment, would contribute towards creating the necessary conditions for such reconciliation.

5. The Minister of External Affairs of Sri Lanka reiterated the commitment of his Government to continue to address issues related to resettlement and reconciliation in a focused and progressive manner. In this regard the Minister of External Affairs of Sri Lanka referred to the work of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC) and set out the steps taken by the Inter-Agency Advisory Committee (IAAC) chaired by the Attorney General in implementing the Interim Recommendations of the LLRC in relation to detention, law and order, administration and language issues and socio-economic and livelihood issues. In response, The External Affairs Minister of India urged the expeditious implementation of measures by the Government of Sri Lanka, to ensure resettlement and genuine reconciliation, including early return of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) to their respective homes, early withdrawal of emergency regulations, investigations into allegations of human rights violations, restoration of normalcy in affected areas and redress of humanitarian concerns of affected families.

6. The External Affairs Minister of Sri Lanka expressed appreciation of the humanitarian and other assistance including demining and livelihood support measures extended by the Government of India for early relief and resettlement of IDPs. In this context, both sides noted that forward movement had taken place towards construction of houses for IDPs and other infrastructure development projects, including rehabilitation of Kankesanthurai harbour, rehabilitation of Palaly Airport, repair and construction of hospital and schools, setting up of Vocational Training Centres, construction of the Cultural Centre in Jaffna, restoration of railway lines and restoration of the Duraiappah stadium in Jaffna.

7. Expressing satisfaction at the progress of work on various railway projects in Sri Lanka undertaken with India’s assistance, both sides agreed to facilitate the work for their timely completion. In keeping with the understanding contained in the Joint Declaration of June 9, 2010, both sides agreed to the early conclusion of Agreements related to the Joint Venture Thermal Power Project between NTPC and CEB at Sampur, Trincomalee; finalisation of remaining agreements including reconstruction of the Palali-KKS railway line, establishment of a new signalling and telecommunication system and procurement of rolling stock from India; and to continue ongoing dialogue for early finalisation of a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA). Progress on the feasibility study for the interconnection of India Sri Lanka electricity grids was reviewed. It was also agreed to enhance cooperation in the energy sector and to promote dialogue on security and defence issues of relevance to the bilateral relationship.

8. Reviewing the outcome of the Joint Working Group meeting on Fisheries held in New Delhi on 28-29 March, 2011, both sides agreed that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances and that all fishermen should be treated in a humane manner. The Indian side conveyed that the incidents of continued violence against Indian fishermen in the vicinity of Sri Lanka were of serious concern. In this context, both sides noted that the Joint Statement on Fishing Arrangements of 26th October 2008 had led to a decrease in violent incidents. Furthermore, the two sides emphasised the importance of an early conclusion of the draft Memorandum of Understanding on Development and Cooperation in the field of Fisheries between India and Sri Lanka.

9. Both sides reiterated their commitment to promote cultural and people-to-people contacts and enhance connectivity including through early operationalisation of the ferry services between Tuticorin and Colombo and Rameswaram and Talaimannar. The two sides also agreed to encourage two-way flow of investments including in the development of ports and ports related services in Sri Lanka.

10. Both countries agreed on the need for reform of the UN Security Council.

11. Sri Lanka reiterated its strong support for India’s legitimate claim for permanent membership in an expanded UN Security Council.

On the crucial question of ethnic reconciliation Prof. Peiris said that Sri Lankan government had six rounds of talks with Tamil representatives and had begun to address substantive issues on devolution of power. The government, he said, has proposed a bicameral legislature to share power at the Centre since 50 per cent of Tamils live outside the northern part of Sri Lanka. The Tamil representatives have also given some proposals to the government, to which it would respond. “It is an ongoing dialogue,” he said. On the question of human rights Professor Peiris explained why Sri Lanka did not agree with the United Nations Panel report on the war against the LTTE, and charged it contained several contradictions. He reiterated his government’s stand that the report “puts obstacles” in the reconciliation effort among its people. On the attitude of the large Sri Lankan Tamil diaspora, Professor Peiris said the government did not wish to demonise or isolate them but engage them in the process of rebuilding. On the problems being faced by fishermen from Tamil Nadu, he said the Joint Working Group had been revived to deal with the issue, especially since fishermen in Sri Lanka now had access to marine resources that they had earlier been denied due to the war with the LTTE. He said the fishing communities of both sides have been in touch, adding that the Sri Lankan Navy has taken a series of measures and put rigid controls on ammunition issued to its personnel.

New Delhi, July 15, 2011.

In response to a question on the Channel 4 Documentary entitled "Sri Lanka's Killing Fields", the Official Spokesperson said:

"Our focus is on the welfare and the well being of the Tamil speaking minorities of Northern and Eastern Sri Lanka. We have consistently emphasized to the Sri Lankan Government that their rehabilitation should be of the highest and most immediate priority. A fair and reasonable settlement of the political issues concerning the minorities in Sri Lanka is of utmost importance and the historic opportunity offered by the end of the conflict should be availed of at the earliest. The sequence of events during the last days of the conflict is unclear. The Government of Sri Lanka would need to go into the matter in greater detail. The concerns that are being expressed in this regard need to be examined".

New Delhi, July 15, 2011.

In response to a question on UNSG's Panel of Experts report on Sri Lanka and the issue of Sri Lanka's Tamil population, the Official Spokesperson said,

"Sri Lanka is home to a number of ethnic groups of which about twenty percent are Tamil speaking. They have friends and relatives in Tamil Nadu and other parts of India. It is but natural that we are concerned for their wellbeing, as well as that of all of the people of Sri Lanka with whom we enjoy historical ties of affinity.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh observed recently that, "The Tamil population (in Sri Lanka) has legitimate grievances. --- And our emphasis has been to persuade the Sri Lankan government that we must move towards a new system of institutional reforms, where the Tamil people will have a feeling that they are equal citizens of Sri Lanka, and they can lead and live a life of dignity and self-respect. That is our outlook towards the issue".
As far as the report of the UNSG’s panel of experts on Sri Lanka is concerned, we have heard the views of the Sri Lankan Government on various occasions, including during the visit of their Foreign Minister to New Delhi in May 2011 and again during the Troika meeting last month in Colombo.

In general, there are still questions on the report. Some countries have raised this in the UN Human Rights Council. It may be recalled that the Panel was set up by the UN Secretary General with the objective of advising him on the developments in Sri Lanka in the last stages of the conflict.”

323. Address by Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao at the Inaugural Session of the International Conference on Fisheries organized by the Observer Research Foundation.

New Delhi, July 18, 2011.

Ambassador Rasgotra
High Commissioner of Sri Lanka Prasad Kariyawasam

Distinguished Participants
Ladies and Gentlemen

It is indeed a great pleasure to be in your midst this evening. At the outset, allow me to thank the Observer Research Foundation for taking this important initiative to conduct a Round Table Conference on a relevant and topical subject like fisheries. I wish to, in particular, thank Mr. Sathiya Moorthy for conceptualizing and preparing for this international conference.

2. I am also happy to see that the ORF has brought together experts and intellectuals from Sri Lanka, Thailand, USA, Europe and Australia, apart from academics, experts and officials from India. I extend a special welcome to those who have travelled from distant places to be here for this International Conference.

3. Many of us present this evening would undoubtedly have seen a recent issue of the Time Magazine on "The future of fish". Unfortunately, the conclusions are not very encouraging. Overfishing has depleted as much as 90% of the large species such as tuna and marlin, while according to the United Nations, 32% of our global fish stocks are overexploited. The article refers to a recent report by the International Programme on the State of the Ocean that found that the world’s marine species faced threats “unprecedented in human history”, attributable mainly to overfishing. It is, therefore, both timely and relevant for an international conference such as ours to examine the issue of our dwindling fisheries resources, the problems associated with it and the solutions that can offer themselves.

4. I have no doubt that the eminent panelists and speakers at the conference will examine a number of situations in which competition for scarce fisheries resources and overlapping claims have had an impact on relations between States. It would be eminently useful if a thorough examination of the lessons learned and best practices from different parts of the world could form a part of the cornucopia of relevant material on the issue.

5. The conference has particularly relevance for India with its long and extended coastline of 7,500 kilometers. India shares a maritime boundary with several of its neighbours, including Pakistan, Maldives, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Myanmar, Thailand and Indonesia. I note that many of the sessions of the conference will focus on fishing issues involving India and its neighbours, particularly Sri Lanka. I have no doubt that these will be very useful for all concerned.

6. India and Sri Lanka are consistently engaged in working out a practical solution to the issues involving their fishermen. As we all know, fishing is a major livelihood activity on both sides of the International Maritime Boundary Line between India and Sri Lanka, particularly from the south Indian state of Tamil Nadu and the Northern Sri Lankan area. Both these areas are linked by the Palk Strait and the Gulf of Mannar. For centuries, fishing communities from these areas have lived in harmony, maintaining cultural and matrimonial ties.

7. Given the close proximity between the two coastlines, and the depleting fisheries resources in the area, as also the livelihood issue involving fishermen on both sides, our two governments are giving special attention to the problems that have arisen concerning what is called the fishermen issue between the two countries.

8. When I visited Sri Lanka earlier this year to take up the issue of Indian fishermen apprehended in Sri Lankan waters, my Sri Lankan interlocutors emphasized that it was the consistent policy of their government to treat all fishermen crossing into Sri Lankan waters in a humane manner. They also conveyed that the wellbeing of the Indian fishing community was of the utmost concern to Sri Lanka and that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances.
Ladies and Gentlemen,

9. India and Sri Lanka have always maintained the closest of neighbourly relations based on trust and friendship. In order to find a solution to this particular issue, both India and Sri Lanka are engaged in a dialogue at all levels aimed at addressing it comprehensively and working out a practical arrangement which would allow the fishing communities on both sides to coexist peacefully. In this regard, Fishermen's Associations from both countries have a major role to play as they interact with each other, understand each others' problems better and have the ability to come out with ideas to resolve the issue at hand. I wish to take this opportunity to welcome the representatives of fishermen to this conference. I have no doubt that they will be heard carefully.

10. There are always solutions to every issue. The issue of fisheries is definitely not a zero-sum game. A solution can never manifest itself if it comes at the cost of one or other party. I have no doubt that the Conference will help us in brainstorming on a subject which involves the livelihood of many of our people. We need to consider alternative methods of fishing, examine alternative livelihoods, identify different areas for fishing, explore joint management of resources and allow interim fishing arrangements for fishing communities to live in harmony and also in harmony with the delicate marine environment that surrounds them and from which they eke their livelihoods.

11. Our situation is not unique in this regard. Many countries around the world regard fisheries resources as so called "common pool resources" since fish care nothing about political boundaries demarcated between countries. Fish migrate across political boundaries. The exploitation of fisheries resources in such a situation can only be managed effectively by cooperation between the States concerned. In the case of India and Sri Lanka, we need to understand the characteristics of the Palk Bay and the Gulf of Mannar. These are narrow stretches of waters between our two coastlines. Historically, this has been a traditional fishing area for both Indian and Sri Lankan fishermen.

12. We also need more scientific study of the fishery resources in the area and how to better conserve, manage and exploit transboundary stocks of fish. Furthermore, in the context of India and Sri Lanka, and their fishermen, we will have to pay special attention to small sized fishing boats, some of them not even motorized, let alone with GPS. Special measures have been put in place to deal with this category of fishing boats by countries like China and Vietnam in their traditional fishing grounds. We can study the experience of fellow Asian countries in this regard. For instance, some countries have set up common fishery zones. Are there lessons to be learnt from such experiences? Let us explore the answers available. For example in cases where there are fishing agreements, a Joint Fisheries Committee is also set up, which maintains the equilibrium and order in fishing activity between the two countries concerned. Cases where fishermen stray into territorial waters of the other country are dealt with efficiently, with the straying fishermen and their vessels released promptly on posting a bond or other form of security. There is also the practice of granting fishing licences for a permissible and stipulated number of vessels with contracting parties exchanging information on the number of vessels which have been granted such license or permits. China and Vietnam also, for instance, prohibit destructive fishing, like use of explosives. Bottom sea trawling also faces restrictions. Great importance should also be attached to maintaining the biodiversity of the Palk Bay and Gulf of Mannar areas. Especially since we have a mutually agreed maritime boundary in these areas, we should be able to learn from international best practices on how to establish a fisheries management system between the two countries. For instance, three categories of waters are designed in the Sino-Vietnam agreement, namely the 15-year Common Fishery Zone, the 4-year Waters in Transitional Arrangements, and the Buffer Zone for Small-sized Fishing Boats. Are there lessons to be learnt from these examples? I hope the Conference will discuss these matters in greater depth. I have no doubt that you will impart intellectual objectivity to such discussions. Our aim should be to ensure a peaceful settlement of these issues and stability of existence of our fishing communities on both sides. This will involve some degree of political compromise. Reciprocal fishing access and cooperative management of shared fishery resources are other ideas that come from bilateral agreements entered into by other countries. Sustainable development is the key. Let me emphasize that I am merely providing some "bait" for a meaningful debate and discussion of such issues in the framework of the deliberations of this Conference! Nothing more, nothing less!

Ladies and Gentlemen,

13. Before I conclude, I wish to once again convey my gratitude to ORF and Ambassador Rasgotra for allowing me the privilege of speaking at the inaugural function of this Conference. I wish the organizers and participants all success in their deliberations.

Thank you
Madam Speaker,

There have been a number of requests for Calling Attention Motion and Short Duration Discussions as well as Parliamentary Questions on issues relating to Sri Lanka in both the Houses of Parliament. I, therefore, propose to make a Suo Moto statement which, I hope, will respond to most, if not all, issues of interest and concern to my fellow Parliamentarians.

Madam Speaker,

2. The relationship between India and Sri Lanka is based upon shared historical, cultural, ethnic and civilizational ties and extensive people-to-people interaction. In recent years, the relationship has become multifaceted and diverse, encompassing all areas of contemporary relevance.

3. Sri Lanka has borne the brunt of terrorism for nearly three-decades. The end of the long period of armed conflict in Sri Lanka in May 2009, left around 3,00,000 Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) living in camps in Northern Sri Lanka and general devastation of infrastructure in the affected areas.

4. The Government of India has accorded the highest priority to the welfare of IDPs in Sri Lanka. In June 2009, the Prime Minister announced a grant of Rs. 500 crores for relief, rehabilitation and resettlement work in Sri Lanka. Towards this humanitarian effort, India dispatched family relief packs, deployed an emergency field hospital, conducted an artificial limb fitment camp and deployed seven de-mining teams in Northern Sri Lanka. It also gifted more than 10,400 MT of shelter material, 4 lakh cement bags, 95,000 agricultural starter packs and 500 tractors to revive agricultural activities in Northern Sri Lanka.

5. India also announced the construction of 50,000 houses, mainly for IDPs in Sri Lanka. During my visit to Sri Lanka in November 2010, I inaugurated the pilot project for construction of 1000 houses at Ariyalai in Jaffna. I am happy to convey that work on ground has already started and houses are beginning to come up in what is being seen as a model project. I also carried out the ground breaking for railway line restoration projects in Northern Sri Lanka, under a Government of India Line of Credit of about US $ 800 million. India is also assisting in the rehabilitation of the Kanakesanthurai (KKS) harbour, restoration of Duraiappa stadium, construction of a Cultural Centre at Jaffna and vocational training centres at Batticaloa and Nuwara Eliya.

Our primary objective in all that we are doing in Sri Lanka is to ensure the welfare and wellbeing of Sri Lankan Tamils, including IDPs, and to assist in the development of Northern Sri Lanka. In a Joint Press Statement issued on the occasion of the visit of the Sri Lankan External Affairs Minister to India on 17 May, 2011, I urged the expeditious implementation of measures by the Government of Sri Lanka to ensure resettlement and genuine reconciliation, including early return of IDPs to their respective homes. I am happy to convey to the House that according to information available to us around 2,90,000 IDPs have already been resettled and only around 10,000 IDPs remain in the camps.

6. Government has also articulated its position that the end of armed conflict in Sri Lanka created a historic opportunity to address all outstanding issues relating to minority communities in Sri Lanka, including Tamils. The Joint Press Release of May 17, 2011, states that all such outstanding issues had to be settled in a spirit of understanding and mutual accommodation imbued with political vision to work towards genuine national reconciliation. The External Affairs Minister of Sri Lanka affirmed his Government's commitment to ensuring expeditious and concrete progress in the ongoing dialogue between the Government of Sri Lanka and representatives of Tamil parties and that a devolution package, building upon the 13th Amendment, would contribute towards creating the necessary conditions for such reconciliation.

7. The end of the long conflict in Sri Lanka has also raised questions relating to the conduct of the war. We have, in this context, noted a report issued by a Panel of Experts constituted by the UN Secretary General on Accountability in Sri Lanka. There have also been public reactions to the telecast of the 'Channel 4' documentary entitled "Sri Lanka's Killing Fields". Presently, our focus should be on the welfare and well being of Tamils in Sri Lanka. Their rehabilitation and rebuilding should be of the highest and most immediate priority. A just and fair settlement of the political problem is of utmost importance. I have, nonetheless, stressed to my Sri Lankan counterpart, the need for an early withdrawal of emergency regulations, investigations into allegations of human rights violations, restoration of normalcy in affected areas and redress of humanitarian concerns of affected families.

Madam Speaker,

8. On the concerns expressed by some Members on the issue of Indian fishermen in waters between India and Sri Lanka, allow me to reiterate, at the outset, that the welfare, safety and security of our fishermen have always received the highest priority by Government.

9. There have been reports of incidents of attacks on Indian fishermen, allegedly by the Sri Lankan Navy. Government, through Diplomatic Channels, has consistently and immediately taken up any reported incident involving arrest or violence against Indian fishermen to ensure their safety, security, early release and repatriation. The Government has conveyed to the Sri Lankan Government that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstance and that all fishermen should be treated in a humane manner. The Sri Lankan side, while denying that their Navy was involved, has promised to seriously investigate these incidents.

10. During the meetings with my Sri Lankan counterpart in February 2011 in Thimpu and in May 2011 in New Delhi, I not only conveyed our deep concern at the violence against our fishermen but also stressed the need to ensure that these incidents do not recur. In the Joint Press Release issued in May 2011, India and Sri Lanka agreed that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances and that all fishermen should be treated in a humane manner.

Madam Speaker,

11. Through you I would like to inform this august House that we have emphasized that there is no justification for the use of force against our fishermen even though almost all instances of arrest and harassment of our fishermen seem to have occurred in Sri Lankan waters. We do need to be conscious of the sensitivities of Sri Lanka and of the many Sri Lankan fishermen who have, after a long hiatus, started fishing in that area. We are also working with concerned State Governments on our side keeping in mind that issues of fishermen affect both sides. In 2010, a total of 137 Indian fishermen were apprehended and released by Sri Lanka. Till 3rd August 2011, a total of 164 Indian fishermen were apprehended by Sri Lanka and all were subsequently released. At the same time, in 2010 a total of 352, and in 2011, a total of 131 Sri Lankan fishermen, have been apprehended by our authorities. A total of 104 Sri Lankan fishermen are still in Indian custody whereas all Indian fishermen apprehended on charges of fishing related violations in Sri Lanka have been released.

12. While the Government of India is of the view that the end of conflict in Sri Lanka provides an opportunity to pursue a lasting political settlement in Sri Lanka within the framework of a united Sri Lanka, acceptable to all the communities in Sri Lanka including the Tamils, it has to be kept in mind that this is a long standing issue and Sri Lanka is going through its internal processes, including structured dialogue between the Government and representatives of Tamil parties. The sooner Sri Lanka can come to a political arrangement within which all the communities feel comfortable, and which works for all of them, the better. In this context, the commencement of a structured dialogue on pursuing a political solution for national reconciliation as well as reconstruction and development is a laudable development. We will do whatever we can to support this process.

Thank you.
Excerpts from the Statement by External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna in the Lok Sabha on “the steps taken by GOI for relief and resettlement of Tamils in Sri Lanka”.

New Delhi, August 26, 2011.

Hon'ble Madam Speaker,

At the outset, allow me to mention that I fully share the concerns and sentiments raised by the Hon'ble Members of the House during the discussion regarding Sri Lanka Tamils. India-Sri Lanka bilateral relations are based upon shared historical, cultural, ethnic and civilizational ties and extensive people-to-people interaction. In recent years, this relationship has become multifaceted and diverse, encompassing all areas of contemporary relevance.

For nearly three-decades, Sri Lanka has borne the brunt of terrorism. The end of the long period of armed conflict in Sri Lanka in May 2009, left around 3,00,000 Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) living in camps in Northern Sri Lanka and general devastation of infrastructure in the affected areas.

Let me assure the Hon'ble Members that since the end of conflict in Sri Lanka, our focus has been on the welfare and well being of the Tamils citizens of Sri Lanka. Their rehabilitation and rebuilding have been of the highest and most immediate priority.

The Prime Minister announced in June 2009 a grant of Rs. 500 crores for relief, rehabilitation and resettlement work in Sri Lanka. Towards this humanitarian effort, India dispatched 2.5 lakh family relief packs, deployed an emergency field hospital, two consignments of medicines for the use of IDPs, conducted an artificial limb fitment camp and deployed seven de-mining teams in Northern Sri Lanka. India also gifted more than 10,400 metric tons of shelter material and 4 lakh cement bags for the IDPs. To review the agricultural activities in Northern Sri Lanka India gifted 95,000 agricultural starter packs, seeds and 500 tractors for the use of IDPs to revive agricultural activities in Northern Sri Lanka. We have been informed by representatives of Sri Lankan Tamils that the tractors, seeds, agricultural implements gifted by the Government of India has greatly benefited the resettlement of people and has contributed to lowering the cost of food production in the area.

India also announced the construction of 50,000 houses, mainly for IDPs in Sri Lanka. In November 2010, I inaugurated a pilot project for construction of 1000 houses at Ariyalai in Jaffna. Work on ground has started and houses are beginning to come up. It has to be kept in mind that construction is taking place in largely inaccessible areas, in many cases has to be freed of mines and other explosive ordinance.
Government of India has given Line of Credit of about US $ 800 million for restoration of Northern Railway Lines. Apart from the above India is also assisting in the rehabilitation of the Kanakesanthurai (KKS) harbour, restoration of Duraiappa stadium and construction of Cultural Centre at Jaffna and vocational training centres at Batticaloa and Nuwara Eliya.

Government of India is also taking up projects in Northern Sri Lanka in the fields of education and health, for the repair of school buildings and supply of equipment to upgrade hospitals. Government has set aside funds for taking up these projects of a humanitarian nature. In 2009-10, it spent Rs. 69 crores and in 2010-11 Rs 94 crores towards the welfare, relief, resettlement and rehabilitation of IDPs and the reconstruction of Northern Sri Lanka. The Government has allocated Rs 290 crores for the purpose in 2011-12.

Our primary objective in all that we are doing in Sri Lanka is to ensure the welfare and wellbeing of Sri Lankan Tamils, including IDPs, and to assist in the development of Northern Sri Lanka.

I am happy to convey to the House that according to information available to us around 2,90,000 IDPs have already been resettled and leaving only around 10,000 IDPs remaining in the camps.

Some Members have raised the issue of the Report of the UN Secretary General's Panel of Experts on Accountability in Sri Lanka. India has taken note of the Report. We have heard the views of the Sri Lankan Government, including during the visit of their External Affairs Minister to New Delhi in May 2011 and during the meeting of the TROIKA in Colombo in June 2011.

It may be recalled that the Panel was set up by the UN Secretary General with the objective of advising him on developments in Sri Lanka in the last stages of the conflict. In general, there are still questions on the Report, and the issue has not so far come up for discussion in the formal agenda of any of the relevant UN intergovernmental bodies.

To the extent that concerns have been expressed by various quarters on the UNSG's Panel Report or the Channel 4 documentary, it is for the Sri Lankan Government, in the first instance to investigate and inquire into them and establish their veracity or otherwise through a transparent process. We note that it is also doing so through its Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC).

The Government of India has and will continue to reiterate to the Government of Sri Lanka the urgent and imperative need for expeditious steps towards genuine national reconciliation, including early return of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) to their respective homes, early withdrawal of emergency regulations, investigations into allegation of human rights violations, restoration of normalcy in affected areas, reduction of 'high security zones', accountability for the list of missing persons and redress humanitarian concerns of affected families.

Some Members have also raised questions on the safety and protection of civilians during the conflict. I wish to emphatically state that during the conflict, particularly its last phase, Government of India repeatedly called upon the Government of Sri Lanka to be mindful of the welfare and safety of civilians caught in the crossfire and consistently emphasised that the rights and the welfare of the Tamil community of Sri Lanka should not get enmeshed in the on-going hostilities.

Members have also referred to a media interview by the Defence Secretary of Sri Lanka. We have noted that some specific comments were made about a Chief Minister, which are without justification, and we reject them.

On the concerns expressed by some Members on the issue of Indian fishermen in waters between India and Sri Lanka, allow me to reiterate, at the outset, that the welfare, safety and security of our fishermen have always received the highest priority by Government.

There have been reports of incidents of attacks on Indian fishermen, allegedly by the Sri Lankan Navy. Government of India, through Diplomatic Channels, has consistently and immediately taken up any reported incident involving arrest or violence against Indian fishermen to ensure their safety, security, early release and repatriation.

Government has conveyed to the Sri Lankan Government that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstance and that all fishermen should be treated in a humane manner. The Sri Lankan side, while denying that their Navy was involved, has promised to seriously investigate these incidents.

During the meetings with my Sri Lankan counterpart in February 2011 in Thimpu and in May 2011 in New Delhi, I not only conveyed our deep concern at the violence against our fishermen but also stressed the need to ensure that these incidents do not recur. In the Joint Press Release issued in May 2011, India and Sri Lanka agreed that the use of force could not be justified under any circumstances and that all fishermen should be treated in a humane manner.

I would like to inform this august House that almost all instances of arrest and harassment of our fishermen seem to have occurred in Sri Lankan waters, when our fishermen stray across the International Maritime Boundary Line (IMBL).
23. There were six cases of Indian fishermen who died during 2011. We learnt about the death of Shri Pandiyan on 12th January 2011 and that of Shri Jayakumar on 23rd January 2011. Four other fishermen from Tamil Nadu were reported missing on 5th April 2011, and their bodies were found subsequently. In all these cases, the High Commission of India in Colombo took up the matter on the same day of receipt of information about the death of Indian fishermen.

It is very important to note here that, following the India-Sri Lanka Joint Statement on Fishing Arrangements of 26th October 2008, the incidents involving Indian fishermen declined significantly.

As per information available, as of now there are no Indian fishermen in Sri Lankan jails on charges of fishing related violations.

At the same time, in 2010 a total of 352, and in 2011, till 16th August 2011, 131 Sri Lankan fishermen were apprehended by our authorities. A total of 104 Sri Lankan fishermen are still in Indian custody.

We have been encouraged by the existence of the structured dialogue mechanism between the Government of Sri Lanka and the Tamil National Alliance (TNA). We were concerned with the recent breakdown and the resulting stalemate and we encourage both parties to the dialogue to resume purposeful discussions towards a genuine political settlement.

The Government of India is of the view that the end of conflict in Sri Lanka provided an opportunity to pursue a lasting political settlement in Sri Lanka within the framework of a united Sri Lanka, acceptable to all the communities in Sri Lanka including the Tamils. It has to be, however, kept in mind this is a long standing issue and Sri Lanka is going through its internal processes. The sooner Sri Lanka can come to a political arrangement within which all the communities feel comfortable, and which works for all of them, the better. Government of India will do whatever it can to support this process.
In this context, our emphasis has been to persuade the Sri Lankan Government to move towards a new system of institutional reforms, including a devolution package, building upon the 13th Amendment. The Joint Press Statement issued on May 17 after Sri Lankan External Affairs Minister's visit to Delhi stated this position. We would continue to impress on the Sri Lankan Government to pursue these institutional reforms, so that Tamil people will have a feeling that they are equal citizens of Sri Lanka and that they can lead a life of dignity and self respect.

We have also noted the President of Sri Lanka’s decision announced yesterday to withdraw the state of emergency when it lapses at the end of this month. This, in our view, is a welcome step. We hope that this will be followed by effective steps leading to genuine national reconciliation in the country.

Hon’ble Members also referred to fishing rights for Indian fishermen at Kachchativu Island. I wish to bring to the attention of the august House that our fishermen have access to visit the Island for rest, for drying of nets and for the annual St. Anthony’s Festival, and that the rights do not cover fishing around Kachchativu Island.

We will have to also bear in mind the fact that as per the Agreements we have concluded with Sri Lanka in 1974 and 1976, Kachchativu Island lies on the Sri Lankan side of the Maritime boundary. These Agreements were laid before the Parliament. Therefore, as far as the Government of India is concerned, the issue of Maritime boundary between India and Sri Lanka, and consequently, that of sovereignty over Kachchativu Island is a settled matter.

In October 2009, a delegation of Members of Parliament from Tamil Nadu visited Sri Lanka, including the camps where the Internally Displaced Persons were staying. In their report they had mentioned that the facilities at the camps were reasonable.

During his recent meeting with Chief Minister of Tamil Nadu in Chennai, Sri Lankan High Commissioner to New Delhi has conveyed the invitation of President of Sri Lanka to Chief Minister of Tamil Nadu to visit Sri Lanka. He has also invited a Parliamentary team, not only from Tamil Nadu but also from other areas to visit Sri Lanka, including Northern Sri Lanka.

Hon’ble Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha Smt Sushma Swaraj has been invited by the Hon’ble Speaker of Sri Lankan Parliament to visit Sri Lanka. Smt. Sushma Swaraj has accepted the invitation. She is scheduled to visit Sri Lanka from 16-20 September 2011.

I also welcome the suggestion made by the Hon’ble Members regarding the visit of a joint Parliamentary delegation to Sri Lanka to get first hand information on various developments there. We would work out a suitable time frame for the visit in consultation with the Sri Lankan Government.

Thank you.

326. Extract relevant to Sri Lanka from the Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary in Addu City, Maldives during the SAARC Summit.

Addu City (Maldives), November 10, 2011.

…(Prime Minister) had a bilateral meeting with President Rajapaksa of Sri Lanka. During this discussion, essentially three issues were discussed. One was the issue of the fishermen which continues to be an issue between our two countries. The Prime Minister stressed the need to ensure that the waters between India and Sri Lanka are free of violence, and that any incidences of attacks on Indian fishermen are a matter of great concern to India. The Sri Lankan President assured the Prime Minister that Sri Lankan Navy have been under very strict instructions to ensure that there is no violence, that in fact it had been instructed to provide assistance to fishermen in case they are in distress. He highlighted the fact that the Sri Lankan fishermen were again very active after a long time in their own waters, and that there was some evidence of large scale crossing of the international boundary line between India and Sri Lanka*.

* Earlier in October during the familiarization visit of Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai to Colombo, the fishermen question had come up for consideration. Mr. Mathai had indicated that the India-Sri Lanka Joint Working Group on Fisheries would meet "as soon as possible" to sort out outstanding issues on fishing in the Gulf of Mannar and the Palk Bay. Meetings between fishermen associations from the two sides was also expected to be resumed shortly. Mr. Mathai had said that he had raised the fishermen’s issue in his discussions with Sri Lankan leaders. “We have emphasised the need to maintain a peaceful atmosphere in this area,” he said and added that he had stressed the need for investigating the reports of attacks on Indian fishermen to ensure that these did not recur.

Foreign Secretary had also visited the Housing Project but found the progress “somewhat slow than what was originally conceived”. He was of the opinion that some “further refinement” of the project was required and the company had assured that this would be done. “We would like to inaugurate the first wave of occupancy of these houses in the next few months,” he said.
The two leaders discussed this further and it was felt that it would be appropriate for the Joint Working Group between India and Sri Lanka to actually meet and see what measures could be taken to ensure that there is peace and harmony in the waters. It was also felt, and both leaders agreed, that the fishermen’s associations between the associations of fishermen of India and associations of fishermen in Northern Sri Lanka, who are also Tamils, that these groups of people should meet together and talk about their common interests, their common concerns.

The second issue which was discussed was that of the resettlement of internally displaced persons. Prime Minister spoke on the importance in terms of opinion in India, sentiment in India on the resettlement of those who had become internally displaced. President Rajapaksa mentioned that of the very large number which had been internally displaced a year and a half ago or two years ago, there are about 7,000 still awaiting resettlement. And he expected that this process of resettling them would be completed by the end of December. The two leaders also reviewed Indian economic projects in Sri Lanka and also had a general discussion on other matters of mutual interest and concern.

On November 12 the prime minister in his remarks to the media traveling with him on the return journey to New Delhi on board his special flight again referred to his meeting with Sri Lanka President and said

“With regard to my meeting with Sri Lanka, we reviewed with President Rajapaksa, the problems of Indian fishermen, who stray into Sri Lankan waters and then are arrested by Sri Lankan authorities. We explained this to President Rajapaksa and he agreed that the use of force to deal with Indian fishermen is totally unacceptable, that it is a human problem and it must be dealt in a humane manner. And we explored various options like growing involvement of fishermen of two countries in discussing their mutual problems. Also there is a bilateral working group to discuss these issues. We agreed that the working group should accelerate its work.

Principally, my concern was with regard to resettlement of internally displaced Tamil refugees, and the treatment of fishermen. President Rajapaksa gave me assurances that Sri Lanka will and has been moving forward. How far that satisfies the common public opinion, there is now a structured dialogue between the Sri Lankan government and the Tamil National Alliance and also there is a Parliamentary Select Committee which has been appointed to go into this question of what can be done to find a permanent political and acceptable solution to the Tamil problem.
327. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the Cabinet decision conveying approval to the reconstruction and repair of houses for the Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) of Tamil Origin in Sri Lanka.

New Delhi, December 1, 2011.

The Union Cabinet today approved the reconstruction and repair of 49,000 houses for internally displaced persons (IDPs) in Northern and Eastern Provinces and for Indian Origin Tamils (IOTs) in Sri Lanka under grant assistance from the Government of India.

The Cabinet has also approved the following:

(a) Reconstruction of 38,000 houses under the owner-driven model for IDPs

(b) Repairs of 5000 houses under the owner-driven model for IDPs

(c) Construction of 6000 houses under the agency-driven model for vulnerable sections of IDPs in the Northern and Eastern provinces and for IOTs in the Central and Uva Provinces.

A total expenditure of Rs.1319 crore will be incurred on this.

The project will benefit 49,000 internally displaced persons and Indian Origin Tamils in Sri Lanka.

The project will primarily be implemented under the owner-driven model wherein the beneficiaries themselves will undertake the reconstruction work and funds will be released into their bank accounts based on certification of work. A few houses will also be constructed for the vulnerable sections of the IDPs like physically handicapped, single women households, widows etc. under the Agency model.

Background:

The construction of 49,000 houses for resettlement and rehabilitation of internally displaced persons in Sri Lanka is part of the overall commitment announced by the Prime Minister during the state visit of the President of Sri Lanka to India in June 2010. This commitment was reflected in the joint declaration issued at the end of the visit on June 9, 2010. A pilot project for the construction of 1000 houses in the Northern Province of Sri Lanka is already under implementation.

New Delhi, December 25, 2011.

The report of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC), was tabled by the Government of Sri Lanka in its Parliament on 16 December. While we are still studying the report which runs into over 400 pages, I can share with you some initial comments on its contents.

2. The Government of India welcomes the public release of the LLRC report and takes note of the assurance given by the Government of Sri Lanka in Parliament about implementation of many of its recommendations.

3. The LLRC has recommended various constructive measures for addressing issues related to healing the wounds of the conflict and fostering a process of lasting peace and reconciliation in Sri Lanka. In particular, we have noted the proposed measures pertaining to information on missing persons and detainees, investigation of cases of disappearances and abductions, promotion of a trilingual policy, deployment of Tamil-speaking officers in all offices, curbing activities of illegal armed groups, reduction of high security zones, return of private lands by the military and demilitarization, including phasing out of the involvement of the security forces in civilian activities and restoration of civilian administration in the Northern Province. We have noted the assurance given by the Government of Sri Lanka in Parliament that it will ensure the withdrawal of security forces from all aspects of community life and confine their role exclusively to security matters.

4. Implementation of assurances to ensure speedy resettlement and genuine reconciliation, including early completion of the process of the return of Internally Displaced Persons and refugees to their respective homes, restoration of normal civilian life in affected areas would mark a major step forward in the process of reconciliation.

5. The LLRC report has underlined that the present situation provides a great window of opportunity to forge a consensual way forward towards reconciliation through a political settlement based on devolution of power. It recognises that a political solution is imperative to addressing the root cause of the conflict and notes that the Government should provide leadership to a political process which must be pursued for the purpose of establishing a framework for ensuring sustainable peace and security in the post-conflict environment.
6. In this context, we have been assured by the Government of Sri Lanka on several occasions in the past, of its commitment towards pursuit of a political process, through a broader dialogue with all parties, including the Tamil National Alliance, leading to the full implementation of the 13th Amendment to the Sri Lankan Constitution, and to go beyond, so as to achieve meaningful devolution of powers and genuine national reconciliation. We hope that the Government of Sri Lanka recognising the critical importance of this issue acts decisively and with vision in this regard. We will remain engaged with them through this process and offer our support in the spirit of partnership.

7. We have also noted the Government of Sri Lanka’s intention to set up a mechanism to carry out further investigations relating to instances of alleged human rights violations and incidents involving loss of civilian life. It is important to ensure that an independent and credible mechanism is put in place to investigate allegations of human rights violations, as brought out the LLRC, in a time-bound manner.
329. Response of Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs to questions on ‘Indian fishermen currently stranded in Sri Lanka due to adverse weather conditions’.

New Delhi, December 27, 2011.

Due to adverse weather conditions presently obtaining in the Palk Straits and the Gulf of Mannar, seven fishing trawlers with 29 Indian fishermen which had set off from Tamil Nadu had run aground or got damaged in Sri Lankan waters and have been rescued by the Sri Lankan Navy. Our High Commission in Colombo and the Consulate General in Jaffna have worked closely with the concerned local authorities to secure their immediate release and welfare. The fishermen are presently in Jaffna in an accommodation leased for this purpose by the Consulate, which has also arranged food, clothing, medical attention and other basic amenities for them.

The concerned authorities of the Government of Sri Lanka have agreed to provide their full cooperation in ensuring the repatriation of the fishermen to India as soon as weather conditions improve. Efforts are also being made for salvage boats from India to travel to Sri Lanka to repair the damaged boats and bring them back, if possible.

330. Briefing by Official Spokesperson and Joint Secretary (South) Arun Goel on External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna’s visit to Australia.

New Delhi, January 18, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to you all. My colleague Mr. Arun Goel, Joint Secretary (South) and I would like to brief you about External Affairs Minister’s visit to Melbourne, Australia for the Seventh Round of Foreign Ministers’ Framework Dialogue from the 19th to the 21st of January, 2011.

This is External Affairs Minister’s second visit to Australia. He had last visited in August 2009. The previous Framework Dialogue was held in New Delhi in October, 2009 between EAM and then Foreign Minister Mr. Stephen Smith who is presently the Defence Minister of Australia.

Let me take you through the highlights of the programme and also the delegation. The External Affairs Minister would be assisted by Secretary (East) Ms. Latha Reddy; our High Commissioner Mrs. Sujata Singh; and the Advisor to EAM, in addition to other officials.

Tomorrow, on the 19th, EAM would be meeting with Mr. Martin Ferguson Minister for Resources, Energy and Tourism. Minister Ferguson had visited India last year. In the evening, the Governor of Victoria and the Premier of Victoria would be hosting a dinner in honour EAM. On Thursday, the 20th of January, in the forenoon the 7th round of Foreign Ministers’ Framework Dialogue will take place. EAM’s counterpart, as you are aware, is the former Prime Minister and the present Foreign Minister Mr. Kevin Rudd. This would be followed by a joint press conference at 2 pm Australian time.

There would also be a formal meeting between EAM and the Premier of Victoria as well as other State Government Ministers. In the evening EAM will interact with members of the Indian community. He leaves Melbourne in the morning of Friday, 21st January for Delhi.

India and Australia are both vibrant, secular, multicultural and democratic societies. We speak the same language and share the same love for cricket. We are both members of the Commonwealth. Australia also became an Observer of SAARC in 2008. We have traditionally cooperated quite well at the international fora being members of the G20, East Asian Summit, Asian Regional Forum, and of course the Commonwealth. You are aware that the next Commonwealth Summit would be held in Perth, Australia in October this year.
Australia has been supportive of India’s candidature for the permanent membership of the UN Security Council, as well as, for India’s membership of APEC. Over the years, a good foundation for close and cooperative multifaceted ties has been laid between the two countries. The visit of former Prime Minister Kevin Rudd to India in November 2009 was a milestone, when both sides decided to elevate our relations to the level of Strategic Partnership. We have since seen a marked increase in bilateral contacts and exchanges last year.

Prime Minister Julia Gillard assumed office in June 2010. You would recall that prior to that she had visited India in September 2009 as Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Education, when she had also called on Prime Minister. After becoming the Prime Minister, she has already had two meetings with Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh on the margins, first of the East Asian Summit at Hanoi in October, and next in November at Seoul during the G20 Summit.

Trade and economic relations are an important component of our ties. In 1989, a Joint Ministerial Commission on Trade and Economic Relations was established, which has held twelve meetings, including the latest, which was in May 2010, when Trade Minister Simon Crane visited India. One of the highlights of the meeting was the submission of the report of the Joint Study Group, that was constituted in August 2007, to look at the feasibility of beginning the negotiations on a Free Trade Agreement between the two countries.

The bilateral trade relations have shown a robust growth. From a mere seven billion Australian dollars in 2003-04, it has touched 22.4 billion Australian dollars including goods and services in 2009-10. Australia is already our sixth largest trading partner, and India is going to be Australia’s fourth largest trading partner soon. We are among the biggest importers of items like gold, coal, lentils, copper, lead, wool, etc., from Australia.

The energy sector has fast emerged as a very important area of bilateral cooperation. I mentioned the visit of Minister of Energy Resources and Tourism Mr. Martin Ferguson, whom EAM is going to meet tomorrow. He was here in February last year when a MOU on cooperation on New and Renewable Energy was concluded. The first ever Australia-India Energy and Minerals Forum meeting took place at Perth in June last year when our Minister of Power visited Australia. Indian companies have evinced strong interest in sourcing LNG from Australia, as well as, investing in the oil and gas sector. In fact a number of agreements and contracts have already been concluded.

In addition to those visits that I have mentioned, our Minister of Human Resource Development visited Australia in April; Minister of Overseas Indian Affairs was there in June; and Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission Dr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia was there in November. We are also seeking to enhance people-to-people and Parliamentary exchanges. And for the first time ever we received a group of young political leaders from Australia between 28th of November to 4th of December last year.

An MoU on defence cooperation was signed in 2006. We have had regular meetings. A Joint Declaration on Security Cooperation was signed in November 2009, during the visit of then Prime Minister Kevin Rudd. As an offshoot, the first Defence Policy Dialogue, at Additional Secretary level was held in New Delhi last month. We also had a Strategic Dialogue at the level of Secretaries in New Delhi last month. Australia is partnering with us supporting India’s initiative on the Nalanda University Project, inter alia, through the setting up of an Australian Chair for ecology and environmental studies.

Indian students continue to head for higher education to Australia although the numbers have dipped somewhat. India is also now the third largest source of immigrants for Australia after UK and New Zealand. Indian population is close to half a million, which is over two per cent of the Australian population.

As such, we have close and multifaceted ties with Australia which are growing quite rapidly, which are deepening rapidly in important areas including, as I mentioned, trade, energy, education, science and technology, agriculture, minerals, defence, IT, travel and tourism. Both sides would very much like to maintain the momentum of this engagement and further expand our cooperative ties.

EA and Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd will review the progress of cooperation in all areas of our bilateral relations. They would also exchange views on regional and international issues of mutual interest.

Thank you. My colleague and I will be happy to take a few questions.

Question: Do you discern any change on the part of new Australian Government vis-à-vis uranium sale to India? Will this issue be on the table?

Joint Secretary (South) (Shri Arun K. Goel): I think the Australian High Commissioner day before has already hinted at this question specifically. He has said that at present there is no change in the Australian Government’s well-known position on supply of uranium to non-NPT signatory countries. But we have made our interest known all along to Australia that we do expect Australian Government to revisit its stated position. In terms of our quest for energy resources, access to uranium supply remains a core issue for us. So, we are hopeful that in the near future they will be in a position to review their earlier standpoint.

Official Spokesperson: I would just like to add that energy is one of the vital areas of cooperation. I did touch upon certain facets. I would like to recall that in 2008 Australia supported us in our quest for a civil nuclear energy arrangement at IAEA as well as at NSG. And as my colleague mentioned, we have already evinced interest and we are ready when our Australian friends are ready, specifically on the issue of furthering our understanding on civil nuclear cooperation.

Question: As you know, the Australian Government does have a uranium supply agreement with China. Does the Indian Government feel that that is undue discrimination against India which has shown obvious restraint over the years in terms of its nuclear position?

Official Spokesperson: I mentioned that India and Australia are strategic partners. We are pleased at the trajectory of our relations, the breadth and sweep of our relations. I did mention the numerous areas in which we are cooperating very well. We have already touched upon the vital area of energy cooperation and my colleague and I have endeavoured to share our views or our thinking, on the important area of further cooperation in the field of civil nuclear energy.

Question: You said the number of Indian students going to Australia has dipped. What are the reasons behind that dip? And can you share some numbers as to how many students were going in 2008, in 2009 and now?

Official Spokesperson: I would be happy to do so. According to figures that I have for comparison purposes, in the year 2009 approximately 120,000 Indian students had enrolled in Australian educational institutions. But enrolment is one and actual commencements is another, as the Australians call it. According to the figures of the Australian Ministry of Education the actual commencements in 2009 were 67,974. In 2010, between January and November 2010 - we still are awaiting figures for December - the enrolments were 100,236, and the actual commencements were 42,447. So, approximately there has been a dip of about 30 per cent. The reason you are very well aware of. There have been issues pertaining to the Indian students. But we are very appreciative of a number of steps taken in close coordination with the Indian Government by the Government of Australia to overcome or tackle those constraints, and to further the safety and security of the Indian students which is certainly a matter of prime concern and interest for us.

Question: Talking about the Indian students' issue that was obviously a very serious diplomatic issue between the two countries, how would you categorize the relationship now, twelve months on after the heat has essentially left that issue?

Official Spokesperson: Very good, but let me have my colleague elaborate on that.
Joint Secretary (South): Let me go back to the previous question. If I may add to what has already been said, currently there are around 400,000 persons of Indian descent in Australia. Indian community is Australia’s fourth biggest migrant community, and students are a significant proportion of that. As of last year there were approximately 110,000 Indian students and the number of Indian students has been growing rapidly, especially over the last four years. Much of this increase took place in the vocational education sector. If I could give some numbers, 2010 we see a drop from 2009 when there were 68,000 students who went to Australia. Last year it dipped to 42,000. One of the main reasons is not only because of the problems associated with the students issue but also the strength of Australian dollar. It has risen dramatically and today is almost one to one with the US dollar. So, the cost of education in Australia has also commensurately risen. The vocational education sector accounted for over two-thirds of the number of Indian students in 2009-10. Ever since this issue came up over the last two years, the fallout has been that the number of prospective students has been falling. Overall we can say that the drop is approximately of the level of 40 per cent of students going to Australia.

Coming to your specific question, yes, this issue was at the centre-stage over the last two years or so in our bilateral relations, but thanks to a series of measures which Australian Government took, both at the Federal and the State level, the number of incidents reported came down drastically. They are far fewer though the problems are not totally over, and there are some lingering issues connected with students’ welfare which are under discussion between the two Governments.

Official Spokesperson: Let me add that, as I mentioned, we are very appreciative of the quality of response by Australia. India and Australia have worked in close concert to tackle this issue. And we have seen a series of steps being taken by Australia on whether it is more policing, whether it is more patrolling, whether it is audit of educational institutions, whether it is review of visa procedures, establishment of helpline, counseling, and so on. But it is work in progress. As my colleague said, we have seen a marked improvement in the situation and we are, as I said and I repeat that, we are very appreciative of the approach taken and the manner in which the Australian Government have looked into this issue.

Question: As you have already said there are long negotiations and implementation of mutual understandings between Australia and India over the issue of conflicts among the students of Indian origin and Australians.

Official Spokesperson: Conflicts! I never said anything about conflicts between...
Question: It is my word. What was your finding? Was it a racial conflict or was this just something that happens everywhere else in the country?

Official Spokesperson: I mentioned in the very opening remarks of mine that India and Australia are fellow democracies, we are multicultural, multiethnic, vibrant and open societies, and both sides have the ability, desire and confidence to take up any issue that crops up in the relationship, and both sides, in close concert as friends would, have looked into the issue and already we have seen a marked improvement in the issue.

Question: Sir, I would just like to get some clarity on the status of FTA. You did say that there is a report by a Joint Study Group. Has that been accepted? If it has been, when are we likely to see the launch of it?

Official Spokesperson: Very important question. The report of the Joint Study Group has been submitted to the Ministers, and the respective Governments are now looking into their recommendations. Once the internal procedures are complete, a further view would be taken on the matter.

Question: Is the Indian Prime Minister likely to visit Australia this year?

Joint Secretary (South): As has just been said, this year’s CHOGM Summit is scheduled to be held in Perth, Australia in October. And as a leading country of CHOGM, India participates in each Summit. So, it is on the cards that our Prime Minister would be visiting to attend the Summit.

Question: Sir, this relates to what action the MEA or the Government is contemplating in the Anil Verma case, and if there is any clarification on the role of Rajesh Prasad, as has come out in the media, and if his wife is also accompanying him on his way back.

Official Spokesperson: Let me say at the outset that the Ministry of External Affairs has taken a serious view in the matter. As I mentioned in my earlier remarks, the matter has been looked into actively and with all the seriousness that it deserves. The officer and members of the family have been transferred back to headquarters. Let me also say categorically that there is no question of condoning domestic violence which is totally unacceptable. Once the officer is back, the matter will be thoroughly investigated and acted upon appropriately. The laws of the land would take care of any acts that need to be taken care of, consequent to the inquiry.

About the other matter that you mentioned, let me again clarify that the High Commission has the responsibility towards the welfare and wellbeing of the officers and members of the family. I have already mentioned that domestic violence is unacceptable and there is no question of condoning the domestic violence. At the same time, the High Commission has encouraged both sides to sort out any marital issues or differences between the two of them, which is the best way of going about it. But let me reiterate that we take a serious view of the matter that there is no question of condoning domestic violence and the matter will be investigated thoroughly.

Thank you.

Melbourne, January 20, 2011.

Your Excellency Mr. Kevin Rudd, Foreign Minister of Australia, distinguished members of the Australian delegation,

I am pleased to be here for the Framework Dialogue. I and my delegation members would like to thank you for the warm welcome and kind hospitality.

I recall my last visit to Australia in August 2009. We warmly recall your own visit to India in November 2009, which saw our relations upgraded to the status of a strategic partnership. We look forward to our relations achieving such a strategic level in all senses of the term and to continued exchanges of visits at the political and official level.

I look forward to discussing with you today various facets of our bilateral relationship and regional co-operation and exploring avenues for further expansion of our interaction.

But first I would like to offer condolences on my behalf as well as on behalf of the people and the Government of India for the loss of life and property in Queensland caused by the recent floods. Our thoughts and prayers are with everyone affected by these floods, especially the families of the victims, and with the people of Australia.

Excellency, India attaches importance to its relations with Australia.

We are happy to note the priority that you and your Government have placed on enhancing this relationship. I would also like to thank you for the measures that your Government has put in place, at state as well as at federal level to improve the safety and security of our students. However, there are some other issues as well, to which I shall return.

Our relations have been expanding rapidly in recent years in virtually all areas. Both countries are focused on expanding cooperation in areas such as trade & economic cooperation, energy & resources, education, science & technology. The inaugural visit of young political leaders from Australia in December 2010 is most welcome. It would be good to set up a regular exchange programme in this regard.

We are committed to further strengthening and expanding our strategic partnership. Our relationship already encompasses diverse areas that can act as building blocks for such a partnership.

While the relationship is progressing well, I think it is important to realize that the strategic partnership will not reach its full potential without some progress being made in the area of nuclear energy. I would be interested in hearing from you, at some point today, on how you see the issue evolving in Australia over the next few months.

It is also good to see that our interactions in multilateral fora are growing stronger. Both India and Australia are important members of the G-20 and the East Asia Summit, where we have had substantive interactions. The entry of the US and Russia into EAS is a welcome development. We look forward to working closely with you and other like-minded countries towards an open, inclusive and mutually beneficial framework of interactions in the Asia Pacific region. We welcome Australia’s announcement made at the last East Asia Summit in Hanoi, for creation of an Australian Chair for Ecology and Environment Studies at the Nalanda University. We also deeply appreciate Australia’s support to India’s candidature as a Permanent Member of the Security Council and the support that it extended to India’s membership of the FATF last year.

We look forward to the next Commonwealth Heads of Governments Meeting at Perth in October. Your Prime Minister has invited our PM to attend and to combine this with a bilateral visit. Our Prime Minister has accepted the invitation in principle and is looking forward to the visit. We very much hope that this works out. If this visit takes place, it would be a very important visit – the first Prime Ministerial visit to Australia in 25 years. It would provide a significant opportunity to take our bilateral relations to a significant level. The fact that the CHOGM is being held in the city of Perth on the Indian Ocean adds, I believe, a special salience to the occasion.
Excellency, India has taken over the Chairmanship of IOR-ARC this year. Australia is the Vice Chair. We believe that the IOR-ARC has significant potential to be a force for development and stability in the region. India hopes to work actively with Australia and other important countries to realize this potential, which is also important from a strategic point of view.

Excellency, there are many issues on which we are to exchange views today. I look forward to fruitful and constructive discussions, starting with bilateral issues.

332. Speech by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the Indian Community function.

Melbourne, January 20, 2011.

Members of the Indian community, my friends, ladies and gentlemen,

I have met many of you when I visited Melbourne in August 2009 and it is a pleasure to meet you again.

In August 2009, you will remember, the issue of the attacks on Indian students and members of the Indian community was at its height. I had assumed charge as EAM barely three months earlier, when I visited Australia then.

My discussions then with the Australian Government, both at the State and the Federal levels, focused on issues of concern to the students, such as security, availability of accommodation and other support services, transport concession, greater financial assistance, regulation of rogue agents and dodgy institutions and introduction of effective orientation and assimilation processes both in India and Australia.

Since then both the federal Government of Australia and the Government of Victoria Province have introduced many measures to improve the safety and security of the students and these measures have had a positive effect.

However, I do note that revised immigration policies have had an adverse impact on Indian students. Here, while we must realize that being a student does not automatically mean entitlement to permanent residency, I have requested for consideration to be given to our affected students. Foreign Minister Rudd has assured me that he will keep our concerns in mind.
I have also just met with the new Premier of Victoria Province, who had made the law and order situation in Melbourne as one of the major issues of his election campaign. Premier Ted Baillieu has assured me that the safety and security of the Indian community will continue to be addressed pro-actively and that he has already initiated moves to increase the number of police and guards on the transport system, introduce tougher sentencing, improve the system of compensating victims of crime etc.

The Government of India has also taken quite a few measures to address the concern of our communities living abroad. We have introduced bills seeking to punish those who have provided false or misleading information to student and make it mandatory for all education agents to register themselves. We have also proposed that all Indian students proceeding abroad for studies enter their details with GOI.

We have recently introduced the Indian Community Welfare Fund to provide financial assistance to Indian citizens in need and have used this to assist several needy citizens and students in Australia.

The Indian community in Australia is playing an important and constructive role here in building bridges of friendship and understanding between our two countries. All the Australian Ministers I have met, including the Victoria Province’s Premier have had very good and positive things to say about the Indian community in Victoria and its positive contribution to Australia.

The purpose of my visit to Melbourne was the for annual framework dialogue held between the Foreign Ministers of India and Australia. I had very good and constructive discussions with Foreign Minister Rudd. We covered the entire range of bilateral issues as also regional and multilateral issues.

Besides the students issue, we discussed all the bilateral issues. We also discussed the uranium issue; I drew attention to our requirements, particularly in the context of climate change and India’s energy and development requirements. We have agreed to continue to discuss this matter.

Our discussions revealed considerable areas of convergence where both of us together could play a constructive role in multilateral institutions such as the East Asia Summit, the Indian Ocean and the IOR-ARC. To sum up, I believe this was a constructive meeting that has contributed towards a fuller realization of our strategic partnership. Foreign Minister Rudd has accepted my invitation to visit India this year, where this dialogue shall be continued.

I also interacted with the Governor of Victoria Province, the federal Minister for Resources Energy and Tourism, and senior members of the Victorian Government.
Before I conclude, I would like to reiterate our sincere condolences and sympathy for losses suffered by Australia and Australians in the recent floods, including here in Victoria. On behalf of the people and Government of India, I express the hope that the situation will not deteriorate further and we pray for speedy recovery for all those affected.

Thank you for taking the time to be present here today. Please do continue the good work that you are all doing. I now look forward to moving around meeting with you individually.

333. Statement by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna to the Indian Media at Melbourne.

Melbourne, January 20, 2011.

Friends,

I am very happy to see all of you.

This has been a brief but productive visit. Over the last couple of days, I have had a series of excellent meetings with Australian Federal Ministers, such as Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd and the Minister for Resources, Energy and Tourism, Mr Martin Ferguson, as also with the Hon'ble Governor and Premier of the Victoria Province.

Discussions have covered areas of mutual concern and interest. Naturally, this has included our interest in nuclear energy, uranium and the question of the problems faced by Indian students, which have fortunately improved.

With Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd, my interaction was part of the on-going Framework Dialogue between the Foreign Ministers, in which we not only had free and frank discussions on a host of bilateral issues but also where we could bilaterally contribute towards global and regional issues that are critical to our strategic interest. I believe this has been a constructive and fruitful engagement. I am happy that Foreign Minister Rudd has accepted my invitation to visit India later this year, so that we might continue our sharing of views and in identifying how our bilateral efforts might contribute towards global good and regional security.

The Joint Statement has been circulated and clearly identifies the host of issues that this round of the Framework Dialogue covered.
As you would have just witnessed, I have had a productive and useful interaction with the Indian community, whose welfare remains a paramount concern to the Government of India and the Ministries of External Affairs and of Overseas Indian Affairs.

Melbourne, January 20, 2011.

At the Australia-India Foreign Ministers’ Framework Dialogue in Melbourne on 20 January, the Australian Minister for Foreign Affairs, Kevin Rudd, and the Indian Minister of External Affairs, S.M. Krishna, had detailed discussions on bilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest. The discussions reinforced the growing convergence of interests, perspectives and assessments on the part of Australia and India.

The Ministers reiterated their firm commitment to developing and expanding the Strategic Partnership agreed at Prime Ministerial level in November 2009. They underlined the importance of maintaining regular two-way high-level political and official dialogue to deepen bilateral relations.

International and regional cooperation

The Ministers had extensive and detailed discussions about international and regional issues.

They noted the significant capacity for enhanced regional cooperation, including through the East Asia Summit (EAS). The Ministers welcomed the recent admission of the United States and Russia into the EAS and looked forward to working together to strengthen the EAS agenda in 2011. Mr Rudd welcomed India’s Nalanda University initiative as an important step for promoting deeper understanding throughout the region. Ministers agreed to regular senior officials consultations on the East Asia Summit.

The Ministers looked forward to the next Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Perth in October 2011, noting that the Commonwealth brings together countries from every continent to work together in addressing the challenges which confront all of us. Mr Rudd said Australia looked forward to hosting a visit by Prime Minister Singh at the time of CHOGM.
The Ministers reiterated their intention to continue working together closely in the G20, the premier forum for international economic cooperation. Noting that Australia and India both have resilient and strongly performing economies, the Ministers stressed that the G-20 had a vital role to play in working towards continued prosperity and stability in the global economy. The Ministers agreed that the recent reforms to the International Financial Institutions constituted a landmark achievement for the G20.

The Ministers noted that India’s participation in both the G20 and the United Nations Security Council (UNSC) in 2011-12 presented an opportunity for increased cooperation to meet global challenges. Mr Rudd reiterated Australia’s strong and long-standing support for a permanent seat for India on the UNSC.

The Ministers welcomed the decision to establish a Defence Policy Dialogue, the inaugural Talks of which were held in New Delhi in December 2010.

The Ministers reiterated their strong support for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament.

Mr. S.M. Krishna welcomed Australia’s participation as an Observer in the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC) for the first time in 2010 at the Summit in Bhutan. Mr Rudd confirmed Australia’s commitment to its engagement with South Asia and the Indian Ocean region and referred to the contribution Australia was making within SAARC, through a project to promote food security, better water usage and agricultural production.

Mr. S.M. Krishna said India looked forward to hosting the IOR-ARC Council of Ministers meeting in mid-2011 and to working closely with Australia and other members to drive forward projects of regional interest, which will provide practical benefits to the full range of IOR-ARC membership. The Ministers underlined that Australia and India have a common interest in the Indian Ocean and open sea lines of communication. Mr Rudd reiterated Australia’s commitment, as Vice Chair of the Indian Ocean Rim Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC), to supporting India in its role of Chair in 2010 and 2011. Ministers agreed to regular senior officials consultations on IOR-ARC.

The Ministers stressed the importance of an effective and comprehensive global response to climate change and noted India’s key role in achieving a successful outcome at the Cancun conference of parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change in December 2010.

Mr Rudd and Mr. S.M. Krishna noted that India and Australia were united in the fight against terrorism. Looking forward to the next meeting of the bilateral Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism in 2011, they noted the need for practical cooperation in areas such as intelligence, police cooperation, terrorist financing and money laundering.

They welcomed the entry into force of the Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters Treaty and the Extradition Treaty on 20 January 2011.

Political links

Political links continue to expand with a new young political leaders' exchange program in place. Ministers welcomed the visit to India from 29 November to 3 December 2010 by rising political leaders from Australia, building strong links and helping to deepen mutual understanding. Mr Rudd said that Australia looked forward to hosting a Parliamentary delegation in the near future.

Economic links

The bilateral economic relationship has continued to strengthen. India is now Australia’s third largest overall export market and fifth largest trade partner. Australia is India’s 6th largest trading partner.

There were significant new two-way investments in 2010, particularly by India in the resources and energy sector. Mr Rudd welcomed the growing interest by Indian companies in investing in Australia.

In May 2010 the Australian and Indian Governments had noted the recommendations of the Australia-India Free Trade Agreement Joint Feasibility Study and that both sides were undertaking further internal processes. Mr. S.M. Krishna noted that the trade imbalance with Australia was the second largest that India had with any of its trading partners. He urged greater flexibility and requested for early action and on issues that impacted on India’s exports to Australia, especially in service exports (information technology) and products such as pharmaceuticals, mangoes and table grapes.

Mr Rudd noted that Australia had an open market and welcomed Indian trade and investment.

Australia and India are committed to cooperating closely in efforts to bring the Doha Round to a successful, ambitious, comprehensive and balanced conclusion within the 2011 window of opportunity identified by G20 Leaders at their Seoul Summit.

Mr Rudd said Australia looked forward to hosting in 2011 the next Joint Ministerial Commission on trade and economic issues and an Indian delegation to the inaugural CEOs Forum.
The Ministers noted the importance of cooperation in the resources and energy sector. The first biennial Australia-India Energy and Minerals Forum, held in Perth in 2010, set the stage for closer collaboration, building on the five strategic Action Plans (Coal, New and Renewable Energy, Mining and Minerals, Power, Petroleum and Natural Gas) signed in 2008.

The Ministers noted measures taken by the Australian Government and states and territories in 2010 to address concerns over the safety and well being of Indian students in Australia. They welcomed the Council of Australian Governments’ International Students Strategy for Australia, launched in October 2010, and progress with implementation of recommendations from the Baird Review of the Education Services for Overseas Students Act to improve further the experience of international students in Australia. This includes strengthening students’ consumer protection rights and cooperation between the two countries to support the regulation of education agents.

The Ministers also noted that the next Joint Working Group on Education and Training is expected to be held in Australia in April 2011 and the annual Education Minister’s dialogue in India in September 2011. The establishment of a new Australia-India Education Council will be further progressed through these meetings.

Mr. S.M. Krishna noted that the changes in the skilled migration programme had significantly impacted on Indian students already studying in Australia, many of whom had taken heavy loans to pursue their studies. He requested consideration of Indian students who had come to Australia under the old rules being placed in a special category that allowed them to fulfil the demand that existed in Australia for their skills.

Mr Rudd noted the components of the 8 February 2010 changes to skilled migration in Australia and highlighted the generous transition arrangements for most holders of international student visas at the time of the changes. Mr Rudd also noted Australia’s review of its student visa program, announced in December 2010 and expected to be completed in mid-2011.

Scientific cooperation

The Ministers welcomed the contribution, which the Australia-India Strategic Research Fund (AISRF) is making to the strong growth in cooperation in science and research, one of the most dynamic parts of the bilateral relationship. They noted that since its launch in 2006, the AISRF had supported over seventy innovative joint projects between Indian and Australian researchers and leading Australian and Indian institutions in strategically selected areas of scientific endeavours, including renewable energy, nanotechnology, agricultural research and biotechnology.

Mr Rudd highlighted that Australia’s commitment of $65 million over the current life of the Fund, which is matched by the Government of India, made the AISRF Australia’s largest fund dedicated to bilateral research with any country. Mr. S.M. Krishna noted that the Fund was one of India’s largest sources of support for international science.

People-to-people links

The India - Australia relationship is underpinned by diverse and growing people-to-people links. The Indian community in Australia now numbers over 300,000 people and is making a most valuable contribution to building Australian society. Cultural and artistic links continue apace. The Indian Council for Cultural Relations has been increasingly supporting these links. In November 2010, it sponsored a Rajasthani folk music and dance troupe to visit 9 cities in Australia including towns hitherto not covered such as Townsville and Ballarat.

2012 has been designated as the Year of Australia in India.

Sport has long been an enduring bond between India and Australia. These links have been strengthened by the Australian Sports Outreach Program in India, launched in New Delhi during the 2010 Commonwealth Games and the growing interaction between sportsmen of the two countries across a wide range of sporting disciplines. Mr. S.M. Krishna said India was looking forward to hosting Australia at the 2011 Cricket World Cup.

On the question of sale of Uranium to India, media reports said that Australia would “continue to discuss” with India its “differences” on whether to allow access to Australian uranium for civil nuclear purposes. The discussion are expected to take place “within the framework” of the “strategic partnership” that Canberra established with New Delhi in 2009. Australian Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd said after holding talks with External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna in Melbourne. Mr. Krishna later told The Hindu correspondent based in Singapore from Melbourne that he had suggested to Mr. Rudd that Australia would be “well advised to revisit its policy” of not selling uranium to countries such as India, which did not accede to the discriminatory Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. The
It may be recalled that at the media briefing on January 18 in New Delhi before the start of the visit questions were raised on this supply of Uranium. These were:

Question: Do you discern any change on the part of new Australian Government vis-à-vis uranium sale to India? Will this issue be on the table?

Joint Secretary (South) (Shri Arun K. Goel): I think the Australian High Commissioner day before has already hinted at this question specifically. He has said that at present there is no change in the Australian Government’s well-known position on supply of uranium to non-NPT signatory countries. But we have made our interest known all along to Australia that we do expect Australian Government to revisit its stated position. In terms of our quest for energy resources, access to uranium supply remains a core issue for us. So, we are hopeful that in the near future they will be in a position to review their earlier standpoint.

Official Spokesperson: I would just like to add that energy is one of the vital areas of cooperation. I did touch upon certain facets. I would like to recall that in 2008 Australia supported us in our quest for a civil nuclear energy arrangement at IAEA as well as at NSG. And as my colleague mentioned, we have already evinced interest and we are ready when our Australian friends are ready, specifically on the issue of furthering our understanding on civil nuclear cooperation.

Question: As you know, the Australian Government does have a uranium supply agreement with China. Does the Indian Government feel that that is undue discrimination against India which has shown obvious restraint over the years in terms of its nuclear position?

Official Spokesperson: I mentioned that India and Australia are strategic partners. We are pleased at the trajectory of our relations, the breadth and sweep of our relations. I did mention the numerous areas in which we are cooperating very well. We have already touched upon the vital area of energy cooperation and my colleague and I have endeavoured to share our views or our thinking, on the important area of further cooperation in the field of civil nuclear energy.

   New Delhi, April 6, 2011.

The Union Cabinet today approved the opening of Consulate General of India in Perth, Australia and creation of six India-based posts (including 1 post of Consul General in the Level of Joint Secretary) and six local posts.

There is a requirement for formal Indian diplomatic presence in Perth in view of the strategic importance of Western Australia from the political, economic and defence viewpoint and its important location with respect to sea-lanes in the Indian Ocean.

The establishment of a Consulate General of India in Perth will immensely benefit the growing Indian community in Western Australia, which numbers around 40,000-45,000. This will also provide easier consular access to the populace of Western Australia and Northern Territory.

   New Delhi, May 12, 2011.

India and Australia have launched negotiations to conclude a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA). The announcement came today in a joint press conference at Canberra by Shri Anand Sharma, Minister for Commerce and Industry, and Mr. Craig Emerson, Minister for Trade of Australia. The press conference followed the 13th Session of the Australia-India Joint Ministerial Commission, held in Canberra on May 12, 2011. Speaking on the occasion Shri Sharma, termed the proposed CECA a “high-quality, truly-liberalising” pathway to closer economic integration between India and Australia. The CECA, when concluded, is expected to assist in broadening the base of merchandise trade, remove non-tariff barriers impeding trade in services, and facilitate two-way investment. The first round of negotiations is expected to take place in India in June 2011. Both the Ministers also stressed the critical role of the private sector in creating a parallel pathway to closer bilateral economic integration, and announced the launch of a CEOs Forum; Shri Naveen Jindal was co-chairing CEO Forum from the Indian side, and Mr. Lindsay Fox as co-chair from the Australian side. First meeting of the forum is expected to take place later this year.

India is presently Australia’s third largest export destination after China and Japan. Australia is India’s eighth largest trading partner. In the last financial year, two way trade in goods and services was of the order of Australian $ 20 billion. Trade has been growing by an average of 25% per annum over the last five years and is driven by the strong complementarities between the two economies. The imports from Australia are overwhelmingly of mineral resources such as coal, copper, nickel and gold, serving as critical components in India’s economic growth. LNG imports are also due to start in a few years, as Australia’s importance grows as a supplier of natural gas.

Other areas of importance are clean and renewable energy technologies and skills development programmes in the identified priority sectors of mining, construction, hospitality and retail. Co-operation in the agricultural sector is expected to be given a big boost, with the export of mangoes to Australia set to start from June this year and co-operation in wool production and quality improvement in the offing.

Shri Anand Sharma followed up on his meetings with five senior Australian Cabinet Ministers in Canberra yesterday with a meeting today with Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard, who expressed her satisfaction at the outcome of Shri Sharma’s visit and re-affirmed her strong commitment to the India Australia strategic partnership.
337. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the ICCR’s Annual ‘Rajiv Gandhi Visiting Chair of Contemporary Indian Studies’ at the University of Technology, Sydney.

New Delhi, May 20, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and University of Technology (UTS), Sydney signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on May 19th, 2011 for establishment of ICCR’s Annual ‘Rajiv Gandhi Visiting Chair of Contemporary Indian Studies’ in the UTS. High Commissioner of India to Australia, Mrs. Sujatha Singh signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR alongwith Prof. Ross Milbourne, Vice Chancellor & President of the University of Technology, Sydney.

Under the terms of agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the UTS, shall appoint a suitable Indian academician as Visiting Professor to hold the Chair for a period of one semester in each academic year. During the period, the Visiting Professor would contribute to the academic life of the UTS by engaging in teaching, research and mentoring. The Chair would commence from September 2011 and the MoU will remain valid for 4 year till 2015.

This Chair is ICCR’s first ever Chair in Australia and can be considered a major step in propagation of India related studies in Australia and thereby fulfilling ICCR’s larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural links and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.

The 3rd Meeting of India-Australia Joint Working Group on Consular, Passport and Visa Matters was held in New Delhi from 20-22 June, 2011. The 17 member-strong Australian side included representatives from the Department of Migration and Visa Policy, Labor Market, Border and Case Systems, Foreign Ministry, Attorney General’s Office, South and Central Asia Division, Immigration, L&T and senior officials from the Australian High Commission.

The Australian delegation was led by First Assistant Secretary, Migration & Visa Policy, Mr. Kruno Kukoc. The Indian side was led by AS (CPV), Shri B.K. Gupta.

During their stay in India, besides the delegation-level talks, the Australian delegation had one-to-one meetings in the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs, Ministry of Home Affairs and Ministry of External Affairs. Members of the Australian delegation were also given the opportunity to visit the Unique Identity Authority of India (UIDAI) and the Regional Passport Seva Kendra in Chandigarh, in what was the first visit by any foreign delegation to any Indian Passport Seva Kendra. These visits demonstrate the strength of the relationship between India and Australia on CPV matters that has been built over the past three years.

A broad range of issues were discussed covering visa, migration, citizenship, irregular people movement, surrogacy, extradition, mutual legal assistance requests, consular access and crisis management. There are about 90,000 Indian students in Australia. The Australian side gave a detailed briefing on various steps taken by the Australian government to ensure security and welfare of these students.

Outcomes from the meeting included agreement to exchange information and best practice on issues such as identity documentation, biometrics, irregular migration and people smuggling legislation.

India will organize a meeting of the Australian officials with the Ministry of Law and Justice on their understanding of the new surrogacy legislation proposed by the Government of India. Also, India and Australia will exchange their expertise on Consular Crisis Management and will organize a Joint Workshop. India will regularize its participation in various Workshops, Conferences and meetings of the Bali Process.
Australian side requested for locating an Australian airline officer in India in case Air India commences its direct flight to Australia. This will help in their providing and sharing information on peoples movement between the two territories.

Both sides welcomed the Indian announcement that it would process and shortly issue notification on establishment of RILON (Regional Immigration Liaison Officer Network) in India. Next meeting of the RILON will be held in India. RILON is a forum for immigration and border management specialists in India from a range of regional countries to share information and best practice policies and procedures.

For all Consular, Passport and Visa issues both sides identified nodal points and the mode and the institutionalization systems for sharing information.

Both sides also agreed to discuss on the Agreement on International Transfer of Sentenced Persons as well as Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs’ Human Resources Mobility Agreement.

On the issue of biometrics identity documents and other security related documents, a cooperation mechanism will also be established between Unique Identity Authority and Australian authorities.

The size and scope of this third meeting reflects the significance of these issues in strengthening the people-to-people links between India and Australia and the importance of a whole-of-government approach to both bilateral and international movement of people issues.

The 4th meeting of the Joint Working Group on Consular, Passport and Visa Matters (will be held) in Canberra in 2012.

Hon'ble Defence Minister Stephen Smith, Minister for Mines, Petroleum and Fisheries in Western Australia, Hon. Norman Moore

The Hon'ble Dr. Mike Nahan representing the Premier of Western Australia

Mr. Brendan Grylls, Mr. John Castrilli

The Hon'ble Liz Behjat heading the Western Australia Parliament Friends of India Group

High Commissioner Sujatha Singh, Consul General Subbarayadu,

Excellencies, Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen

I would like to thank all of you, and especially Minister Stephen Smith and Premier Colin Barnett for making the time to be with us here today and honoring us your presence. This is notwithstanding the hectic schedule of Commonwealth-related meetings.

The state of Western Australia has a special role to play in the growth of strategic partnership between India and Australia. The opening of a Consulate General of India in Perth is testimony to the importance we attach to the relationship with Australia, and within Australia, to a state on an Ocean whose shores we share.

Today marks yet another important milestone in India-Australia bilateral relations. The inauguration of the new Indian Consulate in the vibrant city of Perth, on the eve of the CHOGM, is truly historic. This also marks the establishment of a second Indian Consulate in Australia in the space of five years.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

India-Australia relations have been expanding rapidly in recent years in all areas – in trade, in investment, in energy and resources, in education, in science and technology, in defence, and in people-to-people contacts.

Australia is India’s 8th largest trading partner today; Indian investment into Australia has been growing substantially in recent months. I understand seventeen IT companies are present in Australia for several years, operating 13 software development centres. There is now growing interest among Indian companies in Australia's minerals resources. I am particularly glad to note that a significant portion of this investment has come to Western Australia.

We have commenced negotiations on a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement with Australia. The recently-constituted India-Australia CEOs Forum will help increase contacts between private sectors in our two countries.

Under the Australia-India Strategic Research Fund, one of the largest that we have with any country, we are undertaking collaborative research in the "Grand Challenges" that face us – energy security, food security, health, sustainable development, innovative projects in renewable energy and the marine sciences.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

In a few weeks time, India assumes the Chair of the Indian Ocean Rim – Association for Regional Cooperation (IOR-ARC). Australia takes over as the Vice Chair. I shall have the privilege of welcoming the Foreign Minister of Australia in Bengaluru next month for the 11th IOR-ARC Council of Ministers Meeting.

India and Australia view the Indian Ocean as a potential area for greater cooperation among the countries of the region. We have to work closely together to realize the potential of IOR-ARC and also to transform it into an active and vibrant forum.

Defence Minister Stephen Smith once pointed out "It is under-appreciated that Perth and Chennai are closer to each other than Sydney is to Seoul, Shanghai, or to Tokyo." This statement focuses on an aspect of the geo-strategic realities of this region that is often overlooked. Our setting up this Consulate in Perth flows naturally from the geography and also from the importance we attach to the Indian Ocean region.

We are conscious of the strength, strategic importance and potential of Western Australia. Western Australia accounted for 56% of total exports from Australia to India in 2009-10, of which more than 85% are minerals. As I noted earlier, Indian companies have been investing in Western Australia in various sectors. India seeks to further accelerate the pace of economic and commercial engagement with Western Australia.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Western Australia is also home to a substantial section of the Indian community in Australia. I understand these numbers are rapidly increasing. I am happy to note that the Indian community has adapted well and is contributing to the economic and social life of Western Australia.
Before I conclude, I would like to place on record my deep appreciation to the Government of Australia as well as the Perth City Council for opening of this Consulate General.

Ladies and Gentlemen, today is a day of celebration in India, where people all over the country celebrate Diwali, the festival of lights. On this auspicious occasion, permit me to convey our greetings and good cheer to all of you. The inauguration of the Indian Consulate on such a festive occasion and on the eve of CHOGM augurs well for our bilateral engagement.

Thank you

340. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the Australian proposal to sell Uranium to India and cooperation in other fields.

New Delhi, November 7, 2011.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma has welcomed the Australian decision of reversing its ban on selling uranium to India. In a meeting with Mr. Barry O’Farrell the Premier of New South Wales, Australia, Shri Sharma said this decision will be welcomed all around and is in line with the strategic nature of the relationship between the two countries.

Shri Sharma further mentioned that India is going through a decade of innovation and for this purpose, India has institutional linkages with Germany, Switzerland and U.K. in the sectors of agriculture, pharmaceuticals and precision engineering. India and Australia have huge potential in collaborating in this area. Shri Sharma recalled his meeting with Senator Kim Carr, Australia’s Minister for Technology where both sides expressed willingness to collaborate in the fields of bio technology, Automobile sector ICT and mines.

Minister Sharma raised the concerns regarding pharmaceutical exports from India to Australia require approvals from Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA). The TGA approval process is a long drawn out and expensive process. There is no recognition or concession to Indian companies who have FDA approval or GMP certificate, which allows a faster process. Minister suggested that using the services of Australian professionals to draw out a standard which when followed by the Indian companies would result in obtaining permission to export their medicines to Australia. This would only help in improving the standards of our industry as well as make it easier for Indian companies to enter the Australian market which is very lucrative for the pharmaceutical sector of India.

Bilateral Trade between India and Australia in 2010 has been US $ 13.708 billion. Total trade between January to August 2011 has been US $ 9.351 billion. India is engaged with Australia in negotiations Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement. Shri Sharma emphasized that both sides must aim for concluding the agreement latest by middle of 2012.

New Delhi, December 1, 2011.

“We have seen media reports about the comments attributed to the Australian Foreign Minister Mr. Kevin Rudd on a possible three-way economic and security pact with the US and India. We are not aware of any such proposal”.

The Spokesperson was referring to the interview of the Australian Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd to an Australian Newspaper that India would be roped into the trilateral pact, which would seek to “contain” China in the Asia-Pacific region and that New Delhi’s response to the proposal “has really been quite positive”. Media reports in New Delhi said that India was completely taken aback by the proposal. Media reports quoting Defence Ministry sources said that New Delhi was “not keen” on hopping onto “any multi-lateral security constructs” in the region. “The only exceptions are those which come under the UN Flag or are broad-based arrangements like ARF (ASEAN Regional Forum) and ADMM-Plus (ASEAN Defence Ministers plus eight countries like India, China, the US, Russia, Australia, Japan, South Korea and New Zealand.”

In the wake of the impending visit of Australian Defence Minister Stephen Smith Defence Ministry sources said while “We are definitely looking to further expand our defence cooperation with Australia, especially in counter-terrorism and maritime security, but on a one-to-one basis. There is no security grouping in the offing.” Defence Minister A.K. Antony had also said that while India had expansive defence ties with the US, there was no grander design of collaborating with Washington, Tokyo and Canberra to forge a trilateral or quadrilateral strategic axis to target China. Australian Defence Minister Stephen Smith during his visit to New Delhi later in the week termed reports of the move to hold an India-U.S.-Australia trilateral strategic dialogue “misreporting,” which arose from some think tanks coming out with a paper proposing such a course. The only government-level formal expression in terms of trilateral engagement was a communiqué issued at the end of Australia-U.S. Ministerial consultations, which said given the importance of India and the Indian Ocean Rim, there should be more cooperation in humanitarian operations and disaster relief. Mr. Smith said India was briefed in advance about plans to base a U.S. military contingent in Australia.

It may be recalled that India had even reacted negatively to overtures by NATO for formal cooperation in fields like missile defence or even anti-piracy patrols in Gulf of Aden. After the Indo-US 'Malabar' naval exercise in Bay of Bengal in 2007, which was expanded to include Australian, Japanese and Singaporean navies, India largely restricted the exercise to a bilateral one.

Mr. Smith’s focus during his visit and interaction with Defence Minister A.K. Antony, National Security Adviser Shivshankar Menon and the Service chiefs was to build India-Australia bilateral defence ties by adding “practical cooperation” to the Strategic Partnership and Security Framework pact inked by the two countries. Both Australia and India agreed that it is “absolutely essential” for maritime issues to be sorted out in accordance with laws of the sea. At the same time, Mr. Smith did not want the media to excessively focus on China and the South China Sea “because there are maritime disputes in the world that don’t involve China.” During Smith’s discussions in New Delhi the two sides touched upon the prospect of increasing their interaction at regional and multilateral institutions such as the Indian Ocean Naval Symposium, the CHOGM discussions on piracy and the ASEAN Defence Ministers Meeting-Plus.
Response of External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna to the decision of the Australian Labour Party to clear path for Uranium sales to India.

Frankfurt, December 4, 2011.

“It is learnt that the Australian Labour Party agreed today, to allow sale of Uranium to India for power generation. Bilateral cooperation in the energy sector is one of the important facets of our multifaceted ties with Australia. We welcome this initiative”.

Last month on November 15 speaking to journalists in Bangaluru, when the proposal was in the air, External Affairs Minister had said:

“We attach importance to our relations with Australia which are growing across the board. Energy is one of the key areas of bilateral cooperation.

We understand that Prime Minister Gillard proposes to seek a change in Australian Labour Party’s policy on sale of Uranium to India, in recognition of our growing energy needs, our impeccable non-proliferation record and the strategic partnership between our two countries. We welcome this initiative.”

The External Affairs Minister was referring to the endorsement of the Australian Labour Party to the proposal of Prime Minister Julia Gillard to reverse the ban on sale of uranium to India by that country. The decision was particularly welcomed by New Delhi since Ms. Gillard and her party were earlier in opposition to such sales to India. Ms. Gillard made a forceful plea at the party conference for selling uranium to India. It was good for business, she argued, and withholding the sale was not going to make India give up nuclear weapons. At the conference, she made the point that “…we can — under the most stringent of agreements — sell uranium to India if we so choose and, I believe that we should make that choice.” Ms. Gillard won most of the Labour Party delegates over to her side, a fortnight after meeting Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and days after a summit with U.S. President Barack Obama. Media reports said a favourable atmosphere was created when Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh met Mr. Obama at the Association of South East Nations (ASEAN) summit in Bali after New Delhi announced the fine print of the nuclear liability legislation a night earlier. Australia is home to 40 per cent of the world’s economically extractable uranium and would secure supplies for several reactors India plans to build with foreign assistance. India has been traditionally buying high quality Australian coal, and has recently entered into a multi-billion-dollar deal to import gas. Uranium would add to India-Australia energy ties. Ministry of Commerce and Industry too has warmly welcomed the Australian proposal in this regard.
343. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Defence on the discussions with the visiting Australian Defence Minister Stephen Smith.

New Delhi, December 7, 2011.

India and Australia held fruitful discussion on Defence Cooperation today with the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony stressing that New Delhi looks forward to developing its exchanges with Australia both at the bilateral and multilateral fora such as the ASEAN Defence Ministers’ Meeting Plus (ADMM Plus) etc.

Describing the visit of the Australian Defence Minister Mr. Stephen Smith as an important milestone in the evolution of the Indo-Australia Strategic Partnership, Shri Antony said the two countries are important members of the Commonwealth and the Asia-Pacific Region. India and Australia are currently Chair and Vice-Chair of IOR-ARC (Indian Ocean Region Association for Regional Cooperation).

Mr. Smith is on a three-day visit to India. On his arrival at the South Block, he was warmly received by Shri Antony, the Defence Secretary Shri Shashikant Sharma and other senior officials of the Ministry of Defence. A tri-Services Guard of Honour was presented to Mr. Smith.

During the talks, both sides noted that the bilateral Defence Cooperation activities are gradually strengthening. They noted that the inaugural session of the Defence Policy Talks held in New Delhi in December last year and the ongoing Service-to-Service Staff Talks are important mechanisms for developing constructive and mutually beneficial interactions between the Defence Establishments of both the countries. The two sides also noted that the practice of the respective Navies conducting Passage Exercises (PASSEX) during Naval Ship Visits to each other’s ports have proved to be beneficial and that these should continue. Both Ministers also agreed to examine the possibility of undertaking a full-fledged bilateral Naval Exercise in the future.

The two Defence Ministers agreed to institute Track 1.5 Dialogues (semi-government level) on Defence Matters between suitable institutions of both sides. Mr. Smith invited Shri Antony to visit Australia next year, which has been accepted by the latter.

Regional Security issues also came up for discussion at the 40-minute meeting. Both sides agreed that the challenges in the area of Maritime Security like piracy and freedom of navigation are important issues which required concerted efforts of the global community.

BRUNEI

344. Press Release issued by High Commission of India in Brunei on the visit of Minister of State E. Ahamed to Brunei.

Bandar Seri Begawan, September 26, 2011.

Minister of State for External Affairs and HRD, Shri E. Ahamed, called on Sultan of Brunei H.E. Hassanal Bolkiah, at his Palace in Brunei today.

In the call, lasting over half an hour MOS and Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah reviewed the excellent relations between the two countries. Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah fondly recalled his visit to India in May 2008.

MOS reiterated India’s interest in enhancing all around cooperation including sourcing Natural Gas from Brunei. Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah said that Brunei welcomed greater cooperation with India and also that the matter was under consideration of his government. MOS also expressed gratitude to Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah and his Government for showing the highest consideration to the Indian population in Brunei.

Shri Ahamed is the first Indian Minister to visit Brunei in a decade. He also called on Foreign Affairs Minister, Communication Minister and Education Minister.
Government have seen media reports alleging Chinese troop intrusion in the Demchok area of Leh District in Jammu & Kashmir. These reports are baseless and do not conform to fact. They are, therefore, not a cause for concern. It will be recollected that there are differences in perception, between India and China, on the Line of Actual Control in this area.

New Delhi, January 12, 2011.

“We have seen media reports on issuance of stapled visas, to an athlete Mr. Sibi Yukar and his coach Mr. Abraham Kaya, by the Chinese Embassy to India. Both of them, reportedly, are domiciled in the state of Arunachal Pradesh, which is an integral part of India.

We have unequivocally conveyed to the Chinese side that a uniform practice on issuance of visas to Indian nationals must be followed, regardless of the applicant’s ethnicity or place of domicile. Ministry had also issued a travel advisory on 12 November 2009 cautioning Indian citizens that Chinese paper visas, stapled to the passport, were not considered valid for travel out of the country”.

It may be recalled that on November 12, 2009, the Ministry of External Affairs had issued a travel advisory, cautioning Indian citizens that Chinese visas issued on separate papers stapled to passports would not be considered valid for travel out of the country. [Sibi Yukar and Abraham Kaya were not allowed to travel on the staple visa as per the existing policy] Media quoted official sources to say that “This practice is certainly tied to China’s position on Jammu and Kashmir and Arunachal Pradesh. One could infer various conclusions, but as far as India is concerned, anything that questions the status of these two States won’t be acceptable. These States are as important to us as the Tibet issue is to China,” said sources in the government. At the same time, the sources said, the relationship with China was complex: it was India’s largest trading partner in goods, and both countries were cooperating closely on major international issues such as reforms to the world financial system and climate change. “One has to take stock of the situation and state one’s position clearly as in the case of stapled visas,” the sources said.
Thank you Prof. Van Zandt for those words of welcome. Thank you Ashok, it is wonderful to be back here, wonderful to see Jianying, my good friend, and I remember the many occasions we met in Beijing when you brought the scholars over from the India China Institute and the discussions were fascinating because we got to see a cross section of Chinese scholars, that we normally would not have interacted with within the normal government to government situations. I also see a lot of old friends in the audience and it is wonderful to be back in New York to meet with all of you and to speak on India-China relations.

My good friend Tansen Sen is here and I think the inspiration for this lecture draws in many senses from a speech I gave in Singapore less than a month ago on Rabindranath Tagore’s vision of India-China with a 21st century perspective. So when I spoke to Ashok, the impression I got was that you would like me also take a cue from that lecture and speak to you on what the scholar Tan Chung has called the geo-civilization paradigm of India-China relations.

Let me first start by saying that just in the last year, 2010, India and China have commemorated the 60th anniversary of the establishment of their diplomatic relations. In December 2010, at the flag end of the year, Premier Wen Jiabao was in Delhi to participate in the closing ceremony of the Festival of China in India and this brought to a close, a calendar of activities organized in both countries, to commemorate the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the establishment of the diplomatic relations.

Of course the relations between the two countries date back many millennia and that’s where the Tagore aspect comes in because when I spoke in Singapore I drew reference to the fact that Tagore saw this relationship in civilizational terms. He made that visit to China 87 years ago and he went to China with a message of brotherhood and of fraternal partnership which he felt symbolized the relations between the two countries.

His vision was of a mutually beneficial interactive relationship between two great civilizations and he passionately advocated the opening of a path between the two countries. So in a sense what we try to do today and the path we seek to chart in the relationship can I believe draw inspiration from the work of scholars like Tagore. Tagore is important also because it was his effort that really initiated a more scientific study of China and India. He set up the “Cheena Bhavana” in Shantiniketan, which is the university town where he established the Vishwabharati, literally a world Indian university.

Something of that spirit we try to revive today when we look at the re-establishment of the Nalanda University in Bihar. Nalanda University again was the world university in the Buddhist era of our history and was destroyed a few centuries ago and out of the East Asia Summit, in which India is involved, has come this idea that we should revive the Nalanda University and make it once again the world centre of learning.

The Chinese scholar Ji Xianlin, who died two years ago, and one of China’s most famous modern Indologist, spoke about “lives being mortgaged to pilgrimage”, and the pilgrims of the Buddhist era between India and China did just that - they mortgaged their lives to pilgrimage, to scholarship and to debate. When you talk of today, it is fashionable to talk about the competition between India and China. But when you look back at that time, the centuries of contact at that particular period of history, it was more defined not so much in terms of contest or conflict or competition but in terms of debate and the traffic of ideas.

That is really what Tagore and his outlook on China was all about. In fact, I would like to also quote something that Ji Xianlin said when he spoke of China and India standing simultaneously on the Asian continent with their relationship created by heaven and constructed by earth.

So I thought I would speak about the interactions in the 21st century but before that I wanted to give you an idea about the matrix in which this relationship is placed today and for that you really have to go back to the fifties of the last century when India was newly independent and the People’s Republic of China had just been established and this was the time when both our countries in the sense re-discovered each other seeking to grasp the sense of synergy between two of the largest populated countries in the world on a global stage.

This sense of developing a synergy is an unfinished agenda because today as India and China regain our place in Asia and the world as leading global economies, we are trying through the relationship that we have, to craft that sense of synergy while being aware constantly of the complexities in the relationship and the unfinished agenda when it comes to complete normalization.

There is awareness of course of the muffled footsteps, as Tagore said of historical contact between our two peoples. The fact was this inspired the well intentioned efforts in the fifties to build the Panchsheela or the five principles of peaceful co-existence, an attempt that was star crossed in many senses, because it faltered and telescoped into the troubled phase which enveloped our relationship in the sixties and up until the mid-seventies because of the conflict over the boundary.

Through those difficult days, however, the leadership in both countries, in essence understood the untenability of protracted estrangement between India and China. And so in the last three decades, we have made concerted efforts to establish a framework for a stable, a more productive and a multi-sectoral relationship between India and China; where we have sought to manage contradictions and where differences have not prevented our expanding bilateral engagement and the building of congruent scenarios where we can build such congruence. So, in a sense, the warp and weft of the relationship, have elements of cooperation and elements of competition. And let me speak to you a little about the specifics of that engagement.

Why I think it is important that we focus more intensively on this relationship between India and China is because also today there is a very heightened sense of awareness of what Asia’s identity can be in the 21st century. When it comes to focusing on Asia, you are bound to focus on these two largest countries of Asia, India and China. And there again, I think, ancient ideas don’t need to be antiquated and the sense of Asia, the Asia of the past where people spoke of literally a common economic space, where you had an approach that was defined by secularism and a complementariness of interests, a balanced commercial equilibrium, enhanced by a concept of spiritual unity, this is really what our forefathers engaged in when they looked at the interactions between countries in Asia; marked by a sense of tolerance, openness and lack of prejudice to outsiders, a spirit of enterprise and absence of trade barriers. In a sense, the past should serve as a rough guide to the future. That is exactly what people like Tagore had in mind when they spoke of India and China coming together.

Let me come back to the current relationship between India and China. When you look at the challenges between the two countries that confront us, we also see opportunities. As our Prime Minister said, “you have an image before you of India and China continuing to grow very fast simultaneously and our policies will have to cater to these emerging realities of the rise of these two countries, just of the two countries themselves”.

For us, the situation is definitely complex since China is our largest neighbor and also because China is today a major power in the world, both from the traditional geopolitical point of view as well as the more current geo economic point of view. In the world of today, China is a factor in several equations and, therefore, it is intellectually satisfying, once again let me comeback to the subject of scholarship, to look more closely at all facets of China.
As a nation we therefore believe we would like to encourage more efforts to accelerate an intellectual drive to understand China better. In fact when Premier Wen Jiabao came, one of the announcements that is reflected in the joint statement, issued at the end of that visit, is that Mandarin Chinese will be taught as a subject in our schools from middle school onwards, commencing with this year. So this is a reflection of the interest that Indians take in China today and the desire to understand China more comprehensively and more profoundly.

Now we all know China’s rapid economic growth over the last three decades has been spectacular and riveting. It is now the second largest economy in the world with a huge GDP of roughly 5.5 trillion US Dollars and its youth, particularly, among its people seem focused on improving their living standards in the quest for a more prosperous future and certainly politics does not seem to define their everyday if you look at the contrast between India and China.

China has, of course, begun to deal in the currency of global power and its economic success is impacting its foreign defense and security policies. Now the appellation of assertiveness is frequently applied to China’s global profile today. The question that I’m always asked is whether our relationship with China will be one dominated by increasing competition for influence and for resources as our economic needs also grow. But I really believe that neither of us have a luxury of seeing each other in purely antagonistic terms. The view that India and China are rivals to me is a over generalization as well as an over simplification of a complex relationship which encompasses so many diverse issues.

I believe that the proposition of competition and rivalries should not be exaggerated in a manner that it over shadows our genuine attempts to manage and transact a rationally determined relationship between India and China. The reality is that both our countries have worked hard over the last two decades to enhance dialogue in a number of fields and we must maintain and build on that trend. At the same time, it is true that divergences persist, and that there is no denying the fact that we have a disputed border. There are legacies as well as lessons bequeathed to us by history.

The boundary question is a complex problem. The cartographies that define national identity are internalized in the minds of people of both countries. At the same time, we are making a serious attempt to arrive at a fair, reasonable and mutually acceptable solution of the boundary question as the recent fourteenth round of talks of the special representatives, appointed by both governments, will testify.

The absence of a solution to the question is not due to lack of effort; instead it arises from the difficulty of the question itself, as any analyst in the audience would surely appreciate. What also needs to be appreciated is that the India-China boundary is, one of the most peaceful of all borders. We have in place an organized set of measures or what we call the confidence building measures, or CBMs, to ensure peace or tranquility in the border areas. We are currently talking to each other on establishing more such mechanisms. I believe there is maturity on both sides to understand the complexity of the issue and to insulate it from affecting our boarder relationship. I believe this policy has paid dividends and has contributed towards reducing the possibility of conflict.

I would like to delve briefly on defense exchanges between India and China because when you talk about the boundary question, you also dwell on the role of what the respective defense establishments would be. We have had defense exchanges between India and China, including small scale anti-terrorism related military exercises. At present, our high level military exchanges are on hold and I do not know how many of you are following this debate in the media, of late, but some differences have arisen over the fact that China recently did not accept an army delegation from our northern command. The northern command covers Jammu and Kashmir and the Chinese said that they would not be in a position to accept that delegation which was a point of view that we did not agree with. So consequent upon that, defence exchanges have not moved forward because there has been a certain trough that has been created by this. But, all the same, flag meetings of border personnel along the line of actual control have continued. So, the situation in the border areas remains tranquil.

So, when it comes to defense exchanges I believe it would be right for me to say that there is desire to slowly expand these exchanges that there have been limits to this process. And, I think that a question here again which is debated quite often these days is about the role of the Peoples Liberation Army. Is it more assertive than before? What is the contribution it makes to the formation of foreign policy vis-à-vis China’s neighbours? I think this is a subject we can talk about at length but if I were to dwell on it for longer my speech would be too extended.

Talking about brighter spots in our relationship I would look at the economic interaction or commercial interaction. China as you know is now India’s largest trading partner. Trade was 61.7 billion US dollars at the end of last year, 2010. There is an imbalance in trade, however, our exports were 20.8 billion dollars to China while our imports from China were 40.9 billion dollars. So the trade deficit is a worrying. Given the composition of our trade, we export a lot of raw materials and raw commodities to China and China exports a lot of finished goods, machinery and huge infrastructure related machinery to India.
We would like to sell more value added products to China including pharmaceuticals and computer software. However, the Chinese Government, in our view, will have to dismantle non-tariff barriers to such trade and provide us greater market access. Challenges in the medium term include attracting Chinese companies to invest in and manufacture from India. This will provide jobs and this is a huge thing in India as it is in the United States. I think this would be a good move for the Chinese to make in order to address some of the misgivings we have as far as the imbalance in the business and commercial relationship is concerned. We would like to see greater Chinese participation in building infrastructure in India including financing of such projects.

Similarly, science and technology exchanges are not very vibrant and both sides again have much to learn from each other. There is potential for the future, here I would just like to dwell on something that would be of interest. When Premier Wen Jiabao was in India last December, he met with a section of media and academic and cultural personalities on how to improve perceptions of Indians and Chinese about each other. You see there is also an information and perceptual gap between the two countries. When you talk to the average Chinese, they do not know very much about India and the idea of Indian democracy and the seeming chaos that they associate with Indian democracy seems very foreign to the Chinese mind and that, I think, comes from a lack of understanding of the way these processes work and a distance in terms of really seeing India up and close, visiting India more often and trying to engage with Indian society.

I think there is a gulf to be bridged there and I think this is what Premier Wen set out to do when he met with a cross section of these people. One of the ideas that came out from that meeting was that we should really be looking at more interaction between the two countries in innovation in technology and scientific exchanges which we are not doing very much at the moment. For instance, India and Japan cooperate now a great deal in this area. Not just in infrastructure creation but also between scientific and academic institutions. Japan is setting up a new IIT in India in Hyderabad. So there is a lot of interaction that goes on with many of our other partners. With China that has not yet taken off.

Similarly, people to people exchanges are not very sizeable at present and we should expand these contacts. Tourism from China is still very small. However, there are 7000 Indian students studying in China today and most of them study medicine, what's interesting is, apart from the fact that they are studying western medicine in China, they are located all over China and they come from every part of India. It is not that they come from the big cities of Delhi, Mumbai or Chennai or Calcutta. They come from the small district towns, small provincial areas and they are in the heartland of China, right in the interior studying and spending four to five years there. So there is a whole new generation of Indians being exposed to China in that way.

Similarly there are a number of Chinese students in India but nowhere near the numbers that we have in China. As I mentioned we’ve also introduced Chinese as a foreign language for study in our schools and we want to prepare our younger generation for this new relationship that we are building with China.

Similarly in the global area in organizations such as the Brazil, Russia, India, China, BRIC forum, which will soon be expanded to include South Africa when the BRIC countries meet in China two months from now, and also in the BASIC group the field of environment in the Conference of Parties on the environment, China and India have been cooperating very closely as also in the G-20 where we are both important member countries that discuss and influence reform of international financial institutions.

So, here again, multilaterally the scope for cooperation has broadened and deepened and at the leadership level, it may or may not come as a surprise to you that our leaders have been meeting very frequently. In fact, Prime Minister met Mr. Hu Jintao twelve times between 2005 and 2010 and he met Premier Wen Jiabao eleven times, in that same period. So there is very frequent communication and contact between the two sides.

Today we are called strategic and cooperative partners for peace and prosperity. That is how India and China define their relations and the relationship as I said has become increasingly multi-faceted where closely interacting with each other in a number of areas and also as I said on issues concerning the global economic situation.

Just recently as a follow up as a result of Premier Wen Jiabao’s visit in December, our two Governments have decided to institute a strategic economic dialogue, as a measure of the increasing complexity and sophistication of the dialogue on economic issues. So we will just commence that new dialogue this year. This is a new addition to what we do in the relationship.

The challenge I believe in this century, when it comes to India and China, and this is a relationship that is really going to be, I would not be exaggerating when I draw reference to what a Chinese scholar Tan Yun Shan said about Sino-Indian relations being “the most important of the most important”. I think when it comes to the relationship between these two big Asian giants, a lot of what happens in this relationship will impact the situation in our region and particularly when it comes to the economic strength the rising economic strength of both these countries the world certainly is watching and assessing the impact of this relationship.
Before I conclude, I should also refer to the fact of China’s relationship with Pakistan. There is also that question that comes up and most people who follow this whole issue would be interested in hearing our views on it.

Pakistan is one of our important neighbours and we believe that a stable Pakistan, a prosperous Pakistan is in India’s interest. And we are not against Pakistan’s relations with other countries. We do not believe relationships with countries are zero sum games. At the same time we do not hesitate to stress our genuine concerns regarding some aspects of the Pakistan-China relationship particularly when it comes to China’s presence in Pakistan occupied Kashmir, China’s policy on Jammu and Kashmir and China-Pakistan security and nuclear relationship. Here we have welcomed a more open discussion with China on these issues and I believe as mutual confidence grows in this relationship we will have more opportunities to discuss these issues and also to seek more clarity and more transparency in regard to the concerns that we have raised.

The issue of giving stapled visas to Indian nationals from the state of Jammu and Kashmir also arises in a similar context. So these are issues that are of concern to us when it comes to the China-Pakistan relationship. Because when China gives the stapled visa to an Indian living in Jammu and Kashmir, the inference that we draw out of this is somehow the status of Jammu and Kashmir is being questioned by China. The issue of Indian sovereignty over Jammu and Kashmir is being questioned by China. This is an issue that we need to resolve. The Chinese Government has told us that they are giving serious attention to this and they would like to see this resolved and we are hoping that there would be satisfactory resolution to this.

We believe that the India-China relationship will grow even stronger once China show more sensitivity on these core issues that we feel impinge our sovereignty and our territorial integrity and we hope that this can be realized.

Finally, what I would like to say is that, people talk about security architectures for Asia. Here again there is immense scope for India and China to engage in closer dialogue with each other. Because there are issues of maritime security, the issues concerning global commerce in our region, the issue of terrorism, the issue of just ensuring that we have a peaceful periphery; all these we share common concerns. We have stressed rather than excluding China from any debate or discussion on security in our region, it would be rational to follow up more inclusive approach that involves more engagement with China, more discussion, more exchange of ideas with Chinese stakeholders, so that we have a balanced and inclusive security architecture in our region. And this will support India and China.
As India and China pursue their interests, so long as their overwhelming preoccupation remains their domestic transformation, both of us will understand that the realization of this goal requires a peaceful environment around us. As I said before, there will be elements of competition in our bilateral relationship but these can be managed so that the are elements of congruence or common ground, as Premier Chou en Lai said so long ago, can be built upon.

As our interests gets progressively more complex, at the same time the costs of any withdrawal from engagement will also rise. So, I believe ultimately that this is a big relationship with the clear possibility of both sides pursuing an ambitious agenda for mutual engagement that will make this relationship one of the most important bilateral equations of our century. It is in our interest, therefore, I believe to view it in a more wide angled and a higher definition manner than we have never done before.

I will stop here and take questions.

Question: you gave a wonderful description of the India and China relationship starting from before Christ. In the beginning, it was a very good relationship between India and China. and now we are making effort to get back to that stage. In between, the friction, I think, occurred due to the border problem started in the early 60s. That was because General Mac Mahon drew up a line between these two countries. When he drew up, was China aware of the problem that it was not acceptable to them? If so, why suddenly did this issue come up later and even when Nehru was talking to Chou en Lai, Hindi-Chini bhai bhai, did they bring up this issue at all? If you can throw some light on this.

Answer: I will try to answer this as brief as I can because it is a subject of very lengthy expositions of who is right and who is wrong. But as far as the MacMahon line is concerned, this is something that goes back to 1913-14. It was a line that was drawn on the map in the eastern sector of the India-China border in the early years of the 20th century. When India became independent that was recognized as the border in the eastern sector between India and China. Now, it so happened that in the 50s was India and China began to talk about these issues for the first time, previous to that, in the British colonial period up until 1947, China and India had never spoken about these issues.

There was some correspondence that was exchanged with the Tibetan establishment in Lhasa between the British Indian Government and the Tibetan establishment in Lhasa, but not really with the Chinese Government to discuss how they saw this particular delineation of the boundary in the particular location I referred to.

In the 50s when it began to be discussed for the first time that is when the Chinese ventilated their objections, or their views about this section of the boundary saying that it would not be possible for them to accept it. But, however, let me add that at that time when we discussed it, between the two sides the impression or the indication given by the Chinese were that they were prepared to take a realistic view of the situation and they did that, in fact, with Burma. The section of the Mac Mahon Line that covers the Burma-Tibet frontier was in a sense settled on the basis of that Line in the discussions held between the Burmese and the Chinese Governments in the late 1950’s and signed, sealed and settled in 1960 when they had their boundary agreement.
But when it comes to the Indian section of that Mac Mahon Line it is still to be recognized by China. China has said that they do not accept the Mac Mahon Line in the eastern sector.

Question: I am the faculty member who teaches the course on Indo-Chinese interactions and I have many students here and I can tell you each year I teach the course more and more students attend of their interest in this relationship.
Of particular concern in this relationship as you mentioned is the border war. In trips to both India and China I’ve heard the members of the military establishment, particularly in India take a very hawkish stand on this border issue. Given your commitment to the fact that there are segments of Indian and Chinese leadership who see this border issue in broader terms and do seek the possibilities of reconciliation, I wonder how much has the Indian Government as well as the Chinese Government put money to the fostering a new generation of thinkers about this border war. Because if there is no commitment by the governments to develop this new generation of thinkers then the leadership establishment will continue to think in old terms. And we will just be talking past one another.

Answer: I think you have raised an extremely important issue and how do you break down certain approaches to a very difficult and complex problem.
Obviously it will not go away easily, you have to find a way to not allow it to acquire dimensions that will only aggravate tensions between the two countries.
So the challenge is to manage this problem and manage the situation in a manner that enables you to broaden engagement in many areas and to encourage scholars on both sides to discuss and to come out with solutions that take into account current realities and make it possible for relationships that have existed for centuries between the border communities on both sides to be revived once again.

And in fact I don’t know if you know Dr Patricia Oberoi. She had a very interesting take on this very recently. Right now the institution of the nation state is defined by territorial boundaries. Patricia talks about this, “how with this concept, come notions of center and periphery, mainland and margins and the justified use of force in their defence”. As she says, maybe somebody like Tagore, would have thought of frontier zones between the two countries as revolving doors as creative spaces where civilizations meet, not as troubled spots of contemporary geo-politics. So with this sort of sustainability if we can create a relationship would be I think useful, but it will require immense rethinking for both our countries to look it that way. That will be the challenge. When you talk about the military establishment in India, I would hesitate using the word hawkish, as I deal with them constantly. They are committed to an engagement with China that enables the better understanding of each others positions, with the goal being that we do not allow tensions to escalate along our common borders.

We have many ideas that I think if were put into practice, which involves a pragmatic recognition of realities as they exist today - how can we improve communication, how can we strengthen border trade, how do we enable contact between communities on both sides and how do we put in place confidence building measures that enables the armies of the two sides to be able to operate in a manner that does not increase tension.

It is a question of management of border regime that is effective and enables normalcy to prevail even if you have not really drawn a line on the map that is mutually agreed between the two countries which may take time.

Question: This is Betwa Sharma from the Press Trust of India. Madam, could you speak a little bit about how China feels about India becoming a permanent member of the Security Council and also last year President Obama was very forthright in his endorsement of India. Does India want such an endorsement from China? Is it forthcoming and what is the current status like?

Answer: Since this question is from PTI, I am sure that you are looking at the next newspaper headline. But I would answer in as matter of fact manner as I can. Of course, it will be useful for China to endorse India’s desire and claim to be a permanent member of Security Council. What China has said so far is that it understands India’s aspirations to play a greater role in the United Nations and it has basically stopped there.

Following President Obama’s endorsement of India’s candidature, you had Premier Wen Jiabao come to India. Let me say that the discussions we had with Premier Wen on that occasion were useful and certainly I think there is much greater awareness on China’s part about India’s aspirations to become a permanent member of the Security Council. Indeed, the ground swell support within the United Nations - we were just doing a tally the other day that, I think, 128 member countries of the United Nations have expressed their support for India’s candidature in terms of just India’s candidature. Of course, I am very conscious about the realities and much more work has to be done in this regard.
and it is not going to happen tomorrow or day after tomorrow. But my own feeling is that when it really comes, and I am accused of being unduly optimistic, but if it comes to the decision making point, where it is the question of the Security Council being expanded and India being admitted, I doubt very much if China would oppose that move when it comes to that. But as of now, China is not expressing itself openly in favour of India’s candidature.

Question: One of the faculty here and also an India-China fellow. I visited Yunnan last year and I was quite struck by the senior policy makers and their eagerness to improve their ties with the border regions of India. At the same time within India, there has been some muted disappointment on our improvement in interactions across North-East India. Perhaps our expectations were too high. My question is can you tell a little bit about the challenges in the normalizing the situation in North-East India.

Answer: When I look at North-East India, I say India is a South-East Asian nation. Honestly, because South-East Asia begins in North-East India because of the similarities between the eight states of North-East India and the South-East Asia. When you look at Yunnan, it is still a little distant. Yes, in history, there have been a lot of cross cultural links, ethnic mixtures between North-Eastern India, South-East Asia and South-West China. Geo-politics has today created a lot of distances - political, geographic and emotional. There are a lot of gaps that we need to bridge, that may not happen immediately. But let us start with closer linkages between North-East India and South-East Asia, for instance. Already to link Burma with Manipur, we are talking of better roads, border trade and connectivity through Myanmar, through Burma to Thailand and then onwards to the rest of South-East Asia. If relations between India and China, particularly on the boundary question, improve and there is greater level of confidence, one can think of more communication with those parts of China that are close to South-East Asia and to North-East India. But I do not believe it is going to happen immediately.

April 12, 2011.

Question 1: India and China are two countries with the fastest growth rates of their economies in the world in 2010. As “BRICS” countries, what role do you think the two countries are playing in helping bringing about the recovery of world economy?

Answer: As two large and broad-based economies India and China are contributing significantly as engines of economic growth in the world. We are both witnessing rapid growth, addressing the aspirations of our peoples and stimulating global demand.

We work together in various international fora on issues of interest to us and other fellow developing countries. These include issues such as comprehensive and inclusive round of trade talks and reform of international financial institutions. Our shared objective remains to ensure sustainable and balanced growth of the world economy and employment creation.

Question 2: Compared with other groups of economic cooperation, BRICS is still staying at a preliminary stage of development as a new international cooperative institution. What do you think BRICS countries should do to strengthen construction of their institution of cooperation, so that they can play a bigger role on the stage of global economy?

Answer: BRICS is a relatively new grouping, and the contours of our cooperation are in the process of evolution. We have however done well despite being such a young grouping.

BRICS countries have huge potential individually. We should aim to combine these strengths and pool them together. Regular Summit meetings have enhanced mutual understanding and cooperation at all levels and across a wide range of sectors.

We should continue to enhance coordination on major issues such as the nature of the world economy we wish to see, a democratic and equitable world order, global governance reform and issues like food and energy security and climate change.

We should build upon cooperation and exchanges through meetings of Foreign Ministers, Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors, Agriculture Ministers, National Statistical Authorities and other sectors which touch upon the economic well-being of our people. We could, for example, share experiences on the management of large urban cities.
We should also enhance dialogue and exchanges among our civil societies, media, businesses, scholars and youth.

We should use the opportunity provided by the presence of all the BRICS countries on the UN Security Council to shape and guide the international discourse on issues of importance to us.

Question 3: What do you expect from the upcoming summit of BRICS countries in Sanya, China, in terms of pushing forward the cooperation among BRICS nations?

Answer: I am very happy that the Summit is taking place for the first time in Asia, and in the fastest growing economy of the world. This is a matter of great encouragement for all BRICS countries.

We have a substantive agenda for the Summit. This includes discussions on the international situation, international economic and financial issues, development and sectoral cooperation. I look forward to reviewing the decisions we took at the last G-20 Summit in Seoul.

Our hosts are organizing a number of meetings on the sidelines of the Summit, including those of the Trade and Economic Ministers, Business Forum and BRICS Development Banks. A meeting of BRICS Think Tanks has already taken place. All these will certainly help in giving more concrete shape to our cooperation.

Question 4: How do you regard the participation of South Africa as a new BRICS country? What impact do you think this will have on the economic development of African countries?

Answer: South Africa is a valued friend and partner of India. It is a large and vibrant economy and plays an important role in global affairs. Its presence will lend weight to BRICS and introduce the African perspective to the burning issues of our times. India, therefore, warmly welcomes South Africa’s membership of BRICS.

If we as the BRICS can contribute to the development of Africa, and articulate its priorities in international forums, this would benefit not just Africa but the entire world.

Question 5: How do you evaluate Sino-India economic cooperation in terms of its role in contributing to economic cooperation among BRICS countries and global economic cooperation as a whole?

Answer: As the two largest developing countries in the world, India and China bear an important responsibility of ensuring their allround and sustainable socio-economic development. During Premier Wen Jiabao’s visit to India in December last year, we have agreed to a series of measures to broad base and balance our trade and economic cooperation. I am confident that we will surpass our bilateral trade target of US 100 billion dollars by 2015, but we have to make more efforts to promote greater Indian exports to China to reduce the trade deficit. The peaceful development of India and China will strengthen BRICS as well as be good for the global economy.

349. Briefing by National Security Advisor Shivshankar Menon on Prime Minister’s meetings with Chinese and Russian Presidents.

Sanya (China), April 13, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good evening to all of you and welcome. As you are aware, Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh is in Sanya for the Third BRICS Summit meeting. Today, the Prime Minister had two important bilateral meetings, first with President Hu Jintao and next with President Medvedev of the Russian Federation.

The National Security Advisor, Mr. Shivshankar Menon, is here to brief you about Prime Minister’s meetings. Let me also introduce the Ambassador of India to Beijing, Dr. S. Jaishankar, who is to the right of the National Security Advisor (NSA) . And to his right is Mr. Gautam Bambawale, Joint Secretary (East Asia). I would request NSA to make an opening statement and, thereafter, he will be happy to take your questions.

National Security Advisor (Shri Shivshankar Menon): Thank you.

As JS (XP) told you, Prime Minister met with President Hu Jintao this evening and after that he had a meeting with President Medvedev of Russia. I will just run over the main points and then maybe answer any questions that you have.

The meeting with President Hu Jintao lasted about 50 minutes. It was a very productive, warm, friendly meeting, covering the entire range of bilateral relations and covered international issues. There was naturally a brief mention also of BRICS meeting that will be tomorrow. Both the leaders expressed satisfaction at the steady growth in the bilateral relationship. They looked forward to a further expansion of the relationship and they formally launched the Year of India-China Exchange in 2011 where there will be a series of exchanges. This will include visits by senior political leaders, the holding of the Strategic Economic Dialogue which we hope to do as soon as possible, bilateral official consultations, defence exchanges, and people-to-people contacts.

They also reviewed the economic relationship, the trade relationship between the two countries, and expressed confidence that we are well on our way to achieving the target that the leaders had set last year of a 100 billion dollars of total two-way trade by 2015.

They also reached agreement in principle on establishing a working mechanism for consultation and coordination on border affairs. This will handle important border affairs relating to maintaining peace and tranquility. You would remember this was an idea which had been suggested during Premier Wen Jiabao’s visit last December, and we have worked on it and reached agreement in principle. It will also explore cooperation in the border areas.

On the economic side, they also in fact instructed the Special Representatives (SRs) to continue their work towards a boundary settlement. Since BRICS provides a setting to develop the economic complementarities among the member-states, bilateral economic cooperation was also discussed. PM spoke of taking our relationship to a higher level focusing more on cross investment; and also spoke of China providing better market access for Indian exports particularly in the IT, in pharmaceuticals, agro-products, and in engineering sectors.

There was also a discussion on the international political situation and some issues of mutual concern. This I am sure will be discussed further tomorrow during the BRICS meeting. Prime Minister conveyed an invitation to President Hu Jintao to visit India, which he accepted and said he would like to come at a mutually convenient time. President Hu Jintao also extended an invitation to Prime Minister to come to China, which Prime Minister also accepted. I think that is really a summary of what happened in the meeting with the Chinese President Hu Jintao.

In the meeting with President Medvedev, again they reviewed the bilateral relationship, the strategic relationship which PM described as unique, which it is both in terms of how longstanding and in terms of its quality and the depth of this relationship. Both leaders expressed satisfaction at the development in the relationship in recent years, particularly the visit last December of President Medvedev to Delhi when we had taken several decisions for the relationship all of which are in the process of being implemented. They expressed satisfaction at the range of relations. We have a long-term integrated cooperative programme in S&T, and it went from S&T to the economy, to all the fields in the relationship.
One issue which was I think a response to the recent events in Japan, was a discussion on nuclear safety because we have a very active programme of cooperation between India and Russia in peaceful uses of nuclear energy. They both discussed the need for international efforts to re-examine nuclear safety, standards, and to see what can be done internationally quite apart from internal procedures which both of us have put into place, internal reviews which both have put into place as a result of what happened in Fukushima. There both sides have committed to carry that relationship forward and both are convinced actually that nuclear energy still offers, if the safety and security can be assured, there is today no real economic alternative and environmentally sound alternative to nuclear energy; that we will go through this process together; we will work together on examining this.

There was a discussion also on cooperation in hydrocarbons. As you know, we have signed an inter-governmental agreement last December when President Medvedev came to India. We talked about how that is being carried forward. Overall, there was satisfaction at the way in which the bilateral relationship is not only growing and all the strategic cooperation that we are undertaking, but also at the way it is being deepened and extending into new fields.

There was a discussion also on the situation in West Asia and North Africa, and the effects that will have not only on the international system but also on energy security and on how it will affect the future. That is a discussion which, as I said, is likely to continue tomorrow when the leaders of BRICS are together because it affects us all. I think it is a discussion which will continue.

I will stop there and maybe answer any questions you might have.

Question: Mr. Menon, was there any discussion on stapled visas which was a matter of some concern to you?

National Security Advisor: You are aware of what is being done on this issue, there was no mention of this now.

Question: Sir, from what you said it seems that, have you agreed in principle to resume the defence exchanges which were frozen after China denying a visa to a senior army commander?

National Security Advisor: Just to clarify, we never froze defence exchanges; we have always continued defence exchanges. For instance, meetings of our commanders, flag meetings, or the border commanders' meetings, the regular ones, all that has gone on. We have maintained communication in the defence field also between us. But following the discussions in the last few months about these exchanges, it has been agreed that a multi-command Indian Army delegation will be visiting China later this year; and we are also discussing further exchanges and visits in this sector during the year.

Question: Was the issue of trade imbalance raised in the Prime Minister’s meeting?

National Security Advisor: It was.

Question: And how was the Chinese response?

National Security Advisor: The Chinese side said that they took this very seriously. This is an issue that has been discussed at various levels between the two Governments including at the highest level in the past as well. And there is a series of measures which have been agreed not only for increasing Chinese imports from India but also for identifying new ways of dealing with this issue. This is one of the issues which the Strategic Economic Dialogue, which we have agreed will take place very soon, this is one of the issues which will be considered there as well. But there are a series of steps. I think in the first few months of this year for instance, Indian exports to China have grown much faster than Indian imports from China have grown. Both have grown but Indian exports to China have grown faster. But it is an issue that both sides are very aware of, very concerned about, and that we are both trying to address.

Question: So, that was the Prime Minister bringing it up directly with President Hu Jintao about the trade imbalances.

National Security Advisor: He did.

Question: And when you were at the pharmaceutical, IT and cultural exports, how was that characterized by the Prime Minister and what was the Chinese reaction?

National Security Advisor: I think the Prime Minister mentioned these are the areas which would conceivably help to reduce the imbalance, if there were more access, and it was not disputed. In fact, on the Chinese side President Hu Jintao also said this was an issue that concerned them and they will be looking forward to finding solutions to it.

Question: Could you give us some clarity on this working mechanism on border issues?

National Security Advisor: The agreement in principle is that we will have a mechanism at the official level which will consult and coordinate on border affairs relating to the maintenance of peace and tranquility, if there are any issues; and will explore cooperation in the border areas. That is the definition of the job. It will implement the agreements that we already have in place to maintain peace and tranquility – 1993 and 1996 Border Peace and Tranquility Agreement and the CBM agreement. So, we see it as a useful mechanism to ensure that we will continue to maintain peace and tranquility. I have said this before. It is in practice. It is one of the most peaceful borders that we have.

Question: Would say this is the biggest achievement of this meeting?

National Security Advisor: It is something we have been discussing, as I said, for some months, and we have agreement in principle. We now have to reduce it to an actual detailed agreement.

Question: Sir, one question on the SDRs. There was talk on the economic front that a couple of countries are pushing for Chinese currency to be included in the SDR. Did that issue come up, and what was India’s position on that?

National Security Advisor: I would expect that that sort of issue will probably be discussed tomorrow. These were primarily bilateral meetings. They will get into that.

Question: Sir, can you again explain what was the need to set up this mechanism on the border and what does cooperation on border mean? We have two treaties on that which defined everything - movement, exercises, the lot.

National Security Advisor: I think cooperation includes more than that. It also includes border trade which we have; it also includes the exchange of mails across the border which we do; also there is a question of whether people travel across that border; a whole series of other issues are also involved in cooperating across the border. So, that is something that we will look at together at the official level and then see what the potential is. One part of it is the peace and tranquility, and the other part is this.

Question: On the Russian side, when Mr. Medvedev had come last there was an agreement to do joint work on reactor technology. Does this kind of review put this into the background?

National Security Advisor: That continues and we are looking forward to continuing that work. Just to make it clear, we have certain agreements in place which are being implemented. We will look at all these together and see whether there is a need to add safety features or not. We will do this exercise together. But nothing stops and it does not replace anything that we have already agreed in the long-term, roadmap that we had agreed last year.

Question: Will defence exchanges include holding of joint exercises between the armies and the navies?
National Security Advisor: It could, certainly. We have done so in the past and we will probably do so in the future.

Question: So, joint naval and army exercises will happen in the future.

National Security Advisor: The specifics and so on you will get over time as we work our way through.

Question: Did the Chinese raise any concerns over the kind of security questions Chinese investments in India have been raising?

National Security Advisor: No.

Question: Sir, can the mechanism be a joint consultative committee or any concrete thing like that?

National Security Advisor: A Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination. As I said, this is an agreement in principle. We still need to actually reduce it and then we will give you the details.

Question: Sir, could you give little more specifics on the cooperation in hydrocarbons deal with Russia including Sakhalin-III?

National Security Advisor: Many of these were discussed but at that level they do not go into the details of it. Our interest was flagged and so was the Russian interest, in continuing and expanding that cooperation, much of which has been discussed in the past between our companies whether it is ONGC Videsh or the others. And so, they will continue that discussion. I think the important thing is that there is a very high-level interest and support for expanding and deepening that cooperation which started with Sakhalin-I where, as you know, we have a share.

Question: Can you just elaborate on the exchange of high level of senior political leaders? There are political leaders who are going. Many political parties had their party leaders tour. Is there any institutional mechanism? Can you elaborate on that?

National Security Advisor: No, I do not think there is an institutional mechanism. We have an understanding that we will maintain a momentum of high-level visits and exchanges. And that is what we will do not just in the course of this year - this year because it is the Year of India-China Exchange, I think we will do two or three very high-level visits - but in the future also we hope to maintain that momentum.

Question: Sir, has the next round of SR meeting been scheduled?

National Security Advisor: No dates yet.
Question: Is it expected soon?

National Security Advisor: No dates yet. So, I cannot say soon, quickly, when.

Question: And you are expected to go to Beijing this time?

National Security Advisor: I think it is their turn to come.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Sir, thank you very much for your …

350. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the meeting between Minister Anand Sharma and Chinese Governor of Sichuan Province Jiang Jufeng.

New Delhi, April 25, 2011.

While staying concerned over the huge trade deficit with China, The Union Minister of Commerce and Industry, Shri Anand Sharma expressed optimism that recently unveiled 12th Five Year Plan for 2012-14 of China, with a strong slant for a domestic consumer driven economy will give enormous opportunity for Indian exporters to access China’s huge consumer market in the coming years. The trade deficit for India for 2010 stood at USD 20.02 billion, more than USD 15.87 billion trade deficit in year 2009 with China which is an export driven economy. He met the Mr Jiang Jufeng, Governor of Sichuan Province of China, a province with which India’s trade relations date back to 444 B.C.

During the meeting Shri Sharma said “Sichuan Province of China is very important from Indian point of view and that there is great potential for cooperation between the two regions. India is an important partner to Sichuan Province, in terms of trade, engineering contracting, and service outsourcing cooperation, as well as an emerging investment destination and source.” Sichuan cuisine is well known in India. By 2010, India has invested in 7 projects in Sichuan, with a contracted foreign investment of USD 10.59 million and actual paid-in foreign capital of USD 6.55 million. The Province has annual trade of US$ 1.2 Billion with US$ 1.1 billion in exports to India. Exported products mainly included electrical and mechanical equipment, audio and video equipment, textiles, metalware and chemicals. Imports from India were USD 98.39 million, including minerals, chemicals and electrical and mechanical products. In January 2011, total volume of import and export between Sichuan and India soared 41.64% over the previous year, to USD 129 million, including exports of USD 127 million, up 37.2%.

Trade between India and China has witnessed exponential growth in last few years. China has now emerged one of India’s largest trading partners with trade crossing the target of USD 60 billion (total trade USD 61.74 billion) during 2010 and expected to reach USD 100 billion by 2015.

351.  Press Release issued by Ministry of Defence regarding role of Indian Navy in rescuing Chinese merchant vessel.

New Delhi, May 6, 2011.

On the morning of 05 May, an Indian Navy’s TU 142 aircraft’s persistent efforts led to pirates fleeing from a Chinese merchant vessel MV Full City.

At about 0845 hrs on 05 May 11, the Indian Navy received an SOS call regarding a pirate attack on Chinese merchant vessel MV Full City about 450 nm (850 kms) West of Karwar. The Indian Navy immediately diverted an IN aircraft and a CG ship.

The TU 142 (Maritime Reconnaissance) aircraft of the Indian Navy, which was on anti piracy patrol, arrived overhead MV Full City in less than 30 minutes. The aircraft observed a pirate mother ship next to MV Full City and an empty skiff alongside the ship.

The aircraft made a number of low passes over the ship and strongly warned the pirates, on radio, to leave the merchant ship immediately, stating that Naval warships were closing in the area. The aircraft observed that the warning had the desired effect and the skiff was seen fleeing from the ship along with the pirates and heading for its mother ship nearby.

As there were no surface forces in the immediate vicinity to board MV Full City and sanitise the ship, the IN aircraft maintained overhead MV Full City for over three hours assisting the rescue operation by coordinating with the NATO Task Force.

The TU aircraft finally left the area after over four hours, having successfully freed MV Full City from the pirate attack and, ensuring that surface forces were within range to proceed with the boarding and sanitizing operations.
The operation highlighted the alacrity of the Indian Navy and also reflected adept international co-operation maintained by the Indian Navy as this operation involved co-operation with the NATO Task Force, the Chinese Task Force and the Maritime Rescue Co-ordination Centre at Beijing. The Chinese TF also thanked the Indian Navy for its prompt and persistent action leading to neutralising the pirate attack on MV Full City.

MV Full City now continues its passage through the waters of the Eastern Arabian Sea its safety assured by the sustained anti-piracy vigil being maintained by the Indian Navy and the Indian Coast Guard.

With independent as well as collaborative efforts the Indian Maritime Forces have reduced the threat of piracy in the Arabian Sea in general and the Eastern Arabian Sea in particular. It is particularly noteworthy that there has been a drop of over 80% in the number of piracy attacks in the Eastern Arabian Sea. As a matter of fact, in the month of April 2011, there was not a single reported piracy attack in the Eastern Arabian Sea. This demonstrates the nation’s continued determination to assure safety of merchant shipping in the International Sea Lanes in the Arabian Sea.

352. Reports of construction of a Dam on Brahmaputra River by China

In response to a media query on reports of construction of a Chinese Dam on Brahmaputra River and Possibility of Diversion, EAM stated the following:

“Recent reports about Chinese plans to construct a dam on the Brahmaputra and possibly divert the river waters to Northern China are not new but based on previously known facts.

It is a fact that China is constructing a dam at Zangmu in the middle reaches of the Yarlung Tsangpo (as the Brahmaputra is called in Tibet). We have ascertained from our own sources that this is a run of the river hydro-electric project, which does not store water and will not adversely impact the downstream areas in India.

Therefore, I believe there is no cause for immediate alarm.
353. Information provided to Rajya Sabha on the bilateral trade between India and China.

New Delhi, August 3, 2011.

As per the current trend of trade between India and China, the bilateral trade is likely to reach the US$ 100 billion mark in next four years.

The share of India's export in India-China bilateral trade as per the current trend is about 31%. With the continued efforts to increase our exports to China, this share is likely to increase.

With the increasing trade, the gross trade deficit may further increase. With a view to achieve balance in the bilateral trade, efforts are being made to diversify the trade basket with emphasis on manufactured goods. The issue of trade deficit was raised by the Indian side during the 8th session of India-China Joint Group on Economic Relations, Trade Science and Technology (JEG) held on 19th January 2010. As an outcome of JEG a Memorandum of Understanding was signed between India and China, where the Chinese side assured the Indian side that it would increase its imports from India. Indian Companies are encouraged to participate in major trade fairs in China to show–case Indian products in the Chinese market and increase engagement with Chinese companies.

This information was given by the Minister of State in the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, Shri Jyotiraditya M. Scindia, in a written reply in the Rajya Sabha today.
Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on an incident involving INS Airavat in South China Sea.

New Delhi, September 1, 2011.

In response to questions on a report in a leading international daily, the Official Spokesperson said,

“The Ministry has seen news reports about an alleged confrontation between an Indian Navy ship and a Chinese vessel off the coast of Vietnam in July 2011.

2. The Indian Naval vessel, INS Airavat paid a friendly visit to Vietnam between 19 to 28 July 2011. On July 22, INS Airavat sailed from the Vietnamese port of Nha Trang towards Hai Phong, where it was to make a port call. At a distance of 45 nautical miles from the Vietnamese coast in the South China Sea, it was contacted on open radio channel by a caller identifying himself as the “Chinese Navy” stating that “you are entering Chinese waters”. No ship or aircraft was visible from INS Airavat, which proceeded on her onward journey as scheduled.

3. There was no confrontation involving the INS Airavat.

4. India supports freedom of navigation in international waters, including in the South China Sea, and the right of passage in accordance with accepted principles of international law. These principles should be respected by all.

Beijing, September 26, 2011.

The 1st India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue (hereinafter referred to as ‘the Dialogue’) was held at Beijing, China on September 26, 2011. The Indian side was led by H.E. Mr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission, Republic of India and the Chinese side was led by H.E. Mr. Zhang Ping, Chairman, National Development and Reform Commission, People’s Republic of China (hereinafter referred to as the ‘two sides’).

2. Based on the consensus reached by the governments of India and China, the establishment of the Dialogue was announced in the India-China Joint Communiqué issued during the visit to India by H.E. Mr. Wen Jiabao, Premier of the State Council of the People’s Republic of China in December 2010.

3. The two sides had an in-depth and frank exchange of views on the world economic situation, respective domestic macro-economic situations, the goals and implementation of the mid and long-term economic and social development plans of the two countries as well as their respective industrial, fiscal and monetary policies and agreed to enhance pragmatic cooperation in economic sectors. The two sides agreed that the Dialogue was highly productive and successful.

A. World Economic Situation

4. The two sides shared views on the current world economic situation, and agreed that since the beginning of the year, the world economy is picking-up, but with weak momentum. The process of recovery is not firmly established and neither is it balanced. Escalated risk with respect to sovereign debts in major developed economies; large fluctuations in international financial and commodity markets; and growing global inflation, which is particularly acute in emerging markets have brought about additional uncertainties to the global economic outlook. In this scenario, India and China must continue to focus their efforts on domestic economic growth, which can provide stability to the world economy.

B. Respective Domestic Macro-economic Situations

5. The two sides introduced their respective domestic macro-economic situations, enumerated the challenges encountered in the course of economic development, and expounded on the policies they would adopt in the coming years. They agreed that, though new problems and issues emerged in the domestic economic operations of the two countries and in the international environment, India and China have continued to maintain sound economic development. The two sides also agreed to strengthen communication on macro-economic policies, share development experiences and enhance coordination in addressing economic challenges.

C. Mid and Long-term Development Plans

6. The two sides introduced the major goals, strategic tasks and implementation framework outlined in the respective mid and long-term social and economic development plans of the two countries. The two sides agreed that India and China face the common task of advancing reform and promoting the comprehensive, balanced and sustainable development of each country. The formulation and effective implementation of their mid and long-term development plans are of great significance in sustaining rapid and stable economic and social development in the long run. The two sides will learn from each other and conduct mutually beneficial cooperation in formulating and carrying out their respective mid and long-term development plans.

D. Improving Investment Environment

7. The two sides agreed to stay committed to deepening bilateral investment cooperation, further opening markets, and improving the investment environment in India and China so as to lay a solid foundation for pragmatic cooperation between the businesses of the two countries on the basis of complementarities, mutual benefit and win-win outcomes.

E. Energy Efficiency and Conservation, and Environmental Protection

8. The two sides agreed to strengthen cooperation on energy efficiency and conservation as well as on environmental protection and actively develop cooperation in energy matters including in the renewable energy sector in order to promote sustainable development. Enhanced exchanges in these spheres would be the new engine for greater cooperation between the two sides.

F. Infrastructure Cooperation

9. The two sides discussed the current status of infrastructure development in the two countries as well as prospects of cooperation. They agreed to enhance cooperation in these sectors, particularly in the railway sector on the basis of mutual complementarities and benefit.

G. Water Use Efficiency

10. The two sides agreed to enhance communication, encourage bilateral cooperation on water conservation and clean water technologies.
The two sides agreed that the 2nd India-China Strategic Economic Dialogue will be convened in India in 2012. They also agreed that prior to the 2nd Dialogue, there would be a working group meeting to implement the consensus and decisions agreed to by the two sides at the 1st Strategic Economic Dialogue.

Montek Singh Ahluwalia, Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission described the talks as an important first step of a “knowledge transfer” that could bring substantial benefits to both countries. “China’s economic reforms began a decade and more before those of India,” he told his Chinese counterpart Zhang Ping, who heads China’s National and Development Reform Commission (NDRC), China’s top planning body, at the start of the dialogue. “We in India are deeply impressed by your progress and we believe there are many lessons from your experience that may be valuable to us.” The dialogue, said Mr. Zhang, would enhance trust and promote the “long-term and steady development” of both economies and have a “profound impact” on both the countries. The next round will be held in New Delhi in April 2012. The SED was set up with the objective of increasing coordination on macro-economic policies and to provide a platform for both countries to leverage common interests and shared developmental experiences. The idea behind the dialogue, it was stated, was to look at the larger picture and go beyond trade. A separate Joint Economic Group Dialogue, between both Commerce Ministers, has been set up to tackle trade issues, including the widening imbalance in China’s favour. According to officials participating in the dialogue the railways hold particular potential for cooperation paving the way for Chinese involvement in building high speed rail corridors in India.
Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to media report of Chinese intrusions on India-China border.

New Delhi, September 29, 2011.

In response to a question on ‘Headlines Today’s’ report about MEA calling for the Indian Army ‘not to challenge Chinese aggression’, the Official Spokesperson said,

“This report is factually incorrect and misleading.

As we have said before, there is no commonly delineated Line of Actual Control (LAC) in the border areas between India and China. The two countries have put into place elaborate mechanisms to resolve any situations resulting from this reality. Due to these measures, the India-China border areas have been peaceful and tranquil for a number of years”.

In this connection it is relevant to refer to the questions answered by Prime Minister in the Lok Sabha later in the year on December 13 that India’s border with China “by and large remain peaceful. Prime Minister’s response was in answer to questions from the Samajwadi Party leader Mulayam Singh alleging that China was making all-out efforts to attack India. Prime Minister had said, “Our government does not share the view that China is out to attack India. There are problems on the border. But by and large, the border remains peaceful. Peace and tranquillity has been maintained in the border areas.” He also added: “There are sometimes intrusions according to us. But the Chinese perception of the Line of Actual Control (LAC) sometimes differs. Therefore, I think, some confusion is created. These matters are sorted out between the area commanders on both the sides.”
357. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on India – China Trade.

New Delhi, November 3, 2011.

The Union Minister for Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma has expressed confidence that India China are on course to achieve the bilateral trade target of US$ 100 billion by 2015. Trade between India and China has seen exponential growth in the last few years. As per the trade statistics of DGCI&S the total trade volume has gone up from US $ 2.3 billion in 2000-01 to US $ 59.62 billion in 2010-11 (April-March). The Minister met the Governor of Xinjiang province of China Mr Nur Baki here today.

However, The Indian Minister raised the issue of Indian concern for the trade deficit. Trade deficit for the Indian side has increased from US $ 9.1 billion in 2006-07 to US $ 20.8 billion in 2010-11. A balanced trade is needed for long term, sustainable and harmonious development of economic cooperation between the two countries. Shri Sharma said that the area of drugs and pharmaceuticals is an important segment of our efforts to diversify our bilateral trade basket. Both sides need to work aggressively towards removing administrative bottlenecks and overly restrictive regulatory measures, in order to boost development of all round cooperation in this area. The Indian Minister also highlighted renewable energy where Chinese Government has fixed a target of 100 GW by 2020, as another area with great potential for export from Indian side.

Both the leaders agreed that an Indian delegation should visit Xingjiang province for exploring the possibilities of promoting Indian products in handicrafts, handloom and films.

Both the Minister also witnessed the signing of MoU between Government of Gujarat and TBEA (India) Private Limited. TBEA Energy (India) Private Limited is proposing a FDI investment of Indian Rs 500 crore during first phase of a three phase of a three phase ‘TBEA Green Energy Park’ Project with a projected total investment of Rs 2500 Crores.

Prime Minister also met thereafter Premier Wen Jiabao. It was a very good meeting covering a range of bilateral, regional and international issues; and that lasted 55 minutes. They recalled Premier Wen’s landmark visit to India in December 2010. Premier Wen also recalled Prime Minister’s observation that there was enough space in the world to accommodate the developmental aspirations of both India and China. Premier Wen added that there were enough areas where India and China could enhance mutually beneficial cooperation. He termed 21st century as an Asian century beckoning India and China to work hand in hand to promote economic development and growth.

Both of them recognized our robust trade, economic and business ties constituted the core of our bilateral relationship. They expressed happiness that trade had crossed US$ 60 billion in 2010, and was likely to touch US$ 70 billion this year, and was expected to attain US$ 100 billion target by 2015. Prime Minister welcomed greater Chinese economic engagement with India and mentioned that China was among India’s partners which were executing a large number of projects in India. Prime Minister also underlined the need for balanced trade to create a more conducive environment pertaining to the realisation of the considerably untapped economic potential.

Premier Wen and Prime Minister welcomed the holding of the first Strategic Economic Dialogue between Indian and China in Beijing last September led by Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission from our side, who had been received by Premier Wen. They called for greater people-to-people contacts as well as a continued and closer dialogue on regional and international issues. Premier Wen recalled with considerable warmth his interaction with the Indian youth delegation which had visited China earlier this year. The two also noted the convergence of views on a number of global issues such as climate change.

Premier Wen valued India’s role at EAS and spoke for closer coordination between the two sides. He also welcomed India’s interest to enhance cooperation with the SCO. They also exchanged views on global economic situation agreeing to keep in touch on a regular basis. Both sides expressed satisfaction that the relationship based on mutual respect and equality was on a firm footing and that was in the interest of both countries.

Foreign Minister Yang, and NSA and Principal Secretary were present. In the meeting in the morning with President Obama, Secretary of State Clinton was present.
Thank you.

Question: How long was the Prime Minister’s meeting with Premier Wen?

Secretary (East): Fifty five minutes.

Question: ……………..And in the meeting with China, given the backdrop of what is happening in the South China Sea and some of the statements we have seen on troop deployment on the border, was any of that discussed between the two leaders?

Secretary (East): ……………

On the South China Sea, this matter did come up in the context of the East Asia Summit.

Question: With Wen?

Secretary (East): Yes. And Prime Minister observed that exploration of oil and gas in the South China Sea by India was purely a commercial activity, and that the issues of sovereignty should be resolved according to international law and practice.

Question: Mr. Secretary, in the context of the talks with Premier Wen you said that the South China Sea issue came up. Was it for a proposal to discuss the South China Sea in the summit, and what has India said?

Secretary (East): I will repeat that the matter did come up in the context of the EAS and Prime Minister observed that Indian exploration of oil and gas in the South China Sea was purely a commercial activity and that issues of sovereignty should be resolved according to international law and practice.

Question: The Chinese side raised it or we raised it?

Official Spokesperson: As the Secretary has mentioned, they spoke about the East Asia Summit, they spoke about the desirability of keeping in touch, talking to each other on the East Asia Summit. Premier Wen appreciated, in fact what Secretary has said exactly is, Premier Wen said that he valued the role that India is playing in the EAS. And in that context there was a mention about the South China Sea, to which Prime Minister said that our interests were purely commercial. And the rest you have heard from the Secretary.

Question: “I explained to him that we have a law in place and rules have been formulated. These will lie in Parliament for thirty days.” This is what the Prime Minister has said. “Lie in Parliament for thirty days”, there is a lot of confusion on that statement. Could you clarify what the Prime Minister has said?

Secretary (East): I am not an expert on this. So, I would not like to clarify on what the Prime Minister has said.

Question: Mr. Secretary, you mentioned that in the meeting with Premier Wen Jiabao, the issue of the economy was raised ...(Inaudible)... was this issue also discussed in the meeting with President Obama earlier on the ...(Inaudible)... the next summit? Can you just share ...(Inaudible)...

Secretary (East): As you know, both of them had been at Cannes for the G20 Summit and they exchanged views on the present state of the global economy, the developments in Europe and in the Euro zone, and the need for concerted global action to deal with the challenges that arise.

* * * * *

Question: Mr. Secretary, there have been reports in the Chinese media. Did Premier Wen raise this issue of the military build up with the Prime Minister, were there any discussions on any of the outstanding issues as far as border talks are concerned?

Secretary (East): Nothing on the issue that you raised but both sides welcomed the resumption of defence exchanges. In the context of the boundary, they referred to the decision for the Joint mechanism which is to be set up and which was taken during Premier Wen’s visit last year. And they also noted with satisfaction that the boundary was peaceful and tranquil.

Question: Just an addition to the question on the angle that the Prime Minister talked about his meeting with Gilani. Did President Obama talk about their issues with Pakistan? Did he say anything about the US-Pakistan relationship?

Secretary (East): Prime Minister basically spoke about his meeting with Prime Minister Gilani.

Question: Mr. Secretary, during the meetings with President Obama and also Premier Wen, was the Prime Minister's view on increasing US military ties with Australia ...(Inaudible)... What is India’s view? Was India ...(Inaudible)... increasing its partnership with ASEAN in ...(Inaudible)...

Secretary (East): As I said right in the beginning, we look at ASEAN as central to the East Asia Summit process which should we feel be led by ASEAN. We have, as I mentioned, a long relationship with ASEAN and we would be commemorating the twentieth anniversary of our dialogue partnership next year, and the tenth anniversary of our summit level partnership which we will be commemorating in India.
Question: Was South China Sea referred to in the discussion between Prime Minister Singh and President Obama?

Secretary (East): As I said right in the beginning, they discussed cooperation in maritime issues.

Question: Mr. Secretary, did the question of American bases in Australia come up when Obama spoke to Prime Minister?

Secretary (East): No.

Question: In his meeting with Mr. Wen, did the Prime Minister raise the issue of Chinese activity in POK?

Official Spokesperson: That issue did not come up. What Secretary has mentioned is that both sides expressed satisfaction that the India-China Line of Control is peaceful and tranquil. They also welcomed the process of the SR talks and they spoke in that refrain.

Thank you very much. Have a good day!

359. Response of Official Spokesperson to questions of dates for the India and China Border Talks between the Special Representatives of the two countries.

New Delhi, November 25, 2011.

In response to a question on the dates of the 15th round of talks between the Special Representatives (SR) of India and China, the Official Spokesperson said,

“We are looking forward to the 15th round of SR talks in the near future and the two sides remain in touch to find convenient dates for the meeting”

The response of the official spokesperson was necessitated because of the media speculation that the talks said to have been scheduled on 27th November 2011 were suddenly postponed particularly within a week of the meeting between Premier Wen Jianbao and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh in Bali on the sidelines of the India - ASEAN and EAS Summits. The media speculation was because no official announcement of the dates for the talks was made.
Your Excellency Dr. Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono,
President of the Republic of Indonesia,
Madam Ani Bambang Yudhoyono,
Distinguished Guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen

On behalf of the Government and people of India, I extend a very warm welcome to you Mr. President and to Madam Yudhoyono on your State Visit to India.

Mr. President, on 26 January 1950 on the occasion of the proclamation of the Indian Republic, we were honoured with the presence of your first President, Dr. Sukarno and Mrs. Fatmawati Sukarno as our State Guests. Today, we are honoured and happy to have you with us as the Chief Guest on the occasion of India’s 62nd Republic Day Celebrations.

Your presence here today is symbolic of the spirit of mutual solidarity in which Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Dr. Sukarno, convened the Bandung Conference in 1955. Together, they represented the voice of the oppressed peoples of the world in their struggle for freedom against colonial domination. The quest for freedom brought our nations close to each other, and together we wrote the concluding chapters of colonialism, and laid the foundations of the Afro-Asian Movement.

Excellency, India and Indonesia have enjoyed two millennia of close cultural and commercial ties. The shared cultural history can be seen in common elements in our languages, literature, visual and performing arts and handicrafts. We must continue to promote active cultural exchanges, so that future generations are also made aware of our age old ties. India and Indonesia share common values, interests and priorities including our commitment to pluralism and diversity. Perhaps, there is no other country with which Indian shares so much in common as with Indonesia. Today, India and Indonesia stand proudly together as the largest pluralistic democracies of Asia.

Our modern relationship had drawn strength from the many commonalities between our two countries, and has made rapid progress since the establishment of the Strategic Partnership during your visit to India in 2005. We have developed strong ties and institutional frameworks for dialogue and co-operation in the political, security, science and technology and cultural fields. Indonesia is a major trading partner of India in the ASEAN region and also an important destination for our investment. I fondly recall my own visit to Indonesia and my discussions with Your Excellency in December 2008, on further consolidating our relationship.

We are pleased that during your current visit, our two countries have signed a range of new Agreements and MoUs that will further consolidate our ties in these areas and indeed, take it to a new level. The new frameworks at the Government to Government level have been supplemented by a number of significant business to business agreements that will bring our industrial sectors into close co-operation with each other.

We attach great importance to our relations with Indonesia, not only at the bilateral level but also as a regional partner and as a friend in ASEAN. Relations with ASEAN are at the heart of India’s “Look East Policy” and Indonesia is central to ASEAN. We deeply value the support Indonesia has extended to India in promoting India-ASEAN engagement. I would like to extend our congratulations on Indonesia taking over the chairmanship of ASEAN next year. We are confident that under your Chairmanship, the achievements of ASEAN, the progress of our dialogue partnership and the outcomes of the East Asia Summit will reach new heights.

Mr. President, I would like to congratulate you on your sagacious and wise leadership of Indonesia, as also for the immense progress that has been made by Indonesia in recent years. Indonesia is now universally acknowledged as amongst the fastest growing economies in Asia, and is playing an important role in discussions on the many global issues of our times. As major countries, India and Indonesia can and must work together in fora like the UN, WTO and G-20 on global issues. Terrorism is a threat to global peace and security. Our two countries have suffered from terrorist attacks targeting innocent civilians. These tragic events remind us that we must remain resolute and persevere in our determination to root out terrorism.

Mr. President your visit is significant as it reaffirms that the destinies of our two great nations are bound together. Our partnership has stood the test of time, and we must continue to synergise our strengths and complementaries, to give a new momentum to our relations.

Distinguished Guests, may I now request you to join me in raising a toast to:-

— the health, happiness and success of His Excellency President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono and Madam Ani Bambang Yudhoyono; — the progress and prosperity of the fraternal and peace loving people of Indonesia; and — the close and abiding friendship and co-operation between India and Indonesia

361. Joint Statement issued on the visit of Indonesian President: “Vision for the India-Indonesia New Strategic Partnership over the coming decade”.

1. The Prime Minister of India H.E Dr. Manmohan Singh welcomed the President of the Republic of Indonesia H.E Dr. Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono on a State Visit to India from January 24-26, 2011 and as the Chief Guest on the occasion of India’s Republic Day on January 26, 2011. The two leaders held extensive talks on bilateral, regional and global issues of shared concern on January 25, 2011. The two leaders recalled the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries six decades earlier and decided to mark the year 2011 as the celebration of six decades of diplomatic relations between the two countries and to hold related events to mark the anniversary in the two capitals.

2. The two leaders reaffirmed the political commitment of both countries for upgrading bilateral relations in order to achieve sustained progress and prosperity for the two countries in the rapidly evolving and dynamic regional and global political and economic situation. They also acknowledged that Indonesia and India are natural partners as two developing democratic countries in the region, committed to multiculturalism, pluralism and diversity. They have responsibility for, and are capable of, responding to global and regional challenges, and they must play an active role in the promotion of democracy, peace and stability in Asia Pacific region and the world at large.

3. The Prime Minister of India and the President of Indonesia expressed satisfaction at the steady growth of political, security, economic, science and technology and cultural exchanges between the two countries. They noted the development of active cooperation through numerous frameworks governing defense, science and technology, space cooperation, agricultural science, culture, tourism, and youth affairs & sports. The two leaders also acknowledged cooperation in education, media, air services, energy resources including oil, gas, coal, and renewable energy, prevention of smuggling, prevention of illegal trade in narcotics, disaster management, cooperation in the area of small and medium enterprises, meteorology, climatology and geophysics including climate change, health, marine and fisheries. They reiterated their common desire for accelerating the implementation of cooperation in these areas and monitoring such cooperation through the mechanism of Action Plan on Implementing the New Strategic Partnership drawn up during the Indonesia-India Joint Commission Meeting (JCM) in June 2007.

4. With a view to facing the challenges in food security as means of providing basic human needs for the two countries, both leaders encouraged the implementation of the MoU in the field of agriculture and allied sectors that was signed on December 1st, 2008, and also the implementation of work plan for period of 2009-2013 in the area of agriculture development, joint research in agriculture science, technology development on post harvest and processing, agriculture marketing system and export, joint research on Animal Diseases and capacity building.

5. The two leaders realized the importance of education on human resource, economic and social development in both countries, therefore committed to strengthen it through the signing of Memorandum of Understanding on Education which covers all level of education.

6. The two leaders agreed to have summit level meetings on the sidelines of multilateral events. Both sides recognized the importance of the biennial Joint Commission Meetings (JCM) at the level of the Foreign Ministers, and agreed that the next JCM should be held in the first half of 2011. While welcoming the steady exchange of Ministerial visits between the two countries, the two sides encouraged to promote regular exchanges at the Cabinet level, inter alia, between the Ministers of Energy including Oil, Gas, Coal, Power and Renewable Energy, Commerce and Industry, Health, Agriculture, Science and Technology, Defense, Education, Home/Coordinating Ministry for Political, Legal and Security Affairs, and Tourism. The two leaders also encouraged regular exchanges between Parliament as another brick to strengthen bilateral ties and solidify democratic values.

7. With a view to developing a ‘Vision Statement 2025’ for the Indonesia-India Strategic Partnership, the President of Indonesia and the Prime Minister of India announced the establishment of an Eminent Persons’ Group (EPG). The deliberations of the EPG would guide the future progress and prepare a blue-print of Indonesia-India relations over the next 15 years.

8. The two leaders unequivocally condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and stressed that there could be no justification whatsoever for any act of terrorism. Recognizing the common threats to national security from transnational crimes, including international terrorism, the President of Indonesia and the Prime Minister of India resolved to significantly enhance bilateral cooperation in combating terrorism. The two leaders resolved to commit their countries in improving sharing of intelligence, the development of more effective counter terrorism policies, enhance liaison between law enforcement agencies, provide assistance in the areas of border and immigration control to stem the flow of terrorist related material, money and people and specific measures against transnational crimes, including international terrorism through the already existing mechanism between Indonesia and India. The two leaders desired that the next meeting of the Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism should be held in the first half of 2011.

9. The President of Indonesia and the Prime Minister of India noted that Indonesia and India are strategic partners, neighbouring countries sharing a common maritime boundary, with a common interest in cooperating in the maintenance of regional peace and security. They expressed satisfaction at the steady expansion of bilateral defence cooperation between the two countries and stressed the importance of strengthening bilateral defence cooperation, through regular exchanges between the defence establishments of both countries. The two leaders welcomed institutionalization of biennial dialogue at the level of Defence Ministers.

10. The two leaders stressed the importance of strengthening cooperation in the areas of science and technology. They expressed satisfaction at the progress achieved during the 2nd Joint Science and Technology Committee Meeting in October 2010. The agreed areas of cooperation are in the field of biotechnology, marine, agriculture, information and communication technology, health and medicine, energy, disaster management, aeronautical and space technology.

11. The two leaders noted the importance of and agreed to establish a cooperation between Indonesia and India in the fields of meteorology, climatology, including climate variability and change, geophysics and Early Warning of Coastal Hazards as well as related issues through the science and technology development and application and efficient management in creating disaster risk management community effectively and in a timely manner.

12. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at the growing trade and investment ties between Indonesia and India. Noting that the bilateral trade volume between Indonesia and India had increased nearly threefold since the establishment of the Strategic Partnership between the two countries in 2005, the two leaders agreed to set the new target for bilateral trade volume of US$ 25 billion by 2015.
13. The two leaders also noticed the importance of encouraging outward investment from both countries. In this regard, Indonesia stressed India as a potential partner because its investment realization in Indonesia has steadily increased for the last twenty years. With regard to the National Investment Roadmap, Indonesia would also welcome further investments from India, especially in the fields of energy, food and infrastructure.

14. The two leaders announced a number of important initiatives to further tap the potential of bilateral trade and investment between the two countries. It was agreed to have a Biennial Trade Ministers Forum, including the establishment of a ‘Trade and Investment Forum’ between the Trade Ministers to exploit the potential of trade and investment opportunities in both countries.

15. The two leaders welcomed the entry into force of the India-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement in Goods on October 1, 2010, and expected the utilization of the Agreement would increase in the following years.

16. Both leaders were pleased to announce the commencement of negotiation on Indonesia-India Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (II-CECA), building on what has already been achieved under the India-ASEAN FTA. The decision to embark on negotiations will take forward the shared goal in the New Strategic Partnership 2005 of increasing the volume of bilateral trade and investment. Both leaders agreed that the CECA would be a comprehensive agreement, covering economic cooperation, trade in goods and services, and investment and hoped that it would further contribute to building a higher-level and mutually beneficial economic cooperation between the two countries.

17. Noting the mutual interest of both countries in the development of energy resources and the introduction of investment associated with such resources along with new technologies, the two leaders announced the establishment of an Energy Forum co-chaired by the Minister of Energy and Mineral Resources of Indonesia and the Minister of Coal of India, supported by expert forums in the respective countries to accelerate the implementation of programs of mutual interest.

18. The two leaders reiterated that as major countries deliberating the great issues of our time - the reform of the United Nations, tackling the global economic and financial crisis and working together on global issues like climate change, Indonesia and India can and must work together effectively in fora like the UN, UNFCC, WMO, WTO and the G-20 to make a difference and to help achieve consensus on these important issues.

19. The President of Indonesia and the Prime Minister of the India were pleased to note the growing cultural ties between the two countries. Recalling the long history of cultural and historical links between the two countries, they stressed the importance of cultural exchanges in building strong people-to-people ties which would reinforce ties in all areas. They agreed on a number of new initiatives including the exchange of cultural festivals. Ramayana festivals, reciprocal seminars on historical and cultural ties between India and Indonesia and cooperation in tourism promotion.

20. With a view to enhancing people-to-people links, both leaders agreed to enhance and strengthen cooperation in the cultural sector as means to promote extensive people-to-people contacts by committing to implement cultural exchange programme for 2011-2014.

21. The two leaders recognized that a quantum leap in tourism between India and Indonesia is desirable to strengthen vibrant and longstanding people to people ties. As a step towards this objective, the Prime Minister announced a scheme of granting visa on arrival to the citizens of Indonesia.

22. In order to strengthen and reinforce consular cooperation and traditional friendly relations between India and Indonesia, the Prime Minister of India announced the establishment of a Consulate General of India in the Province of Bali which was warmly welcomed by the President of Indonesia. The establishment of the Consulate will reinforce the strong cultural links between Indonesia and India.

23. President Yudhoyono and Prime Minister Singh concluded that their meeting was a historic milestone as they sought to elevate their new Strategic Partnership to a higher level for the benefit of their nations and the entire mankind. President Yudhoyono invited Prime Minister Singh to visit Indonesia, which was graciously accepted.

24. President Yudhoyono expressed his appreciation and gratitude to President Patil, Prime Minister Singh and the people of India for their extraordinary warmth and hospitality during the visit.

Jakarta, October 4, 2011.

1. The Minister of Commerce and Industry of the Republic of India, H.E. Shri Anand Sharma, accompanied by an official and business delegation, visited Indonesia on 3-4 October 2011 and met the Minister of Trade of the Republic of Indonesia, H.E. Mari Elka Pangestu. They discussed ways of expanding bilateral trade and economic cooperation between the two countries at the 1st Indonesia – India Biennial Trade Ministers’ Forum.

2. The Ministers noted with satisfaction the Pre-Negotiation Consultations of Indonesia India Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (II-CECA), held in Jakarta, 3 October 2011. The Ministers emphasized the need to constructively engage in II-CECA negotiations which would result in mutual and beneficial outcomes for both countries.

3. The Ministers expressed their satisfaction on the strengthening of bilateral cooperation and hoped for increasing and diversifying bilateral trade as well as promoting and stimulating bilateral investment flows. The Ministers hoped that these efforts would help achieve the bilateral trade volume target of US$ 25 billion by 2015.

4. The Ministers reviewed the deliberations of the two Working Groups: (1) Working Group on Trade and Investment Forum and (2) Working Group on Trade Facilitation and Resolution.

5. The Ministers looked forward to the early operationalization of the Indonesia-India CEOs’ Forum.

6. The Ministers welcomed the signing of Memorandum of Understanding between the Governor of East Kalimantan Province and National Aluminum.

India and Indonesia are aiming to enhance economic cooperation to a new level by achieving a bilateral trade target of $25 billion by 2015. Trade and investment between India and Indonesia had seen a massive rise in the last few years with investment by Indian companies having touched $3.50 billion and another $25-billion worth of investments in the pipeline. The two countries surpassed the 2005 target of bilateral trade of $10 billion by 2010 they surpassed it by 40 per cent reaching the $14-billion level. The proposed CECA will not only break tariff walls on merchandise trade but also enable professionals from the two countries to take up short-term business assignments in each other’s markets. The scope would also cover easing of bilateral investment regime. The CECA with Indonesia would go beyond the trade liberalisation already achieved through the India-ASEAN agreement. Though the bilateral trade between India and Indonesia stood at $13.2 billion in 2010, it is highly skewed in favour of Indonesia. India’s exports to Indonesia were $3.3 billion against imports of $10 billion.

JAPAN

February 15, 2011.

Commerce and Industry Minister Shri Anand Sharma called on Japanese Prime Minister Mr Naoto Kan today in Tokyo. During his meeting, Prime Minister Kan expressed satisfaction on the conclusion of negotiations for a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) with Japan, which is being signed tomorrow. Prime Minister Kan underscored the significance of Indo Japanese technology collaboration for research and innovation. He called for a partnership in development of India's infrastructure, specifically referring to Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor project. While responding, Mr Sharma highlighted the importance attached by India to of the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor Project which has now decisively moved from the stage of master planning to project implementation. This project will see investments of over $100 billion and is being seen as a flagship initiative of Indo-Japan partnership. Minister Sharma proposed the establishment of a revolving fund of $ 9 billion with matching contribution from Indian and Japanese side to kickstart the implementation process. Japanese Prime Minister agreed to enhance the financial contribution of Japan and was positively receptive to the suggestion. Mr Sharma urged for greater Japanese investments in areas of core infrastructure and capital goods equipment including power generation where Japanese companies have a technological edge. During the twenty minute long meeting, Minister Sharma said the India viewed a partnership with Japan as a ‘strategic engagement’ in the region and in the global context. This would be central to the vision of Asian integration articulated by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh. Mr Sharma is in Tokyo on a two day visit, accompanied by a high level official delegation including the Commerce Secretary and a CII CEO’s delegation led by CII President Hari Bharatia. Tomorrow, Minister Sharma will be signing the CEPA along with the Japanese Foreign Minister Maehara. Later in the day, he will be holding substantive bilateral meetings with the METI minister to review the progress of DMICDC project. He will be interacting with top Japanese CEOs to seek Japanese investments in India in areas of priority as identified at the Summit level interaction between the Prime Ministers.

New Delhi, February 16, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry and Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Seiji Maehara signed the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) between India and Japan today. This Agreement is the most ambitious agreement signed by India so far and covers trade in goods, services and investment under its ambit. This Agreement follows from the commitment of the two Prime Ministers in October, 2010. India stands to gain significantly through this Agreement and 90% of tariff lines are covered while Japan has covered 5% more lines than India. The Agreement has ensured that the sensitive sectors for India are fully protected including agriculture, fruits, spices, wheat, basmati rice, edible oils, wines and spirits and also certain categories of industrial products such as auto and auto parts.

The Agreement will ensure access to a highly developed Japanese market for the pharmaceutical sector and for the first time ever Japan has committed to give the same treatment for Indian generics as their domestic industry. Apart from this, Indian agricultural produce including instant tea, seafood will find their way in the Japanese market. The textile products including readymade garments stand to gain significantly in terms of market access. The Japanese side have also lowered their tariffs for petrochemicals and chemical products, jewellery and cement.
In the services sector India has obtained considerable concessions including commitments for providing greater access for contractual suppliers, professionals such as accountants, researchers, tourist guides and management consultants who will now be able to provide their services in Japan. Japan has also committed to cover not only computer engineers but whole range of engineering services such as mechanical, electrical, construction, industrial, design engineers and project management specialists. For the first time ever, Japan has agreed to grant additional category of instructors for yoga practitioners, classical musical and dance practitioners, chefs and English language teachers.

The Agreement also envisages the conclusion of a social security agreement within three years and the negotiations have commenced in Jan, 2011. The negotiations are also on for creating greater openings for Indian nurses and caregivers. For bilateral investment, India has committed to the current national policy on foreign investment and this signals the greater participation of Japanese investors into Indian economy. Similarly the Agreement also covers intellectual property rights for the first time and the parameters of our commitments on these are circumscribed by national legislation and agreement in trips.

In his meeting with Foreign Minister Maehara, Shri Sharma set a target of doubling bilateral trade to US $ 25 billion by 2014 and reiterated his suggestion of establishment a Joint Revolving Fund of US $ 9 billion for kick starting the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor Project.

Later in the day, Shri Sharma had bilateral discussions with his counterpart METI Minister Mr. Banri Kaieda. The two Ministers reviewed the entire spectrum of bilateral trade and investments relations and agreed that there would be significant enhancement in Japanese investment and technology collaboration especially in infrastructure and value added manufacturing. The two Ministers also addressed a Business-Government Dialogue, which has emerged out of the suggestion by Japanese Prime Minister at the Summit in October, 2010. This dialogue focused on the progress of DMICDC Project and greater SME collaboration.

Shri Sharma also addressed CEOs from India and Japan at a business event organized jointly by CII and Nippon Keidanren.
366. Message of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to his Japanese counterpart condoling loss of life during the Tsunami and earth quack and offering necessary help.

New Delhi, March 11, 2011.

In a letter to PM Naoto Kan, Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh, expressed shock at the devastating earthquake that had hit the coast of Japan, resulting in great damage to life and property. He extended his heartfelt condolences to Prime Minister Kan and to all those who had suffered or lost their near and dear ones in the tragic disaster.

Prime Minister conveyed that India stood in full solidarity with the Government and people of Japan at this hour. He also expressed India’s readiness to ‘help Japan in any way required’ adding that India’s resources were at the disposal of Japan.

367. Statement by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh in Parliament on the earth quake and tsunami in Japan.

New Delhi, March 14, 2011.

As Honourable Members are aware, the north eastern part of Japan was hit by a massive earthquake and tsunami on the 11th of March.

Images of destruction and human misery are being flashed on television channels. These are heart rending and deeply disturbing sights. It is becoming evident that the scale of destruction and loss of human lives are likely to be far higher than initially expected. This is a moment of immense and grave tragedy for Japan.

I have already conveyed, on behalf of the government and people of India, our deepest condolences to the Prime Minster of Japan. I have told him that India stands in full solidarity with the people of Japan, and that our resources are at the disposal of Japan for any assistance they may require.

I am confident that this House will join me in reiterating the heartfelt condolences of the people of India to the friendly people of Japan, and extending our prayers and thoughts to them during this most horrific disaster.
We can never forget that India has been the largest recipient of Japan’s overseas development assistance. We have the best of relations with Japan. We are in touch with the Government of Japan to ascertain the kind of assistance they need. As an immediate step, we are airlifting 25,000 blankets to Japan. We are ready to send search and rescue teams and relief material. We stand ready to help in the relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction phase. Our Navy is on standby to send its ships to Japan as part of such an exercise.

We will spare no effort in assisting the Japanese authorities in dealing with the aftermath of this disaster.

There are about 25,000 Indian nationals in Japan. Most of them were not living in the areas affected by the tsunami. About 70 Indians are in the shelters established by Japanese authorities in the tsunami affected areas. We are monitoring their welfare. So far we do not have any reports of casualties.

The disaster has affected some of the nuclear power plants in Japan. The Government of India is in constant touch with the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Japanese Atomic Industrial Forum, and the World Association of Nuclear Operators.

In India, we are currently operating 20 nuclear power reactors. 18 of these are the indigenous Pressurised Heavy Water Reactors. Two reactors at Tarapur, TAPS-1& TAPS-2 are Boiling Water Reactors of the type being operated in Japan. A safety audit of these reactors has been completed recently. Indian nuclear plants have in the past met their safety standards. Following the earthquake in Bhuj on 26 January 2002 the Kakrapar Atomic Power Station continued to operate safely without interruption. Following the 2004 tsunami, the Madras Atomic Power Station was safely shutdown without any radiological consequences. It was possible to restart the plant in a few days after regulatory review.

I would like to assure Honourable Members of the House that the Government attaches the highest importance to nuclear safety. The Department of Atomic Energy and its agencies including the Nuclear Power Corporation of India have been instructed to undertake an immediate technical review of all safety systems of our nuclear power plants particularly with a view to ensuring that they would be able to withstand the impact of large natural disasters such as tsunamis and earthquakes.

I would also like to inform the House that work is underway in the Department of Atomic Energy towards further strengthening India’s national nuclear safety regulatory authority.
A Press Release issued in New Delhi on March 24 said that Prime on March 23 had a telephonic conversation with the Japanese Naoto Kan to convey his condolences and sympathies for the loss of life and property in the Tsunami and earth quack which struck Japan.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh (PM) had a telephonic conversation yesterday with Prime Minister Naoto Kan of Japan. PM expressed deepest condolences at the loss of life and property in Japan consequent to the recent earthquake and tsunami. He reiterated that the people and Government of India stood solidly with the friendly people of Japan in their hour of grief. He also offered to make available any additional assistance that Japan may require. PM expressed confidence that Japan would emerge from the calamity as an even stronger nation.

The Japanese Prime Minister expressed deep appreciation for India's solidarity and support, as the country coped with an enormous natural disaster. He was touched by Prime Minister's gesture of visiting the Japanese Embassy to sign the Condolence Book. He thanked PM for the assistance that India had provided. Similar sentiments were expressed by him in a letter to PM, in response to the latter's message of condolence sent on 11 March 2011.

368. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the wide-ranging Foreign Office consultations held by Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao in Tokyo.

Tokyo, April 8, 2011.

Foreign Secretary Smt. Nirupama Rao today held constructive and useful discussions with Japanese Vice-Foreign Minister Kenichiro Sasae and Deputy Foreign Minister Koro Bessho in Tokyo on bilateral, regional and global issues. She also called on Foreign Minister Takeaki Matsumoto.

2. Foreign Secretary conveyed India's condolences at the loss of life and damage to property due to the March 11 earthquake and tsunami, and reiterated India's offer to assist Japan in any way required. The Japanese side expressed their appreciation for the assistance provided by India for relief and rehabilitation including the sterling efforts of the 46-member team from the National Disaster Response Force of India.

3. Foreign Secretary conveyed that the Government of India had not yet taken a decision on banning Japanese food imports. India will consult Japan prior to taking a decision on the advisory issued by the Food Safety and Standards Authority of India.

4. The two sides agreed that the new Ministerial-level Economic Dialogue, announced by the Prime Ministers at their Annual Summit in Tokyo in October 2010, will be led by the Foreign Ministers of the two countries. The first meeting of the Dialogue will take place later this year.

5. It was also agreed to establish an India-Japan-United States trilateral dialogue on regional and global issues of shared interest. These consultations, agreed to earlier by the U.S., will be conducted by the Foreign Ministries of the three countries.

6. Foreign Secretary reaffirmed the importance of nuclear power as a clean source of energy for India’s continued growth. The two sides exchanged views on various aspects related to nuclear energy. Both sides will continue to discuss the way forward for cooperation in this sphere.

7. Foreign Secretary’s wide-ranging consultations in Tokyo have provided a momentum to the India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership.

369. Press Release issued by Ministry of Finance on Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee’s talks with the Japanese Finance Minister.

Hanoi, May 5, 2011.

In a bilateral meeting with the Japanese Finance Minister at Hanoi, Vietnam the Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee expressed deep concern and sympathy over the recent natural calamities in Japan and extended all possible assistance. Shri Mukherjee said that India attach great priority to Strategic & Global Partnership with Japan and there is strong political consensus in India on the importance of advancing this partnership in all areas. He expressed confidence about continuity of India’s Japan policy despite changes in Japan’s government. He pointed out that in recent years, the bilateral relationship between the two countries have moved from strength to strength. Both the countries have a mutual stake in each other’s prosperity and progress, particularly during these times of economic crisis, added the Minister.
The Finance Minister said that signing of CEPA on 16th Feb. 2011 (Yet to be ratified by Japanese Parliament) is an important mile stone in trade and economic relations between the two countries. After the CEPA comes into force, the bilateral trade is likely to increase substantially as has happened in the case of South Korea where after coming in to force of CEPA the bilateral trade during the first year increased by more than 40%, said Shri Mukherjee. Emphasizing that CEPA will provide win-win situation for both the countries, the Finance Minister said that with CEPA there will be more investment flow from Japan to India and Japan will get access to huge Indian market for its products. Indian professionals will be able to provide their services in Japan. Indian pharmaceutical companies will get treatment similar to Japanese companies in the matter of registration and release of generic medicine in the Japanese market.

The Finance Minister invited the Japanese Finance Minister to India for the 25th (silver jubilee) Anniversary of ADB’s interface with India which is likely to be held from 17th to 19th October, 2011.

The Finance Minister said that in the wake of Chinese policy of raising the prices of rare earths and stopping supplies globally, collaboration in exploring rare earths reserves in India will be beneficial for both countries.

Shri Mukherjee emphasized that India and Japan need to work together to ensure that the Doha round of negotiations are concluded in a mutually beneficial way at the earliest possible and extended full support for the Japanese initiative for Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement in East Asia (CEPEA), aimed at building a more inclusive trade alliance in East Asia.

Finance Minister expressed happiness at Japanese support for big infrastructure projects such as dedicated freight corridor & Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor. He also appreciated Japan’s active involvement in the establishment of a new IIT in Hyderabad.

It may be recalled that India has been the largest recipient of ODA (Official Development Assistance) from Japan for the seventh consecutive year. As on March, 2011, 59 projects are under implementation with Japanese loan assistance & amount committed is approx Rs. 58000 crores (3.3 Trillion Yen). Trade statistics have also shown a marked increase in calendar year 2010. India’s exports to Japan increased 51% to reach US$ 5.64 Billion while India’s imports from Japan increased 42.2% to reach US$ 9.02 Billion. Japan ranks 6th largest in FDI inflow into India accounting for 3.62% of total FDI inflows into India.
India has also received good cooperation from Japan in International forums, including on the issue of reform of UN Security Council & regional architecture building in Asia.

Tokyo, October 29, 2011.

Foreign Minister Gemba

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media.

I am delighted to be in Tokyo once again. I am here for the 5th India – Japan Strategic Dialogue with Foreign Minister Gemba. We have already had discussions for over one hour and immediately after this press interaction we will continue our talks.

First, I conveyed the deep sympathy of the people and Government of India at the loss of life and property in Japan following the earthquake and tsunami of March 11. I told the Hon’ble Foreign Minister that India stands ready to help in whatever way required.

Second, I conveyed to Minister Gemba that the India – Japan Strategic & Global Partnership is stronger than ever before. My aim during this round of talks is to take our Partnership to an even higher level.

I suggested that the Indian and Japanese Navies conduct bilateral exercises apart from multilateral ones. Our Defence Minister will be in Tokyo in a few days and will discuss this subject in greater detail with his counterpart.

We also discussed the India-Japan-United States trilateral dialogue. We agreed that it will be held very soon. It will cover regional and international issues of concern to all three countries.

I thanked the Government of Japan for its consistent support to India’s developmental effort by means of its ODA or Official Development Assistance. This year, Japan has maintained the level of ODA for India despite its focus on reconstruction activity after the earthquake and tsunami. This is a strong vote of confidence in India’s growth story and exhibits the importance Japan attaches to our Strategic Partnership.
India is delighted with the implementation of our bilateral Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement since August 1 this year. We are confident that trade and investment between our countries will increase exponentially as a result of this measure.

The Government of Japan has removed 7 Indian entities from its Foreign End User List this year. This will boost high-technology trade between us. One of the entities removed from this List is Indian Rare Earths Limited. We now look forward to greater cooperation between Indian and Japanese firms in the rare earth sector.

I also discussed with Foreign Minister Gemba the status of civil nuclear cooperation between our countries. As you are aware we have had 3 rounds of negotiations on this subject. After my discussions today, I am optimistic on this score.

2012 will mark the 60th Anniversary year of the establishment of India – Japan diplomatic relations. We discussed how to celebrate this momentous occasion in both countries.

I will meet Prime Minister Noda later today. I have already conveyed that we look forward to welcoming him in India later this year for the Annual Summit between the Prime Ministers of India and Japan.

I am very happy with the results of my visit to Tokyo. I am confident that the India – Japan Strategic Partnership is stronger as a result of our talks today.

Thank You.

New Delhi, November 1, 2011.

The Union Minister of Trade Industry and Textiles met a delegation of 13 editors and senior journalists from Kyodo News and its members representing different media organizations in Japan here today. During his interaction Shri Sharma appraised the delegation about the various steps that have been taken in the recent times to maintain the momentum of economic growth in India and steps taken to deepen the trade ties with the world in general and in Japan in particular.

The Minister informed that the bilateral trade between India and Japan during the year 2008-09 was of the volume of USD 10.91 billion. During the year 2009-10 the bilateral trade slightly declined to USD 10.36 billion. The bilateral trade during the year 2010-11 was of USD 13.362 billion. He also highlighted that historic Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) was signed between India and Japan on 16th February 2011. This Agreement has come into force from 1st August, 2011. The CEPA is most comprehensive of all the agreements concluded by India so far as it covers more than 90% of the trade. The Japanese side has put 87% of their tariff lines under immediate tariff liberalization (zero duty when CEPA comes into force). A large number of these items are of India’s export interest e.g. seafood, agricultural products such as mangoes, citrus fruits, spices, instant tea, most spirits such as rum, whiskies, vodka, etc. textile products such as woven fabrics, yarns, synthetic yarn, readymade garments, petro chemical & chemicals products, cement jewellery, etc. Under India-Japan CEPA the Japanese government shall accord no less favorable treatment to the applications of Indian companies than that it accords to the like applications of its own persons. This will greatly help Indian Pharmaceutical companies. Under India-Japan CEPA, Indian professionals will be able to provide their services and contribute towards further development of Japan’s IT Sector. The Minister said that the agreement signifies the stability of our policy regime to our investment partner. Japanese investment is important not only from the financial resources point of view but also due to the embodied high technology and quality management practices. Under India-Japan CEPA India will be benefited by Japanese investments, technology and the world class management practices that come with it. Japan’s Business community will get access to huge Indian market for their manufactured goods.

Shri Sharma lauded Japan’s contribution in many infrastructure projects such as Delhi Metro and Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor. He also appreciated
Japan’s interest in recently approved National manufacturing Policy. He praised the Japan’s resilience in the aftermath of recent natural calamity and expressed India’s solidarity with Japan.

Briefing by Officer on Special Duty (XP) Syed Akbaruddin and Joint Secretary (East Asia) Gautam Bambawale on Japanese Prime Minister’s visit.

New Delhi, December 26, 2011.

Officer on Special Duty (XP) (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good afternoon everyone. I want to begin with an apology as inadvertently we are starting a little late. Sometimes there are things beyond our control. In any case, good afternoon and I wanted to thank all of you for attending this briefing.

While I have met some of you during the course of the last few days, I may not have met all of you. So, for those of you who may wonder about what an interloper like me is doing here, I wanted to introduce myself, just in case I have not met some of you previously. My name is Syed Akbaruddin and I hope to be your official interlocutor upon the departure of my good friend and predecessor Mr. Vishnu Prakash as Ambassador to the Republic of Korea. On my right is Mr. Gautam Bambawale, Joint Secretary (East Asia), who is familiar to many of you. I will, as is usual, make a few initial remarks and then we will open up to questions that you may have.

As you are aware, at the invitation of Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, Japanese Prime Minister Mr. Yoshiho Noda will be in Delhi on 27th and 28th December for the annual India-Japan Summit. It is the sixth annual meeting of the leaders of India and Japan since the institutionalization of this practice in 2006.

This is Prime Minister Noda’s first visit to India, although he had met our Prime Minister on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly in New York in September this year.

Prime Minister Noda is expected to hold extensive discussions with our Prime Minister both in restricted and delegation-level sessions. Following this a Joint Statement will be issued and there will be a brief media event. Prime Minister and Shrimati Gursharan Kaur will host a banquet for Prime Minister and Mrs. Hitomi Noda.

Apart from meetings with Prime Minister Singh who is his host, as is customary Prime Minister Noda will call on the Vice-President, meet EAM, Leader of the Opposition, and Chairperson of the UPA. Prime Minister Noda is also expected to speak at two events – one is at the ICWA and the other is a business luncheon. The logistical details and timings of all these activities will be provided separately to you.

India-Japan relations have rapidly diversified and significantly strengthened in recent years. As you are aware, India and Japan established a Strategic and Global Partnership in 2006. This has been further strengthened by the vision for the Strategic and Global Partnership in the next decade set out in the Joint Statement issued last year at the conclusion of talks between Prime Minister and Prime Minister Nato Kan in Tokyo.

In accordance with the intensive engagement that characterizes the bilateral relationship, Prime Minister Singh and Prime Minister Noda are expected to discuss various bilateral, regional and global issues. Let me try and elaborate on some of these aspects.

Besides the annual summit meetings which have imparted the ties sustained momentum and strategic convergence, India and Japan have been holding regular interactions at various levels and in diverse areas. For example, Foreign Office consultations involving the Foreign Secretary and the Japanese Vice Foreign Minister were held in April this year. The External Affairs Minister was in Tokyo in October for the fifth round of the Strategic Dialogue. Raksha Mantri visited Tokyo in November for the Defence Dialogue. The India-Japan Dialogue on Africa took place also in the latter half of November. Finally, senior officials met for the first India-Japan-US trilateral dialogue last week in Washington.

India continues to be the largest recipient of Japanese ODA, of which we are very appreciative. There are more than sixty projects under implementation with Japanese loan assistance. The two leaders are likely to discuss Japanese involvement and assistance to major infrastructure development projects in India such as the Dedicated Freight Corridor West and the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor.

Since the last India-Japan Summit, the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) has been signed in February this year and has been operationalized on 1st August, 2011. The agreement which covers a vast gamut of trade, services, investment, intellectual property rights, customs and other trade related issues signifies the economic alignment of two of the largest economies in Asia and is expected to lead to a marked increase in our business and economic ties. Bilateral trade has shown a robust increase of 24 per cent during the period January-September this year over the corresponding period of last year, and it has reached US$ 13.2 billion during that period. Currently, more than 800 Japanese companies operate in India. In 2010-11 Japanese FDI totaled US$ 3.62 billion.

High technology trade and energy cooperation, including energy efficiency, renewable and civil nuclear energy, are also subjects that have been receiving high-level attention. Science and technology cooperation is emerging as a key element of the relationship.
India and Japan have a similar outlook on a host of regional and global issues. We have consulted on matters relating to maritime security and antipiracy measures, counterterrorism and disaster relief, as well as the regional architecture in East Asia. As fellow G4 members we have enunciated a common vision of an enlarged Security Council for the 21st century by expansion both in permanent and nonpermanent categories on the basis of contributions made to the maintenance of peace and security as well as the need for increased representation of developing countries in both categories.

In 2012 India and Japan will celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations in a befitting manner.

It is expected that the Joint Statement will be encompassing the broad canvas of issues which are the focus of our Strategic and Global Partnership.

With that I conclude my initial remarks. The floor is open for you to ask any questions to Gautam and to me.

Question: My question is to you, Akbar, as well as to Gautam. What is the current status of the nuclear deal negotiations? Obviously it is going to come up. But from what the Japanese media is writing about it, it is as good as over from the Japanese perspective. Can you throw some light on that? Secondly, can you talk about the bullet trains technology which Mr. Noda is going to hard sell during his trip and during his talks with the Prime Minister?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): Since Gautam was involved in both these, I will ask him to respond.

Joint Secretary (East Asia) (Shri Gautam Bambawale): As all of you know, the DPJ Government announced in June of 2010 that they will commence negotiations with India on an agreement on cooperation in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. Since then we have had three formal rounds of negotiations. Unfortunately in the early part of 2011 the Fukushima nuclear power plant accident took place after the massive earthquake and tsunami which hit that country. Since then I think Japan has been focused inwardly including on how to address the issues which have been raised from the Fukushima nuclear power plant accident. But I think I can be candid with you and tell you that there have been some informal consultations between the two sides even after the Fukushima nuclear power plant accident. I think this is a subject which will be discussed between the two Prime Ministers at this annual summit.

On the bullet train or Shinkansen idea, I think when our External Affairs Minister Mr. Krishna visited Tokyo on the 29th of October this year, Foreign Minister Gemba conveyed to him that the Japanese Government and the Japanese companies were very keen to leverage any possibilities there are in India for... bullet train technology and for actually having bullet trains in India. I believe - and you will have to check with the Ministry of Railways I am not certain about this - our Ministry of Railways also have within their perspective planning for the future the possibility of having bullet train technologies especially for short run passenger sectors in India. So, we will have to see how we can move forward on this and whether there is any scope for cooperation between India and Japan in this field.

Question: Sir, you have referred to the trilateral dialogue between India, US and Japan. Can you give us a brief of that dialogue and what is the future plan of action?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): Once again, since Gautam was part of that dialogue, maybe I will ask him to answer.

Joint Secretary (East Asia): You are right. The dialogue took place in Washington on December 19th. This was the first of this kind of a trilateral dialogue between our three countries. So, to a certain extent it was a dialogue where we were trying to break the ice, trying to feel our way around. We had some very good discussions. I think all three countries at the working level decided that it was a fairly good discussion. Some of the issues which were discussed included counterterrorism; maritime security; how the three countries could work together in the East Asia Summit process; and it also focused on UN Security Council reform. The three countries have agreed that there will be a second round of these discussions at Tokyo sometime next year.

Question: Yesterday in Beijing the two countries have decided to have a Yuan and Yen direct trade. The newspapers this morning carried a report saying that there is going to be a ten billion dollar Rupee-Yuan agreement of some kind. Can you kindly give some details?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): What I can say is that I know that there are some discussions and negotiations which are ongoing between our Ministry of Finance and the Japanese Ministry of Finance. But my economics is not that good. So, I am afraid I will have to direct you to our Ministry of Finance for more details. Of course if it is discussed between the two Prime Ministers at the forthcoming annual summit, you can ask the two Prime Ministers directly at the media interaction that Akbar spoke about.

Question: I have a question on the civil nuclear agreement. Can I say that during the bilateral meeting Indian side will call on Japan to resume the official negotiations?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): I would just like to repeat what I said earlier that I am quite sure that this is a subject which will be discussed between the two Prime Ministers. What will be the outcome of those discussions, I cannot tell you because I do not know and how the discussions will go. So, we can leave it to the two Prime Ministers and once again after their discussions I am sure they will convey to you what their decisions were.

Question: The Japanese Prime Minister will be in Beijing before he comes here. Is China likely to figure during the talks because there have been a lot of speculations about the Chinese rise? And will the developments in North Korea be discussed?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): The bilateral agenda between India and Japan is so vast and so extensive that I think most of the time that the two Prime Ministers talk to each other will be spent on our bilateral relations, will be spent on discussing issues between India and Japan. I am not sure as far as regional issues or global issues are concerned what exactly will come up. It is possible that North Korea could be discussed especially because this is a recent development. I think on the question of North Korea, we will be wanting to listen to what Prime Minister Noda has to convey to us, especially the assessments that Japanese Government has about the future course of events in North Korea. But I am not certain whether that will be discussed. It all depends on the time and what priority both sides place on this issue.

Question: In your preliminary remarks you said that FDI from Japan is going up. Could you give a sense of which are the areas where we are seeing more FDI investments from Japan? Are there some economic related pacts which will probably be signed during the visit?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Most of Japanese FDI in India is in the manufacturing sector and I think that is a good thing. We are hoping to see more Japanese FDI coming to India. We tell the Japanese side from time to time that we are making our own moves to improve the investment environment in India. The main sectors in which Japanese FDI comes is automobiles, electronics, and a few other related sectors. But we are hoping to see an increase across the board in Japanese FDI into India. And we are quite certain that the recently implemented Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement between our two countries will help in increasing Japanese FDI into India.

Officer on Special Duty (XP): Just to add to what Gautam mentioned, apart from automobiles and electronics, it is also in the service sector, which is financial and nonfinancial services, and in the telecommunications sector.

Question: Gautam, not so long ago when it was decided that there will be a quadrilateral dialogue between the United States, India, Japan and Australia, the Chinese had expressed certain concerns and that idea was dropped. When the trilateral meeting was taking place in Washington, Karl Inderfurth had made a certain statement that this is not really meant against any particular country and all that. Did the Chinese raise any concerns about the trilateral dialogue that started last week?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me repeat that the trilateral dialogue between India, Japan and the United States is not aimed at any third country. It is aimed at leveraging some of the possibilities of cooperation between our three countries. And no, the Chinese did not raise any concerns, at least with us. I am not aware of whether they raised anything with the other countries involved. But with India they have not raised this question at all.

Question: I just wanted to ask what is the kind of outcome we are expecting on the sixty ongoing projects like the Delhi Corridor? What will come out of these bilateral meetings? Exactly what are the objectives we are seeking to achieve on this?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): You are absolutely right. Japanese Official Development Assistance (ODA) has made a big difference to the people of India. And we are sitting in the city of Delhi and you all know what an important development the Delhi Metro has been. It has made life much easier for ordinary citizens of the city. Now Japanese ODA is all going into other similar projects. I can at least recount two others – one is the Bengaluru Metro and the second is the Kolkata Metro. We think that these projects are going to make infrastructure development in India move ahead faster which in turn has a direct impact on not just economic activities within the country but also has a direct impact on the quality of life of ordinary citizens in India. So, I think each of these projects including the flagship projects of Dedicated Freight Corridor West and the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor are going to contribute immeasurably to the development of India, are going to contribute to the wellbeing of our people.

Question: Sir, I would like to ask about any MoUs that are likely to be signed between the two Prime Ministers. And on the ODA, any assurances from the Japanese side on some ODA through JITA over the Delhi Metro project which apparently India has apprehension that might not go forward because of the Fukushima?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me start with the ODA question first. At the start of this calendar year, especially after the tsunami and the nuclear power plant accident at Fukushima took place, we realized that Japan would have tremendous requirements of resources for its own relief and reconstruction. So, we had thought at that point in time that there may be a cut in Official Development Assistance this year to India. But the fact is that the Japanese have maintained the level of ODA to India despite the need for resources internally within Japan. That is something I think which we are very happy about, we are very glad about, and we thank the Government of Japan for maintaining this ODA.

Question: Can you give us the latest figure of ODA?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me give you a rough and ready figure. I must direct you to the Ministry of Finance for more precise figures, but the amount of ODA committed by Japan over the last four financial years has roughly been of the magnitude of 200 billion yen every year. Exchange rates fluctuate so often. So, you can make the calculation.

On the MoUs, let us see what is the outcome. I do not want to foretell or forecast what the outcomes of the annual summit will be. So, let us wait for the summit to be done and then you will have an opportunity to talk to the two Prime Ministers about outcomes and so on.

Question: Areas?

Officer on Special Duty (XP): We have never prejudged the outcome of any summit. So, we will leave it at that.

Thank you very much.

374. Opening Remarks by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna during the Address by the Japanese Prime Minister on India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership.

New Delhi, December 28, 2011.

Your Excellency Mr. Yoshihiko Noda, Hon’ble Prime Minister of Japan, Ambassador Sudhir Devare, Director General, Indian Council of World Affairs, Distinguished members of the delegation from Japan,

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

As the Vice-President of the Indian Council of World Affairs, I would like to extend a very warm welcome to His Excellency Mr Yoshihiko Noda, Prime Minister of Japan to this event. We are grateful to His Excellency Noda for sparing his valuable time to address the gathering today.

I am strongly of the view that the India-Japan bilateral relationship is a splendid example of a successful and effective foreign policy working for the benefit of the people of the two countries. We also are extremely privileged as Prime Minister Noda is addressing us at a time when our two countries are set to celebrate the year 2012 as the 60th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations.

I am confident that Prime Minister Noda’s message and vision for the future of our relations, both at the bilateral as well as at the global level, will find great resonance and meaning with the people of India.

Excellency, we have much to celebrate in our bilateral relationship. Although India-Japan relations have roots in history, the contemporary and dynamic nature of our engagement makes it one of the important pillars of strength for the global order. The strength of our relationship lies not only in the past but also very much in the modern ideals of democracy, freedom of expression, human rights and rule of law. This provides us the conviction and moral authority to work closely together for the benefit of our peoples.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

India-Japan relations have transcended the bilateral context and have acquired relevance for maintaining regional and global peace, security and well-being. Accordingly, it gives me great pleasure to note that the India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership for peace and prosperity is being continuously energized and invigorated with new dimensions as we jointly countenance the challenges of the 21st century.
There are various aspects of our bilateral relationship which are unique to India and Japan, such as effective utilization of overseas development assistance and have now become the model for similar cooperation with other countries.

India and Japan may be geographically far apart, but I believe that our two countries live in the hearts and minds of our peoples. We in India have great admiration for Japan and the people of Japan.

Excellency, our appreciation of the strength and resilience of the Japanese people rose when we witnessed how you dealt with consequences of the Great East Japan Earthquake and Tsunami. We are even more impressed by your response to the tragedy and by your determination to maintain the level of development assistance to India.

Japan’s support has helped us to make a difference to the lives of many people in India. Just across the street from where we are standing Mr. Prime Minister, stands a lasting symbol of India-Japan cooperation i.e. the airport express line of the Delhi Metro.

More such cooperative endeavours are taking shape all over the country and will change India’s economic and social landscape forever. The Western Dedicated Freight Corridor, the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor Project and the Delhi and Bengaluru Metros are outstanding projects, which touch the lives of people and bring home the fruits of a responsive foreign policy. …

Your Excellency Prime Minister Noda,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media.

I am delighted to welcome Prime Minister Noda on his first visit to India for the Annual India-Japan Summit. This summit has become one of the most productive and substantive events in our diplomatic calendar.

Prime Minister Noda and I have completed very fruitful and wide-ranging discussions aimed at further expanding and strengthening the India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership.

Our partnership has gone beyond just its traditional but very important economic dimensions. It now includes cooperation in the political and security and high technology spheres. Since our last summit, Japan has removed seven Indian entities from the End User List.

Our cooperation on regional and global issues and non-traditional threats to security, such as piracy and maritime security has significantly strengthened. We have a complete meeting of minds on most issues of concern to us.

We expressed satisfaction at the progress in our economic partnership. Our Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement has come into force since August 2011. After a dip in the previous year, trade turnover reached almost 15 billion US dollars in 2010 and the trend in 2011 is equally encouraging.

Negotiations have begun on a Social Security Agreement, and the first Ministerial Level Economic Dialogue is scheduled for 2012.

Over 700 Japanese affiliated companies have operations in India. Yet Japanese FDI inflows to India account for just over one percent of Japan’s total outward foreign direct investment flows. We would like to see much more Japanese investment and technology transfer in India, which we will facilitate.

I thanked Prime Minister Noda for maintaining the level of Official Development Assistance despite the demand for resources for the reconstruction of areas in northern Japan following the earthquake and tsunami earlier this year.

We reviewed the progress of the Western Dedicated Freight Corridor and the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor. We both recognize the importance of completing the DFC-West project by December 2016. This will significantly enhance our railway infrastructure. The DMIC is now moving from the planning to the implementation stage. The Government of India has allocated long-term financial resources for this major project. We look forward to a similar commitment from the Japanese side.

Prime Minister Noda and I discussed the possibility of a new Chennai – Bengaluru Industrial Corridor project in south India, where many Japanese firms have invested. We have instructed our officials to look into the modalities of cooperation.

Japan has offered India high speed rail technology for our passenger networks. We welcome Japan’s interest in this new area.

As part of our energy cooperation, we reviewed the ongoing discussions on furthering civil nuclear cooperation between our countries. These are moving in the right direction.

We have agreed to encourage Indian and Japanese firms to cooperate in the area of rare earths and rare metals.

We have reviewed important regional and global issues, including the situation in Afghanistan and the challenges posed by the slowdown of the international economy. If India and Japan can build virtuous cycles of growth, this will contribute immensely to the early revival of the global economy.

We have agreed to strengthen coordination and cooperation within the East Asia Summit process and in creating conditions for a prosperous, open and inclusive architecture for regional cooperation.

We renewed our intention to work both bilaterally and within the G-4 for the reform of the United Nations Security Council.

I am extremely happy with this year’s Annual Summit and its outcomes which are reflected in the Joint Statement signed by Prime Minister Noda and me.

I thank you.
376. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce & Industry on trade with Japan.

New Delhi, December 28, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma the Union Minister for Commerce, Industry & Textiles in his address to business delegation led by Mr. Yoshihiko Noda the Prime Minister of Japan, said that, “The year 2011 is a watershed year in our relations as we signed the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) during my visit to Japan in February. The signing of CEPA has begun a whole new chapter in our economic partnership, unlocking the true potential of trade between our two countries. I am hopeful that CEPA will further deepen economic engagement in terms of Trade in Goods, Services, and Investment; contributing immensely to mutual prosperity”. Japan is an invaluable & strategic partner in the process of India’s development. India-Japan has to play major role in the globally changing economic landscape, he added.

Shri Sharma stated that, as a result of coming in to force of CEPA, the bilateral trade is likely to increase substantially and expressed hope that the target of US $ 25 billion by 2014 will be achieved during the specified period. The bilateral trade between India and Japan during the year 2009-10 was of the volume of US $ 10.36 billion. The bilateral trade during the year 2010-11 reached to US $ 13.823

Informing about the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor the Commerce Minister said, “The Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor envisages investment of US $ 100 billion and we have now decisively moved from the stage of planning and design to the stage of implementation.” On 24th October 2011, the National Manufacturing Policy was unveiled and seven industrial townships have been identified as the first National Investment and Manufacturing Zones based on models of sustainable development and smart communities, which has been perfected in Japan. The Japanese Government is committing US $ 4.5 billion for implementation of this project.

Asking for Japanese Government to invest in infrastructure sector, Shri Sharma expressed that, “Over the next couple of decades, we will see massive expansion in Indian infrastructure. In the coming 5 years itself, we have targeted to invest over a trillion dollars in creating capacities of infrastructure which will further catalyze India’s economic growth. India has a structured energy dialogue with Japan which seeks to promote a structured cooperation in this sector. India has made rapid strides in the renewable energy sector.
In the field of agro-processing, we aim to double our food processing capabilities in the next 5 years and the establishment of 64 fully equipped Agro Processing Zones and Food Parks provides an area of immense opportunities. This is a segment where Japan can be an able partner to develop cross sectoral linkages in the entire value addition chain from agriculture to retail, packaging and logistics, the Minister said.

The Minister observed that, India’s pharmaceutical sector is acquiring a global leadership position and Indian generics today constitute nearly a fifth of global supplies. Our pharmaceutical companies can be of immense value in providing affordable healthcare which is much needed in a country of Japan’s demographic profile. India also has a huge pool of trained pharmaceutical scientists, doctors and researchers, which opens up avenues for joint collaborative research for new drug discoveries along with joint IPRs.
Joint Statement on the ‘Vision for the Enhancement of India-Japan Strategic and Global Partnership’ upon entering the year of the 60th anniversary of the establishment of Diplomatic Relations.

1. The Prime Minister of Japan, H.E. Mr. Yoshihiko Noda, is currently paying a State Visit to India for the Annual Summit of the Prime Ministers on 27-28 December 2011 at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, H.E. Dr. Manmohan Singh. The two Prime Ministers held extensive talks on bilateral, regional and global issues of mutual interest on 28 December 2011.

2. In the context of the two countries commemorating the 60th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations in 2012, the two Prime Ministers reaffirmed that India and Japan enjoy deep mutual understanding and vibrant people-to-people contact as the relationship is based on universal values such as democracy, human rights and rule of law, as well as wide-ranging strategic and economic interests. They stressed the need to enhance the Strategic and Global Partnership for peace and prosperity.

3. Prime Minister Noda expressed, on behalf of the Government and people of Japan, his profound gratitude for the heartfelt sympathy and support extended to them from the Government and people of India following the Great East Japan Earthquake, and emphasised his resolve to make utmost efforts for a reconstruction open to the world. Prime Minister Singh reiterated his solidarity with Japan and expressed his confidence that the people of Japan will overcome the calamity with their unwavering spirit and that Japan’s economy will recover to its full strength soon. Prime Minister Singh welcomed Japan’s initiative to strengthen international cooperation in the area of disaster risk reduction, including the holding of an international conference in the Tohoku region in 2012. Prime Minister Noda conveyed his decision to invite approximately six hundred Indian youth under the new “Kizuna (bond) Project” aimed at promoting global understanding of Japan’s revival in response to the Great East Japan Earthquake. Prime Minister Singh welcomed the project and assured cooperation by the Government of India for its success.

4. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the significance of Annual Summits between them. They expressed satisfaction at Ministerial-level and other policy dialogues such as those between Foreign Ministers and Defense Ministers. They noted that the Ministerial Level Economic Dialogue, to be held at the earliest possible opportunity in 2012, would further enhance their economic partnership by giving it strategic and long-term policy orientation. The two Prime Ministers expressed hope that the India-Japan Ministerial Business-Government...
Policy Dialogue between the Minister of Commerce and Industry of India and the Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry of Japan will be held in 2012. The two Prime Ministers stressed the importance of various working-level discussions between the two countries, and welcomed the launch of the India-Japan-US trilateral dialogue, which would deepen strategic and global partnership amongst the three countries.

5. Recognising the growing security and defense cooperation between the two countries, the two Prime Ministers welcomed the bilateral exercise between the Indian Navy and the Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force to be held in 2012.

6. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the entry into force of India-Japan Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) on 1 August 2011. Asserting that CEPA is an important milestone in the trade and economic relations between the two countries, they expressed hope that CEPA will further deepen their economic engagement in terms of trade in goods, services, investment and contribute immensely to mutual prosperity.

7. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the commencement of negotiations on an agreement between India and Japan on Social Security, which will contribute to the promotion of economic activities by private sectors of both countries. They instructed their relevant authorities to work towards an early conclusion of the negotiations.

8. Prime Minister Singh expressed his appreciation to the Government and the people of Japan for their unwavering support to India’s development, even in the midst of Japan’s reconstruction efforts following the Great East Japan Earthquake. Prime Minister Noda reaffirmed that the Government of Japan would continue to provide its Official Development Assistance (ODA) at a substantial level to encourage India’s efforts towards social and economic development including in the area of infrastructure development. In this context, Prime Minister Noda pledged that the Government of Japan would extend loans totaling 134.288 billion yen to two new projects, namely, “Delhi Mass Rapid Transport System Project Phase II” and “West Bengal Forest and Biodiversity Conservation Project” as the projects of first batch in the fiscal year 2011. Prime Minister Singh appreciated the commitment by Prime Minister Noda.

9. The two Prime Ministers emphasised the importance of an early realisation of the Western Dedicated Freight Corridor (DFC) which runs through the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor (DMIC) with Japan’s support. In this context, both sides will expedite work on Phase II of the DFC with a view to starting implementation of the project as early as possible.

10. The two Prime Ministers shared the vision for the development of the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor (DMIC) that the governments and private sectors of the two countries cooperate in a mutually complementary manner to develop an environmentally sustainable, long-lasting and technologically advanced infrastructure in the region of DMIC. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the launch of a 9 billion dollar India-Japan DMIC facility. Noting the significant progress made by India’s contribution of a 175 billion rupee fund for development of trunk infrastructure, Prime Minister Noda announced the intention of the Government of Japan to make available for DMIC projects Japan’s public and private finance totaling 4.5 billion dollars in the next five years, which includes appropriate financing from the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) as well as ODA loan. The two Prime Ministers felt that the DMIC Project would redefine the character of infrastructure growth in India through advanced technology and green growth.

They also felt that active involvement of Japanese agencies and companies would provide an impetus for the development of DMIC. Towards this end, they welcomed Japan’s active involvement through equity participation in DMIC Development Corporation (DMICDC) as well as provision of technical expertise, board members and experts. In order to effectively utilise the facility and to facilitate investments by Japanese companies, India will endeavour to resolve issues within the existing regulatory framework and guidelines of capital regulations, and an inter-departmental consultation mechanism will also be established by India to provide expeditious solutions to issues raised by Japan during the course of implementation of the DMIC Project. To meet the energy requirements in the DMIC region, adequate gas for power projects of DMIC would be made available at reasonable rates and in a timely manner. They expressed satisfaction at the steady progress of the individual Early Bird Projects and Smart Community Projects in the DMIC. In particular, the two Prime Ministers decided to accelerate the efforts by the relevant authorities for an early realisation of the following projects: seawater desalination at Dahej, Gujarat; a microgrid system using large-scale photo-voltaic (PV) power generation at Neemrana Industrial Area in Rajasthan; and gas-fired independent power producer (IPP) in Maharashtra, recognising their potential to serve as a successful model of India-Japan cooperation on the DMIC.

11. The two Prime Ministers stressed the importance of infrastructure development in the areas between Chennai and Bengaluru, where an increasing number of Japanese companies including SMEs have made direct investments to establish their manufacturing base or other forms of business presence. Against this background, they decided to strengthen efforts to improve infrastructure such as ports, industrial parks and their surrounding facilities in Ennore, Chennai and the adjoining areas. Prime Minister Noda conveyed Japan’s intention to extend financial and technical support to the preparation of India’s Comprehensive Integrated Master Plan of this region based on which planned development and work on related facilities could be taken up expeditiously. The two Prime Ministers directed their officials concerned to speedily operationalise the modalities for preparation of the Comprehensive Integrated Master Plan and get it completed at the earliest.

12. Prime Minister Noda expressed his desire that Japan’s technologies and expertise be utilised in the development of India’s high-speed railway system. Prime Minister Singh welcomed Japan’s interest in promoting the development of high-speed railway system in India.

13. Recognising the importance of upgradation of speed of passenger trains to 160-200 kmph on existing Delhi-Mumbai route of the western leg of the Golden Rail Corridor for India’s economic development, the two Prime Ministers looked forward to continued cooperation. They welcomed the progress of pre-feasibility study with Japan’s financial and technical assistance, and expressed hope that the final report will be ready by February 2012 and feasibility study of the project will be undertaken with Japan’s cooperation in 2012.

14. The two Prime Ministers recognised the importance of cooperation in the development of expressways in India including through capacity building.

15. Amid global economic uncertainties, ensuring the stability of the financial markets is all the more important for the stable economic development of the two countries. To this end, the two Prime Ministers decided to enhance the earlier bilateral currency swap arrangement from 3 to 15 billion US dollars. The two Prime Ministers expressed hope that this enhancement will further strengthen financial cooperation, contribute to ensuring financial market stability and further develop growing economic and trade ties between the two countries.

16. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the importance of civil nuclear cooperation between the two countries. Prime Minister Noda stated that Japan would provide information with transparency regarding the status of the ongoing investigation on the causes of the nuclear accident at TEPCO’s Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station, as well as its efforts to enhance nuclear safety. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the progress made to date in negotiations between India and Japan on an Agreement for Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, and directed their negotiators to exert further efforts towards a conclusion of the Agreement, having due regard to each side’s relevant interests, including nuclear safety. In this regard, Prime Minister Noda explained Japan’s position.

17. The two Prime Ministers reiterated the importance of energy cooperation. In this context, they expressed hope that the 5th meeting of the India-Japan Energy Dialogue will be held in 2012.
18. Recognising the importance of rare earths and rare metals in industries of both countries, the two Prime Ministers decided to enhance bilateral cooperation in this area by enterprises of their countries. They decided that Indian and Japanese enterprises would jointly undertake industrial activities to produce and export rare earths at the earliest.

19. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the progress made in 2011 on facilitation of trade in high technology between the two countries. They asked the relevant authorities to maintain dialogue to maximise the potential of high technology trade keeping in mind the strategic partnership between the two countries.

20. The two Prime Ministers welcomed progress on bilateral engagements in Science and Technology (S&T), including the India-Japan Cooperative Science Programme. The maturity of the S&T relationship is reflected in the cutting edge joint R&D projects being implemented in frontier areas like molecular sciences, advanced materials including surface & interface sciences, modern biology & biotechnology, astronomy & space sciences, and manufacturing sciences. The establishment of a beam-line facility at the Photon Factory of KEK, Tsukuba preferentially for use by Indian researchers in the area of material sciences is another aspect of the mature S&T relationship. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the developments under “Committee on India-Japan ICT (Information and Communication Technology) Strategy for Economic Growth”, including joint researches in the fields of mobile broadcasting and e-learning systems. They shared the view that they will further enhance business tie-ups, explore opportunities for Japanese industries in electronics system design and manufacturing in India, collaborative R&D activities and policy cooperation in the field of ICT including smart network and digital contents, through close bilateral cooperation.

21. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the expansion of India-Japan collaboration for the development of the Indian Institute of Technology, Hyderabad (IIT-H) including campus development, and the steady progress in the establishment of the Indian Institute of Information Technology, Design and Manufacturing Jabalpur (IIITDM-J) with Japan’s support. The two Prime Ministers appreciated the progress of the Visionary Leaders for Manufacturing (VLFM) Programme and acknowledged that the programme not only helps India’s manufacturing sector but has become a showcase of bilateral cooperation between the two countries. They welcomed the extension of the programme till March 2013. The two Prime Ministers noted with satisfaction that since 2007, approximately 2,300 Indian youth have visited Japan through “Japan-East Asia Network of Exchange for Students and Youth” (JENESYS) programme, and expressed their resolve to continue efforts to facilitate people-to-people exchanges between the two countries.
22. The two Prime Ministers expressed their expectation that the strengthening of cooperation in creative industries, which range from design, apparel, fashion, food, house-hold goods, music, movies, animation and manga, and traditional craft, would further promote and deepen mutual understanding of the two countries.

23. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their support for the East Asia Summit (EAS) as a forum for dialogue on broad strategic, political and economic issues of common interest and concern with the aim of promoting peace, stability and economic prosperity in East Asia. They acknowledged the significant role the EAS can play as a forum for building an open, inclusive and transparent architecture of regional cooperation in the Asia-Pacific region. They welcomed the participation of the United States of America and the Russian Federation in the EAS. They expressed support for the EAS as a Leaders-led forum with ASEAN as the driving force. In the context of the Declaration of the East Asia Summit on the Principles for Mutually Beneficial Relations and the Declaration on ASEAN Connectivity adopted at the 6th EAS, the two Prime Ministers reiterated their commitment to the promotion of the Comprehensive Economic Partnership in East Asia (CEPEA) as a step towards attaining economic integration in East Asia. They also welcomed the progress to establish ASEAN Plus Working Groups and decided to cooperate in the Groups. They also expressed their support for ASEAN Connectivity and considered the possibility of having a “Connectivity Master Plan Plus” which would develop further linkages between ASEAN and its partners, with appropriate reference to the “Comprehensive Asia Development Plan”, and welcomed support and inputs from Economic Research Institute of ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA) for attaining economic integration in East Asia. They noted with satisfaction that CEPA between India and Japan is an important step for regional integration.

24. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the commitment of India and Japan, as two maritime nations in Asia, to the universally-agreed principles of international law, including the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) and other relevant international maritime law. They affirmed expansion of cooperation in maritime security including safety and freedom of navigation and anti-piracy activities, by promoting bilateral and multilateral exercises, and through information sharing, as well as dialogues. In this context, they also welcomed the joint exercise between the Indian Coast Guard and the Japan Coast Guard to be held in January 2012.

25. The two Prime Ministers appreciated the progress made with regard to the establishment of the Nalanda University and reiterated their support to its revival as an icon of Asian renaissance and as an international institute of excellence. India welcomed Japan’s intention to provide tangible contribution
26. The two Prime Ministers noted with satisfaction that three rounds of India-Japan Dialogue on Africa have been concluded. They expressed satisfaction that areas of cooperation on Africa have been identified including peace keeping operations and economic development.

27. The two Prime Ministers expressed their commitment to continuing their assistance to Afghanistan so that it would become a stable, democratic and pluralistic state, free from terrorism and extremism. They emphasised the importance of a coherent and united international commitment to Afghan-led initiatives, in order to make transition irreversible through reconciliation and re-integration, sustainable development and regional cooperation, while adhering to the principles expressed in the Bonn Conference. In this context, Prime Minister Singh welcomed Japan’s intention to host a ministerial conference in Tokyo in July 2012. The two Prime Ministers pledged to explore opportunities for consultation on their respective assistance projects, including those projects implemented in the neighbouring countries, that advance Afghanistan’s mid- and long-term development and build its civilian capacity.

28. The two Prime Ministers condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, committed by whomever, wherever and for whatever purpose. Prime Minister Noda strongly condemned the terrorist attacks in Mumbai on 13 July 2011 and in Delhi on 7 September 2011. They resolved to develop greater cooperation in combating terrorism through sharing information and utilising the India-Japan Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism, as well as cooperation in multilateral forums such as the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) and the Global Counter-Terrorism Forum (GCTF). Reaffirming the importance of counter-terrorism cooperation at the United Nations, the two Prime Ministers recognised the urgent need to finalise and adopt the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism in the United Nations and called upon all States to cooperate in resolving the outstanding issues expeditiously.

29. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their shared commitment to the total elimination of nuclear weapons. Prime Minister Noda stressed the importance of bringing into force the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) at an early date. Prime Minister Singh reiterated India’s commitment to a unilateral and voluntary moratorium on nuclear explosive testing. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their commitment to working together for immediate commencement and an early conclusion of negotiations on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty (FMCT) in the Conference on Disarmament, bearing in mind the United Nations
General Assembly resolution on “Treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices” (A/RES/66/44). They decided that both countries would enhance cooperation in nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation through dialogues, including at bilateral nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation meetings as well as at the Conference on Disarmament. They reiterated that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are mutually reinforcing processes. They called upon the need to address the challenges of nuclear terrorism and clandestine proliferation. They also reaffirmed the importance of working together towards the success of the Seoul Nuclear Security Summit in March 2012.

30. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the outcome of the 17th Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change in Durban in December 2011 and stressed the need for maintaining close cooperation to ensure a mutually acceptable outcome of the Durban Platform for Enhanced Action. Prime Minister Noda emphasised the importance of global efforts toward low-carbon growth and climate resilient world, referring to Japan’s vision and actions to that end. In this context, the two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the need to strengthen bilateral and regional cooperation to promote sustainable development, including actions for GHG emissions reductions, promotion of low-carbon technologies, products and services, etc. Prime Minister Singh noted the East Asia Low Carbon Growth Partnership Initiative proposed by Prime Minister Noda at the East Asia Summit. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed that the two countries cooperate with each other for a successful outcome of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20) in 2012. The two Prime Ministers expressed their hope for the success of the 11th Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD-COP11) to be held in Hyderabad, India in 2012.

31. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their resolve to realise reform of the United Nations Security Council, including its expansion in both permanent and non-permanent categories. They concurred in participating actively on this basis in the intergovernmental negotiations in the UN General Assembly and decided to redouble their efforts, so as to make the Security Council more representative, legitimate, effective, and responsive to the realities of the international community in the 21st century.

32. The two Prime Ministers expressed their resolve to continue to maintain and strengthen multilateral trading system, based on the outcome of the 8th WTO Ministerial Conference held in Geneva this month.

33. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the role of the G-20 as the premier forum for international economic cooperation that offers opportunities for developed and emerging countries to have discussions and promote cooperation. Considering various risks that the world economy is facing today, they reiterated their commitment to ensure effective implementation of the G-20 Cannes Summit decisions including the Cannes Action Plan, which aims to achieve the Strong, Sustainable and Balanced Growth. They expressed concern over the slowing of global economic growth and tensions in the financial markets due to sovereign risks in Europe. They shared an expectation that the decisions of the European Council of 9 December 2011 towards stabilisation of the financial markets and strengthening of economic policy coordination and governance would be implemented effectively and in a timely manner through coordinated efforts by the European leaders. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed their commitment made at G-20 Cannes Summit on anti-protectionism.

34. The two Prime Ministers expressed their determination to promote their cooperative efforts in the remaining period for attaining the Millennium Development Goals and even beyond 2015, focusing on individuals and human welfare.

35. Prime Minister Noda expressed his appreciation for the warm welcome and hospitality of Prime Minister Singh and the Government of India. Prime Minister Noda extended an invitation to Prime Minister Singh for the next Annual Bilateral Summit in Japan in 2012 at a mutually convenient date to be decided through diplomatic channels. Prime Minister Singh accepted the invitation with pleasure.

Prime Minister of the Republic of India

Mr. Yoshihiko Noda
Prime Minister of Japan KOREA, REPUBLIC OF

New Delhi, January 20, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry, speaking at the India-Korea Business forum along with Mr. Kim Jong-Hoon, Minister for Trade, Republic of Korea here today said that the signing of CEPA with Republic of Korea in August 2009 underscored our strong commitment to deepening trade and investment linkages between our two countries. He further stated that it has now been a year since the agreement has come into force and in 2010 the bilateral trade between our two countries stood at nearly US $ 15 billion, witnessing a growth of nearly 44% over the previous year. Though in a recessionary backdrop the trade between our two countries has grown five fold in the last 8 years. Shri Sharma also informed that: “I am confident that as exporters on both sides develop a better understanding of the advantages presented by this agreement through a liberal tariff regime, we should easily be in a position to achieve the trade target of US$ 30 billion by 2014. The services economy will, particularly benefit from a liberalized regime on both sides and will form an important building block for augmenting the bilateral trade between our two countries. We view the agreement with the Republic of Korea to serve as an economic bridge between South Asia and the larger East Asian economy, paving the way for a larger regional economic integration across the continent of Asia”. The Forum was attended by senior officials from both the countries and representatives from trade and apex chambers.

Shri Sharma said that in the next decade, India is set to absorb investment of over US $ 1.7 trillion in infrastructure alone. He informed that the Korean Steel Major POSCO Project in the State of Orissa will not only produce 12 million tonnes of steel, bringing in an investment of over US $ 12 billion, but would also create nearly 50,000 direct and indirect jobs. It will also have considerable spin off for large scale mineral development, infrastructure development through captive port, road hubs, downstream activities in automobile and construction, he added.

During the interaction, Shri Sharma mentioned that over the last three years, India has received FDI in excess of US $ 100 billion and we expect that in the next five years we should be receiving FDI equity inflows in excess of US $ 250 billion. “I would like to particularly mention that Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor (DMIC) project represents a whole range of opportunity for establishing new urban townships, investment regions, logistic hubs in an economically vibrant part of India. We welcome Korean business community to join hands with us in our endeavour to develop this Corridor”. Shri Sharma also said that we are in the process of establishing large investment regions - National Manufacturing Investment Zones to attract investments in the entire gamut of manufacturing industry. “We invite Korean investments in these investment regions for the development of these regions and also for establishment of manufacturing bases”, he added.

In the automobile sector, India is fast emerging as a global design hub for small auto manufacture. Korean auto major like Hyundai have gained considerable popularity in the Indian market. Working together, Indian and Korean companies can develop a model which reaches out to the larger markets in East Asian region. Hyundai Automobiles through its plant in Chennai has expanded operations in the last decade and today is producing 600,000 units a year.

While concluding his address at the Forum, Shri Sharma noted that Asia decisively will have a pivotal role to play in the emerging order and there is no doubt in my mind that partnership between India and Korea will be one of the defining themes of this trend. “Our relationship with South Korea forms the corner stone of India’s ‘Look East policy’ which has defined our engagement with the larger East Asian region”, he further added.

379. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry on India – Korea Ministerial joint Committee discussion on Bilateral Trade, Economic Cooperation and Progress in Doha Round.

New Delhi, January 20, 2011.

The first meeting of the Joint Committee at the Ministerial Level ("Ministerial Joint Committee") to review the implementation of the India-Korea CEPA was held here today. Mr. KIM Jong-Hoon, Minister for Trade and Shri Anand Sharma, Minister of Commerce and Industry, had extensive discussion on bilateral trade and economic relations, trade policy and progress in the Doha Round of WTO talks. The Korean minister led a high-level delegation comprises business, professionals and government officials. The Ministers reviewed the progress in trade between the two countries since the entry into force of the CEPA from January 1, 2010 and expressed satisfaction that as per the trade statistics bilateral trade had increased by approximately 40% during the first year. They expressed hope that bilateral investment would also increase further as a result of the CEPA. A Joint Committee at the Joint Secretary level for India and Director General level for Korea as envisaged under the CEPA was formally established to assist the Ministerial Joint Committee in ensuring the effective operation and implementation of the Agreement. The Ministers took note of the difficulties faced by the business communities of both countries relating to visa procedures and hoped that the current negotiation on simplification of visa procedures would soon be concluded. The Ministers also expressed hope that, after completion of necessary formalities, the Social Security Agreement, which was signed in October 2010, would come into force in the near future that would help both Indian and Korean professionals working in each other’s country. The Ministers shared the view that both countries should work further to encourage mutual investment. The two sides identified measures to be taken for enhancing Korea’s investment in India. The Ministers also welcomed the fact that the two countries agreed, in principle, to conclude an agreement on co-production of broadcasting programmes and to expedite the necessary procedures in signing and bringing it into force as early as possible. They expressed hope that the agreement would enhance bilateral cooperation in the audio-visual sector. The Ministers shared the view that a strong multilateral trading system is vital for ensuring future growth in the world economy and committed themselves to continue their cooperation to achieve an ambitious, balanced and comprehensive conclusion of the Doha Development Round as early as possible. It was decided that the next Ministerial Joint Committee meeting would be convened in Seoul in 2012.
380. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson & Joint Secretary (East Asia) on President Shrimati Pratibha Devi Singh Patil’s State visits to Republic of Korea and Mongolia.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. My colleague Joint Secretary (East Asia) Mr. Gautam Bambawale and I would like to brief you on the forthcoming state visits of Rashtrapatiji first to the Republic of Korea and next to Mongolia from the 24th to 30th July, at the invitation of her counterparts.

Let me give you an idea of the delegation and the broad programme. She would be accompanied by Minister of State for Tribal Affairs Mr. Mahadeo Singh Khandela; parliamentarians including Mr. Manikrao Gavit from Lok Sabha; Ms. Sushila Tiria; and Shri Lepcha from the Rajya Sabha, besides a number of senior officials including Secretary to the President, Secretary (East) MEA, Joint Secretary (East Asia) Mr. Gautam Bambawale and others. She would also be accompanied by a large business delegation to both the countries.

Rashtrapatiji leaves on Sunday the 24th for Seoul. On Monday the 25th there would be a ceremonial welcome by the President of South Korea followed by delegation-level talks, signing of agreements, meeting the press. She next goes to pay floral tributes at Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore’s statue. On the occasion of the 150th birth anniversary of Gurudev, as a very special gesture and with the encouragement of President Lee a bust of Gurudev was installed in Seoul and was unveiled by Hon. Speaker Shrimati Meira Kumar when she was in Seoul in May this year.

In the evening, a banquet would be hosted in her honour by the President of South Korea and the First Lady. On 26th she would be visiting Samsung company. Next, there will be a business meeting, there will be a meeting with the Speaker of the National Assembly, and in the evening a reception by the Ambassador. On Wednesday the 27th, the Foreign Minister would be paying a courtesy call on her where after she leaves for Ulaanbaatar.

On Thursday the 28th there is the ceremonial welcome and thereafter there would be delegation-level talks, signing of agreements. Next she would pay homage at the statue of Mahatma Gandhi. There will be calls on her by senior leaders and dignitaries of Mongolia including a representative of Mongolian women parliamentarians.

On July 29, there will be a call on her by the Chairman of Parliament which would be followed by the India-Mongolia Business Forum. Next she would witness the national festival called Nadam, where a cultural show would be put up in her honour. She would be visiting a couple of prominent monasteries. And on Saturday the 30th she would head back for New Delhi.

First, Republic of Korea. As you know, we have excellent relations with South Korea. You would recall the landmark visit of President Lee in January 2010 when he was also the Chief Guest at the Republic Day celebrations. During the visit it was decided to upgrade our Long-term Cooperative Partnership for Peace and Security, which was established in October 2004, to a Strategic Partnership. We see our strategic partnership with South Korea as a factor of peace, development and stability in Asia. Robust relations with ROK are not only a foreign policy priority, but one of the key objectives of our Look East policy that was unveiled in 1992.

Soon thereafter the first ever visit by the Indian Prime Minister then Shri Narasimha Rao was paid to South Korea in 1993, which paved the way for building an edifice of cooperative partnership. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited Seoul in November last year for the G20 Summit. One of the very effective mechanisms for imparting greater momentum to our ties, that have grown exponentially, is the India-ROK Joint Commission which was established in 1996. And the sixth meeting of the Joint Commission co-chaired by EAM and the Foreign Minister of South Korea – was held in Seoul in June 2010.

On the economic side we have the Joint Trade Committee and the Joint Investment Committee which is headed by the Finance Ministers of both countries and which aims at imparting direction and stimulus, to our economic and trade ties that constitute the bedrock of the relationship. The last meeting of the two Committees was held in January 2011, this year, in New Delhi.

While we have witnessed a steady strengthening of political partnership, this has also created an even more enabling environment, for expanding our trade and economic partnership. I would like to note that the corporate sectors, both in India and South Korea were the first to see the potential and they have gone about harnessing it in a systematic fashion.

It is indeed satisfying to note that our bilateral trade grew more than 40 per cent in 2010 consequent to the operationalisation of the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) with effect from 1st of January 2010, and the trade touched 21 billion dollars. It is well on course to attain the 30 billion dollar mark by 2014 which was agreed to during the visit of the President of ROK. Now India has already become the seventh largest export destination for the Republic of Korea.

The country is also amongst our ten largest investors and over 300 South Korean companies including the corporate giants like Hyundai, Daewoo, LG, Samsung, etc., are present in India and providing employment to something like 40,000 Indian workers. We welcome greater investments in India from South Korea. At the same time Indian investments to South Korea have been keeping pace with sizeable investments having been made in recent years by companies like Tata Motors, Hindalco Industries and Mahindra Group.

In addition to trade and economic relations there are a number of areas like IT and knowledge-based industries, science and technology, energy, defence, space and culture amongst others where we are working closely, and I would like to say effectively. CEPA also covers services, which is opening up new avenues, especially for IT and pharmaceuticals companies. All the Indian IT majors are present in South Korea.

It is also heartening that simultaneously our cultural contacts are blossoming and keeping pace with the overall development in the relationship. We are currently celebrating the year of India in the Republic of Korea which would be reciprocated next year by ROK. An Indian Cultural Centre was established in Seoul in June this year. We are also told that a South Korean Cultural Centre would be opening up in Delhi in the coming months.

I have already spoken about the remarkable gesture of South Korea to have the bust of Gurudev installed in Seoul. Also, Buddhism is a vital link, a common link, a bond not only between India and the Republic of Korea, but also the region including especially Mongolia.

Let me then turn to Mongolia where Rashtrapatiji would be paying a state visit from 27th to the 30th of this month. India and Mongolia are two ancient civilizations which have interacted with each other since antiquity especially through the vehicle of Buddhism. Mongolians have great affection for India and see India as their spiritual home. Every year hundreds of Buddhist monks travel to India for pilgrimage and for studying Buddhist theology.

The advent of democracy in Mongolia in the early 1990s added another vital bond between our countries and soon thereafter a Treaty of Friendly Relations and Cooperation was concluded in 1994 between our countries laying a firmer foundation for bilateral relations with democratic Mongolia. And it is not fortuitous that President Elbegdorj chose India for his very first overseas visit soon after being elected the President of the country in September 2009. During his visit it was decided to elevate our bilateral relationship to Comprehensive Partnership.

President Patil is paying a return visit and this is happening after a gap of 23 years. So, in a way this is the first visit of the Indian President to democratic Mongolia and it assumes added significance because it is not only a recognition of the important ties that we have, the historical ties that we have, but also signals a mutual desire to expand our bilateral relationship, to new areas including human resource development, capacity-building, education, agriculture, defence, energy, mineral resources and so on. In fact, several Mongolian students who have studied in India have risen to high positions to become Ministers, Governors, and Parliamentarians in Mongolia.

We also have a close identity of views on regional and international issues. Mongolia fully supports our candidature for the permanent membership in an expanded UN Security Council.

The India-Mongolian Joint Committee on Cooperation is now the principal mechanism to regularly review the entire gamut of bilateral relationship. The third meeting of the Committee co-chaired by our Minister of State and their Foreign Minister was held in Mongolia in May this year.

To conclude, I would like to say that a number of important agreements are likely to be signed both at Seoul and at Ulaanbaatar during the visit of the President. Her visit to two of our key partners in East Asia is rather significant and would serve to renew and strengthen our broad-based relations with both the countries.

My colleague and I will be happy to take your questions.

Question: Can you tell us the nature of the agreements that are going to be signed?

Joint Secretary (East Asia) (Shri Gautam Bambawale): I am not as diplomatic as JS(XP). My answer is no. I am sorry I cannot tell you right now. Let it emanate out of Seoul and Ulan Bator. We will brief the travelling media as we go along. So, the outcomes of the visit we will let you know once the discussions with the two countries, the Presidents, the leaders of the two countries have taken place.

Question: What is the status of the proposed nuclear agreement between India and South Korea?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me say that we have had a few rounds of discussions and negotiations. Let us see how it proceeds during the visit. Let us see what happens during this visit.

Question: Likely to be signed?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): I cannot say that right now. I do not know. Let us find out.

Question: Will it be discussed during the visit?
Joint Secretary (East Asia): Yes, it is a topic which will definitely be discussed. I think both countries have an interest in discussing this subject and it will definitely come up for discussion between the two Presidents.

Question: Wanted to check on the progress of uranium exploration pact beside the civil nuclear pact we signed with Mongolia. Has any Indian company so far been awarded a joint venture?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Good question. You are absolutely right. An agreement to this effect on radioactive minerals was signed in September 2009 when the President of Mongolia President Elbegdorj visited India. There have been discussions between the atomic energy establishments of the two countries and we are now planning for a visit by the Chairperson of the Mongolian Atomic Energy Commission to India maybe sometime in August. So, that will progress the matter further. But at this point in time I do not think there are any Indian companies which are actively mining for this particular item in Mongolia.

Official Spokesperson: I would also just like to add here that cooperation in the energy sector is one of the important areas because Mongolia also has coking coal, coal and other minerals. So, this is something in which both sides are interested to cooperate.

Question: Has MEA been talking ...(Inaudible)...

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Let me just tell you that there is a fairly large delegation of business people accompanying the President, not on the flight but they will go separately, to Mongolia. The size of the delegation I believe – you can get the details from the Confederation of Indian Industry which is leading this effort – but I was quite pleasantly surprised by the size of the delegation. It numbers almost 30 and it includes a very senior representative of the Steel Authority of India Limited, which has made an offer to build a three million tonne steel plant in Mongolia.

Question: This is a question relating to Pakistan. The Pakistan Government has come out with the official release which says that Kashmir is still a disputed territory and there are many Resolutions to that effect.

Official Spokesperson: The status of Jammu and Kashmir is very clear. You know that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India.

Question: Adding to that previous question, following the FBI revelations of the ISI role in channeling funds to lobby for the Kashmir cause, is the Government of India planning to launch a formal protest with the Pakistani delegation next week, or is there any response expected as well?
Official Spokesperson: I have no comment on that except to say that the facts speak for themselves.

Question: Just a follow up on that. Is the Ministry of External Affairs going to write to UK for another Group that works on the Kashmir cause affiliated to Ghulam Fai?

Official Spokesperson: As I said, I would not like to comment on that. Suffice it to say that the facts speak for themselves.

I think you have run out of questions. Thank you very much.

July 24, 2011.

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

I warmly welcome you on-board, as I begin my State Visits to the Republic of Korea and Mongolia, which are two important partners of India in North East Asia. These countries are key pillars of our Look East Policy, as well as of our growing integration with the Asia - Pacific region. We are linked to both these countries by bonds of culture and civilization. Buddhism spread from India to both these countries many centuries ago. Today, we also share several core values with them. All three countries are democracies, where periodic and fair elections are held, there is adherence to the rule of law, as well as respect for individual freedoms.

Presidents of both these important countries visited India in the last two years, and my visit is a part of the process of high level engagement with these friendly countries. It takes place in a year that is being celebrated as the Year of India in Korea and the Year of Korea in India. Also, this year, Mongolia is observing many important anniversaries of its history.

My first stop will be in Seoul. It would be recalled that President Lee Myung-Bak of the Republic of Korea, was the Chief Guest for our Republic Day celebrations in January 2010. During his visit, India and the Republic of Korea elevated bilateral ties to the level of a Strategic Partnership. My objective will be to accelerate the momentum of our relations.
I look forward to holding discussions with President Lee, both in restricted and delegation-level formats. We will cover the entire gamut of bilateral relations as well as regional and global issues. I will also be meeting Speaker Park of the National Assembly of the Republic of Korea.

Economics is the foundation of the India-Korea relationship. We implemented a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement from January 2010. The results have been encouraging. Two-way trade rose by approximately 40 percent in 2010, and is growing equally fast this year. As per projections, it will reach 21 billion US Dollars in 2011. Korean companies such as LG, Samsung and Hyundai are household names in India. They have done extremely well in our domestic market, and are now using India as a manufacturing base for exports to third countries. We look forward to receiving more Korean investment in our country. Similarly, Indian firms are also investing in Korea.

An Indian business delegation will be in Seoul and Ulaanbaatar during my visit, to explore trade and investment opportunities.

My visit to Mongolia, the first by a President of India in 23 years, aims at signaling the importance we attach to this bilateral relationship, and to further expand and strengthen our ties. We were pleased that after his election, President Elbegdorj made India, the destination of his first foreign visit in September 2009. Our relations were, during that visit, elevated to a Comprehensive Partnership.

In Mongolia, I will hold deliberations with President Elbegdorj on all issues of importance to both countries. I also look forward to meeting Prime Minister Batbold. I will be interacting with Parliamentarians of the State Great Hural, including women politicians.

You may be aware that India has established the Rajiv Gandhi Art and Production School for vocational education in Ulaanbaatar. Similarly, there is the A.B. Vajpayee Centre of Excellence in Information and Communication Technology. India has been, and is committed to, assisting Mongolia in capacity building and human resource development.

It is important to promote people-to-people exchanges with both the Republic of Korea and Mongolia. One of the ways of doing so is by increasing the number of direct flights between our countries. I look forward to discussing this subject with President Lee in Seoul and President Elbegdorj in Ulaanbaatar.

I am confident that my State Visits to the Republic of Korea and Mongolia will further enhance the close partnership that exists between India and these countries.

Thank you.
Briefing by Secretary (East) Sanjay Singh on President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil’s engagements in Republic of Korea.

Seoul, July 25, 2011.

Lady Officer: Good afternoon friends. We have with us today Secretary (East) Mr. Sanjay Singh; Ambassador of India to ROK Mr. Ranjan Tayal; Joint Secretary (East Asia) Mr. Gautam Bambawale. Today was the President's first day of official engagements in ROK. It was a very important day. Secretary (East) will brief you about today’s events.

Secretary (East) (Shri Sanjay Singh): Good afternoon everybody.

The Presidents of India and of the Republic of Korea have just concluded a very productive round of official talks which were held in a cordial, friendly and constructive atmosphere. There was a restricted meeting for approximately twenty minutes followed by delegation-level talks for over an hour. This reflects the Strategic Partnership which exists between India and the Republic of Korea.

Hon. President warmly recalled the state visit of President Lee to India last January as Chief Guest at our Republic Day celebrations. She stated that her own visit aims at accelerating the momentum of our bilateral relations, with which the Hon. Korean President agreed. He recalled the warm welcome he had received in India which had resulted in the upgradation of the relation to a Strategic Partnership. He said that the present visit will provide momentum to help elevate our strategic partnership which is multifaceted.

Friends, India and Republic of Korea have shared values of democracy, rule of law and respect for human values, which provide a very firm foundation for our partnership. The two Presidents discussed ways to add substance and content to our bilateral relations. The two countries have just concluded and signed a bilateral Agreement on Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy.

They also discussed the possibilities of cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space. India looks forward to once again launching Korean satellites on Indian rockets. Hon. President conveyed to President of the Republic of Korea that our facilities are of high quality and are available at competitive prices.

The two Presidents also discussed the expansion of defence cooperation between our countries. We look forward to welcoming the Defence Minister of the Republic of Korea in India later this year. India will soon open a Defence Attaché’s office at our Embassy in Seoul. This will provide a fillip to our defence ties. Increased naval and Coast Guard cooperation was a possibility that was touched upon in the discussion, especially in the context of the threats posed to shipping in the Indian Ocean.
The economic cooperation provides the ballast for our relationship. Both Presidents expressed their satisfaction at the increase in bilateral trade which has resulted from the implementation of the India-Korea Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement. Hon. President conveyed that India is willing to work with the Republic of Korea to further upgrade this Agreement, which is the sentiment expressed by the President of the Republic of Korea also.

Hon. President also pointed out that Indian pharmaceuticals and IT services are of a high quality and requested the Government of Republic of Korea to provide greater access for these products in the Korean market. The President of the Republic of Korea said that they would take necessary action.

Hon. President also conveyed to President of the Republic of Korea that the investment environment in India facilitates foreign investment in the country, and invited more Korean companies to invest in India and make it their base for manufacturing operations including for export to third countries. The Korean President welcomed this and also noted what Rashtrapati had said about the presence of blue chip Indian companies in Korea.

Both Presidents were unanimous that it is extremely important to encourage greater people-to-people exchanges. In this connection it is important to have more direct flights between our countries, and we have to revisit the civil aviation agreement so as to grant each other’s carriers fifth freedom rights. Both Presidents agreed to direct their civil aviation authorities to look into this.

The Korean President expressed satisfaction that movement of people between the two countries had increased considerably and today apparently a 100,000 Koreans are visiting India every year, and about 50,000 Indians are visiting Korea every year. This could increase. We can check the figures in due course.

President also thanked the President of the Republic of Korea and through him the people of Seoul for having done India the great honour of installing a bust of our Poet Laureate Rabindranath Tagore at a public location in the city. Earlier today she visited the site, I believe a lot of you were present there, and this is a very busy thoroughfare we were told where the university students, especially younger generations of Koreans are present. I for myself found this a very important, a very fitting memorial for the Great Poet.

As you know, the Festival of India was inaugurated in Korea on the 1st of July this year and it is ongoing. The Festival of Korea in India began sometime in end of March in Delhi and that has been going around India. We have just inaugurated a cultural centre in the city, and the Koreans also are likely to put up a cultural centre in New Delhi.
The Korean President specially remarked about there being more than just an economic relationship between the countries; he said that our two countries are linked in a spiritual context, that we have certain common civilisational and cultural ties. He also said that he had followed India's proposal for the revival of the Nalanda University. As you know, Korea is a part of the East Asia Summit Process. It is also our partner in ARF and ADMM Plus, and we deal with it in that context, in the context in which we have sought support for the Nalanda University.

The Presidents also discussed regional and international issues. In particular they agreed to enhance cooperation and coordination in the East Asia Summit Process as also on issues pertaining to the Asia Pacific. They also examined ways of working together in other international fora. The President of Korea is likely to meet PM at various international events which are likely to come up in the near future, and he conveyed his best wishes to him.

Two other agreements were signed today in the presence of the two Presidents and these include an MoU on media exchanges which will help strengthen ties in the field of media. It envisages exchange of delegations. We also have an important agreement on administrative arrangement to implement the India-ROK social security agreement, which will help our professionals who come here to work.

That ends as far as I have to say and I will leave the floor to JS (EA) and our Ambassador, if there is anything else they would like to add.

Joint Secretary (East Asia) (Shri Gautam Bambawale): Nothing to add really. I think you have covered it all.

Question: On the nuclear agreement, is there any clause on the ENR?

Secretary (East): I am not at liberty to discuss the agreement in details. I think Chairman, AEC is here in our delegation. I do not want to second guess him. So, please let him brief you.

Question: But surely the text would be made public once the agreement is signed. Normally it is put on the website or something like that.

Secretary (East): Is that a fact?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): Some of the agreements have been made public, not all. It is up to the Department of Atomic Energy.

Question: Could you just tell us who were the Indians who took part in the proceedings were?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): We have a list of the agreements signed and the signatories on both sides, which are with XP Division and I think we are going to circulate it to you.
Question: But were they the same terms which were finalized at Hanoi which have been signed now or there was a further movement between Hanoi and now? In Hanoi some announcement was made that in principle we agreed and only the signing and the formality remains. So, was there a lot of ground which had to covered?

Secretary (East): As there had been a change in incumbency, I would not like to comment on that as to what happened in Hanoi and what is happening today.

Joint Secretary (East Asia): But I think I can add that this is a civil nuclear agreement between India and the ROK, like other civil nuclear agreements between India and other countries which have been signed. So, we look forward to the ROK now becoming one more partner in the development of civil nuclear energy in India.

Question: What generally would be the mandate of that partnership?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): I do not understand your question.

Question: What is the area covered? What is the ground covered?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): The ground is civil nuclear energy.

Question: It is a very wide spectrum with everything under it.

Joint Secretary (East Asia): What is a very wide spectrum?

Question: When you say civil nuclear ....

Joint Secretary (East Asia): It is for civil nuclear energy production in India.

Question: Okay, is it specifically to reactors?

Joint Secretary (East Asia): It is like any other civil nuclear agreement signed with any other country.

Question: Mr. Bambawale, you know that civil nuclear liability Bill and various other issues including nuclear liability Bill especially, issues have been raised by the US and various other countries even after signing similar pacts.

Secretary (East): I think we will confine this to the discussions held between the two Hon. Presidents. We will not stray on to something which is very interesting but outside the ambit of our talks today.

Question: I happened to read one report filed by a local agency here after the agreement was signed between the two Presidents which says that this agreement will help Korean companies, and it named one state-run company,
I do not recollect the name right now. It said that it will help that company in taking part in the nuclear reactor construction space in India. The report seemed to give an impression that it is only help Korean companies who have some sort of play in the Indian civil nuclear space. What do we have in it? Do we also sort of stand to gain something out of this agreement that is signed today?

Secretary (East): As you know, our major requirements in India are infrastructural in nature. Energy is a very important aspect of it. As part of our growth story, we need increasing amounts of energy of which there is a mix of hydrocarbon-based, coal-based, nuclear, renewable, etc. And anything that helps in increasing energy production and Government of India's energy policies, our production of electricity is that on Ministry of Power's plans and this envisages a very prominent role for nuclear energy which is also very clean. And, therefore, anything which helps increase energy production in India is to be welcomed. I would not say it is a one way process. We hope and we think that it will be a win-win process in which both sides will have mutually advantageous benefits from this process.

Thank you.

384. Speech of President Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Banquet hosted in her honour by the President of the Republic of Korea Lee Myung – Bak.

Seoul, July 25, 2011.

Your Excellency President Lee,

Madam Kim,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to be with all of you this evening in your beautiful capital city of Seoul.

The people of my country fondly recall Your Excellency’s successful landmark visit to India last year, as Chief Guest at our Republic Day celebrations. My own State Visit to the Republic of Korea aims at accelerating the momentum of our bilateral relations.

Ties of history and culture between India and Korea provide a very good foundation for our efforts. Many of us in India know of the legendary Princess from Ayodhya, who traveled to Korea to marry King Kim Suro. Buddhism provides an enduring link between our societies. More recently, the visits to Korea of India’s Poet Laureate Rabindranath Tagore and his description of Korea as the ‘Lamp of the East’ are an abiding bond between us. Let me thank President Lee, his Government as well as the city authorities of Seoul, for permitting the installation of a bust of Gurudev Tagore, at a public location in the city, where I paid homage this morning. We thank you for the honor you have done to India, with this gesture.

Our countries share values including democracy, rule of law and respect for human rights, which make it easy for us to work together, and cooperate in almost all areas of human endeavor.

In contemporary times, Korean industry has become legendary, and coupled with India’s dynamically growing market, we have new economic opportunities which did not exist earlier. That we are making full use of such openings, can be seen from the fact that our bilateral trade grew 40 percent in 2010, and is continuing to show a similar trajectory this year too. Korean companies have become household names in India, and some of our best business houses are also investing in your country. We will work towards maintaining and enhancing these trends.

The conclusion earlier today of a bilateral Agreement on Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, exhibits the strategic direction our partnership is taking. We are confident that our nations can also cooperate in areas such as defence and the peaceful uses of outer space.

The Year of India in Korea and a similar Year of Korea in India, have got off to a good start. The reciprocal establishment of Cultural Centers in our capitals is another good decision aimed at expanding our people-to-people exchanges. We are also working to promote greater direct air links between us, so as to encourage more tourist flows.

We congratulate Korea on its successful hosting of the last G - 20 Summit, and for steering in this premier forum, discussions of international economic issues, in a direction which serves the interests of the international community. We are confident that similarly, Korea will successfully host the Nuclear Security Summit in March next year. India will participate in that meeting.

Excellency, India is an integral part of the emerging economic and security architecture in East Asia. We are both members of the East Asia Summit process. As we are two countries with similar values, we look forward to stepping up our discussions and have closer coordination on regional issues. Similarly, I am very sure that our cooperation in international institutions, including the United Nations is set to expand.

Therefore, Excellency, the prospects for our Strategic Partnership are very bright indeed. India looks forward to taking our ties to a higher level.

May I conclude by raising a toast:-

- to the good health of President Lee and Madam Kim
- to the continued progress of the friendly people of the Republic of Korea; and
- to expanding and closer cooperation between the Republic of India and the Republic of Korea.

385. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Business Interaction by Korean Business Chambers.

Seoul, July 26, 2011.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am very pleased to be with representatives of Korean and Indian industry here in Seoul today. I am aware that the Strategic Partnership between India and the Republic of Korea, has been driven to a large extent by the efforts of all of you gathered here.

To us, in India, the Korean economic miracle is inspiring. It was the hard work of the people of this country, coupled with the successful business model that was adopted, which has created the incredible economic success that the Republic of Korea today represents. I want to congratulate you for that.

In India too, you spotted the economic opportunities long before others, and this first-mover advantage has enabled Korean companies to reap great profits in our country. Hyundai, Samsung and LG are household names in India today.

The rapid growth of the Indian economy over the past few years, and the fact that we have been able to weather the storm of the global financial crisis reasonably well, is creating a huge market in India. Korean companies have adjusted extremely well to conditions in India. You are also making India the manufacturing hub for exports to third countries in South Asia, the Middle East and even Eastern Europe.

India attaches great importance to improving its infrastructure, for which about 1 trillion US Dollars will be required in the coming years. This provides a great investment opportunity for foreign companies, including those from Korea. In expanding and modernizing our roads, highways, airports, sea ports and railways, we will require investment from foreign entities and firms. We look forward to greater participation in this endeavour by Korean companies.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The objective of my State Visit to your beautiful country is to accelerate our bilateral relations. The Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA) implemented by us since January 2010 has yielded good results. Our bilateral trade rose by 40 percent last year, and by current projections is slated to reach 21 billion US Dollars during the current calendar year, and would comfortably reach the level of 30 billion US Dollars by 2014, the target we have set for ourselves. President Lee and I discussed the possibility of further upgrading our CEPA. Expert level discussions will commence from late-September this year.

Several representatives of the Indian industry have travelled to Seoul to be present here, during my visit and are participating in today's function. I urge them to fully utilize CEPA to expand exports to the Republic of Korea. Our IT companies are some of the best in the world, and will be able to help Korean businesses in reducing costs and enhancing competitiveness. Similarly, Indian pharmaceuticals are of high quality coupled with low prices, and will be beneficial to Korean consumers.

I am very happy to see that Indian companies are willingly participating in the further growth and development of the Korean economy. There have been substantial investments by the the TATA Group, the Mahindra Group and Hindalco Industries here in Korea. These are all blue chip firms from India, and I can assure you, that they will make positive contributions in the further growth of your country.

An India-Korea Agreement for Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy was also signed yesterday. The Indian civil nuclear energy market is now open for Korean companies providing a new sector for our bilateral economic cooperation.

In my discussions with President Lee, I informed him of India’s capabilities in the peaceful uses of outer space, and urged greater cooperation between our countries in this sphere. We look forward to the day when Korean satellites can once again be launched by Indian rockets. The Governments of India and RoK have also established a Joint Science and Technology Fund amounting to 10 million US Dollars for joint research between our scientists, in areas such as Information Technology, Biotechnology, energy-efficient technologies and nanotechnology. I am confident that their joint efforts will result in new products for both Korean and Indian industry.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We need more direct flights between our countries. This is an aspect that we need to look at in all seriousness, if we are to expand trade and enhance people-to-people exchanges. Indian carriers have been requesting Korea for 5th Freedom Rights to enable them to fly to points beyond Incheon. President Lee and I have agreed, that our civil aviation authorities will meet soon to discuss this possibility.

I am happy that an Indian Chamber of Commerce in Korea was launched last year, which brings companies from both our countries together. I believe there is much that we can learn from each other and do together.

Ladies and Gentlemen, as you can see, there is tremendous potential to expand the India-RoK bilateral partnership. I urge you to fully utilize the opportunity of meeting today, to impart further momentum to business relations between our two countries.

I thank you for your attention.

I am delighted to have this opportunity to interact with the Indian community and with Korean Friends of India.

In all my visits abroad, I accord a special value to my interactions with the Indian community, and foreign friends and well-wishers of India. After all, relations between countries are built and nurtured by the people on both sides. The goodwill generated by the Indian Diaspora contributes profoundly to the relationship between India and the Republic of Korea. If our Tri-colour is flying high in Korea, a large part of the credit goes to you, and to your contribution to the land you have adopted as your karmabhoomi. Indians abroad numbering over 25 million across the world are law-abiding, hardworking, and enterprising. All of you in the Republic of Korea are no exception.

The Republic of Korea and India share not just historical ties, but cultural affinities underlined by age-old traditions and the philosophy of the Buddha. India was present here at the dawn of Korean independence, and in fact Indian representatives oversaw the first democratic elections in this country in 1948. Our Medical Unit and Field Ambulances offered medical care and succour, to both sides during the Korean War. There is natural empathy between our two countries, as both suffered the pain caused by colonialism. Our countries now share a Strategic Partnership and values of democracy, rule of law and respect for human dignity, which binds our two peoples together.

My own visit to the Republic of Korea is aimed at accelerating the momentum of our bilateral relations. All of you can also contribute to this goal. I urge you to give your best to strengthen Korea, and help expand the bilateral partnership.

You may be aware of the gracious gesture of the Government of the Republic of Korea, in providing a permanent place for a bust of India’s Poet Laureate Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore in the centre of Seoul. He had described Korea as the ‘Lamp of the East’, and all of you who live here are testimony to the accuracy of his prediction.

I understand that the Indian community in Korea is about seven thousand strong. This number may be relatively small, but you are making a perceptible contribution to various walks of life of this proud and thriving nation. Amongst you are successful businessmen, academics, scientists, students and researchers, as well as management and engineering professionals. As you would be aware, India and Korea have a Social Security Agreement which would protect the retirement benefits of professionals and others. The administrative arrangements to operationalise this important Agreement have been finalized during my visit. We wish that all of you flourish and at the same time make a contribution to Korea's cultural, economic and social milieu. It is important that whatever your line of work, you remain committed to the integrity, prosperity and well-being of this wonderful country and its people.

We, in India, are proud of all of you. With your energy, your dynamism, your entrepreneurship and your skills you have contributed much to the country of your birth as well as the country you have selected to live in.

The world is changing and India is changing too. In the last few years, our economy has begun to grow rapidly due to the efforts and creative energies of our people. This has raised India's profile among the comity of nations. Our Government is committed to remove poverty, hunger and disease. We want our growth process to be inclusive, so that all sections of our populace can have improved standards of living. I am sure that the Indian diaspora will contribute in these efforts. We have a full-fledged Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs for the benefit and welfare of the Indian Diaspora. Each year, we celebrate Pravasi Bharatiya Divas. I hope many of you are able to participate in such activities.

It is a matter of great joy for me to learn about the incredible individual Korean stories of affection for India, our culture, and our values. I recognize two such Korean citizens who are present here with us this evening.

First, Dr. Kim Yang Shik, the President of the Tagore Society, who was conferred the Padmashree award for her exceptional contribution, by translating Gurudev Tagore's works into Korean. The Indian Art Museum that she has established recently in Seoul, with her personal collection of artefacts from India selected over fifty years, can only be described as an amazing act of friendship and love towards India.

Dr. Thok-kyu Limb, the President of the India-Korea Society, you have been a pillar of the India-Korea partnership for more than twenty years. Your association with Indian leaders, over more than a generation, and your contribution through your writings, to promoting understanding and solidarity between our two countries evokes admiration for your efforts.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the strong and vibrant political and economic partnership between India and the Republic of Korea can only benefit from endeavours of people who forge ties of friendship.

Thank you for being with me here this evening, and thank you for your invaluable contribution to the India-Korea friendship.
I wish you, your families, and all our Korean friends, success, happiness and prosperity.
Thank you.
Jai Hind!

KOREA, D.P.R.

Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on humanitarian assistance provided to Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.

New Delhi, July 5, 2011.

India’s humanitarian food assistance to DPR Korea amounting to US $ 1 million has arrived in that country.

India’s Ambassador to DPR Korea Shri Pratap Singh traveled to the North Korean port of Nampo recently to witness the off-loading of 900 metric tons of soya beans and 373 tons of wheat, which has been made available by India, especially for women and children in DPRK, through the World Food Programme (WFP).

Ambassador Singh stated that he was “very happy to see the safe arrival of the food consignment which is needed so urgently here”.

WFP Country Director for DPRK Claudia von Roehl said that, “WFP is enormously grateful to the Government and people of India for this contribution which comes at a critical time for the people we are helping here in DPRK”.

The above assistance was provided to North Korea in response to the request by the Government of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. While handing over the assistance ceremonially on March 25 Minister of State E.Ahamed said: “Relations between India and Democratic People’s Republic of Korea have traditionally been cordial. We value our relationship with the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. India is integrating itself with East Asia and South East Asia and India takes active interest in developments in these regions. India is sensitive to the scarcity of food in Democratic People’s Republic of Korea and in this hour of need, the Government of India has decided to grant humanitarian food assistance of US$ 1 million which will provide for 1300 metric tonnes of pulses.

Since the United Nations World Food Programme has an ongoing programme for providing food assistance in the country, we are happy associate with the World Food Programme to reach the food assistance to the people of Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.”
388. Condolence message of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh on the demise of General Secretary Kim Jong II of the DPRK.

New Delhi, December 20, 2011.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh has condoled the passing away of General Secretary of the Worker’s Party, Chairman of the National Defence Commission and Supreme Commander of the Korean People’s Army of Democratic People’s Republic of Korea H.E. Kim Jong II. In his message PM conveyed his condolences to the family of the deceased leader, as well as, the people and government of DPRK, hoping that they will overcome their grief with courage and fortitude.

[Separately MOS Shri E. Ahamed signed the condolence book at the Embassy of DPRK in New Delhi today observing that “it is with a deep sense of sorrow that we have learnt about the sad demise of H.E Kim Jong Il.” He also conveyed assurances of India’s commitment to India DPRK relations.]

Kuala Lumpur, February 18, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry and Mr. Mustapa Mohamed, Minister for International Trade & Industry, Malaysia, signed the India-Malaysia Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA) in the presence of Malaysian Prime Minister, Mr. Mohd Najib Razak at Putrajaya in Kuala Lumpur today. The Agreement will come into effect on 1st July 2011 and the first review will be held within a year of coming into force.

The India-Malaysia CECA is a comprehensive and ambitious agreement that envisages liberal trade in goods and services and a stable and competitive investment regime to promote foreign investment between the two countries. The goods package under the CECA takes the tariff liberalization beyond the India-ASEAN FTA commitments on items of mutual interest for both the countries. Under the agreement, India will get market access in the Malaysian market for goods including fruits such as mangoes, banana and guava, basmati rice, two wheelers and cotton garments. At the same time, protection continues to be provided for the sensitive sectors. Under the services agreement, India and Malaysia have provided commercially meaningful commitments in sectors and modes of interest to each other which should result in enhanced services trade. Sectors such as accounting and auditing, architecture, urban planning, engineering services, medical and dental, IT & ITES, Management Consulting Services etc. would get Malaysian market access.

Malaysia has offered comparatively higher level of FDI in key sectors of interest to India such as construction services (51%), computer and related services (100%), management and consultancy services (100%). This is a breakthrough in investments, given that Malaysia has a Bhoomiputra policy which mandates 30% equity participation by local companies. Malaysia is the 3rd largest trading partner of India amongst the ASEAN (Association of South East Asian Nations) countries. India-Malaysia trade increased from US $ 3.52 billion to US $ 9.03 billion between 2005 and 2010 after reaching a peak of US $ 10.65 billion in 2008. Earlier, Shri Anand Sharma called on the Malaysian Prime Minister, Mr. Mohd Najib Tun Razak and of the steady growth in the bilateral economic engagement and the excellent relations between the two countries. Shri Sharma hoped that the bilateral trade target of US $ 15 billion by 2015 set during the

A Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on June 30 said that the CECA will come into effect on 1 July 2011. It said:

"India-Malaysia CECA is India’s fourth bilateral Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement, after Singapore, South Korea and Japan. The CECA envisages liberalisation of trade in goods, trade in services, investments and other areas of economic cooperation. Trade between India and Malaysia has reached US $ 10 billion in 2010-11, an increase of 26% from the previous year. It is expected that the implementation of this agreement will boost bilateral trade to US$15 billion by 2015.

The trade in goods package under India-Malaysia CECA takes the tariff liberalization beyond the India-ASEAN FTA commitments, which were implemented by both countries on 1 January 2010. Under India-Malaysia CECA, the items on which India has obtained market access from Malaysia include basmati rice, mangoes, eggs, trucks, motorcycles and cotton garments, which are all items of considerable export interest to India. At the same time, adequate protection has been provided by the Indian side for sensitive sectors such as agriculture, fisheries, textiles, chemicals, auto, etc. Under the services agreement of the CECA, India and Malaysia have provided commercially meaningful commitments in sectors and modes of interest to each other which should result in enhanced services trade. The CECA also facilitates the temporary movement of business people including contractual service suppliers, and independent professionals in commercially meaningful sectors including accounting and auditing, architecture, urban planning, engineering services, medical and dental, nursing and pharmacy, Computer and Related Services (CRS), and Management Consulting Services.

The India-Malaysia CECA also facilitates cross-border investments between the two countries. It aims to promote investments and create a liberal, facilitative, transparent and competitive investment regime. The CECA creates an attractive operating environment for the business communities of both countries to increase bilateral trade and investment."
visit of Indian Prime Minister to Malaysia in October 2010 should be achievable with the signing of the bilateral CECA. During his meeting with Mr. Mustapa Mohamed, Shri Sharma discussed wide range of bilateral and regional matters including DMIC, the progress under the India-ASEAN Services & Investment Agreement negotiations and the Comprehensive Economic Partnership in East Asia (CEPEA).

New Delhi, March 10, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good evening to all of you. My colleagues, Mr. Arun Goel, Joint Secretary (South) and our High Commissioner to Malaysia Mr. Vijay Gokhale, join me for briefing you about the ongoing visit of the Deputy Prime Minister (DPM) and Education Minister of Malaysia Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin, who arrived in Mumbai day before yesterday and has reached New Delhi today. He is on a five day visit at the invitation of the External Affairs Minister.

He is the second highest ranking political leader in Malaysia. Let me take you briefly through his programme and also apprise you of the composition of his Delegation. DPM is accompanied by the Chief Minister of Sabah; the Minister of Works; the Minister of Human Resources who is of Indian origin; the Special Envoy on Infrastructure to India and South Asia; among senior officials.

DPM arrived in Mumbai on the 8th. Yesterday he had several important meetings including with the Chairman of the Reliance Industries Limited Mr. Mukesh Ambani, Chairman of Tata Group Mr. Ratan Tata and our Chief Minister in Maharashtra.

Today, he has already met with Dr. C.P. Joshi, our Minister for Road Transport and Highways. He would be visiting and inaugurating a new Construction Industries Development Board office of Malaysia. He would also be visiting a highway infrastructure project which is being executed by Malaysian companies along with Indian companies.

Infrastructure is one sector where the Malaysian companies are doing a lot of work. They have already executed or are in the process of executing infrastructure projects of over five billion dollars in India.
DPM would be calling on the Prime Minister of India and also would have a meeting later on with our Minister of Human Resource Development. Tomorrow there will be a meeting with EAM who would also be hosting a lunch in the honour of the visiting dignitary. Later in the afternoon, he addresses foreign diplomats at a programme organized by Asian-African Legal Consultative Organisation; and then emplanes for Chennai, where he has a number of engagements including participating in the Malaysian Night and Cultural Show, that is being hosted to celebrate the establishment of the Twin City Relationship between Kuala Lumpur and Chennai. That is broadly the programme of DPM.

He last visited India in the year 2000. Last year in October when Prime Minister of India paid a state visit to Malaysia he had a very good exchange of views with the former. Malaysia is a part of India’s extended neighbourhood. We also see Malaysia as an important gateway to ASEAN. India and Malaysia have traditionally enjoyed close and friendly relations. The country is home to more than two million people of Indian origin which is among the largest anywhere in the world.

Our bilateral relations were taken to a qualitatively new level in the last fifteen months after the landmark state visit of Prime Minister Najib in January 2010. Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh paid a return visit to Kuala Lumpur in October itself last year, thus signaling the intention to usher in a new era in our ties. The two Prime Ministers have also charted out the future course of our relations through a Joint Statement on the framework for a strategic partnership. Prime Minister referred to his visit to Malaysia as a turning point in our relations and also underlined that stronger ties with Malaysia is fundamental to the success of India’s Look-East Policy.

I would like to note here that both sides have worked with great alacrity to implement the initiatives taken and the targets set, during the visits of the two Prime Ministers. This has also been helped by regular high-level exchanges. To give you an idea, just in two months of this year, in February and March, we have seen the visits of four Ministers from Malaysia to India including the Minister of Health, IT, Trade and Industry, and the Minister of Works.

One of the decisions taken was to have a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement covering goods, services and investment. I am happy to say that a formal agreement was signed on the 18th of February, 2011 and both sides are expecting the agreement to come into force on 1st of July, 2011. We have no doubt that this would literally transform the relationship, the economic and trade relationship between our two countries.

To give you an example of the efficacy and impact of such an agreement, I may mention that a similar agreement was operationalised with South Korea with effect from the 1st of January, 2010. In one year, just in one year, during 2010, our trade with ROK went up 44 per cent. No wonder Prime Minister Najib remarked about CECA that it is a strategic and economic umbrella to present Malaysia and India with enormous economic opportunities to enhance investment and market access.

We have also in the last few months concluded an extradition treaty which has been ratified by Malaysia. And India-Malaysia CEO’s business forum was set up in October, 2010. Also, significantly and as committed by President Najib, permission has been received for the first Indian banking consortium to commence commercial operations in Malaysia, which is expected in the second quarter of this year. These are just a few examples to illustrate how both sides have gone about building the edifice of our relationship.

Here, economic and commercial ties have emerged as one of the mainstay of our relations. Malaysia is already one of our largest trading partners in the ASEAN region. Bilateral trade doubled between 2005 and 2008 crossing 10 billion dollars. Thereafter it did take a dip in 2009 because of the global economic woes. But we believe that in 2010 it has almost inched close to the $ 10 billion mark and, as I said, there is no looking back.

India has also become the seventh largest investor in Malaysia and there have been sizeable investments in the last three years between 2007 and 2010 including major acquisitions by Reliance, Ballarpur Industries of the Thapar Group, Mahindra, Satyam, Larsen & Toubro. During the visit of our Prime Minister, fresh investments were announced by Biocon India of the tune of 400 million dollars, and Manipal University of 200 million dollars. More than 100 Indian companies including 60 joint ventures are operational in Malaysia. By the same token Malaysia has also made sizeable investments in India which add up to more than 1.8 billion dollars, and more are on the way.

I mentioned the infrastructure sector and I would like here to underscore that the Malaysian construction companies have the largest presence in India outside Malaysia. They have already executed or executing projects worth more than $ 5 billion. Currently, 35 projects are under execution and 52 have already been undertaken. One of the prime examples is that of the teaming up between GMR group and Malaysian Airport Holding Berhad for development of airports and other facilities. They have successfully established the airports at Hyderabad and New Delhi, and are currently working on the Monorail Project in Mumbai which would be a first in the country.

To give this process a further impetus, an MoU of cooperation on technical assistance services in highway management and development was signed in 2010, which will certainly open up a slew of new opportunities for Malaysian companies.
Another promising sector is railways where IRCON has been quite active for the last 20 years in modernization and development of railway infrastructure in Malaysia. And they are currently executing a double-tracking project worth a $1.5 billion. But these are only some areas in which we are cooperating. The spectrum is indeed quite wide and getting wider which includes areas like education, human resource development, communications, IT, defence, security, tourism and culture.

Our cooperation in the vital area of defence and security is getting strengthened. We had concluded an agreement on defence cooperation way back in 1993. Our Raksha Mantri had visited Malaysia in January 2008. We have also established a practice of having annual meetings of the Malaysia-India Defence Cooperation Committee which is co-chaired by the Defence Secretaries of the two countries, and the last meeting was held in New Delhi in March 2010.

Our cooperation in maritime security is getting strengthened. Indian ships regularly make port calls at Malaysia. Malaysian officers have been undergoing training programmes in India. I mentioned that a bilateral extradition treaty has also been signed.

In the area of education, we have more than 2000 Indian students studying in Malaysia, and over 3000 Malaysian students studying in India. A MOU on cooperation in higher education was signed in January last year during the visit of Prime Minister Najib, and a Memorandum on IT cooperation was signed when our Prime Minister visited Malaysia in October. India has been offering 55 training slots under the ITEC and Colombo Plan which are fully utilized.

Both sides see considerable potential for cooperation in teaching of English language and in IT education where we can share our experience and expertise with our Malaysian friends. Over 60 Indian IT companies have offices in Malaysia.

We have also signed a cultural exchange programme for the year 2010-2013 after the establishment of a full-fledged Indian Cultural Centre in Kuala Lumpur on the 10th of February, 2010.

I did mention the sizeable Indian population. It is little surprise therefore that we are well connected. 115 weekly flights already operate between the two countries and we are now discussing a revised Air Services Agreement to further increase the frequency.

Indian tourists are also heading for Malaysia in large numbers and constitute the sixth largest segment of incoming tourists in Malaysia. In 2009, 650,000 Indian tourists went to Malaysia. And in 2008, we received close to 120,000 tourists from Malaysia. We have also signed a bilateral MOU on Tourism in recognition of the considerable potential in this area.
Before I wrap up and invite your questions, let me mention that there are a number of international fora in which we closely cooperate and coordinate including the ASEAN Regional Forum, the East Asian Summit, NAM, Commonwealth, ASEM and so on.

We welcome the visit of the Deputy Prime Minister of Malaysia which we are confident, would help in not only maintaining but enhancing the broad-based engagement that we have between India and Malaysia.

Thank you. My colleagues and I would be happy to take a few questions on the visit of the Deputy Prime Minister of Malaysia to India.

Question: Is the Revised Air Services Agreement to be finalized during this visit?

High Commissioner: It would not be signed during the visit. It is in the process of finalization.

Question: It was asking for your response to the announcement by the Dalai Lama this morning that he would be handing power over to some sort of elected institution or individual. My question would be, what your response is to that and whether India will continue to be happy to host the Tibetan Government in Exile after the Dalai Lama steps down.

Official Spokesperson: My response is that His Holiness the Dalai Lama is an honoured guest in India and he is a spiritual and religious leader.

Question: Just to carry on from there, does it mean that the Government has no problem with the Dalai Lama continuing to stay in India?

Official Spokesperson: I have already answered the question.

Question: Can you give us an update on the Somalian pirates issue?

Official Spokesperson: Yes. You would have perhaps seen the detailed press release that we have just issued. I would basically like to note here that the safety and security of Indian nationals remains a matter of high priority for the country. The nodal Indian agency, which is the Director-General of Shipping is the main contact points with the ship owners. The Ministry of External Affairs comes into the picture when the ship owners or the management are based in a foreign country. Our Missions also play a vital role in coordinating and in ascertaining information, in encouraging the ship owners to assist in the matter.

As of now, we have 53 Indian sailors who are still captive. 11 Indian sailors who were on Rak Africana were released yesterday by the Somali pirates. In the preceding years, we have had 21 Indian nationals similarly released in 2008; 34 in 2009; and 56 in 2010.
Question: Just a follow up on the Dalai Lama’s status. I just want to understand if India has a position on the Dalai Lama giving up political cause. Do we have view on that? You have not talked about that.

The second question is on the sailors. Your press release also talks about the fact that the Missions are in touch with the ship owners themselves and with the Governments in which these ship owners and managements are based. So, what is the feedback? Your Release is talking about them being in touch with all those five cases. What is the feedback that you are getting on all of those cases?

Official Spokesperson: On the first question, I have already told you how we view His Holiness the Dalai Lama. He is an honoured guest, he is a spiritual and religious leader.

As to your second question, yes, and that is why we have put out the details. Basically in these cases it is the ship owners who reach out to the pirates. We have given details of the five ships in which there are still 53 Indian sailors - are all foreign flag carriers. Four of them are Panamanian and one of them is Italian. So, as necessary what the Mission does is it reaches out to the owners or the companies who manage the ships and encourage them to do what is needed to get the sailors released safely and as early as possible. Obviously this is the responsibility of the carriers to ensure that their crew is safe.

Question: What is the feedback that you have got?

Official Spokesperson: About?

Question: From the nations that you are in touch with.

Official Spokesperson: Precisely that the Missions are in touch. We have brought it out in the public domain. We have, therefore, mentioned that it is this kind of coordination between the DG (Shipping), Ministry of Defence, and the External Affairs Ministry, including our Missions, that has resulted in the release of sailors, during the last few years. We have even given out the figures. Certainly as I said at the very outset, the safety, security and the wellbeing of the sailors who are Indian nationals, is of the highest priority of the Government of India and that is how we have been going about it.

Question: Sri Lankan Prime Minister has said that LTTE is trying to revive its secret camps in Tamil Nadu. Any comment?

Official Spokesperson: We have seen reports from Sri Lanka referring to the Sri Lankan Prime Minister’s statement in their Parliament alluding to the presence of LTTE training camps in Tamil Nadu. We categorically deny the existence of any such camps. The Government of Sri Lanka have also not taken up this issue with us. Such a reference is indeed unfortunate and we urge the Government of Sri Lanka to desist from reacting to speculative and uncorroborated reports.

Thank you.

391. Remarks by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the Indian Community Function.

Kuala Lumpur, May 2, 2011.

High Commissioner Gokhale,

Distinguished representatives of the Indian community in Malaysia,

A very good evening to all of you.

I am happy to meet members of the Indian community in Malaysia. You are among the largest communities of overseas Indians anywhere in the world, and hold a very special place in our hearts. Your achievements are numerous and cover every aspect of Malaysian life. The Malaysian Government’s decision last year to dedicate an area in Brickfields as ‘Little India’ is a tribute to your contributions to this country. Our Prime Minister was delighted to be present on that happy occasion.

We also admire and very much value the way in which you have preserved your connections with the land of your ancestors. We hope that each succeeding generation will make a special effort to preserve these ties.

We would like to harness your talent and experiences for our development. Our economic growth will create opportunities for business and enterprise, and this will in turn generate a new platform for collaboration between Indians and overseas Indian communities. I invite you to make use of new investment and business opportunities in India. The Ministry of Overseas Indians has started the Overseas Indians Facilitation Centre (OIFC) for Overseas Indians who want to invest or partner with Indian companies. I hope this will lead to greater participation and involvement in business and investment with India.

India has been making good progress on all fronts. Although there is a long way to go before we can call ourselves a developed country, those of you who have visited India recently would have seen signs of progress and development.
The entire nation is going through a fundamental transformation. We are addressing our problems through democratic means, and by promoting inclusive growth and social justice for all Indians. Our objective is nothing less than the elimination of poverty in India within a generation. The road ahead will not be easy. But we are confident about the future.

At the same time, we are also outward looking. We have begun to re-connect with the diaspora that is spread throughout the globe. We take this task very seriously. The Pravasi Bharatiya Diwas brings all of us together on the same platform each year, year after year. I am delighted that Malaysia sends the largest contingent to this annual event.

We enjoy excellent bilateral relations with Malaysia. We have concluded the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement. We will continue to work with Malaysia to expand our economic and trade relations. I believe that our growing friendship and collaboration will also benefit the Indian community. With your cultural and social links to India and your understanding of our language, our culture and the way we do things, the Malaysian Indian community can serve as the bridge for business and industry between our two countries.

We opened a Cultural Centre in Kuala Lumpur last year to supplement your efforts. I request the Indian community’s support and encouragement for our Cultural Centre. I also hope that your children, the future of this country, will want to experience Indian culture by visiting the Centre.

I am also pleased to know that you are availing the educational facilities which we offer in India. Our Prime Minister, during his meeting with the community last October, announced a contribution of over One Million US Dollars (Rs. 5 crores) to augment the Indian Scholarship Trust Fund that was set up by our first Prime Minister in 1946 to provide assistance to Malaysian Indian students. I am happy to inform you that the money pledged by the Prime Minister has been made available in the designated bank account. It will allow more students to receive financial assistance hereafter.

It has been a special pleasure to meet such distinguished people. I thank you all for warmly responding to the invitation of our High Commissioner.

Thank you all.
Interview of External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna with Paul Gabriel of the Malaysian Paper The Star of Malaysia.

[Indian Foreign Minister explains his country’s targets and hurdles External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna has been raising the tempo with strategic speeches around the world as India attempts to place itself as a centre of power. Appointed to the post fairly recently in 2009, the prominent 79-year-old politician from Karnataka is galvanising support from the international community for India's campaign for inclusion as a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council (UNSC).

Indian officials already count the support of at least 120 countries and are confident of a UNSC reform by early 2012, although most others expect that it will be a long-drawn affair.

"We will expand our outreach to other member states to convince them if they are not already convinced," Krishna told a meeting in Washington recently.

The candidature of the world's largest democracy for a UNSC permanent seat was endorsed by US President Barack Obama during the latter's state visit to India last November.

Besides his appetite for global engagement, Krishna, a former Chief Minister of Karnataka (1999-2004) and Governor of Maharashtra (2004-2008) has other delicate foreign policy scenarios to deal with and assess.

Ministerial-level talks with Pakistan have only just resumed following the deadly Mumbai blasts in 2008 which India blames on Pakistani terrorists. And there is also the race for India to climb up the ranks of the world's most powerful nations.

Krishna, who is in Kuala Lumpur for the 5th India-Malaysia Joint Commission Meeting, speaks to The Star on a wide-range of issues, such as its strategic relations with the US and Russia, a pending historic Ombudsman legislation, the inevitable India-China comparison and the high-priority his government attaches to its relations with Malaysia.]

Can India rise to become the fourth most powerful nation by 2025, as your revised National Security Index suggests?

Over the course of about 65 years, our country has emerged stronger. Our GDP has increased from low double digit in billion US dollars to over a trillion US dollars.

Even as the population has grown about four times, we produce more than four times food grain than we produced in 1950. Hundreds of millions have been pulled out of poverty and illiteracy and the resultant death and disease. Sustained high growth since economic reforms and liberalisation introduced in the early 1990s has put India as the fourth largest economy in the world, behind the EU, US, China and Japan, on Purchasing Power Parity. As a result of these historical achievements, which are underpinned by the strength of our democratic institutions, we are well prepared to address our own developmental challenges and also to contribute to global peace and development. Rankings are secondary and only consequential to meeting these objectives well. It is also clear that in this century, there is a perceptible and growing shift in global power to Asia.

When will your economic achievements match that of China’s?

We are aware of the stellar economic achievements of China which is now the second largest economy in the world. There is great admiration in India for China’s economic achievements. However, I would like to clearly point out that India does not view its relations with China in a competitive construct. We are not in any kind of race with China. Both India and China place high priority on economic development amongst their national priorities. This is because each of us wants to raise the living standards of our people. India desires to eradicate hunger, illiteracy and disease. However, we have different political, social and economic systems in India as compared to China.

Therefore, we will tread our own path towards inclusive economic growth and prosperity. We will work towards an economically vibrant, socially cohesive and politically plural India.

India retains a security relationship with Russia and a strategic partnership with the United States. From the Indian perspective, how is this crucial in maintaining a proper balance of the international order?

India has a strategic relationship with Russia, as it does with the United States, Britain, France and several other countries. These strategic partnerships help India to build on our common perceptions on major issues of international relations. Such cooperation is crucial for meeting the objectives of India’s foreign policy, especially our desire to ensure a conducive atmosphere of peace and security in order to achieve strategic autonomy, external and internal security and the need for sustained and inclusive economic growth.

The Indian Government recently succumbed to public outcry for legislation to create the Lokayukta, an Ombudsman that will guarantee accountability of its ruling class and politicians. How do you describe this development, coming after four decades of pressure from civil society?
Our Government has always been responsive to the concerns of our citizens. This has been the essence of the functioning of India's parliamentary democracy since our Independence. The Government intends to introduce the Lokpal Bill in Parliament during the forthcoming Monsoon Session.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh has said, "The fact that civil society and Government have joined hands to evolve a consensus to move this historic legislation augurs well for our democracy."

India's campaign to be included as a permanent member of the UN Security Council has received the support of the G4 and L69, with President Obama also endorsing your bid. But many say it is going to be a long, tedious process for India to join the UNSC elite club. Do you concur?

The process of reform of the UN Security Council has been a long and arduous one.

The issue of expansion of the Security Council to reflect geopolitical realities and to give voice and representation to countries from Asia, Africa and Latin America and the Caribbean has been under consideration in the UN for almost 20 years. Over all these years, India, its G4 partners (Brazil, Germany and Japan) and other like-minded countries have ensured that this issue remains on top of the table in the UN.

The recent initiatives taken by the G4 countries have imparted a new momentum to the process of Security Council reform.

Their efforts resulted in the UN General Assembly's decision in September 2008 to launch inter-governmental negotiations in its informal plenary. In December 2009, the G4 and other like-minded countries again took initiative to ensure that the negotiations were text-based to record progress made in the course of negotiations.

In inter-governmental negotiations, seven rounds of which have taken place so far, a majority of the member states expressed support for expansion of the Security Council in the permanent and non-permanent categories and improvement of the working methods of the Council. Many countries have expressed support for India's candidature for a permanent seat. As in any inter-governmental process involving important issues, the process of Security Council reform will take its time.

India looks forward to working closely with Malaysia and other UN member states to take the process to its logical conclusion as early as possible.

India is nuclear armed but your country has decided to lead global efforts for non-proliferation and universal and non-discriminatory global nuclear disarmament. How do you explain this?
India has been consistent in its support for global, non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament and like Malaysia has promoted this objective as members of the Non-Aligned Movement. In 1988, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi presented an Action Plan for a Nuclear-Weapon Free and Non-Violent World.

We remain committed to its vision and objectives. In fact, India is the only nuclear power which has supported the complete and global elimination of nuclear weapons within a time-bound framework.

India supports global non-proliferation objectives. We believe that nuclear disarmament will enhance global security and can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework for achieving global, non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament in a verifiable manner. India and Malaysia should continue to lend their support for this noble objective.

In your own words, Pakistan is the “epicentre of terrorism.” Much delayed bilateral talks at the ministerial level is set to resume since the Mumbai 2008 attacks. Are you confident of a constructive and productive dialogue with your neighbour with so much suspicion in the air?

We are committed to resolving all outstanding issues with Pakistan through bilateral dialogue, in an environment free from terrorism and violence. Normalisation of India-Pakistan relationship is critical for peace, progress and prosperity of our peoples. We are cautiously optimistic about the dialogue that we have recently embarked upon with Pakistan. However, we must keep in mind that we are dealing with complex issues and should not have unrealistic expectations.

Your visit to Malaysia is a follow up to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh’s successful trip last October. How do you see your strategic relationship with Malaysia developing?

Malaysia has steadily grown in importance for India both bilaterally and in the regional context. We consider Malaysia a close friend and partner. This is evident from the exchange of visits by the Prime Ministers in 2010, and the decision to establish a Strategic Partnership. We attach high priority to this relationship. My visit is intended to progress our Strategic Partnership. The holding of the 5th Joint Commission in six months after our Prime Minister’s visit is also a reflection of this desire. The Malaysian Foreign Minister and I will review the progress in the implementation of understandings reached at the highest level. We will be directing the concerned ministries and departments to expedite discussions in all areas, and we also discuss new proposals. We will work closely in all matters of common interest, including economic, defence and security fields, with a view to achieving a long-term strategic partnership.
Under a new global visa ruling enforced by the Indian Government in January, Malaysian tourists can only visit India twice within the six-month visa period. Many here have expressed dismay over this restriction, which is meant to plug loopholes to prevent terrorists from entering India. Will there be a review of the rules to restore our people-to-people ties?

To counter growing terrorist threats to India's security, the new tourist visa policy was introduced in 2010 which prescribes the second visit of a tourist to take place after a gap of two months. This is not applicable to any other category of visas. Also, this is a policy which is not specific to Malaysia but applies to all countries. Exceptions are made to bona-fide tourists and visitors on certain bases.

Aspects of this policy are being reviewed by our government.

393. Statement to media by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna on the conclusion of the 5th India - Malaysia Joint Commission Meeting.

My distinguished colleague, Foreign Minister of Malaysia Dato' Sri Anifah Aman, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I wish to begin by thanking the Foreign Minister, Dato' Sri Anifah Aman for welcoming my delegation to Malaysia. I am delighted to be here and to see the progress and achievements that Malaysians have made.

India attaches high priority to our relations with Malaysia. We have established a Strategic Partnership. Our respective Prime Ministers exchanged visits last year. We have signed the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement. These recent developments have deepened our friendship and we are on the path to stronger and more diverse cooperation in both bilateral and regional fields.

In the Joint Commission Meeting that has just concluded, I emphasized India's keenness to progress our relationship. I received similar assurances from the Malaysian leaders and we are satisfied and happy that there is a common desire to make the India-Malaysia partnership into a pillar of our respective foreign policies.
Foreign Minister Anifah and I have agreed that the early implementation of all the understandings and agreements enshrined in the Joint Statement on the Framework for a Strategic Partnership, should be our foremost priority. We reviewed progress over the past six months.

We have had an in-depth exchange of views on how we can make early progress on issues such as a revised Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement and a MoU on Customs Cooperation, as well as operationalization of the Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism.

We have also requested the Malaysian side to consider greater imports from India as a way of having balanced and sustainable trade in the long term.

People-to-people exchanges are also developing satisfactorily. We have agreed on ways to sustain these trends in the coming year.

We also exchanged views on regional and multilateral matters. We regard Malaysia as one of our key interlocutors in ASEAN and we discussed the importance of strengthening India-ASEAN ties. The early completion of the Free Trade Agreement in Services and Investments, which, we hope that Malaysia, as ASEAN coordinator, will facilitate, is desirable. We also look forward to the participation of Prime Minister Najib in the Special India-ASEAN Summit that India will host in 2012.

The Hon'ble Prime Minister has very graciously agreed to receiving me and I will be calling on him shortly. I will be conveying to him warm greetings from Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and our great desire to support the further enhancement of our bilateral relations.

I have invited His Excellency the Foreign Minister to visit India at a mutually convenient time. I have enjoyed my brief visit to your country and I would like to once again thank Dato’ Sri Anifah for his warm hospitality.

MONGOLIA

394. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the Third Meeting of the India-Mongolia Joint Committee on Cooperation.

Shri E Ahamed, Minister of State for External Affairs paid an official visit to Mongolia to participate in the Third Meeting of the India-Mongolia Joint Committee on Cooperation from 29-31 May 2011. He was accompanied by an official-delegation. Shri Ahamed and Mr. Yo Otgonbayar, Minister of Education, Culture and Science of Mongolia co-Chaired the Third Meeting of the India-Mongolia Joint Committee on Cooperation. The Joint Committee meeting reviewed the entire gamut of bilateral relationship particularly implementation of the decisions taken during the previous two meetings of the Joint Committee and for making progress on the ground with regard to bilateral cooperation. Shri Ahamed also called on H.E Mr. Sukhbaataryn Batbold, the Prime Minister of Mongolia on 31 May and discussed matters of mutual interest.

Reconfirming that the traditional relationship between Mongolia and India in the educational and cultural sector is strengthening and rapidly growing and noting that the Indian assistance and contributions to this sector in Mongolia play significant role, both sides agreed on further broadening this cooperation. Indian side agreed on considering options of supporting certain projects with the purpose of renovation and expansion of Rajiv Gandhi Arts and Production Centre in Ulaanbaatar. Both sides noted the importance of expediting the construction of the India-Mongolia Joint School in Ulaanbaatar, for which Mongolian side will provide a suitable plot of land and the Indian side agreed to support construction of the School.

Both sides also agreed to expedite the realization of the US$ 20 million line of credit extended by India to Mongolia for establishing the ‘Joint Information Technology Education and Outsourcing Centre’ in Mongolia.

Acknowledging the importance of bilateral cooperation in the field of civil nuclear energy, both sides have indicated the need of organizing Joint Working Group meeting in 2011 for the purpose of implementing the MOU on Cooperation in the field of Peaceful Use of Radioactive Minerals and Nuclear Energy, signed in 2009.

Both sides confirmed the significance and the need of the development of cooperation in the field of agriculture. Mongolian side expressed their aspiration to study Indian expertise in processing dairy products, milk supply means and biotechnology. Mongolian side proposed to Indian side to consider possibility of setting up joint factory for processing sea-buckthorn products. The Indian side suggested to the Mongolian side to present concrete proposals in the matter.

The two sides noted the importance of furthering the bilateral cooperation in the field of defence, social welfare and labour, health and environment protection. The two sides also agreed on continuation of joint military exercise “Nomadic Elephant”, on training Mongolian personnel specialized in ecological evaluation, developing software and data processing related to the environment protection and on possibility of collaboration in the field of labour statistics, labour force analyses and brokerage.

Supporting the cooperation in the field of mineral resources and mining, both sides agreed on exploring possibilities of implementing joint projects in Mongolia.

The two sides agreed to hold the next meeting of the Mongolia-India Joint Committee on Cooperation in New Delhi in 2012.

New Delhi, July 22, 2011.

Please see Document N.380
Statement by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the Press at Ulaanbaatar.

July 28, 2011.

Ladies and Gentlemen of the media,

President Elbegdorj and I have just concluded our discussions, which were held in a warm, friendly and cordial atmosphere. My visit seeks to strengthen our relationship, building upon the momentum generated by the visit of President Elbegdorj to India in September 2009, when our ties were expanded to a Comprehensive Partnership.

I conveyed to the President that I was privileged to make this State Visit when Mongolia was commemorating the “Year of Anniversaries” including the 805th Anniversary of the Establishment of the Great Mongolian State under the leadership of the legendary Chinggis Khan and the 90th Anniversary of Mongolian Independence and Sovereignty.

I also recalled the bonds of culture, civilization and religion which bind our two countries together. I emphasized that we should reaffirm and strengthen our age-old ties in these fields, including by reviving contacts with Nalanda University, which is being rejuvenated as a regional seat of learning and excellence in particular, of Buddhist studies.

Today, it is encouraging that we also share other values such as democracy, rule of law and upholding the rights of the individual. This forms the bedrock of our bilateral cooperation.

My discussions with President Elbegdorj today were wide-ranging and covered the entire gamut of our bilateral relations as well regional and global issues of mutual interest.

I confirmed that India will extend a Line of Credit of 20 Million U.S.Dollars for the "India - Mongolia Joint Information Technology, Education and Outsourcing Center" to be established in Ulaanbaatar.

India will also upgrade and modernize the Rajiv Gandhi Art and Production School as well as the Atal Bihari Vajpayee Centre of Excellence in Information and Communication Technology. We will complete this work soon. Further, we have agreed to work together on a Joint India - Mongolia School.

I conveyed that the number of slots available to Mongolia under our ITEC Program will be increased to 150. The number of ICCR scholarships available to Mongolia will be increased to 50. In this way, India will assist in human resource development and capacity building efforts of Mongolia.
We have signed an Agreement of Cooperation between the Planning Commission of India and its Mongolian counterpart. There is considerable expertise on plan formulation and implementation in India. We look forward to sharing our experience in this area with Mongolia.

A bilateral Defence Cooperation Agreement was signed. May I state that India is willing and ready to expand collaboration in this sphere.

President Elbegdorj and I discussed ways to further our cooperation in the peaceful use of radioactive minerals and nuclear energy.

With a Memorandum on Media Exchanges signed between the two Governments, we can now hope to see more media persons from Mongolia in India. We will also send more Indian journalists here.

We also agreed to explore the possibilities of improving air connectivity between our two countries so as to enhance contacts between our peoples, including through tourism.

Mongolia has just taken over as the Chair of the Community of Democracies. I promised President Elbegdorj to assist in any way required in ensuring the success of his Chairmanship.

I thanked Mongolia for its support extended to India in becoming a Permanent Member of a reformed and expanded United Nations Security Council.

My State Visit aims at conveying the importance India attaches to its relationship with Mongolia. Our two Governments will work together in expanding this partnership.

I thank President Elbegdorj for his very warm hospitality. I invite him to visit India soon.

Thank You.

Your Excellency President Elbegdorj
Madam Bolormaa
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to be here in Mongolia, the land of the “Blue Skies”.

Excellency, we in India consider Mongolia as a close and trusted friend and I am confident that my visit will give a strong impetus to the Comprehensive Partnership between India and Mongolia. Mongolia is an important strategic partner of India in North East Asia. We cherish and value our partnership.

India’s ties with Mongolia straddle centuries. Chords of Buddhism not only bind us together but also resonate within our hearts. The message of the Buddha that was carried by Indians to Central, East and South East Asia, also made its way to the vast steppes of Mongolia where it has found a permanent home for over two millennia. Mongolian monks studied at Nalanda University during its heyday. And over the centuries, some of the great works of Indian spiritual and secular literature, including the Ramayana and Kalidas’ Megha Doota were to find their way into the body of sacred literature - the Tanjur and the Kanjur - that is now considered as part of Mongolia’s civilizational heritage. We are deeply honoured and privileged that the Mongolian people describe India as their “spiritual home”. This is, indeed, a great tribute when one considers the great distances that separates us geographically. Undoubtedly, the Silk Route, which connected India with Mongolia for centuries, brought together our traders, artists, musicians and artisans. It has been a highway for goods as well as ideas.

Mr. President, all of us in India have read about the adventures and exploits of the great Mongol leader Chinggis Khaan. His overland journey through Asia and into Europe in the 13th century was as historically significant as the sea journeys of Vasco Da Gama or Christopher Columbus in heralding a new age that was to change the world forever. His descendants founded the great Mughal Empire, whose invaluable contributions to India are many and symbolized most eloquently by its great monument - the Taj Mahal.

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and other leaders of modern India had a very special regard for the Mongolian people. It was at Prime Minister Nehru’s behest that a Mongolian delegation visited India for the ‘Asian Relations Conference’ in 1947. On the sound foundation of this rich legacy, we have built a relationship woven around common values. We share a democratic outlook with respect for rule of law and human rights as well as a vision of peace and stability in our region. Our ties have been steadily reinforced and nurtured through exchange of high level political visits and through cooperation in diverse areas, including in the field of education, training, agriculture and information technology. Today, we wish to further strengthen these as well as forge new ties in the field of trade and investment.

Since 1990, Mongolia’s transition to market economy and democracy has opened new opportunities for multi-faceted cooperation. A business delegation is accompanying me. They have expressed optimism and have a number of ideas to take forward our economic engagement and I hope they would be given full support.

We, in India, have followed the journey of Mongolia in the last two decades with great interest. We rejoice in your achievements, as Mongolia today stands tall as a strong and vibrant democracy. We congratulate Mongolia for assuming the Chair of the Community of Democracies. We stand ready to assist in ensuring the success of your Chairmanship.

In 2009, during your visit to India, we established our ‘Comprehensive Partnership’ to symbolize our shared commitment to ever-expanding ties at all levels between our two peoples and two countries. We work together in regional and multilateral forums. We are committed to enhance these multi-faceted ties in the years ahead.

Excellency, we have together built an impressive edifice of multi-faceted cooperation. My meetings with the Mongolian leadership today have given a strong impetus to these ties. India remains resolute in its endeavor to further deepen and diversify relations with Mongolia drawing deeply from the fountain of our common heritage and building on our common aspirations of prosperity and democracy.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in a toast:-

— to the health of His Excellency President Elbegdorj and Madam Bolormaa; — to the prosperity and progress of the people of Mongolia; and — to the abiding friendship between our two countries and peoples.

399. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Business meeting.

Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia, July 29, 2011

I am delighted by this opportunity to interact with the representatives of business and industry of India and Mongolia during my visit to this enchanting land, the land of the ‘blue skies’.

Although this is my first visit to Mongolia, I feel very much at home amongst the friendly people of this country. Our relationship is unique and special. The friendship between our countries percolates down, operating and resonating at the level of our people. India and Mongolia have interacted since antiquity through the vehicle of Buddhism traversing the Great Silk Route, which connected India with Mongolia for centuries. It brought together our traders, artists, musicians and artisans. Our centuries’ old contact and inter-exchange of ideas, people, and goods have imparted a timeless dimension to our relations. In the more contemporary times, we have sought to build on these bonds. Our first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru was never hesitant in championing the cause of Mongolia. India is proud to have supported the membership of Mongolia to the United Nations in 1961. As we forge ahead, this enduring legacy provides us with a solid foundation for economic, scientific and technological cooperation between our two countries.

During the visit of President Elbegdorj to India in September 2009, our bilateral relations were elevated to a "Comprehensive Partnership". My visit, while continuing the process of high level contacts and exchange of views, seeks to further reinforce our ties in mutually beneficial fields. Economic and commercial ties are a major driver of any partnership between nations. I would even go to the extent of saying that economics are the bricks and mortar of any enduring political relationship. I am confident that today’s event will be a forerunner of a greatly strengthened business relationship between India and Mongolia. I am convinced that there exist many opportunities for co-operation in the economic and commercial fields, and with enterprise and innovation we can construct a new Silk Route to weave together our economic destinies.

Over the last few days, I have had the opportunity to discuss various issues of bilateral and regional importance with the leadership of Mongolia. We have shared values of democracy, human dignity and economic freedom. Our goal is to further strengthen our deep and enduring friendship, on the basis of our shared values. Our ties are acquiring multi-dimensionality but there is still some way to go before we can have strong economic pillars to our ties. In this context, you as representatives of business and industry, have the role, responsibility and capacities to find complementarities between our two economies, and increase the space for business and trade, so that the close relationship between our countries is translated into economic opportunity and prosperity, for our peoples.

As a close friend of Mongolia, we in India are deeply impressed with its commitment to democracy and the strides made in the development of its people. We, in India, are conscious that Mongolia is an economy on the march, and therein manifests opportunity for cooperation and collaboration with India. The mining boom that Mongolia is presently experiencing, is predicted to make Mongolia’s economy the fastest growing in the world by 2013. The World Bank’s annual GDP growth rate projection for Mongolia in 2013 is 22.9 percent. Such predictions, indeed, are staggering and Indian business must take due notice. Mongolia’s mineral wealth, including significant reserves of coal, copper, gold, and uranium, offers investment opportunities for Indian companies. We are impressed and applaud Mongolia’s decision to put forth for development, the three major flagship mining projects namely the Oyu Tolgoi copper and gold deposit, the Tavan Tolgoi coking coal deposit and the uranium deposit at Dornod. These projects are becoming important drivers of foreign direct investment into Mongolia, and will serve the purpose of meeting the growing demands of the world economy in general, and major Asian economies such as India in particular. Implementation of these projects will generate significant demand for construction and mining equipment, as well as in such areas as power generation, water supply, and rail transport. I would recommend the Indian business delegation to look closely at these opportunities.

The global economy is at a stage of profound transformation. India is a part of the shifting global economic landscape, and its economic weight is set to increase in the years ahead. The Indian economy faced the global financial meltdown with alacrity and persisted with a high growth trajectory. Today, it is not only one of the major economies of the world, but it is also one of the fastest growing. We seek to achieve our goals of inclusive growth and nation building. We have in place an ambitious programme, for the expansion of our social and infrastructure sectors. All this offers many opportunities for other countries. I invite Mongolian entrepreneurs to join us in our socio-economic transformation as investors, financiers and traders, or to enter into joint ventures with Indian entrepreneurs to develop Mongolia’s resources.

The Indian business delegation present here should, along with Mongolian industry, explore business opportunities and seek to establish contacts with commercial and industrial houses. I encourage greater and more frequent exchange of ideas and interaction between Chambers and business leaders of the two countries. This can be the only way to move ahead, to ensure that we understand and appreciate each other, in surmounting the challenges and take advantage of the opportunities.

I am confident that an accelerated development of economic and commercial ties will become the principal component of the India-Mongolia Comprehensive Partnership upon which we have embarked. There is considerable enthusiasm here. Indian business delegates would not have got all the answers for their questions. But it is only the beginning. You should keep up the efforts continuously. The Mongolian Government is quite positive and responsive. So you should take follow-up actions. This will not only develop and strengthen the strong and enduring areas of partnership, but will also enhance and promote the socio-economic advancement of our peoples.

I wish your deliberations success.

Thank you.

I have just concluded my State visits to the Republic of Korea and Mongolia. As I mentioned on my outward journey, for India both these countries are important partners in North East Asia and an integral part of our 'Look East' policy. People in both nations are believers in Buddhism, which spread there from India, and we have ancient cultural and historical links, as well as shared values. These commonalities enhance our relations.

The Presidents of both Republic of Korea and Mongolia had paid State visits to India in the last two years. Therefore, my return visits were being looked forward to by their Governments.

I was received with great warmth and cordiality in Seoul as also in Ulaanbaatar. My meetings with the Presidents and other leaders of both nations were friendly and productive; and there was a clear desire to expand and deepen relations with India. I fully reciprocated these sentiments and indicated that we wanted to take our Strategic Partnership with the Republic of Korea and our Comprehensive Partnership with Mongolia to a higher trajectory. In both Seoul and Ulaanbaatar, three inter-governmental agreements each were signed. You have already been briefed about these in detail.

In Korea, the Agreement on Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy signed during my visit will enable our two countries to cooperate with each other in a new sector. President Lee and I agreed to enhance defence and security cooperation between our two countries including naval cooperation to protect the sea lanes of communication. President Lee was highly appreciative of the first ever visit to Republic of Korea by our Raksha Mantri last year and assured that his Defence Minister will visit India this year to maintain the momentum of our cooperation. Focusing on India's capabilities in the peaceful uses of outer space, I told President Lee that we look forward to launching Korean satellites on Indian rockets, as our launch vehicles are of high quality and competitive price. I indicated our desire to explore the possibility of upgrading the bilateral Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, pressed for greater market access in Korea for Indian goods particularly pharmaceuticals and IT enabled services and invited enhanced Korean investment in India. The Korean Minister of Foreign Affairs and Trade will visit India later this year for the meeting of the India - ROK Joint Commission. I am confident that the upward trend in economic relations between India and Republic of Korea will strengthen immeasurably as a result of my visit.

Similarly, I believe that my visit to Mongolia will strengthen the economic partnership between our countries. The 20 million US Dollar Line of Credit for establishing an IT education and outsourcing centre in Ulaanbaatar will assist in creating new business and job opportunities for the friendly Mongolian people. India, considered as the Third neighbor by Mongolia, will continue helping in capacity building and human resource development in all sectors required by them. The MoU between the Planning Commission of India and the National Development and Innovation Committee of Mongolia will enable our two countries to share experiences in Plan formulation and implementation.

Indian business delegation which accompanied me to Ulaanbaatar had good discussions with their Mongolian counterparts as part of the India - Mongolia Business Forum. You heard for yourself some of their experiences in Mongolia, which provides us with hope for future economic and commercial relations.

The Agreement on Cooperation in Defence Matters signed during my visit to Ulaanbaatar signals the desire of both countries to strengthen security cooperation. We are confident that the conclusion of this very important Agreement will add depth and substance to India - Mongolia ties.

I invited both countries to actively involve themselves with the rejuvenation and rebuilding of Nalanda University as a centre of excellence in Asia. The leadership of both countries referred to India as the spiritual home for many of their nationals. I conveyed to the Mongolian leadership that India has liberalized its visa regime for Mongolian monks coming to India for Buddhist studies. They will now be eligible for visas for the duration of their studies or for five years, whichever is shorter.

With both countries we have signed Memoranda of Understanding on Media Exchanges which will help contribute to greater trust and understanding between our peoples. There is urgent need to enhance people-to-people exchanges with both nations. Therefore, in both capitals, I highlighted the need to commence direct air links.

Mongolia has recently assumed the Chair of the Community of Democracies in which India and the Republic of Korea are also members. On my part, I promised President Elbegdorj of Mongolia our full assistance in ensuring the success of his leadership of this organization and for promoting education for democracy.
In both Republic of Korea and Mongolia, I was able to meet with the leaders of their national legislative bodies where we discussed means of expanding parliamentary exchanges. The accompanying Minister and Members of Parliament who were part of my delegation actively participated in these interactions.

In my discussions in both the countries, there were references to the support provided by India’s political leadership during difficult times in the course of their history - whether during the Korean war or while extending support to the admission of Mongolia to the United Nations. This high esteem is evident in the honour accorded to them. In Seoul, the bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore is an acknowledgment of his vision of Korea as the Lamp of the East; and in Ulaanbaatar, the statue of Mahatma Gandhi is a recognition of his universal message of peace and non-violence. I paid tribute at both these places at ceremonies marked with solemnity.

My visits to the Republic of Korea and Mongolia have been a clear indication to them of the importance India attaches to our relations which have an enormous potential. With momentum imparted to our ties through high level exchanges, I believe that our partnership with both these countries will move forward purposefully and will also give a boost to our Look East policy. I have invited President Lee of the Republic of Korea and President Elbegdorj of Mongolia to visit India.

Thank You.

402. Statement by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna to media prior to his departure for Myanmar.

I will be paying an official visit to Myanmar from 20-22 June 2011 at the invitation of my counterpart. This will be our first high level engagement with the newly established civilian government in Myanmar after its assumption of office on 30th March, 2011.

The visit will give us an opportunity to further vitalize our multi-faceted relationship in the new political environment. We will have an exchange of views on enhancing security cooperation as well as our collaboration in the fields of Connectivity, IT, Energy, Agriculture, Power, Telecommunications and Infrastructure.

We have had regular high level exchanges with Myanmar. The most recent visit was that of Senior General Than Shwe, Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) in July 2010.

We have made considerable progress in implementing decisions and agreements emanating from that visit. Construction had commenced on Kaladan Multi-Modal Transit Transport Project. We also propose to initiate a few new projects.

I will be inaugurating three of the ten Rice Silos (Warehouses) being set up in Myanmar and with India’s assistance following the devastating Cyclone Nargis that hit the country 3 years ago. We are likely to sign a number of MOUs of cooperation to further strengthen bilateral cooperation. I will be travelling both to Yangon and Nay Phi Taw, the capital of Myanmar, and would return to New Delhi on 22 June.

I would also like to briefly reflect on resumption of our dialogue process with Pakistan as mandated by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and his Pakistani counterpart, in April 2010 at Thimphu.

In the preceding months, meetings of Home Secretary/ Interior Secretary; Commerce Secretaries, Water Resources Secretaries; Additional Secretary/ Surveyor General on Sir Creek and Defence Secretaries on Siachen, have already taken place. We have had a useful exchange of views and have gained a better understanding of each other’s positions. We have always approached our discussions in an open and constructive spirit.

Next, Foreign Secretary Rao will be heading for Islamabad to meet her counterpart. The agenda of discussions is already known to you. Her visit and discussions would carry forward the dialogue process with Pakistan. We also expect to have a meeting of Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan by July this year.

We hope to narrow the trust deficit between our nations and pave the way for normalization of relations by addressing all outstanding issues and concerns, particularly those pertaining to terrorism. This menace has to be dealt with firmly and transparently, for the common good of India and Pakistan, as well as, the region beyond.

We have to be patient, realistic and positive. As Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh has said on more than one occasion, peace and prosperity of South Asia is interlinked. We owe it to ourselves and generations to follow, to do what it takes, to embark on the path of peace and development.

May Pyi Taw, June 22, 2011.

Myanmar gave "firm assurances" to India on June 21 that its territory would not be used for anti-India activities, even as their Foreign Ministers held a series of "positive and constructive" meetings with focus on cooperation in security, energy and agriculture.

External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna, who is on a three-day visit to the country to talk and understand the "priorities and thinking" of the recently formed civilian government, held bilateral talks with the country's Foreign Minister Wunna Maung Lwin.

On the issue of security cooperation, is was believed that Myanmar had reiterated its "firm assurances" that the country’s territory would not be allowed to be used for anti-India activities. Security cooperation has been a major part of bilateral relations because of the long border that Myanmar shares with four northeast States. Many insurgent groups operating in the area are known to take advantage of the thick jungles along the border in Myanmar to take refuge.

Mr. Krishna also called on Vice-President U Tin Aung Myint Oo in the evening besides holding meeting with the Minister for Electric Power. "The talks were excellent, positive, constructive and forward-looking," a member of the Indian delegation said when asked about the bilateral meetings held.

While the meetings were a bid to foster strategic and economic ties between the neighbours, sources said a number of issues with regard to cooperation in the field of health and agriculture were also discussed. India also congratulated
Myanmar on holding successful elections that saw the formation of the first civilian government in years

India has in principle agreed to modernise the children’s hospital in Yangon by supplying latest equipment and offering other help. Talks are also on to build a state-of-the-art general hospital in Sittwe with Indian help.

Extending a helping hand to cyclone-prone Myanmar, India handed over 10 modern and disaster-proof rice silos built at a cost of $2 million to preserve grains during natural calamities. Mr. Krishna inaugurated the silos, having a combined storage capacity of 5,000 tonnes.

While cooperation in the agriculture field is an ongoing phenomenon, sources said a team from the Ministry of Agriculture led by agricultural scientist M.S. Swaminathan would soon be visiting Myanmar to understand the country's needs and the possible help that can be extended.

India has already agreed to provide a grant of $10 million for procurement of agricultural tools, besides providing 100 computers to the Central Land Records, as requested by Myanmar. Sources said discussions were also held on setting up an Agricultural Research Centre in Yezin.

India has agreed to send a team from the Archaeological Survey of India to render its services in the restoration of 11th century Ananda temple in Bagan in Mandalay region.

On the economic side, both countries expressed happiness at the rapid growth of trade but noted that there was also a large untapped market, sources said.

The Union Minister of Commerce, Industry and Textiles Shri Anand Sharma has set the target of doubling the existing US$1.5 billion trade between India and Myanmar by 2015. Chairing the 4th meeting of Joint Trade Commission along with Mr U Win Myint, Union Minister of Commerce, Myanmar, Shri Sharma said “I propose that we work towards doubling of bilateral trade by 2015. We also need to work towards broad-basing our trade basket. ….. Let us encourage businesses of both sides need to be encouraged to utilize Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme and ASEAN FTA channels to diversify trade.”

Shri Sharma said construction of the Kaladan Multimodal Transit Transport Project comprising of a waterway component and a roadway component by 2013 will completely transform the trade between North East India and the rest of the world. Cost of the project is US$ 120 million. The Project envisages a direct trade corridor between Indian Ports on the eastern seaboard and Sittwe Port in Myanmar and then through riverine transport and by road to Mizoram, thereby providing an alternate route for transport of goods to North-East India. The two countries recognized the need to start collaborating to build a Land Customs Station at India-Myanmar Border (at Mizoram) to facilitate the movement of vehicles and goods entering and leaving Mizoram state.

On the issue of border trade it was noted that the border trade point at Moreh, on Indian side, and Tamu, on Myanmar side, is stabilising and has immense potential for normal trade. Shri Sharma invited his counterpart to inaugurate the second border trade point at Zowkhatar(Mizoram) that will connect to Rhi in Myanmar. Both the Ministers stressed the need for working on two additional border trade points – Pangsau Pass (in Arunachal Pradesh) and Avangkhuung (in Nagaland). India and Myanmar have also expanded the list of items for border trade from 22 to 40.

Shri Sharma also informed India’s assistance for capacity building in agricultural research and improving the seed variety in Myanmar.

India is keen to participate in the gas sector of Myanmar. Indian companies have shown interest in setting up of gas based units, invest in LNG infrastructure, etc. The Indian Minister pushed for Indian participation in allocation of gas blocks in Myanmar. Myanmar side showed strong support for the proposal. To strengthen the economic relationship both sides agreed to set up a ‘Joint Trade & Investment Forum’ which would include both businessman and Government officials and would meet along with the Joint Trade Committee.
One third of India’s imports in pulses and one-fifth of India’s imports of timber are from Myanmar. With the implementation of India-ASEAN FTA and the Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme, Shri Sharma expressed the confidence that India can become one of the leading trade partners of Myanmar. Currently, two items – pulses and wood products accounted for 97.5% of Myanmar’s total exports to India. Similarly, buffalo meat and pharmaceuticals accounted for 45% of India’s total exports to Myanmar.

406. Media briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs and Joint Secretary (BSM) on the State Visit of President of Myanmar.

New Delhi, October 13, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to all of you. Welcome. Nice to see a number of old friends today! President of Myanmar H.E. Thein Sein arrived yesterday, the 12th of October, on a State visit to India, and would be in the country till the 15th of October. My colleague Mr. Harsh Shringla, Joint Secretary (BSM) and I would be happy to brief you about this very important ongoing visit.

The President assumed office on the 30th of March this year after general elections and this is the first high-level visit from Myanmar to India, of the new civilian government. The President is accompanied by his spouse and is leading a high-level delegation that includes a number of his Cabinet colleagues such as the Minister for Border Affairs and Myanmar’s Industrial Development, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, the Minister for Agriculture and Irrigation, the Minister for Religious Affairs, the Minister of Industry, the Minister of Electric Power, the Minister of National Planning and Economic Development as well as the Minister for Livestock and Fisheries, the Union Minister for Transport, the Union Minister for Energy, the Minister of Science and Technology, the Union Minister of Commerce, the Chief of General Staff in the Ministry of Defence, the Deputy Minister of Health, a number of senior officials, and other members of the delegation.

He arrived yesterday at Gaya and is presently undertaking a pilgrimage of the holy Buddhist sites at Gaya, Khushinagar and Sarnath. He will be arriving later in the evening at New Delhi. Tomorrow there will be a ceremonial reception and welcome at Rashtrapati Bhavan. There will be a call on him by the External Affairs Minister followed by delegation-level talks at noon with the Prime Minister of India, signing of some agreements. He would be paying a visit to Akshardham Temple. In the evening he meets the President who also hosts a banquet in the honour of the visiting dignitary.

Given that agriculture is an important area of cooperation between our countries, he is also visiting the Indian Agricultural Research Institute on Saturday the 15th before emplaning for Myanmar. That is the brief programme of the President.

This is his third visit to India. He first visited India in 2004 during the state visit of Sr. General Than Shwe as Secretary-1 as he was called then. He next visited in November 2008 as the Prime Minister of Myanmar to participate in the BIMSTEC Summit in New Delhi.

Given our geographical proximity, India and Myanmar have enjoyed a longstanding relationship underpinned by ethnic, cultural and linguistic proximities, affinities. A large section of the Myanmar population is Buddhist and naturally sees India as their spiritual home. By various counts, something like a million people in Myanmar are of Indian origin.

Four of India’s Northeastern States – Arunachal Pradesh, Nagaland, Manipur and Mizoram – share a land border with Myanmar which is more than 1600 kilometres. In fact, Myanmar is the only Southeast Asian State with which we have a land boundary, and as such it is a bridge between South Asia and Southeast Asia, and also a gateway to the ASEAN region. Naturally connectivity through Myanmar can play a valuable role in spurring economic development in our northeastern region.

Myanmar is also an integral part in our Look East Policy. India and Myanmar are members of a number of regional fora including BIMSTEC, the East Asia Summit, ASEAN Plus Six, as well as other international fora. In 2008, Myanmar became an Observer at the SAARC.

Recent years have not only witnessed robust bilateral cooperation but also a number of high-level visits which include that of our Vice-President in February, 2009. Senior General Than Shwe paid the second state visit to India in July 2010 and, as I mentioned, before that he had visited India in October 2004. After the elections this year, the External Affairs Minister visited Myanmar in June, and now we are in the process of welcoming President Thein Sein. Our relations with Myanmar encompass a number of important areas like security, trade and investments, energy, capacity-building, health and education, science and technology, as well as infrastructure development.

With respect to security we have ongoing cooperation with Myanmar. We have also received assurances that Myanmar territory will not be allowed to be used for insurgent activities against India. Both sides remained in close and regular contact in this regard.

Enhanced connectivity between the two countries is of mutual interest. I would like to note that work is under way in establishing the Kaladan Multi Modal Transport Corridor which would connect our eastern ports to Mizoram through the Sittwe Port in Myanmar and from Sittwe Port the corridor moves North via the revirine and the road segments. A number of other initiatives are also in the pipeline.

India and Myanmar in 2010-11 had a bilateral trade of 1.28 billion dollars which is much below the potential. There was a Joint Trade Committee meeting recently in Delhi on the 27th of September, which was chaired by the Commerce Ministers on both sides. They have established a target of three billion dollars in trade by 2015. We are the biggest importer of pulses from Myanmar. Indian pharmaceutical companies play a lead role, they have a sizeable presence in Myanmar, providing quality pharmaceutical products at very competitive prices. To boost trade and commercial ties it has been decided to have an Enterprise India show at Yangon between the 10th and the 13th of November this year which we hope would become a regular feature in the years ahead.

Myanmar is also emerging as an important partner in India’s quest for energy security. Indian companies like ONGC Videsh Limited, GAIL, the Essar Group already have a presence in the country.

India has been pleased, we believe it is a privilege of ours, to be Myanmar’s developmental partner including in the agriculture sector which is important to both our countries. At the request of Myanmar, Dr. M.S. Swaminathan visited the country recently to ascertain the requirements for setting up an Advanced Centre for Agricultural Research and Education at a place called Yezin. A Detailed Project Report is currently under preparation. We will also be supplying tractors and other agricultural implements to Myanmar.

Myanmar has been quite pleased by the success of an Industrial Training Centre to develop skilled manpower that was established and handed over by India recently at a place called Pakokku. Myanmar has requested India’s assistance for another India-Myanmar Industrial Training Centre at Mying Yan. A MoU for establishment of the same was concluded during the visit of our External Affairs Minister to Myanmar in June this year. We are similarly working closely with Myanmar in fields like IT education, culture, health, disaster relief as well as other areas.

We are pleased at the manner in which our mutually beneficial ties with Myanmar are acquiring momentum. We do attach the highest importance to the state visit of the President of Myanmar and are confident that this would place our relationship on an even more stronger footing.

Thank you. We will be happy to take your questions.

Question: You said that the Minister for Border Development is accompanying the Myanmar President. What is exactly happening so far as the border concerned? We have been discussing this insurgency for a long time and you said that they have assured us that their territory would not be used for insurgency. What exactly is happening on the border? Secondly, what kind of trade opening is there at the border?

Joint Secretary (BSM) (Shri Harsh Vardhan Shringla): Cooperation along the border is a very important part of our bilateral engagement with Myanmar. To that effect we have focused a lot of our efforts in joint projects which are designed to improve connectivity such as Kaladan Multi Modal Transit Project, construction of roads along the border, construction of border points, land customs stations, integrated check-posts and so on and so forth. I think that the emphasis on border trade is also increasing. The recent meeting of the Joint Trade Committee, which Joint Secretary (XP) spoke about, did take into account the need to expand border trade and to bring it under some better organisation and to also see if Indian imports and exports from and to Myanmar can be facilitated through some exchange rate mechanisms that our banks can work on. This is something that we are working on extensively. I think there will be some major developments in that regard in the months to come. One example I will just give you is the Kaladan project in which recently a delegation, of which I was a part, visited the Port of Sittwe where we hope goods from the eastern seaboard of India will come in and will be unloaded at Sittwe on to barges and then would go up the Kaladan river upstream until a point called Paletwa where it will be loaded directly into trucks. We are creating a road through Myanmar territory to join up with the link road in Mizoram. These two roads will join in Mizoram and will link up directly to National Highway 54. As a result we are creating another access road right from our eastern seaboard into northeastern Myanmar thereby using Myanmar to increase connectivity within India. That is just an example. There is also the trilateral highway which links India to Southeast Asia through Myanmar and into Thailand. That is also a road that we are working on. I think that also is something that could facilitate the implementation of our Look East Policy.

Question: Do you have anything to say on insurgency? Is there going to be any discussion during this visit on the aspect of insurgency as well as on the security aspect?

Joint Secretary (BSM): On security cooperation we already have some fairly extensive existing mechanisms. We have a national level mechanism which is headed by the Home Secretary. We have a border level mechanism that is between the two militaries. We have a sector level mechanism at the Joint Secretary level of the Ministry of Home Affairs. We have Foreign Office consultations which also goes into security cooperation. Obviously this is an important element of our bilateral cooperation and this element I expect will be discussed during the visit.

Question: What are the deadlines for these projects?

Joint Secretary (BSM): On the Kaladan project the work has already begun. The companies concerned, that is Inland Waterways Authority of India and Essar, have mobilized fully. They have got equipment, they have got specialists from India, they have hired people from there. We expect that the entire riverine project which means construction of a port in Sittwe, construction of an inland port in Paletwa as well as dredging of the river, will be completed by June 2013. The road section of the project is something that some companies have done a DPR on. That is something that we are working on. We expect that that could also be completed in time to link up with the highway on the Mizoram side which is being constructed by the Government of Mizoram.

Question: When will the Sittwe start operating?

Joint Secretary (BSM): I think the port will be functional by June 2013 and we have every expectation that the deadline will be met. It means that goods from India can already come into a part of Myanmar which is today somewhat inaccessible. Those goods can also go to different interior parts of Myanmar from these ports. The highway itself we expect will be completed sometime around 2014. I think this particular project should be on stream by 2014. Of course there are many elements that have to be tied in. One is that you have to create a completely new road through what is today jungle and hilly terrain. Secondly, you have to ensure that work on both ends coincides. Thirdly, we have to create border facilities on both sides which means land customs stations, immigration check points, etc. So, there are a number of variable factors which are not always within control. But the expectation is that at the earliest this will be set up.

Question: Going on for so long!

Joint Secretary (BSM): Yes, but you will be happy to know it is actually happening now. That is the difference.

Question: Sittwe is a deepwater port, right?

Joint Secretary (BSM): The port will allow a draft of about eight to nine metres.
Question: The quiet diplomacy that India has been engaging in with Myanmar seems to have worked with the elections, and also the kind of steps that he has been taking which has been hailed by many countries. We have been against sanctions. Since Myanmar is often discussed with our western interlocutors, the US and UK, are we also going to ask them now to, it is about time, to lift the sanctions on Myanmar to ensure that they keep on this track?

Official Spokesperson: Our views on the sanctions are very well known. You have very rightly said that we have a distaste for sanctions because we always believe that sanctions do not serve the desired purpose and they affect those sections of the society which are as it is vulnerable. So, that is a very consistent position of the Government of India on the issue of sanctions.

Question: Where are we in terms of matching up with China in the engagement with Myanmar, especially when it comes to energy? On a related note, how are the talks for the India-Myanmar energy pipeline going? I think that is the biggest obstacle for India to invest more in energy in the Bay of Bengal sector. I think even though we have investments in A1 and A3, we have not been able to get them back to India and we are forced to sell them to China.

Official Spokesperson: Let me take the first part of your question and happily turn to him for the second part.

As far as China is concerned let me say it categorically that there is no competition going on there. Relations amongst nations are not a zero sum game. The Prime Minister of India has said it in a different context, but it applies everywhere including here that there is enough room for everybody. We have our relations with Myanmar. I have already tried to elaborate on this important relationship that we have with Myanmar. We similarly have a very important relationship with China. That is how it is. Myanmar has similarly a flourishing relationship with ASEAN region. So, there is no disconnect or there is no competition out there.

Joint Secretary (BSM): Energy cooperation with Myanmar is quite extensive and is expected to increase. You have correctly pointed out that we already have ONGC and Essar that are there in the A1 block and they are doing quite well. The Myanmar Government has also put out tenders for additional onshore blocks in which Indian companies have also expressed interest. Obviously, the companies themselves, these are commercial ventures, look at ways to evacuate energy from wherever they are. This does not have to come necessarily to India, it can also go elsewhere. There can be other arrangements that are worked out which can result in some sort of exchange in terms of resources that are available. There are various things being talked about, but I think it is premature to comment on those. I can only say that the fact that energy cooperation was increasing significantly and that Indian companies are showing greater interest in the energy sector in Myanmar, to which Myanmar is very receptive, indicates that there are good prospects in that area.

Question: As Pranay pointed out, India has been engaging with Myanmar for a long time unlike many western governments which have been very prickly about any great contact. I would like to ask you whether you detect from the Myanmar side a change in the kind of the nature of the engagement that they are seeking, the nature of the kind of relationship they want to have post election, since March. I do not know whether they have ever come with such a huge delegation before for example. Do you sense that their interest in the engagement is kind of diversifying and deepening and that they are looking for different kinds of support and assistance from India?

Official Spokesperson: Amy, I can only speak for India. It is slightly difficult for me to give you a perspective of what Myanmar may or may not be looking outside. But you and I read the same reports and we get a sense of what is happening. Certainly as we see it, there are changes that are coming about; there are reforms that are taking place which is there for everybody to see. As far as the relationship with India is concerned, the contours of the relationship, the thrust of the relationship, the direction of the relationship I think I have given you a sense. If you have any specific question on that, we will be most happy to try and attempt an answer.

Question: Do not you think that they are basically looking for a much stronger relationship with India than maybe they had in the past. I know that there were state visits previously, but do you think their interest in say technical supports, a kind of broader range of cooperation on a broader range of issues is increasing?

Official Spokesperson: Most certainly. Relationships are a process. It is a building process. That is precisely why we have looked at very briefly, given the constraints of time and the trajectory, and I consciously did note that both in terms of content and substance and the breadth and the sweep of the relationship is certainly that it is an upward trajectory there is no doubt about that.

Question: I draw your attention to two recent political developments. One, since yesterday the Myanmar Government started releasing political prisoners, thousands of them. A few days back Myanmar suspended a China-driven construction project. Against the backdrop of these two political developments, how do you look at this visit? Does it connote that Myanmar is looking for more proactive help and cooperation from India in comparison to what they had been receiving from China? Secondly, what is the current status of Hanoi to
New Delhi rail project which was to pass through Myanmar and which was pending because of some construction which is yet to be done there?

Joint Secretary (BSM): I can answer the last part of the question. Essentially there were some existing railway linkages which we are looking at rebuilding as far Myanmar is concerned. That is only at an examination stage. As far as the railway link from Hanoi down is concerned, that has to be seen in the ASEAN rubric and I am not aware of any development in that regard. I think there are talks but I am not sure whether it has reached the level of implementation.

Official Spokesperson: I think I have already answered that question. We look at India-Myanmar relationship through the prism of India-Myanmar relationship. We do not look at it in terms of competition. There is no zero sum game here.

Question: Regarding the human rights issue, I do not know if in India there will be some diplomatic pressure about releasing more of these political prisoners that is going on. Will some human rights issues also be discussed or it is not the policy of yours to discuss these?

Joint Secretary (BSM): We do not normally comment on the internal affairs of states. But it is a fact that Myanmar has made certain significant steps towards political and economic reform. They have allowed the visit of the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Myanmar. After a very long period he has been given unfettered access to whoever he wanted to meet. As has been pointed out just now, they have taken steps to release prisoners including political prisoners. They have reached out to Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. They have started a dialogue with her. They have encouraged her to join the political process and the National League for Democracy. They have unblocked a number of websites, 30,000 websites, which were earlier proscribed. So, they have taken some significant steps towards a certain direction and we have taken note of that. But I do not think we would be in the business of telling them what they should and should not do. Generally we supportive of the transition towards democracy and we certainly do believe that that transition should be broad-based and inclusive. We also have committed that we would assist them in sharing our experiences in parliamentary democracy. We have invited a delegation of parliamentarians to come to India and we believe that that is an area in which we can be of some assistance to a nascent parliamentary democracy.

Question: I have one question related to what Pranay asked. Does India see the changes that are happening in the neighbouring country as a success for its own efforts over the years in engagement with the Government there? And, has there been any contact in this changed environment, with Aung San Suu Kyi by the Indian Ambassador in Yangon?

Joint Secretary (BSM): Again, I do not think we would be attributing these changes to anything that might be influenced by an external environment. As far as Aung San Suu Kyi is concerned, yes, our Ambassador has been in contact, our Ambassador has always been in contact over a period of time. As you are aware, the previous Foreign Secretary when she visited Myanmar in June had called on Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, had a meeting with her. Recently our Ambassador invited Aung San Suu Kyi for a painting exhibition on Rabindranath Tagore in Yangon which she gracefully accepted. So, basically we have been in touch at a diplomatic level.

Question: Is there a plan for Aung San Suu Kyi to come to India? Could I get your sense that ...(Unclear)... ongoing political reforms by the Myanmar Government, has it made easier for India to scale up our relationship with Myanmar?

Official Spokesperson: To your first question, as and when there is a visit of any dignitary we will keep you posted. As far as your second question is concerned, you appreciate that we deal with the Government of the day which is in power. Regardless of the complexion of the Government in our neighbourhood, it is for the people of a country to decide what kind of a government they want, we deal with the Government of the day.

Question: Sir, is there any sort of enhancing of strategic partnership with Myanmar? Would any MoUs be signed on defence and security during the visit since their Chief of General Staff and their Border Minister are here?

Joint Secretary (BSM): As Joint Secretary (XP) has pointed out, we will have as many as thirteen Ministers accompanying the President. There would be extensive discussions. We also hope that there would be discussions between the Ministers themselves and their counterparts in India during their stay here. As far as the outcome of the visit, I think there will be a joint statement that will be issued immediately following the talks tomorrow. Obviously you will see what the various outcomes are that are still under discussion at that time. But we have some plans in terms of projects that we are going to do together, the sort of cooperation that we are going to undertake.

Question: You mentioned the importance of developing transport links. I was just wondering if there are any plans to develop the StilWell road and if not, why not?

Joint Secretary (BSM): Of course we cannot do everything at the same time and we have taken on some fairly heavy commitments in terms of developing connectivity along our border with Myanmar. StilWell road is certainly one of those roads that could be taken up in future, but there is no decision on that as of now.

Question: Is it a coincidence that we are seeing consecutive state visits from the Southeast Asian nations? Also, do you have any information whether other high ranking leaders of Myanmar will be visiting China soon, like Vietnam did?

Official Spokesperson: On the second question, I would suggest you can ask either the Chinese or the Myanmarese. That is an easier question to answer. In respect to your first question, we unveiled our Look East Policy in 1992. We have historical affinities, we have great affinities – linguistic, cultural, ethnic – with the ASEAN region which we consider to be a part of our extended neighbourhood. With many of the countries we have maritime boundaries, etc. So, it is very natural for us to engage closely with our ASEAN neighbours and friends. You are aware that we have an annual summit with the ASEAN and next year for the first time the India-ASEAN Summit will be held in New Delhi. You are aware that we already have a free trade agreement in goods with ASEAN, and we are very actively negotiating a free trade agreement on services and investments. We have had comprehensive economic partnership agreements with a number of countries in the ASEAN region. More are being negotiated. All that I am trying to say is it is very natural and we welcome the kind of engagement that is taking place with the ASEAN region.

Question: As a country which has already invested and has plans of investing more in Myanmar, is there a lesson for India on the Chinese hydel project which has been stopped worth 3.6 billion? What is the lesson that we draw?

Official Spokesperson: We have been engaging and we are looking at continuing the close engagement with Myanmar. One of the areas of cooperation is also the energy sector, which I mentioned. So, both sides find the cooperation of the kind that obtains between our two countries to be mutually beneficial, and we hope to continue on that path.

Question: Have there been any talks with Myanmar regarding counterterrorist activities and stopping insurgency, etc.?

Joint Secretary (BSM): I told you there are already institutional mechanisms in which security cooperation is discussed. This has been continuing on a sort of a regular, ongoing basis. And obviously any high-level visit would also be an occasion on which to review the arrangements for security cooperation and it should be undertaken during this visit as well.

Question: What is the total Indian investment in Myanmar? Besides oil exploration as you mentioned by ONGC and Essar, are there other kinds of investments by other companies?
Joint Secretary (BSM): There are a number of investments that are in the pipeline. Buses ...(Unclear)... plant by the Tatas. There are investments in the agricultural sector. There are various sectors in which Indian companies have an interest. I think in the manufacturing sector a number of areas of interest have come up to our companies but much of this is in the pipeline, and I do not think we can go into that now. All I can say is that there is far greater interest by Indian industry in cooperating with Myanmar on the economic side. There will be a meeting that will be taken by FICCI also tomorrow in which some of the Economic Ministers of Myanmar will make presentations and will address business people from FICCI. I think many of our companies will be interested in that engagement.

Question: Sir, in the last two, three months there have been some statements made by Myanmar authorities saying that Myanmar does not have any plan to acquire nuclear weapons. In fact, they have gone ahead and said that they do not even have any plan to pursue any programme for peaceful uses of nuclear energy. Do you share your perception on this? Can we take these claims on face value?

Official Spokesperson: I do not have any information one way or the other to react or comment on what you are asking. For you the best is to address this question to the country concerned.

Question: Would Mr. Shringla just be able to quantify the volume of Indian investment in Myanmar at the moment? What if any are the agreements that are going to be signed - MoUs, agreements, what have you - and broadly the areas that they represent?

Joint Secretary (BSM): We have extended a number of lines of credit to Myanmar in the past, and we expect also to have some lines of credit extended during the visit.

Question: Approximate size?

Joint Secretary (BSM): It is being worked out. We will know tomorrow. But clearly that is also expected to encourage Indian investments in Myanmar. It is expected to encourage bilateral trade. It is expected to encourage projects that are being undertaken jointly by the two countries. I think all of this is designed to stimulate economic activity between the two countries. As I said, there are other projects also particularly in the agricultural sector. All of this is again an effort to increase the economic cooperation between the two countries.

Question: Any agreements?

Joint Secretary (BSM): There will be some agreements signed. It is a matter of detail.
Question: Is there any service and support that our armed forces will be providing to the Myanmar military? I understand they are procuring a lot of Russian equipment. And also in terms of nuclear cooperation, are we discussing anything since energy is of course an area of interest and cooperation? Are we looking at nuclear energy cooperation?

Official Spokesperson: As far as I know, in the field of energy what we are looking at and what we are collaborating with each other, is in the hydrocarbons sector and the hydroelectric power.

Joint Secretary (BSM): Our cooperation in the military sector is mainly through capacity-building, training, assistance in terms of some non-lethal equipment that the Myanmar military has vested us including road-building equipment and that sort of thing. That has been the nature of our defence cooperation.

Question: Sir, you have mentioned about Myanmar promising New Delhi that its territory will not be used for anti-India activities. What about Myanmar's response to the proposal from Indian side about a joint military operation against these forces operating out of Myanmar?

Official Spokesperson: We have already given you a sense of the nature of cooperation with Myanmar on this very important aspect of security and defence. We have shared with you what the position is of the Government of Myanmar. I have mentioned in my opening remarks that we are in regular and close touch in the matter. It is an ongoing dialogue, ongoing cooperation in the matter. So, that is all that I can say. You will appreciate that for me to get into specific details is not at all feasible.

Question: Sir, are we having some kind of a discussion with them on the security plan, when we talk about cross-border highway roads, even the StilWell project, because Chinese have some interest in this? Correct me if I am wrong.

Joint Secretary (BSM): We have worked with them on a number of road projects and we are continuing to do that, and we have not felt the need for any security cover or security cooperation in that regard. These efforts have been mainly to improve trade and improve people-to-people contacts and there has been no real threat assessment as far as I am aware of. Obviously if there is, then we will take it up and both sides will have to address that. But so far this has been essentially good for people living in the area. A lot of these roads that are being constructed are really in areas which have been relatively isolated and relatively away from the centres of economic activity. So, in a sense it has been welcomed by the local populations wherever these activities have been undertaken. And a lot of it is also to strengthen development of communities, etc., so that they have access to hospitals, schools, they get goods, etc. So, I do not think this involved any conflict of interest or that we have come into any areas of security concern.

Question: Do we have an extradition treaty with Myanmar? I understand we have a mutual legal assistance treaty but does it cover extradition, or whether there are plans to have an extradition treaty?

Joint Secretary (BSM): As you said, we have a mutual legal assistance treaty. As far as extradition treaty is concerned, I do not think that is on the cards right now.

Question: Some of the ULFA leaders, one or two of them, are supposed to be in Myanmar. Will it come up for talks? Will we ask them to return them, as Bangladesh has done?

Official Spokesperson: I think on this important issue, what could be said and shared, we have shared with you. You will kindly excuse us if we are not in a position to get into more specific details with you and you can understand that.

Question: Is there any development regarding extradition process for Iqbal Mirchi?

Official Spokesperson: You would have seen the statement I made yesterday to say that the Red Corner Notice that has been issued in respect of Mr. Iqbal Mirchi continues to be valid, which means that he is a person of interest to us, that he is wanted in India, and that we do seek his extradition. I had also said there that we are now initiating the process of extradition because it is, as I said, a process.

Thank you very much.
407. Joint Statement issued on the occasion of the State Visit of the President of Myanmar U Thein Sein.

New Delhi, October 14, 2011.

1. At the invitation of the President of India, Smt. 8. The visit represented the first State visit to India following the swearing in of a new Government in Myanmar in March 2011 that marks welcome progress in moving towards an open and democratic framework.

9. The Prime Minister of India congratulated the President of Myanmar on the transition towards democratic Government and offered all necessary assistance in further strengthening this democratic transition in an inclusive and broad based manner. He welcomed the ongoing efforts at political, economic and social reform in Myanmar. He also welcomed the convening of the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, Pyithu Hluttaw and Amyotha Hluttaw (National Parliament of Myanmar) and the elected assemblies in all the States and Regions in Myanmar and expressed readiness to share India’s own experiences in evolving parliamentary rules, procedures and practices. In this context it was noted that the Speaker of the Pyithu Hluttaw (Lower House of Myanmar’s Parliament) has been invited to lead a delegation to India in December 2011.

10. The Prime Minister of India and the President of Myanmar reiterated their shared commitment to strengthening and broadening the multifaceted relationship based on shared history, civilizational ties and close religious, linguistic and cultural affinities and to take it to a new level. While acknowledging the fact that both sides have a responsibility to promote peace, security and stability in the region, they emphasized the need to intensify economic, social and developmental engagement in order to bring about overall socio-economic betterment and inclusive growth.

12. Both sides reaffirmed their unequivocal and uncompromising position against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. They agreed on enhancing effective cooperation and coordination between the security forces of the two countries in tackling the deadly menace of insurgency and terrorism, which has caused countless loss of innocent lives. Both sides also underscored the need to strengthen institutional mechanisms for sharing of intelligence to combat the menace of insurgency, arms smuggling and drug trafficking. In this context, they discussed matters relating to further strengthening of border management mechanisms. The two leaders reiterated the assurance that the territory of either would not be allowed for activities inimical to the other and resolved not to allow their respective territory to be used for training, sanctuary and other operations by terrorist and insurgent organizations and their operatives.

13. They welcomed the scheduling of meeting of the Heads of Survey Department of India and Myanmar in November 2011, directed the Heads to jointly work out and implement a schedule for inspection and maintenance of boundary pillars in the open season in 2011-12 in a time bound manner.

14. Both sides reiterated their common desire to complete the repatriation process of Myanmar fishermen who drifted into Indian maritime territory and who are being looked after by Indian authorities in Port Blair, Andaman & Nicobar.

15. The two sides reviewed the infrastructure development and cooperation projects that are being undertaken in Myanmar with technical and financial assistance from Government of India, including in the field of roads, waterways, power, health, education and industrial training, telecommunications, and others.

16. During the visit, the following documents were signed:

1. Memorandum of Understanding for the upgradation of the Yangon Children’s Hospital and Sittwe General Hospital; and

17. The Myanmar side conveyed its gratitude for Lines of Credit amounting to nearly US$ 300 million that had been extended by India, including for the development of railways, transport, power transmission lines, oil refinery, OFC link, etc. The President of Myanmar welcomed the interest of Indian companies to invest in Myanmar.

18. The Prime Minister of India announced the extension of a new concessional facility of US$500 million Line of Credit to Myanmar for specific projects, including irrigation projects, each of which will be duly processed and approved in accordance with the modalities applicable for LDCs for such lines of credit. The President of Myanmar thanked the Prime Minister of India for extending the new credit facility.

19. The two leaders welcomed the progress made towards enhancing connectivity between the two countries to mutual benefit of the peoples of the two countries. They expressed satisfaction at the implementation of the Kaladan Multi-modal Transit Transport Project, especially the port development and Inland waterways. It was decided that the road component of the project be started at the earliest, a study be undertaken on the commercial usages of the Kaladan project and necessary agreements to operationalise the route finalised. It was also decided to open an additional Land Customs Station / border trade point on the India-Myanmar border to allow for the smooth flow of goods generated by the Kaladan Project.

20. Both sides reiterated their commitment for an early implementation of the Rhi-Tiddim Road Development Project with grant assistance from India.

21. Reviewing the progress in establishing trilateral connectivity from Moreh in India to Mae Sot in Thailand via Myanmar, it was noted that substantial progress had been achieved in the preparation of a DPR for roads and causeways in Myanmar. Both sides reiterated the commitment to realize this project.

22. The two leaders also expressed their commitment to enhance cooperation in the area of Science & Technology. They noted that following the renewal of Science & Technology Agreement in 2010 the Programme of Cooperation in Science & Technology for the period of 2012-15 was signed during the current visit. The Prime Minister of India announced India’s support for training of Myanmar researchers in the areas of mutual interest and twinning of Indian and Myanmar institutions under India-Myanmar Programme of Cooperation in Science & Technology.

23. The two sides also expressed their commitment to enhance cooperation in the area of agriculture. They noted that the contract for the supply of agricultural machinery under the US$ 10 million grant assistance from India had been awarded. The Prime Minister of India announced that India would extend technical and financial support for following new projects:

(i) Setting up an Advanced Centre for Agricultural Research and Education (ACARE) in Yezin; and

(ii) Setting up a Rice Bio Park demonstrating the various techniques in rice biomass utilisation in the Integrated Demonstration Farm at Nay Pyi Taw.

The President of Myanmar expressed gratitude for the assistance being extended by the Government of India and emphasised that these institutions could play a vital role in reviving the country’s agricultural sector, on which over 70% of the population is dependent.

24. Recognising the fundamental place of education and human resource development in bringing about overall economic development, and the importance of IT in today’s global scenario, the Prime Minister of India announced India’s support for setting up an Information Technology Institute in Mandalay in cooperation with the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

25. Welcoming the successful completion of the Industrial Training Centre in Pakokku, with India’s assistance, the two sides expressed satisfaction at the progress on the setting up of another Industrial Training Centre at Myingyan with technical support from M/s HMTI.

26. The Myanmar side expressed appreciation for India’s assistance in the relief and rehabilitation efforts that followed the severe earthquake that struck North-Eastern Shan State in March 2011. It was noted that the assistance of over US$ 1 million from India, which included assistance in the reconstruction of a high school and 6 primary schools in the affected area, was timely and catered to urgent requirements of the people of the area.

27. The two sides agreed to promote trade, investment and economic cooperation in a sustainable manner. In this context, the two leaders endorsed the understandings arrived at the 4th meeting of the bilateral Joint Trade Committee that was held in New Delhi recently, and called for the expeditious implementation of decision taken, including the proposal to establish a Trade and Investment Forum at the business level, expand the basket of goods under border trade, visit of an Indian banking delegation to Myanmar to facilitate better trade and payment arrangements, etc. The two sides also welcomed the decision to hold the ‘Enterprise India’ Show in Yangon on November 10-14, 2011 and urged companies on both sides to look seriously at opportunities in the other. The two sides encouraged business associations in their respective countries to enter into closer ties with their counterparts and also participate in each other’s trade fairs.

28. With a view to promoting border trade, the two sides agreed that meetings between Indian and Myanmar customs, immigration, border chambers of commerce, officials of bank branches at the border, border trade officials (Tamu and Rhi –OSS Team) and Government officials would take place at Tamu-Moreh and Rhi-Zowkhathar at regular intervals. The business representatives of the Manipur/Sagaing Region and of Mizoram/Chin State will also participate in these meetings.

29. It was agreed to consider opening up new Border Trading points along the border for the economic upliftment of the people of the area. It was also agreed to consider better functioning of the existing points and to facilitate movement of people and goods between the two countries.
30. Recognising the importance of the power sector as a major area of cooperation, the two sides reiterated their commitment to cooperate in the implementation of the Tamanthi and Shwezaye projects on the Chindwin River Basin in Myanmar. They welcomed the successful completion of the task of updating the DPR on the Tamanthi project by NHPC on the basis of essential additional investigations. They noted that the final updated DPR for Shwezaye would be available by March 2012. They directed the concerned officials on both sides to finalise plans for implementation of the project within six months.

31. Both leaders underscored the need for energy security and expressed satisfaction at ongoing bilateral cooperation in the area. They agreed to enhance cooperation in the area of oil and natural gas. In this context, the Myanmar side welcomed the substantial investments made by Indian companies like GAIL, ESSAR, ONGC and others in off-shore and on-shore blocks, and construction of natural gas pipelines. Myanmar agreed to encourage further investments by Indian companies, both in public and private sector, in the oil and natural gas sectors.

32. It was also agreed to extend bilateral cooperation to generation of electricity from renewable energy sources, including solar and wind. In this regard, companies, both in public and private sectors, in India and Myanmar would be encouraged to set up joint projects.

33. Appreciating the importance of people-to-people contacts in forging even closer ties, the two sides agreed to take steps to ease the movement of people between India and Myanmar. The Myanmar side thanked India for the facilities and courtesies being extended to Myanmar pilgrims visiting India.

34. The two sides agreed on the need for expansion of air connectivity between the two countries, and directed the concerned officials to work towards enhancing air services which could cover more carriers, flights and destinations. It was noted that this would transform business and cultural ties between the two nations.

35. Both sides agreed to examine feasibility of establishing railway links, ferry and bus services between the two countries. In this context, both sides agreed to examine commencement of ferry services on the Kolkata-Yangon and Chennai-Yangon routes.

36. The two leaders agreed for early upgradation of the microwave link between Moreh and Mandalay or other necessary link under the Indian line of Credit, and directed the concerned officials to work towards establishment of the new Optical Fibre link between Monywa to Rhi-Zawkhatar with Indian assistance.
37. The Myanmar side expressed gratitude for the training offered by India under the ITEC and TCS schemes to Myanmar scholars and Government officials. The Indian side agreed to Myanmar’s request to increasing the number of training slots offered annually to Myanmar nationals to 250 from 2012-2013.

38. Both sides agreed to support joint research projects and exchanges of a historical, archaeological, cultural and educational nature. In this context, it was agreed to enter into a comprehensive Cultural Exchange Programme to promote bilateral exchanges with special emphasis on the four Indian states of Arunachal Pradesh, Nagaland, Manipur and Mizoram and cooperation in the fields of art, archaeology, museology, sports, media, etc. Both sides agreed to review the Memorandum of Understanding between the Ministry of Religious Affairs, the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the Indian Council for Cultural Relations, the Republic of India, for expeditious implementation. It was agreed that both sides would jointly organise a high level International conference of Buddhist Philosophy in Myanmar in 2012.

39. It was noted with satisfaction that two teams of professionals from the Archeological Survey of India (ASI) visited Myanmar and carried out detailed studies on the conservation and restoration of the Ananda Temple in Bagan, Myanmar. It was agreed that restoration work on the site would start at the earliest based on the report by ASI.

40. With a view to strengthen diplomatic and consular presence in each other’s countries, it was noted with appreciation that the Myanmar side had agreed that it shall make available the identified plots of land in Nay Pyi Taw, its Capital city, on a lease in perpetuity, and shall transfer the ownership of the Life Insurance Corporation of India (LIC) properties in Yangon in the name of the Government of India on a lease for 60 years extendable further by a block period of 30 years each time, on the same terms, as long as India maintains its Diplomatic/Consular Mission in Myanmar. With regard to transfer of the ownership of the LIC properties in Yangon, it was agreed in principle that the Government of Myanmar, in exercise of the powers vested in it under the Article 14 of the Transfer of Immovable Property Restriction Law 1987 authorized the LIC to handover the land and building thereon at 545-547 Merchant Street and 654-666 Merchant Street, Yangon. The Government of India agreed to the request of the Government of Myanmar to facilitate allocation of land in Bodh Gaya for setting up a Buddhist monastery for use of pilgrims and monks from Myanmar.

41. While discussing international developments, the two sides emphasized the importance of an effective multilateral system, centred on a strong United Nations, as a key factor in tackling global challenges. In this context, they stressed the urgent need to pursue the reform of the United Nations including the Security Council, to make it more representative, credible and effective. The President of Myanmar reiterated his country’s support for India’s candidature for the permanent membership of the United Nations Security Council.

42. The two sides emphasized the importance of close coordination towards the cause of regional cooperation. The Indian leadership offered its good wishes to Myanmar for a successful term as BIMSTEC Chair, including its proposal to host the next BIMSTEC Summit meeting. The Indian side also offered to deepen its engagement with Myanmar under its “Initiative for ASEAN Integration (IAI) programme”. Myanmar being a natural bridge between the ASEAN and India, the Indian side reiterated its intention of building upon the commonalities and synergies between the two countries to advance its ‘Look East’ Policy.

43. The President of Myanmar thanked the President of India for the warm and gracious hospitality extended to him and the members of his delegation during their stay in India.

44. President U Thein Sein extended invitations to the President and Prime Minister of India to visit Myanmar at a mutually convenient time. The invitations were accepted and it was agreed that the dates of the visits would be decided by mutual consultations through diplomatic channels.
Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Banquet hosted by her in honour of the President of the Republic of Myanmar U. Thein Sein.

New Delhi, October 14, 2011.

Your Excellency U Thein Sein,
President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, Madame Khin Khin Win,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to extend to Your Excellency and to Madame Khin Khin Win a very warm welcome to India. It is a momentous occasion to receive the leader of a neighbouring country with whom India shares historic bonds. Our joy is redoubled as you come to India soon after assuming the Presidency of the newly elected Government.

The relationship between India and Myanmar has stood the test of time. We have deep and abiding historical, cultural, religious and societal bonds. We also have the shared experience of our respective independence movements where our leaders fought against and succeeded in ending British colonial rule. We rejoiced when Myanmar attained independence. This achievement was aptly described by our first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru as, “an event of significance to the whole of Asia.” Both our Governments pursued non-aligned and independent foreign policies in the decades following our independence.

The Buddhist legacy we share has brought us closer. Tradition has it that Emperor Ashoka sent two monks, Sona and Uttara, to Suvarna-bhumi, the golden land of Myanmar. They went as messengers of peace, friendship and goodwill. The legacy of Buddhism has bequeathed to us a common heritage, imparting an enduring quality to our interaction.

India’s ‘Look East’ Policy has in practical terms been a voyage of rediscovery. We are engaged in rejuvenating the historical, cultural and commercial bonds between India and Southeast Asia. When we look eastwards, we first see Myanmar. You occupy a central place in our vision and approach of rebuilding our Eastern connections. Our bilateral relationship is a factor of peace and stability for the region and has an important bearing on initiatives for regional co-operation. We share common interests in security and border management. We should assign special attention to the economic progress of the areas along the border between our two countries. Myanmar would then truly emerge as our gateway to ASEAN, and we hope India can act as your bridge to the entire South Asian Region.

Excellency,

Today, Myanmar stands at the dawn of a new era in its history. You have brought about significant changes in your political system by introducing a Constitutional government, with features of parliamentary democracy. We applaud these efforts. In these early days of your Presidency, you have also emphasized the rule of law and good governance. You have further indicated your Government will be putting in place a market economy while also focusing on agricultural development.

As a close and well disposed neighbour, we remain willing to offer any assistance in implementing these steps. We share your desire for a democratic, stable and prosperous Myanmar. We support your aim of revitalizing the agricultural base of your country, building up industrial centres and enhancing educational capacities. We will extend a hand of assistance to your endeavours.

Excellency, you began your visit to India by paying a visit to the holiest of Buddhist sites, Bodhgaya, on the auspicious Full Moon Day of Thadingyut, which is an auspicious day in the Buddhist calendar. I take this opportunity to convey my good wishes to you and to the people of Myanmar.

Our discussions today have been fruitful. We have signed agreements and launched many new initiatives. It will be our endeavour to take our bilateral relations to new heights. Your visit has opened a new and more dynamic chapter in our bilateral ties.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I now request you to join me in a toast:

— to the health and happiness of His Excellency President U Thein Sein and Madame Khin Khin Win; — to the progress and prosperity of the friendly people of Myanmar; and — to the continuing friendship and co-operation between India and Myanmar.

409. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Parliamentary Delegation led by Speaker of the Pyithu Hluttaw (Lower House) Myanmar Parliament.

New Delhi, December 12, 2011.

Thura U. Shwe Mann, Speaker of the Lower House of the Myanmar Parliament, is leading a high level parliamentary delegation to India from December 11-17, 2011. The visit is taking place in response to a joint invitation extended by Shri M. Hamid Ansari, Vice President of India/Chairman, Rajya Sabha and Smt. Meira Kumar, Speaker of the Lok Sabha.

Thura U. Shwe Mann was elected Speaker of the Lower House when the Hluttaw (Parliament of Myanmar) was convened for the first time on January 31, 2011 following general elections in Myanmar on November 7, 2010.

The visit of the parliamentary delegation led by Thura U. Shwe Mann follows the State Visit of President U. Thein Sein of Myanmar to India in October this year. During the visit of the President of Myanmar, the Prime Minister of India had offered all necessary assistance in further strengthening the democratic transition of Myanmar in an inclusive and broad based manner and expressed readiness to share India's own experiences in evolving parliamentary rules, procedures and practices.

The delegation is expected to call on the Vice President/Chairman Rajya Sabha, and meet the Speaker of the Lok Sabha, Finance Minister, External Affairs Minister, Parliamentary Affairs Minister and the Leaders of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha. The delegation is also scheduled to interact with the Chairman and members of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on External Affairs, meet with the Chief Minister of Delhi and observe proceedings in both Houses of Parliament.

The delegation would also visit places of economic, cultural and historic importance in New Delhi and Mumbai during their stay in India.

NEW ZEALAND
410. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the visit of Prime Minister of New Zealand,
New Delhi, June 27, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. Let me start with an important announcement. (regarding appointment of new Foreign Secretary (See Document Nos.13&19).

Next, my colleague Mr. Arun Goel and I would like to brief you about the ongoing maiden state visit of Prime Minister John Key to India. He arrived yesterday. Today he is visiting Agra. Tomorrow morning there will be a ceremonial reception by the Prime Minister of India at Rashtrapati Bhavan. There will be a call on him by the External Affairs Minister. He next calls on Hon. Rashtrapatiji. Tomorrow at 1300 hours the three apex business chambers - CII, FICCI and ASSOCHAM - will be hosting a luncheon in his honour.

By the way the Prime Minister would be accompanied by his spouse, the Trade Minister and a large business delegation, in addition to senior officials.

Again tomorrow, in the second half of the day there will be a call on him by the Leader of Opposition. He next calls on the Vice-President and also holds a meeting with Chairperson of UPA Shrimati Sonia Gandhi.

In the evening, he would meet the Prime Minister of India and hold delegation-level talks. There will be signing of some agreements and the Prime Minister, along with his spouse Shrimati Gursharan Kaur, will host a banquet in the honour of the visiting dignitary and members of his delegation.

On Wednesday 29th he emplanes for Mumbai where he would call on the Governor of Maharashtra who would also host a dinner for him. In addition, there will be a number of engagements in Mumbai which include the visit to the Film City, and a business luncheon. He leaves Mumbai on Thursday 30th morning.

We have traditionally enjoyed close and friendly relations with New Zealand based on a number of complementarities such as membership of the Commonwealth; we are both parliamentary democracies; we speak the same language; and also share a passion for cricket.

We have also enjoyed active people-to-people relationship given the fact that two and a half per cent of the New Zealand population constitutes people of Indian origin, who have been there for long periods, many of whom have assumed key positions in the New Zealand society. This includes the Governor-General of New Zealand Hon. Anand Satyanand.

You would recall that Governor-General Satyanand had paid a state visit to India in 2008 and has since visited two more times in October 2010 last year for the Commonwealth Games and in January this year as the Chief Guest of the Pravasi Bharatiya Convention where he was also bestowed with the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman.

Their Parliament comprises of 122 members of which two are of Indian origin including one Member of Parliament from the Labour Party and another from the ruling National Party.

Prime Ministers of India and New Zealand have been meeting regularly on the margins of the international fora including during CHOGM, in Trinidad and Tobago in November 2009 and again last year on the margins of the EAS Summit in Hanoi.

In recent years our high-level contacts and exchanges have increased noticeably. Just in the preceding months we have had visits from New Zealand of their Minister of Trade, of their Ministers of Immigration, Defence, Education, besides the Speaker of the New Zealand Parliament. On the other hand our Commerce and Industries Minister, Minister of Power, Minister for Overseas Indian Affairs, Minister of Fertiliser and other dignitaries have visited New Zealand.

During the Governor-General's state visit to India in 2008, the Sir Edmund Hillary Fellowships were instituted to promote visits from India to New Zealand of distinguished persons. Within that framework, as the inaugural Sir Edmund Hillary Fellow, Shri Rahul Gandhi had visited New Zealand in February last year.

As I mentioned, the Trade Minister is visiting along with the Prime Minister, which is indicative of the emphasis that New Zealand accords to trade and economic relations with India. New Zealand has designated or sees India as a core trade, economic and political partner by 2015 and is collaborating actively with India to attain that objective.

We not only reciprocate that vision but would also like to benefit from New Zealand's world-class expertise in sectors like food processing, nanotechnology, robotics, dairy farming, earthquake resistant engineering, post-harvest technologies and logistic management in the agricultural sector.

Our bilateral trade has been growing steadily which was NZ $ 1.265 billion in 2010. It does not do justice to our potential. However, as I have already pointed out, the economic and commercial dimension of the bilateral relationship is now poised for a significant growth. New Zealand is also a reliable source for us for high quality raw materials such as coking coke, timber, wool, leather and skin.

It is regarded as an ideal destination for India's ODI in sectors like forestry, mining and IT. By the same token, New Zealand sees India's large market offering great promise for long-term partnership. They would like to service the market with quality goods and services, transfer of technology and foreign direct investment.

In addition, dairy and agriculture are two of the focus areas for New Zealand. They see a huge and growing demand for milk and milk products in India given the fact that we have 20 per cent of world's children and 17 per cent of the world's population. You are aware that while the world is aging, India is growing younger with one of the youngest populations in the world.

We can also benefit from New Zealand's known prowess in food processing, agricultural productivity, cold chains and the others. And this explains the strong interest in both countries to conclude a free trade agreement at the earliest. Already four rounds of discussions beginning in April 2010 in Wellington have taken place, the last being in March this year in New Delhi.

After the fourth round, the Commerce and Industry Minister visited New Zealand in May this year when several areas of cooperation were identified. I mentioned the potential in the IT sector and no wonder our IT majors including Mahindra, Satyam, HCL, Wipro, Infosys, TCS are already present in New Zealand. We have Indian banks there, Indian insurance companies there. So, we do have already important and growing presence of Indian industries in New Zealand.

Also in recent years New Zealand has become a favourite destination for Indian students who are currently estimated at close to 10,000 from a mere 163 about ten years ago. During the visit of our Minister of Human Resource Development last year, an Education Cooperation Arrangement between India and New Zealand was renewed for a further period of five years. We also have a Joint Working Group on Education which meets regularly, and the last meeting was in New Delhi on the 9th of February 2010, when specific areas of cooperation were identified, including technical and vocational training, distance learning, higher education, cooperation in research and so on.

I mentioned that we have robust people-to-people relations, and let me add sporting and cultural links to this. India conferred the Padma Vibhushan on the late Sir Edmund Hillary, during our Republic Day in 2008.
You will be interested to know that some 120 Indian feature films have been shot in some of the beautiful locales in New Zealand. And given the sizeable percentage of PIOs in New Zealand, Divali is celebrated as a national festival and last year the Governor-Generals of Auckland and Wellington opened the Divali celebrations.

New Zealand is among the first few countries whose nationals are given tourist visas on arrival. And a sizeable number of Indian tourists have been going to New Zealand.

To sum up, the thrust of PM John Key’s visit will revolve around economic and commercial aspects. Both sides see good prospects for enhanced engagement in sectors like education, agriculture, dairy farming, food processing, besides of course learning from, benefiting from New Zealand’s expertise and world-class technologies in various sectors including industries.

Some agreements will also be concluded during the visit.

411. Statement by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh during the State Visit of Prime Minister John Key of New Zealand

New Delhi, June 28, 2011.

Your Excellency Prime Minister John Key

Distinguished Representatives of the media,

I am very happy to welcome the Prime Minister of New Zealand, His Excellency John Key on his first visit to our country.

India's relations with New Zealand are warm, cordial and friendly. We share many common values, in particular our commitment to democracy, freedom and the rule of law. These make us natural partners in working with each other and in meeting global challenges.

My discussions with Prime Minister Key were wide ranging and forward looking.

India welcomes increased trade and investment flows between India and New Zealand and would like to expand our trade significantly beyond current levels. The Prime Minister and I reviewed the status of our negotiations on the bilateral Free Trade Agreement. These are proceeding well and in the right direction.

New Zealand has proven strengths in the dairy, agriculture, food processing and renewable energy sectors. These are areas of great relevance to our development priorities. The Indian services sector can similarly contribute to New Zealand's economic competitiveness.

People to people exchanges, sports and tourism have emerged as major growth sectors in our relations. We have decided to encourage cooperation in these areas to the maximum extent possible.

Prime Minister Key and I have agreed on a new Education Cooperation Initiative. This jointly-funded Initiative will promote partnerships in two key streams - higher education and research and skills and vocational education. I am confident this will receive an enthusiastic response from students on both sides.

Two agreements on Audio-visual co-productions and a Protocol for Cooperation on Science and Innovation have been signed. These will facilitate cooperation at the industry and academic levels.

New Zealand is an influential and active participant in the regional processes in the Asia Pacific region. India and New Zealand are members of the East Asia Summit, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the ASEAN Defence Ministers Meeting Plus and the Asia Europe Meeting, ASEM, mechanisms. We both recognise that the time has come for us to intensify our cooperation and consultations on issues relating to the Asia Pacific region.

New Zealand, like us, has a stake in ensuring the safety of sea lanes of communications and combating piracy. We have agreed to explore possibilities for greater cooperation in these areas.

In conclusion, I wish to thank Prime Minister Key for his important leadership in forging closer links with India. This is a sentiment that I fully reciprocate.

Given the goodwill that exists in our countries for each other, I am confident that the India-New Zealand relationship is poised for all-round expansion in the years ahead.

I thank you.

412. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the meeting between Minister Anand Sharma and New Zealand Prime Minister John Key to enhance prospects of greater trade and economic cooperation between the two countries.

New Delhi, June 28, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma met the visiting prime Minister of New Zealand Mr. John Key along with the Trade Minister of New Zealand Mr. Tim Groser. The PM is leading a large business delegation in his first visit to India. While delivering his keynote address with the business session with the P M of New Zealand, Shri Sharma said, "India and New Zealand have a longstanding and positive bilateral relationship. The two economies are essentially complementary and there is considerable potential to increase bilateral trade and economic relations. It's time to give depth and width to our partnership. India is looking forward to partner with New Zealand in Infrastructure sector, agro- food processing, renewable energy and IT." The Commerce Minister appreciated the state of art technology being used by dairy industry and renewal energy and asked for bringing such technology to India. He also appreciated New Zealand for taking forward the Doha development round and believing in rule based and rule governed multilateral system.

Shri Sharma later informed that, "We had covered all aspects of bilateral economic engagement, India-New Zealand FTA progress and the state of play in the WTO negotiations. We had also indentified several areas of possible bilateral cooperation-including post harvest technologies/logistic management for agriculture sector, renewable energy sectors including wind and geo-thermal energy, tourism, films (including animation films), pharmaceuticals, education; IT enabled services, financial services and others”.

He further said, “During my business forum meetings in New Zealand, I had stressed India's core competence in IT related services, pharmaceuticals, film technology, green technologies and others. I had also stressed the complementarities which can be fruitfully enjoyed in sectors such as tourism and education”:

India and New Zealand trade has more than trebled between 2004-05 and 2010-11. In 2010-11, Indian exports to New Zealand were US $ 191.39 million and Indian imports from New Zealand were US $ 621.55 million. Total bilateral trade was thus about US $ 812.94 million and grew 7.83% over the previous year.

Top ten items of India's exports include parts of engineering goods, mineral fuels, pharmaceutical products, natural or cultured pearls, precious & semi precious stones, items of jewellery set in gold and diamonds, textiles, inorganic chemicals and electrical machinery and equipment. These top ten items explain 68.17% of India's total exports to New Zealand. And major items of India's imports are mineral fuels and mineral oils and products of their distillation, wood and articles of wood, dairy products, papers and paperboard, wool, engineering goods, raw hides and skins and leather, iron and steel, electrical machinery and edible fruit and nuts. These top 10 items explain 94.09% of India's total imports from New Zealand.

The Prime Minister of New Zealand H.E. Mr John Key paid a state visit to India from 26-30 June at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh. The New Zealand Prime Minister was accompanied by the Trade Minister Hon Tim Groser, M.P. Mr. Kanwaljit Singh Bakshi and a high level business delegation.

Commonwealth ties, shared democratic values, people-to-people and sporting links underpin the vibrant bilateral relationship between India and New Zealand. The two Prime Ministers acknowledged the strength of the ties and agreed there was great potential for further growth in the relationship. They welcomed the enhanced engagement across a range of trade and economic sectors, including science and innovation, education and defence.

Prime Minister Key thanked Prime Minister Singh for the support and sympathy extended by the Government of India to New Zealand, and especially to the residents of Christchurch, following the devastating earthquake on February 22 2011. The two Leaders affirmed the importance of cooperation on disaster preparedness and emergency response management systems, a shared area of focus for the two countries working together in regional forums such as the East Asia Summit.

The two Prime Ministers welcomed the increased trade and investment flows between India and New Zealand and noted the potential to expand bilateral trade significantly. The two Prime Ministers reiterated the commitment to early conclusion of the Free Trade Agreement (FTA) negotiations, noting that the ongoing negotiations were proceeding well. Successful conclusion of a high quality and comprehensive FTA would provide the platform for stronger economic interaction to the benefit of both economies.

The two Prime Ministers acknowledged the complementary nature of the key exports from each country and noted the role that bilateral trade and sharing of expertise between them could play in ensuring food security for the future.

Building on existing film industry links, an Agreement on Audio-Visual Co-Productions was signed in the presence of the two Prime Ministers. This Agreement will allow both sides to encourage industry level cooperation, share creative talent, and support the vibrant film industry in both countries.

The two Prime Ministers announced a new Education Cooperation Initiative. This jointly-funded Initiative, worth NZ $ 1 million annually (i.e. around Rs 3.6 crores) to be shared equally by New Zealand and India, will promote partnerships in two key streams; higher education and research, and skills and vocational education. The Initiative will focus on areas such as academic and student exchanges, joint research activities, and industry collaborations. The Initiative also includes sports scholarships and provides opportunities to share expertise and experience in tribal and indigenous higher education. A Joint Education Council will be established to implement the Prime Ministers’ Initiative.

The two Prime Ministers welcomed the signing of a Science and Innovation Protocol for Cooperation, which will provide a framework for future scientific exchanges and research collaboration. The two Leaders welcomed the first joint science initiative, the Science Research Workshop on Food Technologies and Dairy, held recently in New Zealand at the Riddet Institute/Massey University and Lincoln University.

The two Leaders also acknowledged the good cooperation developing in the civil aviation sector. Both sides are exploring cooperation in the aviation field, including the furthering of relationships in the training area.

The two Prime Ministers agreed to strengthen bilateral defence cooperation. Prime Minister Key announced that New Zealand will appoint a Defence Adviser to India to better facilitate defence linkages. Both sides noted the need for ensuring the safety and security of sea lanes and agreed that regional and global cooperation should continue to ensure maritime security. The two Leaders agreed that ship visits and staff college exchanges had deepened bilateral defence cooperation to the benefit of both sides.

The two Prime Ministers stressed the importance of reform of the United Nations Security Council to ensure it reflects the realities of the 21st century. Prime Minister Key announced the support of New Zealand for India’s membership in a reformed Security Council, including in any expansion of permanent membership.

Both sides share the vision of a nuclear weapon free world. New Zealand welcomes increased engagement between India and the multilateral export control regimes.

The two Prime Ministers discussed global security challenges and agreed on the importance of working in international and regional contexts to achieve stability and prosperity for all. Both Prime Ministers strongly condemned terrorism in all its forms.

India and New Zealand cooperate in regional bodies such as the East Asia Summit (EAS), the ASEAN Regional Forum, ASEAN Defence Ministers Meeting Plus and the Asia Europe Meeting. The two Leaders reaffirmed the importance of these bodies for furthering regional security, economic partnership and political linkages. They agreed to work together to progress the Comprehensive Economic Partnership under the EAS.

People-to-people exchanges form the backbone of the bilateral relationship. The two Prime Ministers agreed that strengthening these enduring personal linkages was a key part of ensuring continued vitality and growth in the relationship. To encourage a deeper understanding of each others’ countries New Zealand created the Sir Edmund Hillary Fellowship in memory of one of New Zealand's most inspiring citizens. Prime Minister Key announced that the fellowship recipient for 2011 would be a prominent Indian businessperson.

The Indian community in New Zealand is a vibrant platform for the two-way flow of visitors, migrants and students between New Zealand and India. In further strengthening these valuable ties, in January this year the Government of India conferred on the New Zealand Governor-General the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman Award (PBSA), the highest honour for overseas Indians.

India and New Zealand share strong sporting ties, particularly in the games of cricket and hockey, which are slowly expanding to a range of sports. Cricket is an example of India's and New Zealand's shared heritage, close sporting ties and bilateral friendship. Prime Minister Key congratulated India on its hosting of the Cricket World Cup with Sri Lanka and Bangladesh this year and the Indian team's victory. The two Leaders looked forward to the next World Cup in 2015, co-hosted by New Zealand and Australia. The two Leaders agreed to work together towards building stronger sporting ties between the two countries as a means to promoting stronger people-to-people links.

414. Press Release issued by Ministry of Finance on the visit of Finance Minister of the Philippines Cesar V. Purisima.

New Delhi, October 17, 2011.

Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that there is a need for transparent arrangement with a legal framework for exchange of information between India and Philippines relating to banking and tax related matters. The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee raised this issue during his bilateral meeting with his Philippines’ counterpart Mr. Cesar V. Purisima when the later called on him, here today. Negotiations are already on for revising the Convention between the two countries for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with respect to Taxes and Income. The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee hoped that this Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement may be signed in January next year.

The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee also expressed his satisfaction at the issuance of notification by both countries operationalising the India-ASEAN FTA on Trade in Goods w.e.f. 1st June, 2011. The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee stated that there is a steady growth of bilateral trade which has increased from US$ 443.63 million in 2003-04 to US$ 1061.84 million in 2009-10. He said that bilateral trade will certainly increase even further with the scaling down of tariff lines by both the countries under the India ASEAN FTA on Trade in Goods.

The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee said that the Indian side would be happy to further strengthen the banking links between the two countries. He said that the State Bank of India has already proposed for opening a branch in Manila. He said that India would welcome a conducive environment for stronger banking links between the two countries.

The Philippines’ Finance Secretary, Mr. Purisima said that he would take up the matter with concerned Department back home in order to expedite the finalization of DTAA between the two countries. He also said that role of ADB now needs to be revisited in the light of changes in the status of different member countries over the years. Mr. Purisima said that there is a lot of potentials for further strengthening of relations and cooperation between the two countries especially in the field of education, tourism and manufacturing sector among others. He also endorsed the views of Shri Mukherjee for establishment of stronger banking links between the two countries. He thanked the Union Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee for his contribution in the development of this region and invited him to visit Philippines in near future.

Remarks of External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the presentation of a bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore to the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies and the Indian Heritage Centre, Singapore.

Ambassador Kesavapany,
Ambassador Gopinath Pillai,
Prof Saranindranath Tagore,
Ladies & Gentlemen,

It is indeed an honour for me to present Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore's bust to the India Heritage Centre on the occasion of 150th Birth Anniversary of the great poet, thinker, philosopher and educationist.

While embarking on his voyage to Southeast Asian Countries in 1927, Gurudev Tagore had said, and I quote, "We have embarked on a pilgrimage to India beyond its modern political boundaries, to see the signs of the history of India's entry into the universal". Unquote.

The objective of Tagore's voyage was to explore India's millennia old cultural & historical links with Southeast Asia with humanistic ideas, religious values, music, philosophy and culture. The chief motive of his journey was a desire to renew Indian cultural links with Southeast Asian countries.

The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies is indeed is the most appropriate place to hold today's event. The final destination of the bust would be the Indian Heritage Centre and I am grateful to all those associated with it for this wonderful initiative.

Realizing the historical and cultural linkage of India with the region, Tagore had said, and I quote "India's true history, reflected in the many stories of the Ramayana and Mahabharata, will be seen more clearly, when we are able to compare with the texts that are to found here" (that is, Southeast Asia) Unquote.

Through his tour, Tagore wanted to prepare the ground for cultural cooperation with the region through the appreciation of the ideals of Visva Bharati. And those so called ideals of Visva Bharati were "yatra vishvam bhavati ek nidam" (where the world makes its home in a single nest). If we summarize this idea, we may come to the very prominent term of present era 'Globalization' which gives us a glimpse of the farsightedness of this great personality who understood the need of the world way back in 1920s.
I take this opportunity to commend the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Nalanda-Sriwijaya Centre, and Tagore Society for being actively involved in organizing events to commemorate the 150th Birth Anniversary of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore in Singapore.

I would also like to congratulate Indian Council for Cultural Relations, New Delhi for its efforts to prepare this wonderful piece of art and assist Government of India to carry forward and promote the rich cultural heritage of India. ICCR is working on the intrinsic philosophy of Gurudev Tagore to bring the world to one common platform by opening new cultural centres and to receive the vibrant cultures from other shores with open arms.

At the beginning of his voyage to this region, Gurudev Tagore had written, and I quote, "We have embarked on this pilgrimage to see the signs of the history of India’s entry into the universal." Unquote. I am confident that Gurudev’s bust here will serve as a symbol of his universalist expression.

Thank you.

418. Remarks by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the Unveiling of the Jawaharlal Nehru Bust and Commemorative Marker in Singapore.

Singapore, November 20, 2011.

His Excellency Mr. Goh Chok Tong, Emeritus Senior Minister,
Dr. Yaacob Ibrahim, Minister for Information, Communications and the Arts,
Mr. Ong Yew Huat, Chairman, National Heritage Board,

Ladies and Gentlemen.

I feel deeply honoured to be here this afternoon at this ceremony to unveil the bust of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and the Marker commemorating his association with Singapore.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru was not just India’s first Prime Minister. He was a visionary, scholar and the builder of modern India. He was a humanist and an internationalist, and a champion of the post-colonial world.

Singapore today is an embodiment of human progress and the spirit of internationalism. Jawaharlal Nehru was prescient when he said in 1946 that Singapore will become the city where Asian unity is forged. We are witnessing such unity being forged. Singapore’s great cultural and intellectual institutions are playing a vital role in this process. I therefore most warmly congratulate the National Heritage Board of Singapore on this initiative, and wish it all success in its future activities.

In honouring Pandit Nehru today, you honour India and all the values that India stands for – secularism, democracy, freedom and the rule of law.

These are the values that continue to unite our two nations today. The Bust and Commemorative Marker will serve as a symbol of our friendship and our respect for each other’s achievements. In celebrating our past, we enhance understanding of each other’s cultures, inspire the younger generation and better prepare ourselves for the future.

Singapore stands at the crossroads of East Asia. It is today one of the most advanced economies of the world and an engine of growth for Asia. It has led by example, and by the exceptional qualities and skills of its people and society. These are successes which Jawaharlal Nehru would have been very happy to see. There is a lot that India can learn from Singapore.
This Bust and Marker will stand as yet another symbol of the close relations between India and Singapore, and will inspire even greater interest about each other among our peoples.

I most sincerely thank Mr. Goh Chok Tong, Dr. Yaacob Ibrahim and Mr. Ong Yew Huat for being present here to honour a great son of India and a great statesman.

I thank you.

419. Speech of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the lunch hosted by the Prime Minister of Singapore.

Singapore, November 20, 2011.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Mr. Lee Hsien Loong,

Mrs. Lee,

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I thank you for the warm hospitality with which my wife and I have been received in Singapore.

Excellency, we in India regard you as an ardent advocate and supporter of our strong partnership. It was during your visit to India in 2005 that we signed a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement between India and Singapore. That Agreement has led to a qualitative upgradation of our trade and investment relations with Singapore.

I look forward to your visit to India next year. This will give you an opportunity to see for yourself the developments that have taken place in India in the last several years, and the manner in which Singapore has contributed to India’s progress.

Excellency, our government places the highest priority on our relations with Singapore. Ours is a partnership that stands on the foundation of shared values of pluralism, secularism and democracy, and convergence of our perspectives on regional and international issues.
It was the opening of our relations with Singapore which led to a strategic shift in India's foreign and economic policies and which today have evolved into our ‘Look East’ policy. Singapore opened new horizons for India.

Singapore’s rapid transformation and economic growth model is a beacon of hope in the uncertain world we live in today. You serve as an example not only for Asia but for the world at large. Your investments in human resources, education and infrastructure are examples worthy of emulation.

Singapore has emerged as a valued partner for our ambitious plans for infrastructure development. It is India’s largest trade and investment partner in ASEAN. We welcome greater investment and technology flows from Singapore.

Our people to people exchanges, tourism and the revolution in connectivity has brought us closer to each other than we have ever been.

Today, eleven Indian cities are directly connected by air to Singapore. I am greatly encouraged to see the linkages being established between our Museums and Universities. Singapore’s consistent support to the Nalanda University Project is a matter of great encouragement for us. I would also like to thank you for the warm welcome that has been given to thousands of Indians working and studying in Singapore.

Our relations also encompass political, security and defence cooperation. We value our engagement with Singapore in these areas.

Next year, we will observe twenty years of full dialogue partnership between India and the ASEAN. We look forward to working closely with Singapore to commemorate these twenty years, and to evolve an even more ambitious roadmap for the period ahead.

Ladies and gentlemen,

I request you to join me in raising a toast to:
— The health and happiness of Prime Minister Lee and Mrs. Lee, — The progress and prosperity of our two countries, and — The deepening friendship between India and Singapore.

420. Statement on the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Singapore.

Singapore, November 20, 2011.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh accompanied by Smt. Gursharan Kaur paid an official visit to Singapore on 19-20 November, 2011. He paid a courtesy call on President of Singapore Dr. Tony Tan Keng Yam and also held talks with his counterpart, Prime Minister of Singapore Mr. Lee Hsien Loong. Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong and Mrs. Lee Hsien Loong hosted a lunch in honour of Prime Minister and Smt. Gursharan Kaur and the accompanying delegation. During his stay in Singapore, Prime Minister also met with former Prime Ministers of Singapore Mr. Lee Kuan Yew and Emeritus Senior Minister Goh Chok Tong.

Prime Minister had wide ranging discussions with his counterpart covering international, regional and bilateral issues. The Prime Minister emphasised that Singapore is an important pillar of India’s Look East Policy and the two countries shared a close understanding in regional and multilateral fora. Both leaders affirmed the strong bilateral ties between India and Singapore and agreed that there had been a remarkable deepening of bilateral relationship since the conclusion of the Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement in 2005. They discussed ways to further strengthen cooperation in fields such as Trade, Investment, Skills Development, Education, Infrastructure and Township Development. They took note of the ongoing second CECA review and underlined the need for it to be purposeful and covering all aspects of trade, investment and services. Prior to the visit the Governments of India and Singapore signed a MoU on Cooperation in the Field of Personnel Management and Public Administration and an Executive Programme on Cooperation in the Fields of Arts, Heritage, Archives and Library. The Parliaments of India and Singapore have also agreed to establish respective Parliamentary Friendship Groups.

Both Prime Ministers took note of the strong intergovernmental links between India and Singapore and continued regular high level institutional exchanges such as the Foreign Office Consultations, Ministerial Meetings, the Defence Policy Dialogue and the Security Round Table. Prime Minister extended an invitation to the Prime Minister of Singapore to pay a bilateral visit to India and also said that we looked forward to Singapore’s participation in the India-ASEAN Summit in India in December-2012 to commemorate 20 years of our partnership with ASEAN and in the series of activities India is planning in the run up to the Summit.
During his stay in Singapore the Prime Minister and Emeritus Senior Minister Mr. Goh Chok Tong unveiled a Marker and Bust of Jawaharlal Nehru at the Asian Civilisation Museum Greens.

THAILAND

421. Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on Thai Prime Minister's visit to India.

New Delhi, April 4, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon and good to see all of you. Let me start off by introducing my colleague Joint Secretary (South) Mr. Arun Goyal, who is responsible for our relations with ASEAN countries including Thailand.

You are aware that Prime Minister of Thailand HE Abhisit Vejjajiva is coming tomorrow on a state visit at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India. This would be his first visit to India. He leads a delegation that includes the Foreign Minister of Thailand, the President of Thai Trade Representative, Secretary-General to the Prime Minister, Vice-Minister in the Prime Minister’s Office, the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and a number of other senior officials.

In the delegation-level talks the Prime Minister of India would be assisted by the External Affairs Minister, Home Minister, Commerce and Industries Minister, Minister of Road Transport and Highways, Principal Secretary to Prime Minister, National Security Advisor, Secretary (East) Shri Sanjay Singh, my colleague Mr. Arun Goyal, and a number of other senior officials.

A brief overview of the programme: Tomorrow he has a breakfast meeting with CEO’s of Indian companies. Thereafter there is a ceremonial reception at the Rashtrapati Bhavan by the Prime Minister of India. EAM will call on the visiting dignitary, who himself would be calling on the President and Vice-President of India. The three Chambers of Commerce - FICCI, CII and ASSOCHAM - would be hosting a business luncheon for the Prime Minister with captains of Indian trade and industry. In the evening he holds delegation-level talks with the Prime Minister of India, who would also be hosting a banquet in his honour. The visiting Prime Minister emplanes for Bangkok late in the evening tomorrow.

Our unique civilisational links date back many a millennia, and we have traditionally enjoyed close, cultural, religious and linguistic affinities. Buddhism has been one of the enduring bonds between the two countries. Currently some 40,000 tourists from Thailand mostly come for pilgrimage to Buddhist sites. Thai language incorporates Pali and Sanskrit influences. And what is more, Thailand is home to a large Indian diaspora which is close to 150,000.

In recent years, political exchanges and high-level political contacts have intensified and we have seen excellent results on ground in terms of deepening and expansion of our multifaceted ties. The present Prime Minister assumed office in December 2008 and this is his first visit. But the two Prime Ministers have been meeting regularly. Dr. Manmohan Singh and the Thai Prime Minister met in October 2009 at Hua Hin, Thailand, during the Seventh India-ASEAN Summit meeting. Next, they also met in Hanoi during the East Asia Summit and Eighth India-ASEAN Summit meeting in October, 2010. This high-level attention has led to a robust expansion on our cooperation including in areas like economics and trade, security, defence, culture, people-to-people contacts, and the others.

India and Thailand are important regional partners linking south and southeast Asia. We are members of and cooperate closely in a number of international fora including ASEAN, the East-Asia Summit, BIMSTEC, and others. The economic and trade relationship does constitute one of the important elements of our relationship. I am pleased to note that our bilateral trade grew six times in ten years from 2000, and last year crossed 6.6 billion dollars. In fact, last year alone saw a spike of something like 34 per cent.

Investments in both directions have been growing. Indian companies have invested over 1.5 billion dollars. And the Thai companies, according to the Thai statistics, have invested more than half of that amount at about 800 million dollars. Major Indian companies and business houses are established in Thailand, doing very good business in Thailand. That includes the Tata Group, the Aditya Birla Group. By the way the Tata Group is in a variety of sectors including automobile, steel, software. Aditya Birla Group is in chemicals and textiles. There is the Indorama Group; Ranbaxy, Dabur, Lupin in pharmaceuticals; Bharti Airtel, NIIT, Punj Lloyd. So, you note that some of the well-known names in the Indian industrial circles have a good presence in Thailand.

Likewise, Thai companies are present in India in diverse fields including agro processing, infrastructure - where they have a number of core strengths - automobile, engineering, banking, housing, and so on. Thai companies, do have core strengths in infrastructure development including roads, elevated highways, metros, housing complexes. And a number Thai companies have actually been awarded infrastructure projects and are currently executing them including the Kolkata International Airport, some sections of Delhi Metro, hydro projects, national highways, and others.

But there is still a lot of untapped potential both in trade and economic sides and that is what both sides seek to harness. In that direction, in October 2003 a Framework Agreement on India-Thailand Free Trade Agreement was signed in Bangkok and we had 82 products that were identified under the Early Harvest Scheme for eliminating duties. We have been discussing a comprehensive India-Thailand Free Trade Agreement on Goods, Services, and Investments as a single undertaking. The last round has just been concluded on the 1st of April. Parallel to that has been the India-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement in Goods that came into being on the 1st of January last year, and we are currently negotiating the FTA in Services and Investments. So, we have these agreements with ASEAN and specifically with Thailand which are aimed at giving our economic and commercial ties a substantial boost.

As I said, India and Thailand share a maritime boundary. We have similar challenges and concerns. And it is natural that we coordinate and cooperate in areas of security and defence, which includes joint exercises, coordinated patrolling, ship calls, training of officers in each other's armed forces institutions, and so on.

Given our proximity and the civilisational links that we have had, it is not surprising that Thailand is one of the most attractive destinations for Indian tourists. Last year we had upwards of 700,000 Indian tourists that went to Thailand. I am told that Thailand sees Indian tourists as one of the fastest growing segments. Currently, we have 140 flights between Thailand and multiple cities in India.

We also have an active cultural exchange programme and an Indian Cultural Centre was established in Bangkok in September 2009. Similarly, we have a Memorandum of Understanding on Education Cooperation. And last year we had offered 130 scholarships under ITEC and ICCR to our Thai friends. In addition, a large number of Thai students have been studying in India on self-financing basis. We are in contact; we are working with Thai educational institutes and universities for setting up of Centre of Indian Studies. We also have an important Thailand-India Joint Commission, which is led by the Foreign Ministers of the two sides, which oversees the active programme of cooperation between the two countries. We expect the next round of the Joint Commission meeting to take place soon.

In short, Thailand is one of India's valuable partners, close partners in the ASEAN region. The visit of the Prime Minister of Thailand reflects a tradition of regular high-level exchanges and contacts between the two countries and serves to underscore the commitment and the importance the two sides attach to the relationship. We are confident that his visit and the discussions here will impart a new momentum to our excellent relations.

Prime Minister of India and the Prime Minister of Thailand are expected to have wide-ranging discussions on an array of bilateral, regional and international issues. We expect to issue a joint statement tomorrow at the conclusion of the visit.

Thank you. My colleague and I will be happy to take questions on the visit of the Prime Minister of Thailand to India.

Question: Can we have names of some of the major Thai companies that have invested in India?

Joint Secretary (South) (Shri Arun Goyal): Thai companies are especially strong in the infrastructure sector whether tourism, roads, bridges, complexes, housing, and so on, and that is one area where Indian economy is looking actively to have foreign companies come and bring in the expertise. Currently, Thai companies are doing the Kolkata Airport, some portions of the Delhi Metro, but we are trying that they take more and more projects in the tourism sector, especially on the Buddhist circuit. Some of the leading companies presently in India from Thailand are, C P Aquaculture (India) Ltd., Ital Thai Development Pcl., Krung Thai Bank Pcl., Charoen Pokphand (India) Private Limited, Stanley Electric Engineering India Pvt. Ltd., Thai Summit Neel Auto Pvt. Ltd., Thai Airways International Pcl., Precious Shipping (PSL) of Thailand, Preuksa Real Estate, Dusit and Amari group of hotels.

Question: Sir, is India likely to bring up the Red Shirts issue especially since the elections are on card in Thailand soon?

Joint Secretary (South): No, we do not comment on the internal developments in another country. As you are well aware, Thailand has been going through a period of difficulty with opposition groups publicly coming out in protest. Yes, in the near future they are going in for elections and which have to be held before the end of this year. But we do not intend siding with any faction.

Question: Negotiations for FTA are concluded or continuing?

Official Spokesperson: As I said, we had the last round of negotiations just three days ago, that was on Friday, on the 31st of March to the 1st of April. This is something that both the sides are interested in. Therefore, I very consciously gave you the figure of 34 per cent hike in trade last year. And it was not fortuitous, it was partly due to the India-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement in Goods that was signed. So, both sides do see a lot of potential because our economies in so many ways are complementary and there is the desire on both sides to work towards concluding a comprehensive FTA covering all segments of trade, investments, services, and so on.
Question: Is this to be signed during the visit of the Prime Minister?

Official Spokesperson: We are negotiating it. I think we need to work on it together. It should happen in the near future.

Question: Thai investment is 400 million dollars while our investment is 1.5 billion dollars. Why the mismatch? And, is coordinated patrolling going to start any time soon? And, what are the initiatives that are being taken in security cooperation?

Official Spokesperson: The Indian investments, you are right, since 1970 are in the range of 1.5 billion dollars. The figure of Thai investments as per the Thai authorities is in the range of 800 million dollars. Certainly we would welcome more Thai investments to India.

The coordinated patrolling is taking place already. That is for the simple reason that we share a maritime boundary, we have similar concerns on issues like counter-terrorism, piracy and smuggling. The coordinated patrolling has been found useful by both sides.

Security and defence is one area which both sides are looking at enhancing cooperation. We mentioned the joint patrolling. We have joint exercises. There are regular port calls by ships from both countries. We have exchange of representatives of the armed forces on both sides. There is joint training in each other's armed forces institutions. So, in short, both India and Thailand do find that security and defence cooperation is of mutual benefit.

Question: Can you identify the maritime areas where patrolling is going on?

Joint Secretary (South): The north of Bay of Bengal. Once you have a look at the map you will realize that Thailand occupies a very strategic position as far as the Straits of Malacca are concerned. So, this is the area where the Naval passage and for commercial shipping it is extremely important. These are the areas.

Official Spokesperson: And in addition, piracy. I think piracy is an issue which concerns not just India but Thailand and a number of other countries. Our Navy has come to the rescue of Thai sailors some of who have been abducted by the Somali pirates in the last few years.

Question: Does the patrolling area extend up to Malacca Straits?

Joint Secretary (South): The mouth of Malacca Straits.

Question: Any new initiative for this cooperation of the Ocean information to avert the international phenomena like tsunami and other things? Any real time information-sharing with Thailand?

Joint Secretary (South): This is already an area of collaboration, sharing of information. Tsunami early-warning system and earthquake prediction etc., is an ongoing thing.

Question: Could you elaborate on education? You said there would be lots of cooperation as far as education is concerned. Indians are going there to train, opening universities. Would you elaborate a bit on that?

Joint Secretary (South): It was not said that Indians are going there to open universities. It was merely mentioned that we have long historical links with Thailand in the field of culture. Now recently we have assisted Thai universities in the field of Sanskrit language school and provision of Sanskrit professors in three different universities. We have opened up a cultural centre on September 2009 in Bangkok. So, in specialized niche areas where Indian studies or Sanskrit studies are concerned, naturally the way to move forward is provision of professors from India on a short-term basis.

Official Spokesperson: If I may, I will just like to add a few bits here. I said that we are offering about 130 scholarships. In addition to that a number of Thai students come to study in Indian universities especially in areas like management studies, IT, some even in English, on a self-financing basis. There is a growing interest in Indian studies. Therefore, we are working with the Thai education institutions in setting up centres or Chairs on Indian studies. My colleague did mention the names. To get into specifics, we have an India Study Centre at Thammasat University in Bangkok since April 1993. In 2008, a Master of Arts course on Indian studies was instituted by the Mahidol University of Bangkok. In 2008 again we contributed about ten million Thai Bhat for construction of new building for Sanskrit Studies in Silpakorn University, Bangkok. We also, as my colleague said, deputed a Sanskrit Professor. Now, to impart more momentum to this aspect of engagement of education and culture, we have an Indian Cultural Centre which was set up just about a year and a half ago. And we have an active cultural exchange programme also. These are some of the elements that we wanted to mention to just give you a sense of our cooperation in this vital sector because people-to-people contacts are something which go at the heart of any relationship.

Thank you very much.
Your Excellency Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva, adies and Gentleman of the media

It is my privilege to welcome Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva on his first visit to India.

Prime Minister Vejjajiva has an extremely distinguished political and academic career and has led Thailand with great distinction through difficult times. I deeply value his personal commitment to a strong partnership between our two countries.

Thailand is a close friend and a valued regional partner for India. We share civilizational links with Thailand, and we are maritime neighbours.

The Prime Minister and I have had wide ranging discussions covering the entire gamut of our bilateral relations. We have had a meeting of minds on how to move our relations forward.

We have agreed to intensify our cooperation in the areas of trade and investment, education, tourism and culture. Our bilateral trade turnover has reached 6 billion US dollars. We have agreed to aim towards doubling of our trade by 2014. We have agreed to expedite the conclusion of negotiations on a bilateral Free Trade Agreement that would include goods, services and investment. I conveyed to the Prime Minister that we welcome more Thai investment into India.

We see Thailand as playing a positive role in our efforts to catalyse development and improve connectivity of our Northeastern States with the ASEAN region.

India and Thailand have active exchanges in the fields of defence, counter-terrorism and security. We have agreed to further strengthen them, and to initiate a senior official level dialogue between our Defence Ministries. We both expressed our desire to cooperate with each other to secure the vital seaways of communications which pass through the Indian Ocean. We have identified other areas of cooperation such as space technology, disaster management and science and technology.

We have agreed that the Ministerial level Joint Commission will meet this year to follow up on the range of bilateral initiatives.
Developing close relations with Thailand is an important component of our 'Look East' Policy. We work together in a number of regional mechanisms such as BIMSTEC, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the East Asia Summit and the Mekong Ganga Cooperation initiative. The Prime Minister and I are of the unanimous view that a strong India-Thailand partnership is a factor of peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region.

Prime Minister Vejjajiva's visit has provided the political impetus and direction for a closer and more broad-based partnership between our countries. This is an important visit, and will enhance the national interests of both our countries.

I thank you.

New Delhi, April 5, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister for Commerce & Industry, in a business meeting with Mr. Abhisit Vejjajiva, Prime Minister of Thailand, here today, expressed optimism over the growing trade and investment between the two countries. Shri Sharma in his inaugural address stated that, "Economic engagement between the two countries paved the way for rapid economic liberalization and the implementation of the Early Harvest Scheme led to robust growth. Bilateral trade between India and Thailand has grown 6 fold in the last decade and touched US $ 6 billion last year, growing at over 30% from the previous year." While reiterating India's commitment to deepening integration with South-East Asia, he said that, "Enhancing the share of manufacturing in the GDP is a priority for India and Thailand can play a major role in enhancing the share of manufacturing as they have a proven expertise in the area and has a significant share in their GDP".

Shri Sharma, focusing on the development of North-East Region and its inclusion and integration with the rest of the world, said, India's look-East and Thailand look-West policy to work in unison for the development of North-East region. The region can work as the link between these two countries. Both the sides view the partnership being integral to the goal of industrial development of the North-East region. He further informed, "We recognize that Thailand has also identified this part of the country as an important investment destination, holding the potential to emerge a sub-regional market centre and a land bridge which would connect Thailand with the mainstream in India. This part of the country is home to rich forest produce and investments in bamboo and rubber industry in the North East would be mutually rewarding for our people.”

Prime Minister of Thailand while speaking on the occasion said, “Thailand’s Look- West Policy sets the stage in consolidating our substantive bilateral engagement. The last decade has seen a considerable expansion in our economic and political ties with the exchange of several high-level visits from both sides underscoring our mutual commitment for elevating the economic engagement.” He expressed the hope that the trade between the two countries will hit US$ 10 billion mark by the end of next year.

During the business conclave both the sides highlighted the need to cooperate in sectors like Pharmaceuticals, infrastructure, food processing, automobiles sector and chemical and allied industry. Shri Sharma highlighted that, Indian companies have invested US $ 2 billion in the Thai economy and companies from Thailand have invested nearly US $ 1 billion. “Complementary strengths of our industry make us natural partners and the advantages of geography only reinforce this relationship’ he added.

The field of infrastructure is an area of high priority for India and the next 5 years will see investments of over US $ 1 trillion in this sector. Shri Sharma invited Thai companies for a partnership in this critical sector. The Minister said, over 8,00,000 Indian tourists visit Thailand and almost an equal number of tourists from Thailand visit India. We would like to take this beyond just air connectivity and in this context, the tri-lateral highway project linking India and Thailand through Myanmar is an area of high priority for us, he informed.

The Minister stressed the value of Thai partnership in developing the entire value chain of agriculture including investments in agro-processing to curb post-harvest wastage which is unacceptably high (30-35% of the total produce). The Minister called for Thai companies to invest in developing cold-chains, warehouses and food processing facilities which will be a contribution not just to the Indian economy but also to global food security. We expect investments of US $ 200 billion in the agro processing sector and growth of 20% in the next five years. In this sector, we have allowed 100% foreign direct investment and Thai investors with their strengths in agro-processing would be invaluable partners, he added.

424. Joint Statement issued on the conclusion of the State visit of Prime Minister of Thailand Abhisit Vejjajiva.

1. H.E. Mr. Abhisit Vejjajiva, the Prime Minister of Thailand paid a State visit to India during 4-5 April 2011 at the invitation of Dr. Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of India. The Prime Minister of Thailand was accompanied by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Minister of Industry, Deputy Minister of Commerce, the President of the Thai Trade Representative Office and an official delegation.

2. During the visit, the Prime Minister of Thailand held bilateral talks with Dr. Manmohan Singh who also hosted a banquet in honour of the visiting dignitary. The Thai Prime Minister called on Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, the President of India and Shri Hamid Ansari, the Vice-President of India. Shri S.M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister of India called on the Thai leader. The Thai Prime Minister attended a business luncheon hosted by the three chambers of commerce.

3. The two Prime Ministers held wide-ranging discussions on bilateral, regional and multilateral issues, including on the need to energize bilateral institutional mechanisms, to enhance cooperation in security matters and to upgrade the bilateral dialogue on defence matters. The two leaders stressed the significance of enhancing connectivity between the two countries and regions, and the importance of further enhancing bilateral trade and investment. In this context the two leaders noted that the next meeting of the Joint Commission will be held in 2011 during which new initiative for enhancing cooperation would be identified. Discussions were also held on cooperation between the two sides to minimize the damage caused by natural disasters.
such as earthquake and tsunami and to deploy effective multilateral early warning systems against them.

4. The two Prime Ministers reaffirmed the importance attached to the strengthening and enhancement of trade and economic through the bilateral and regional frameworks viz. ASEAN-India, BIMSTEC and MGC.

5. At bilateral level, the two Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction at the growing trend of bilateral trade and investment between the two countries. They noted that the bilateral trade turnover had reached US$ 6.7 billion in 2010 and agreed to double the trade volume by 2014. Noting that ongoing negotiations on a comprehensive Free Trade Agreement between India and Thailand that would promote trade in goods and services, and investment were proceeding well, they directed the negotiators to finalize the text of the Agreement by the end of 2011. They also desired that the Second Protocol to Amend the Framework Agreement for Establishing Free Trade Area between Thailand and India founded in 2003 be signed at the earliest possible date.

6. The Leaders reiterated their commitment to realization of the Trilateral Highway connecting India to Thailand via Myanmar to enhance regional transport networks. The highway while promoting trade and people to people contacts will also help revive the shared civilizational and cultural contacts and the ancient routes of knowledge and pilgrimage.

7. The two Prime Ministers noted that India and Thailand have an on-going programme of defence cooperation, characterized by a number of exchanges between the Armed Forces of both countries, joint exercises and participation in each others’ defence training programmes. In order to strengthen this cooperation further, the two leaders agreed to establish a regular High-Level Dialogue on Defence Cooperation between the Ministries of Defence of both countries in the near future, details of which would be further finalized. It was agreed that this Dialogue would regularly review all the elements of bilateral defence cooperation including in the area of defence industry and technology. The Dialogue would also include discussions on a bilateral MoU on Defence Cooperation.

8. The Prime Minister of Thailand expressed his appreciation at the successive recent actions by the Indian Navy and Indian Coast Guard that had led to the successful release of several Thai nationals who had been the victims of piracy in the Indian Ocean. The two leaders, noting that coordinated patrolling was already being carried out jointly by the Indian and Thai navies, agreed to further enhance this cooperation, including by increasing the duration and frequency of such patrols. Both leaders also noted the possibility of experience sharing on Coast Guard Operations.
9. The two leaders unequivocally condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and stressed that there could be no justification whatsoever for any act of terrorism. Recognizing the common threats to national security from transnational crimes, including international terrorism, the two Prime Ministers resolved to significantly enhance bilateral cooperation in combating terrorism, including in restricting transnational movement and unauthorized stay of known terrorists in each other’s countries. The two leaders resolved to commit their countries to improve sharing of intelligence, the development of more effective counter-terrorism policies, enhance liaison between law enforcement agencies, provide assistance in the areas of border and immigration control to stem the flow of terrorist related material, money and people and specific measures against transnational crimes, through the already existing mechanisms between Thailand and India. Both leaders agreed that the next (6th) meeting of the Joint Working Group on Security Cooperation be held within the next six months.

10. Noting that India and Thailand are discussing Extradition Treaty, Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty in Civil and Commercial Matters and Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons, the two sides agreed that the above mentioned agreements may be concluded at the earliest.

11. The Prime Minister of Thailand welcomed the fact that almost 800,000 Indian tourists had visited Thailand in the year 2010 and observed that visitors from India were the fastest-growing segment in the tourist inflow into Thailand.

12. The two leaders, recognizing that there was great unrealized potential for increasing the inflow of Thai tourists into India, agreed to provide greater facilitation to Thai Buddhist monks, pilgrims, students and tourists visiting India.

13. India announced support to the India Studies Centre set up at the Thammasat University in Thailand recently through visiting Chairs in areas to be selected jointly by the University and the ICCR, collaboration in India related research programmes through exchange of senior scholars for a period of one year and extending scholarships to the students from the Centre for Studies in India at the Post Graduate level and for Ph. D programmes. He expressed the hope that the India Study Centre would ignite a new interest in young Thai people in the great currents of contemporary India as well as renew interest in the ideas, values, arts and philosophy of the India of times past.

14. Recalling the long history of cultural and historical ties between the two countries, the two leaders agreed that to lift relations to a higher level, the two countries shall increase and expand existing cultural exchanges and strengthen people-to-people contacts to raise visibility and profile of the other country. The two countries will also continue to explore opportunities to promote cultural exchanges in fields such as conservation, traditional art, contemporary art, literature, film making, music, dance, theatre etc. In this context, Thailand and India mutually agreed that the Executive Programme of Cultural Exchange between the two countries should be renewed at the earliest opportunity for the year 2011-2013 in order to facilitate and promote deeper and varied cultural exchanges.”

15. The two leaders welcomed the recent progress made towards the revival of the Nalanda University, including the passage by Indian Parliament of the Nalanda University Bill and the regular meetings of the Nalanda Mentor Group. The Prime Ministers were pleased to note that the revival of the Nalanda University would rejuvenate the close cultural and religious ties that link India and Thailand since the ancient period.

16. The two leaders held discussions on regional cooperation within ASEAN. The Prime Minister of India expressed his appreciation for Thailand’s role as a valued partner within ASEAN and expressed his satisfaction that Thailand was one of the largest participants at the successful India-ASEAN Business Fair that was held in New Delhi in March 2011. The two Leaders noted that the Fair has also witnessed the first meeting of India-ASEAN Trade/Commerce Ministers in India. He also appreciated the visit of Foreign Minister of Thailand to deliver the key note address at the recently held Delhi Dialogue - III Conference focusing on India-ASEAN Engagement. The two leaders recalled the Action Plan for ASEAN-India Partnership 2010-15 that was adopted in Hanoi in November 2010 and reiterated their resolve to further promote a multi-faceted India-ASEAN relationship. The two Prime Ministers looked forward to the India-ASEAN Commemorative Summit scheduled to be held in New Delhi in 2012.

17. At regional level, the two Prime Ministers welcomed the entry into force of the India-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement on Trade in Goods on 1 January 2010 and the increase in bilateral trade as a result thereof, and hoped that the Agreement would further contribute to the envisaged trade target of USD 70 billion as set by ASEAN and India. The two Prime Ministers looked forward to an early finalization of the India-ASEAN services and investment agreements currently under negotiation.

18. The two leaders also discussed regional cooperation in other formats such as BIMSTEC and Mekong Ganga Cooperation (MGC). Both the leaders expressed satisfaction that the last BIMSTEC Ministerial Meeting held in January 2011 had agreed to locate the Permanent Secretariat of BIMSTEC in Bangladesh and looked forward to greater progress in realizing a need based programme of regional cooperation suited to the needs of the BIMSTEC member countries. The two leaders also looked forward to synergizing economic cooperation and capacity building in the Mekong region under the MGC.
19. Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva of Thailand expressed his gratitude to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and to the people of India for the warm welcome and hospitality that had been extended to him and to the members of his delegation on his State visit.

425. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Foreign Minister of Thailand.

H.E. Dr. Surapong Tovichakchaikul, Foreign Minister of the Kingdom of Thailand, accompanied by a high level delegation, paid an official visit to India from 26th-27th, December, 2011 for the 6th meeting of India-Thailand Joint Commission (JCM). The JCM co-chaired by the External Affairs Minister (EAM) Shri S M Krishna, was held on December 27, 2011.

2. EAM had wide range of discussions with the Foreign Minister of Thailand H.E. Dr. Surapong Tovichakchaikul, covering bilateral, regional and international issues. Both leaders affirmed the strong bilateral ties between India and Thailand and discussed ways to further strengthen cooperation in diverse areas such as trade, investment, security & defence cooperation, tourism, education, culture, science & technology, energy, infrastructure and civil aviation etc.

3. Both sides took note of the growing trend in bilateral trade and investment. Bilateral trade has multiplied around 6 times over past decades and having reached US $ 6.6 bn in 2010, is poised to touch US$ 8 bn in 2011. The two countries are also negotiating a bilateral Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement. Culture and tourism are other important areas of cooperation. The two sides finalized the cultural exchange programme for 2012-14. India and Thailand welcomed the idea of setting up of an India-Thailand foundation and agreed to work out the modalities of the foundation at the earliest. Around one million Indians visited Thailand for tourism this year. The two sides have agreed to form an ad-hoc working group to discuss various issues pertaining to bilateral visa and consular matters.

4. It was also agreed to revive the bilateral MoU on cooperation in Information Technology and Services. Thailand proposes to host the first meeting of JWG on Agricultural Cooperation in 2012. The next meeting of JWG on Education will be hosted in India. India and Thailand have formed a Joint Committee for enhancing cooperation in the field of renewable energy under a bilateral MoU.

5. Both sides expressed their desire to further deepen their valued partnership and cooperation in the context of India's deepening ties with ASEAN, EAS, BIMSTEC and MGC. India considers Thailand as a crucial component of its Look East Policy. The Thai Foreign Minister described expanding relations with India as central to Thailand's Look West Policy.

VIETNAM

426. Press Release issued by Ministry of Finance on the bilateral meeting between Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee and Vietnamese Prime Minister in Hanoi.

May 4, 2011.

The Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee had a bilateral meeting with the Prime Minister of Vietnam, Mr. Nguyen Tan Dung in Hanoi, Vietnam, today. During the meeting, Shri Mukherjee said that the Strategic Partnership established between the two countries is based on implicit mutual trust, a convergence of interests including in the field of defence and security and similar approaches on global and regional issues. As two dynamic and fast growing economies of Asia, our effort is to add greater content, through concrete programmes and projects, to our Strategic Partnership, he said.

Mentioning that defence cooperation between the two countries is robust and growing satisfactorily, he said that India will continue to assist Vietnam in the modernization of its armed forces, particularly the Navy and Air Force. India is also prepared to strengthen intelligence cooperation with Vietnam, he added.

Shri Mukherjee said that he is not satisfied with the level of economic cooperation between the two countries which, though growing, is far below potential. The bilateral trade is not even 5% of India's overall trade with ASEAN. Saying that this year we have already achieved US$ 1 billion trade in the first quarter, he expressed hope to sustain and further develop this momentum.

Mentioning that the entry into force of the ASEAN-India FTA-in-Goods has contributed towards this buoyancy in trade, he said that he hopes to conclude the ASEAN-India FTA-in-Services and Investment at an early date.

The Minister expressed concern that the investment partnership between the two countries is limited. Though there are several small Indian investors, total Indian investment is not large (US$ 200mn), he said. He expressed hope that the US$ 5 billion TATA Steel investment would be realized soon. The Minister said that this project has the potential to become a symbol of Strategic Partnership between the two countries. Mentioning that some progress has been made in recent weeks, he urged the Vietnam Prime Minister to ensure that a level playing field is provided to TATA Steel and that there is no discrimination against Indian investment. He hoped that the remaining issue of re-settlement costs for the land would be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of all sides and the Investment Certificate for the project would be issued soon. To this, the Prime Minister of Vietnam said that he has already asked the concerned officials to resolve the matter at the earliest.

The Finance Minister expected the Vietnam Government to facilitate the request of two Indian public sector banks, Bank of India and Indian Overseas Bank to open Branch Offices in Vietnam saying that the step would strengthen the economic cooperation between the two countries.

Shri Mukherjee said that India has provided several Lines of Credit to Vietnam and is willing to consider additional Lines of Credit, especially for infrastructure projects in Vietnam.

427. Extract from Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on EAM visit to Hanoi.

New Delhi, September 15, 2011.

Question: Sir, there are reports of China objecting to ONGC Videsh’s venture in Vietnam. Can you shed some light on that please?

Official Spokesperson: I did allude to the fact that we have a very active programme of trade and economic cooperation with Vietnam. One of the facets of this cooperation is our cooperation in the area of energy, hydrocarbons, as well as renewable energy. ONGC Videsh has been present in Vietnam for quite some time, including in a major joint venture for offshore oil and natural gas exploration. They are in the process of further expanding their cooperation and operations in Vietnam. Also ESSAR Exploration and Production Limited, which is a subsidiary of ESSAR Oil, has been awarded an oil and gas block in Vietnam. So, as I said, this is one important area of cooperation and we would like to see this cooperation grow. Suffice it to say that our cooperation with Vietnam, and for that matter with any country in the world is always as per international laws, norms and conventions.

Question: China has also warned Indian vessels to stay out of their waters in South China Sea. Do you believe it is linked to this current issue of India prospecting for oil in the seas which China also claims as its own or something else?

Official Spokesperson: As far as this - you are calling it an issue, I am not - facet of economic cooperation in the energy sector is concerned, I have already touched upon that. As far as navigation in the South China Sea is concerned, you would have seen my statement where we had outlined our views on the matter. I will be happy to reiterate that India supports freedom of navigation in the South China Sea and hopes that all parties to the dispute will abide by the 2002 Declaration of Conduct in the South China Sea.

Question: According to reports, China’s Foreign Affairs Ministry has today objected to India’s plans to go forward on oil exploration through ONGC Videsh, and said it will be illegal and the companies will have to be prepared for the consequences. What is your reaction?

Official Spokesperson: I have already responded to this question in considerable detail. I have outlined the nature of our cooperation with Vietnam. I have emphasized that cooperation in the field of energy - after all for us energy security is very important - hydrocarbons, renewable energy is an important facet of our cooperation. I have mentioned to you that a number of Indian companies are already cooperating closely. We are looking at further enhancing cooperation in the years ahead.

Question: …(Inaudible)…

Official Spokesperson: Do not you think you should be asking that question to China? I can only tell you what I know, and I have given you my position.

Question: …(Inaudible)…

Official Spokesperson: I can only tell you how we view the position, right? I do not think I need to say any more because I have elaborated on how we view our relation and cooperation in this important area with Vietnam.

Question: In what way will this visit change the strategic paradigm of India’s Look East Policy as far as Vietnam is concerned? In what way are we going to intensify our defence relationship with Vietnam? And is a formal strategic partnership with Vietnam on the anvil?

Official Spokesperson: I thought I have mentioned that in 2007, during the visit of the Prime Minister of Vietnam we had unveiled a strategic partnership with Vietnam. That was four years ago. The relationship which has always been close, which has been cordial, which has been substantive, has been acquiring greater momentum, greater depth. We have had unprecedented high-level attention to the relationship. We have had high-level visits of Prime Ministers, Presidents, Secretary-General of Vietnam. I have already touched upon various facets of cooperation. For us, our relationship with Vietnam, is an important pillar, a vital pillar, a key pillar of our Look East Policy. If you see how our relationship since 1992 in particular has evolved with the ASEAN countries, it is quite evident that this has been a resounding success. Last year, we operationalised the Free Trade Agreement in Goods with ASEAN. How much is the trade with ASEAN?

The Official Spokesperson of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Chinese Official media had during the course of last couple of weeks been insisting that the area which has been leased to Indian Company ONGC Videsh for oil prospecting falls within the Chinese territorial waters and therefore any operation by the Indian company would be infringement of its sovereignty and termed it even "serious political provocation". "China should resolutely stop [ONGC] from pursuing this course of action." said the Global Times, Chinese tabloid on September 15.

Even as Chinese officials on September 16 sought to play down the row over projects in the South China Sea, the Communist Party-run paper, while stressing Chinese "sincere" peaceful intentions, however said "it will not give up the right to use other means to protect its interest."

On September 15, Chinese Foreign Ministry officials had said they were opposed to any project in the disputed South China Sea

On September 19 the Chinese government reiterated its opposition to exploration projects by the Oil and Natural Gas Corporation (ONGC) Videsh and Vietnam in the South China Sea, saying any deal without its approval would be "illegal and invalid" and an infringement on China’s sovereignty. The comments from the Foreign Ministry came as Indian officials said ONGC Videsh would continue with exploration projects in two blocks, located near the Paracel Islands, over which Vietnam claims sovereignty. India has reportedly taken the position that Vietnamese claims were in accordance with international laws. Media report said China has conveyed its opposition to the Indian government about the project, citing its claims of sovereignty over all the South China Sea and the disputed islands.

Asked about India’s reported decision to go ahead with the projects, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesperson Hong Lei, without directly referring to India, said that China enjoyed "indisputable sovereignty" over the South China Sea islands. "Any country engaging in oil and gas exploration activities in this jurisdiction without the approval of the Chinese government," he said, "constitutes an infringement upon China’s sovereignty and national interest. The projects, he added, would be "illegal and invalid". China, he said, hoped that "relevant countries" kept its claims in mind, and refrained from "unilateral actions that may complicate and magnify the dispute". Mr. Hong was asked whether China’s claims extended to the whole of the sea, or only to waters around disputed islands, he said "historical evidence" showed that China was the first to discover and administer the islands, and was committed to resolving the dispute on the basis of historical facts and international law.

Asked if China would not object to any projects in waters outside of 12 nautical miles from the islands China claims, he only said any country or company that engaged in projects "in waters in China's jurisdiction" infringed on China’s sovereignty. Countries from outside the region, he said, needed "to respect efforts by regional countries" to solve the dispute through bilateral negotiations. Other countries claiming locus standi in these waters are Vietnam, Philippines, Brunei and Malaysia.
428. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna’s visit to Hanoi for the 14th India - Vietnam Joint Commission meeting.

New Delhi, September 15, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to you and welcome. External Affairs Minister of India Shri S.M.Krishna is on his way to Hanoi to co-chair the 14th India Vietnam Joint Commission Meeting on Trade, Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation which will take place tomorrow.

My colleague Dr. Neena Malhotra, Director (South) is here with me to apprise you about this important event that is taking place in our relationship with Vietnam.

The last meeting of the Joint Commission (JCM) was held in New Delhi on the 27th of February, 2007. EAM would be leading an inter-Ministerial delegation which would include senior representatives of the Ministries of Information Technology, Science and Technology and Home Affairs, ONGC Videsh, Indian Council of Cultural Relations, and our Joint Secretary (South) Arun Goyal, as well as a number of other senior colleagues from MEA.

The Vietnamese Delegation will be led by the newly appointed Foreign Minister of Vietnam His Excellency Pham Binh Minh. By the way, he was born in India, and this was more than fifty years ago when his father, who later became the Foreign Minister of Vietnam, was the Consul-General of Vietnam in India.

The JCM was preceded by the meeting of the senior officials of MEA led by Joint Secretary (South) and his counterpart DG of the Foreign Office. On 14th - 15th September 2011.

Earlier, the Second India-Vietnam Strategic Dialogue and the Fifth Foreign Office Consultations had taken place - on 8-9 August, which was led by Secretary (East) Mr. Sanjay Singh with Dr. Neena Malhotra, Director assisting him.

Briefly EAM’s programme includes, a meeting with his counterpart, followed by JCM. Then, along with the Chairman of Hanoi People’s Committee, EAM would be inaugurating the India-Vietnam Advanced Resource Centre which is being financed by India at a cost of more than $ 2 million with technical support from C-DAC. This is a quality IT training centre which will be operational almost immediately. EAM will also be calling on a number of leaders of Vietnam including the President; and he returns thereafter the next day.
India and Vietnam have traditionally enjoyed very close and cordial relations which have historical roots. Our ties are marked by a remarkable and even strategic similarity of views and outlooks on regional as well as international issues. During the visit of PM Nguyen Tan Dung to India in July 2007, India and Vietnam decided to elevate bilateral relations to the level of strategic partnership.

We firmly believe that our cooperation bilaterally as well as at international and regional for a, is also conducive to peace, stability and prosperity in our respective regions, as well as beyond. We are pleased that our relations are steadily intensifying in a substantive manner and have been receiving the highest level attention. You are aware of a number of high level visits that have been taking place with regularity.

I may add that vibrant relations with Vietnam is a vital pillar of our Look East Policy. We are very appreciative of the role played by Vietnam in helping strengthen our relations with the ASEAN countries and the regional cooperation mechanisms, including during their Chairmanship of ASEAN last year. And it is last year when PM Dr. Manmohan Singh had visited Hanoi in October to participate in the ASEAN and EAS Summits.

Vietnam has always been a steadfast supporter of India’s permanent membership of an expanded UN Security Council. We are pleased that our ties are expanding rapidly and in practically all areas including trade, investments, energy, security, human resource development, capacity-building, IT, science and technology, culture and so on.

Talking of trade, we are pleased that in the last six years our trade has grown five times clocking a cumulative annual increase of something like 34 per cent in the last five years. This year, in fact the pace of increase has further gone up. We had a target of two billion dollars by 2010, but actual trade in 2010-11 was almost double that figure at $ 3.65 billion. We are quite hopeful that the modest target of five billion by 2015 is eminently achievable.

Vietnam has also ratified the India-ASEAN FTA on Goods on 1st June, 2010, which is imparting a boost to our trade ties. We are also in the process of setting up a Vietnam-India Business Forum. Given the conducive investment environment in Vietnam, a number of Indian companies have already made investments, more investments are in the pipeline. Vietnam particularly seeks Indian investments in sectors like high technology, IT, biotechnology, energy including renewable energy, iron and steel, auto components, pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, food processing, and other areas.

Another important area of cooperation is capacity-building, human resource development, and skill enhancement. We are offering 100 ITEC slots a year to Vietnam which are fully utilized. I have already mentioned that EAM will be inaugurating the Advanced IT Resource Centre at Hanoi.

The 40th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations with Vietnam falls next year, and the two countries are keen to celebrate this landmark in a befitting manner. We also have an active cultural programme between the two countries. Earlier this year with effect from 1 January, we have extended the visa-on-arrival facility to Vietnam. Currently I think we extended this facility to eleven countries.

The visit of EAM and JCM Meeting will also be preparatory to the forthcoming visit of the President of Vietnam to India. During JCM both sides will take stock of the implementations of the initiatives and decisions that have taken place in the preceding years and also would look at a roadmap to take our relationship further, to maintain the momentum in our bilateral ties. The visit and JCM are expected to further solidify our traditional friendship and inject greater substance in our strategic partnership.

Thank you. We will be happy to take your questions.

Question: Sir, there are reports of China objecting to ONGC Videsh's venture in Vietnam. Can you shed some light on that please?

Official Spokesperson: I did allude to the fact that we have a very active our relationship since 1992 in particular has evolved with the ASEAN countries, it is quite evident that this has been a resounding success. Last year, we operationalsed the Free Trade Agreement in Goods with ASEAN. How much is the trade with ASEAN?

Director (South) (Dr. Neena Malhotra): The India-ASEAN trade currently is 57.1 billion dollars.

Official Spokesperson: So, you have very robust trade and economic cooperation. We are looking at concluding a FTA in Services and Investments with ASEAN. We have a number of comprehensive economic partnerships already signed with Malaysia, with Singapore, FTA with Thailand. Next year for the first time the India-ASEAN Summit will be held in India. I have only touched upon a few facets, but this is quite indicative of how closely we are engaging with ASEAN countries in general and Vietnam in particular. I may also add that building of relationships with any country is a process, and every major visit adds to substance and content in the relationship between the country and the region.

Question: You did mention about this expanding cooperation in the field of oil exploration and ONGC Videsh is looking at certain pockets. Could you just explain what the areas they have been looking at and what the pockets are?

Official Spokesperson: This is work in progress. We are discussing various options, various possibilities. This is an ongoing exercise. I can tell you what has already taken place, what is taking place, and how we view that cooperation.

Question: What is the total investment …(Inaudible)…ONGC …(Inaudible)…

Director (South): The total Indian investment in Vietnam is over 400 million dollars. OVL is one of the largest investors. I think it is over 225 million dollars. They have been doing exploratory drilling in some of the blocks awarded to them already. The other major investor is Phillips Carbon Black. I think they have recently signed an agreement on this 84 million dollar project on this carbon black which would be the first project of that nature in Vietnam. Then of course there are other various investors like ESSAR, Nagarjuna, Venkateshwar Hatcherries, and …(Inaudible)…

Question: Since all these explorations are happening in South China Sea, what are the security arrangements for these projects? What is the government doing?

Official Spokesperson: Any commercial venture, onshore or offshore, will take the necessary precautions and arrangements that are deemed necessary by the joint venture or the commercial venture. This is standard operating procedure anywhere in the world. Whatever is the need of the hour, depending on the nature of the business, the investment environment, the country in which you are, an entrepreneur takes his decisions.
Question: The Vietnamese port in ...(Unclear)… I believe, we have facilities there. Could you elaborate on that?

Official Spokesperson: What I know is that security and defence cooperation is again an important facet of cooperation with Vietnam. We have a memorandum of defence cooperation that was concluded in 2009. We have regular high-level exchanges, visits - both mil to mil, as well as at the political and official levels. Our Defence Minister was in Vietnam last year in October. Our ships regularly pay port calls in Vietnam and vice versa. We have joint training. We have exchange of information. With any friendly country the kind of security and defence cooperation that we have, we have with Vietnam.

Thank you.

429. Remarks by External Affairs Minister at inauguration of IT Advanced Resource Center at Hanoi.

September 16, 2011.

Your Excellency, Mr. Nguyen The Thao, Chairman of the Hanoi Peoples Committee.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is a great pleasure for me to be in Hanoi today. Through its 1000 year history, Hanoi has seen the rise and fall of empires, turned back invaders and witnessed revolutionary movements. Today, it combines modernity with historicity. It symbolizes a culture that cherishes learning and academic excellence. I am delighted to inaugurate a modern temple of learning, the Vietnam-India Advanced Resource Centre in Information and Communications Technology.

2. India and Vietnam emphasize on development of knowledge-based industries to meet the demands of 21st Century. This calls for development of highly skilled human resources. We are happy to cooperate with Vietnam in this endeavour.

3. The cooperation in the 21st Century between our two countries follows in the footsteps of our great leaders, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and President Ho Chi Minh and Prime Ministers Indira Gandhi and Pham Van dong.

4. The Information Technology sector in India has grown from strength to strength in recent years. The entire gamut of Information Technology related services - including software, data and business processing services and IT enabled services - have emerged as the backbone of the Services sector of our economy. I am from the State of Karnataka. The capital city Bengaluru is known as the Silicon Valley of India. As the Chief Minister of Karnataka, I had an opportunity to strengthen the enabling environment for IT to flourish in Bengaluru. I am therefore particularly glad to see that this sector is emerging as an important element in our partnership with Vietnam also.

5. We have worked closely with Vietnam in the areas of capacity-building and human resource development through several projects. I am glad that we have together established a State-of-the-Art ICT facility in Hanoi. I would like to compliment the Centre for Development of Advanced Computing of India for setting up the single largest capacity-building project under bilateral assistance to Vietnam from India.

6. I am confident that this hi-tech Centre will not only train students and professionals aspiring to make a career in the field of ICT but also emerge as a hub for training of trainers and teachers in IT and IT-based teaching tools. I also understand the Centre will also provide specialized assistance in identifying e-governance solutions for various departments in Government of Vietnam.

7. I am confident that this Center will become a lasting symbol of our Strategic Partnership with Vietnam. I wish the Centre all success in its future endeavors.

Thank you.

430. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs and Joint Secretary (South) Arun Goel on the visit of Vietnamese President Truong Tan Sang.

New Delhi, October 11, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to all of you and welcome.

My colleague Joint Secretary (South) Mr. Arun Goel and I would like to brief you about the state visit of the President of Vietnam His Excellency Truong Tan Sang, who has arrived today at Bangalore. He would be in India till the 13th of October.

President Sang assumed office in August 2011 and this is his very first visit outside the ASEAN region. We look forward to rolling out a red carpet welcome for the President. He is accompanied by his spouse and a number of dignitaries including the Deputy Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, Vice Ministers of Defence, Public Security, Foreign Affairs, Vice Minister of Information Technology, Vice Minister of Planning and Investment, Vice Minister of Communications and Science and Technology, Rural Development, and a number of other senior officials as well as a large media component.

Briefly his programme. He is already in Bangalore, has met with the Governor who hosted a lunch in his honour. He has visited Infosys and would be emplaning for New Delhi Shortly.

Tomorrow there will be a ceremonial welcome at Rashtrapati Bhavan followed by a call on him by the External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna. Thereafter he would be proceeding to Hyderabad House for delegation-level talks which would be followed by signing of agreements and press statements. It is expected that the Prime Minister of India and the President of Vietnam would be making statements to the media.

Later in the afternoon, the apex chambers of commerce CII, FICCI and ASSOCHAM will be hosting a joint business luncheon. In the evening Leader of the Opposition Shrimati Sushma Swaraj will call on him. And later in the evening he meets with the President of India who also hosts a banquet in his honour.

On Thursday the 13th, he leaves for Mumbai where there would be a meeting organized by the Indo-Vietnam Chamber of Commerce, a meeting with the Governor of Maharashtra. And later he leaves Mumbai. That is broadly the programme.

India and Vietnam share a long tradition of close and friendly relations, anchored in the vision of the late Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and President Ho Chi Minh. Our ties are marked by mutual trust and a near identity of outlook on bilateral, regional and international issues, and matters of common interest. The relations are free of any divergences.

In 2007, both sides decided to elevate the relationship to the level of strategic partnership. I am happy to say that our mutually beneficial multifaceted bilateral cooperation, is also conducive to peace, stability and prosperity in our respective regions and beyond.

In recent years, high-level bilateral exchanges have been stepped up further which have helped nurture the ties. I would like to highlight some of the important visits, in the last couple of years which include the state visit of our President in November 2008. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had visited Hanoi in October 2010 for the East Asia Summit and the ASEAN Summit. Raksha Mantri Mr. Anthony was in Hanoi in October last year. The Chairman of the National Assembly of Vietnam was in India last year. Speaker of Lok Sabha Shrimati Meira Kumar was in Hanoi in May this year. And last month the External Affairs Minister was in Hanoi for the 14th India-Vietnam Joint Commission Meeting on Trade, Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation. We have also had the Second India Vietnam Strategic Dialogue last August.

We particularly appreciate Vietnam’s support in imparting content and depth to our Look East Policy. They have played a constructive role, a helpful role in forging closer linkages between India and ASEAN including the regional cooperation mechanisms, also during their ASEAN Chairmanship in 2010. We work closely in regional and international forums including ASEAN, the East Asia Summit, ASEM or the Asia Europe Meeting, besides of course UN and WTO. We greatly appreciate the steadfast support extended by Vietnam for our permanent membership of the expanded UN Security Council.

Vietnam is a fellow developing country with a dynamic and youthful population like we have in India, and is today the third largest country in ASEAN, growing rapidly at six to seven per cent per annum. Naturally our economic and commercial ties constitute one of the thrust areas of bilateral cooperation. I would like to underscore that during the last five years trade has grown at an average of 34 per cent per annum. This increased further by 39 per cent in the first six months of 2011 to touch 1.8 billion dollars. We expect it to close at something like 3.5 billion dollars in 2011, and would rise to seven billion dollars by 2015. We are already among the ten largest trading partners of Vietnam.

It is encouraging to note that consequent to the conclusion of the India-ASEAN FTA in Goods which Vietnam ratified on the 1st of June, 2010, their exports to India, in just a matter of months, have spurted by 136 per cent. This has made the trade much more balanced. It is still in India’s favour but the two-way trade has become much more balanced.

We are now in the process of establishing the India-Vietnam Business Forum which we are confident, would give a further boost to our trade ties. Recognizing the rapid economic development in India, recognizing our strengths in a variety of sectors including services, knowledge industries and the manufacturing sectors, Vietnam has been actively seeking Indian investments including in sectors like information technology, energy including renewable energy, chemicals and petrochemicals, fertilizers, iron and steel, health, education. By the way health and education are among two of the sectors where Vietnam respects the achievements of India and would like to see Indian companies and organisations play a much larger role in their country. Other areas include pharmaceuticals and medical components, food processing, auto components, etc.

Already close to quarter billion dollars have been invested by Indian companies in 54 ventures in Vietnam in a number of sectors such as sugar. Here, Nagarjuna Group has set up a venture. Tea that is Mcleod Russel; Coffee Company Limited of India has a unit. Recently Venkateshwara Hatcheries made an important investment for setting up a poultry feed unit, marble, steel furniture the Godrej Group is involved there, carbon black that is the first carbon black unit which has been set up by Philips Carbon. Tyres - JK Group is establishing a venture. IT sector - we have already about 60 franchised IT centres of NIIT, APTEC, and Tata Infotec, which are operating all over Vietnam and many more are in the pipeline, and also hydrocarbons where OVL and Essar Group have a presence.
India is also cooperating closely with Vietnam in skill enhancement and human resource development. I am happy to say that 100 ITEC fellowships, and thirty scholarships annually to Vietnamese students are on offer. EAM during his visit last month, inaugurated the Vietnam-India Advanced Technology Resource Centre at Hanoi which has been constructed with the help of C-DAC at a cost of two million dollars.

It has since been decided to establish a new Vietnam-India Centre for English language training at the Diplomatic Academy in Vietnam. We are also working together closely to expand ties in areas like energy, security and defence, science and technology, culture and so on. We had concluded a Memorandum of Understanding on defence cooperation in 2009.

Talking culture, we are planning to set up an Indian Cultural Centre in Hanoi soon. Vietnam and India also share civilisational, cultural and Buddhist links. And India has agreed to undertake restoration of Cham cultural monuments in MY SON, which is the ancient capital of the Champa Kingdom.

The full diplomatic relations were established in 1972 and the 40th anniversary falls next year which both sides have decided to celebrate as the Year of Friendship in each other’s countries and we also area planning to have a Festival of India in Vietnam.

Vietnamese are among nationals of 11 countries who can get visas on arrival in India. Of the 11 countries, interestingly seven are from the ASEAN region whose nationals can get visas on arrival.

In sum, we attach considerable importance to the state visit of the President of Vietnam. He would be holding in-depth and substantive discussions with the Indian dignitaries to qualitatively enhance our strategic partnership. Some agreements, as I mentioned, are also likely to be signed during the visit.

We will be happy to take your questions.

Question: Any details of the agreements to be signed?

Joint Secretary (South) (Shri Arun K Goel): We are expecting some agreements to celebrate the 2012 as the year of friendship marking the fortieth anniversary, also in the field of extradition.

Question: Anything on defence?

Joint Secretary (South): No.

Question: Sir, any agreement likely on fisheries and naval cooperation?

Joint Secretary (South): Not at present.
Question: Why are the relations between India and Vietnam important for us?

Official Spokesperson: I just now spoke to you on this subject. I told you why our relations are so important. Our relations with Vietnam are historical and they are getting strengthened. In 2007 our two countries entered into strategic partnership. Our relations cover almost all sectors—business, economic, security, defence, culture. Every year we have high level visits. We are happy that these relations are getting strengthened every year.

Question: A big delegation is visiting, then why no agreement is being signed?

Official Spokesperson: My colleague just now told you, there shall be agreements, and these will be signed. As is our practice, we discuss them after they are signed and give you the details.

Question: Can you elaborate on the defence and security ties between India and Vietnam? Also, will the sale of Brahmos figure in the talks?

Joint Secretary (South): We have ongoing cooperation with Vietnam mainly to train their police in internal policing and also wherever they expect training facilities, whether in India or through our trainers in Vietnam. But there is no discussion on any missile cooperation.

Official Spokesperson: Can I just add to that a bit?

As I mentioned, we have a Memorandum of Understanding of defence cooperation in 2009. We have had and have regular high-level exchanges. Our Defence Minister was in Vietnam in October last year. We have military-to-military cooperation, we have regular ship calls on both sides. My colleague mentioned training. We have exchange of information. We have exchange of visits. So, this is the kind of defence cooperation that obtains. And we have similar defence cooperation with a number of our key partners.

Question: How many trainers will go from here?

Official Spokesperson: This is on the basis of requirement. Depending on our capacity, the need, etc., the training takes place from time to time.

Question: Are we planning to enhance our defence cooperation, and if so, in which area?

Joint Secretary (South): It is an ongoing thing depending upon their request. For example, for all the three wings of the armed forces of Vietnam, because both countries have similar equipment originating from Russia, Vietnam would like to use our expertise in maintaining and servicing that equipment including spares, etc. This has been going on for some time. Depending on their requirement, we are happy to assist them.
Official Spokesperson: And also Vietnam and India are strategic partners. We have, as I said, a near identity of views and outlooks including on issues like terrorism, issues of piracy, keeping sea lanes of communications open, so obviously there are a number of areas where our views converge and we have mentioned that we are steadily looking at expanding our relations in all spheres.

Question: Since you talked about piracy, there are reports that MV Montecristo has been hijacked and there are ten Indians on board. What details at this moment can you share with us?

Official Spokesperson: We are aware of this incident. I believe that our Directorate General of Shipping which is the nodal organization are in the know of the matter, and at this stage that they would have details because the DG(Shipping) is the nodal Department.

Question: Sir, is any strategic partnership between OVL and its Vietnam counterpart going to be signed during the visit?

Joint Secretary (South): Cooperation in the field of hydrocarbons, as already mentioned, has been ongoing. In fact, ONGC Videsh has been in Vietnam probably the longest, from 1998 onwards. Of the three places where they have been in partnership in oil and gas exploration, they have been successful since 1993 and for gas production which Vietnam utilizes for electricity production. So, it is an ongoing venture.

Question: Sir, do you see any kind of joint naval exercise between the two countries, off the coast of both countries in the near future, either off the coast of India or Vietnam?

Joint Secretary (South): I do not think we have anything on the table right now. Vietnam has been undertaking efforts to build up its naval and coastguard arms of their defence forces. Our naval ships do make routine port calls in Vietnam. But what you are mentioning is I think way off in the future.

Question: Sir, this is a state visit and you are only talking about two agreements one on extradition and one on ...(Inaudible)... Is there more to it or is it just these two agreements? Anything on trade, anything on defence?

Official Spokesperson: Can I interject? The standard operating procedure is that we do not share details till the agreements are signed. It is not a question of numbers that if there is a state visit there has to be ‘x’ number and if it is an official visit there has to be ‘y’ number. Agreements are basically a reflection of the commonality of interest. As I said, we do expect a number of agreements to be concluded and we will be very happy to share them with you in due course.
Question: But can you mention the broad areas, if you do not have a problem discussing the areas, in which the agreements would be signed?

Joint Secretary (South): I just mentioned that in the field of culture, etc. You will get to know tomorrow because many are done at the last minute.

Question: Not even the areas like IT, health, pharma?

Official Spokesperson: Culture, others, we have already told you.

Question: You mentioned that Vietnam and India share a similar vision on matters of foreign affairs amongst other things. Obviously, we have not mentioned today China which is something that has come up in the media recently and it has ...(Inaudible)... relations in oil exploration and so possibly. I just wonder will China be something that we talk about in the visit and how would it influence India-Vietnam relations? How does China influence India and Vietnam’s relationship?

Official Spokesperson: As to the latter part of your question, I think every country has its relationships. Vietnam has its relationship with China, we have our relationship with China. We have a strategic and cooperative partnership with China. Our relationship with Vietnam or Vietnam’s relationship with India is not directed at any country. That is as far as this aspect is concerned. When there are Heads of States or Governments visiting, of course the entire gamut of issues of interest is discussed. Cooperation in the hydrocarbons sector is one of the important areas of cooperation and ongoing area of cooperation. My colleague has also already mentioned the presence of OVL since 1988. I really do not know what they will discuss but normally all issues of mutual interest are taken up.

Question: Will issues relating to current situation in South China Sea come up for discussion?

Official Spokesperson: I do not know any issue as you call it. You will have to remind me if there is any issue pertaining to the South China Sea*. I do not know of any issue. But as far as I am concerned, and we have just mentioned, all matters of interest that the two sides would like to take up, they will do so.

* The Journalist had in mind the Chinese unease on India’s public sector company ONGC engaging in oil and gas exploration projects in the South China Sea. “Our consistent position is that we are opposed to any country engaging in oil and gas exploration and development activities in waters under China’s jurisdiction,” Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesperson Jiang Yu had said. While Ms. Jiang said she was not aware of reports of Indian involvement in any projects, she stressed China enjoyed “indisputable sovereignty” over the South China Sea and its islands. “We hope foreign countries will not get involved in the dispute,” she said. “For countries outside the region, we hope they will respect and support countries in the region to solve this dispute through bilateral channels.”
Question: Sir, this is not directly related to Vietnam visit, but this week obviously there is also a visit by the President of Myanmar.

Official Spokesperson: We had yesterday announced the visit of the President of Myanmar. The announcement is on the website. We are planning to do a briefing on the visit most probably on day after tomorrow. Once we take a view on the time and the date, we will be making announcement. But as we said yesterday, we attach the highest importance to our relationship with Myanmar. It is a neighbouring country. It is a very important neighbour of ours. We are eagerly looking forward to the visit of the President of Myanmar who would be heading a high-level delegation when he visits India on the 13th.

Question: On Vietnam, could you just tell us what is our nuclear cooperation with them and the space cooperation?

Joint Secretary (South): At present there is no cooperation in the field of nuclear energy, but Vietnam like many other countries does plan to look for peaceful uses of energy in the field of nuclear, possibly for electricity production for which they are looking around which technology to adopt and if thought so maybe they will come back to us. And in space field also they are aware of our capabilities in launching satellites including for remote sensing and would like to utilize that for a better flood forecasting and use in the field of agriculture.

Question: Sir, it is not related to the Vietnam visit but to the TASMAC University that has shut shop in the United Kingdom and 500 Indian students are affected. If you could give your reaction on what the Ministry is doing?

Official Spokesperson: We believe that the UK Border Agency had decided to close down the London Campus of the TASMAC School of Business on Thursday the 6th of October. Again we understand that this campus was established in 2004 and TASMAC does have reportedly two other campuses – one in Bangalore and one in Kolkata. Immediately upon learning of this development, the High Commission of India got in touch with TASMAC as well as with the British authorities. And we have been shown an email that has been sent out by TASMAC to its students to basically say that they are trying to work with the University of Wales to transfer the students to other educational institutions so that their studies do not suffer. The High Commission of India has already put up an advisory on the website asking the affected Indian students to get in touch with them for assistance if any. I am told by our Acting High Commissioner that so far nobody has contacted the High Commission. Also as I have said, we have sought meetings with the British authorities including with the UK Border Agency, which is likely to materialize very soon. I can assure you that the High Commission of India will do everything possible to try and ensure that the students are not adversely affected. As per present information we believe that there are about 200 – not 500 – Indian students who could be affected by the closure of the London Campus of TASMAC School. Does it answer your question? Good.

Question: Do we have military exercises with Vietnam?

Joint Secretary (South): I think all three wings of the armed forces have ongoing cooperation, but nothing of the kind which you are implying. Let me add a word or two in the field of hydrocarbons. One possible area where we could be assisting Vietnam is in city gas distribution. There is a request from their side to utilize the expertise of GAIL in city gas network distribution or CNG for public transport in which we have well developed expertise. So, possibly in the future GAIL would be looking at entering into a joint venture to share expertise. And also ONGC Videsh is not the only company but Essar Oil also has been active in Vietnam since 2008 investing in exploration blocks offshore. Also, PetroVietnam, the Vietnamese counterpart, periodically offers some blocks for exploration to international firms in which OVL and many other foreign companies are expected to bid for exploration in these blocks.

Thank you very much.

431. Statement by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to the Media during the visit of President of Vietnam.

New Delhi, October 12, 2011.

Your Excellency President Truong Tan Sang
Ladies and gentlemen of the media.

I am delighted to welcome His Excellency Mr. Truong Tan Sang, the President of Vietnam on his State visit to India.

This is the first visit by the President outside the ASEAN region and reflects the importance attached by both sides to our relationship.

India’s relations with Vietnam are rooted in antiquity. They have been strengthened by successive generations of leaders and strong mutual trust and goodwill. Today, our relations cover the areas of trade and economic cooperation, capacity building and assistance, cultural exchanges, energy, defence and security.

Vietnam is among the most dynamic economies in Asia and we wish to build a strategic partnership with Vietnam that responds to the aspirations of both our peoples.

In our talks today the President and I have agreed to intensify cooperation across a broad range of sectors.

Our bilateral trade has reached 2.7 billion US dollars last year. We have set ourselves the target to increase it to 7 billion US dollars by 2015. We have agreed to work towards an early finalization of the India-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement in Services and Investment.

I conveyed to the President that we are committed to greater investment flows between our two countries. Several Indian companies are working in Vietnam, and we similarly welcome Vietnamese investments in India. We will continue to render assistance to Vietnam in its capacity building and human resource development efforts.

India and Vietnam are maritime neighbours. We face common security challenges from terrorism, piracy and natural disasters. We believe that it is important to ensure the safety and security of the vital sea lanes of communication. We have agreed to continue and strengthen our exchanges in these fields.

We have instituted a mechanism of a biennial dialogue on security issues between our Ministry of Home Affairs and its Vietnamese counterpart. The Extradition Treaty signed today will provide a legal and institutional basis for our cooperation.

We have identified several other areas of cooperation such as people-to-people exchanges, energy, science and technology, information and communications technology and conservation and restoration of Indian cultural relics in Vietnam.

Next year will mark the 40th anniversary of the establishment of full diplomatic relations between our two countries. It will also mark twenty years of India’s Dialogue Partnership with ASEAN. We have agreed to celebrate 2012 as the Year of Friendship between India and Vietnam. We will also organize the ‘Year of India in Vietnam’ in 2012.

Developing close relations with Vietnam is an important component of our Look East Policy. We have agreed to strengthen our cooperation in regional mechanisms such as the ASEAN, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the East Asia Summit and the Asean Defence Ministers Plus Eight Dialogue.

A strong India-Vietnam partnership is a factor of peace, stability and development in the Asia-Pacific region. It is a partnership that stands on its own merits.

The President’s visit has given a new thrust and direction to our partnership. I once again extend a very cordial welcome to him and wish him a pleasant and fruitful stay in India.

I thank you.
432. Joint Statement issued on the occasion of the visit of the President of Vietnam Truong Tan Sang.

New Delhi, October 12, 2011.

1. At the invitation of H.E. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, President of the Republic of India, H.E. Truong Tan Sang, President of the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam and Madame Mai Thi Hanh paid a State visit to India on 11-13 October 2011.

2. The President was accorded an official ceremonial reception at Rashtrapati Bhawan in the capital New Delhi on 12th October 2011. The President laid a wreath at the memorial to Mahatma Gandhi at Rajghat. During the visit, President Truong Tan Sang called on the President of India Smt. Pratibha Devi Singh Patil who hosted a Banquet in his honour. He held talks with Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. Smt. Meira Kumar, Speaker of the Lok Sabha, Shri S.M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister, and Shri A.K. Antony, Minister of Defence and Smt. Sushma Swaraj, Leader of the Opposition called on the President.

3. President Truong Tan Sang visited Bangalore and met the Governor of the state of Karnataka. He also visited Mumbai where he met the Governor of the state of Maharashtra. President Sang met leaders of Indian business enterprises in New Delhi and Mumbai.

4. President Truong Tan Sang and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh also witnessed signing of Agreements and Memorandums of Understanding (MoUs) on bilateral cooperation.

5. President Smt. Pratibha Devisingh Patil and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh congratulated Viet Nam on the success of the 11th National Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam and the elections to the 13th National Assembly. President Truong Tan Sang highly valued the remarkable achievements made by the State, the Government and people of India in all fields in the course of national development which has increasingly enhanced the role and standing of India in the region and the world.

6. The leaders of the two countries exchanged views in an atmosphere of warmth, cordiality and mutual trust on all aspects of bilateral cooperation as well as on the regional and international issues of mutual interest. They welcomed the sustained development of the traditional friendship and strategic partnership between India and Viet Nam. They recalled the glorious contributions of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and President Ho Chi Minh for the development of India-Viet Nam Friendship that had been preserved, nurtured and further developed by generations of leaders and people of the two countries and had gone from strength to strength. Both countries agreed to celebrate 2012 as “the India - Viet Nam Friendship Year” to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the establishment of the full diplomatic relations (07/01/1972 - 07/01/2012) and the 5th anniversary of the establishment of the strategic partnership (06/07/2007 - 06/07/2012). The Indian side would also organize the “Year of India in Viet Nam” in 2012 with a series of cultural events including performing arts, film festivals, and other events in various cities across Viet Nam.

7. Both sides valued and agreed to further enhance high-level visits and meetings between the two countries. The leaders noted that there still remains considerable potential for cooperation and agreed to strongly enhance the comprehensive strategic partnership between the two countries, based on the main pillars of security, economic, cultural and HRD cooperation. Both sides highly appreciated the results of the 14th Meeting of Joint Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation at the Foreign Minister level, the 5th Political Consultation and the 2nd Strategic Dialogue at the Deputy Foreign Minister level.

8. The leaders agreed to further deepen the strategic partnership, by adding more concrete programs and projects and broadening it to new areas for cooperation, taking into account the changing political and economic situation both at regional and international levels. Both sides agreed to continue strengthening cooperation in the areas of politics, economy, trade and investment, finance, science and technology, human resource development, culture, agriculture, fisheries, aquaculture etc., while striving to expand cooperation into other potential areas such as frontier areas of science and technology, justice, public health, information and communication, tourism, sports, press, and other areas of mutual interest. The two sides noted with satisfaction the establishment of the India-Viet Nam Business Forum, Advanced Resource Centre in Information and Communications Technologies (ARC-ICT) and the Institute for Indian and South-West Asian Studies under the Viet Nam Academy of Social Sciences. Viet Nam welcomed the announcement of India to establish a Cultural Centre in Hanoi.

9. Both sides noted with satisfaction that the two-way trade had increased steadily in the recent years and the trade deficit of the Vietnamese side had declined. President Truong Tan Sang affirmed that Viet Nam would create favourable conditions for Indian enterprises to invest in the country. Both sides agreed to step up trade and investment linkages, inter-alia by encouraging cooperation between the private sectors. Both sides set a target of US$ 7 billion of bilateral trade by 2015. Both sides welcomed the entry into force of the India-ASEAN FTA in Goods and agreed to work for the early finalization of the India-ASEAN FTA in Services and Investments.
10. The two sides welcomed the further strengthening of cooperation in the fields of defense and security. They expressed satisfaction at the outcome of the 6th Indo-Viet Nam Security Dialogue at the Deputy Defense Minister level and the establishment of a mechanism of biennial dialogue on security issues between the Ministry of Home Affairs of India and Ministry of Public Security of Viet Nam and agreed to work towards the early completion of the Indira Gandhi Hi-tech Forensic Laboratory in Ho Chi Minh City. The Vietnamese side welcomed the offer for training and capacity building of Vietnamese police forces.

11. Both sides welcomed the signing of the Extradition Treaty, Memorandum of Understanding on India-Viet Nam Friendship Year 2012, Agreement on Cooperation between Petrovietnam and ONGC Videsh Limited, Work Plan for the years 2011-2013 in the fields of agricultural and fishery research and education, Protocol of Cultural Activities in India-Vietnam Friendship Year 2012, and agreed to expedite negotiations for early signing of documents of cooperation in other fields as had been agreed in the 14th Meeting of the Joint Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation. The Vietnamese side welcomed the announcement by the Prime Minister of India to double the number of ITEC scholarships from 75 to 150 from the year 2012.

12. President Truong Tan Sang highly appreciated the support and assistance of the State, the Government and people of India rendered to Viet Nam in the past years, which was a vivid manifestation of the fine traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries. The Government of India agreed to extend new Lines of Credit to Viet Nam on favorable terms and conditions for projects in infrastructure, oil and gas, power generation and transmission projects and in other areas as requested by the Vietnamese side; and agreed to consider earmarking another Line of credit under the buyer’s credit Scheme.

13. The leaders affirmed their desire and determination to work together for peace and stability in the region and the world, and agreed to further strengthen cooperation at regional and international fora, especially the ASEAN-India and Mekong-Ganga fora as well as in EAS, ASEM, ARF, WTO, UN and the Non-aligned Movement. The Vietnamese side reaffirmed its strong support for India’s Look East Policy and the strengthening of ASEAN–India relationship. The Indian side congratulated Viet Nam for its success in fulfilling its role as ASEAN Chair in 2010 and thanked Viet Nam for its support to India’s candidature for permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council and the G4 short draft resolution on reform of UNSC.
14. The two sides stressed the importance of maintaining peace, stability and of ensuring the safety and security of navigation in the high seas. The two sides agreed that disputes in the East Sea/South China Sea should be resolved by peaceful means, without resorting to the threat or use of force by the parties concerned, in accordance with universally recognized principles of international law, including the 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea and the 2002 ASEAN-China Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea.

15. Both sides agreed to step up cooperation in the field of capacity building, technical assistance and information sharing between their respective relevant agencies for ensuring security of sea-lanes, including combating piracy, preventing pollution, conducting search and rescue, etc. on sea.

16. The two sides agreed to strengthen cooperation to effectively address the challenges posed by non-traditional security threats such as climate change, environmental degradation, natural disasters, energy security, HIV/AIDS and avian influenza.

17. Both sides also agreed to closely cooperate to promote dialogue and cooperation within the EAS with the aim of promoting peace, stability, development and prosperity in East Asia.

18. The two sides strongly condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and resolved to increase cooperation in the common efforts of the international community in preventing this scourge in a comprehensive manner. Both sides agreed to closely cooperate for an early finalization of a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism, for which India had presented a draft at the United Nations in 1996.

19. President Truong Tan Sang and Madame Mai Thi Hanh expressed their gratitude to the State and friendly people of India for the warm reception and hospitality accorded to the President and the Vietnamese delegation during their State visit to the Republic of India.

Your Excellency, Mr. Truong Tan Sang, President of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, Madam Mai Thi Hanh,

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I extend a very warm welcome to Your Excellency, on your State Visit to India. Allow me to felicitate you on the successful conclusion of your elections to the 13th National Assembly in May this year. I would also like to congratulate you personally on your election as the President of Vietnam. I have very fond memories of my visit to your great country in November 2008, where I witnessed the remarkable strides being made for the progress and prosperity of your people.

Vietnam has a special place in the hearts of the Indian people. We have great admiration for the indomitable spirit of the Vietnamese people, for their determination to succeed against all odds, and for their tenacity and courage. Today, the same attributes of the national character are driving your reconstruction and economic development. I would like to compliment the Vietnamese leadership and people for these remarkable achievements.

India and Vietnam share a long tradition of close and cordial relations, whose foundations were laid by our great leaders Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and President Ho Chi Minh. Successive generations of our leaders have nurtured our friendship, which has now been elevated to the level of a “Strategic Partnership”.

Our Strategic Partnership is founded on a common vision, shared interests and mutual trust and long-standing friendship. We are convinced that it will promote peace, stability and security in this region and the world. We stand ready to impart greater content to our partnership for mutual benefit. The agreements and MoUs that we have signed today will open new avenues for bilateral co-operation.

Excellency, Our bilateral economic and trade ties have grown significantly in recent years. Bilateral trade is expected to exceed US $ 3.5 billion this year. We have set a target of US $ 7 billion by 2015. This will require sustained efforts from both countries. The newly launched India-Vietnam Business Forum will generate greater awareness about mutually beneficial business opportunities, thereby facilitating trade and investment. I am confident that the Government of Vietnam will continue to provide a congenial atmosphere for Indian investors and businesses to operate in Vietnam.

We welcome our strategic understanding and co-operation at regional and multilateral forums like ASEAN, Mekong-Ganga Cooperation, East Asia Summit, ASEM and international organisations like the UN and WTO. We deeply appreciate Vietnam’s support to India’s candidature as a permanent member of an expanded UN Security Council. As two developing countries with a stake in the future, we must take advantage of our synergies to jointly face emerging challenges and also to exploit new opportunities.

India has always considered it a privilege to be a partner in Vietnam’s development process. We enjoy robust co-operation in the spheres of defence and security. We are happy to assist in the modernisation of your armed forces. Our co-operation in diverse areas such as agriculture, science and technology, education, capacity building and human resource development is growing. We should learn from each others experiences and expertise in these areas. I am pleased to learn that the India-Vietnam Advanced Resource Centre in Information and Communication Technology has recently been inaugurated in Hanoi. As two rapidly developing countries with a young, dynamic population, we must seize new avenues for co-operation that will take our partnership from strength to strength.

Your Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, it gives me great pleasure to invite you all to join me in a toast:-

— to the good health and happiness of His Excellency Mr. Truong Tan Sang and Madam Mai Thi Hanh; — to the well-being and prosperity of the friendly people of Vietnam; and — to the everlasting friendship between India and Vietnam.

437. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs on the Conference of Heads of Mission to Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries.

New Delhi, November 25, 2011.

The Union Minister of Overseas Indian Affairs, Shri Vayalar Ravi inaugurated two-day 6th Annual Conference of Heads of Indian Missions of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries as well as Jordan, Yemen, Malaysia, Maldives, Nigeria, Tanzania, Kenya, South Africa and Iraq, here today. Smt. Preneet Kaur, Minister of State for External Affairs delivered the Key Note Address. The two day Conference is an important institutional initiative to discuss various issues and problems relating to the Overseas Indian Community, especially the expatriate workers and to further develop an institutional framework and operational mechanism to effectively address the concerns of Overseas Indians.

The Agenda of the Conference will include the new initiatives in the Emigration Policy being framed by the Ministry, review of various welfare measures at the Mission level, strengthening Grievance Redressal Mechanism at the Mission level, follow up on the Joint Working Group meetings’ decisions, pursuant to labour MoUs with five GCC countries etc. Several important decisions taken by the Ministry for the protection and welfare of migrant workers will also be discussed for effective implementation and follow-up. The recommendations of the Conference would give guidance to the Ministry of Overseas Indian affairs for setting the Agenda for future course of action for addressing the concerns of the overseas Indian community.

The Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs is the nodal ministry for protection and welfare of Overseas Indian workers. An estimated five million semi-skilled and unskilled Indian nationals are working on temporary employment/contract visas, predominantly in the construction, healthcare and household services sectors, mostly in the GCC countries and Malaysia. The Ministry had entered into bilateral labour agreements with Jordan, Bahrain, Malaysia, Kuwait, Qatar, Oman and UAE to protect the welfare and security of Indian workers working in ECR countries. The Ministry would like to expand bilateral labour agreements with the remaining ECR countries. Indian Community Welfare Fund which was originally for ECR countries has been extended to Missions in all the countries. The Missions are making use of this fund to provide immediate relief to Indian workers in need and distress. The Heads of Missions would be requested to suggest modalities as to how the use of funds can be made broader.
ARMENIA

438. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the meeting of the Fifth India-Armenia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific & Technological, Cultural and Education Cooperation and the Foreign Office Consultations at Yerevan from October 31 to November 1, 2011.

New Delhi, November 2, 2011.

The Fifth Session of India-Armenia Inter-Governmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific & Technological, Cultural and Educational Cooperation (IGC), India-Armenia Foreign Office Consultations (FOC), and in conjunction with IGC an India-Armenia Business Forum were held in Yerevan on 31 October – 01 November 2011. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East), Ministry of External Affairs. The Armenian delegation was led by Mr. Sergey Manassarian, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, Republic of Armenia. The Indian Business delegation was mounted by the Federation of Indian Chamber of Commerce and Industry (FICCI).

Secretary (East) was received by H.E. Edward Nalbandian, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Armenia. He conveyed the warm wishes of the Government of India to the Republic of Armenia on the 20th anniversary of the restoration of its independence in 1991. Both sides expressed their satisfaction that considerable substance and contents had been added to bilateral relations in the last two decades and reiterated their mutual desire and commitment to further strengthen the existing cordial relations and all-round bilateral cooperation. Secretary (East) also called on Mr. Artur Baghdasaryan, Secretary, National Security Council of Armenia.

The deliberations at the IGC meeting provided an excellent opportunity to review the current state of ongoing cooperation in diverse fields such as Trade and Investment, Science and Technology, Information and Communication Technology, Civil Aviation and Tourism, Health, Development Cooperation etc; the two sides also identified Agriculture, Small and Medium Enterprises and Social and Labour issues as new areas where potential for cooperation exists. A Programme of Cooperation in Science & Technology for the period 2012-2015 was signed during the visit. It was also agreed to expedite the finalization of other bilateral agreements currently under discussion. The two sides also decided to suitably commemorate during 2012 the 20th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Armenia.

During the Business Forum, the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) and Union of Manufacturers and Businessmen (Employers) of Armenia [UMB(E)A] signed an MoU to establish a Joint Business Council which is expected to serve as a platform for enhanced business interaction between the private sectors of the two countries.

At the Foreign Office Consultations, the two sides discussed at length bilateral relations, including cooperation at UN and International Organizations and also exchanged views on regional and international issues of mutual interest. The Indian side reiterated that it supports the principle of resolution of conflicts through peaceful negotiations. The Armenian side reiterated its support for G-4 Model for UNSC expansion in both Permanent and Non-Permanent categories of Seats and also reaffirmed support for India’s candidature for a Permanent seat in the expanded UNSC.
AZERBAIJAN

Baku, September 24, 2011.

The third round of the India-Azerbaijan Foreign Office Consultations were held in Baku on 22-24 September 2011. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Sanjay Singh, Secretary (East), Ministry of External Affairs. The Azerbaijani delegation was led by Mr. Khalaf Khalafov, Deputy Foreign Minister of the Republic of Azerbaijan. Secretary (East) held meetings with H.E. Mr. Shahin Mustafayev, Minister for Economic Development and with Mr. Natig Abbasov, Deputy Minister for Industry and Energy of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

At the Consultations, the two sides discussed in detail bilateral relations with particular focus on strengthening cooperation in the political, trade, economic, and cultural fields and people to people exchanges. Views were also exchanged on regional and international issues of mutual interest. Both sides agreed to strengthen the institutional framework between the two countries, and sign documents, currently under discussion, at the earliest.

Secretary (East) conveyed the warm wishes of the Government of India to the Republic of Azerbaijan on the 20th anniversary of the restoration of its independence in 2011, and reaffirmed India’s support for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Azerbaijan. Both sides expressed their satisfaction at the development of all round relations between the two countries in the last two decades and decided to suitably commemorate the 20th anniversary of the establishment of bilateral relations in 2012.

At the Consultations, Secretary (East) emphasized the fact that as an energy importing and fast developing country, India had an interest in Azerbaijan’s oil and gas sector, a fruitful partnership in its upstream and downstream projects, and possible utilization of energy surpluses for production of end products of interest to India, such as fertilizers. The Azerbaijan side welcomed India’s interest in these sectors. India is equally committed to a mutually beneficial partnership in Azerbaijan’s non-oil sectors particularly in agriculture, information technology, communications, pharmaceuticals, textiles and garments, jewellery, processed food products, infrastructure development and education. Both sides are not only keen to restore the direct communications connectivity of the old by land and water, but also to establish air connectivity and reliable banking, shipping and digital links. Both sides also discussed developments with regard to the International North-South Corridor. Both sides expressed their hope that the forthcoming second session of the Inter-Governmental Commission in Baku will deliberate upon these issues in detail and generate action that facilitates this vision of closer cooperation between the two countries and its peoples in future.

BAHRAIN

440. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the Call by Ambassador of India in Bahrain on Prime Minister of Bahrain on the safety of Indian nationals in that country.

New Delhi, March 17, 2011.

The Ambassador of India, Bahrain called on the Prime Minister H.H. Sheikh Khalifa Bin Salman Al Khalifa today. He was assured by the Prime Minister that the Bahraini authorities will do everything in their power to ensure the safety and security of Indians living in the country.

2. The Government continues to carefully monitor the security situation in Bahrain and will issue suitable travel advisories should it become necessary. Until then, the present advisory which asks Indians in Bahrain to keep a low profile, stay indoors and to avoid all non-essential travel within the country stands. The Indian Embassy has also advised the Indian associations that those family members and others whose presence in Bahrain is not necessary should consider leaving the country, if so inclined.

The call was made by the Ambassador in the wake of large scale demonstrations against the local government asking for democratic reforms in the wake of similar developments in Egypt and Tunisia and consequent sense of insecurity created in the island in which the Indian community felt vulnerable.
441. Remarks of Minister of State E. Ahamed welcoming the Foreign Minister of Bahrain Shaikh Khalid Bin Ahmed on his visit to India.

New Delhi, March 30, 2011.

It is with great pleasure that I extend a warm welcome to H.E. Shaikh Khalid Bin Ahmed Bin Mohamed Al Khalifa, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Bahrain to India.

India and Bahrain enjoy warm and friendly relations which are based on our historical and civilisational ties. The presence of a large Indian community in Bahrain represents a living link which nurtures this long-standing relationship. We are indeed thankful to the Government and the people of Bahrain for extending a warm welcome to the sizeable Indian community there who in turn have contributed through their dedication and hard work to Bahrain’s development. This contribution has been recognized by the Bahraini leadership and we thank them for their continued support to the Indian community.

The visit of H.E. Shaikh Khalid is part of the tradition of having high level visits in order to exchange views on matters of mutual interest. I once again extend him a very warm welcome and invite him to share his thoughts with you.

**************

Giving the details of the visit of the Minister a press release of the Ministry of External Affairs issued on March 30 said:

“As part of the regular high level exchanges between India and Bahrain, H.E. Shaikh Khalid Bin Ahmed Bin Mohamed Al-Khalifa, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Bahrain is visiting India from March 29-31, 2011.

2. India and Bahrain enjoy traditionally friendly relations which are based on historical and civilisational ties. The presence of a large Indian community in Bahrain represents a living link which nurtures this long standing relationship.

3. The Bahraini Foreign Minister met External Affairs Minister, Shri S.M. Krishna on 30th March 2011 and had detailed discussions on issues of mutual interest including recent developments in Bahrain and the region. The External Affairs Minister also hosted a lunch in honour of the visiting dignitary.

4. The Bahraini Foreign Minister conveyed the firm assurance of the Bahraini leadership about ensuring the safety and security of the Indian community numbering well over 350,000 and appreciated their contribution to the progress and development of Bahrain. In this context, the Bahraini Foreign Minister referred to his meeting with over 200 members of the Indian community on 26th March 2011 in Manama. External Affairs Minister thanked his counterpart for this reassurance with regard to the Indian community's well-being and expressed confidence that the law-abiding Indian community would continue to be a partner in Bahrain's growth story well into the future.

5. The Bahraini Foreign Minister briefed External Affairs Minister about the recent developments in the country. External Affairs Minister expressed the hope that the peaceful resolution of all issues through dialogue would pave the way for the continued economic development and prosperity of the friendly people of Bahrain.

6. The Deputy National Security Advisor Ms. Vijaya Latha Reddy called on the Bahraini Foreign Minister in the morning of 30th March 2011 and discussed issues of bilateral interest. The visit of the Bahraini Foreign Minister has further reinforced and strengthened the excellent relationship existing between the two countries”.

446. Interview of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Kazakhstanskya Pravda and Egremen Kazakhstan.

Astana, April 15, 2011.

Question 1: What do you think of current status and prospects of political and strategic cooperation between India and Kazakhstan?

Answer: Relations between India and Kazakhstan go back in history and have been marked by warmth and friendliness in modern times. The "Silk route" brought our peoples much closer through trade and culture. Our countries represent multi-ethnic, diverse societies and shared oriental values, culture, traditions and even food. So, we consider ourselves natural friends and enjoy a huge reservoir of mutual goodwill. India was one of the first countries in the world to recognize the independence of Kazakhstan and to establish diplomatic relations. Since then, our political, economic, trade and people-to-people contacts have graduated to evolve into a firm strategic partnership.

During the visit of President Nazarbayev to India as the Chief Guest for our Republic Day celebrations in January 2009, a joint declaration on strategic partnership was adopted and it has become the guiding document for consolidation of our bilateral cooperation with Kazakhstan. His visit provided a significant impetus to our relationship at all levels. We have had an intensive exchange of delegations to each other's countries for exploring possibilities to enhance cooperation. I met President Nazarbaev twice in recent years at various multilateral events and our External Affairs Minister was in Astana last year to craft a plan charting the future course of our cooperation in all strategic sectors of mutual interest. President Nazarbaev and I will review the status of bilateral cooperation and discuss the roadmap of our future bilateral cooperation.
Our views on regional and global issues converge and we have been supportive of each other’s initiatives at the international fora and have also been cooperating within the aegis of multilateral bodies like the United Nations, Conference on Interaction and Confidence-Building Measures in Asia and Shanghai Cooperation Organisation.

Question 2: What do you think could promote the growth of Indian export to Kazakhstan and diversification of bilateral trade?

Answer: India and Kazakhstan are both fast growing economies. India grew at an average growth rate of 8% even during the global recession and Kazakhstan has been able to successfully weather the global economic crisis to embark on to a strong economic growth path. Bilateral trade between our two countries which currently stands at less than about $300 million is much below potential and there is an immense scope for its expansion.

I intend to discuss intensification of our economic engagement during my meeting with President Nazarbayev. I am aware that Kazakhstan has launched a programme of industrial innovation and India would be happy to participate and share its technical capabilities to mutual benefit. Both India and Kazakhstan could put their efforts together in implementation of joint projects. We are keen to expand our economic relationship in the energy sector, space, agriculture, information technology, health and pharmaceuticals.

Regrettably, bilateral trade has not picked up to meet our expectations primarily due to lack of direct land connectivity. The implementation of the International North-South Transport Corridor project would provide one way for faster and cheaper movement of goods between the two countries.

Question 3: Role of alternative sources of energy and nuclear energy to reduce reliance of countries on import and satisfy requirements of growing economies is being actively discussed in Asian developing countries. What are the prospects of development of these two areas amidst the tragedy in Japan? Could you please tell us about the model of further cooperation between Astana and Delhi on search and exploration of oil deposits?

Answer: The impact of conventional sources of energy on the environment and their finite quantities have stimulated us to explore alternative sources of energy as an urgent imperative. India being one of the largest global consumers of energy, has also been exploring alternative sources of energy, including solar and wind power.

In our view, nuclear energy is an important component of our energy mix in our national strategy to meet our future energy needs. In the light of the tragedy in Japan, we have embarked on a comprehensive review of the security and safeguard procedures at our nuclear plants. We look forward to our continuing cooperation with Kazakhstan in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.
The hydrocarbon sector is another strategic sector for our cooperation. During the visit of President Nazarbayev to India in January, 2009, KazMunaiGaz company signed an agreement on transfer of 25% stake in the Satpayev oil block to OVL, one of our state-owned oil companies. Commercial negotiations on implementation of this agreement have been proceeding smoothly and we hope to reach an understanding during my visit to Astana. We are also keen to cooperate with Kazakhstan in construction of oil refineries and other downstream and upstream projects in the energy sector.

Question 4: In your opinion, what are the prospects for cooperation in such areas as science, advanced technologies, nano-technologies and space?

Answer: Cooperation between India and Kazakhstan in high technology areas holds immense promise. India has a pool of highly trained manpower in the scientific field and is also in the forefront of advanced technologies like bio technology, nano-technologies and space. We build and launch our own satellites for communications and remote sensing purposes and have been utilising these satellites successfully. India and Kazakhstan could cooperate in these fields and India would be happy to share its experiences in this regard.

Both countries could also carry out joint research in advanced technology areas and explore possibilities of setting up joint projects in these fields. In the field of communication and information technology we could cooperate in research in high end computing and in training and education of personnel in Kazakhstan in advanced computer technologies. We would also be happy to work with Kazakhstan in setting up of Software Technology Parks in the country.

Question 5: Mr Singh, you have congratulated President Nazarbayev on his landslide victory in the presidential elections and wished for prosperity and peace. How do you see Kazakh-Indian relations in the next five years?

Answer: I have already congratulated President Nazarbayev on his landslide victory in the Presidential elections and am confident that Kazakhstan will continue to progress and prosper under his wise and visionary leadership.

This is my first visit to Kazakhstan as Prime Minister. It is a reflection of the importance we attach to our relations with Kazakhstan and the very important and positive role it plays in Central Asia and beyond.

I am confident that India-Kazakhstan relations will continue to develop dynamically in the next five years. I hope that the 'Road Map' that we chart out during my visit to Astana will guide our two sides to build a genuine and long-term strategic partnership that will benefit the peoples in our two countries.
447. Interaction of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh with Kazakh Media.

Astana, April 15, 2011.

Prime Minister (Dr. Manmohan Singh): It is a great pleasure having you with us.

Kazakh Media: Mr. Prime Minister, how do you assess the current state of bilateral relationship between India and Kazakhstan, and what kind of dynamism of the relations do you envisage?

Prime Minister: Kazakhstan is a very important and influential player in Central Asia. Our links with Kazakhstan go back to centuries old times of culture and civilization, and these relations have developed dynamically ever since Kazakhstan became a sovereign state. President Nazarbayev has visited India many times. Last time he was here was as the Chief Guest of India's Republic Day Celebrations in January, 2009. We agreed at that time to upgrade our relationship to strategic partnership. And I am looking forward to my visit to Kazakhstan to give added thrust, meaning and content to the strategic partnership that we have with this very friendly and very important country of Kazakhstan.

Kazakh Media: Mr. Prime Minister, in which spheres India and Kazakhstan intend to develop their further cooperation?

Prime Minister: We wish to develop our partnership in diverse fields. There is a convergence of views on political issues and global issues. And we would like to intensify our cooperation in economic issues, in space technologies, in science and technology, in health, education, pharmaceuticals and in peaceful uses of atomic energy. These are some of the issues which are under discussion among our experts. I hope to formalize some of these arrangements during my visit to Kazakhstan later this week.

Kazakh Media: Mr. Prime Minister, what kind of agreements do you intend to get signed during your visit to Kazakhstan?

Prime Minister: As I have mentioned, we would like to give added thrust to our relations in the field of energy, hydrocarbons. I am looking forward to signing some agreements with regard to our oil companies acquiring equity stake in Caspian oilfields. Also we would like to intensify cooperation in peaceful uses of atomic energy as well as in development of our space programmes.

Kazakh Media: Mr. Prime Minister, as you are aware, very recently we had our Presidential elections in Kazakhstan in which President Nazarbayev was elected overwhelmingly. How do you look at his election?
Prime Minister: President Nazarbayev has provided very powerful leadership to the people of Kazakhstan. Under his distinguished leadership Kazakhstan has developed in diverse fields. It is today a very important player globally as well as in Central Asia. The fact that President Nazarbayev has won with such enormous majority is a tribute to the esteem in which he is held by the people of Kazakhstan. We regard him as a great friend of India who knows India well. He has been here several times and I am looking forward to my visit to intensify our relationship with Kazakhstan.

Kazakh Media: We would like to extend our deep gratitude for the time that you have found to talk to us.

Prime Minister: It is always a pleasure. Kazakhstan is a very important and friendly country for us. We greatly welcome your visit to our country. And as I said I am very much looking forward to my own visit to your great country.

Istana, April 16, 2011.

Your Excellency Mr. President,

Distinguished representatives of the media,

I wish to begin by thanking your Excellency Mr. President, for your very warm words of welcome, and for the extraordinary hospitality that you and the government of Kazakhstan have accorded to me.

I bring to the friendly people of Kazakhstan the fraternal greetings of the people of India.

This is my first visit to Kazakhstan. I have discovered first hand the tremendous goodwill that exists here for India. I have seen the most impressive progress made by the people of Kazakhstan, the richness of their culture and the determination to build a bright future for themselves.

Kazakhstan is a country blessed with vast potential. It has a key role to play in bringing peace and development to Central Asia. India would like to work with Kazakhstan in this noble endeavour.
My talks with the President have been most productive. We reviewed the entire range of issues of mutual interest. We have had a complete meeting of minds. We have achieved a high level of political understanding, and we have agreed to encourage regular high level exchanges between our two countries.

President Nazarbayev's visit to India in 2009 was a landmark event. It launched our strategic partnership and paved the way for the important agreements signed during my visit.

These are the agreements on the Satpaev oil block, cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy, mutual legal assistance, agriculture, cyber security and healthcare. They represent solid and substantive outcomes in sectors where we have complementary strengths.

In addition we have agreed on the need to diversify our cooperation, particularly in pharmaceuticals, information technology, mining, fertilizers and science and technology. I conveyed our offer to set up a joint Information Technology Centre of Excellence in the Eurasian University in Astana.

We have agreed to intensify people to people exchanges and links between our businesses and companies, including through the establishment of joint ventures. I also conveyed our interest to benefit from the Customs Union between Kazakhstan, Russia and Belarus.

I am particularly happy about the signing of the Roadmap for projects and activities to be undertaken between 2011 and 2014. This reflects the seriousness of both sides and serves as a model of inter-state cooperation.

We also reviewed developments in the region. We have agreed on the need to improve land connectivity so that trade and transit between India and Central Asia in general and Kazakhstan in particular can become the vehicle of integration and prosperity in the region.

We discussed the situation in Afghanistan and cooperation in international forums, including the United Nations and regional processes. We have agreed that our agencies will intensify their dialogue in the fields of counter-terrorism, illicit drug trafficking and extremism.

I am very satisfied with my discussions with the President today. I look forward to meeting His Excellency Prime Minister Karim Massimov later in the day.

I have invited His Excellency the President to India and we look forward to an early visit by this very distinguished leader and a great friend of India.

I thank you.

449. Briefing by Secretary (East) on Prime Minister’s meeting with the Kazakh President.

Astana, April 16, 201

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to you, and first of all apologies to keep you waiting.

The meetings between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Kazakhstan and their delegations have just gotten over, and Secretary (East) Mr. Sanjay Singh has rushed across from the venue of the interaction to give you a perspective on this very important visit of Prime Minister of India to Kazakhstan. You are aware that the two sides have issued a joint statement. The Joint Statement will be available with you.

A number of agreements have also been signed and you have the details of those agreements. I would request Secretary (East) to share some thoughts with you on the interactions. Given the paucity of time - because you have to leave for the airport and Secretary (East) has to get back, he has to join the Prime Minister for a couple of other meetings - if there are any important questions, Secretary (East) will be happy to take them. Let me also introduce Mr. Ajay Bisaria, Joint Secretary (Eurasia) who is with Secretary (East).

Secretary (East) (Shri Sanjay Singh): Good afternoon. You would be seeing the Joint Statement and the agreements that are going to be signed, some have been signed and some will be signed. I would like to basically brief you on the meeting that took place. It was a one-to-one restricted meeting followed by delegation-level talks. The one-to-one restricted meeting took over one hour forty minutes. After that, you would have seen the statement made to the press by both the leaders which broadly covered the areas they had discussed. The meeting was between two leaders who have met six times before and this was their sixth meeting, even though PM was on his first official visit to Kazakhstan. He was the first foreign leader to visit Kazakhstan after the President elections.

You could classify the meeting as between friends. PM congratulated President Nazarbayev on his reelection. We consider President Nazarbayev as a close and valued friend of India. The meeting was warm, friendly and constructive. We have a similarity of views on regional and international issues.

The meeting by and large concentrated on bilateral issues, and putting flesh to the various areas of bilateral cooperation which have been identified by the two countries. To shortlist them, they consist of hydrocarbons, energy, agriculture, IT.

President Nazarbayev gave an exposition of the development philosophy of Kazakhstan, how Kazakhstan is inviting investments into the country, how it provides special facilities for foreign investors. Kazakhstan provides special facilities for foreign investors, and given Kazakhstan’s special resource base, it would provide for a good place to invest given that the market that you look at from Kazakhstan covers now the whole area of the Customs Union which would be Belarus, Russia and Kazakhstan. This opens up possibilities in the field of pharmaceuticals, petrochemicals, fertilizers, strategic minerals, information technology.

President Nazarbayev had visited India in 2009 when he was the Chief Guest at our Republic Day Parade. After that he had a very constructive visit to Bangalore. To some extent President Nazarbayev has shown his great interest in developing information technology and software parks in Kazakhstan. This is an obvious area of cooperation and you would have seen that we are going to set up a Centre of Excellence in Astana, and that would be a forward step in that area.

Since PM had come from Sanya, obviously he apprised President Kazakhstan of the discussions at the BRICS meeting. They also discussed various regional and international issues including activities of various regional fora to develop peace and stability in Central Asia and that region. It would be interesting for you to note that Kazakhstan is nearly an equidistant neighbor of three of the BRICS countries.

PM briefed President Nazarbayev of the assistance that we are providing to Afghanistan; and likewise President Nazarbayev briefed PM of the assistance that Kazakhstan is providing Afghanistan. They also discussed the common fight against terrorism. All this, you would see, finds mention in the Joint Statement and in the various agreements that we have signed.

I would like to end there. Since by and large we have had so many briefings on this visit, I would like the Spokesman if he would like to add a few words and our Ambassador to say a few words and then we will take a few questions.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Sir, this has been very comprehensive. Questions, if any?

Question: Can you elaborate on the nuclear cooperation agreement for design, construction and operation of nuclear power plants?

Secretary (East): It is an agreement on the peaceful uses of civil nuclear energy and covers the area of R&D, science and technology and various things associated with nuclear energy. It is an umbrella agreement.

Question: In his remarks, President Nazarbayev mentioned that Kazakhstan would supply 2100 tonnes of uranium by 2030. Could you elaborate on that?
Secretary (East): What would you like? I think it is self-evident.

Question: Is that a part of the nuclear agreement?

Secretary (East): The nuclear agreement is an umbrella agreement for cooperation in the peaceful uses of civil nuclear energy.

Question: One clarification. What has been the financial consideration that ONGC Videsh paid to the KMG for getting the ...(Inaudible)... in the block?

Secretary (East): I do not want to give you wrong figures on that. I will ask Secretary (Petroleum) for the figures and we will pass it on to you.

Question: Could you tell us the strategic significance of Satpayev, what it means to India, why?

Secretary (East): With the Indian energy consumption rising at the rate at which it is, and given that we will be expanding - our economy will continue expanding at the rate of nine to ten per cent - our total electricity production will go up by five times and energy security becomes very important. Therefore, sourcing of oil and gas from diverse sources in the world becomes absolutely essential. India is sourcing oil and gas from different parts of the world. We are getting it from Latin America, Africa, primarily we get it from the Persian Gulf, we also get something from the ex-CIS states, Vietnam and so on and so forth. So, this is another area where we are expanding into.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

Istana, April 16, 2011.

Your Excellency President Nazarbayev,

Distinguished Ministers,

Distinguished guests,

Thank you very much for your most generous hospitality and warm words of welcome. I am delighted to be in Astana, the beautiful capital of Kazakhstan.

My visit takes place soon after your historic re-election as the President of Kazakhstan, for which I heartily congratulate you. Since independence, Kazakhstan has made remarkable progress in every sphere. I wish you and the friendly people of Kazakhstan even greater success in the years ahead under your wise leadership.

Relations between India and Kazakhstan date back to antiquity. The Great Silk Route bound our countries together through the exchange of knowledge and ideas. There is shared cultural affinity between our peoples.

In more recent times, Kazakhstan was one of the first Central Asian States with which India established diplomatic relations. Today, our two countries enjoy a multi-faceted, vibrant strategic partnership. We cooperate closely on regional and global issues and in several international forums. We attach high priority to our relations with Kazakhstan and want to see their all round development.

I am convinced that a strong partnership between India and Kazakhstan will contribute to peace, stability and development in Central Asia and beyond. Your landmark visit to India in 2009 laid the basis for the development of a strategic partnership between us.

Excellency, the people of India regard you as a close and valued friend. I have myself enjoyed every interaction with you, including our meeting in Washington in April last year.

You have consistently provided inspiring leadership to our relations, for which we owe deep gratitude to you.

The Roadmap and other agreements that have been signed today herald a new beginning for us.

Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen,
I request you to join me in a toast:

- To the health and well-being of His Excellency President Nursultan Nazarbayev;
- To peace and prosperity of the friendly people of Kazakhstan; and
- To the strategic partnership between India and Kazakhstan.

451. Joint Statement issued on the conclusion of the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Kazakhstan.

Astana, April 16, 2011.

1. His Excellency Dr. Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of the Republic of India, paid an Official Visit to Kazakhstan on 15-16 April, 2011 on the invitation of His Excellency Mr. Nursultan Nazarbayev, President of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

2. During the visit Dr. Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of the Republic of India held discussions with Mr. N. Nazarbayev, President of the Republic of Kazakhstan and met with Prime Minister Mr. K. Massimov. The leaders noted with satisfaction the high level of relation between India and Kazakhstan and expressed their firm commitment to further consolidate the strategic partnership, the foundation for which was laid during the State Visit of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan N. Nazarbayev to the Republic of India in January, 2009.

3. Prime Minister of the Republic of India and President of the Republic of Kazakhstan met in a friendly atmosphere and exchanged views on India-Kazakhstan relations, as well as on international and regional issues. They noted the convergence of their views on most of these issues.

4. Prime Minister of the Republic of India appreciated the important role of the Republic of Kazakhstan promoting regional and international peace & security, successful chairmanship of Kazakhstan of the OSCE in 2010, and the stable political and economic development of the Republic of Kazakhstan, which was reflected in the results of the Presidential Elections held on 3 April, 2011.
5. President of the Republic of Kazakhstan appreciated the growing role of the Republic of India in world affairs, which has been contributing to strengthening peace, stability and mutual understanding between peoples, as well as India’s ever-growing political, economic, and scientific stature and potential.

6. The sides stressed that the consistent growth in India-Kazakhstan relations has been promoted by recent meetings at the highest and senior levels, and appreciated increasing mutual understanding and trust, expansion of cooperation in the spheres of trade, economy, energy, socio-cultural activities as well as interaction on international and regional issues. The sides decided to reinvigorate mechanisms for regular meetings at the level of Ministers of the two countries.

7. The sides expressed satisfaction with the activity of India-Kazakhstan Intergovernmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technical, Industrial and Cultural Cooperation. The sides resolved to improve the mechanism of the Commission’s activity through increasing its coordinating role in different spheres of interaction.

8. The sides noted with satisfaction the progress in various fields of cooperation. They welcomed the signing of the “Joint Action Plan” on furthering the strategic partnership between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan (“Road Map”) for the period of 2011-2014.

9. The sides highly appreciated the signing of the Agreement on Cooperation in Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan. The sides noted the need for expansion of mutually beneficial cooperation in this area while adhering to their existing obligations under multilateral nuclear regimes.

11. The sides agreed on the importance of cooperation in food security and welcomed the signing of the Agreement on cooperation in agriculture and allied sectors.

12. The sides welcomed the signing of the Memorandum in the area of information security as also the Indian initiative to set up an Indian-Kazakhstan Center of Excellence in the Eurasian University in Astana.
13. The sides underlined the importance of cooperation in the energy sector to be developed on the basis of equal rights and mutual benefit. The sides expressed satisfaction at the signing of a package of documents between Indian company "ONGC Videsh Limited" and "NC "KazMunaiGaz" JSC on joint exploration of the "Satpayev" oil block.

14. The sides noted the need to enhance interaction in implementation of prospective projects in the area of exploration of new oil and gas deposits, oil refining and petrochemicals, as well as transportation of hydrocarbons, and establishment of science-based industries in the Republic of Kazakhstan with the application of Indian know-how and new technologies.

15. The sides noted with satisfaction the establishment of cooperation between Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) and the National Space Agency of Kazakhstan (NSAC), and agreed to work towards fruitful cooperation in the field of space.

16. The sides noted their interest in continued interaction in healthcare and medicine, science and technology, including nano, bio and innovative technologies.

17. The Republic of Kazakhstan recognized India's achievements in the pharmaceuticals sector and welcomed joint ventures in Kazakhstan for production of high quality pharmaceutical drugs.

18. The sides welcomed development of cultural and people-to-people contacts and reiterated their intention to strengthen cooperation in educational, scientific, technical, cultural, tourism and other spheres. They expressed readiness to exchange experts, hold days of culture, exhibitions, symposiums and other events.

19. The sides noted the importance of identifying secure and cost-effective transport connectivity between the two countries, including for transportation of cargo with the participation of transit countries.

20. The sides agreed to enhance collaboration in international economic and financial organizations and to use new opportunities arising as a result of integration processes in the global economy, for the benefit of both countries.

21. The sides expressed interest in strengthening contacts and coordination in international and regional organizations (UN, SCO, CICA and ACD). They emphasized that continuous strengthening of cooperation in the framework of these multilateral structures should contribute to stability and development in the region and in the world.
22. The sides expressed interest in the early settlement of the Afghanistan situation and positively assessed the contribution by both countries to the reconstruction in Afghanistan. They agreed that the global community had rightly noted in the Kabul Communiqué (July 2010) the importance of ensuring that terrorists were denied sanctuaries. They also underscored the importance of eliminating the narco-trafficking infrastructure that still existed in that country. The sides further assessed that for peace and stability to be restored, it was essential that renewed efforts were made to sufficiently build up the capacity of the Afghan National Security Forces.

23. The sides reaffirmed their view that international terrorism was a serious threat to global peace and security and condemned those who supported terrorism. They strongly condemned the recent act of terrorism (11 April 2011) in the Minsk Metro station, which had led to the loss of several innocent lives and had left hundreds of people injured. They hoped that the perpetrators of this heinous crime would be speedily brought to justice.

24. The Republic of India highly appreciated the Chairmanship of the Republic of Kazakhstan of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization and noted that the forthcoming Jubilee meeting of the Council of Heads of member-states of SCO dedicated to the 10th anniversary of the Organization to be held in Astana on 15th June 2011 would become a milestone event in the further development of the SCO. The Republic of Kazakhstan welcomed India’s constructive participation in the SCO as an observer country and expressed support for India’s intention to play a larger role in the organization.

25. The Republic of India highly appreciated the initiative of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan to convene a Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia - an important forum for the maintenance of peace, stability and security in Asian continent. The Republic of Kazakhstan noted that the Republic of India had been actively and constructively participating in the CICA.

26. The Republic of India welcomed the forthcoming Chairmanship of the Republic of Kazakhstan in the 38th Council of Foreign Affairs Ministers of the Organization of Islamic Conference. It expressed confidence that the Republic of Kazakhstan would play a balanced and constructive role in the functioning of the OIC.

27. The sides affirmed the need to strengthen the UN role in international affairs and consider the organization as a universal tool in the implementation of equitable relations among the members of international community as well as strengthening stability and security in the world. The Republic of Kazakhstan reaffirmed support of the candidature of the Republic of India for permanent membership in the UN Security Council. Noting the strong credentials of Kazakhstan, the Republic of India expressed support to the candidature of the Republic of Kazakhstan for the non-permanent membership of the UN Security Council for 2017-2018. The sides agreed to support each other within the framework of UN and other multilateral fora.

28. The Prime Minister of the Republic of India Dr Manmohan Singh expressed deep gratitude to the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan Mr. N. Nazarbayev and to the Kazakhstan side for the warm reception and hospitality accorded to him and to the Indian delegation during his official visit to Kazakhstan.

Satpayev exploration block, located in the Kazakhstan sector of the Caspian Sea, covers an area of 1482 sq. km and is at a water depth of 6-8 mts. It is situated in a highly prospective region of the North Caspian Sea and is in close proximity to major discoveries. The block contains two prospective structures, namely Satpayev and Satpayev Vostochni(East) with 256 MMT in estimated hydrocarbon resources.

This transaction marks the entry of OVL in Kazakhstan’s hydrocarbon sector. Although OVL has been trying to gain a foothold in Kazakhstan since 1995, the efforts got a boost when OVL entered into a MoU with KMG in February 2005 for cooperation in the hydrocarbon sector. Heads of Agreement (HOA) was signed between OVL and KMG in 2009 and the Exploration Contract was signed between Ministry of Oil and Gas of Kazakhstan and KMG in 2010. Now, on signing of the definitive agreements, KMG will assign 25% participating interest in the Satpayev Block to OVL as a strategic foreign partner in the Project.

The Agreement envisages a legal framework for mutually beneficial cooperation between the two sides in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy including fuel supply, nuclear medicine, use of radiation technologies for healthcare including isotopes, reactor safety mechanisms, exchange of scientific & research information, exploration and joint mining of uranium, design, construction and operation of nuclear power plants etc.

3. Joint Action Plan for furthering the Strategic Partnership between the Republic of India and the Republic of Kazakhstan (Road Map) for the period of 2011-2014

The Roadmap outlines the joint action plan for implementation of projects to be undertaken by both sides during the period 2011-14 for the implementation of Inter-Governmental Agreements Agreements. The Roadmap details specific milestones in a range of areas of bilateral cooperation including hydrocarbons, civilian nuclear energy, space, information technology & cyber security; high-tech and innovative technology, pharmaceuticals, healthcare, agriculture and cultural exchanges.

4. MoU between Indian Computer Emergency Response Team(CERT-In), Dept of Information Technology of India and Kazakhstan Computer Emergency Response Team (Kz-CERT), Republic of Kazakhstan

The MoU envisages development of cooperation in the area of Information Security and covers the scope of mutual response to cyber security incidents, exchange of information on spam and other cyber-attacks, exchange of information on prevalent cyber security policies and exchange of human resources.

5. Treaty between the Republic of India

The Treaty envisages a wide range of measures and the Republic of Kazakhstan on Mutual Legal Assistance in Civil Matters

KYRGYZSTAN

New Delhi, July 5, 2011.

India has offered its assistance to Kyrgyzstan in a wide range of areas to strengthen its defence and security capabilities. The Defence Minister Shri AK Antony made this offer at the extensive talks he held with his Kyrgyz counterpart Major General Abibilla Kudayberdiev in Bishkek on Monday (04 July 2011). The talks took place between the delegations of the two countries immediately after the arrival of Shri Antony in the Kyrgyz capital.

As a first step, India will be sending a team to train Kyrgyz Armed Forces in UN Peace Keeping Operations and impart English language skills. The team will be arriving in Kyrgyzstan by the end of this month itself.

During the talks, Shri Antony said though the present level of defence engagements are rather limited, there is potential to mutually enhance the scope and scale of activities in a gradual manner in areas of mutual interest particularly in the field of military training, defence research and development and production of defence armaments.

Shri Antony is leading a high level defence delegation including the DRDO Chief Dr VK Saraswat, Special Secretary Shri RK Mathur, Secretary and Defence Finance Ms Vijay Lakshmi Gupta and Chief Controller of Research and Development Dr William Selvamurthy. The Indian Ambassador to Bishkek, Shri P Stobdan also joined the deliberations.

Shri Antony said India has a wide network of research establishments not only in armaments but also in physiology, medicine, animal husbandry, nutrition etc under defence establishments. He offered New Delhi's assistance to Bishkek for undertaking joint research and production in non-military sectors also.

'We can explore areas for cooperation in research and development in high-altitude base agriculture, plantation, animal husbandry, poultry, food processing that would also help generate rural employment and remove poverty', he said.

Appreciating the support of the Kyrgyz authorities in international efforts against terrorism and drug trafficking in Kyrgyzstan, Shri Antony said the joint working groups on counter-terrorism should meet regularly to share information on the issue.
The Kyrghyz Defence Minister Major General Abibilla Kudayberdiev thanked Shri Antony for his offer of cooperation in both military and non-military areas. He accepted Shri Antony's invitation to visit India shortly to take the cooperation forward. He expressed happiness that the two sides have worked out a cooperation plan for the year 2011.

Earlier, in a show of warmth, Gen Kudayberdiev drove down to the Manas International Airport to receive Shri Antony on his arrival.

between the Kyrgyz President Mr A Akaev and Dr APJ Abdul Kalam in November 2003.

The realization of that shared vision has finally culminated in the establishment of this Centre. The joint endeavour of our scientists will provide a platform to utilize the expertise of both the institutes in a holistic manner to evaluate, as well as improve the performance and enhance the process of acclimatization at high altitudes using psychological, biochemical and molecular research tools’, Shri Antony said.

The Kyrgyz President Dr Roza Otunbaeva thanked the Government of India for taking the initiative for setting up this world class institute in Bishkek. She said 10% of the GDP in Kyrgyzstan is generated by the populace living in high altitudes. The fruits of the research of the scientists of this institute will help in improving the life and health of people living in high altitude areas, she said.

The Centre has a field station at Tuya Ashu, located at a height of 3200 metres. Prof Akpay Sarybaev, a leading cardiologist and expert in mountain medicine is nominated as the Director of KIMBMRC.

A team of scientists including physiologists, biochemists and molecular biologists, headed by the Director of Defence Institute of Physiology and Allied Sciences (DIPAS), Dr Shashi Bala Singh along with 20 Indian Army soldiers are deputed to KIMBMRC, Bishkek and Tuya Ashu to carry out studies on high altitude acclimatization with special reference to molecular mechanism of human performance promotion and amelioration of maladies in mountain operations. The team will stay for about six weeks.

OMAN

New Delhi, December 28, 2011.

India, Oman Extend MOU on Military Cooperation to 2015India and Oman have extended the validity of the existing bilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on Military Cooperation, signed in December 2005, for a further period of five years. The documents were signed by the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony and the visiting Minister Responsible for Defence Affairs of the Sultanate of Oman, His Excellency Badar bin Saud bin Harib al Busaidi here today. Bilateral defence cooperation between India and Oman has been growing over the years. The Navies of both countries are conducting a joint exercise “Naseem Al Bahr off the coast of Mumbai from December 26-31, 2011. The IAF and the Royal Air Force of Oman held a joint exercise “Eastern Bridge” at Jamnagar, Gujarat in October earlier this year. During the delegation level talks both sides noted that bilateral defence cooperation activities have been progressing satisfactorily. The 5th meeting of the India-Oman Joint Military Cooperation Committee was held recently in India in September, 2011. Both the Ministers discussed important issues relating to regional and maritime security. Shri Antony noted that incidents of piracy were taking place close to the Oman coast and have also been spreading close to the Lakshadweep Islands. Both Ministers stressed the need for continued and concerted efforts of the world community to effectively address the problem. Shri Antony conveyed that the visit of the Oman Defence Minister is an important step in continuing the dialogue on defence and security issues between the two countries. The Indian delegation included the Defence Secretary Shri Shashikant Sharma and Chief of Integrated Staff to the Chief of Staff Committee (CISC) Vice Admiral ShekharSinha.

PALESTINE
457. Speech by Minister of State Mrs. Preneet Kaur at International Solidarity Day with Palestinians.

New Delhi, January 28, 201

H.E. Ambassador of Palestine in India, Mr. Adli Hassan Shaban Sadeq,

DG, Indian Council of World Affairs, Shri Sudhir Devare

Excellencies, distinguished invitees,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I feel honoured to be here today amidst this august gathering to mark the important occasion of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. All of us present here, representing a wide cross-section of countries, in our own ways are here to express our solidarity with the people of Palestine in their struggle for their legitimate rights. Our gestures of support also convey that it is in the interest of the entire international community that a lasting solution is found at the earliest resulting in a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine living within secure and recognized borders with East Jerusalem as its Capital, side by side and at peace with the State of Israel.

Excellencies,

Indians have always placed Palestine close to their hearts. Even before independence, India had demonstrated its solidarity with the Palestinian people and had looked forward to the emergence of an independent democratic state in Palestine in which the rights of all communities would be protected.

India was the first non-Arab State to recognize the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people in 1975 and in 1988 it became one of the first countries to recognize the State of Palestine. India opened its Representative Office in Palestine in 1996 following the establishment of the Palestinian National Authority. Here I would like to quote from a communication from a cable by then Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi addressed to President Yasser Arafat:

"It is with great pleasure that I extend to you on behalf of the Government and people of India and on my own behalf our heartiest felicitations on the declaration of an independent State of Palestine to which the Government of India has today extended formal recognition. This has been our cherished and single-minded objective all these years. We share the happiness of the Palestinian people on this auspicious day.

We are conscious that it is not the end of the struggle. It is nevertheless an important milestone on the path to meeting the legitimate aspirations of Palestinians within and outside the occupied territories. We wish you all success in your task of achieving the logical culmination of this declaration - the restoration of Palestinian land and the assertion of Palestinian sovereignty. India will continue to extend whole-hearted support to efforts to activate early peace negotiations for a just and comprehensive settlement within the framework of a UN-sponsored International Conference.”

India has and will always support the Palestinian people in their pursuit of legitimate goals and quest for development based on dignity and self-reliance. I recall my meeting with the then President of Palestine Authority Mr. Yasser Arafat on 17th September, 2004 when I carried the Goodwill Message from the Hon’ble Prime Minister of India along with life saving medicines and special vehicles to the Palestine Authority. India reiterates its unwavering support to the Palestinian cause at every available opportunity and forum and that includes the visit of the Hon’ble President to Syria from 26-29 November 2010 and by Hon’ble Prime Minister in his message on the occasion of International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian people, organized by the UN on 29 November 2010.

Excellencies,

Since the opening of the Representative Office, India has also extended material assistance to the Palestinian National Authority. The assistance has been for humanitarian relief, development projects, establishment of educational and training facilities, budgetary support etc. India has been involved with training a large number of Palestinian officials from economic, industrial and financial sectors and special courses for Palestinian diplomats have been conducted at our Foreign Service Institute. India extended further budgetary support of US$ 10 million to the Palestine National Authority earlier this year in addition to a similar contribution last year, to assist in their work of reconstruction and development. As you may also be aware, on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the establishment of United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), India increased its annual contribution to US$ 1 million from last year. We have also pledged to contribute this amount next year as well.

Under the IBSA Fund, along with Brazil and South Africa, we are implementing a Sports Complex in Ramallah.

We believe the West Asian region is of vital importance to India with more than 4.5 million Indians making it their home. The region is also an important source of energy for India. India wishes to see the creation of an environment for the earliest possible resumption of dialogue. We share the perception that the conflict in West Asia is essentially political in nature and cannot be resolved by India has supported the Arab Peace Plan, which calls for withdrawal of Israel to pre-1967 borders, along with recognition of Israel and the establishment of the State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital. India has called for an end to Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories and for an early and significant easing of restrictions on the free movement of persons and goods within Palestine.

India had welcomed the 'direct talks' between Israel and Palestine. The continued stalemate in the situation and hardening of positions is a matter of concern. We hope that the talks would be resumed leading to final resolution of the conflict. As a responsible member of the international community and as a country with long-established ties with West Asia, India desires to see a peaceful resolution to tensions in the region through peaceful dialogue.

I am happy to note that the Palestinian Embassy has started functioning from its new Building in Chanakyapuri, which was built as a gift of the government and people of India. The foundation stone of the Building was laid in the presence of our Prime Minister during the visit of the Palestinian President Mr. Mahmoud Abbas to India in October 2008.

On this occasion, I would like to re-affirm India's consistent and unwavering support to the friendly people of Palestine and reiterate India's belief that a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region can be achieved through negotiations and dialogue so that a sovereign, independent, viable State of Palestine living side by side within secured borders, with the State of Israel, becomes a reality.

I thank the Indian Council for World Affairs for organizing this event.

Thank you, Jai Hind.

QATAR

New Delhi, January 14, 2011.

The India-Qatar High Level Monitoring Mechanism (HLMM) was set up pursuant to a decision taken by the Prime Ministers of India and Qatar during the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Qatar in November 2008.

Shri T. K. A. Nair, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister and H.E. Dr. Khalid bin Mohamed Al-Attiyah, Minister of State for International Cooperation of the State of Qatar are the two Co-Chairpersons of the HLMM. The HLMM is mandated to monitor the progress in the implementation of the areas of cooperation agreed to by the leaders of the two countries in order to enhance bilateral cooperation. The first two meetings of the HLMM were held in February 2009 and November 2009 respectively.

The Third Meeting of the HLMM was held in New Delhi from 13-14 January 2011. The two sides reviewed the progress made in agreed areas of cooperation and agreed on specific steps to further intensify cooperation in areas such as petrochemicals, fertilizers, power, banking and finance sector, civil aviation and HRD.

In the hydrocarbon sector, the Qatari side conveyed their readiness to increase supply of LNG to meet India’s requirements and to facilitate the participation of Indian companies in the oil and gas sector in Qatar. The Joint Working Group on Fertilizer is to meet in Doha shortly in order to discuss long term cooperation in the fertilizer sector. The Qatari side highlighted its interest in getting access to the PSU disinvestments via the Anchor investor route. The investment opportunities in the Kayamkulam expansion project of NTPC would be evaluated by the Qatar Investment Authority as also in renewable energy projects. The Indian side welcomed the proposal of the Qatari side for wide-ranging cooperation in the area of banking supervision and exchange of information to combat money laundering and terror financing. The Joint committee for promoting investment into India will be meeting shortly to discuss investment opportunities.

The two sides agreed that the Fourth Meeting of the HLMM would be held in Doha in the first quarter of 2012.
SAUDI ARABI

465.  Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Secretary General of the National Security Council of Saudi Arabia.

New Delhi, March 29, 2011.

His Royal Highness Prince Bandar Bin Sultan Bin Abdulaziz Al Saud, Secretary General of the National Security Council of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia called on the Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh on March 28, 2011.

The Saudi Envoy briefed the Prime Minister on recent developments in West Asia, North Africa, and Gulf regions, and in particular the efforts being made by the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the GCC countries to bring peace, stability and prosperity for the people in the region. He indicated the desire of the Gulf States to meet the genuine aspirations of the people in an atmosphere of peace and stability. HRH Prince Bandar reiterated Saudi Arabia’s keen interest in further consolidating relations between India and the Kingdom in all areas of cooperation, without reservation.

The Prime Minister expressed his deep appreciation to HRH Prince Bandar for his visit, and conveyed India’s firm commitment to further developing its strategic partnership with the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. West Asia and the Gulf were regions of great interest to India because of the presence of almost six million Indians. The region was a major economic partner and source for energy for India. Cooperation between India and the Kingdom and the GCC States was a factor of peace and stability in the region. The Prime Minister emphasized that differences should be resolved through peaceful dialogue and discussion and countries should be free to determine their own pathways to national development. He expressed confidence that the wisdom and leadership of the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques His Majesty King Abdullah will contribute to peace, stability and welfare of the people of the region.

The Syrian Vice Foreign Minister (VFM), Dr. Faisal Mekdad, is on an official visit to India from July 31 to August 2, 2011. Today he called on the External Affairs Minister (EAM) and also met the Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri E. Ahamed (MOS).

2. VFM briefed EAM about the prevailing situation in Syria, causes for violence in his country, reforms proposed by Syrian President Bashar Al Assad, details of national dialogue between the Syrian government and the opposition groups, as well as, other issues related to public protests in Syria.

3. EAM expressed concern on the recent escalation of violence. He urged the Government of Syria to exercise restraint, abjure violence and expedite the implementation of political reforms taking into account the aspirations of the people of Syria. MOS also reiterated the same during his meeting with VFM.

Media reports said that Syria had sent out envoys all over the world to argue that elements linked to the Salafists in the Middle East were behind the violence and the government was willing to open talks with opposition groups. But the Opposition, claimed that a heavy Syrian assault on July 31 took a toll of many lives in at least three cities. A rights group has put the death toll since the unrest began at over 1,500.
469. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of a IBSA delegation to Syria.

New Delhi, August 11, 2011.

An IBSA delegation comprising of Mr. Ebrahim Ebrahim, Deputy Minister of International Relations and Cooperation of South Africa, Mr. Paulo Cordeiro de Andrade Pinto, Under Secretary General for Africa and the Middle East of the Ministry of External Relations of Brazil and Mr. Dilip Sinha, Additional Secretary for International Organizations, MEA, called on President of Syria H.E. Bashar Al-Assad and FM H.E. Walid Al-Moualem, on 10th August 2011 at Damascus, to discuss the current situation in Syria and the way forward.

The President reassured the delegation of his commitment to the reform process, aimed at ushering in multi-party democracy, including through revision of the constitution. He said that political reforms were being finalized in consultation with the people of Syria and the national dialogue would continue to give shape to the new laws and to arrive at a suitable model for the economy. The process of revision of the constitution would be completed by February/March 2012. He acknowledged that some mistakes had been made by the security forces in the initial stages of the unrest and that efforts were underway to prevent their recurrence.

FM Moualem briefed the delegation about the prevailing situation in Syria, the reasons behind the unrest and violence and explained the steps taken by the Government to bring the situation under control. He said that there were three categories of opposition in Syria: the economically disadvantaged sections; intellectuals and academics; and armed groups. He outlined in detail the political reforms that are in the process of being implemented and said that free and fair elections to the Parliament will be held in Syria before end 2011. He recalled the statement of the President of Syria to rewrite the Constitution of Syria, if considered necessary.

In recalling the adoption of UNSC Presidential Statement of 3 August, the visiting delegation reaffirmed the commitment of India, Brazil and South Africa to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Syria. They expressed grave concern at the current situation in Syria and condemned violence from all sides. They regretted all loss of life and were concerned over the humanitarian impact of the violence. They called for an immediate end to all violence and urged all sides to act with utmost restraint and respect for human rights and international human rights law. In noting the establishment of an independent judicial committee to investigate the violence, the visiting delegation stressed the importance of ensuring the credibility and impartiality thereof, to which FM
Moualem responded that once the report of the committee became available, those responsible for the violence would be held to account. They urged the Government to positively consider the resolution adopted by the UN Human Rights Council on 29 April 2011. They stressed that it is essential for the Syrian Government not to lose momentum and to continue the process of national dialogue and political reforms with the aim of effectively addressing the legitimate aspirations and concerns of the population. This will contribute to the full exercise of fundamental freedoms by the Syrian people, including that of expression and peaceful assembly. They expressed the hope that opposition groups will cooperate in this process.

The Syrian FM reiterated that Syria will be a free, pluralistic and multi-party democracy before the end of the year.

470. Explanation of Vote delivered by Ambassador Hardeep Puri on draft Resolution on Syria at UNSC.

New York, October 4, 2011.

Thank you, Madame President,

I want to start by congratulating you on assuming the Presidency of the Security Council for the month of October. We have no doubt that you will have an extremely successful Presidency. I would also like to take this opportunity to complement Lebanon, Ambassador Nawaf and his team, for their very wise and able stewardship of the Council during September, a difficult month at the best of times.

2. Madame President, Syria has both historically and in contemporary times been an important country in the Middle East. Its role in the Middle East peace process and in the stability of the wider region cannot be overemphasized. Prolonged instability and unrest in Syria, therefore, clearly have ramifications for the region and beyond.

3. India remains concerned at the unfolding events in Syria that have resulted in the deaths of hundreds of civilians and security force personnel. We deplore all violence irrespective of who its perpetrators are.

4. Madame President, we recognize the responsibility of all States to respect the fundamental rights of their people, address their legitimate aspirations and respond to their grievances through administrative, political, economic and other measures. At the same time, States also have the obligation to protect their citizens from armed groups and militants. While the right of people to protest peacefully is to be respected, States cannot but take appropriate action when militant groups, heavily armed, resort to violence against state authority and infrastructure.

5. Given the complexity of ground realities in Syria, we believe that engaging Syria in a collaborative and constructive dialogue and partnership is the only pragmatic and productive way forward. In our bilateral contacts with the Syrian Government as well as through the IBSA initiative, we have urged them to exercise restraint, abjure violence and pay heed to the aspirations of their people.

6. The international community should give time and space for the Syrian Government to implement the far-reaching reform measures announced by them. For this, it is also necessary that the opposition forces in Syria give up the path of armed insurrection and engage constructively with the authorities. We firmly believe that the actions of the international community should facilitate an engagement of the Syrian government and the opposition in a Syrian-led inclusive political process and not complicate the situation by threats of sanctions, regime change, etc.

7. The resolution under the Council’s consideration does not accommodate our concern about threat of sanctions. It does not condemn the violence perpetrated by the Syrian opposition. Nor does it place any responsibility on the opposition to abjure violence and engage with the Syrian authorities for redressal of their grievances through a peaceful political process. We have, therefore, abstained on the resolution.

Thank you.

471. Press Release issued by Ministry of Home Affairs on the signing of Treaties on Security Cooperation and Exchange of Sentenced Persons between India and UAE.

New Delhi, November 23, 2011.

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Interior, Govt. of UAE H.H. Lt. Gen. Sheikh Saif Bin Zayed Al Nahyan, and Union Home Minister, Government of India, Shri P. Chidambaram have signed agreements, on Security Cooperation and on Transfer of Sentenced Persons. The two leaders met at a meeting held here today to discuss issues pertaining to bilateral security cooperation between two countries.

The Agreement on Security Cooperation seeks to strengthen and develop the existing bilateral framework/mechanism to enhance security cooperation in the areas such as combating terrorism in all forms, addressing activities of organized criminal groups, drug trafficking, illicit trafficking in weapons, ammunition, explosives, etc., and initiatives on training of personnel.

The Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons provides the framework to facilitate the social rehabilitation of sentenced persons in their respective countries by giving citizens of the Contracting States, who have been convicted and sentenced as a result of commission of a criminal offence, the opportunity to serve the sentence in their own society.

Issues relating to drug trafficking, security, capacity building so as to enhance cooperation for combating organised crime, a Home Ministry spokesperson said in New Delhi soon after the signing of the Agreements. The issue of international terrorism also came up during the discussions. The two sides also stressed their commitments to stepping up cooperation in the investigation of mutually relevant criminal cases and the sharing of relevant information in this regard, the spokesperson said.
cooperation to combat organized crimes and international terrorism were also discussed in the meeting.

Both countries reiterated their commitment for enhanced cooperation in investigation of mutually relevant criminal cases and sharing of relevant information in this regard.

472. Press Release issued by Ministry of Overseas Indians regarding the signing of the India – UAE revised Memorandum of Understanding on Manpower.

New Delhi, September 13, 2011.

Shri Vayalar Ravi, Union Minister of Overseas Indian Affairs and Civil Aviation and Mr. Saqr Ghobash Saeed Ghobash, Minister of Labour of United Arab Emirates signed a revised Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on manpower, here today. Addressing on the occasion, Shri Ravi said that this MoU will strengthen the symbiotic relationship and mutual cooperation between the two countries. He said that the e-governance in migration project is a major initiative taken by the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs. He also hailed the measures taken by the UAE government to improve the condition of workers in UAE. The revised MoU will boost the initiative of the Ministry in implementing Web Based Attestation Procedure for employment contracts for emigrant workers in UAE by the Embassy of India, Abu Dhabi. A need has been felt over the years to revise the MoU, which was signed between India and the UAE in December, 2006 to address various problems faced by the Indian emigrant workers in the UAE. After detailed negotiations between the two countries, a revised MoU was finalized and signed today. The MoU in the field of manpower between India and the UAE provides for the following:

(i) Facilitation of the recruitment of Indian manpower for working in the UAE;

(ii) Broad procedure for employment of workers;

(iii) Responsibilities of the employers and workers;

(iv) Exchange of knowledge and experience in job-creation and generation of employment opportunity;
(v) Protection and welfare of workers under the labour laws and regulations of the host country;

(vi) Authentication of the work contract between the Employer and the employee by the Ministry of Labour, Government of UAE; and

(vii) Constitution of a Joint Committee comprising of at least three Members each from both the Governments to implement the provisions of the MoU.

It is estimated that there are approximately 17.5 lakh Indians in the UAE, constituting the largest expatriate community in that country. Out of this, about 13.5 lakh are emigrant workers, mostly employed in construction, services and household sectors. India-UAE trade, valued at US$ 180 million per annum in the 1970s, is today around US$44 billion making UAE, India's largest trading partner. There is an estimated US$6 billion UAE investment in India of which about US$ 1.92 billion is in the form of foreign direct investment, while the remaining as portfolio investment. UAE is the tenth biggest investor in India in terms of FDI. The annual remittances made by the large Indian community in UAE (estimated to be around 1.75 million) amount to over US $5 billion. They had actively invested in the past in the various bonds floated by India such as Resurgent India Bonds and the India Millennium Bonds.

473. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on a meeting between Minister Anand Sharma and UAE Minister of Foreign Trade Ms. Sheikh Bint Al Qasimi.

In a bilateral meeting between Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry and Ms. Sheikha Lubna Bint Al Qasimi, Minister of Foreign Trade, United Arab Emirates, here today said that bilateral trade between India and UAE has registered an increase over 300% in the last five years. He said that UAE is the topmost trading partner of India representing about 60% of India's export to GCC countries 2009-10. Shri Sharma said that there is lot of business and investment potential which can be further exploited to mutual advantage of both the countries. India-UAE Trade Policy Forum set up by the two countries to facilitate bilateral trade which needs to be further strengthened, he said.
During the interaction, both sides felt that tourism sector is one the areas that has good potential for future growth, especially medical tourism. Another area with considerable scope for cooperation in tourism is construction and maintenance of hotels. Shri Sharma informed his counterpart that there is a good scope for UAE to invest in overall tourism sector in India which would help for both the countries to enhance tourist arrivals.

Shri Sharma said that since UAE is focusing on knowledge based industries and with India emerging as world leaders in space, agriculture, pharmaceuticals, and bio-technology, there is considerable scope for co-operation in technology transfer, research and development and for joint-venture. India has a vast market and UAE investors would find industrial partners in India to set up mutually advantageous industrial complexes in the Gulf as well as in India and third countries to cater to the markets worldwide, he added.

The total trade has increased from US $ 12,945.87 million in 2005-06 to US$ 43,469.50 million in 2009-10. The exports from India, up from US$ 8,591.79 million in 2005-06 to US$ 23,970.40 million in 2009-10. Similarly imports from UAE, up from 4,354.08 in 2005-06 to US$ 19,499.10 million in 2009-10.

The top five exportable items from India to UAE are Gems & Jewellery; Petroleum (crude & Products); Rice-Basmati; Machinery and Instruments; and Manufactures of Metals. Similarly top five importable items from UAE to India are Petroleum (crude & Products); Gold; Pearls Precious & Semi-precious stones; Metaliferrous Ores & Metal Scrap; and Non-Ferrous Metals.

474. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the official visit of Foreign Minister of UAE.

H.H. Sheikh Abdullah Bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Foreign Minister of the United Arab Emirates, paid an official visit to India on 26-27 June 2011. He was accompanied by senior officials and a business delegation comprising CEOs of UAE companies having large investments in India.

On 27th June FM Al Nahyan called on Vice President Shri Mohammed Hamid Ansari and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. He also held official delegation level talks with EAM Shri S. M. Krishna. Both sides reviewed the current state of bilateral relations and discussed recent developments in regional and international issues. FM Al Nahyan reiterated UAE’s full support for India’s candidature for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council.

Both leaders signed a bilateral MOU on periodic Political Consultations between the two Foreign Offices on bilateral issues, as well as, exchange of views on regional and international issues of mutual interest.

India and UAE have extensive political, economic and cultural ties that are growing rapidly. During 2009-10, India was UAE’s largest trading partner with bilateral trade of US$ 43 billion.

FM Sheikh Al Nahyan welcomed greater Indian investments in UAE, as well as, the other way around. Both sides agreed to work together to significantly enhance the profile of India-UAE investment relations, particularly in the infrastructure sector. It was also agreed that the Joint Commission on Economic Cooperation Meeting will be held in Abu Dhabi later this year.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. My good friend and colleague Joint Secretary (ERS) Shri Ajay Bisaria and I would like to brief you on the two-day state visit of President Islam Karimov of Uzbekistan to India, at the invitation of the Prime Minister of India. He arrives today evening. I will take you through his programme and the official delegation.

Tomorrow morning there is a ceremonial welcome at Rashtrapati Bhavan. There would be calls on the visiting dignitary by the Vice-President, the External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna, and the Leader of the Opposition. President Karimov will hold delegation-level talks with the Prime Minister of India when a number of agreements are also likely to be signed. Later in the evening tomorrow he calls on President of India, Rashtrapatiji, who would also be hosting a banquet in his honour.

President Karimov will be accompanied by his spouse Her Excellency Tatyana Karimova, and a number of his cabinet colleagues such as the First Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance Rustam Azimov; Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Elyor Ganiev; and the Minister for Economic Affairs, Investments and Trade Her Excellency Galina Saidova; in addition to a number of senior officials.

India’s ties with Uzbekistan and for that matter Central Asia go back in history. Cities like Samarkand and Bukhara are indeed household names in India, as are names like Indira and Nehru in Uzbekistan. The silk route which dates back to 100 BC brought several influences from Central Asia to India and also took back Buddhism from India to Central Asia. Thus Buddhism, and later Islam as well as Sufism, has provided the cultural and religious connect between India and Central Asia - and Uzbekistan really lies at the heart of Central Asia - over the centuries.

We have always enjoyed cultural and linguistic affinities with Uzbekistan which have only grown stronger over time. Secular and multi-ethnic Uzbekistan has tremendous goodwill and affection for India. Uzbeks have always been very interested in Indian languages particularly Hindi as well as Yoga, Indian music, dance, cinema and so on. It is not surprising, therefore, that Hindi is taught presently in six educational institutions in Uzbekistan right from the primary to postgraduate levels. We also have an active Indian Cultural Centre in Tashkent, and a number of Chairs of Indian studies in Uzbek educational institutions.
Uzbek Radio completed 49 years of Hindi broadcasts this year. The TV channels in Uzbekistan have repeatedly shown Ramayana and Mahabharata serials, dubbed of course in Uzbek language.

Such is the foundation on which the two sides have been building an edifice of cooperation and partnership in a steadfast fashion. India and Uzbekistan enjoy close, friendly and cooperative ties which are issue free. These ties have been nurtured by regular high-level exchanges. President Karimov who has been a strong votary of close India-Uzbek relations, will be visiting India the fifth time today evening.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had paid a visit to Uzbekistan in April 2006 which was his first visit to Central Asia, as the Prime Minister of India. Last year in June, External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna visited Tashkent to participate in the SCO Summit when he also called on President Karimov. Earlier, EAM paid a bilateral visit to Uzbekistan in 2009. Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee also visited Tashkent in May 2010 to attend the Asian Development Bank Board of Governors Meet when he met with the Prime Minister of Uzbekistan as well as the First Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister.

I am pleased to note that India and Uzbekistan have a similarity of views on a host of regional and international issues of mutual interest. Inter alia we have a robust dialogue and cooperation in counter-terrorism which poses a grave threat to both our societies. The Joint Working Group on combating international terrorism, which was set up in 2003, has been meeting regularly. The fourth meeting of the JWG was held in February this year in New Delhi.

We have a convergence of views on the situation in Afghanistan and need for stability in Afghanistan. We would in fact like to work together in attaining this objective. We already have a good dialogue on this issue, which is also likely to figure during the summit level discussions between President Karimov and the Prime Minister of India. We also have good defence cooperation and an agreement on defence cooperation was signed in 2005.

Our bilateral trade, which stands at a mere 151 million dollars in 2010, has tremendous potential for growth and both sides are applying themselves to give a boost to our economic and trade relations. Already 59 Indian companies have invested in Uzbekistan including in a four-star hotel which was set up in Tashkent in July 2009.

We do have a mechanism called the Inter-governmental Commission at the level of Secretaries in the Ministry of Commerce which has been meeting regularly to spur mutual bilateral trade and economic ties. The 9th meeting of the Commission was held earlier this month in Tashkent and was also preparatory to the visit of President Karimov to India.

Uzbekistan is resource-rich and offers a number of areas for deeper engagement between the two countries. Let me take the case of cotton. Uzbekistan produces more than one million tonnes of cotton fibre every year and hence the sector of textiles and cotton fibres is an area in which we see tremendous potential. And recognizing the same, I would like to mention that Spentex Industries Limited, has in fact made an investment of over 88 million dollars in Uzbekistan to modernize and expand domestic capacities to produce cotton yarn and dyed fabrics.

Another sector of great promise is hydrocarbons. You may be aware that Uzbekistan has the tenth largest gas reserves in the world which are estimated at 6.25 trillion cubic metres. They also have some oil.

In addition, Uzbekistan has substantial deposits of gold, silver, copper, uranium, potassium which, combined with gas, is the raw material for fertilizers. Both sides have now identified a broad slate of areas of cooperation which includes sectors like pharmaceuticals. We expect more joint ventures in pharmaceutical sectors to come about shortly - chemicals, textiles, food-processing, leather-processing, strategic metals including rare earth metals. In addition there is the important sector of human resource development, education and IT. I may recall that the Prime Minister during his visit to Tashkent in April 2006 had inaugurated an India-funded IT training centre which we hope to upgrade to a state of the art centre shortly.

We are also planning to set up an entrepreneurship development centre in Tashkent. I am pleased to note that Uzbekistan has been utilizing very effectively some 125 ITEC slots every year for training in areas like IT, banking, textile, human resource development and others.

While connectivity, and especially land connectivity, is an issue which is impacting currently on our trade and economic relations, I may add that we have reasonably good air connectivity with 15 Uzbek Air flights a week between the two sides.

Ladies and gentlemen, we attach considerable significance to the state visit of President Karimov to India which should result in elevating our relationship to a qualitatively high level. A number of agreements are also likely to be signed during the visit.

Thank you. We will be happy to take your questions.

Question: Can you elaborate on the agreements that are supposed to be signed?
Joint Secretary (ERS) (Shri Ajay Bisaria):

As we speak, there are a number of Uzbek Ministers and senior officials who are here and discussions are ongoing. We expect at the conclusion of the visit to have more than a dozen agreements in place. We had a meeting of the Joint Commission very recently in May and we identified a number of very important sectors. These include pharmaceuticals, IT, oil and gas, and minerals and metals. So, we expect a range of agreements to be concluded in these areas.

Official Spokesperson: Would you like to touch upon a couple of agreements which have already been signed?

Joint Secretary (ERS): Yes, of course. In oil and gas for instance we already have understandings that have been reached between our companies. For instance, our company GAIL has already signed an MoU with a company Uzbekcoal on import of specialized technology on underground coal gasification. This is a specialized technology which Uzbekistan is good at and which is available and which is going to be used by our side in Rajasthan in the case of lignite. This is something on which a commercial contract will be signed in due course but an MoU is already in place. Similarly in the oil sector we have an MoU being talked about between Uzbekneftegaz, the state oil and gas company, and our company ONGC Videsh Limited which would be on exploration of specific blocks in Uzbekistan. A number of other agreements are being talked about.

Question: Sir, since you mentioned Afghanistan regarding discussions, can you give an idea what direction you will be talking on? And also will both the countries be reaffirming on the need for having US troops in Afghanistan for a longer term?

Joint Secretary (ERS): Uzbekistan is in our extended neighbourhood and, therefore, it is also a contiguous neighbour of Afghanistan. Uzbekistan has a lot of interest in the situation in Afghanistan. In a sentence, both India and Uzbekistan are interested in stability being achieved in Afghanistan. We have an ongoing dialogue on these issues. Both of us agree for instance that development is a very important area of activity in Afghanistan and both of us would like to contribute. You are already aware of India’s role in the development of Afghanistan. But Uzbekistan is also now for instance supplying electricity to Afghanistan, in fact using transmission lines built by India. So, that is an example of our cooperation in this sector where transmission lines that have been built by India as part of our development projects are being used to supply electricity from Southern Uzbekistan to Kabul. So, we continue to discuss of course the security situation and the situation in terms of international forces. Basically our interest is in discussing this issue and discussing the stability of Afghanistan.
Question: On the issue of Taliban integration, what is Uzbek's stand? Also, can you elaborate a bit on how India talks with other Central Asian countries on this issue?

Official Spokesperson: On the issue of?

Question: Taliban integration and stability in Afghanistan.

Official Spokesperson: On the issue of the integration of elements which agree to abjure violence, which agree to abide by the Constitution, which agree to recognize the gains that have accrued to Afghanistan over the last ten years, our views are very well-known. Our Afghan friends have told us that they would like to integrate such elements and we respect their wishes. That is our position. Also during the recent visit of the Prime Minister of India to Afghanistan he has said, and you are aware of that, that we will go by the judgment and preferences of our friends in Afghanistan on how they would like to stabilize their society, how they would like to reconcile or reintegrate different elements. But on a broader issue, my colleague and I have already mentioned that as part of the same neighbourhood, Uzbekistan and we have similar concerns and a similar interest to see a stable, peaceful and prosperous Afghanistan. And we have been exchanging views on that and we will be happy to do what we can to attain that objective.

Question: Uzbekistan is the Chairman of SCO. Would there be talks on SCO? And there were talks between GAIL and Uzbekneftegaz on gas prospecting. Are we going to talk about the northern distribution network and supplies to Afghanistan and our coordination on that?

Joint Secretary (ERS): On SCO, Uzbekistan is not the current Chair. It was the Chair in 2009-10. The current Chair is in fact Kazakhstan. But we have a very close coordination with Uzbekistan in SCO. As you know, the External Affairs Minister visited Tashkent last year for the SCO Summit, and Uzbekistan has been particularly helpful in pushing India’s case in the organization for India to play a larger role in the organization. And we continue to coordinate closely with Uzbekistan in the SCO framework.

The other question you mentioned was on the oil and gas sector, about GAIL. As I mentioned, there are two MoUs being discussed. One has already been signed which was on this underground coal gasification. This is the agreement that GAIL has signed. The other agreement would be between OVL and Uzbekneftegaz. That would be on prospecting both for oil and gas. They have not yet reached a stage of specifics of which particular fields. But we expect and hope that it would lead in that direction.
Question: Sir, can we ask a question on another important issue?

Official Spokesperson: We are speaking about the important visit of President Karimov. If there is any question on that we will be very happy to answer it.

Question: What is the reason for the drop in trade from 2005? It is yet to touch those previous levels.

Joint Secretary (ERS): No, there has been no drop. We have been arguing that it has been below potential because in 2005 it was about 60 million dollars and now it is about a 150 million dollars. It is about 124 million dollars of exports from India last year, and a smaller amount of imports from Uzbekistan. Part of the reason as we have been discussing is connectivity. And if you see the composition of the trade, much of the trade from India, 62 per cent, is pharmaceuticals. So, these are goods, textiles, leather, which do not require bulk cargo surface transportation, which could be transported by air, whereas from the Uzbek side goods require transportation in terms of containers and cargo. So, that is a smaller number. That is the issue we are addressing. There is a secular trend of upward movement but we feel that it is well below the potential we can achieve.

Question: Could you tell us about our interest in this antiterrorism structure in Tashkent and its linkage with ... (Inaudible)...

Joint Secretary (ERS): Certainly. In fact this is a very very interesting body - the RATS which is the Regional Antiterrorism Structure. It is under the aegis of the SCO and is based in Tashkent. India has initiated a dialogue with this body. We invited its Secretary-General to India and he had come to India and we had a robust dialogue on all kinds of issues including those you have mentioned. We have agreed on a structure of exchanging intelligence and information as well as antiterrorism and counterterrorism exercise. So, we plan to engage with this body certainly much more in the future as well as to engage with Uzbekistan bilaterally.

Question: The Health Ministry has raised an issue about recognizing the medical degrees from Uzbekistan medical colleges. The Health Ministry officials say that the problem is mainly with the MEA that they are not allowing that kind of recognition. Is there going to be any movement forward on that?

Joint Secretary (ERS): MEA is not always to blame for these matters. In fact, MEA is working very closely with Health Ministry in evolving an overall policy for recognition of degrees of the former USSR and the current countries of the CIS in this region. In fact we are in dialogue with these countries on exchanging information because the central issue is that the Medical Council of India requires a certain basic standard in terms of curricula, in terms of approaches, on the basis of which it can recognize these degrees. But many of the students from this region do not have a problem in coming to India and taking the test and passing it and practicing in India. Many of them are practicing. So, it is not correct that there is a problem. There is an ongoing discussion on mutual recognition of degrees and that is proceeding fairly smoothly.

Official Spokesperson: I would just like to add here that it is a process and it is not just Uzbekistan but currently there are a number of countries, to which Indian students have been going traditionally for medical studies. Certain countries they have started going in recent years for medical studies. Of course the nodal agency is the Medical Council of India. It is for them to recognize but certainly MEA and our Missions play a role of facilitator, where we help with information being collated, or apprising the government concerned about the Indian standards and requirements. And it is a process which needs to be completed because after all when you are talking of recognition of medical colleges and doctors, you are talking of human lives here. And of course it has to meet the Indian standards.

Official Spokesperson: All right. Thank you very much.

New Delhi, May 18, 2011.

1. At the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh, His Excellency Islam Abduganievich Karimov, the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan paid a State visit to India on 17-18 May 2011. During the State visit, the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan held talks with Mrs. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, President of the Republic of India and with Dr. Manmohan Singh, Prime Minister of India, Mr. Hamid Ansari, Vice-President of India, Mr. S.M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister and Mrs. Sushma Swaraj, Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha called on President Islam A. Karimov.

2. The sides noted that the visit of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan to India was a welcome continuation of the tradition of regular exchange of high level visits between India and Uzbekistan and was testimony to the close historical and deep cultural ties between the two countries. The sides noted with satisfaction that the discussions took place in a warm and friendly atmosphere.

3. The sides reviewed the current status of the entire gamut of bilateral relations and exchanged views on important regional and international issues. They noted the similarity of their positions on bilateral, regional and global issues. The sides agreed that the Foreign Ministries of both countries would continue to hold regular consultations, including exchange of visits by their Ministers.

4. The sides noted with satisfaction that their relations serve their long term national interest and at the same time strengthen bilateral cooperation in accordance with the provisions of the UN Charter, the principles of mutual respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity and non-interference in internal affairs.

5. The sides noted that India and Uzbekistan have stakes in mutual progress and prosperity, and expressed their determination to imbue greater dynamism to the relationship through all-round cooperation and engagement. Both leaders declared that bilateral relations had been elevated to the level of a long term and strategic partnership based on equality and mutual understanding. This strategic partnership would encompass active cooperation in a wide spectrum of areas including political, economic, counter-terrorism, education, health, human resource development, science and technology, tourism and culture.
6. The sides noted with satisfaction the conclusion of bilateral documents during the visit on cooperation in a range of areas including Information Technology, Pharmaceuticals, Standardization, Small and Medium Enterprises, Coal gasification, Oil & Gas, Science & Technology, Textiles and Banking.

7. The sides agreed that the current level of bilateral trade was below the existing potential and underlined the need for increasing the volume of mutual trade and expanding its range. They expressed satisfaction with the outcome of the 9th session of the India-Uzbek Intergovernmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technical and Cultural Cooperation held on May 4-5, 2011 in Tashkent, and declared the necessity of enhancing bilateral trade, economic and investment cooperation in all areas of mutual interest.

8. The sides noted opportunities for further significant growth of volumes and diversification of the basket of mutual trade and agreed that the organization of trade fairs in the territories of the two states shall also contribute to the growth of mutual trade. They called upon their respective business communities to avail opportunities for mutually beneficial investments for implementation of major joint projects in promising sectors such as information technology and telecommunications; pharmaceuticals and biotechnology; production of finished textile, silk and leather goods; exploration and mining of hydrocarbons; production of household chemicals and plant protection chemicals; and tourism.

9. The sides noted the importance of strengthening the financial infrastructure for promoting trade and investment. They welcomed in this context the MoU between the EXIM Bank of India and the National Bank of Uzbekistan, aimed at streamlining the flow of credit. They also welcomed the initialling of the Protocol amending the bilateral Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement which would help promote investment and cross-border movement of goods, services and technology between the two countries.

10. The Uzbek side welcomed the desire of Indian companies to expand investment cooperation in sectors with advanced industrial potential corresponding to international standards. The Uzbek side informed the Indian side of opportunities for investment in joint projects of mutual interest, in the Free Industrial-Economic Zone "Navoi", where unprecedented favourable conditions for foreign investors had been created. Both sides also noted the capacities of the transcontinental intermodal hub at Navoi airport as a transshipment transit point, which provided favourable terms of transportation of cargo to the countries of Europe, CIS, the Middle East and other regions. More than 40 flights in a week originated from this international hub to key transit centers of the world, including such industrial centers of India as Delhi and Mumbai.
11. The sides highlighted the absence of surface transport connectivity as one of the reasons for the low level of trade between the two countries. To resolve these connectivity problems, the sides discussed implementation of such projects as the Trans-Afghan corridor and the project to establish the Central Asia-Persian Gulf corridor. The implementation of these projects may considerably cut down the distance and costs for transportation of goods between Uzbekistan and India, as well as provide Afghanistan the opportunity to integrate into the regional system of transport connectivity. The sides agreed to continue their work in terms of looking for various options for surface connectivity between India and Uzbekistan.

12. The sides noted the prospects of scientific and technical cooperation between the scientific centers of the two countries on organization of joint researches in the spheres of biotechnology, material science, solar power, laser technologies, and automation of production process.

13. The sides noted the potential of information technology for the improvement of people's lives. The Uzbek side welcomed activities of the Jawaharlal Nehru Uzbek-Indian Centre for Information Technology in Tashkent and noted that the sides had enormous potential to promote cooperation in this sphere.

14. The sides agreed to intensify contacts between educational institutions of both countries and to increase cooperation in human resources development.

15. The sides stressed the need to further intensify cultural cooperation, which would contribute to strengthening ties between their peoples.

16. The sides resolutely condemned terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and reaffirmed that international terrorism was a threat to global peace and security. It was noted with satisfaction that the fourth meeting of the Indo-Uzbek Joint Working Group on combating international terrorism (February 2011, New Delhi) discussed several issues of security and counter-terrorism including exchange of information, data, financing of terrorism and related matters. They emphasized the need for adoption of the "Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism" in the near future. The sides expressed the intention in this context to continue consultations between the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and to coordinate their efforts within the framework of the JWG on Combating International Terrorism.

17. The sides discussed the continuing unstable situation in Afghanistan and the challenges emanating from the region, including drug trafficking, and reaffirmed the importance of early establishment of peace and stability in the country.
18. The sides expressed their strong commitment to multilateralism, with the United Nations playing a central role in dealing with global challenges and threats. They reaffirmed their commitment to the reform of the United Nations, particularly the Security Council, through its expansion in the permanent and non-permanent categories, with increased representation of developing countries in both, in order to improve its efficiency, representativeness, and legitimacy, and for it to better meet the contemporary challenges faced by the international community. The Uzbek side reiterated its support for India's candidature for permanent membership of an expanded Security Council.

19. The Sides underscored the importance of further strengthening mutual cooperation in the framework of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, taking into account the active participation of the sides in the activity of this Organization.

20. India welcomed the entry into force of the Nuclear Weapon Free Zone in Central Asia and was prepared to extend the necessary security assurances.

21. H.E. Mr. Islam Karimov, President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, expressed gratitude to the Indian leadership and to the peoples of India for the warm reception and hospitality accorded to him and to the Uzbekistan delegation during his State visit to the Republic of India. He invited Mrs. Pratibha Devisingh Patil, the President of the Republic of India, to visit the Republic of Uzbekistan. The President of Uzbekistan also invited Dr. Manmohan Singh, the Prime Minister of India, to visit Uzbekistan. The invitations were accepted with pleasure.

AFRICA
479. Address by Minister of State Mrs. Preneet Kaur at the 38th World Marketing Congress on "Business Opportunities and Marketing Strategies for Eastern Africa: A Fresh Look".

New Delhi, February 10, 2011.

Distinguished guests,

Ladies & Gentlemen,

I am very happy that the Indian Institute of Marketing & Management, in collaboration with the Ministry of External Affairs, is organizing this World Marketing Congress on "Business Opportunities and Marketing Strategies for Eastern Africa: A Fresh Look", focusing on six countries in East Africa. This Congress comes at a time when the Government of India's own efforts to enhance its engagement with African countries to a higher threshold is going on and our focus will be fully on Africa in 2011.

2. I was in Addis Ababa recently to attend the meeting of the Executive Council of the African Union. I fully realized how important our engagement with Africa is and the mutual trust and cordiality which exists.

3. India's ties with Africa are historic. While our trade links date back to hundreds of years, it was our struggle against colonialism and imperialism and our shared inspiration and work to resist and defeat them, that forged strong and enduring bonds.

4. In the decades after we attained independence, we have been working together to consolidate our national gains and creating a prosperous future for our peoples. We are still young nations though our civilizations are very old. Our commitment to keep our engagement with African countries at the highest level continues undiminished. East Africa is just across the Indian Ocean and has been a neighbour to India, united by the winds that blow over the sea that link us together.

5. Our partnership is based on the fundamental principles of equality, mutual respect, and understanding between our peoples for our mutual benefit. It is also be guided by the principles of respect for the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity of state and commitment to deepen the process of African integration. While India and Africa have come a long way, we both face daunting challenges of poverty, hunger and disease. However, we have no doubt that by working together India and Africa can set an example of fruitful cooperation in the developing world.

6. The India Africa Forum Summit of 2008 was the result of this desire. During that Summit, we decided upon a new path for our cooperation aimed at achieving sustainable development. We are now working on holding the next India Africa Forum Summit 2011 in Africa this year. That will impart greater momentum to our multi-tiered cooperation.

7. It is noteworthy that some of the pan-African Institutions being established by India under the IAFS-2008 decisions are located in East African countries. Uganda is hosting the India-Africa Institute of Foreign Trade; Burundi is hosting the India-Africa Institute for Educational Planning & Administration; Kenya is hosting one of the five Human Settlement Centres; a Vocational Training Centre each will be set up in Ethiopia, Rwanda and Burundi. Many of your countries have sent nominees for participation in the agricultural scholarships as well as CV Raman Science & Technology scholarships. The ITEC programme is also well received in your countries. The Pan African e-Network Project for cooperation in the field of tele-education and tele-medicine is another milestone in our engagement. Today we are in a transformational phase as we convert our benefits of political goodwill into a modern relationship. In this, trade and economic engagement is very important.

8. Our trade with Africa has been increasing in quantity and widening in variety. Two-way trade which was around $5.5 billion dollars in 2001-02 has grown almost five-fold in less than a decade. Even so, the true potential is much greater and the spread and composition of the trade has to be substantially diversified. In order to assist the Least Developed Countries in Africa to increase their exports to India, Prime Minister had announced the "Duty-Free Tariff Preference Scheme" during the IAFS 2008. We are sure this will certainly give the necessary boost to exports to India from these countries. I encourage those eligible countries from East Africa who have not yet acceded to this important scheme to do so soon to enhance their exports to India.

9. East Africa has always been at the forefront of India's economic engagement with Africa and for attracting Indian investment. I am happy that this is expanding to a large number of countries in your region.

10. Indian companies have been investing in a major way in many African countries and their presence is increasing. Major Indian companies in both public sector as well as private sector are executing infrastructure and other projects which are flagship programmes. Some of these projects are funded by Government of India through credit lines in soft terms. Indian companies in the sectors of telecommunication, IT, railways, transport, agriculture etc. have made a great impact with their presence in many African countries.

11. In November 2010, we organized the first-ever meeting of the Secretaries General of eight Regional Economic Committees of Africa. I am happy that East African Community (EAC), Southern African Development Community (SADC) and Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa (COMESA), of which some of you are members, participated. Our engagement with these Regional Economic Communities is yet another important step in our partnership with Africa. This ensures three levels of interaction - at the bilateral, regional and pan-African level - and is unique to India's relations with Africa.

12. We have been encouraging our private sector to look at the immense possibilities that exists in African countries, particularly in East Africa, for trade and investment. I understand that several exploratory initiatives have been made by new investors and fruitful partnerships are developing. The main speakers in this Congress will, no doubt, speak about the potential areas for cooperation which the Indian private sector can take advantage of. I wish the Congress a great success and am confident that this effort will contribute highly to the further enhancement of business relations between India and the target countries of East Africa.

480. Remarks of External Affairs Minister to a group of African journalists on a visit to India on the occasion of the 7th Confederation of Indian Industry - EXIM Bank Conclave.

New Delhi, March 29, 2011.

Dear friends from Africa,

At the outset, I would like to extend a very warm welcome to you to India and the Ministry of External Affairs. You represent ten of our closest friends in Africa and we are delighted to have you in India, at this historical phase in our relationship with your countries and continent.

I am happy that your visit to India takes place at the time of the 7th CII-EXIM Bank Conclave on India-Africa Project Partnership. I was privileged to host and interact with Hon'ble Prime Ministers of Mozambique and Togo and Ministers from about twenty African nations the day before yesterday. I am sure that the Conclave will prove to be of value for you all in learning more about India-Africa partnership.

Africa figures prominently on the foreign policy radar of India. I am happy to note that our relations have blossomed into a multi-faceted association where each one of us contributes significantly.
Our ties with Africa go back centuries and have been nourished by close people-to-people engagement. We have been partners in struggle against colonialism. In the 21st century, we have moved to a new paradigm- one in which we seek to cooperate with each other to build a better life for our peoples. This partnership is anchored in fundamental principles of equality, mutual respect and mutual benefit and has derived impetus from the resurgence of Africa and India's sustained economic growth. India's partnership with Africa has been consultative and responsive. We have created a three-tier engagement with Africa: at pan-African, regional and bilateral levels. We have been guided by the wishes and priorities of our African friends in working together in institutional capacity building, human resource development, science and technological cooperation, enhancing agricultural productivity and food security, development of infrastructure, and in other areas.

At the First India Africa Forum Summit, held in April 2008, a series of new initiatives were announced. These include the establishment of four Pan-African institutions: India Africa Institutes on Foreign Trade, Diamond, Educational Planning and Administration, and Information Technology. Besides, ten vocational training centres, 5 human settlement institutes and 2 coal institutions are being set up under our partnership with Africa. The lead in each and every case, on deciding the location of the institution, was taken by the African Union, in consultation with beneficiary countries.

The number of long-term scholarships for African students in undergraduate, post-graduate and higher learning courses has been doubled.

You all would be familiar with the Pan-African e-network project for 53 countries in Africa. It has been implemented so far in 43 of the 47 countries with which agreements have been concluded, and is proving effective in making available tele-medicine and tele-education facilities.

It was decided to double the amount of Lines of Credit to $ 5.4 billion over five years, to give an impetus to infrastructure development including railways, IT, power generation, physical connectivity, crop diversification and capacity building in agriculture.

The second India-Africa Forum Summit is to take place in May this year. This time, as desired by our African partners, the Summit is being held in Africa at the seat the African Union headquarters in Addis Ababa. The agreed theme for the Summit - Enhanced Partnership-Shared Vision - manifests our common desire to further invigorate India-Africa partnership. The preparations for the Summit are in an advanced stage. I am highly optimistic about the outcome of this Summit towards fulfilling our shared objectives.
I too plan to build on my very successful visit to Seychelles, Mauritius and Mozambique last year and visit a few more countries in your beautiful continent. There are other heartening dimensions of India-Africa relationship. In recent years, there has been a surge in Indian investment in Africa, and growth in our trade. We welcome increase in African exports to India. The Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme announced by India for the Least Developed Countries should contribute towards this objective and out of 33 LDCs in Africa 19 have already acceded to this scheme. Indian investment in Africa would also, we expect, play a role in this regard.

In our multilateral engagements as well, India, as a developing nation, is keenly conscious of the need to address a myriad of developmental and other challenges, including those facing our African brethren. Last month we hosted a Ministerial Conference of 48 Least Developed Countries. On a number of challenges confronting us, including those pertaining to trade, environment, global economic situation and reforms and restructuring the global institutions, India and Africa have common objectives, and that is, to ensure that the voice and aspirations of the developing world are given due attention.

Media, in both, countries play, and have to play, a pivotal role in creating better awareness of the openings and possibilities. That is why we are facilitating the visit of three groups of Indian journalists to Africa over the next six weeks. We are similarly pleased to welcome you to India. We would also like to provide more training slots for African media in some of the leading institutions in India.

I understand that during your week-long stay in India, you have visited Agra and will visit Mumbai, apart from having several engagements in New Delhi. Your programme would take you through a number of aspects and possibilities in our relations - from infrastructure to capacity building, from health to information technology, from finance to culture, telecommunication to environment - to name a few. These interactions, I hope, will give you not only a glimpse of the potential, prospects and possibilities for an abiding India-Africa partnership, but also of the special warmth India and her people have for their brothers and sisters from Africa.

I wish you a pleasant and fruitful stay in India and would be happy to hear your comments and take your questions. Thank you.
Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry, led a high-level Indian business delegation to participate in the 21st Meeting of the World Economic Forum on Africa under the theme “From Vision to Action, Africa's Next Chapter” held in Cape Town, South Africa from 4-6 May 2011. During the Forum meeting, Indian Minister participated in two key sessions on climate change and South-South cooperation along with President Jacob Zuma. Shri Sharma while participating in a TV debate with the South African Foreign Minister, Ms Maite E. Nkoana-Mashabane deliberated on building and deepening South-South relations, which addressed the issues of trade and investment, skills, knowledge and technology transfer, alternative development models and BRICSA. The session dealt with the main challenges and opportunities behind deeper South-South interaction and collaboration; economic and political implications of BRICSA for South Africa; and ways to accelerate the South-South trade and investment ties. Shri Sharma during the debate informed that exports from developing countries now constitute 37% of global trade, of which about half relates to south-south trade. He later emphasised the need for deeper South-South interaction and collaboration which will help in having commonality of approaches on the major issues of international importance including climate change, UN reforms, reform of the international financial system, dealing with the global financial crisis, WTO etc.

Minister Sharma took this opportunity to hold bilateral meetings with key South African Ministers, including his counterpart, Mr. Rob Davies, Defence Minister, Ms. Lindiwe Sisulu, Foreign Minister Ms. Maite Nkoana-Mashabane and discussed matters of common interest. During the visit, he also called on President Zuma and the Speaker of the National Assembly Max Sisulu. Shri Sharma while highlighting on the India's effort to strengthen mutual cooperation stated that, "Our Ministerial-level participation in the Forum underlined India's long-standing commitment to partner and share best practices with African countries in their socio-economic development, human resource development and capacity-building. The institutional mechanism of the India-Africa Forum Summit meetings has enabled us to further develop mutually beneficial partnerships aimed at the overall progress of the continent".
More than 900 participants from 60 countries, including several African Heads of state and government, Cabinet Ministers, Heads of International Organizations and Captains of Industry attended this high profile event which provided a platform for interaction among key stakeholders on how to advance Africa’s socio-economic development. The underlying theme for the meeting focused on how African countries, communities and companies could move the continent forward in view of the unfolding global transformation.

482. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the Second India-Japan Dialogue on Africa

New Delhi, June 16, 2011.

The Second India-Japan Dialogue on Africa was held in New Delhi during 15-16 June 2011. The Japanese delegation was led by H.E. Mr. Sumio Kusaka, Director General for African Affairs in the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Kusaka is also Personal Representative of the Japanese Prime Minister, for Africa. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Gurjit Singh, Additional Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.

The two sides held wide ranging discussions regarding their respective political and economic engagements with Africa; the current security & political situation in various parts of Africa; and issues emanating from Africa with regional and global bearing. The delegations extensively shared their views and experiences with regard to the India Africa Forum Summit (IAFS) and the Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD). The two sides also discussed the possibility of devising coordinated efforts directed towards Africa’s socio-economic development.

The Japanese delegation had fruitful exchanges on trade and commerce related issues with the CII and also participated in a Round Table Academic Exchange on Africa organized by the Indian Council of World Affairs (ICWA).

The India-Japan Dialogue on Africa is now an institutionalized event held biannually. The inaugural dialogue was held in Tokyo in October 2010 and the next round is scheduled to take place in Tokyo.
483. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on providing humanitarian assistance to countries in the Horn of Africa.

New Delhi, September 14, 2011

India will provide humanitarian assistance of US$ 8 million to the countries afflicted with severe famine and drought in the Horn of Africa i.e. Somalia, Kenya and Djibouti. The assistance will be provided through the World Food Programme.

India has also contributed US $ 1.5 million to the AU Trust Fund on Somalia and US $ 0.5 million to the UN Trust Fund. This is part of the assistance announced by Hon'ble Prime Minister for augmenting the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) at the India-Africa Forum Summit-II in Addis Ababa, in May this year.

India would be cooperating with Somalia in capacity building in areas such as fisheries, IT and agriculture. India is also considering extending technical assistance to Somalia in developing a counter piracy policy and strategy. The issue of Piracy is of considerable concern for India and has been taken up with the Somali side.

India is firmly committed to the progress and development of Africa. Our economic package of US$ 5.7 billion for the African countries, over the next three years, is demonstrative of our time tested ties and commitment.
Mr. President,

It gives me great pleasure to address today’s Joint Debate on the New Partnership for Africa’s Development and the promotion of peace and development in Africa, including in its efforts to fight malaria.

In the immortal words of India’s first Prime Minister, Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru, Africa is our “sister continent”. India’s links with Africa are civilizational. They are anchored in centuries of trade across the Indian Ocean; in the shared struggle against the yoke of colonialism; in our endeavour of post-colonial nation-building, and in our common quest to unshackle our people from the bondage of poverty, disease, hunger, illiteracy, and apartheid.

We also owe a debt of gratitude to this great continent for being the political birthplace of the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, who first tested his central precepts of non-violence and peaceful resistance in South Africa.

Mr. President,

Ten years after the adoption of NEPAD, it is befitting to recognize the noteworthy progress made so far in pursuing sectoral priorities in agriculture, infrastructure, health, education, science, information technology, and environment. Nevertheless, this decadal milestone also offers an opportunity for sober reflection on the unfinished tasks ahead in fulfilling the vision of socio-economic growth and sustainable development that was envisaged when this framework was first conceived.

Particularly relevant to this discussion is the pivotal contribution of international cooperation in Africa’s development, especially in its efforts to make progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and in surmounting the difficult challenges confronting post-conflict and transitional societies in Africa.

As rightly emphasized by the Secretary-General in his Report, the international community needs to step up its efforts and bridge the gap between promise and delivery. The shortfall of 18 billion US dollars in meeting ODA commitments to Africa is a cause of concern. In these times of political uncertainty and fragile transitions in many African countries, it is more incumbent than ever for the continent’s development partners to stay the course and help African countries achieve their developmental goals.
Mr. President,

On India’s part, we have together with our African partners transformed our age old and special engagement into an enduring and multi-dimensional relationship. After careful nurturing over successive years, today our partnership with Africa is aligned with the priorities integral to the developmental goals of Africa and is built on the foundations of mutual equality and common benefit.

Sectoral areas of cooperation that have been accorded high priority include infrastructure development, capacity-building, agriculture, health, food security and technology cooperation.

Earlier this year, we reaffirmed our abiding commitment to working with our African partners at the second India-Africa Forum Summit in Addis Ababa in May 2011. At the Summit, India announced fresh lines of credit worth five billion US dollars over the next three years for Africa and an additional 700 million US dollars grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology, and building new institutions and training programmes, in consultation with the African Union, the Regional Economic Communities and our African partners.

In keeping with NEPAD’s emphasis on infrastructure development, we have also decided to support the development of a new Ethio-Djibouti Railway line at 300 million US dollars. We are also discussing with the African Union the augmentation of capacities for the development of regional structure in railways.

Building on the success of the Pan African E-network project that shares with all African countries our expertise in the fields of healthcare and education through satellite, fiber optics and wireless links, we are looking at setting up an India-Africa Virtual University. The proposed University will set aside 10,000 new scholarships for African students.

We are further going to significantly raise the number of African beneficiaries of our scholarships and training slots, including under our flagship technical and economic assistance initiative- the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme (ITEC). We have committed ourselves to offering more than 22,000 scholarships to African students over the next three years.

With a view to encouraging trade and investment flows, there is also a proposal to establish an India-Africa Business Council. India is already unilaterally making available duty free and quota free market access for goods from 34 Least Developed Countries in Africa. This covers 94% of India’s total tariff lines and provides preferential market access on tariff lines that comprise 92.5% of global exports of all LDCs.
India’s private sector has played an increasingly important part in recent years in supporting trade and investment flows. Indian companies have made large investments in Africa in industry, agriculture, services, human resource development and infrastructure. The Indian conglomerate Tata has emerged as the second largest investor in Sub-Saharan Africa. New initiatives to establish an India-Africa Food Processing Cluster, an India-Africa Integrated Textiles Cluster, an India-Africa Civil Aviation Academy, an India-Africa Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting, and an India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development are on the anvil.

Mr. President,

India has also contributed actively in efforts to maintain peace and security on the African continent through our six decade long involvement in UN peacekeeping efforts. Our most substantial presence remains in Africa, including in the latest peacekeeping mission in South Sudan.

Further, India will contribute 2 million US dollars for the African Union Mission in Somalia in line with our consistent support to the development of African capacities in the maintenance of peace and security. We have consistently held the position that the international community must further encourage regional and sub-regional organizations in Africa to play a more important role both in peacekeeping and peacebuilding issues within Africa.

Mr. President,

Before concluding, I would like to speak to the global anti-malaria campaign, particularly in Africa, dealt with in the WHO Report transmitted by the Secretary-General. The Report emphasizes the need to intensify efforts to reach the recently revised and more ambitious targets by 2015.

The analysis presented in the Report draws on empirical evidence to suggest a strong link between injection of significant funding and rise in the number of lives saved as a result of anti-malarial efforts. The fact that funding has stagnated in the past two years is therefore particularly worrisome. We would urge all donors to step up efforts at this critical juncture.

India’s own cooperation agenda with Africa includes capacity building programmes for medical and health specialists to tackle pandemics like malaria, filarial polio, HIV and TB. India’s private sector has been investing in establishing pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities in African countries. We are willing to do more.
Mr. President,

In conclusion, India’s vision of the 21st century sees a great and dynamic role for Africa as an emerging growth pole of the world. We will offer our fullest cooperation to translate this vision into reality. We will take our partnership from pillar to pillar founded on mutual solidarity and kinship to harness the great potential of the more than 2.1 billion Indians and Africans.

I thank you, Mr. President.

485. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the Second meeting of the India – African Regional Economic Communities (REC).

New Delhi, November 9, 2011.

In order to further enhance institutional engagement between India and Africa, the second meeting between India and the African Regional Economic Communities (RECs) was held in New Delhi during 8-9 November 2011. The first meeting was held in New Delhi in November 2010.

The meeting was attended by the Secretaries General of Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa (COMESA), East African Community (EAC), and Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) the Executive Secretary of Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) and representative from the Southern Africa Development Community (SADC) and the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) along with the senior officials from their delegations.

Africa has a number of Regional Communities and eight of them are recognised by the African Union. These include the above and the Southern Africa Development Community (SADC), the Community of Sahel-Saharan States (CENSAD), the Arab Maghreb Union (UMA). These eight RECs are an integral part of the India Africa Forum Summit structure based on a decision of the African Union Summit taken at Banjul in July 2006. The countries that Chair these eight RECs were invited to the first and second India Africa Forum Summit in April 2008 and May 2011 respectively.

India’s multi-layered cooperation with Africa works through the traditional bilateral engagement, with the rapidly involving engagement at the continental level through the African Union and at the regional level through the RECs. The primary objective of this Meeting was to engage all the RECs together in order to discuss the implementation of various decisions taken under the framework of India Africa Forum Summit.

The RECs were welcomed by Smt. Preneet Kaur, Minister of State for External Affairs, on 8 November 2011, who expressed that the RECs were an important element of the India Africa partnership structure and India looked forward to working with them to implement the decisions of the IAFS. The RECs expressed their deep appreciation for the Government of India’s initiative in inviting them as integral partners of India in Africa.

The representatives of the RECs met with several Departments/Ministries/Agencies of the Government of India engaged in implementing jointly agreed programme and projects. These include: Ministry of Textiles; Ministry of Food Processing Industries; National Small Industries Corporation; Indian Institute of Foreign Trade et al. The delegation also received presentations from the Department of Agricultural Research and Education on setting up of three regional institutions dealing with capacity building in the field of Agriculture viz., Soil, Water and Tissue Testing Laboratories, Farm Science Centres and Agricultural Seed Production-cum-Demonstration Centres; from National Institute For Training of Highway Engineers on Material Testing Laboratories for Highways; and from The Energy and Resources Institute and the Barefoot College on sustainable energy technologies. A special session were organised by the CII to provide a private sector interaction for the delegation from the RECs. A cross-section of Indian investors and entrepreneurs met with the delegates to discuss business opportunities in different regions of Africa. Telecommunications Consultants India Ltd. (TCIL) organized a special session to provide an update on the Pan-African e-Network Project.

The delegations from the RECs visited Indian Agricultural Research Institute, Pusa and also participated in a meeting with Africanists organized by the Indian Council of World Affairs (ICWA).

Africa’s Regional Economic Communities have shown concrete movement towards harmonisation of standards and rules and towards creation of common markets. This has an important bearing on the development of India’s trade and investment with African countries. They are also working towards better movement of goods and services through enhanced infrastructure development and regional integration along with the development of processing facilities, particularly in agriculture, mining and oil and gas. They are keen to engage with India’s private sector to attract them to the greater opportunities for trade and investment. RECs also expressed their desire to sensitise Indian agencies on Africa’s requirements in the field of capacity building, human resource development, food and agriculture processing.

The representatives of the Regional Economic Communities expressed their gratitude to India for continued engagement with them and fully recognising the regional dimension of Africa’s development. They considered India an important partner and were happy to have a structured dialogue in this format. The IGAD representative thanked India for supporting regional integration in India through the construction of the new Ethio-Djibouti railway line which would provide the member-states of IGAD with improved connectivity. A Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on Economic Cooperation between India and the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) was signed on 8 November 2011. India already has MoUs with India EAC, ECOWAS, COMESA and SADC.

It was agreed that the dialogue with the RECs would continue periodically and appropriate action plans, including all decisions taken through the Joint Action Plan with the AU, would be pursued together.

486. Inaugural address by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the Conference on “Indian Lines of Credit: An Instrument to Enhance India-Africa Partnership”.

   New Delhi, November 22, 2011.

   Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

   It gives me pleasure to be here this morning with you to address this Conference attended by representatives from over 40 African countries. It is indeed heartening to note the overwhelming response to our invitation.

   We are here today on a common platform to discuss how India and African countries can work together to achieve the goals of ensuring inclusive growth and sustainable development. We face similar challenges in transforming our economies for the well-being and prosperity of our people.

   There are striking complementarities that exist between Africa’s requirements and India’s capabilities in many areas. I am confident that our partnership will continue to grow as we move forward on this path. Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, while addressing the Second India-Africa Forum Summit earlier this year, observed “India will work with Africa to realize its vast potential. We believe that a new vision is required for Africa’s development and participation in global affairs”. In this spirit, India is ready to share its experience with our African brothers and sisters.

African economy expanded by 4.5% in 2010. Indian economy expanded by around 8% in the same period. India and Africa together comprise a market of 2.2 billion people with a combined GDP of 3 trillion US Dollars. Trade between India and Africa, which stood at 11.9 billion Dollars in 2005-06, increased to 53.3 billion US Dollars last year. There has been an increase in investments in both directions as well.

All this, of course, is impressive but there is still vast potential for further growth. India is engaging with Africa at bilateral, regional as well as continental levels. The India-Africa Forum Summits have lent a contemporary dimension to our relations.

Our economic engagement is directed at meeting the socio-economic development aspirations of developing countries in the spirit of South-South cooperation. This takes several forms, including Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programmes, that are tailor-made to respond to the capacity-building needs of our partner countries. Several initiatives under our Focus Africa Programmes underline our political commitment to build mutually beneficial partnerships.

Lines of Credit are an important instrument in this context and are the focus of this Conference. At the India-Africa Forum Summit in May this year, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had announced five billion US Dollars over the next 3 years under lines of credit to help Africa achieve its development goals. These LOCs provide support at highly concessional terms to LDCs and Developing countries in the African continent.

We note a great deal of interest from our partners to cooperate in this framework. As we take our cooperation forward, it is of paramount importance that we follow transparent and fair selection procedures based on competitive bidding for award of contracts and execution of them. Such transparency will ensure best value for money and quality of delivery under the scheme.

I believe that you will be having detailed discussions on our policies, procedures and methodology on how to access and make best use of Indian Lines of Credit. We value your inputs and hope that you will find the discussion useful and enriching. I am sure that the experiences to be shared during the Conference by the senior officials of the Ministry of External Affairs, Ministry of Finance, EXIM Bank and CII would add immense value to the deliberations today. The perspectives of the visiting representatives from the African countries, who are the prime actors for taking advantage of the Indian LOCs, would also be of enormous use for the Indian side.

I wish success in your deliberations during this Conference.

Thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

A press release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the occasion said that this was the first such conference which brought together foreign delegates and Indian stakeholders on a common platform for consultations. Over 40 African countries participated in this Conference. “Indian Lines of Credit (LOC) is extended to developing countries, in the spirit of South-South cooperation, and forms an important element in India’s development cooperation outreach including in the African continent” said the press release. It may be recalled that at the India-Africa Forum Summit at Addis Ababa in May 2011, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had announced that India would extend US $ 5 billion worth of Lines of Credit to African partners over the next three years. India’s economic engagement with the African countries since the launch of its Focus Africa programme in 2002-03 included the Team-9 initiative with West African countries, the very successful Pan-African E-Network Project that offers tele-education, tele-medicine and VOIP services to 47 African nations that joined the project. This is in addition to India’s bilateral, regional and continental level cooperation initiatives in the African Continent. The Lines of Credit was intended to provide support at concessional terms to projects and supply contracts of contemporary relevance to developing countries. External Affairs Minister in his speech noted, that “transparency and fair competition based on competitive bidding for award of executing contracts is an essential prerequisite to ensure best value for money and quality of delivery.” So far over 40 African countries have availed of a hundred Indian Lines of Credit, aggregating over US $ 4.2 billion. In 2010-11 alone, 14 Lines of Credits amounting to over US $ 1 billion were approved.

488. Statement by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai at India - Africa Hydrocarbon Conference.

New Delhi, December 10, 2011.

Hon’ble Ministers,
Ambassadors,
Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentleman

I am honoured to have the opportunity to address the participants of the India-Africa Hydrocarbon Conference. The high participation in the third edition of the Conference demonstrates the success of the Conference and the fact that India and Africa can do a lot together. India and Africa have deep historical links from the time the valleys of Nile and Indus were cradles to the earliest civilizations of the world. We had links through trade and commerce across the Indian Ocean throughout history. (The west coast of India in particular.) Some of these linkages were weakened during the colonial era. Now, India and Africa have a renewed partnership in political and economic endeavours. The growth centres of the world are shifting from West and North to East and South and we see Africa as an emerging growth pole of the world. We are clear that in reforming the UN Security Council there has to be appropriate representation for Africa as well as India as Permanent Members. As emerging economies both India and the nations of Africa have a lot of complementarities, which need to be exploited to their full potential in order to fulfil the developmental aspirations of our citizens.

Earlier this year, we reaffirmed our abiding commitment to working with our African partners at the Second India-Africa Forum Summit in Addis Ababa in May 2011. Addressing the Summit our Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh said; I quote:
'We (therefore) need a new spirit of solidarity among developing countries. We must recognize that in this globalized age we all live inter-connected lives in a small and fragile planet. We must work together to uplift the lives of our people in a manner that preserves the sustainability of our common air, land and water.'

End of quote. And let me add – that energy is the most fundamental element in development, i.e. the process by which the lives of people are uplifted – as mentioned by our PM. Working together in the field of energy is therefore critical to our partnership.

Let me assure you that while we may speak of Africa as a continent, we have the highest respect for the unique identity and individuality of each country. At the Summit, India announced fresh lines of credit worth five billion US dollars over the next three years and an additional 700 million US dollars grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology, and building new institutions and training programmes. Areas of cooperation that have accorded high priority include energy and infrastructure development, capacity-building, agriculture, health, food security and technology cooperation. In the MEA we are working to develop these programmes country to country keeping in mind that each country has specific requirements; but many successful programmes in health and education span a number of countries.

Turning to Energy in the India Africa relationship: Let me say that I am happy to hear about the Conference outcome with ideas for new paradigms in our energy relationship with Africa.

We can see three particular complementarities:- From the perspective of energy cooperation between India and Africa, the first, and the most obvious, is the complementarity of resource endowments and supply-demand dynamics. Africa is estimated to have 9.5% of global proven oil reserves, 7.9% of the proven global gas reserves and about 3.8% of the global coal reserves. These estimates are likely to grow in the future and Africa is already one of the most lucrative energy destinations for investment. Outside the traditional area of North Africa, the main focus has been on West Africa and countries along the Gulf of Guinea which have been seen as the major locus of hydrocarbon reserves. But we have recently been informed about substantial discoveries onshore and offshore – in the East African region also (most recently in Uganda, Tanzania, and now off the coast of Mozambique). This should make us re-evaluate the geological potential of the entire Indian Ocean basin. On the other hand, the Indian economy has been one of growth stories of the world economy, but heavily dependant on imported energy. As a result, there has been a steady increase in India’s imports of crude oil, LNG and other petroleum products from Africa. To quote an example, even on a year-on-year basis, our crude oil imports from Africa have steadily increased from 15.68% in 2009 to 20.62% in the first ten months of 2010. Therefore, we would naturally be seeking commercial partners in Africa to meet large portions of India’s energy needs through imports of crude oil, LNG and other petroleum and energy products. This makes for a truly win-win proposition as our partners seek assured markets.

The second is that of structural complementarities in the hydrocarbon sector. Africa is not only a geography well endowed with hydrocarbon resources; it also represents a number of dynamic countries whose own demand for fuel, petroleum products, technologies, jobs, skills and investments is on the rise. This opens avenues to explore for more opportunities for equity investment in the African markets and two way tie-ups. With our proven expertise in refining, consultancy, training, infrastructural developments etc, we perceive potential for mutually beneficial business tie-ups. It is in this spirit that at the second Africa India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa, India has offered large numbers of Training positions to African nationals in Oil & Natural Gas sector (nearly 450 positions), and Hydro, thermal, Power Grid sector (nearly 370 positions).

The third complementarity is that of energy poverty and energy access. We are all familiar with the fact the millions in our countries have no access to commercial energy. India has been an ardent advocate of renewable energy in the international arena, particularly in popularizing the concept of “Energy Access for All”. We do this both because of the requirement of energy and to tackle the need for a less carbon intensive energy future. It is clear from the International Climate Change Conferences (including the one underway now at Durban) that the advanced industrial countries see the transition to an era of new energy sources and environmental technologies, as a means to retain their technological and industrial edge over the rest of us. We have no alternative but to build on our success so far in harnessing renewable energy, especially solar, wind and biomass. We have to expand cooperation between Africa and India in this sector in terms of training and capacity building, since we in the tropical regions have some advantages in these sectors. But we need a bridge to the bright new era of renewables, and for this we would have to rely on increased production and distribution of natural gas which is relatively less carbon intensive than coal, which brings us back to cooperation and collaboration in hydrocarbons.

Excellencies, I understand that there have been some very fruitful deliberations in this Third India-Africa Hydrocarbon Conference, making it a very successful and mutually beneficial undertaking. The range of activities and discussion held in these two days are evidence of the resolve with which India and the African countries wish to develop their relationship in the hydrocarbon sector. I am sure that with the passage of time, this energy relationship between India and the nations of Africa would develop into a very symbiotic relationship, extending beyond the hydrocarbon cooperation agreements and joint working groups, to a situation where we are jointly able to provide affordable energy to our respective people and fulfil their development aspirations. In a sense this makes us geo-economic and strategic partners and I hope by the time of the 4th Conference, some of what you have discussed today, will start becoming a reality.

I will also take this opportunity to congratulate Ministry of Petroleum and Natural Gas and FICCI for successful organisation of the 3rd India-Africa Hydrocarbon Conference, which deals with the vital subject of energy security, one of the priorities of Indian foreign policy.

Thank you.
Following the Summit, the Prime Minister will be on a bilateral visit to Ethiopia on May 25-26. After visiting Ethiopia, the Prime Minister will pay a bilateral visit to Tanzania on May 26-28, 2011. Smt. Gursharan Kaur will accompany the Prime Minister. Shri S.M. Krishna, Minister of External Affairs, Shri T.K.A. Nair, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister and Shri S. Menon, National Security Adviser, will be part of the Prime Minister's delegation.

The Summit will be preceded by the Foreign Ministers' Meeting on May 23, 2011 and a Senior Officials Meeting on May 20-21, 2011. A Special Meeting of Trade Ministers will be held on May 21, 2011 in Addis Ababa. Minister of Commerce and Industry, Shri Anand Sharma, will lead the Indian side at this meeting.

The President of Equatorial Guinea, H.E. Mr. Obiang Nguema Mbasogo, in his capacity as Chairperson of the African Union, will co-Chair the Summit along with Prime Minister. Fifteen African countries will participate in the Summit on behalf of the African continent. The choice of the countries is decided by the African Union on the basis of the Banjul format adopted by the African Union for the participation of African countries in Summits like the Africa-India Forum Summit. The countries that have been asked by the African Union to participate in the Summit are: Algeria, Burundi, Chad, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Libya, Malawi, Namibia, Mauritania, Nigeria, Senegal, South Africa and Swaziland. The Chairperson of the African Union Commission, Dr. Jean Ping, will also take part in the Summit.

The India-Africa historic relationship, which is rooted in the struggle against colonialism and apartheid, has evolved into a multifaceted engagement. India's relations with Africa are at the bilateral, regional and continental levels. This comprehensive paradigm of cooperation is premised on Africa's own aspirations for developing regional and Pan-African institutions and development programmes. India's cooperation and development partnerships with African countries cover, amongst others, the fields of human resources and institutional capacity building and education, science & technology, agricultural productivity and food security, industrial growth including small & medium enterprises and minerals, development in the health sector, development of infrastructure and ICT.

The Second India-Africa Forum Summit will build on the architecture developed for India-Africa cooperation and structured engagement during the First Africa-India Forum Summit hosted by India in April, 2008, in Delhi. It will be recalled that the First Summit adopted two far-reaching documents, the Delhi Declaration and the India-Africa Framework for Cooperation. These serve as the contours for our systematic engagement with Africa.
It is expected that the leaders will discuss significant aspects of the India-Africa partnership with the objective of enhancing its content and widening its ambit for mutual benefit. The leaders will also focus on regional and international issues of common concern, including threats from terrorism and piracy. Two outcome documents are expected to be adopted at the Summit; The Addis Ababa Declaration and the Africa-India Framework for Enhanced Cooperation.

At the margins of the Summit, Prime Minister will meet a number of African leaders.

The India-Africa partnership at its core, is a partnership between the peoples. In recognition of this theme a number of outreach events are being organized before or concurrently with the Summit. Some of these are:

- A trade exhibition called the India Show and a Business Conclave,
- An India Africa Media Partnership Symposium
- Handcrafting Hope - a programme for interaction amongst Indian and African craftspeople,
- Rhythm of Life - a series of joint cultural performances by Indian and African artistes showcasing fusion of Indian and African cultures,
- From Tradition to Innovation, a multimedia exhibition tracing the long journey of our partnership; and
- A film festival showcasing the best of Indian commercial cinema.

All of these events are being organized in Addis Ababa.

It is significant that the first-ever India-Africa Academic Conference was held on May 11-12, 2011 in Addis Ababa. From India and Africa Scholars discussed different aspects of India-Africa relations with a view to enhancing them further.

It is expected that Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh will release a commemorative stamp, a book entitled "Two Billion Dreams: Celebrating India-Africa Friendship" and a special Summit edition of the journal Africa Quarterly.

Prime Minister’s bilateral visit to Ethiopia will be the first-ever visit by an Indian Prime Minister to that country. During the visit he will hold detailed discussions with Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi. He will also address the Ethiopian Parliament.

India and Ethiopia enjoy a warm and cordial relationship covering political, economic, commercial, cultural areas among others. Recent years have seen an increase in India-Ethiopia trade and Indian investment in Ethiopia. It is estimated that in the last two decades the Ethiopian Investment Agency has approved Indian investments upwards of US$ 4.5 billion. The areas in which investments have been committed or made are agriculture and floriculture, engineering, plastics, manufacturing, cotton and textiles, pharmaceuticals, healthcare and ICT. A sizeable number of Indian companies have a presence in Ethiopia.

India is a partner in Ethiopia’s development process and has extended Lines of Credit amounting to around US$ 700 million. A large part of this credit is committed to the development of the sugar industry in Ethiopia.

It is expected that discussions between Prime Minister and his Ethiopian counterpart will focus, apart from bilateral relations, on the situation in the region and important issues of international concern. A significant agreement that is expected to be signed during the visit relates to the Avoidance of Double Taxation.

Prime Minister’s visit to Tanzania will be the first Head of Government level visit from India after September, 1997. It will also be the first Head of Government visit from a non-African country after President Jakaya Kikwete assumed his second term (following the general elections in 2010).

For India, Tanzania is an important partner in Africa. It will be recalled that Tanzania was the co-Chair of the First Africa-India Forum Summit.

India and Tanzania played a significant role in the process of de-colonization and the struggle against apartheid. The two countries were active participants in developing the process of South-South Cooperation for the benefit of the developing world. India and Tanzania are now engaged in actively pursuing a mutually beneficial commercial and economic partnership, as part of a wide ranging relationship. India-Tanzania trade is over USD$ 1.1 billion in 2010 and Indian imports covered a number of agricultural commodities.

It is also noteworthy that India has become the second largest investor in Tanzania with total cumulative investments of US$ 1.3 billion (till 2009) which has created employment opportunities for 32,000 people.

The two countries have a tradition of cooperation in multilateral fora.

During the visit, Prime Minister and President Kikwete will discuss ways and means of taking the relationship forward in a comprehensive manner. There will also be a focus on the two countries’ partnership in the development process in Tanzania through education, capacity building and infrastructure development. Thank you.
Question: Last year, a delegation of farmers from Punjab had been to African countries to buy land for setting up their entire business in African nations. This was I think helped by your junior Foreign Minister. Have they moved ahead because they still said that the problem is getting the land on lease; hundred years agreement is an issue. Could you just tell us in detail on that?

Secretary (West): I do not have details of the processes under way in this regard. I am aware that a group of farmers had gone. Land issues in any country are complex. But there is a significant Indian investment in agriculture and floriculture. This process is in accordance with the laws of Ethiopia. This process, according to my understanding, is welcomed by the authorities in Ethiopia and will continue.

Question: Sir, who is representing Libya at the Conference?

Secretary (West): I do not have details of Libyan representation. Let me clarify to you, as I mentioned in the opening statement it is for the African Union to decide who will represent the African side at the Summit. The African Union had adopted a format at Banjul and their representation is on the basis of that format.

Question: I have two questions. In mid-90s Dr. Manmohan Singh came to Tanzania as Secretary-General of the South Commission. Then the founder President of Tanzania was the Chairman of the South Commission. What is the interest of India vis-à-vis the South Commission at the moment in time? Secondly, we see India assuming the role of the Non-aligned Movement since the days of Jawaharlal Nehru. But given the situation, the unipolar situation of the world today, what could be India’s role in reactivating the Non-aligned Movement because to my mind the Non-aligned Movement is as good as dead?

Secretary (West): The purpose and objective of the Non-aligned Movement, as indeed of the entire process of South-South Cooperation, was to ensure that the developing world has a voice and that the developing world breaks the historic shackles that bound it, and that this process was achieved in a comprehensive manner. I do believe that even though the world is greatly different in 2011 than it was in 1961 when the first Non-aligned Summit was held, the objectives still remain valid. All of us in the South are developing countries, and our basic purpose is to have a better life for our peoples. Our cooperation within the South-South format is essential, and the entire concept remains valid.

The South Commission is an institution which embodies in itself the entire objective of moving South-South cooperation forward and that objective remains entirely valid.
Question: Sir, what about the UN reforms? India’s and G4’s proposal the AU still has to take a formal view. Are you expecting a breakthrough on the issue of UN reforms? Also on the lines of credit, last time we announced 5.4 billion dollars. Are we going to scale up that or what are going to be the key announcements at the Summit?

Secretary (West): On UN reform I think India and all the countries of the African Union are of one mind in as much as that the situation in the world today demands a reform of international institutions including the United Nations, and within the United Nations there is a need for reform of the UN Security Council. There has to be an expansion of the Council and an expansion in both categories, permanent as well as nonpermanent. I think India is agreed entirely that Africa must find a place in the permanent members category within an expanded UN Security Council. I also believe that almost all African countries have supported India for a permanent membership of the Council. So, again here too the objectives of both India and African countries are on all force.

The LoC process is an important process as part of our cooperation for infrastructural development in Africa. In the first forum summit we had made commitments which roughly translate to about a little over a billion dollars a year, and that this commitment was to begin sometime in 2009-10. We are on track. Our commitments today are around two billion dollars. I will not seek to anticipate what the summit would decide or what would be the key announcements of the summit. But I do think that the process of cooperation, the structure of cooperation that was concluded and finalized during the first summit will now be built upon in all respects - capacity-building, institutional development, cooperation in infrastructure.

Question: The India-Africa Summit comes after similar initiatives by Japan and China. Is this just a matter of following suit, or is it based on any concrete finding that this is the most effective way of dealing with Africa?

Secretary (West): Let me assure you that our relationship with Africa stands on its own. I also believe that both India and the African Union share the feeling that the engagement of India with Africa should be at these three levels - bilateral, regional and pan-African. I would also venture to suggest that India has always believed in a consultative process in our interaction and engagement with Africa, and the India-Africa Summit exercise is part of this consultative process. India is not engaged in competition in Africa with any other country. We are friends and we will continue to be friends and brothers. We have a historical relationship. We were engaged with Africa right from the beginning of our Independence and even before that. Africa has a very special place in our hearts. We can never forget that the father of our nation Mahatma Gandhi began his entire struggle, if you permit me to say, in a way for the liberation of man from the shackles of colonialism in the African continent. These are very special bonds and these are unbreakable bonds.

Question: Mr. Katju, you made two points when you were speaking initially. You said that during the Summit you referred to piracy. Now can you tell me specifically when India and Africa talked what can be done to help the Indian citizens who are being held by pirates? Can anything be done for them? That is my first question. The other point you mentioned related to terror. Again in the course of these discussions, can the issue of state terrorism of a country actually outlining or making it clear that there are certain targets in India which can be looked at, come up during the course of these discussions? Would you like to comment on these two issues please?

Secretary (West): Shrinjoy, I have always been a great admirer of your skill as a journalist, and I think your second question reflects that. So, I will refrain from going into specifics for obvious reasons. Let me say that terror is a global issue and when the leaders meet they will address the issue of terrorism because it is a global concern. Africa feels the adverse impact of terrorism, we feel, and the subject will be discussed.

Piracy, yes, of course piracy is a phenomenon which affects both Africa and India and the leaders will discuss aspects of piracy and ways and means of reducing and eliminating it. Once that process takes place, then our citizens who are held as hostage will benefit. If piracy reduces or is eliminated, then naturally it will be beneficial for us. And you, of course, know that within India structures have been set up in high-level Committees to address this issue.

Question: How do you consider the First India-Africa Summit? Do you consider it a success? If so, in what areas do you think you have achieved success from the First Summit of which our President was the Co-Chairman? Secondly, now that we four are about to go home - the day after tomorrow we will be leaving for Darussalam - what message do you think we can take from Delhi to Tanzania concerning the relationship between India and Tanzania?

Secretary (West): Our relations with Tanzania are constructive, they are positive, they are based on a tradition of consultation on issues which are of international concern, consultations also on regional issues. Today the goodwill that we have is sought to being translated into specific economic projects, development projects that will be mutually beneficial. But above all, please take back a message of friendship and goodwill from all of us in this room for the people of your great country.

As for your first question, let me say straight away that we think that the First Summit was an outstanding success. It created the structures on which we are now building, structures on which we are able to carry forward our great partnership.

Question: Mr. Katju, two questions. First, granted that Somalis has concerns about its sovereignty and the AU also has its strong view on this. But as you look at the problems that piracy is posing, the origins of these problems, the problems on land, are we looking at some stage in the future opening liaison office in Somali land as options? Second, there was a reference in the Obama-Manmohan statement last year to US and India doing things in Africa. Has anything come of that?

Secretary (West): As you are aware, we cover Somalia diplomatically from Nairobi. I think that coverage for the moment is effective. There are issues relating to piracy which have to be addressed in a comprehensive manner. And it is my conviction that the process of discussions that take place in Addis Ababa will be fruitful in this regard.

Yes, some work is being done as a follow-up of the announcements that were made during President Obama's visit to Delhi in regard to agriculture. I would not go into details but let me show you there has been follow-up and good follow-up. The two sides have been engaged in fleshing out the contours of cooperation in this regard along with concerned African countries that will be full participants in this process. Again, this is on the basis of consultation. I would add here that it is India's basic approach that our engagement with Africa has to be on the basis of consultation. That is why we have evolved the structure of a Joint Action Plan. We have decided that the institutions that we will set up will be through an engagement with Africa, and the locations of the institutions will be indicated to us by our African partners. This is a sure basis of ensuring the success of this partnership even if it is a little slow, because consultations as all of you will appreciate take a little time. But I am clear in my mind that this time is well spent on consultation.

Question: There have been some concerns of some observers that the Banjul Formula makes the India-Africa Summit a bit low key because it allows for limited representation, as compared to the summits of Africa and the other countries. What is your comment on that?

Secretary (West): I thought I have mentioned at some length about our approach, an approach that is rooted in respect for the other side. We will never seek to dictate who should represent Africa. It is for Africa to decide. At the moment African participation is on the basis of the Banjul Formula. If at some other stage this formula changes, we will be very happy to abide by the new thinking in Africa. Surely we cannot be held responsible for accepting the views of our interlocutors. You will appreciate that this is a wise basis of proceeding forward. I do not think that it is low key. I think the decisions that are taken at the summit apply to all Africa. They are not limited only to the countries or the participants. These are decisions which are of continental application. Second, there is a very significant bilateral component to our relationship. Our relationship with Tanzania for example is flourishing even though as you have noted on account of the Banjul formula Tanzania which had co-chaired the last summit will not be there this time. But that is a choice which Africa has made.

Official Spokesperson: I take it there are no more questions. Thank you very much.

490. Remarks by Secretary (West) Ministry of External Affairs at the inauguration of Indian Film Festival on the occasion of the Second India – Africa Forum Summit.

Addis Ababa, May 20, 2011.

Your Excellency Mr. Amin Abdulkadir, Minister of Culture and Tourism

Your Excellency Advocate Bience Philomina Gawanas, AU Commissioner of Social Affairs

Distinguished Guests

Ladies and Gentlemen

As part of concurrent events coinciding with the 2nd Africa India Forum Summit, we have organized a festival of popular Indian cinema in Addis Ababa. Over the decades, the Indian film industry has carved out a very special place in the hearts and minds of people in India and around the world and has created enduring levels between peoples.

Not many people know, perhaps, that within a couple of years, Indian cinema will be celebrating a century of its vibrant existence. In an era of 3-D films, it seems incredibly ancient that Raja Harishchandra, made in 1913, was actually a silent movie. 18 years later in 1931 Alam Aara came which became the first ‘sound’ movie.

These days, it is a very different story. India has overtaken Hollywood by a long margin to become the world’s largest producer of films. Each year sees the release of close to a thousand full-length feature films made in Hindi and over a dozen other Indian languages. The Mumbai-based Hindi cinema that is popularly known as Bollywood now has a global reach and in my travels around the world, I am constantly amazed by the affection that it enjoys in the most unexpected places... in Russia and Central Asia, in East and West Africa, in the Caribbean and now even in Europe and North America. It is also fascinating that each country or region seems to develop its own favourite pantheon of Indian film stars. If Amitabh Bachchan was the unchallenged super star in Egypt, it was Mithun Chakravarty with his Disco Dancer that was a rage in places ranging from Tanzania to Syria. In Indonesia, Shahrukh Khan is still the hottest star, while other places have developed a similar passion for one or the other.

3. Idiots, the film that we have selected for screening today, is a touching and sensitively made comedy and I am sure you will all enjoy it.

We hope that this and the 14 other films that are being screened over the next 7 days will entertain many of our friends in Addis Ababa and provide an important cultural dimension to the forthcoming summit

Thank you all for being here.

491. Statement by Secretary (West) in Ministry of External Affairs at the Inaugural Session of the Senior Officials’ Meeting of the Second India Africa Forum Summit.

Distinguished Colleague from Equatorial Guinea,

Excellency, Amb. John Shinkaiye,

Distinguished Heads of the Regional Economic Communities and NEPAD,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you all to this Senior Officials’ Meeting of the 2nd Africa India Forum Summit. We assemble here today in order to share our views on the current state of India-Africa relationship and put our efforts together to carve out new pathways towards enriching our partnership in the coming years.

Excellencies, India’s partnership with African countries rests on a firm historical foundation of shared struggle against colonialism and apartheid and an equally important struggle for the comprehensive development of our societies, economies and polities. Our association is marked by consultation, responsiveness and mutual appreciation of each other’s concerns. India and the African countries, through a deliberative mechanism spanning across several fora, have arrived at a model of cooperation where the selection of priority areas are being made in full consultation.

India’s vision for a partnership with Africa for the 21st Century goes beyond the already strong bilateral relationships and envisages closer cooperation with the African Regional Economic Communities (RECs) as well as the African Union. This paradigm of cooperation is premised on Africa’s own model for the development of Pan-African institutions and development programmes. The wide ranging cooperation and development partnerships between India and Africa encompasses, amongst others, the fields of human resources and institutional capacity building; science & technology; agricultural productivity & food security; industrial growth; development in the health sector; infrastructure development; and Information and Communication Technology.

The First India Africa Forum Summit held in New Delhi in April 2008 turned out to be a milestone event insofar that its outcomes became the guiding parameters of India’s deepening engagement with Africa. Excellencies, I am happy to share with you that the implementation of the announcements made during the First India Africa Forum Summit is going on in a satisfactory manner.

In March 2010, a Joint Action Plan, based on the India-Africa Framework for Cooperation, was announced. One of the highlights of the Joint Action Plan is the establishment of 19 capacity building institutions. The African Union has conveyed to us the locations of these institutions in December 2010. The concerned implementing agencies have already begun the preliminary process in consultation with our African partner countries and the preparation of Detailed Project Reports is underway. Several new training programmes for about 450 trainees have been completed during the last year. Further, both Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) training positions and Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) scholarships have been substantially enhanced. It is heartening to note the encouraging response that India’s offer of Special Agriculture Scholarships and C.V. Raman Scientific Fellowship has received and currently more than 150 scholars are benefitting from these schemes.

Out of US$5.4 billion of concessional lines of credit announced at the time of the First India Africa Forum Summit, nearly US$2 billion for projects in Africa have been committed. 19 Least Developed Countries in Africa are already availing the benefits of Duty Free Tariff Scheme (DFTS), which India announced during the last Summit.

Excellencies, as per the decision of our African partners, the Second Africa India Forum Summit is being organized in this beautiful city of Addis Ababa, the seat of the African Union. This meeting of the Senior Officials will be followed by Foreign Ministers’ Meeting on 23 May 2011 leading up to the Summit on 24-25 May 2011.

There have also been a series of events planned before or concurrently with the Summit. A meeting of the Trade Ministers of the India Africa Forum is being organized tomorrow. Earlier in the month, the First India Africa Academic Conference was held on 11-12 May 2011 which provided a platform to our respective intellectual communities to share views on several crucial issues. Some of the other events being organized over the next few days include a trade exhibition; a business conclave; interaction amongst Indian and African craftswomen; a multimedia exhibition; cultural performances showcasing fusion of Indian and African cultures; a festival of commercial Indian films; and India-Africa media partnership symposium. I hope you will have an opportunity to attend some of these events. At the conclusion of the Summit, we also intend to release a commemorative stamp and a coffee table book on India-Africa relations.

Excellencies, I would like to invite your attention to the two outcome documents-the Addis Ababa Declaration and the India Africa Framework for Enhanced Cooperation-that are to be issued at the end of the Summit. I am confident that through our consultations we would arrive at an agreement with regard to these documents so that they can be presented before our leaders for their consideration during the Foreign Ministers’ Meeting and the Summit.

Excellencies, with our rising global politico-economic profile, both India and Africa are justifiably expected to highlight the concerns of the developing world at various international fora. This shared responsibility calls for a synchronization of our views and response to a variety of global issues that may have a direct bearing on the development prospects of our peoples. It is in this context, Excellencies, that our interactions at the highest level acquire immense significance.

Excellencies, I thank you and look forward to participating in our discussions over the next two days.
Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister for Commerce & Industry, expressed hope that the ongoing ‘India Show’ will be a unique opportunity for the African businesses to deepen and strengthen existing ties and forge new linkages with Indian companies. Shri Sharma inaugurated India Show at Millennium Hall, Addis Ababa today. The theme of the show is “Africa & India: Partners in Progress – Friends Forever”. Shri Sharma is leading the Indian delegation as part of the build-up to the 2nd ‘Africa-India Forum Summit’ scheduled on 24-25th May, 2011. He also released a special publication entitled ‘India-Africa Business Guide’ during the Inaugural session of the India Show. Speaking on this occasion Shri Sharma said, “India has become one of the leading investors in African countries, with Indian investments in Africa in Joint Ventures and wholly owned subsidiaries touching US $ 33 billion mark, covering diverse sectors like Oil & Gas, Pharmaceuticals, Petrochemicals, IT, Fertilizers, Infrastructure, etc”. The large presence of Indian businesses at the Trade Exhibition would help African companies get a firsthand account of the business opportunities in India and interact with potential partners. The India Show inauguration was attended by Mr. Erastus Mwencha, Deputy Chairperson, Commission of the African Union and Mr. Bhagwant S. Bishnoi, Ambassador of India to Ethiopia. The Inaugural session was addressed by Mr. Erastus Mwencha, Deputy Chairperson, Commission of the African Union; Mr. Abdurahman Sheik Mohamed, Minister of Trade, Republic of Ethiopia; and Mr. Mekonen Manyazwal, Minister of Industry, Republic of Ethiopia.

In his Inaugural address, Shri Sharma noted that, “The economic partnership between India and Africa has taken giant leaps forward ever since the first India-Africa Forum Summit in 2008, with Bilateral Trade between India and Africa, which was at a meager US $ 3 billion at the turn of the century, crossing the US $ 46 billion mark last year”. He further mentioned that we are well on our way to achieve bilateral trade target of US $ 70 billion by 2015. The Commerce Minister reiterated that India will continue with its efforts to expand trade with the African countries through a special focus, including steps like the ‘Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme’ for certain countries in Africa to enable easier imports from them. The ‘India Show’, which would continue till the 22nd May, is only the second such Show in the African continent after the one held in South Africa last year in August at Johannesburg and Durban, and comprises of a mega ‘Trade Exhibition’, a ‘Business Seminar’, and a ‘Cultural Programme’. The large ‘Trade Exhibition’ at the Millennium Hall (20th-22nd May, 2011) showcases Indian technologies, innovations and business opportunities to the visitors by leading Indian companies. More than 80 Indian companies are displaying their products in the Trade Exhibition, ranging across sectors such as manufacturing, infrastructure, finance, IT, automotives, Pharmaceuticals, Services (Financial, Education, ICT, Skills Development & Tourism) and others. Shri Sharma is leading a 15-member high-level Indian CEOs delegation to Addis Ababa.

Later in the evening, Shri Sharma will also be inaugurating the ‘Handcrafting Hope’ and ‘Multimedia Exhibition’ in the presence of the first lady of Ethiopia, Ms. Azeb Mesfin, wife of Ethiopian Prime Minister, Mr. Meles Zenawi. ‘Handcrafting Hope’ is an interactive craft meet to facilitate skill-sharing and knowledge exchange between African and Indian craftspersons. 20 Indian craftswomen from India possessing varying skills will meet and interact with 30 of their counterparts from different African countries, including Ethiopia. The Multimedia Exhibition will be bringing together diverse cultures from India and Africa by showcasing through multimedia elements. The first ever academic symposium, “Africa & India: Partnership for Enhancing Development & Growth”; joint cultural performances by Indian and African artists, “Rhythm of Life”; a programme for interaction amongst Indian and African craftswomen; “From Tradition to Innovation”; a film festival showcasing the best of Indian commercial cinema, “Come, Fall in Love with the Magic of Bollywood”; and India Africa media partnership symposium “Building Bridges; a Business Conclave’ involving interaction of African and Indian Trade Ministers with CEOs of many leading companies of Africa and India will be showcasing the diverse and vivid culture of both the countries on the sidelines of the summit.

It is an honour to be with friends of the media this morning, May I begin with offering a few thoughts?

By bringing together leading media personalities of India and Africa, this Symposium fills a critical gap in our interactive processes. I believe that such direct contacts will prove vastly beneficial in fostering a greater understanding of each other.

We know a lot about each other. Our contacts are rooted in history and have been nourished by common and successful struggles against colonialism and apartheid. There has been a long tradition of direct interaction between and leaderships of India and Africa. However, there has been a paucity of such contact in many other areas including academics and the world of the media. This has led to a certain element of our knowledge of each other coming to us through third quarters. This must change. A few days ago, Indian and African academics got together in this city to explore more about what we need to do in India and Africa to foster greater academic contact. I feel that this Symposium would help to establish direct contacts between our media leading to partnerships which would significantly contribute to the addition in our knowledge of each other in all dimensions.

In the past, the cooperation between India and Africa was vital to defeat the forces of colonialism. Today India and Africa are engaged in equally important struggle, the struggle to eliminate poverty and uplift our people. The real challenge before our societies, economies and polities is to make our peoples fully equipped to deal with the demands of the modern post-industrial world so that they are able to live lives of dignity, respect and prosperity in the knowledge age. Here too the media in India Africa has a vital role to play for technology has made its reach greater than ever before. Thus, there is great responsibility cast on the media and your cooperation through a focus on the important and enduring, as you see it, can enhance the quality of life for our peoples.

The India-Africa partnership is unique in its comprehensive engagement at the bilateral, regional and continental levels. In this process, we are adhering to the objectives of integration at regional and Pan-African levels which Africa has set for itself. Our engagement is also wide ranging in the areas it seeks to cover in the development process, infrastructure, capacity building, human resource development, the establishment of academic institutions, agriculture, and the services area among others. I hope that the distinguished members of the media present here would convey to their respective audiences what India and Africa through their cooperation are trying to achieve holistically for their peoples.

We have an ambitious partnership. Our goals and objectives are high. We are searching new pathways even while consolidating areas where we have made progress. The First Africa India Forum Summit in Delhi laid the foundations and now at this Summit the leaders of India and Africa will chart out the course that we will follow in the next few years to achieve our objectives.

Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh will arrive two days from now to co-chair the Summit with the President of Equatorial Guinea who is the Chairman of the African Union. The proceedings of the Summit will, no doubt, reflect the consultative and deliberative approaches that are the very basis of the India-Africa partnership.

494. Statement by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the Foreign Ministers’ Meeting of the 2nd Africa-India Forum Summit.

Distinguished Foreign Ministers,

Distinguished Chairperson of the African Union Commission,

Distinguished representatives of the Regional Economic Communities and NEPAD,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you all to this Foreign Ministers’ Meeting of the 2nd Africa India Forum Summit. We meet here today in this beautiful city to deliberate upon the current state of our partnership and to chart out the way ahead in taking this exemplary association to still greater heights.

2. Excellencies, I am glad to note that India’s partnership with Africa is marked by a frank and open consultative mechanism wherein we meet as partners who not just highlight their needs and expectations but bring forth historical goodwill and empathy. We fully appreciate each other’s abilities as well as constraints.

3. We met in New Delhi three years ago during the First India Africa Forum Summit, a landmark event which re-defined the contours of India-Africa relations. The Summit provided us with a design of a three-tiered cooperation at the Pan African, the regional as well as the bilateral levels. The implementation of various announcements made under the rubric of India Africa Framework of Cooperation should indeed be a matter of utmost satisfaction for all of us.

4. A Joint Action Plan, based on the India-Africa Framework for Cooperation, was announced in March 2010. One of the highlights of the Joint Action Plan is the establishment of 19 capacity building institutions. The African Union has conveyed to us the locations of these institutions in December 2010. The concerned implementing agencies have already begun the preliminary process and preparation of Detailed Project Reports is underway. Several new training programmes for about 450 trainees have been completed during the last year. Further, Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) training positions were increased and Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) scholarships have also been doubled. The response to our offer for Special Agriculture Scholarship and C.V. Raman Scientific Fellowship has been very encouraging and currently more than 150 scholars are benefitting from these.

5. Out of US$5.4 billion, in concessional lines of credit, announced at the time of the last Summit, nearly US$2 billion for projects in Africa have been committed. 19 Least Developed Countries in Africa are already availing the benefits of Duty Free Tariff Preference (DFTP) Scheme, which India announced unilaterally during the last Summit. We are satisfied with the steady progress of implementation of the commitments made in the first India-Africa Forum Summit and these are being constantly monitored.

6. Excellencies, our Senior Officials have met here in Addis Ababa over the last few days. The Officials have expended sincere efforts in drafting the outcome documents for the 2nd Africa India Forum Summit. The two documents, Addis Ababa Declaration and India Africa Framework for Enhanced Cooperation, reflect our traditional consultative and consensual approach towards issues of mutual interest. Excellencies, we, the Foreign Ministers of the India Africa Forum, may accord our agreement to these documents so that they can be placed before our leaders for their consideration when they meet tomorrow for the Summit.
7. Excellencies, the Trade Ministers of the India-Africa Forum met on 21 May 2011 and I am optimistic that their deliberations would add further momentum to trade and commercial exchanges between India and her African partners.

8. Excellencies, I would also like to share with you that a series of events have been organized concurrently with this 2nd Africa India Forum Summit. These events include academic and media symposia, trade exhibition, cultural performances, interaction between Indian and African craftswomen, film festival etc. Some of you might have had the opportunity to attend some of these events. I would also like to take this opportunity to place before this august gathering the two Reports that have emerged from the India-Africa Academic Symposium and the India-Africa Media Partnership Symposium.

9. Excellencies, we intend to continue and further enrich our development cooperation with our African partners. In this regard, I am glad to inform that we would be signing today Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) to establish fourteen (14) capacity-building institutions in various member states of the African union.

10. Excellencies, we meet today in the context of a rapidly changing world. Both India and her African partners need to work towards carving our rightful places in the emerging global order. India’s economic progress and Africa’s robust resurgence in recent years need to be channelized towards this end. I am extremely hopeful that our interactions during this Summit and over the coming years will be guided by the realization of this historical responsibility.

11. Excellencies, I thank you and look forward to participating in today’s discussions.

Distinguished Heads of State and Government,
Distinguished Chairperson of the African Union Commission,
Distinguished Ministers,
Distinguished representatives of the Regional Economic Communities and NEPAD, Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

1. I am delighted to be here today in Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia and the Headquarters of the African Union.
2. I bring to Africa fraternal greetings from the people of India.
3. This is a historic gathering. It is the first time that the leaders of India and Africa are meeting on such a scale on African soil.
4. I would specially like to greet those leaders who are participating in the Africa India Forum Summit process for the first time and were not with us in New Delhi in 2008.
5. The India-Africa partnership is unique and owes its origins to history and our common struggle against colonialism, apartheid, poverty, disease, illiteracy and hunger.
6. India will never forget Africa’s role in inspiring our own struggle for national liberation. It was here that Mahatma Gandhi developed his political philosophy and developed the concepts of non-violence and peaceful resistance.
7. At the first India-Africa Forum Summit in 2008 in New Delhi we decided to make a new beginning. We drew courage from our togetherness and inspiration from our conviction that a robust and contemporary India-Africa partnership is an idea whose time has come.
8. Our officials and Ministers have worked hard for our second Summit in Ethiopia. Many events involving a wide cross-section of society, include trade and business, have been held. These events have contributed to making the second Africa-India Forum Summit a people’s movement.
9. I believe we have reason to be satisfied with what we have achieved since 2008. But our people expect much more and we have to work hard to deliver on these expectations.

10. The current international economic and political situation is far from favourable, particularly for developing countries. Even as the global economy is recovering from the economic crisis, fresh political upheavals are taking place. The world faces new challenges in assuring food and energy security. Global institutions of governance are outmoded and under stress.

11. We therefore need a new spirit of solidarity among developing countries. We must recognise that in this globalised age we all live interconnected lives in a small and fragile planet. We must work together to uplift the lives of our people in a manner that preserves the sustainability of our common air, land and water.

12. There is a new economic growth story emerging from Africa. Africa possesses all the prerequisites to become a major growth pole of the world. There is good news in the struggle against HIV and AIDS, as well as in improving literacy, reducing infant mortality and building institutions of representative government.

13. India will work with Africa to realise its vast potential. We believe that a new vision is required for Africa’s development and participation in global affairs. We do not have all the answers but we have some experience in nation building which we are happy to share with our African brothers and sisters.

14. It is in this spirit that I wish to outline some initiatives for the consideration of our African partners. These will enhance our development partnership which are founded on the pillars of mutual equality and common benefit.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

15. We will offer 5 billion US dollars for the next three years under lines of credit to help Africa achieve its development goals. We will offer an additional 700 million US dollars to establish new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions.

16. Under the lines of credit that we offered at the first Summit, we had specifically looked at promoting regional integration through infrastructure development. On the advice of the African Union, I am happy to announce that we would support the development of a new Ethio-Djibouti Railway line to the tune of 300 million US dollars.

17. Following the success of the Pan-African E-Network Project we propose to take the next step and establish an India-Africa Virtual University. This we hope will help to meet some of the demand in Africa for higher studies in Indian institutions. We further propose that 10,000 new scholarships under this proposed University will be available for African students after its establishment.

18. We would like to make education in India an enriching experience for each student who comes from Africa. We are substantially raising the number of scholarships and training slots for African students and experts, including under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme. Our total commitment for the next three years by way of scholarships to Africa students will stand at more than 22,000.

19. At the first Summit in 2008, we had focused on capacity building in the human resource development sector. We believe it would be logical to consolidate this approach. I wish to propose the establishment of the following new institutions at the pan African level:

- An India-Africa Food Processing Cluster - This would contribute to value-addition and the creation of regional and export markets;

- An India-Africa Integrated Textiles Cluster - This will support the cotton industry and its processing and conversion into high value products;

- An India-Africa Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting - This will harness satellite technology for the agriculture and fisheries sectors as well as contribute towards disaster preparedness and management of natural resources;

We have received a request to support the establishment of an India-Africa University for Life and Earth Sciences. We would be happy to support this important venture; and finally,

- An India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development.

20. One of the biggest gaps in our interaction is that of insufficient air connectivity. We should accord this high priority. To begin with, India would be happy to increase the access of African airlines to Indian cities in a significant manner over the next three years.

21. Africa has strong regional organisations which play an important role in supporting development activities. We will therefore work with Regional Economic Communities to establish at the regional level, Soil, Water and Tissue Testing Laboratories, Regional Farm Science Centres, Seed Production-cum-Demonstration Centres, and Material Testing Laboratories for Highways.

22. At the bilateral level, we propose to establish institutes for English language training, information technology, entrepreneurship development and vocational training. As part of our new initiatives in the social and economic sectors we will establish Rural Technology Parks, Food Testing Laboratories, Food Processing Business Incubation Centres and Centres on Geo-Informatics Applications and Rural Development.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

23. We should encourage trade and investment flows as well as transfer of technology. The private sectors should be fully involved in the efforts to integrate our economies. I propose that we establish an India-Africa Business Council which will bring together business leaders from both sides.

24. India has consistently supported the development of African capacities in the maintenance of peace and security. As a token of our commitment to supporting Africa’s endeavours for seeking African solutions I am happy to announce that India will contribute 2 million US dollars for the African Union Mission in Somalia.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

25. Today, the people of Africa and India stand at the threshold of a historic opportunity. Our nations span the diversity of the human condition. We account for the whole range of linguistic, religious and ethnic diversity in the world. Our success in making open, tolerant and rule based societies flourish in conditions of relative underdevelopment will have a profound effect on the future of the world.

26. Tomorrow the people of Africa will celebrate Africa Day. I am delighted to be present in Africa on this very auspicious occasion, and extend my heartiest congratulations to this great Continent.

27. In conclusion I wish to convey my deepest gratitude to the people and government of Ethiopia for hosting us in this beautiful city. I also thank the African Union Commission for the excellent arrangements made for the Summit.

I thank you.
496. Opening remarks by Prime Minister at the Joint Press Conference following the conclusion of the Second Africa India Forum Summit

Addis Ababa, May 25, 2011

Thank you for your warm words of welcome.

I begin by conveying our best wishes to the people and governments of Africa on Africa Day. It is an important day signifying their unity for peace and development and it is befitting that the Second Africa-India Forum Summit should coincide with Africa Day.

We have just concluded the Summit between the member countries of the African Union as well as the Regional Economic Communities of Africa and India. As you know, participation at the Summit was based on the “Banjul formula” of the African Union. The Summit builds upon the foundation that was laid at our first Summit in New Delhi in 2008.

I am happy to inform you that our discussions during the last two days were marked by great warmth, cordiality and friendship.

The Summit has adopted the Addis Ababa Declaration and the Africa-India Framework for Enhanced Cooperation. These are extremely broad ranging and comprehensive documents. They envisage not only economic and political cooperation, but also cooperation in science, technology, research and development, social development and capacity building, health, culture and sports, tourism, infrastructure, energy and environment and media and communications.

All in all, we have a large canvass before us, and I am extremely optimistic about the future of our cooperation.

The similarity of our development experiences and circumstances has made India – Africa cooperation a genuine two-way street. This is its true strength and its distinctive feature.

In accordance with Africa’s own priorities, we have decided to significantly enhance support for institutional capacity building, technical assistance and training programmes for human resource development in Africa. The flagship Pan African e-Network Project is functional in 43 countries and is still expanding.

We have made a quantum jump in the areas of training and scholarships in our ITEC Programme which has acquired a sound reputation across Africa. Our total commitment for the next three years by way of scholarships and training slots to Africa students will stand at more than 22,000.
In consultation with African Union we will establish over 80 new institutions at the Pan-African, regional and bilateral levels in sectors such as agriculture, rural development, food processing, soil, water testing laboratories, integrated textile cluster, weather forecasting, life and earth science, information technology, vocational training, English language centers, entrepreneurial development institutes.

The consolidation of our financial assistance consisting of grants and lines of credit into a cohesive plan has begun to show results in projects of interest to Africa. Our total commitment over the next three years is expected to be 5.7 billion US dollars to help Africa achieve its development goals.

Our annual trade with Africa is about 46 billion US dollars, and growing. Measures to open the Indian market to African exports, including the Duty-Free Tariff Preference Scheme, are bearing fruit.

During the Summit and the Retreat we also discussed the regional and global economic and political situation. Africa’s efforts to find solutions within its own region will receive India’s full support. Both India and Africa recognise that the world is going through a period of change and therefore close coordination on political and related issues has become necessary and is beneficial to both sides.

I am fully satisfied with the Summit outcomes. We now have to move to the phase of implementation and delivery so that our people can see the results themselves. We will keep the question of implementation under close and constant review.

The African continent today is on the path of resurgence. We deeply value our friendship with African countries as well as the trust and confidence which our African partners have reposed in us.

I will conclude by thanking my colleagues from Africa for their active and meaningful participation in the Summit. I specially thank the Government and people of Ethiopia for their excellent hospitality, and the African Union Commission for their stellar role in making this Summit a grand success.

Thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Addis Ababa Declaration adopted at the Second India – Africa Forum Summit- 2011.

1. We, the Heads of State and Government and Heads of Delegation representing the Continent of Africa, the African Union (AU) and its Institutions, and the Prime Minister of the Republic of India, have met in Addis Ababa, Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia, from 24 to 25 May 2011, to continue our dialogue, deepen our friendship and enhance our cooperation, under the theme: Enhancing Partnership: Shared Vision.

2. We recall the Delhi Declaration adopted during our First Summit in New Delhi in April 2008 and the Framework of Cooperation and the associated Plan agreed upon thereafter as providing a concrete foundation for the consolidation of our strategic partnership and also reviewed the progress made in this regard since the First Summit. We also recall that Africa and India have been fraternal partners and allies in the struggle for independence and achievement of self-determination. We reaffirm that our partnership remains based on the fundamental principles of equality, mutual respect, mutual benefit and the historical understanding amongst our peoples.

3. We further agree that this partnership will continue to be guided by the principles of respect for the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of States; commitment to deepen the process of African integration, dialogue among our civilizations to promote a culture of peace, tolerance and respect for religious, cultural and human rights, as well as gender equality, with a view to strengthening the trust and understanding between our peoples; recognition of diversity and levels of development between and within regions; collective action and cooperation for the common good of our States and peoples and our desire to nurture harmonious development in our plural, multi-cultural and multi-ethnic societies through the consolidation and development of our plural democracy.

4. We welcome the continuing transformation of the political, economic and social environment in Africa. Economic growth in Africa has revived to levels that existed before the financial crisis and many African counties are progressing rapidly, opening greater avenues for economic cooperation. Similarly, India’s economy continues to develop into one of the world’s growth nodes and has withstood the impact of the global recession well. Both Africa and India have young, dynamic populations with great expectations, dive and initiative. We recognize that their aspirations and vigour provide a concrete basis for expanding the frontiers of this partnership as an agenda for development, Africa and India therefore, have today a good platform to expand our partnership for development on the basis of these fundamentals.

5. We have thus decided to enhance our partnership with new initiatives for the mutual benefit of Africa and India. In recent years, this has included substantial financial flows from India to Africa in terms of grants, Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) and concessional loans that continue to contribute to capacity building in the socio-economic sectors, particularly in the human resource development, the development of the private sector, increasing support to infrastructure, agriculture and SMEs, leading to a substantial expansion of Indian investment in Africa and of trade between Africa and India. We agree, to build upon this by assisting each other to achieve inclusive growth, socio-economic development and self-reliance. Areas for such cooperation will include sharing strategies for sustainable development, poverty alleviation, healthcare and universal education, and sharing appropriate technologies. These new avenues for cooperation will enable us to add strategic depth to our partnership.

6. Our partnership enhances our ability to work together and address the global challenges of our times. In addressing these challenges, Africa and India continue to reiterate their intention to ensure that the interests of developing counties are safeguarded and that socio-economic development requirements of our various counties are guaranteed.

7. We urge the developed counties to take ambitious actions to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions and also provide adequate financing and transfer of technology to support developing counties efforts to effectively address the impact of climate change. We reaffirm the importance of reaching an agreement on a second commitment period under the Kyoto Protocol as an indispensable step to preserve the integrity of the international climate change regime. We stress the importance of the Bali Action Plan of 2007 worked out under the aegis of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) in this regard. We notice the positive aspects of the Cancun Conference Climate Change negotiations in December 2010 and appeal to the developed counties to operationalise all the institutional arrangements included in the Cancun decisions. We express our firm commitment to a balanced outcome from the climate change negotiations which are commensurate with the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibilities on the basis of respective capabilities, in the process of COP17 which will be held in Durban, South Africa.

8. We take note of the African common position on Climate Change and support efforts towards combating drought and desertification in Africa, as well as support for Africa’s Great Green Wall Project.
9. We affirm the critical importance of South-South cooperation as an instrument that can effectively supplement existing international efforts and lead to tangible and real benefits for developing countries. We stress that South-South Cooperation should be a supplement to North-South Cooperation and not a substitute for it. We recognize that significant diversity prevails among individual countries in Africa, about thirty three (33) of which are listed among the Least Developed Countries. Collectively, these counties confront some of the most persistent, pervasive and complex development challenges. Accordingly, we will explore new and innovative ways to supplement the mainstream effort to assist these developing counties and look for out-of-the-box solutions.

10. We remain concerned with the recurrent trend of increasing global crisis that are of economic nature, such as the global food, energy and financial crisis. While recognizing the current economic recovery, we are still concerned with its sustainability. We underline the importance of supporting stable, long-term capital flows to developing counties to simulate investment, especially in infrastructure. This will help enhance global demand, thus securing the long-term sustainability of the recovery and address developmental imbalances.

11. We urge major economies to work together and enhance macro-economic policy coordination. In this context, we acknowledge the G20 process as an important forum for international economic cooperation, and request fair representation of Africa in the evolving architecture of decision-making process in the global economic system.

12. We reiterate the importance of the UN Millennium Declaration and the need to achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). We reaffirm our commitment to achieving the MDGs by 2015, including through technical cooperation and financial support. Sustainable development models and unique paths of development in developing counties should be respected, including by guaranteeing the policy space of developing countries. We urge that aid commitments for developing counties must be fulfilled and that development assistance should not be reduced. We urge the developed counties to fulfill their obligations of achieving the target of 0.7% GNI as official development assistance (ODA) to developing countries. We also support African economic programmes within the context of Programme for Infrastructure Development in Africa (PIDA), New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD), and Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme (CAADP).

13. We underscore the need for a comprehensive and balanced outcome of the Doha Round, in a manner that gives weight to its mandate as a “development round”, based on progress already made. We reiterate the need for continuing solidarity between developing countries in this regard. We affirm the importance of ensuring that an acceptable agreement adequately protects the concerns of developing countries with regard to livelihood, food security and rural development. Equally, concerns need to be addressed on Non-Agricultural Market Access (NAMA) services and rules. We urge all parties to oppose all forms of protectionism and trade distorting domestic support. We remain concerned that no significant progress has been achieved in key issues of interest to developing countries including India and those of Africa and therefore call, once more, on key players in the Doha Round to give priority to resolving all issues of critical concern to developing counties, especially regarding negotiation on agriculture.

14. We affirm our commitment to multilateralism and to strengthening the democratic structure of the United Nations (UN) to increase the participation of developing counties in decision-making processes. We emphasize the need for enhanced Africa-India cooperation at the UN, the G-77 and other multilateral fora, to foster common purpose in addressing areas of mutual concern. In the context of issues relating to international peace and security, we commend efforts made by the African Union Peace and Security Council in maintaining peace in Africa. Africa recalls, with appreciation, India’s principled support to and continuing involvement with UN peacekeeping operations, especially in the African continent, India appreciates the role of African counties in maintaining peace and security in the Continent and their participation in peace keeping missions in other parts of the world. It also commends Africa on its development of the African Standby Force, which will enhance the continent’s capacity to maintain peace and security.

15. We take note of UN Security Council resolutions 1970 and 1973 on Libya and stress that efforts to implement them should be within the spirit and letter of those resolutions. In this regard, we call for an immediate cessation of all hostilities in Libya and urge the parties in the conflict to strive towards a political solution through peaceful means and dialogue. We express support for the African Union High-Level Ad Hoc Committee initiative and the African Union roadmap for the peaceful and consensual resolution of the conflict.

16. Based on the strong partnership between Africa and India on international issues relating to peace and security, Africa welcomes India’s election to a non-permanent seat in the UN Security Council for the years 2011-2012. India expresses its appreciation for the support of African States in this election in October 2010. The African members of the UN Security Council and India affirm their commitment to coordinate closely during India’s tenure in the Council.

17. In this context, we underscore the imperative of urgent and comprehensive reform of the UN system. We share the view that the UN should function in a transparent, efficient and effective manner and that the composition of its central organs must reflect contemporary realities. The expansion of the UN Security Council, in permanent and non-permanent categories of membership, with increased participation of developing counties in both categories, is central to the process of reform and for enhancing the credibility of the United Nations,

18. India notes the common African position and the aspirations of the African counties to get their rightful place in an expanded UN Security Council as new permanent members with full rights as contained in the Ezulwini Consensus. Africa takes note of India’s position and its aspirations to become a permanent member with full rights in an expanded UN Security Council. We emphasize the need for Member States to exert utmost effort on the United Nations Security Council reform during the current session of the United Nations General Assembly.

19. We recognize that the security of all nations would be enhanced by a global, non-discriminatory and verifiable elimination of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction. We reaffirm our commitment to the consensus in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations on Disarmament, which accorded priority to nuclear disarmament. We also express support for an International Convention Prohibiting the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Nuclear Weapons, leading to their destruction. We call for negotiating specific steps to reduce and finally eliminate nuclear weapons, leading to a world free from all weapons of mass destruction as envisaged in the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan of 1988. We also look forward to the commencement of negotiations on the Treaty Banning the Production of Fissile Material for Nuclear Weapons and Other Nuclear Explosive Devices in the Conference on Disarmament.

20. We welcome the entry into force in July 2009, of the Africa Nuclear Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (the Pelindaba Treaty) of 1995 and the efforts towards the operationalisation of the African Commission on Nuclear Energy (ACNE) in November 2010, which, among others, will promote the peaceful application of nuclear energy and technology within Member States.

21. We stress the importance of addressing the threat posed by illicit trafficking of small arms and light weapons through full implementation of the UN Programme of Action on SALWs and welcome the African Union’s efforts towards that end.

22. We unequivocally condemn terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. An act of terrorism anywhere is a threat to the entire international community. We recognize the need to further strengthen international cooperation to combat global terrorism and for compliance of all member states with all international terrorism conventions and related protocols and UN Security Council resolutions on counter-terrorism. We call on all States to cooperate with each other in prosecuting, extraditing and rendering legal assistance with regard to acts of international terrorism. In this connection, we deplore the tragic losses arising from terrorist attacks and call for the active prosecution of the authors of such crimes and their accomplices, and urge that they be brought to justice expeditiously. We further call on all counties to ensure that acts of cross-border terrorism do not occur, and that their territories are not made a base for terrorists. We strongly condemn kidnapping and hostage taking as well as the demands for ransom and political concessions by terrorist groups. We express serious concern at the increase in such incidents. Taking note of the African position on the condemnation of the payment of ransom to terrorist groups, we call for the urgent need to address this issue. We also agree to work to expeditiously finalize and adopt, a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism at the UN. We underscore the need to strengthen the implementation of AU mechanisms to prevent and combat terrorism.

23. We further stress the importance of addressing the threat posed by piracy off the Coast of Somalia and suffering caused by taking of hostages, and call on all States to cooperate in combating and eradicating the menace of piracy. In this context, Africa welcomes India’s support to efforts to safeguard shipping in the Gulf of Aden, Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean from piracy.

24. We also pledge to work to eradicate drug trafficking, trafficking in human beings, especially women and children, organized crime and money laundering. In this regard, we call on all States to ratify and implement all relevant International Instruments relating to these crimes.

25. We have reviewed, with satisfaction, the progress made in the implementation of the Africa-India Framework of Cooperation and note in this regard, the four-year Plan of Action adopted in March 2010. Work is moving apace on the various elements of this Plan of Action, including the establishment of 21 capacity-building institutions in various countries of Africa. India is committed to substantially contribute to building African capacities through supporting education and capacity building institutions and in enhancing value addition and processing of raw materials in Africa. India appreciates the Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme offered by India and believes it has the potential to increase African exports to India.

26. We stress that cooperation between Africa and India, as emerging from the First Africa-India Forum Summit, has been a true manifestation of South-South Cooperation. Our Endeavour to find new ways of energizing our partnership by taking into account the emerging capabilities in Africa and India has found sustenance in the implementation of the Action Plan of our Framework of Cooperation. We deeply appreciate the implementation of the initiatives that Africa and India took since the first India - Africa Forum Summit in April 2008, in New Delhi. We also laud the further initiatives that have been announced by the Prime Minister of India at the Second Africa-India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa in May 2011. India, on the other hand, welcomes the new spirit of association that has facilitated these initiatives.

27. Our Agreement that Africa and India will go beyond bilateral linkages to strengthen partnerships with the African Union and the Regional Economic Communities of Africa, have borne fruit. The level of interaction between India and the African Union has increased manifold, particularly with the implementation of new AIFS initiatives after the success of the Pan- African e-Network Project. The relationships with the Regional Economic Communities have also been strengthened and India’s initiative to invite Africa’s Regional Economic Communities for a meeting in November 2010 was appreciated. The multi-tiered functional engagement which India has with Africa is a model for multilateral engagements around the world.

28. We also welcome the positive results of efforts to promote trade and investment, human resource development and infrastructure development in Africa. We commit ourselves to involving the private sector and civil society in Africa and India to widen the scope of our partnership.

29. We note with satisfaction that Trade Ministers from African counties and India met on 21 May, 2011 in Addis Ababa and take note of the Joint Statement issued by the Trade Ministers and lend our support to the ideas enunciated therein as indicators of our future cooperation. We appreciate that the Ministers had an in-depth discussion on the economic engagement between Africa and India, including the Duty Free Tariff Preference Scheme of India, cluster development initiatives and the identification of priority sectors of partnership. We also note with satisfaction the initiatives taken by the Trade Ministers in the establishment of Trade and Investment linkages between India and Africa and welcome the constitution of the India-Africa Business Council as well as the constitution of the annual India-Africa Trade Ministers’ Dialogue. We acknowledge the common platform shared by India and Africa in the WTO Doha Round and reiterate the core principles of Special and Differential (S&D) Treatment and obtaining more preferential treatment for all LDCs.

30. We recognize that this Second Africa-India Forum Summit will help to realize our common vision of a self-reliant and economically vibrant Africa and India. We are committed to work together towards a peaceful and more egalitarian international order, where the voices of Africa and India can be heard to pursue their desire for inclusive development, both internationally and domestically. Africa is determined to partner in India’s economic resurgence as India is committed to be a close partner in Africa’s renaissance.

31. We agree to add further substance to our Framework of Cooperation and to broaden exchanges to cover all facets of our relationship. We adopt, in this context, the Africa-India Framework for Enhanced Cooperation to supplement the existing Framework. We agree to institutionalize this Summit process. Accordingly, we agree that the next India - Africa Forum Summit will be held in 2014 in India.

32. The Prime Minister of India expresses his appreciation to the African Union Commission for hosting the Summit and to the Government and people of the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia for the hospitality extended to his delegation and to all participating leaders. The African leaders also express their appreciation to the Prime Minister of India for his participation.

COMOROS

498A. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Additional Secretary Gurjit Singh to Comoros.

New Delhi, October 8, 2011.

Additional Secretary (Africa) Gurjit Singh (ASA) , paid an official visit to the Union of Comoros from October 4-6, 2011. This was the first visit by an Indian official to Comoros and came after the enhanced cooperation with Africa announced at the 2nd IAFS in May 2011.

During his visit, ASA called on President Dr. Ikililou Dhoinine and other leaders. He offered an additional soft loan of US $ 35 million for developmental projects to be chosen by Comoros. This is in addition to the earlier offer of US $ 41.6 Million for an 18 MW power project in Moroni. India has also offered to set up a Vocational Training Centre in Moroni to impart skills in plumbing, welding, electrical, civil works and IT to Comorians as soon as a site was finalized. In response to a Comorian request for support in solar energy he expressed India’s readiness to train Comorian women in the field of solar engineering in the Barefoot College of India under ITEC.

ASA conveyed India’s appreciation for the valuable support of Comoros for India’s non-permanent seat at the UNSC and also for the continued support for India’s bid for a permanent membership of the UNSC.

President Dhoinine expressed his deep appreciation of India’s assistance for the development of Comoros. He said that the loan of US $ 35 million could be utilized for generating power in three islands of Comoros, which were suffering from serious energy crisis. He was also pleased at the setting up of the Pan-African e-Network for Tele-medicine, Tele-education and VVIP by India, as well as, invitations to Comorian for training program in various fields in India. He described India as a steadfast friend of Comoros.

EGYPT

499. Developments in Egypt.

Concern expressed by India at developments in Egypt.

January 30, 2011

"We are closely following with concern, the developments in Egypt. India has traditionally enjoyed close and friendly relations. We hope for an early and peaceful resolution of the situation without further violence and loss of lives."

New Delhi

**************

On February 1 India expressed the hope for peaceful resolution of Egypt situation.

February 01, 2011.

India continues to closely follow the mass protests in Egypt which are an articulation of the aspirations of the Egyptian people for reform. It is hoped that the current situation will be resolved in a peaceful manner, in the best interests of the people of Egypt. India wishes that Egypt, a fellow developing country with which she enjoys close and traditional ties, will continue to be a strong and stable nation, contributing to peace and prosperity in the region.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Indian concern was the outcome of mass demonstrations in Cairo which were the "articulation of the aspirations of the Egyptian people for reform". They called for ouster of President Hosni Mubarak and introduction of democratic reforms.

Meanwhile External Affairs Minister commenting on the developments said: "The people of Egypt are fairly clear in their thinking and in their action and those who are ruling Egypt must see the writing on the wall." Minister S.M. Krishna had said this in an interview to TV channel 'Headlines Today.' "It will be in the larger interest of the region and in the larger interest of our bilateral relationship that power is taken over by a sane, rationalist, pluralistic leadership which will be of benefit to the people of Egypt and our bilateral relationship," Mr. Krishna said in reply to a question.
500. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna’s Statement on stepping down of President Mubarak of the United Arab Republic.

New Delhi, February 11, 2011.

We welcome the decision of President Mubarak to step down in deference to the wishes of the people of Egypt. We also welcome the commitment of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces to ensure a peaceful transition of power in a time bound manner to establish an open and democratic framework of governance. We are proud of our traditionally close relations with the people of Egypt and wish them peace, stability and prosperity.

The statement of Mr. Krishna came in the wake of relentless demonstrations by the people demanding introduction of democratic order and institutions in the country and resignation of President Mubarak.

New Delhi, May 30, 2011.

We are delighted to host the Foreign Minister of Egypt, H.E Dr. Nabil El Araby on his first bilateral visit to Asia.

Foreign Minister El Araby is not new to India and has distinguished himself as the Ambassador of Egypt in India 30 years ago.

I am happy to inform you that our discussions today were marked by great warmth and cordiality which is reflective of our close ties and friendship.

Our discussions included the entire gamut of bilateral relations, including our economic engagement with Egypt. While our bilateral trade is around US$ 3 billion, there are 45 Indian companies operating in Egypt with an investment of US$ 2.5 billion. We have both agreed that there exists immense potential to enhance our economic relations and that we would jointly work towards it.

In the context of intensification of our ties with Africa and with the recent conclusion of the second edition of the India-Africa Forum Summit, we discussed issues related to cooperation in the field of information technology, satellite connectivity, tele-medicine, etc. I am optimistic about our continued cooperation in the future.

Foreign Minister El Araby informed me of the changes that are taking place in the Arab world, including in Egypt and the next steps that his Government is planning to take. I reiterate that India is ready to extend all possible cooperation.

Our discussion also covered regional and international issues and, in particular, the Palestinian issue, the Middle-East Peace Process and the recent Fatah-Hamas reconciliation in which Egypt played a major role. We have agreed to continue our discussions utilising bilateral mechanisms such as the Foreign Office Consultations and the Joint Commission.

I conveyed our thanks and appreciation to Egypt for its assistance in evacuation of Indians from Libya. This assistance was vital for ‘safe homecoming’ of more than 16,000 Indians from Libya.

I also availed of the opportunity to discuss issues related to Arab League, as Foreign Minister El Araby would shortly be assuming the office of Secretary General of Arab League and those related to the NAM Ministerial meeting in Bali last week which was chaired by him.

ERITREA

New Delhi, June 8, 2011.

H.E. Mr. Osman Saleh, Foreign Minister of Eritrea, paid an official visit to India from 6-8 June 2011 and called on Hon’ble Minister of State, Smt. Preneet Kaur on 7th June 2011. This was the first visit of any African Minister after the successful conclusion of the 2nd Africa India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa on 24-25th May 2011.

The Foreign Minister of Eritrea welcomed India’s reemergence as a major economic, political and technological power. He also commended India’s institutionalized engagement with African partners through the consensual, consultative and responsive mechanism put in place under the rubric of India Africa Forum Summit. H.E. Mr. Osman Saleh expressed hope for a sustained political and diplomatic engagement between India and Africa at various global fora, including UNSC, for mutual benefit.

The Foreign Minister of Eritrea offered unqualified support for India’s candidature for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council, as India deserved this. H.E. Mr. Osman Saleh also visited India in February 2011 to attend the LDCs Conference and called on the Minister of External Affairs.

India and Eritrea enjoy warm and cordial relations in political, commercial, education and other areas. The overall matrix of bilateral relations is led by Lines of Credit and Indian professionals working in Eritrea, while trade constitutes a smaller but growing segment.

ETHIOPIA

503. Statement by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Media following his meeting with Ethiopian Prime Minister.

His Excellency Prime Minister Meles Zenawi,

Ladies and Gentlemen of the media,

Thank you Mr. Prime Minister for your warm words of welcome.

This is my first visit to Ethiopia and I am delighted to be in this beautiful country, which is also the diplomatic capital of Africa. I feel extremely privileged to be the first Indian Prime Minister to visit Ethiopia.

I wish to convey my sincere appreciation to Prime Minister Meles Zenawi and the people of Ethiopia for the warm welcome given to me and for the excellent arrangements that have been made for our stay.

We have earlier today concluded a very successful Africa India Forum Summit. I wish to place on record our most grateful thanks to Prime Minister Zenawi for agreeing to host the Summit in Addis Ababa. Thank you very much Mr. Prime Minister.

A short while ago we concluded very productive discussions on our bilateral relations with Ethiopia. As you know, India and Ethiopia have enjoyed historically close links. Ethiopia is an influential member of the world community. Its voice is heard with great respect in Africa. Ethiopia’s economic performance, political stability and democratic polity are examples worthy of emulation by other developing countries.

We are very satisfied with the progress in our relations in recent years. Our talks today have laid a solid foundation for closer political understanding and deepening of our economic exchanges in the coming years.

We have decided to enhance our cooperation in a number of areas. They include sectors such as science & technology, agricultural research, education and information technology. We have concluded agreements in the area of taxation and small and medium enterprises, which will bring benefits to business communities on both sides.

India has tried to assist in Ethiopia’s development through capacity building support and offers of lines of credit of more than 700 million US dollars during the last five years. We will further enhance scholarships, training programmes and slots under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme for Ethiopia.

I conveyed to the Prime Minister our decision to extend an additional line of credit of 300 million US dollars for a regional integration project as committed to the African Union for a new Ethiopia-Djibouti railway.

We also exchanged views on regional and global issues of common interest. Piracy has emerged as a major threat to international trade and commerce. We would like to coordinate our actions closely with Ethiopia to combat this threat.

We discussed the situation in Africa, the challenges facing this great continent and the importance of India and Ethiopia working together for a better life for our people.

Prime Minister Zenawi was appreciative of our engagement and partnership with Africa under the platform of the Africa India Forum Summit. This is indeed a unique initiative which will benefit both India and Africa. Our relations with Ethiopia serve as a model for this broader partnership.

My visit to Ethiopia has laid a solid foundation for building a closer partnership between our two countries. I look forward to continuing my dialogue with the Prime Minister, for which I have invited him to visit India.

I eagerly look forward to the honour and opportunity of addressing the Members of the Ethiopian Parliament tomorrow.

Thank you.
I am deeply honoured to be given this opportunity to address the Joint Session of both Houses of the Parliament of Ethiopia.

I feel privileged to be the first Prime Minister of India to visit this great country.

For me, this is a voyage of friendship and solidarity. I bring to you warm and friendly greetings from a fellow democracy - a democracy that, like yours, faces the challenges of development and a democracy that, like yours, treasures diversity and federalism.

I am conscious that when one visits Ethiopia one visits the cradle of humankind. It is strategically located in the Horn of Africa and is the gateway to East Africa. It is a land of great natural beauty which was home to the most ancient kingdom in Africa.

Honourable Members,

India and Ethiopia are no strangers to each other. Many millennia ago, Africa and India were joined as one landmass. Today we are separated by the waters of the Indian Ocean but our connections are deep and they have brought in their wake rich and varied exchanges in the ebb and flow of history.

Indian traders flocked to the ancient port of Adulis, trading silk and spices for gold and ivory. A sizeable Indian community consisting of merchants and artisans came and settled in this ancient land in the latter part of the 19th century.

There was movement in the other direction too. Thousands of people of Ethiopian origin have settled as an integral part of Indian society along the West Coast of India. The fort of Murud Janjira in the State of Maharashtra stands as a symbol of African influence in India.

These exchanges have produced remarkable and often overlooked similarities in our traditions and cultures.

The Siddis of African descent living in India have created a fusion of Indian and African styles of music that thrives today. The tradition in southern India of using fermented flour for making Dosa is similar to the Injara in Ethiopia. The sight of women with heads covered and men wearing turbans is strikingly common in Ethiopian and Indian villages. Hospitality in humble village homes begins with simple offerings, and guests are treated as incarnations of the gods.

Honourable Members,

Unlike large parts of Asia and Africa, Ethiopia never suffered the humiliation and trauma of colonization. Yet, when Abyssinia was invaded in 1935, it deeply affected Jawaharlal Nehru, and he led India in offering sympathy to the people of Ethiopia. In his appeal to the people of India to observe Abyssinia Day in 1936 he said and I quote:

“We in India can do nothing to help our brethren in distress in Ethiopia for we also are victims of imperialism. But we can at least send them sympathy in the hour of their trial. We stand with them today in their sorrow as we hope to stand together when better days come.” Unquote.

Honourable Members,

I believe the better days that Jawaharlal Nehru spoke of have come.

Ethiopia has overcome many adversities to become one of Africa’s fastest growing economies. Ethiopia is a magnet for foreign investment.

Its economic performance and political stability are the fruit of the hard working people of Ethiopia and a tribute to the progressive leadership of Prime Minister Meles Zenawi.

The voice of Ethiopia is heard with respect. Addis Ababa, the new flower, has become the diplomatic capital of Africa. It is the Headquarters of the African Union and the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa.

I heartily congratulate the people of Ethiopia on their splendid achievements.

Honourable Members,

Relations between India and Ethiopia have expanded impressively in the last few decades. We attach high importance to our relations with Ethiopia.

Our development and economic partnership is progressing well.

Education and capacity building are high priorities for both our countries.

The Pan-African e-Network project in Ethiopia implemented by India has connected Addis Ababa University with the Indira Gandhi National Open University.

We have agreed to the early establishment of a Vocational Training Centre in Ethiopia.
In the infrastructure sector, India has assisted in a rural electrification programme in Southern Ethiopia which has brought benefit to hundreds of thousands of people in rural Ethiopia.

India has provided a line of credit of 640 million US dollars for the development of Ethiopia’s sugar industry.

We will support the new Ethio-Djibouti Railway project to promote regional integration. We have decided to extend a line of credit of 300 million US dollars for this important project.

India is one of the largest foreign investors in Ethiopia. More than 450 Indian companies have committed upwards of 4 billion US dollars in investment in Ethiopia.

Our bilateral trade is on course to reach the target of 1 billion US dollars by 2015.

Our political ties are close. Indian troops were part of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea to secure peace and security. Military training is a valued area of our cooperation.

The decisions Prime Minister Zenawi and I took in the course of our discussions yesterday will strengthen our partnership even further.

Honourable Members,

Going forward, our bilateral cooperation should help to make a difference to the real problems affecting the common man.

India and Ethiopia must work to address the challenges of food security, energy security, health security, sustainable development and climate change. We have to learn to solve our own problems by collaborating with each other.

Our farming communities and scientists should collaborate to usher in a second Green Revolution. This is the lasting solution to the scourge of hunger that afflicts millions in both our countries.

Providing affordable health care to our people, particularly in rural areas, is another major challenge. Indian pharmaceutical companies are known for providing cheap and good quality generic drugs. I am happy they have begun to invest in Ethiopia.

We have to be conscious of our environment and ensure the judicious management of our natural resources. We should protect our rich biodiversity and traditional knowledge.
It is essential for rich countries to share the financial burden of combating climate change, participate in research and development and promote the transfer of technology to ensure green growth. Prime Minister Zenawi has made an invaluable contribution to these issues as co-chair of the United Nations Secretary General’s High-level Advisory Group on Climate Change Financing.

Honourable Members,

India owes a debt of deep gratitude to Africa for it was here that Mahatma Gandhi experienced his political and spiritual awakening. It was in Africa that he first experimented with the philosophy of non-violence and passive resistance or satyagraha that shook the colonial powers of that time.

The struggles for freedom in India and Africa and the collaboration of our leaders were glorious chapters in our history. After we attained freedom, we worked shoulder to shoulder to fight apartheid and strengthen the Non-aligned Movement and the United Nations. India supported liberation movements such as the African National Congress and South West Africa People’s Organisation. We fought to build a just, equitable and democratic international order.

This is the legacy of friendship that we have inherited from our forefathers. Our empathy with our African brothers and sisters is of long standing and comes from our hearts and minds.

Honourable Members,

The world has changed. Globalisation is a reality today. Our people have rising expectations. Africa is responding to these challenges and discovering its rich potential. The world is reaching out to Africa and seeing it as a new growth pole in the world economy.

India sees Africa as a natural partner in our growing engagement with the world.

India and Africa have to work together to make global interdependence work for the benefit of all people and particularly for the millions who live in the developing world. This is our next project.

We must work towards market access for some of the poorest commodity producers in Africa. Vulnerable sections of our peasantry need to be protected from the vagaries of the international marketplace. It is imperative that the development dimension of the Doha Round of multilateral trade negotiations is not diluted.
Prices of many agricultural commodities remain volatile. The problem is made worse by speculation. The G-20 countries have taken the initiative of supporting work on regulation and supervision of commodity derivative markets. This is an area where India and Ethiopia have vital interests and should cooperate with each other.

The Second India-Africa Forum Summit which concluded yesterday here in Addis Ababa under the theme “Enhanced Partnership: Shared Vision” has opened a new era in India-Africa relations.

Our development cooperation with Africa is based on the principles of mutual equality and mutual benefit. We want the participation of as many of our African brothers and sisters as possible in our aid and economic cooperation programmes. Local employment generation and capacity development are the pillars of our development cooperation.

African students find a welcome home in India. The Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme has enabled the training of thousands of African youth in industrial training institutes, medical colleges, engineering colleges and in fields such as business administration, agriculture and legal services.

We have decided to increase scholarships and training slots for Africa. Their total number will stand at over 22,000 during the next three years.

The development of infrastructure in Africa is a priority and an area where Indian technology is very appropriate.

We will offer 5 billion US dollars for the next three years under lines of credit to help achieve the development goals of Africa. We will offer an additional 700 million US dollars to establish new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions.

Honourable Members,

India and Ethiopia are pluralistic and diverse societies. We share the belief that democracy and respect for the free will of the people are the only durable basis to find solutions to our problems.

We believe that similar principles should be applied in the conduct of international governance.

The Horn of Africa is today faced with threats from piracy and terrorism. International piracy in the Red Sea and off the coast of Somalia has become a well organized industry. It is important that the United Nations takes the lead in developing a comprehensive and effective response to this threat. Simultaneously, the international community should continue with efforts to restore stability in Somalia.

As a littoral State of the Indian Ocean, India is ready to work with Ethiopia and other African countries in this regard. We would all like the Indian Ocean to remain a secure link between Asia and Africa through which international maritime trade can take place unhindered.

Honourable Members,

The winds of change are blowing in West Asia and North Africa. We believe it is the right of all peoples to determine their own destiny and choose their own path of development. International actions must be based on the rule of law and be strictly within the framework of United Nations Resolutions. We support the efforts of the African Union in bringing peace and stability to the region.

The birth of a new nation in a few weeks time in South Sudan will be a historic event. We hope it will contribute to peace and reconciliation among the people of Sudan.

The changing world order calls for corresponding changes in the structure of institutions of global governance, whether these are international financial institutions or the international monetary system or the United Nations Security Council. These are issues which have to be tackled and resolved. We are grateful to Ethiopia for its strong support to India’s permanent membership in an expanded Security Council and look forward to our continuing cooperation with Ethiopia on these issues.

Honourable Members,

Ethiopia is one of most stable and progressive states in Africa. The engine of African growth is being driven by economic dynamism in countries like Ethiopia.

Ethiopia has the credentials to shape a new vision for Africa’s prosperity and development. I call upon you, the parliamentarians and people of Ethiopia, to take a lead in this process. The people of India will stand with you every step of the way.

Our economies have been doing well in recent years. Let us cooperate with each other so that we can reinforce and build upon our successes and achievements.

Honourable Members,

In conclusion, let me say once again how fortunate I feel to have visited your beautiful country. I feel a sense of deep personal fulfillment to see the coming together of our two brotherly nations.

You have honoured me and the people of India today for which I am indebted to you.

I wish Ethiopia greater peace, prosperity and happiness in the years ahead. May your dreams come true.

I thank you all.

505. Address by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the Indian Community Function in Addis Ababa

Shri Bhagwant Bishnoi, Ambassador of India, and Shrimati Bishnoi,

Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is a great privilege for me to meet the members of the Indian community in Ethiopia.

Indian merchants and artisans came to this country as far back as the 19th century. They made a home here and with painstaking effort built for themselves a respected place in Ethiopian society.

I was very proud to hear that many Ethiopians have high regard for the Indian teachers who taught them. I am told that even today Ethiopian universities are keen to recruit Indian professors.

I see this spirit of selfless and dedicated service among all Indian communities I meet during my visits abroad. While retaining and carrying forward the high values, strong family traditions and work ethic of their motherland, they adapt very well in their adopted homes. They are pillars of their communities and a source of pride and achievement for Indians everywhere.

I have been in Addis Ababa for the last three days. My visit to Ethiopia has been a most rewarding experience. I have been struck by the extraordinary goodwill, love and affection for India in this country. We are indeed fortunate to have friends like the people of Ethiopia.
I have come to Africa with a message of friendship and solidarity from India. I conveyed to the African leaders how much importance the people and government of India attach to reviving our historic relations with this great continent.

We concluded the second Africa India Forum Summit yesterday. Together with leaders from across the continent of Africa, we set out an ambitious road map to comprehensively expand the India-Africa partnership.

Indian communities in Africa have an important role to play in renewing and strengthening relations between India and Africa. The rise of India and Africa is opening new opportunities for collaboration. There is much that we can do together to increase each others’ welfare and prosperity.

I have held detailed discussions on our bilateral relations with the Prime Minister of Ethiopia His Excellency Mr. Meles Zenawi. We agreed that there is vast untapped potential in developing our bilateral relations. Prime Minister Zenawi is a strong advocate of a robust and diversified relationship between India and Ethiopia. Today India is on a path of high economic growth. There is confidence and hope among our youth and a desire for change. A new India is rising fast as a fast growing, democratic and pluralistic society. These are features we share with Ethiopia.

In recent years, Ethiopia’s economic performance, political stability and democratic polity have attracted the attention of the international community. Ethiopia’s voice is heard with increasing respect because of these achievements.

I am confident that my visit will open a new chapter of multi-faceted cooperation between the two countries.

In recent times, the flow of Indian investments in Ethiopia has grown. I am told that over 450 Indian companies have invested in Ethiopia with total committed investment of more than 4 billion US dollars.

I would urge the Indian business community to set high standards of professional conduct in this country. Businesses that seek a long term presence here should work hard to earn the support and goodwill of local communities. They should aim to be model corporate citizens.

Your contribution to the economic development of Ethiopia is highly appreciated. I would like you to know that your motherland recognises the value of this contribution and your hard work.

The welfare, safety and well-being of Indian citizens will always receive our close attention. The Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs has been working hard to strengthen links of our overseas communities with India and to harness their knowledge, skills and resources.

I am happy to announce that we will shortly set an Indian Community Welfare Fund for Indian citizens in distress in Ethiopia.

I thank you all for coming here today. I wish you and your families the best of health and happiness.

Thank you.

506. Resolution on Cote d’Ivoire – India’s Explanation of Vote by India’s Permanent Representative Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UN Security Council.

New York, March 31, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

India is seriously concerned at the prevailing situation in Cote d’Ivoire since the presidential elections last year. We have consistently held that both parties in Cote d’Ivoire should exercise maximum restraint and respect the outcome of the elections. We have urged the parties to ensure that there is no violence because it harms the wellbeing of the Ivorian people and distracts from the main task of economic development, social cohesion and national reconciliation. During the last three months, we have supported all efforts to resolve the current problem peacefully and through dialogue. To that end, we have supported the efforts of the ECOWAS and African Union to find a political solution leading to restoration of democracy and will of the Ivorian people at the earliest. With that objective in mind, we have voted in favour of the resolution today.

2. We want to put on record that the UN peacekeepers should draw their mandate from the relevant resolutions of the Security Council. They cannot be made instruments of regime change. Accordingly, the United Nations Operation in Cote d’Ivoire (UNOCI) should not become a party to the Ivorian political stalemate. The UNOCI should also not get involved in a civil war but carry out its mandate with impartiality and ensuring safety and security of peacekeepers and civilians. In this context, we have noted that a UNOCI helicopter was fired at by the Forces Republicaines de Cote d’Ivoire (FRCI) on 29th March 2011. We call upon all parties to respect UNOCI’s military impartiality.

3. The Council has heard about various allegations of serious crimes committed against civilians in Cote d’Ivoire. There should be no a priori presumption about nature of these alleged crimes. Each allegation has to be investigated on a case-by-case basis by the competent national bodies and further action taken as per relevant laws.

4. We also want to place on report our growing concern at the tendency to hurry the process of adopting resolutions. We think that there should be enough time for deliberations and consultations with all concerned countries. In situations, such as those envisaged in the present resolution, it is imperative that Troop Contributing Countries be first consulted on the mandate of the UN peacekeepers. Such consultations are necessary not only for well considered decisions but also for an effective implementation of the mandate.

5. We also want to reiterate that India is not a member of the International Criminal Court. Of the 192 members of the United Nations, only 114 are members of the ICC. 5 of the 15 members of the Security Council, including 3 Permanent Members, are not parties to the Rome Statute. It is also important to note that there are clear legal provisions concerning state-parties to the Rome Statute. There are also guidelines for a state, which is not a party to the Rome Statute, to accept the exercise of jurisdiction by the ICC. These provisions and guidelines should be followed without exception. It merits underlining that there is no mandate in this resolution for the Security Council to refer the situation in Cote d’Ivoire to the ICC.

Thank you.

508. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs deploring use of force in Libya.

New Delhi, February 22, 2011.

The Government of India has been following, with serious concern, the developments in Libya, leading to loss of numerous lives and injuries to many more. The Government deplores the use of force which is totally unacceptable and must not be resorted to. It is earnestly hoped that calm is restored at the earliest without any further violence.

The Ministry and the Embassy of India in Tripoli are closely monitoring the situation and are in regular touch with representatives of the Indian community. Necessary measures, as warranted by the situation, would be taken by the Government to ensure the safety and welfare of Indian nationals.

Statement by Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur in Rajya Sabha on the evacuation of Indian nationals from Libya.

New Delhi, March 4, 2011.

Sir,

I rise to share with the house information on the efforts undertaken by the Ministry of External Affairs and other GOI Ministries and Departments, to assist in the evacuation of Indian nationals from Libya.

In view of the disturbed conditions in Libya, the Government of India took the decision to relocate Indian nationals out of Libya and assist in their return home. The first special flight of Air India left Libya on February 26. Since then, an air bridge has been established between Tripoli and Delhi.

By the end of the day today, 9,209 Indian nationals would have been evacuated out of Libya, including 1,450 out of Tripoli and Sehba by Air India flights. We expect to complete the exercise of evacuating all those desirous of leaving Libya by March 10. It may be noted that some Indian nationals have opted to stay on Libya.

A passenger ship, Scotia Prince, has also ferried 1,188 Indians from Benghazi to Alexandria in Egypt from where they arrived in Mumbai and Delhi by special flights organized by the Government yesterday and early this morning. The ship turned around from Alexandria last night at 2330 hrs for Benghazi, from where we are coordinating the transport of another 1,150 of our nationals back to India via Alexandria. The ship will dock at Benghazi early morning tomorrow.

As we speak, a passenger ship, Red Star One, is also on its way to Misurata and Sirte to ferry Indian nationals to Malta from where special flights are being arranged out of Valletta to bring them back. An air bridge is also being put in place from late tonight between Sehba and India and we hope to evacuate about 2000 Indian nationals from there over the next 5 days, beginning today.

We have confirmed reports that 750 or so Indian nationals from Kufra in South East Libya have reached Benghazi by the land route. They will now be picked up by the passenger vessel en route to Benghazi.

A large number of Indian nationals have crossed the Libyan border into Tunisia and Egypt. They have been assisted at the border by Indian Embassy officials to be issued travel documents, temporarily housed in hotels and other shelters and provided assistance for their return to India by commercial and special flights. Similar assistance has also been provided by our Missions to Indian who managed to reach other countries such as Malta, Greece, Gulf States etc.
We have taken special care, in association with the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs, that returning passenger to India are facilitated at Delhi and Mumbai airports. At the Delhi airport a special terminal has been made available for the returnees, who are being met by the concerned company representatives and assisted by officials of the respective State Governments, the Ministry of External Affairs and the Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs.

An IAF IL 76 aircraft has been stationed in Cairo to undertake possible evacuation operations from Libya. A second IL 76 aircraft has also been put on readiness to be dispatched as and when the need arises. Two ships of the Indian Navy - INS Jalashwa and INS Mysore are en route and are expected to be in the region by March 8 to assist in the evacuation operations of any Indians that might still be in the coastal towns of Libya.

As part of the effort to ensure the safe and orderly evacuation of Indian nationals from Libya, External Affairs Minister spoke to his Libyan counterpart on March 2. The Libyan Foreign Minister assured EAM that all Libyan authorities concerned would extend every possible assistance for this purpose.

As assured by EAM, the cost towards evacuation of Indians from Libya assisted by Government in their safe and orderly return to India is being met by the Government.

Hon'ble members are aware of the complicated situation in Libya. The security of Indian nationals and their safe return to India is Government's foremost priority. Despite considerable logistical challenges the Government has put in place a well coordinated operation 'safe home coming' to bring home our nationals in the quickest and safest manner possible. I hope the house will join me I extending support to all those involved in this operation for the safe return of Indian nationals from Libya.

Thank You.
511. Explanation of Indian Abstention Vote on the Resolution on Libya in the UN Security Council.

New York, March 17, 2011.

(The explanation on Vote below, was delivered by Ambassador and Deputy Permanent Representative Manjeev Singh Puri, at UN Security Council in New York on 17 March 2011)

India has been following with serious concern the developments in Libya, which have led to loss of numerous lives and injuries to many more. We deplore the use of force, which is totally unacceptable, and must not be resorted to. We are very concerned with the welfare of the civilian population and foreigners in Libya.

2. The UN Secretary-General has appointed a Special Envoy, who has just visited Libya. We have not had the benefit of his report or even a report from the Secretariat on his assessment as yet. This would have given us an objective analysis of the situation on ground. The African Union is also sending a High Level Panel to Libya to make serious efforts for a peaceful end to the crisis there. We must stress the importance of political efforts, including those of the Secretary-General’s Special Envoy, to address the situation.

3. The resolution that the Council has adopted today authorizes far reaching measures under Chapter VII of the UN Charter with relatively little credible information on the situation on the ground in Libya. We also do not have clarity about details of enforcement measures, including who and with what assets will participate and how these measures will be exactly carried out. It is, of course, very important that there is full respect for sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Libya.

4. Mr President, the financial measures that are proposed in the resolution could impact, directly or through indirect routes, ongoing trade and investment activities of a number of member-states thereby adversely affecting the economic interests of the Libyan people and others dependent on these trade and economic ties. Moreover, we had to ensure that the measures will mitigate and not exacerbate an already difficult situation for the people of Libya. Clarity in the resolution on any spill-over affects of these measures would have been very important.

5. Mr President, we have abstained on the resolution in view of the above. I would like to re-emphasize that India continues to be gravely concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Libya and calls on the Libyan authorities to cease fire, protect the civilian population and address the legitimate demands of the Libyan people.
512. Statement issued by Ministry of External Affairs on Indian grave concern at violence in Libya and calling for peaceful resolution of differences.

New Delhi, March 20, 201

India views with grave concern the continuing violence, strife and deteriorating humanitarian situation in Libya. It regrets the air strikes that are taking place. As stated earlier by India, the measures adopted should mitigate and not exacerbate an already difficult situation for the people of Libya.

It hopes that this would not lead to greater harm to innocent civilians, foreign nationals and diplomatic missions and their personnel still in Libya.

India calls upon all parties to abjure use of or the threat of use of force and to resolve their differences through peaceful means and dialogue in which the UN and regional organisations should play their roles.

❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖❖♥️❤️️awah
513. Visit of Libyan Foreign Minister Abdel Aati Al Obeidi to New Delhi to discuss the latest situation in Libya.

New Delhi, July 22, 2011.

The Foreign Minister of Libya, Mr. Abdel Aati Al Obeidi visited New Delhi on July 22, 2011. He met Minister of State (MOS) for External Affairs Shri E. Ahmed and briefed him on the latest developments in Libya and the status of various initiatives for resolving the crisis in Libya.

MOS reiterated India's position which calls for immediate cessation of all hostilities in Libya and supports peaceful resolution of the Libyan crisis through dialogue, taking into account the legitimate aspirations of the people of Libya. He conveyed India's consistent stand to maintain unity and territorial integrity of Libya. He also expressed support for the African Union-High Level Ad-hoc Committee initiatives and the African Union Road Map for the peaceful and consensual resolution of the conflict.

Statement of the Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the situation in Libya and expressing the hope that it would be normalized peacefully by its people.

New Delhi, August 23, 2011.

We are closely monitoring the developments in Libya. There are indications that the situation in Libya is changing and the recent events in Tripoli indicate that the Transitional National Council is acquiring effective control. The situation in the country should be normalized by the people of Libya themselves in a peaceful manner adhering to democratic norms and with respect for aspirations of the people. This process should be guided by respect for the sovereignty, integrity and unity of Libya. India stands ready to extend all possible assistance for reconstruction and rehabilitation to the friendly people of Libya and wishes them peace, stability and prosperity.

❖❖❖❖❖❖
514. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs extending support to Transitional National Council of Libya in the United Nations.

New Delhi, September 17, 2011.

India extended support to the acceptance of credentials of the delegation of the Transitional National Council of Libya led by its President Mustafa Abdel Jalil to attend the forthcoming UN General Assembly session in New York.

India has been in contact with the Transitional National Council in Benghazi and Cairo. India has also participated as an observer in the Libyan Contact Group meeting in Istanbul in July and recently at the MOS level at the Paris Conference on Libya jointly organised by France and UK on September 1. India will also be participating in the High Level Meeting on Libya scheduled to be held in the margins of the UNGA on September 20, called by the UN Secretary General. In this meeting, India will reiterate its willingness to extend all possible assistance to the people of Libya in their political transition, rebuilding and reconstruction activities.

Our Cd’A to Libya, currently based in Tunis, has formally established contact with the TNC Mission in Tunis.

We have given humanitarian assistance of US$1 million through UN-OCHA to Libya and assistance of another US$2 million is being processed.

515. Briefing by Secretary (West) in Ministry of External Affairs on the State Visit of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to Mauritius

New Delhi, April 23, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good morning to all of you and welcome to XP Division.

You are aware that the Hon'ble President of India would be leaving tomorrow on a State Visit to Mauritius. Secretary (West) Shri Vivek Katju is here to brief you on this very important visit of the President of India. Let me also introduce two of my colleagues on the dais. To the right of Secretary (West) is Mr. Gurjit Singh, Joint Secretary for East and Southern Africa and to my left is Mrs. Archana Datta, OSD to the President. I will invite Secretary (West) to make his opening remarks and thereafter he will be happy to take questions pertaining to the visit of the Hon'ble President to Mauritius.

Secretary (West) (Shri Vivek Katju): Thank You. I have a brief opening statement and after that, you can ask questions.

Hon'ble President will be on a State Visit to Mauritius from April 24 to April 28, 2011. During the visit, Hon'ble President will meet H.E. Sir Anerood Jugnauth, President of Mauritius. She will hold discussions with H.E. Dr. Navindchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of Mauritius, on bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. The Leader of the Opposition, H.E. Mr. Paul Raymond Berenger, the Chief Justice of Mauritius, Justice Bernard Sik Yuen, and the Speaker of the National Assembly of Mauritius, H.E. Mr. Rajkeswur Purryag will call on Hon'ble President.

As part of the State Visit, Hon'ble President will also address the National Assembly of Mauritius, unveil a bust of Smt. Indira Gandhi at the Indira Gandhi Centre for Indian Culture, and will meet the Indian community in Mauritius. The University of Mauritius will confer a Degree of Doctor of Civil Law honoris causa on the President. The Hon'ble President will also visit heritage sites such as the Aapravasi Ghat and the Le Mourne. Hon'ble President will address the India-Mauritius Business Meet; a high level business delegation consisting of 57 business people from India will be in Mauritius during the State Visit of the Hon'ble President.

Hon'ble President’s visit to Mauritius is a part of the process of exchanges at the highest political level between India and Mauritius. The two countries have enduring bonds of friendship and cooperation that are firmly rooted in history, tradition and cultural affinities. India-Mauritius partnership today is mutually beneficial, comprehensive, deep and diverse. The commitment of the two countries to democratic ideals, values and pluralism reinforces the close ties that they enjoy.

India-Mauritius approaches on many regional and international issues, such as international terrorism, piracy, reform of the international institutions, including the United Nations, especially the Security Council, coincide. Both countries have a tradition of strong cooperation in multilateral fora.

The State Visit of the Hon'ble President of India to Mauritius will provide a further impetus to the consolidation and development of their historical friendship and cooperation between the two countries and will enhance the India-Mauritius partnership.

Thank You.

Question: Sir, any MoUs?

Secretary (West): No MoUs or agreements are contemplated during this visit. We have a vast legal structure of agreements, Memoranda of Understanding already in place between the two countries which provides the legal framework within which our cooperation continues to flourish.

Question: Has India decided to give a vessel to Mauritius?

Secretary (West): There is ongoing cooperation in the security area between the two countries. India has been responsive to requests that come from Mauritius. Currently, a vessel is being manufactured in India as part of this process of cooperation. It is an Offshore Patrol Vessel, if you wish to know the exact nomenclature.

Question: What about the rest of the Delegation? Who else is going with the President?

Secretary (West): I think that is a fair question and I should have mentioned that. The hon. Minister of Shipping Mr. G.K. Vasan will be accompanying the President as part of the Delegation. There will be three Members of Parliament – Mr. Upendra Kushwaha, Mr. Hamdullah Sayeed, and Mr. A.T. Patil – who will also be part of the Delegation. In addition, there will be a team of officials who will be in attendance.

Question: Any family members of the President?

Secretary (West): We do not discuss family details. There will also be, as I mentioned, a Business Delegation which will be in Mauritius at the time of the visit. You can get details, names. It will be led by Mr. Navin Raheja of Raheja Developers, if I am not mistaken. But it is a strong delegation. They are in the business field. They are representatives from the cement industry, from telecommunication, education, information technology, agriculture, agro chemicals, fertilizers, infrastructure, finance and legal services, etc. Our economic and commercial ties are significant. Our trade at the moment is at the level of about 460 to 470 million US dollars per year. With these our exports to Mauritius account for about 450 million US dollars. There is a supply of petroleum products to Mauritius from India, which is on a long-term contract basis, and of course other diverse items in the field of manufactures, commodities, etc. We have also been partners in the development process of Mauritius. There are numerous projects which have been completed over the years. These have been in response to the needs of Mauritius. They have I think contributed not only to furthering our mutual friendship but also have catered for the development needs of the country.

Question: Do you have any figure on the FDI inflows from Mauritius?

Joint Secretary (E&SA) (Shri Gurjit Singh): Mauritius accounts for nearly 40 to 42 per cent of our total FDI from the beginning, from 1991. Last year also it was about 40 per cent and that is 10.376 billion US dollars. Total from April 2000 to January 2011 it is about 53.369 billion and that is 41.9 per cent. This is based on RBI figures.

Question: Sir, China has been investing a lot in Mauritius. Are you taking it as a threat since they are giving a lot of money to build a lot of structures over there?

Secretary (West): We are not in competition with any country in our foreign relations. Our relations with Mauritius especially stand on their own. As I have mentioned, it is time-tested; it is enduring; it is based on very firm foundations; it is comprehensive; and it stand, I must repeat, entirely on its own. We do not feel threatened by anyone.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you.
516. Departure Statement of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil on board her Special Flight to Mauritius.

April 24, 2011.

Good morning. I will be visiting Mauritius, a country with which we have strong bonds of affinity. Not only are the shores of our two countries washed by the waters of same Ocean, but the presence of a large number of people of Indian origin in Mauritius have created bonds of kinship. I am looking forward to my visit to Mauritius, as an opportunity to reaffirm our unique relationship, and to further strengthen the framework of co-operation.

During my visit, I will be meeting President Sir Anerood Jugnauth and holding discussions with Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam. I will be addressing the Mauritian National Assembly, and also meeting the Leader of Opposition, Mr. Paul Berenger. I will have an opportunity to exchange views with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Mauritius. At the Indira Gandhi Centre for Indian Culture, apart from unveiling the statue of our late Prime Minister Smt. Indira Gandhi, I will be interacting with the members of the Indian community. My other engagements include a visit to the University of Mauritius, and interaction with the business communities of our two countries. An Indian business delegation will be in Mauritius during my visit.

I will also be going to sites of historical and cultural importance, that reflect the commonalities between our two countries. My visit to the Aapravasi Ghat, will be to recall the journey of Indians who came to Mauritius about 200 years ago, and contributed to making Mauritius what it is today. Moreover, Mahatma Gandhi had stopped in Mauritius on his way back to India from South Africa in 1901. Paying homage to him in Mauritius, will be a particularly significant event for me.

The India and Mauritius partnership today, is wide-ranging and multi-faceted, its depth and diversity indicates that it is a mutually beneficial relationship. Our common commitment to democratic ideals and pluralistic society anchors our close ties. We aim to further enhance the level of our engagement to newer heights. My discussions with the leadership of Mauritius will cover a wide range of bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. I hope that the exchange of views at these meetings, will provide a greater momentum and thrust, to the process of consolidation and development of our partnership in all spheres.

Mauritius has extended support to India on global issues of crucial importance to us. It has consistently supported India’s candidature for a permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council. It has been unequivocal in its condemnation of international terrorism. We are committed to work with the Government of Mauritius to jointly fight piracy and enhance security in the Indian Ocean, through mutually agreed measures.

We look at Mauritius as a friendly country in the African continent. I am, therefore, pleased that the first country in Africa which I will be visiting, is Mauritius. India-Africa relations are historical and strong. They hold great promise in the future as well. In 2008, we initiated the India-Africa Forum Summit, as a platform for broader engagement with countries in Africa. I am pleased that the Second meeting of the India-Africa Forum Summit is to take place next month in Ethiopia.

I am looking forward to my visit to Mauritius, as it is not only a valuable bilateral partner, but also an important ally in the multi-lateral fora.

Thank you.

517. Statement by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at conclusion of her talks with Mauritian Prime Minister Navinchandra Ramgoolam.

Port Louis, April 25, 2011.

My delegation and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the reception, and for the generous hospitality accorded to us by the Government and the people of Mauritius. I bring greetings and good wishes from the people of India to the friendly people of Mauritius.

India and Mauritius are bound by ties of history, cultural affinities and indeed, kinship. It is even more satisfying that our friendship today has acquired a contemporaneous and vibrant character, to assume the dimension of a strategic partnership. Our bilateral relations today are wide-ranging, multi-dimensional and mutually beneficial. Our shared and abiding commitment to the ideals of democracy and pluralism has only reinforced our close and friendly ties. My visit to Mauritius reaffirms our common commitment to take our relations onward to new heights.

Today, I met His Excellency President Sir Anerood Jugnauth. Just now I have concluded my discussions with His Excellency Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, which were wide ranging and covered bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest. I am confident that the meetings and discussions I will have during the period of my stay here, will provide a greater momentum and thrust to the process of consolidation and development of our partnership.

The focus of our discussions was on issues covering the vast canvass of Indo-Mauritius relations. While expressing satisfaction over the current state of our relations, we did feel that considerable opportunities existed and that there was untapped potential, which could be exploited, particularly in the area of trade and economic cooperation. I am happy to state that a business delegation from India will be joining me to explore business opportunities in Mauritius, and towards giving greater content to this important sphere of our interaction. I look forward to my participation in the Business Meet during my stay here, to listen to views from the captains of industry from both sides, and encourage them to participate in our bilateral economic exchanges.

We have agreed to further enhance exchanges in the fields of higher education, Information Technology, Science and Technology, tourism, hospitality and culture. People to people contacts reflecting our common heritage and traditions, will be prominent in these exchanges.

I thanked the Government of the Republic of Mauritius for its valued support on global issues of crucial importance to India. Mauritius has been unequivocal in its condemnation of international terrorism. Mauritius has consistently supported India’s candidature for permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council.

Piracy in the Indian Ocean region adversely impacts on us all. As a country deeply committed to the security of Mauritius and its people, we are determined to work with the Government of Mauritius in enhancing the security of its people through concrete measures.

The understandings arrived at today’s discussions, have established a solid foundation for the consolidation and enhancement of our mutually beneficial strategic partnership, and in bringing our two peoples closer together for a better future. I have invited President Sir Anerood Jugnauth and Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam to visit to India on mutually convenient dates, which could be decided through diplomatic channels.

Port Louis, April 25, 2011.

Your Excellency Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius and Mrs. Veena Ramgoolam,

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

My delegation and I are delighted to be in your beautiful country. I am truly touched by the extraordinarily warm welcome and generous hospitality extended to me and my delegation. Mr. Prime Minister, I deeply appreciate the kind words addressed to me personally, and your expressions of goodwill and affection for the people of India. We fully reciprocate the same, as I bring with me the greetings and best wishes of more than a billion people of India, to the friendly people of Mauritius, with whom we share everlasting bonds of kinship. We are bound together by a common history, by sentiments and values, customs and traditions, and by aspirations that makes our relationship so unique. Thus, coming to Mauritius for me, is akin to coming home.

Nearly 200 years ago when your forefathers set sail braving the many vicissitudes and difficulties, they would not have known that they were going to change the very environment of an inhospitable rugged terrain to what Mauritius is today - a proud nation bearing the flag of progress and development; where the values of democracy are respected; and where that path of economic development is pursued in which social benefits are given their due place. Among those who built your nation, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam stands tall as the Father of the Republic of Mauritius. His was a personality well known to those in India, particularly to that generation of freedom fighters who fought for the independence of India from colonial yoke, to set in chain a process leading to the rapid de-colonisation of many a nation, particularly in this region.

Excellency,

The ideals and the vision of our founding fathers also representing the eternal values of humanity, provide invaluable guidance to us. In building societies that are prosperous with the fruits of progress reaching all its peoples, in creating economies that are vibrant and expanding, in promoting politics that are just, we are inspired by our common heritage, where the world is considered as one family. This was the wise message contained in “Vasudhaiva Kutumbukam”.
I am particularly pleased that our relations which derived inspiration from the visit of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Indian Nation, in the first year of the 20th Century, have strengthened. Our ties encompass a vast range and diverse areas of co-operation in both the traditional and modern areas. On issues of political importance our views converge. Our economic co-operation could see some reinvigoration. Our co-operation in the education sectors is intense. Our cultural interaction is active, and co-operation in the services sector holds great promise, especially in Information Technology and tourism, among others.

The Indian economy which touched a growth rate of 8.5 percent last year, is expected to be further strengthened and we hope to grow at 9 percent this year. We have an ambitious programme for the expansion of our social and infrastructure sectors. Our large and growing economy offers many opportunities for other countries, as indeed for our traditional friends like Mauritius, with whom we seek to broaden our economic engagement, a fundamental pillar of our strategic partnership.

Excellency,

India takes genuine pride in the many achievements of Mauritius and the steady progress of its friendly people. We, in India, also value Mauritius standing with us on issues of importance to India. We appreciate the support of Mauritius for India’s rightful place as a permanent member in an expanded United Nations Security Council. The world has changed from what it was in the middle of the 20th Century, and the institutional architecture of that day, should evolve with the reality of the second decade of the 21st Century.

My discussions in Mauritius, confirm that our two countries share the objective of further strengthening of our multi-faceted, multi-dimensional relations. This augurs well for the future of India-Mauritius relations. I am confident that my visit will provide additional impetus and momentum to our friendship.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in raising a toast:-

- to the health and well-being of our gracious host, His Excellency Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius and Mrs. Veena Ramgoolam;

- to the continued success, prosperity and happiness of the Mauritian people; and

- to the enduring partnership between India and the friendly Republic of Mauritius.

519. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the National Assembly of Mauritius.

Port Louis, April 26, 2011.

Your Excellency Rajkeswur Purryag, Speaker of the National Assembly of the Republic of Mauritius, Your Excellency, Dr. Navin Chandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius, Your Excellency Paul Raymond Berenger, Leader of the Opposition, Hon’ble Ministers of Mauritius, Minister of Shipping of India, Shri G.K. Vasan, Members of the National Assembly of Mauritius, Members of Parliament of India, Ladies and Gentlemen, I thank the Hon’ble Speaker of the National Assembly for giving me this opportunity to address members of this august House. From this democratic forum, at the outset, I convey warm greetings of the people of India, to the people of Mauritius. I am delighted to be in Mauritius, a beautiful and progressive country with friendly people. Our two countries have many similarities, shared values and indeed, are inspired by legacies of freedom and democracy, bequeathed to us by the founding fathers of our Nations. Over six decades ago, on the eve of the historic occasion of India’s Independence, India’s first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, spoke of India’s Tryst with Destiny, and that the future would be one of incessant work to fulfill pledges. Among these, were the building of India as a prosperous, democratic and progressive nation, and a pledge that India will cooperate with people of the world in furthering peace, freedom and democracy.

On the momentous occasion of Mauritius’s Independence on March 12, 1968, the Father of your Nation, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam spoke of the respect of Mauritius for democratic principles, its love for justice and liberty which, he said, would be the guiding lights of your country’s national policy. It is this democratic imperative which brings us closer and binds us together. In a democracy, parliamentary institutions play a very important role. These symbolize a national purpose, and are representative of the aspirations of the people. Every election marks a new mandate and is a renewal of democracy itself. I congratulate Mauritius for the successful conduct of its electoral processes. The democratic spirit that Mauritius has always believed in resonates in your august National Assembly, which is the citadel of democracy, freedom and justice. I congratulate Mauritius for holding aloft the torch of democracy with conviction.

In India, the roots of democracy are deep and abiding. We are the largest democracy in the world with an unwavering faith in a democratic way of life. We have held 15 nationwide general elections since our independence. Following the verdict of the people, each time there has been a peaceful government transition. Organizing elections in India is an unparalleled exercise of management and co-ordination. In the last parliamentary elections in May 2009 with a 716 million electorate, nearly 800,000 polling booths were set up, involving 5 million polling staff.

The democratic experience in India is also remarkable, because democracy has been carried to the grassroots level right down to more than 600,000 villages in the form of Panchayati Raj Institutions. In today’s world, this is undoubtedly the largest expression of popular will in running the affairs of a country. The essence of democracy also lies in tolerance and harmony, values which have the ability to weave together the extensive plurality that exists in a country as large and diverse as India into a composite whole. India is a country of more than one billion people. One out of every six human beings in the world lives in India. 22 Indian languages are listed in our Constitution and about 1,700 dialects are spoken in India. Every religion has its followers in India. We celebrate our varied cultures, festivals and religions with great joy and festivity.

In Mauritius too, there exists vibrancy in the celebration of festivals, some of them similar to those in India. This is but natural, as India and Mauritius have a shared history and a common purpose. Also, both are democratic and pluralistic societies. We are multi-cultural, multi-religious and multi-ethnic nations, where the goal of governance is to provide for the welfare of all citizens. We, in India, have admired the progress made by Mauritius over the years. We take pride in the achievements of Mauritius. This has been possible due to the hard work of its people, who have been guided by a vision of inclusive prosperity. I have no doubt that it was in the National Assembly that many of the policies and approaches of development would have been discussed and debated. I congratulate each and every one of you for carrying forward the torch of progress with democratic values.

Our bilateral relations are rooted in mutual respect and mutual benefit. Our ties are extensive in scope and comprehensive in content. India will continue to remain a valued and trusted partner of Mauritius, in its multifaceted comprehensive development. We would be happy to participate in various aspects of the growth story of your country. Our exchange of experience in tackling climate change has been fruitful. Our participation in conceptualizing, in elaborating and in tackling the various issues confronting the 21st Century world has been mutually beneficial. Ladies and Gentlemen, India has a linkage of a common past with Africa.

We continue to seek to build on our historical ties and to deepen our exchanges with the continent of Africa. Our partnership is developing through various bilateral arrangements and, at a broader level, through the India-Africa Forum Summit. The second India-Africa Forum Summit to be held next month in Addis Ababa would develop new areas of cooperation and provide a trajectory for further growth of our cherished relations.

The Indian Ocean is the region to which we belong to, and both India and Mauritius would have an important role to play in this regard. I am particularly pleased that my first visit to Africa is to the friendly country of Mauritius. Mr. Speaker, before I conclude, I would also like to say that India values the continued support given by Mauritius to India’s concerns and aspirations. We are determined to confront the global menace of terrorism and piracy along with our international partners to eliminate this scourge. India also appreciates the unswerving and consistent support of Mauritius to India’s candidature for permanent membership of an expanded United Nations Security Council. On behalf of the Government and the people of India, I would like to reiterate that Mauritius and India are bound together by strong, unbreakable links and will stay together. I also reaffirm the commitment of the people of India for the welfare, peace, progress and prosperity of Mauritius and its people, and for continuance of our historical partnership towards realization of our many objectives and dreams. Mr. Speaker, once again I thank you for giving me this opportunity to address this August House.

520. Address of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the Indian Community at the Indira Gandhi Centre for Indian Culture.

Port Louis, April 26, 2011.

Your Excellency, Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius,
Your Excellencies,
Ministers and Members of the National Assembly,
Members of the Indian community and friends of India,
Distinguished Guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am very happy to be with you this evening. I was deeply impressed with the beautiful cultural performance, which shows the strong cultural bonds that we share.

Today, it was a moment of great joy, when I had the privilege of unveiling the statue of a proud Indian, a true statesperson and a distinguished personality - Smt. Indira Gandhi, the late Prime Minister of India. Throughout her life she worked tirelessly for human dignity and harmony in the world. She strove for building an equitable world, and bringing the concerns of the developing countries to the forefront of the global agenda. I would like to thank His Excellency, Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius, for joining me on this momentous occasion.

The Centre of Indian Culture has been aptly named after Smt. Indira Gandhi, who always had special and warm feelings towards Mauritius and its people. She was not a stranger to this beautiful island, her every visit to Mauritius was not only productive, but full of memories of the beauty of the country, and the warmth accorded to her by the people of Mauritius. She often recounted her many meetings with the Father of your Nation, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam. Thus, to participate in today’s event in a Cultural Centre named after Smt. Indira Gandhi, gives me great joy and satisfaction.

My meetings with the leaders of Mauritius have been useful. We have covered the current status, and the future prospects of our dynamic and multifaceted partnership, which naturally is to mutual benefit. In our discussions, over the last two days, we have once again underlined the strategic nature of our mutually beneficial partnership. We are determined to preserve what we have; yet move on towards providing for co-operation in new areas of partnership.
Earlier today, I was honoured to address the Members of House of Democracy of Mauritius - its National Assembly. I was proud to see that Mauritius cherishes and upholds its democratic credentials, sending a loud and clear message to the region and the world beyond, that democracy is the ideal platform to provide for the welfare of its citizens. I congratulate you Mr. Prime Minister, and the leaders of your nation for steadfastly pursuing this path.

An old African proverb says “A friend is someone you share the path with”. This sentiment appropriately marks our centuries old traditional and time-tested relationship. Ours is not only a bond of friendship; it is also a relationship of kinship. Nearly 200 years ago, your ancestors braved the ocean, to arrive at a land unknown to all of them, a land which was inhospitable and ruled by foreign colonial forces. They moved ahead with determination, with an indomitable spirit which could not be crushed, and were able to surmount every obstacle to create what Mauritius is today. I pay homage to each and every one of them, whose work guided Mauritius onward with the purpose and objective of providing for its children and grand children.

The Government of India recognizes the remarkable contribution that the people who trace their origin to India have made in many countries across the globe. Their stories across the world are best captured in the words of Vishwamitra Ganga Aashutosh, the renowned poet from Mauritius, and I had the opportunity to meet him today at the Apravasi Ghat.

“No gold did they find, Underneath any stone  They touched and turned, Yet, every stone they touched, Into solid gold they turned.”

Every year, in India on 9th January, we celebrate the achievements of Overseas Indians - the Pravasi Bharatiya. The Annual Pravasi Bharatiya Divas brings together persons of Indian Origin from across the globe. It is particularly noteworthy that His Excellency, President Sir Anerood Jugnauth, and His Excellency, Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam are among the dignitaries who have been recognized through the Pravasi Bharatiya Samman Award. We are proud of their success and achievements. I had the privilege of personally conferring this award on Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam. He heads his country with distinction and statesmanship.

India has various initiatives for the benefit of its overseas diaspora. We have provided for Non-Resident Indians to vote, and in the recent elections to five States in India, they voted when present in their electoral constituency in India. It has been decided that a mechanism will be worked out, to have a single card merging the PIO Card and the OCI Card in an Overseas Citizen of India Card. The legislative procedures in this regard have also commenced.
Early this month, India and its billion people exulted when India won the Cricket World Cup. I understand that this very hall had a packed audience which enjoyed this superb match. I personally witnessed the enthralling atmosphere at the Wankhede Stadium which was truly amazing. I understand that messages of congratulations were received from various corners of Mauritius, on India’s victory.

Mr. Prime Minister, Friends, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Before I end, may I say that I am confident that my visit will provide additional impetus and momentum, towards expanding the scope of our dynamic and ever expanding bilateral co-operation. I am certain that my compatriots in Mauritius will be true Ambassadors of India, and pursue excellence in whatever field they choose to, and be a source of pride for India and benefit to Mauritius.

To all of you present today and your families and to those unable to attend, I convey my good wishes. I would urge that each one of you continue to work hard, as you have done so far, towards preserving, nurturing, promoting and strengthening the enduring friendship that exists between the Republic of India and the Republic of Mauritius.

Long live Indo-Mauritius friendship.

Thank you.

Jai Hind
521. Address by President Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the ceremony conferring Degree Doctor Honoris Causa on her by the University of Mauritius.

Port Louis, April 28, 2011.

Your Excellency Sir Anerood Jugnauth, President of the Republic of Mauritius,

Your Excellency Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam, Prime Minister of the Republic of Mauritius,

Your Excellency Dr. Rajeshwar Jeetah, Minister of Tertiary Education, Science, Research and Technology,

Sir Ramesh Jeewoolall, Chancellor of the University of Mauritius,

Prof. Soodursun Jugessur, Pro-Chancellor and Chairman of the University of Mauritius,

Prof. Konrad Morgan, Vice Chancellor of the University of Mauritius, Distinguished Professors and Scholars,

Dear Students,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I deem it a privilege to visit the University of Mauritius, an institution which has been providing quality education not only to Mauritians but also to students from countries of the region and beyond. It is acknowledged as a centre of academic excellence in Africa and Asia and other countries over the world.

I am honoured by the decision to confer on me the distinction of a Doctorate Honoris Causa. For me, this becomes an even more momentous occasion as I get the degree in the presence of His Excellency the President of Mauritius and His Excellency the Prime Minister of Mauritius. Mauritius is fortunate to have an able and experienced statesman as its President and a capable, dynamic and forwarding looking leader as its Prime Minister. As a member of the fraternity of the University of Mauritius, the honour which I have now, I convey my warmest greetings to the scholars, professors and students, past and present, of this renowned institution.

My programme in Mauritius commenced with paying homage to Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, the Father of the Mauritian Nation, and would conclude with the paying homage to Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Indian Nation. This encapsulation of my visit between two very significant activities does in a way remind that our relations drew and continue to draw inspiration from ideals and the lives of those tall personalities who fought for our freedom.
Mahatma Gandhi visited Mauritius in 1901 and his most important message to Mauritians was to educate their children so that they were in a position to rise against the indignity of oppression and servitude. Gandhiji used to say education could bring about results which no force can. The Father of your Nation, Sir Seewoosagur, always emphasized that salvation lies in educating and training our men and women.

Therefore, it is pertinent to note that the pursuit of knowledge and education finds a common strand in our endeavour to provide for the common good of our peoples. A University is home to scholars, academicians, and scientists, who through their intellectual and technical pursuits and imparting of knowledge, contribute to the progress of societies and nations. A University is also home for students, whose ideas and work will be the determinants of the future.
Knowledge and education is an every increasing treasure in one’s life. So far as wealth is concerned, if you give away a part or all of your wealth, you will lose that much of it. But, then if you impart knowledge it will multiply. Knowledge also teaches humility. A Sanskrit maxim states , which means humility adorns knowledge. So, a University is a place for the development of your future character and careers. It is here that the minds of the youth are moulded, new ideas are born and the contours of an emerging society, shaped. As a society transforms, the education system must respond to change. It is only then, that it will be relevant. Our institutions of higher learning must gear up for facing challenges of a knowledge-based and technology-driven world. It will be nations with high quality human resources, which will be counted amongst the front ranking nations of the world in the knowledge era. Education has a fundamental role to play in creating responsible, innovative and analytical citizens. I believe that as the youth acquire skills, they should also be made sensitive to the qualities of the head as well as of the heart. As Nobel Laureate Rabindranath Tagore said, “The highest education is that which does not merely give us information but makes our life in harmony with all existence.” Our Universities, therefore, should be symbols of learning, humanism, tolerance and balanced reasoning.

In India, since ancient times there has been a great emphasis on learning.
This tradition got translated into a vision, where establishing an educational infrastructure become a priority in our nation building process in the post-independent phase. It was due to the strength in our education system, with emphasis on Science and Technology, which India has been able to assume a leadership role in Information Technology and other knowledge based sectors.
We continue to lay great emphasis on education. Primary education is now a fundamental right, we are working towards the universalization of secondary education and augmenting our tertiary education institutions.

I was pleased to learn that the Government of Mauritius in its programme for 2010-2015 seeks to transform Mauritius into a Centre of Excellence in Higher Education in the region. I would like to convey my best wishes towards the success of your Plan and in your endeavour to make Mauritius a regional hub of quality tertiary education that is affordable.

India has always been willing to share its experience with all other developing countries, particularly traditionally close friends like Mauritius. Developing countries have their unique problems and challenges. These have to be understood from their perspective. Hence, interaction between the academic institutions of the developing world is an important aspect of their partnership. Universities should study the socio-economic implications of an interconnected and a globalized world, the origin and impact of financial crises, and how our countries can work together for mutual benefits, as also areas of science and technology.

Education is an important dimension of our bilateral relations and I would like to encourage greater cooperation in this field. I am told that over 100 scholarships are given annually to Mauritian students to pursue studies in various streams in India. Additionally, many more students enroll themselves into Indian Universities on a self-financing basis. Some Indian educational institutions, particularly from the private sector, are setting up branches in your island. With management and business institutions also coming in, the circle of quality institutes of engineering, medicine and management, all working hand in hand with their Mauritian counterparts would auger well for the development of the educational linkages between our two countries. Youth are the pillars of future development and I believe that the youth of our two countries must interact with each other not only because of many commonalities that we have but, also because the bridges of friendship built by our forefathers and leaders, must continue into the future with vigour, especially when India is fast emerging as a land of opportunity. And, one more important thing which I always say is that along with education we must inculcate moral, social and human values in our youth because education without values is like a flower without fragrance.

I am pleased that there is a focus on gender empowerment in Mauritius, particularly in the educational sector. As the first woman President of India, this makes me feel happy and I am confident that this augurs well for your country. Gender equality and development provides an ideal platform for any country to grow and find its place with equality and dignity in the comity of nations. As everyone knows a chariot moves on its two wheels. So also, men and women are the two wheels of the chariot of the nation. If one wheel is weak, movement will be slow. Therefore, women, who are the other wheel, must be made equally strong for the nation to progress in a smooth, rapid and balanced manner.

I once again thank all of you for welcoming me into your University. I am, indeed, proud to have received a Doctorate Honoris Causa from such a reputed University and as I will be returning home to India later in the day, I carry back with me very special memories of extraordinary warmth with which I was received by the people and the leadership of Mauritius. I have been deeply touched. My discussions and interactions in the last three days reinforce my firm view that our bilateral ties are unique and our relationship is special. I thank the University for bestowing this honour on me today and I wish the University and all those who are present here good wishes for their future success and prosperity.

Thank you.

522. Speech by President Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the India – Mauritius Business Forum at the International Conference Centre.

Port Louis, April 28, 2011.

Distinguished Guests,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am glad to have this opportunity to interact with the captains of industry of India and Mauritius, during my stay in this beautiful country. This is my first visit to Mauritius, and I am convinced that there exist many opportunities for co-operation in the economic and commercial fields.

Over the last three days, I have had the opportunity to discuss various issues of bilateral and regional importance with the leadership of Mauritius. We have a shared goal to further strengthen our deep and enduring friendship. Our ties are multi-dimensional and we hope to intensify our engagement in various mutually beneficial fields.
As a friend and well-wisher of Mauritius, we in India, are deeply impressed with the continued adherence and commitment to democratic ideals, and in ensuring the welfare and development of all your countrymen. Mauritius has demonstrated the vibrancy of its economy and its resilience, by withstanding the fall-out of the global financial crisis. The Indian economy also faced the global financial meltdown with alacrity and persisted with a high growth trajectory. Today, it is not only one of the major economies of the world, but it is also one of the fastest growing. We have in place an ambitious programme for the expansion of our social and infrastructure sectors. The economy which touched a growth rate of 8.5 percent last year is expected to be further strengthened, and we hope to clock a 9 percent growth rate this year. A large and a growing economy offers many opportunities for other countries as well.

India has been the largest source of imports of goods and services for Mauritius. India has participated in various developmental activities and infrastructure projects in Mauritius. These are effectively visible all over the island. There is a strong presence of several Indian Public Sector Undertakings in Mauritius over the last many years. These PSUs have contributed to various activities in Mauritius, both directly and indirectly, through their participation in Corporate Social Responsibility and other related activities. The Indian private sector also has been equally active in Mauritius through investments in some of the major sectors in your country as in the health, hospitality, pharmaceuticals, education, financial services, IT and BPO sectors among others. We see economic complementarities between our two countries. The agriculture, fisheries and tourism sectors provide opportunities for mutually beneficial cooperation. India’s capabilities in the services sector and the knowledge economy are well recognized.

While political relations between India and Mauritius are close, our bilateral cooperation in the economic and commercial areas needs to be further reinvigorated, given the large untapped potential. Our two Governments have been keenly interested in providing for an environment which is conducive for business. The framework in this regard exists through the many agreements signed over the years. Both countries are also committed to continue to work together, to create a business environment for greater trade and investment flows. The need for a level playing field becomes significant in this regard, along with addressing other attendant pre-requisites which would encourage business to consider opportunities to invest.

The Indian business delegation present here should, alongwith Mauritian businesses, explore business opportunities and seek to establish business contacts with commercial and industrial houses. I encourage greater and more frequent exchange of ideas and interaction between Chambers and business leaders of the two countries. This can be the only way to move ahead, to ensure that we understand and appreciate each other, in surmounting the challenges and take advantage of the opportunities.

I am confident that an accelerated development of economic and commercial ties will become the principal component of the India-Mauritius strategic partnership in the 21st Century. This will not only develop and strengthen the strong and enduring areas of partnership, but will also enhance and promote the socio-economic advancement of our peoples.

I wish your deliberations all success.

Thank you.

523. Statement of President Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the media on board her Special Flight on way back to Delhi after her State Visit to Mauritius.

April 28, 2011.

My visit to Mauritius highlighted the abiding bonds of friendship and generated a greater momentum towards a deeper, strengthened and more diverse partnership. Our bilateral relations have obtained a broader vision and both sides acknowledge that these are for mutual benefit. Both countries enjoy a unique and special relationship in the backdrop of our cultural, historical and linguistic linkages which has been nurtured and groomed into a modern-day partnership. The strong and enduring relationship between India and Mauritius is based on shared democratic values and the commonality of being pluralistic societies. My address at the National Assembly of Mauritius was to particularly emphasize the importance of the long tradition of democracy upheld by our two countries which also links us together.

There is regular high-level political dialogue between India and Mauritius and my visit was a part of that process. I had a fruitful meeting with Sir Anerood Jugnauth, President of Mauritius. I held detailed discussions with Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam. I also met the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Paul Raymond Berenger, the Chief Justice of Mauritius, and the Speaker of the National Assembly of Mauritius.
I reiterated that there exists a national consensus in India on the further consolidation and expansion of our bilateral cooperation with Mauritius. Prime Minister Navinchandra Ramgoolam stated that our ties nurtured by renewed understanding, trust and mutual support, will continue to evolve and flourish. I too am confident that my interactions with the leadership of Mauritius will provide a greater momentum and thrust to our partnership.

Our discussions focused on a diverse range of issues covered under our multi-sectoral and vibrant bilateral partnership. While expressing satisfaction over the current state of our relations, we did feel that the already considerable and growing opportunities could be exploited particularly in the area of trade and economic cooperation. It was agreed to convene the next meeting of the Joint Working Group on the Double Taxation Avoidance Convention.

The Indian business delegation accompanying me was hopeful that a more congenial atmosphere has been generated now that they have had the opportunity to interact with their counterparts and 7 Ministers of the Government of Mauritius who attended their meeting. I also participated in the Business Meet during my stay there to listen to views from the captains of industry from both sides and encourage them to further participate in our bilateral economic exchanges. I am glad that two business MOUs are being signed by private companies.

We have agreed to enhance exchanges in the fields of higher education; information technology; science and technology; tourism; hospitality; culture; rural development and Ayurveda. People to people contacts reflecting our common heritage and traditions will remain prominent in these exchanges.

Mauritius has been unequivocal in its condemnation of International Terrorism. It has consistently supported India’s candidature for permanent membership in an expanded United Nations Security Council. On both these issues, the leadership of Mauritius again reaffirmed its position.

As a country deeply committed to the security of Mauritius and its people, we are determined to work with the Government of Mauritius in enhancing the security of its people through concrete measures including joint action against piracy.

The understandings and exchange of views during my visit have firmly established a solid foundation for the intensification and enhancement of our mutually beneficial strategic partnership and in bringing our two peoples closer together for a better future.

I have invited President Sir Anerood Jugnauth and Prime Minister Dr. Navinchandra Ramgoolam to visit India. They have accepted the invitations.
Mutually convenient dates will be decided through diplomatic channels. I must add that the presence of both of them at the University of Mauritius, where I was conferred a Doctorate Honoris Causa was a remarkable gesture indicative of the strong bonds of affinity, I was honored and I deeply appreciate their participation.

My visits to the Aapravasi Ghat, the Mahatma Gandhi Institute and the Indira Gandhi Centre for Indian Culture - where Prime Minister Navinchandra Ramgoolam and I jointly unveiled the bust of Mrs. Indira Gandhi - were touching reminders of the links that have been woven over a period of time between the leadership and the peoples of our two countries.

I will conclude by mentioning my visit to Le Morne which was to recall the sacrifices of those who struggled against the inequalities which human beings suffered over the course of many centuries, from the scourge of slavery. It was a homage to those who gave up their lives in the struggle for equality and freedom.

Thank you.

New Delhi, April 29, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry, met with the Moroccan Minister of Trade Finance, Mr. Abdellatif Mazouz here (Rabat) today and discussed bilateral relations and economic cooperation. Shri Sharma and Mr Mazouz were Co-chairing the 4th Session of India-Morocco Joint Commission Meeting. The Minister expressed satisfaction over the deepening trade and investment engagement between the two countries. Shri Sharma stated that, "There were possibilities of expanding this tie-up further. There are immense possibilities for trade in Agricultural Commodities and Food Processing." He stressed out the need to shift the focus of Indo-Moroccan Trade from inorganic chemicals and fertilizers to other sectors. "The SMEs of the two countries need to collaborate with each other. He also stressed upon the importance of a more liberal visa policy in case the trade ties were to be expanded further," he added.

The Moroccan side informed that there are good possibilities of investment and partnerships in several fields and sectors in Morocco to gain direct and preferential access to European, African, Arabic and American markets provided by FTAs signed by Morocco at bilateral and regional levels. Both sides agreed to encourage such investments. The Moroccan side also proposed exploring the possibilities of tripartite cooperation involving Morocco, India and Sub-Saharan African countries.

In order to develop Morocco-India customs cooperation, the Moroccan Party proposed to conclude a mutual administrative assistance agreement providing for prevention, investigation and punishment for customs crimes; encourage transparency in commercial regulations set up a framework encouraging expertise and experience exchange in the field of customs. Indian side took note of the proposal;

The National Board of Electricity (ONE) of Morocco proposed to implement partnership with its Indian counterparts in energy efficiency; Rural electrification; Execution of transport networks and production facilities related to the transport network. They also proposed to establish strategic partnerships with the Indian Industrial operators for executing projects, especially in Africa.

Both the sides agreed to establishing a partnership between the National Agency for the Promotion of Small and Medium Enterprises (ANPME) and the National Small Industries Corporation (NSIC).

Bilateral trade has grown from US $ 573.87 million in 2005 to US $ 1.712 billion in 2010 with balance of trade in favour of Morocco (US $ 611 million). The major portion of bilateral trade is made up of import of Phosphates and Fertilizers by India and import of Textiles, Transport Equipment and Machinery by Morocco. Both sides further noted that there are synergies between the Trade requirements of the two countries and agreed that there is a huge potential for expanding and deepening the bilateral trade. Both sides, therefore, expressed their desire to explore new opportunities in Trade and Investment for mutual benefit of the two countries.

Both Parties agreed that the potential sectors of cooperation are Chemical and Fertilizers, Mining, Information Technology, Agro-processing, Pharmaceuticals, Automobiles, Tourism and textiles. Concerted efforts by the Industry Associations of both the countries are needed for promoting bilateral investment flows in the potential sectors by organizing Investment Promotion Events, CEOs Roundtables, Road Shows and Fairs.

MOZAMBIQUE

525. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the bilateral meeting between Minister Anand Sharma and Mozambique Minister of Industry and Commerce Mrs. Mrnando Inroga.

New Delhi, March 28, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister for Commerce & Industry, in a bilateral meeting with Mr. Armando Inroga, Minister of Industry & Commerce of Mozambique expressed optimism over the growing trade and investment between the two countries, as reflected in the annual bilateral trade for the year 2009-10 between the two countries was US $ 427.13 million with our exports amounting to US $ 358.37 million and imports amounting to US $ 68.76 million. Shri Sharma in the meeting said, “In order to exploit the true potential of bilateral trade in a more diversified area, we set up a target of US $ 1billion by the year 2013 during the visit of the President of Mozambique last year. We hope that the trade targets could be achieved”. The Minister expressed happiness over the Investment from India to Mozambique has been growing well. India was the fourth largest investor in Mozambique in 2009 with investments of US $ 64.17 million in energy, mineral resources, agro-industries, transport and communication, food processing, coconut and cashew processing sectors.

Shri Sharma during the meeting observed that, India is now among five major trading partners of Mozambique. The volume of trade between the two countries increased by 73% from US $ 172.77 million in 2008 to US $ 299.92 in 2009 largely due to increase in exports from India to Mozambique. India’s exports to Mozambique increased by 71% rising from US $ 144.37 million in 2008 to US $ 247.01 million in 2009. Union Minister of Commerce informed his counterpart about the great potential to increase India’s exports in the field of drugs and pharmaceuticals, transport equipments, cotton yarn, fabrics, plastic and linoleum products, primary and semi-finished iron and steel, cement, medical and surgical equipments, inorganic/organic/agro-chemicals, electronic goods, etc.

Shri Sharma extended a warm welcome to the Mozambique Minister and the accompanying delegation at the 7th CII EXIM Bank Conclave on India- Africa project Partnership. He also expressed happiness that Mozambique is the partner country at the Conclave this year.

The major items of exports from India are: dried vegetables, raw cashier nuts and coconut, scrap metal, titanium minerals, precious and non-precious stones, etc. And the major items of imports are: petroleum and bitumen minerals, medicines, steel and related products, textiles garments, minerals/fertilizers, cement, etc. It is to be noted that India already has the agreement on Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection (BIPPA) and the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) between the two countries. BIPPA and DTAA would further spur investments in both countries.

Mozambique have agreed to work together on the issue of maritime security so as to make Indian Ocean a safe region for maritime trade. This was agreed to during the delegation level talks between the visiting Minister of National Defence of the Republic of Mozambique Mr. Filipe Jacinto Nyussi and Defence Minister Shri AK Antony here today. Mr.Nyussi thanked India for the help rendered by Indian Navy in the rescue of a Mozambican shipping vessel from pirates off the Mozambican coast last year. The issue of piracy off the East Coast of Africa prominently figured during talks between the two leaders.

Both sides had a fruitful discussion on various bilateral defence cooperation issues. A number of fresh areas for cooperation were identified to enhance and strengthen the existing bilateral relation between the two countries.

The Mozambican Defence Minister also met Chief of Naval Staff Admiral Nirmal Verma, Chief of Army Staff General VK Singh and the Vice Chief of Air Staff Air Marshall NAK Browne. During his five-day visit he will visit key defence installations including the Western Naval Command in Mumbai, National Defence Academy and Armed Forces Medical College in Pune besides the prestigious Army Research & Referral Hospital in New Delhi.

India and Mozambique have enjoyed traditionally close and friendly relations. In March, 2006 the two countries signed a Memorandum of Understanding on Defence Cooperation. Subsequently, two meetings of the Joint Defence Working Group were held in 2008 and 2010.

The scope of the MoU covers all the three Services, envisaging cooperation in the field of military technical cooperation, logistic support and training. It also deals with joint activities include maritime patrolling of the Mozambican coast, mutual training in military institutes, supply of defence equipment/services and establishment of partnership and transfer of knowhow and technology for assembling and repair of vehicles, aircraft and ships as well as rehabilitation of military infrastructure.

His Excellency H. Odein Ajumogobia, Minister of Foreign Affairs (NFM) of Federal Republic of Nigeria was on a three-day official visit to India from 15-17 March, 2011. He was accompanied by Mrs. Ajumogobia and an official-delegation.

EAM and NFM co-Chaired the Fifth Session of the India-Nigeria Joint Commission on 16th March and signed the Agreed Minutes. They emphasised the significance of the Fifth Session as the continuation of the era of meaningful and expanding economic interaction between the two countries. Both agreed to infuse the close political relationship with matching economic content. Nigerian Foreign Minister talked about the reform process underway in the power, petroleum and banking sectors. He also mentioned about the Gas Master Plan under preparation for exploiting the enormous gas reserves and thus highlighted the opportunities available for Indian companies to join the stream.

NFM called on the Hon’ble Prime Minister who recalled his visit to Nigeria in October 2007 and discussed all matters of mutual interest.

The Nigerian dignitary also had meetings with the Commerce & Industry Minister and the Minister of Petroleum & Natural Gas. During the meetings, both sides while appreciating the increasing trade & economic cooperation, also stressed on the need to identify fresh areas of cooperation. Indian side sought the cooperation of the Nigerian authorities for importing additional crude oil.

Nigerian Foreign Minister visited the Foreign Service Institute for an interaction with the Dean and the Faculty. Later, he delivered a major speech at the India International Centre on “India and Nigeria: the Largest Democracies in World and Africa, as Agents of Inter-regional Cooperation for Global Peace and Development” at the India International Centre. This event was organised by Ministry of External Affairs, the School of International Studies of the Jawaharlal University and India International Centre.

NFM also had an interaction at the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry. He mentioned about the recent foray of Indian investments in the fields of telecommunications and health sectors and encouraged the Indian entrepreneurs to look at more possibilities of cooperation with Nigeria.

Bilateral Cooperation MoU in the field of pharmaceuticals was signed between Dept of Pharmaceuticals and the National Agency for Food and Drug Administration and Control (NAFDAC) which will help in promotion of mutual trade in good quality drugs, drugs testing and analysis, detection and prevention of supply of adulterated, fake, drugs. It will also enable education, training and capacity building of the personnel involved in this field.

530. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh’s meeting with Rwandan Prime Minister Mr. Bernard Makuza.

New Delhi, January 14, 2011.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh reiterated that Africa remains India’s top priority and would look to energize the relationship through greater diversity and depth. He said this during his meeting with visiting Rwandan Prime Minister Mr. Bernard Makuza on 14 January 2011.

The Prime Minister further said that India wants to be an active partner in Africa’s development and wants to work with African countries to accelerate the pace of social and economic development. He identified areas of infrastructure development, agriculture, SMEs, HRD and ICT for closer engagement with Africa.

Recalling the first India Africa Forum Summit (IAFS) held in New Delhi in 2008, the Prime Minister said that the decisions taken at that Summit aim to support capacity building, human resource development and infrastructure development in Africa. Many of those decisions were already under implementation including the establishment of 19 capacity building institutions in various African countries as per their own decision. A large number of African trainees were currently in India undertaking various training programmes discussed at the IAFS.

Prime Minister also said that India and Africa would work together to deal with common challenges in the world. He expressed the confidence that Africa would play its role to a full potential for developing its agriculture, infrastructure, industry and services as that would contribute to the world’s growth and development.

The Rwandan Prime Minister appreciated India’s approach to Africa and said that India’s integral outlook which saw Africa as a whole as well as recognized the growing regional integration in Africa besides the bilateral engagements was praiseworthy.

SOUTH AFRICA

533. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the visit of Minister Anand Sharma to South Africa.

   January 11, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry, while addressing the India Business Forum, in Johannesburg last evening, said that there are huge untapped potential exists in the area of investment and bilateral trade between India and South Africa. Interacting with the captains of industry from both sides, Shri Sharma said that for Indian businessmen, Africa is an untested but potential huge trade and investment market for the future. South Africa could provide the key to unlocking this market. While it is hardly possible to see any better partner for Africa than India. He further added that India has become an important destination for investment and we are inviting foreign capital to fulfill our development requirements, at the same time many of our companies are expanding across the world and have earned a name for themselves as global challengers. “There is also a need to move into other sectors. Besides the business areas mentioned above, South Africa also offers enormous opportunities for Indian firms, especially in sectors like construction and engineering, mining, renewable energy and space science”, the Minister said. Speaking on the occasion, Shri Sharma said that Indian investment in South Africa has been substantially rising, at the same time there is a growing trend of South African investments in India. “India’s involvement with Africa is and has been focused on helping African countries develop their own potential for human resource development. This has been an evolving process and India has, over the years, extended cooperation not just in IT, but also in agriculture, SMEs, transportation, infrastructure, health and education”, he added.

During his visit, Shri Sharma participated in the commemorative celebrations of 150 years of arrival of Indians in South Africa. In his meeting with the President of South Africa, Mr. Jacob Zuma, Shri Sharma congratulated President Zuma on South Africa joining BRIC. He also conveyed India’s desire to work together with South Africa in BRIC even as both the countries continue to deepen their partnership in the IBSA framework.

As regards India-SACU PTA, Shri Sharma said that India is now hoping for early conclusion of India—SACU Preferential Trade Agreement and added that this should provide an enormous boost to ongoing levels of bilateral trade—especially in products such as pharmaceuticals, machinery, automobiles, where India enjoys a competitive advantage.

Inaugurating the first-ever MMTC Office in Johannesburg, Shri Sharma said that this will allow us to enhance our direct purchases of key commodities from South Africa including gold and other metals and minerals. The Minister mentioned that MMTC would like to use this office for exploring vast opportunities for sourcing ferrous and non-ferrous metals i.e. nickel, aluminum, copper, tin, zinc, silicon, magnesium, titanium and cobalt from South Africa. The office of MMTC in South Africa could look at business opportunities in the entire African continent and would facilitate greater cooperation. Sourcing of Rough Diamonds and cooperation in the field of Precious Stones could be focus areas for both the countries. MMTC is looking for import of coal and joint ventures for coal exploration with African companies with a committed buy-back arrangement.

India is South Africa’s largest trading partner in South and South-East Asia and one of South Africa’s top-ten trading partners globally. Total trade has more than doubled since 2004-05 to cross $7.5 billion. The bilateral trade, has grown from US $ 3.18 billion in 2004-05 to US $ 7.73 billion in 2009-10. In the year 2009-10, India’s exports to South Africa were US $ 2,058 million and imports from South Africa were US $ 5,674 million. Bilateral trade during this period (April-Sep. 2010) was to the tune of US $ 5,393 mn, up from US $ 3,757 mn in the corresponding 6-month period of April-Sep. 2009. Exports from India to South Africa during the 6-month period of April, 2010 to September, 2010 were US $ 2,267 mn, registering a growth of 118% over the corresponding 6-month period of April-Sep. 2009. Imports from South Africa to India during the 6-month period of April, 2010 to September, 2010 were US $ 3,125 mn, registering a growth of 15% over the corresponding 6-month period of April-Sep. 2009.

India’s exports to South Africa comprises mineral fuels, automobiles, iron & steel, machinery and instruments, organic and inorganic chemicals, drugs and pharmaceuticals, cotton yarn and fabrics and rice and other cereals. India’s imports from South Africa were gold, aluminium, phosphoric acid, coal, pulp and waste paper, precious stones including diamonds, etc.

534. Press Release issue by Ministry of External Affairs on the meeting of the India-South Africa Joint Ministerial Commission.

New Delhi, March 8, 2011.

The 8th session of India-South Africa Joint Ministerial Commission took place in New Delhi on 7th March, 2011. The Minister of External Affairs of India Shri S.M. Krishna, together with his South African counterpart Ms. Maite Nkoana-Mashabane, Minister of International Relations and Cooperation, co-chaired the Joint Ministerial Commission (JMC).

The Senior Officer’s Meeting was held on 4th March, 2011. Discussions were held at the seven different Sub-Committees in the areas of (i) Political, Defence and Security Matters, (ii) Trade, Economic and Technical Co-operation, (iii) Communications & Information Technology, (iv) Minerals and Energy, (v) Arts, Culture, Sport and Recreation, (vi) Human Resource Development, and (vii) Consular and Immigration Matters. Both sides reviewed the implementation of the existing MOUs/Agreements and the functioning of the Joint working Groups under them and new areas of cooperation. There was satisfaction at the depth and diversity established in the India-South African relationship.

The Agreed Minutes of the 8th session of India-South Africa JMC were signed by the two Foreign Ministers.
During the meeting the two sides discussed a wide range of subjects of bilateral interest covering political, economic cooperation, trade and investment, infrastructure, mineral resources, agriculture, Information and communication technology, cultural relations, security cooperation and visa and consular matters. Both sides expressed satisfaction that the target set by Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh and President Jacob Zuma during his visit to India in June, 2010 of bilateral trade of US $ 10 billion by the year 2012 is likely to be achieved in the current financial year 2010-11. The two countries are now working to achieve a higher trade target. The two countries agreed for an early finalisation of SACU-India Preferential Trade Agreement.

The two sides reaffirmed their intent to cooperate at regional and multilateral fora including UN, G-77, G-20, IOR-ARC, IBSA and BRIC. India welcomed South Africa into BRIC, to which it has been recently admitted. South Africa also welcomed Indian Chairmanship of IOR-ARC and looked forward to work with India at IOR-ARC. Both India and South Africa have joined the United Nations Security Council as a non-permanent member for the period 2011-12 and would work together in the Council to hasten the process of reform of the United Nations including reform of the Security Council.

The South African side assured India of its active support at the Second India Africa Forum Summit to be held in Addis Ababa in May this year. They said that it was one of the most important partnerships in Africa and manifests India’s long engagement with Africa.

536. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce & Industry on the Second India – South Africa C. E. O. Forum Meeting.

New Delhi, August 29, 2011.

The Union Minister of Commerce Industry and Textiles, Shri Anand Sharma expressed the confidence that India and South Africa will achieve the target of trade to USD15bn by 2014 before the deadline. “We are satisfied on the growth of trade and investment relations between the two countries. ….. We are hopeful to achieve the target of US$ 15 billion in the year 2014” said Shri Sharma while interacting with the India South Africa CEO Forum along with his South African counterpart Dr Rob Davies here today.

The CEOs of the two countries led by its two Chairmen, Mr Ratan Tata, Chairman, Tata Sons and Mr Patrice Motsepe, Executive Chairman, African Rainbow Minerals met for the second meeting of the India-South Africa CEOs Forum here today. They met with the objective to give further impetus to the growing bilateral economic relations, the Indian and the South African CEOs. The meeting addressed the challenges and constraints hampering the growing economic partnership.

The Sectoral Groups on Financial Services, Pharmaceuticals and Healthcare, Infrastructure and Energy, Manufacturing and Mining came out with a set of comprehensive recommendations which focused on constraints and issues that confronted businesses on both sides in these sectors. The recommendations were presented to Mr Anand Sharma, and Dr Rob Davies, Minister for Trade and Industry, South Africa who joined the CEOs for an interaction.

Taking forward the agenda of the first meeting that was held in August last year further, the sectoral Groups led by their respective Chairmen discussed at length issues like tariff barriers, visa constraints, early finalization of PTA, technology transfer etc that if addressed in the right manner would help in promoting bilateral trade and investments.

The two Ministers took cognizance of the recommendations that were brought to their attention and assured the forum to look into their suggestions and recommendations. The Minister expressed their desire to expedite PTA negotiations. Both the ministers agreed that a friendly visa regime for business people should be established.

In the year 2010-11, provisional figures show 37.64% increase in the bilateral trade which stood at US$ 10,643.52 million with export of US$ 4,161.51 million and imports of US$ 6,482.01 million. Investments from and into South Africa has also seen substantial rise. Indian High Commission figures put the cumulative value of Indian investment in South Africa at US$ 6.7 billion. Shri Sharma expressed happiness over the substantial and healthy growth in two way investment flows. Principal commodities of Export from India to South Africa includes: transport equipments, petroleum (crude & products), drugs, pharmaceuticals & fine chemicals, machinery and instruments, electronic goods, manufactures of metals, plastic & linoleum products, primary & semi-finished iron & steel gems & jewellery. And the principal commodities of Import from South Africa to India are: Gold, coal, coke & briquettes, metalizers ores & metal scrap, inorganic chemicals, iron & steel, non-ferrous metals, machinery except electric & electronic, organic chemicals, pearls, precious semi-precious stones, transport equipments.

The meeting was well attended by more than close to 35 South African and Indian CEOs.

It may be recalled that the first meeting of the Forum took place in Johannesburg in August 2010. In the first meeting, the business leaders of both the countries discussed in detail the opportunities and challenges that bilateral investment & trade offered and the bottlenecks that were hampering India-South Africa business ties. During the first meeting, the members agreed to form sectoral groups in key areas of energy, financial services, mining, pharmaceutical and infrastructure with chief executives of leading companies from the respective sectors as members from both the sides. The Forum also agreed to jointly explore business opportunities in Africa in diverse fields such as pharmaceuticals, healthcare, food processing, automobiles, components, biotechnology, information technology, telecommunications, infrastructure, roads and railways.

In the year 2010-11, provisional figures show 37.64% increase in the bilateral trade which stood at US$ 10,643.52 million with export of US$ 4,161.51 million and imports of US$ 6,482.01 million. Investments from and into South Africa has also seen substantial rise. Indian High Commission figures put the cumulative value of Indian investment in South Africa at US$ 6.7 billion. Major Investors are Tata Group (hotels and resorts, steel, telecommunications, automobiles and mining), Ranbaxy, Apollo, Vedanta Resources Plc, JSW (Jindal Group), Godrej, Mahindra & Mahindra, Essar, Dabur, Emami, the UB Group, Suzlon, Videocon, Kirloskars and pharmaceutical majors including Dr. Reddy’s Lab and CIPLA. India South Africa Bilateral Investment Promotion & Protection Agreement (BIPPA) negotiations are underway.

From Indian side apart from Mr. Ratan Tata, Chairman, Tata Sons who is co-chair, Mr. Sanjay C Kirloskar, Chairman, Kirloskar Brothers Limited, Mr. Rajendra S Pawar, Chairman, NIIT Ltd, Mr Satish Reddy, Managing Director, Dr Reddy’s Laboratories, Mr. Amit Burman, Vice Chairman, Dabur India Ltd, Mr. Onkar S Kanwar, Chairman, Apollo Tyres Ltd, Mr. Syamal Gupta, Advisor, Tata International Limited, Mr. M. (South Africa) are the members of the CEO Forum.
537. Statement by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the Centenary Celebrations of African National Congress at the U.N.

New York, September 22, 2011.

Your Excellency President Zuma, Your Excellency President Jonathan, Your Excellency Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon, Fellow Ministers and Distinguished Guests,

It is a matter of pride for me to join other leaders and fellow Ministers in celebrating the forthcoming centenary of the African National Congress in January 2012. We in India fully share the joy of our South African brothers and sisters in celebrating their great victory over racism and colonialism.

The ANC was at the forefront of one of the greatest political struggles of history. Its campaign against racist oppression and injustice was a long and difficult one. It was only the vision of great leaders like Nelson Mandela, Walter Sisulu and Oliver Tambo and the enormous sacrifices of the South African people cutting across racial boundaries that ultimately ensured that truth and justice prevailed.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

I would like to take this opportunity to pay homage to the great leaders of the ANC and the many unnamed South Africans whose sacrifices for freedom and dignity have made it possible for us to celebrate this historic moment today.

The ANC’s triumph against institutionalized racism of apartheid was celebrated as much in India as in South Africa itself. Indeed, the success of the ANC was at once the success of all people across the world who have suffered under colonial and racist oppression.

The ANC’s greatness is not only in that it successfully and peacefully overthrew the apartheid state, but in that it managed to go beyond this by building a new democratic South Africa based on non-racialism and equal respect for all its people. The foresight of Nelson Mandela and his policy of national reconciliation has helped the ANC to forge a new rainbow nation out of the bitter hatred and division sown by apartheid.

We in India are proud of the success of South Africa’s democratic transition and its emergence as a leading nation in the world. Indeed, a very special bond unites our two nations.
Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

The Indian freedom struggle overthrew the mightiest empire of its time and did so peacefully. This would not have been possible without the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, leading us in Satyagraha. South Africa is the cradle of Satyagraha. It is there that Mahatma Gandhi first practiced ahimsa when confronted by the politics of evil. It is South Africa that turned Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, a young lawyer, into the Mahatma.

India’s commitment to the battle waged by the people of South Africa and by the ANC against apartheid was total. My country could not and did not remain indifferent to this crusade for freedom, equality and human dignity. In a message addressed to the South African people in 1946, Jawaharlal Nehru said that India would fight for the rights and honour of all South Africans, whatever may be the burden that we may have to carry. He promised to fight it in India, in South Africa and in the international assemblies. And fight it, we did.

Here, I would like to quote what the great Nelson Mandela has said about India: “This country and my own have long and cherished bonds of friendship. India shall always hold a place of honour in the ranks of our international solidarity partners. For it was India who first took up the case for us against apartheid at the United Nations. It was India who always stood at the head of the international community’s moral, political and material support to our cause to liberate our country from the bondage of racial oppression and racist rule. Today democratic South Africa has friends and supporters all over the world. We can today count amongst our allies some of the most powerful countries in the world. And we are very grateful for that support and friendship. We can, however, not forget for one moment those that stood by us when it was neither fashionable nor easy to do so. Amongst those, as I have said, India takes pride of place.”

We are also greatly proud of the role of our Indian brothers and sisters who made South Africa their home in this great struggle. The Natal Indian Congress and the Transvaal Indian Congress, both of which owe their origins to the Mahatma, stood shoulder to shoulder with the African National Congress in its endeavours. South Africans of Indian origin contributed significantly to the ANC and they continue to do so today.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

It is a matter of pride for us that we have converted this rich legacy into a thriving bilateral relationship. Our nation-building efforts have been guided by a common philosophy that stresses tolerance and respect for diversity.
It is thus no surprise that we stand for principles and the rule of law in our respective nations and in international relations. We are natural partners and our partnership extends beyond the bilateral. Our common aspirations and common values unite us in the UN Security Council, in G-20, in the India-Brazil-South Africa (IBSA) forum, and in BRICS.

This is the century of Asia and Africa. The new dawn that the freedom fighters of India and the African National Congress dreamed about is upon us. We walked together in the walk to freedom; we now continue this journey into a better future for our two nations and for the entire world.

Thank you.

540. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs welcoming the successful referendum in Southern Sudan.

New Delhi, February 14, 2011.

India welcomes the successful conclusion of the referendum held in Southern Sudan in which its people have voted overwhelmingly for a separate state of South Sudan, in a credible and peaceful manner.

This is a momentous development in the history of South Sudan and India congratulates all concerned parties for conducting the proceedings peacefully and amicably, in achieving the important landmark of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 2005, which India fully supports.

India looks forward to working closely with and to extending all possible assistance to both sides in Sudan, with whom she has friendly and traditional ties.

541. Briefing by Official Spokesperson and Joint Secretary (WANA) on visits of Envoys from Sudan and South Sudan

New Delhi, April 28, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. Let me introduce my colleague Mr. Rajeev Shahare, Joint Secretary (WANA) – that is West Asia and North Africa.

Yesterday and today the External Affairs Minister (EAM) has received and has had very good exchange of views with the Special Envoys of Sudan and that of Government of Southern Sudan.

Foreign Minister Ali Ahmed Karti of Sudan was in New Delhi from the 26th to 28th of April. Dr. Priscilla Joseph Kuch, Minister in the Office of the President of the Government of Southern Sudan (GOSS) , arrived yesterday and would be in India for a couple of days. Today she held delegation-level talks with EAM and would be calling on the Vice-President of India shortly.

India and Sudan have traditionally enjoyed cordial and friendly ties. Sudan is home to some 10,000 persons of Indian origin as well as non-resident Indians.

The country emerged from a long civil war with the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) in Nairobi on 9th January, 2005 between the Government of Sudan and Sudan People’s Liberation movement. This eventually led to a referendum between 9th to 16th January this year when 98.3 per cent of the population in Southern Sudan voted for seceding from the North. As such, a new country called Republic of South Sudan is poised to formally emerge on the 9th July 2011.

EAM congratulated the Foreign Minister of Sudan for successful conduct of a referendum in a fair and peaceful fashion. He reiterated India’s pledge to continue to be a development partner of Sudan and to extend all possible assistance in development of infrastructure, capacity-building, human resource development, etc.

In 2010 India provided 130 ITEC scholarships to Sudan besides 20 scholarships through ICCR for graduate, post-graduate and Ph.D. courses. During the current financial year, in addition to the above, ten agricultural scholarships for Ph.D. and M.Sc. under the India-Africa Plan would also be provided to Sudan. Sudanese diplomats have been attending the Professional Course for Foreign Diplomats at the Foreign Service Institute. Their defence personnel have been attending short duration peace-keeping courses at the United Services Institute.

What is more, India has always been a preferred destination for Sudanese students, especially in cities like Pune, Mumbai, Hyderabad, Chennai and Bangalore. It is estimated that currently over 3000 Sudanese students are studying in India. Over the years, more than 30,000 Sudanese students have graduated from India and currently occupy very important positions in the government, in politics, in business and are of course maintaining their affection for India.

India has also played a vital role in promoting and maintaining peace in Sudan with some one-third of the total UN contingent comprising of Indian defence personnel. The Indian contingent have, with their exemplary conduct, with their work in development of social infrastructure in Sudan, won numerous hearts and minds. What they have been doing has not only benefited but has also been greatly appreciated by the community.

Over the years India has been extending lines of credit (LOC), currently amounting to 566 million dollars. These LOCs are extended on very soft terms, and I must say that Sudan has utilized them very effectively along with their Indian partners in creating productive and useful infrastructure including a 500 MW thermal power station in Kosti that is likely to be completed soon at a cost of 350 million dollars. Other projects already undertaken by Sudan and India together utilizing the LOCs include power transmission lines, railway lines, a cement factory, a sugar mill and so on.
At the same time, Indian public sector and private sector companies have made substantial investments in Sudan which exceeds 2.5 billion dollars including sizeable stakes in hydrocarbon assets that are owned by ONGC Videsh Limited (OVL).

Besides OVL, a number of prominent Indian companies are present in Sudan which include BHEL, TCIL, RITES, Bharat Electronics Limited, Kirloskar, L&T, and the others.

Sudan is one of the prominent producers of hydrocarbons in Africa besides Nigeria and Angola, and our cooperation with Sudan constitutes an important element in our quest for energy security. We have also established an India-Sudan Joint Working Group on cooperation in the oil and gas sector, and the first meeting of the JWG was held in Khartoum in November last year.

One of our initiatives which has been very well received in Sudan is the solar electrification project. The first such project was undertaken in April 2006, in Khadarab village, which is about a two-hour drive from Khartoum. The solar electrification project brought electricity for the first time ever to homes of 1500 villagers literally transforming their lives. And such was the impact that many similar projects are currently in the pipeline. Not only that, Central Electronics Limited (CEL) also set up a plant for assembling solar photo voltaic panels at The Energy Research Institute in Khartoum which was inaugurated by the President of Sudan in 2007.

Sudan is a member of the Pan-African E-Network. Also our trade is now close to a billion dollars and has tripled in the last eight to nine years. What is more, it is evenly balanced. India has been exporting a series of engineering goods, machinery, equipment, automobiles, pharmaceutical products, etc. Tata buses, auto-rickshaws basically dominate the roads in Sudan.

India has similarly maintained good presence and contacts in Southern Sudan. Our MOS for External Affairs was present at the signing of CPA in Nairobi on the 9th January, 2005. India was amongst the first Asian countries to set up a Consulate General in Juba in October 2007, which would soon be upgraded to the level of an Embassy.

We have in the past few years been helping GOSS in human resource development and capacity-building in particular. They have been taking advantage of ITEC slots. Also their officials have been receiving training at the Foreign Service Institute. We have already had very useful Parliamentary exchanges.

It is understood from the discussions with GOSS that their biggest priorities at the moment are development of agriculture, because 80 per cent of their population is dependent on agriculture. Also rural development, education and health sectors are major priorities. These are some of the sectors in which India can and is quite willing to play a useful role.

I mentioned the solar electrification project. Another such project is currently being replicated at Juba itself. Talking of the health sector, already representatives of some of the Indian hospitals including Fortis of Bangalore and Miot of Chennai have sent their teams for exploratory talks with the hospitals and health authorities in Southern Sudan. They have made presentations, conducted workshops, and also organized some medical camps.

I am happy to say that India enjoys considerable goodwill in Southern Sudan and Dr. Priscilla’s visit is the first formal high-level contact between GOSS and India. She invited the Indian leadership to Juba on 9th July to witness the birth of a new nation and to participate in their celebrations. She also sought India’s support at the UNGA and other fora for recognition of Southern Sudan as a new nation. She particularly sought India’s assistance in development of sectors like agriculture, horticulture, animal husbandry, rural development, health and education, technical training, HRD, hydrocarbons, and also in de-mining because the long years of decades of civil war have left quite a few areas in Southern Sudan heavily mined.

EAM spoke of India’s strong links with Southern Sudan; congratulated his interlocutor on the peaceful and successful transition that is currently under way; and reiterated India’s commitment to extend all possible assistance to the Government and the people of Southern Sudan.

The country is resource rich and blessed with fertile soil as a gift of the White Nile. It is understood that despite almost 90 per cent of the land being arable, currently under 20 per cent is under cultivation and that makes Agriculture an important area of cooperation for us. And as I said, GOSS is according strong priority to development of the agricultural sector on which 80 per cent of the people are dependent.

So, this is a flavor of the discussions that EAM had with both his interlocutors, and we wanted to give you a sense of that. My colleague and I will be happy to take your questions on the visit of the two Special Envoys.

Question: Will the up-gradation of our Consulate General to that of an Embassy happen before the country becomes independent? When are the Southern Sudanese going to open their own Embassy in Delhi? And during the talks here did India make any offer of any specific amount of money or are they going to send a delegation of experts to explore things?

Joint Secretary (WANA) (Shri Rajeev Shahare): These are the logical questions whenever a new country comes into existence. This was our first contact with the representative from the Government of South Sudan. We have a Consulate in Juba, like you have rightly pointed out, which was opened three years back. The representative of the President of the Government of Southern Sudan Dr. Priscilla conveyed her very deep appreciation that India was one of the first countries that opened their Consulate. We shall certainly upgrade the Consulate. To start with, the present incumbent will be designated as Charge d’affaires. But before that we will be also sending our own delegation. It will be a multi-disciplinary delegation from various Ministries and agencies looking at our engagement and the proposed engagement with the Government of Southern Sudan. As mentioned by the Official Spokesperson, from the Ministries of Agriculture, Rural Development, Petroleum and Natural Gas, ONGC Videsh Limited, on other capacity-building such as education, training, we will be carrying a very very large delegation to Government of Sudan and we are engaging them on these issues. Certainly these are the milestones which we will be looking at with regard to re-nomenclature of our present Consulate. The various steps that need to be taken whenever a new country comes into existence, all these will be taken in due course of time. The fact that we have had the first exposure, the first meeting with the Government of South Sudan itself and their appreciation for India’s stand on various issues so far, whatever we have done for Southern Sudan, they are extremely appreciative of that, and we intend to also deepen our engagement with the Government of South Sudan.

Question: OVL has invested considerably (Unclear)... and the trade figures do not seem to include that amount.

Joint Secretary (WANA): Very true. What the Official Spokesman has given is the non-oil figure.

Question: Have we recovered all the money we invested there? We have been getting oil from Sudan for several years now.

Joint Secretary (WANA): I will tell you. We are getting almost 160,000 barrels a day. That is our production there. You are right, it started with a billion dollars or so and right now it is around 2.4 billion dollars, just that of OVL. Quite a bit of the oil which we get is located in Southern Sudan. I would say around 100,000 barrels or more than that is located in the Southern Sudan region. We are looking at a very very substantial engagement with Southern Sudan on this sector. Might I also add that OVL are already in engagement with the Southern Sudan leadership; they have offered them training; they have offered them many things to go beyond the present relationship and present engagement.

Question: Can you tell us what is the situation politically in Darfur areas because we have been taking about Darfur for quite some time? Secondly, what kind of efforts are we going to introduce so far as recognition of Southern Sudan is concerned in UNGA? You have said we have taken some efforts.

Official Spokesperson: As far as the recognition of Southern Sudan is concerned as a nation, what we understand is that the African Union has already accorded recognition; the Arab League is agreeable in principle; and let us just say for this purpose Northern Sudan and Southern Sudan are also agreeable on this; this all stems from the Comprehensive Peace Agreement that was signed in Nairobi in January 2005 and which was hammered out through a cooperative process also involving different countries. It took many years in the making. We are given to understand that a number of other countries including some of the key nations are also on board. Short point is that they have sought India’s support in the matter. You would recall that we had welcomed the outcome of the referendum. As I said, EAM congratulated and commended the Government of Sudan for conducting the referendum in a peaceful and a fair manner. So, we would of course extend whatever assistance that we can as a member of UN, as a nonpermanent member of the UN Security Council, in this matter.

As far as the issue of Darfur is concerned, suffice it to say that we would like to see the issue resolved in a peaceful manner consistent with Sudan’s unity and territorial integrity.

Question: Of the 160,000 barrels produced by OVL, is India getting 50:50 or is it less?

Official Spokesperson: 160,000 barrels is India’s share. We have about 25 per cent stake in the facilities there and our share is 160,000 barrels per day which is then brought to India through Port Sudan.

Question: Just a clarification on the oil assets in Southern Sudan. What is their status? Was it brought up in the talks by either the Indian side or the Southern Sudanese side? Will those contracts be honoured or will they be redrafted?

Official Spokesperson: This was touched upon. As the Government of Southern Sudan is getting about consolidating, furthering the transition and going about in the process of nation-building, they are obviously taking stock of all the contracts, agreements and so on. Our understanding is that the agreements and the contracts pertaining to India will be honoured.

Question: Sir, has the representative of Southern Sudan visited other Asian countries or is India the first?
Official Spokesperson: That is a question that you need to ask her.

Question: As far as the bifurcation of Sudan is concerned, it was a very sensitive and tricky issue. How did we reach the decision that we should support the bifurcation? Was it done after the referendum was over or before?

Official Spokesperson: There were long years of civil war. It has been quite a traumatic civil war. It has been a conflict in which hundreds of thousands of people have perished. The Comprehensive Peace Agreement was a consequence of the long struggle. It was signed in Nairobi, was hammered out with the good offices of the international community, and this is January, 2005. Our MOS for External Affairs was present on that important occasion and everything has kind of flown from that. Gradually, our engagement with GOSS took shape; it was gradually increased, I have already given you a flavor. Then in 2007 we set up our Consulate General. We were one of the first Asian countries to do so. That is how we have gone about it along with members of the international community.

Question: Is Dr. Priscilla going to visit any other city or is she going to be here only?

Official Spokesperson: She will be in Delhi and she returns home on the 30th.

Question: On 9th July, who would be going from India? Has any decision been taken?

Official Spokesperson: That decision will be taken. She has extended a very cordial invitation to Indian leadership to be present on that momentous occasion for that new country which will come into being formally on the 9th of July.

Question: Are they going for parliamentary democracy or something like that?

Official Spokesperson: We are told today that they are in the process of drafting their Constitution; there will be a Constituent Assembly; and the Constituent Assembly will then go about deciding whether they would have a parliamentary form of government or some other. Indications are that there will be a bicameral parliament. That is what they are mentioning. But obviously this is nation-building and they will go about it as per the will of the people, as per the genius of the people.

Question: Are you having the same warmth with Southern Sudan also?

Official Spokesperson: I did mention that we traditionally have had very good relations, with Sudan. The role that India has played, has been a constructive, has been positive, has been a proper and correct role. That is something which has been deeply appreciated and conveyed to us by GOSS. You have the Special Envoy of the President of GOSS visiting us and we have, through our Consulate in Juba and through our Ambassador in Khartoum, maintained close and regular contacts.

Question: Considering first election in Sudan was conducted by Sukumar Sen in the 1950s and considering that the South Africans sought our help to write their Constitution and all that, have the Southern Sudanese approached us for any help in putting together their Constitution? Have they sought any experts from India?

Official Spokesperson: There is one principle of our engagement with any country and that is that we go according to the wishes and aspirations of those countries, be it in our neighbourhood, be it in Africa. Today, the discussion veered around cooperation in certain areas which I have already enumerated. We have also decided to work on a roadmap of cooperation and that is precisely why in the next few weeks we would be sending a multi-sectoral delegation representing different Ministries and Departments to Sudan. They will be going to Khartoum, they will be going to Juba. Some of the suggestions and thoughts we have taken onboard which they made today so we can respond to that. And depending on what their wishes are and depending on what our capacity is, we will take a view in the matter.

Question: China has been investing about ...(Unclear)... billion US dollars in Sudan's oil reserves. Do you think there is a cooperation between India and China as far as investing in Sudan is concerned? Can you throw light on that?

Official Spokesperson: What I know is that amongst the major countries which have a sizeable presence in the hydrocarbons sector in Sudan, as you rightly said, are China, India and Malaysia. There is also a Memorandum of Understanding between India and China on cooperation in Hydrocarbon sector, which I think was signed, if I remember right, sometime in 2005. We have agreed that we will cooperate wherever we can including if there are possibilities or joint exploration, joint acquisition of assets, etc., training, various things. And it also says that we can cooperate and we can compete because both China and India have huge energy needs and our dependence on imported energy is high. So, that is the broad framework. But here as far as Sudan is concerned, I believe that in some of the assets that we have, we have a certain stake, the Chinese have a certain stake, the Malaysians have a certain stake in the same assets.

Question: On solar panels, is it a grant or is it a loan?

Official Spokesperson: The first one which I mentioned was out of a grant which was operationalised in 2006. Since then we are replicating this in a number of areas. So, I can check whether that is out of grant or that is out of …

Question: They have huge oil resources. Why are we installing solar panels?

Official Spokesperson: And we are also building a thermal power station which is 500 MW.

Question: Then, congratulations.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

All right. I think we have run out of questions. Thank you.

542. Statement by Permanent Representative the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UN Security Council briefing on the Sudan.

New York, June 20, 2011.

Please see Document No.730.

543. Statement by Secretary (East) Sanjay Singh on the visit of Vice-President M. Hamid Ansari to Juba and Kampala.

New Delhi, July 7, 2011.

Hon’ble Vice President of India will be visiting Juba to represent India on the historic occasion of the proclamation of the independent state of South Sudan, on July 9, 2011. He would also be paying a transit visit to Kampala on his journey to South Sudan. During his stay in Kampala, he will be meeting the Ugandan President, Mr. Yoweri Museveni.

A referendum on South Sudan was held on January 9, 2011 as envisaged in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) signed in January 2005 in Naivasha, Kenya which was witnessed by Shri E. Ahamed, MOS(EA). The CPA which India fully supports brought an end to the long drawn hostilities between the North and South Sudan which lasted over two decades. The people of South Sudan overwhelmingly voted with a majority with 99.77% for the creation of a new state. On July 9, 2011 the new State of South Sudan will be proclaimed. The Government of India commends the leadership of both South Sudan and Sudan who have shown exemplary patience and maturity to see fulfillment of this pivotal landmark of CPA.

India has multifaceted relations with Sudan and substantial ties with the country. India has a strong presence in Sudan. India was one of the first Asian countries to open a consulate in Juba in 2007. We look forward to the continued growth and diversification of our relations with South Sudan as it charts its independent destiny.

We have had substantial exchange of views during the recent exchange of visits with South Sudan, and the talks held during Shri E. Ahamed, MOS (EA)’s visit to Juba last month have helped concretise a road map for intensifying cooperation with South Sudan. Earlier Dr. Pricilla Kuch Minister in the office of South Sudan President had visited New Delhi in April 2011 and met the Vice President and EAM. The recent India-Africa Forum Summit held in Addis Ababa testifies to our commitment to working together with our African friends for the development of Africa.

India has been one of the largest contributor of troops to the United Nations Mission in Sudan (UNMIS) in addition to the notable contribution of our Police officers to both UNMIS and the Government of South Sudan. We have recently pledged US$ 5 million for development assistance of South Sudan and capacity building projects such as a Vocational Training Centre and a Rural Technology Park under our Aid to Africa and IAFS-II programme. Sudan is a major beneficiary under India’s Technical and Economic Cooperation programme. To continue our engagement with South Sudan under this programme, 75 additional seats have recently been announced for South Sudan. The Pan-Africa E-Network Project undertaken by India in Africa has been a huge success. We shall be extending the entire package of Pan-Africa E-Network, including its tele-medicine and tele-education components, to South Sudan.

i) Vice-President will be leaving for Juba tomorrow on July 8 via Kampala.

ii) The Vice-President will proceed for Juba on the morning of Saturday July, 9 at 8 am and reach Juba international airport at 9 am.

iii) The official segment of the celebrations in Juba will commence at 11 am which would include military parade, national anthem, prayers followed by formal proclamation of the independence of South Sudan.
which would be read out by the Speaker of the South Sudan Legislative Assembly, Rt. Hon. James Wani Igga. There will be a flag ceremony followed by a 21 gun salute and the national anthem of the Republic of South Sudan. The entire programme is likely to last around three hours.

iv) The President of South Sudan Gen. Salva Kiir Mayardit will host a lunch for the invitees. The Vice-President will return to Kampala the same evening after attending the ceremony in Juba.

v) On the 9th evening after return from Juba, the High Commissioner of India in Kampala will host a reception in the honour of Vice-President to meet the Indian community in Uganda.

vi) The Vice-President will return to New Delhi on Sunday July 10.

UGANDA

India has traditionally strong relations with Uganda that go back in time. The presence of a relatively large community of people of Indian origin has added substance to our relationship. India-Uganda ties are multifaceted and have been marked by regular exchange of high level visits. It will be recalled that Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited Kampala to attend CHOGM in November 2007; President Museveni paid a bilateral to India in April 2008; on that occasion he also participated in the First India-Africa Forum Summit held in New Delhi. Vice President and President Museveni are expected to discuss ways and means of strengthening further the India-Uganda bilateral relationship and also focus on regional and international issues.

India is among the larger trading partners of Uganda with our two way bilateral trade being approximately US $ 160 million with India having a favourable balance of trade. A number of Indian companies have their presence in Uganda. India extends substantial cooperation to Uganda by way of ICCR scholarships and training slots under the India Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme. We intend to work towards further deepening and widening our partnership with Uganda.

Letter of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to President of South Sudan greeting him and the people of South Sudan on their proclamation of independence.

New Delhi, July 9, 2011.

"I have received your gracious letter sent through Her Excellency Dr. Priscilla Joseph Kuch, Minister in your office, inviting me to attend the historic celebrations scheduled on July 9, 2011 in Juba when South Sudan will formally proclaim its independence.

On behalf of the people and Government of India, I convey my warmest felicitations and greetings to the people and Government of Southern Sudan on this momentous and happy occasion. It marks the successful conclusion of important landmarks spelt out in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 2005, including, in particular, the peaceful conduct of the referendum.

I take this opportunity to convey India’s best wishes to Your Excellency and the people of Southern Sudan as you embark on a new journey of nation building and development and greater peace and prosperity in the region. We applaud your commitment to addressing all outstanding issues with North Sudan in an amicable and peaceful manner.

I have been apprised of the comprehensive discussions held in April this year between Her Excellency Dr. Priscilla Kuch and my colleague Mr. S.M. Krishna, Minister of External Affairs, on important issues of mutual interest. The Minister of State for External Affairs, Mr. E. Ahamed led a multi-disciplinary delegation to Juba on June 15, 2011 to reiterate India’s support and solidarity with the people of Southern Sudan. India stands ready to share its development experience and extend whatever assistance possible to Southern Sudan. I am confident that our cooperation will grow from strength to strength in the coming days for the mutual benefit of our two peoples.

My prior commitments do not permit me to attend the historic celebrations in Juba. I wish to assure you that India will be represented at the event at a high level.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration."

TANZANIA

546. Address by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the Reception for the Indian Community in Dar-es-Salaam.

Ambassador Mr. K.V. Bhagirath

Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to be here among you today in Dar es Salaam, at the first official engagement of my visit to Tanzania. This is a country which I deeply admire and know very well from my earlier close association with Mwalimu Julius Nyerere.

I have just come from Ethiopia after attending the Second Africa India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa which concluded yesterday. I had extensive interactions with African leaders and found a fund of immense goodwill for India. The Summit has launched a new era of partnership between India and Africa in the true spirit of South-South cooperation. The decisions we have taken at the Summit cover the areas of training and capacity building, infrastructure development and trade and investment.

This is my first visit to Tanzania as Prime Minister and I look forward to my meetings with President Kikwete and other leaders of Tanzania tomorrow.

Dear friends,

We have had historical links with erstwhile Tanganyika and Zanzibar. These have now been transformed into a strong and abiding relationship with the United Republic of Tanzania. Tanzania for us is the gateway to eastern Africa.

You represent both Tanzanians of Indian origin and Indian expatriates and constitute the largest migrant group in Tanzania. I understand that the total number of Persons of Indian Origin in Tanzania is over 40,000 spread all across the country.

Many years ago, adventurous sea faring traders and merchants crossed the Indian Ocean, braving harsh conditions, and forged new connections and linkages with this region. Many settled here to begin a new life.

Over the decades, the Indian community has earned a reputation for its entrepreneurial spirit, its perseverance and hard work, and for making remarkable contributions to the development of this country in areas like agriculture, education and health.

Indian expatriates, who first came as teachers and experts, and who now come as professionals and skilled craftsmen, have found Tanzania a rich and welcoming society, with many commonalities with India. Their numbers have grown and are indicative of our deep bonds of friendship. They symbolize the contemporary face of our civilizational and historical linkages with Tanzania and with East Africa as a whole.

The fact that Indians and Indian origin communities like you are living and working in various parts of Africa and helping to create wealth and prosperity is extremely impressive and commendable. It shows how well Indian communities have assimilated into local communities in this continent and how much their contributions are respected. I would urge you to be good Tanzanian citizens, and continue to spread the high values which India is known for.

I wish to particularly note the presence here today of Tanzanian Members of Parliament of Indian origin, many of whom were elected in the October 2010 general elections. Their participation in the political institutions of this country is a reflection of the trust and confidence they enjoy among the electorate. I congratulate them on their achievements and wish them all success in the service of the people of this country.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Our government is deeply committed to the welfare and prosperity of the Indian community in Tanzania. We have created a separate Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs to look after the welfare of the Indian community overseas and to facilitate their participation in the socio-economic growth processes in India. The government has taken several initiatives such as establishment of the Overseas Indian Community Welfare Fund and the Overseas Indians Facilitation Centre. The Pravasi Bharatiya Diwas has become an effective platform for reaching out to our overseas community.
Your achievements are a matter of pride for all Indians. I am confident that each one of you will serve as a bridge of friendship between India and Tanzania. One of the cornerstones of our interaction remains our shared culture and traditions. I hope the Indian Cultural Centre in Dar es Salaam, which has opened recently, will provide a platform for children, families and others to preserve and promote our cultural traditions.

I once again thank you for being here today and giving me this warm welcome. I wish you all a very bright future in this great land that you have now made your home.

Thank you.

547. Remarks by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the launch of the Dar es Salaam Institute of Technology.

Your Excellency President Jakaya Kikwete,
Your Excellency Professor Makame Mbarawa, Minister of Communications and Science and Technology, Professor John Kandoro, Principal of the Dar-es-Salaam Institute of Technology,
Dear teachers,
Dear students.

It is a pleasure for me to inaugur ate the India-Tanzania Centre of Excellence in Information and Communication Technology in the distinguished presence of His Excellency President Jakaya Kikwete.

I have seen, including the Param High Speed Super Computer. I understand that this project will facilitate the growth of information and communication technology in rural areas. The setting up of ten tele-centres in various regions of Tanzania will provide services in tele-education and tele-medicine to many citizens.

Dear friends,

I have been a teacher myself and I have never lost an opportunity to be in the company of students. I am very pleased to see so many young Tanzanian students around me. I can sense their sense of excitement and hope about the future.

We have completed the setting up of three components of the Pan African e-Network Project: the tele-conference facility at the State House, the tele-medicine facility at the Dar es Salaam Cancer Institute, and the tele-education facility in the University of Dar-es-Salaam. These Centres are operational and courses are underway in the University of Dar-es-Salaam since 2009.

I commend the vision of President Kikwete to make Tanzania an Information Technology hub of East Africa. The growth of the information technology industry in India has brought about many positive changes to the Indian economy.

India is ready to provide all the help we can within our resources to enable Tanzania to create a pool of world-class IT professionals. If we can produce a steady stream of highly trained scientists, technologists and engineers, our cooperation would be worthwhile and we would be putting our money to good use.

I see this Institute as the first step in our long journey of cooperation in the field of science and technology. We would be more than happy to share our experience and knowhow in all fields, including information technology, agricultural sciences, geology, and health and medicine.

I would specially like to announce our readiness to cooperate with Tanzania in the area of space technology and applications. As a developing economy ourselves, we have benefited immensely from the applications of space technology and our expertise is available for Tanzania.

Investment in education and human resource development has been the focus of successive governments in India. This is a painstaking effort, but its returns are assured and limitless. We are ready to cooperate with Tanzania in capacity building. We welcome more Tanzanian students to come to India to study, to train and to build up their expertise. A large number of scholarships are available today under the framework of our cooperation with Africa and I would invite you to make full use of these opportunities.

It is said that knowledge is power. Knowledge, combined with creativity and productivity, can become an effective instrument for the prosperity and wealth of a nation. The scientific and technological empowerment of the youth has a direct correlation to a nation’s social and economic progress. The development of human resources will be vital to sustain the Tanzania’s healthy economic growth rates of the past few years.
The countries of the South have today shown that technology is no longer the preserve of only the rich countries. We have the capability to build a large industrial and technological base. We just have to think big and invest our resources judiciously. We have to become technologically independent and self-sufficient.

We also have to constantly innovate and remain open to new ideas. We should develop the capacity to remain in the forefront of knowledge based industries. This requires the creation of new institutions of excellence which can contribute to socio-economic development in our countries.

I am confident that the faculty and students of Dar es Salaam Institute of Technology will propel the information technology industry in this great country forward.

I congratulate the Indian Centre for Development of Advanced Computing or CDAC for the positive role they have played in making this Institute a reality. This Institute stands as symbol of South-South Cooperation.

Dear friends,

I encourage you, the budding engineers of this institution, all success as you chart a new future for yourselves and make Tanzania the information and communication technology hub of East Africa.

You represent the future of Tanzania, and from what I have seen I can say with confidence that the future of Tanzania is bright.

I thank you and may god bless you.

548. Remarks by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to the Media at Dar es Salaam.

Your Excellency President Kikwete,

Distinguished representatives of the media,

Thank you very much, Mr. President, for your kind words and for your gracious hospitality. I am truly delighted to be here in Dar es Salaam, the abode of peace.

I have visited Tanzania earlier in other capacities, but this is my first visit as Prime Minister. I have come to expand the horizons of our traditional friendship with Tanzania.

President Kikwete and I have had very fruitful discussions. I am extremely happy with the steady growth in our bilateral relationship, especially since President Kikwete’s visit to India in 2008.

There is complete unanimity between us that a strong and all encompassing partnership between India and Tanzania is in the core national interest of both countries. Looked at from any point of view – whether geographical proximity, cultural influences or the stages of our development, it is essential for India and Tanzania to have the closest possible relations. We have agreed to accelerate our efforts to this end.

Sustainable development is a top priority for both of us. Tanzania has given extraordinary political and intellectual support to the South, to the G-77 and to the Nonaligned Movement. In the light of the present global economic and financial uncertainties, we should revitalize this cooperation and make our voice heard in the affairs of the world.

I conveyed to President Kikwete that India, on its part, is ready to partner Tanzania in its nation building efforts. We will focus on areas such as agriculture, small and medium industries, healthcare and human resource development. We support the President’s national agriculture initiative.

We will provide a new line of credit of 180 million US dollars for water supply projects in Dar es Salaam.

Tanzania has been an active participant in India’s capacity building schemes and policies, particularly the Centre of Excellence in ICT and the tele-education component of the Pan-African E-network project. We will provide a fresh grant of 10 million US dollars for capacity building projects in the social and educational sectors.
Tanzania is an important trading partner for India in this region. India is a major buyer of Tanzanian agricultural products. Many Indian companies are operating here and are keen to diversify and increase their investments. President Kikwete and I have agreed to facilitate this process. Indian investment and technology can help Tanzania to become the industrial and technological hub of East Africa and its engine of growth.

We have very similar concerns in the area of peace and security. Terrorism and piracy are two major problems we both face. We have decided to intensify consultations and coordination to combat such threats. India has contributed to several UN peace-keeping missions in Africa.

We share a common vision of a democratic and equitable world order. We will strengthen our cooperation in the reform of the United Nations system, including of the UN Security Council.

Our strong and multifaceted relationship with Tanzania is one of India’s great success stories in Africa. Our people to people links have contributed significantly to this success. I briefed the President about the Second Africa-India Forum Summit in Addis Ababa and am very encouraged by his support to this process.

I have invited His Excellency President Kikwete to visit India at his earliest convenience. His visit and other high level exchanges will contribute immensely to a close and substantive partnership between us.

In conclusion, allow me to thank you, Mr. President, once again for the generous welcome given to me and the excellent arrangements made for my stay in Dar es Salaam. I thank you and the people of Tanzania for showing us this affection which the people of India heartily reciprocate.

Thank you.
549. Speech by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the Banquets hosted in his honour by Tanzanian President Jakaya Kikwete.

Your Excellency President Jakaya Kikwete
Mrs. Salma Kikwete
Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen

I thank you most sincerely for the warm words of welcome. I also wish to thank you and Mrs. Kikwete for your very gracious hospitality. We are deeply touched by the warmth and friendship of the Tanzanian people.

I am honoured to visit your great country. This is the land of mighty lakes, the majestic snow capped Kilimanjaro and wildlife reserves. Its people have lived in harmony for years and are renowned for their politeness and hard work.

For me it is a pilgrimage to visit the land of Mwalimu Julius Nyerere. He was a towering personality not only of Tanzania but of the entire developing world. We remember him fondly and can never forget his contribution to the cause of the South. I was privileged to work with him in preparing the report of the South Commission.

Excellency,

I recall your highly successful visit to India in 2008 when I had the privilege of co-chairing the first India-Africa Forum Summit with you.

Under your leadership Tanzania has made commendable progress. The recent general elections have again reaffirmed the trust the people of Tanzania have in your wisdom and vision.

Tanzania has withstood the global economic crisis well and plays a most influential role in African and global affairs. We applaud your achievements in dealing with poverty and hunger and wish you greater success.

Our two countries belong to different continents but for centuries we have been neighbours across the Indian Ocean. Maritime trade and people to people exchanges have drawn us closer. We have shared historical experiences. Today we seek to build a modern and dynamic partnership on the strength of these traditional bonds.

We face the common challenges of accelerating economic development; of ensuring that its fruits reach the most disadvantaged sections; and of strengthening people’s participation in processes of governance.

As two leading democracies, we should aim to build a broad and ambitious relationship that can serve as a model of cooperation among developing countries.

Our two countries should work together for international peace and stability. We should work to ensure that the fruits of globalization are shared equitably. We should make common cause to ensure that global governance is just and meets the aspirations of the developing world.

Excellency,

India and Africa are like brothers of an extended family. We have to rediscover and revive these fraternal ties of kinship. We are working hard to build a strong, mutually beneficial and diversified relationship with the people of Africa. We seek a partnership on the basis of equality and mutual benefit.

The Second Africa India Forum Summit, which concluded two days ago in Addis Ababa, has taken forward the agenda of cooperation between India and Africa. The seeds for this were laid with your support in New Delhi in 2008, for which I am most grateful.

I am confident that we are on our way to revive the golden era of Africa-India relations, when our leaders stood shoulder to shoulder in the struggle for freedom and as partners in peace.

Excellency,

India attaches great importance to its relations with the United Republic of Tanzania. Let us pledge to work together to realize the full potential of our partnership.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests may I now request you to join me in raising a toast to:-

— The good health of His Excellency President Jakaya Kikwete and Mrs. Kikwete, — To the prosperity and well-being of the people of the United Republic of Tanzania; and — To further strengthening of the bonds of cooperation and friendship between India and The United Republic of Tanzania.

550. Extract from Prime Minister’s interaction with media onboard special flight on way back to New Delhi from Dar-es-Salaam.

May 28, 2011.

Prime Minister: I have spent a very fruitful few days in Tanzania. In Ethiopia, In Addis Ababa the 2nd India Africa Forum Summit Forum (IAFS) took place which gives more teeth to our cooperation with the countries of Africa. There was a widespread welcome of our initiative and offer at the Summit of lines of credit of 5.7 billion dollars in the next three years. There was a widespread convergence of views on challenges confronting Africa and India, in the world economy as a whole, and that the imperative of our working together to ensure a more equitable global order.

I came to Tanzania to add weight to our strong bilateral relations. Tanzania is in many ways, has been a strong advocate of South-South cooperation ever since the days of President Dr Julius Nyeyere and it gave me the opportunity to review our bilateral relations; to look at the vision at how India and Tanzania can work together to strengthen our relations bilaterally, regionally and globally.

Question: On impressions about African leadership…and need for new Afro Asian solidarity?

Answer: I have been very impressed with the new breed of African leadership, their knowledge, their awareness of the depth of the problem and the opportunities and challenges that they face, and their strong desire to do their utmost to help their country, to create a space that they need for Africa to emerge as a new growth pole for the evolving global economy.

And as far as Afro Asian relations are concerned, as I said in the beginning, we look upon Africa as a new growth pole for the world economy and many times I think that the world problems with regard to food and natural resource problems, are going to be resolved in what happens to economic development pace of Africa. World is faced with a shortage of raw materials, world is faced with a shortage of food, and more I look at the possibilities of progress in Africa, I am convinced that it is going to provide the space for the solution of the global food problem, global resource problems and therefore it is the responsibility of all of us to work together with the countries of Africa to evolve a more equitable, more balanced, a more inclusive process of development, avoiding the colonial patterns of development in this regard.

Question: On IAFS becoming a model for international cooperation and how it was unique despite the imbalance in trade?

Answer: Well there is imbalance in trade and we are seeking to forge a new relationship where cooperation will be a two way flow process, where cooperation will be mutually beneficial and more Indian investments come to Africa. We will ensure to enlarge the capacity of African countries to help themselves to strengthen the process of self reliance, equitable sustainable growth amongst them, so that over a period of time, prosperous Africa becomes not only a source of additional demand for Indian exports but also it develops capabilities to meet India’s growing requirements of many of the food products, many of the natural resources.

Question: On NAM providing new leadership in today’s world?

Answer: Well the NAM movement has not lost its relevance. Globalisation has come to be accepted as unavoidable. But we want to develop a style and substance of globalisation which benefits all players, and that is the role in which the NAM has to play. And I do believe that ultimately all international relations are power relations, and it is our desire to pool all the collective weight of the developing countries to make the processes of global growth more equitable, more sustainable. There is a lot of talk about climate change. We want climate change to be an instrument of strengthening those process of sustainable development, not as a means of impoverishing the countries of the south, or leading to de industrialisation of the countries of the south.

Question: On David Headley revelations impacting engagement and Trust with Pakistan?

Answer: Well, this trial of David Headley has not brought out anything new that we did not know, and the trial is still on, we will study it, when the trial is completed. But as I said, it has not revealed anything which we did not know.

Question: On possible candidates for MD of IMF?

Answer: Well, it’s not proper for me to discuss individual names. We are in touch with various countries and we hope that at the end of it, a consensus would emerge which is generally acceptable. I do see that there is a desire in Europe to have an European occupying this coveted position because very large proportion of IMF funds is now in Europe and particularly in dealing with the tensions in the Euro zone. But we would like to remind the industrialised world that there is a tacit agreement that the top positions in international financial institutions must not go to specific countries as a matter of right but the best available talent in the world should be available to man these institutions, that is our general position.

But having said that, you do recognise that those who exercise power, they don’t want to give up power and therefore the struggle for a better, balanced world order, a more equitable world order, including the management of global institutions like the IMF, World Bank, Security Council— it is going to be a long haul, I am afraid.

* * *

Question: On complaints about Investment climate and bureaucratic delays in India?

Answer: Well, I hope all these issues will be amicably resolved. I do not agree with the proposition that India is no longer a preferred or a hospitable destination for foreign investment inflows. Investment flows may have ebbed but there are events beyond India’s control- the fact that American economy has staged a recovery of sorts, the fact that interest rates abroad are going up, that limits some flows that were coming in, which were coming here to take advantage of the interest arbitrage. But I do not buy the argument that India has ceased to be a hospitable, profitable destination for foreign investment. It will be our effort to maintain the climate of enterprise which is favourable for both domestic investment as well as foreign investment.

* * *

Question: On recent attack in Pakistan and need to re-calibrate our Pakistan policy?

Answer: Let me say that what happens in our neighbourhood matters a great deal. I have always maintained that a strong stable and peaceful Pakistan is in the interest of our country and therefore these events do worry us. And I hope that Pakistan will also recognise that this monster of terrorism which they unleashed at one time, is hurting them as much as it can hurt our country. And it is in this background that we have to look at our relations with Pakistan.

Question: On approach towards Pakistan post revelations of David Headley?

Answer: Well I think it goes without saying that we must use every possible opportunity to talk to Pakistan and convince them that terror as an instrument of state policy is simply not acceptable to people in the civilised world, as a whole. As Pakistan’s neighbour, we have great worries about the terror machine that is still intact in Pakistan. We would like Pakistan to take much more effective action to curb the activities of those Jehadi groups which particularly target a country, like India.

Question: On impact of budget on growth?

Answer: It is our ambition to maintain the growth rate at least at 8.5 percent per annum and as of now I have not seen any signs that we should change our views, with regard to our ability to sustain a growth rate of 8.5 percent. Agricultural situation will unfold itself, whatever evidence we have we expect a normal monsoon. And if the monsoon is normal it will strengthen our ability to control food inflation and to that extent I am confident that we will be able to sustain a growth rate of about 8.5 percent this year.

Question: On pushing Pakistan to pursue investigations in Mumbai attack?

Answer: Well we must look at two separate fronts. One is the bilateral negotiations with Pakistan. We must convince Pakistan that it is in their own interest that they must help us in tackling the problem of terror in our region. That those Jehadi groups that target India, as a destination for their terror, they must be effectively curbed and dealt with. That is an ongoing process and at every opportunity that we have, we should continue to impress on Pakistan. The second thing is the global concern about terrorism. The world has seen, as never before that the epicentre of terror is in our neighbourhood. They appreciate India's point and it should be our effort to mobilise world opinion to ensure that this terror machinery which operates in our neighbourhood in Pakistan is brought under effective control.

Question: On perception that Pak establishment is not keen on better ties with India and if PM will visit Pakistan any time soon?

Answer: I have not made up my mind on that. But I always believe that good relations between India and all its neighbours are very desirable and indeed essential for us in South Asia to realise our development ambitions. The more I see of what is happening in Pakistan the more I am convinced that Pakistan's leadership must now wake up, and must recognise that the terror machine they have or at least some elements in the country patronise, is working not to anybody's advantage.

ZIMBABWE

553. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the meeting of Minister Anand Sharma with Zimbabwean Minister of Commerce and Industry Prof. Welshman Ncube for enhanced India – Zimbabwe Cooperation.

New Delhi, March 29, 2011.

Anand Sharma, Union Minister for Commerce & Industry, in a bilateral meeting with Prof. Welshman Ncube, the Minister of Industry & Commerce Zimbabwe, here today, said, “The ratification process for the Bilateral Investment Protection Agreement (BIPA) is complete on our side and we are awaiting the ratification on the Zimbabwean side before exchanging the instruments of ratification and enabling the agreement to become operational”. He further noted that, the BIPA will provide a fillip to Indian investors seeking to enter Zimbabwe. During the bilateral Shri Sharma emphasised, “Indo-Zimbabwe Small & Medium Enterprises project, under which we provided machinery, equipment and training worth US $ 5 million, we are planning to set up a Vocational Training Centre (VTC) in Zimbabwe to further develop skills and capacity in Zimbabwe”. The Minister expressed appreciation over the 54% stake taken by Essar Africa Holdings in Zimbabwe Iron & Steel Company (ZISCO); which would be the largest Indian investment in Zimbabwe.

Shri Sharma noted the possibilities in cooperation in science and technology between India and Zimbabwe, particularly in appropriate technologies in agriculture, agro-processing and renewable energy. He stated that, “Our continued interest in education and capacity building programmes in Africa and in Zimbabwe in particular, is evident in our sponsoring Zimbabweans for study programmes under the ITEC and other courses. We have increased slots from 40 in 2008-09 to 90 for 2010-11 and we hope to cross 100 in 2011-12”.

While reiterating strong and growing trade and investment relationship, Shri Sharma stated that, “Our continuing and accelerating engagement with Africa, the India-Africa Summit in April 2008 and the forthcoming India-Africa Forum Summit in May 2011, would make it more firm in terms of bilateral trade cooperation. India’s carries special interest with Zimbabwe in mining, power generation, railways, ICT and agricultural sector in Zimbabwe”. Prof Ncube while appreciating India’s role said, “Zimbabwe seeks to benefit from Indian assistance, in particular, in the health sector, e-governance, and technology”. Both the Minister underlined the importance to rejuvenate the Joint Trade Committee between India and Zimbabwe.
India and Zimbabwe agreed to expedite the ratification of BIPA (Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement) between India and Zimbabwe for further strengthening the investment and trade ties between the two countries. This was one of the important outcomes of the bilateral meetings between Hon‘ble minister of state Commerce and Industries Mr. Jyotiraditya M. Scindia and his counterpart minister from Zimbabwe Government. Mr. Scindia is on a visit to Zimbabwe accompanied by a business delegation.

Mr. Scindia held wide ranging discussions with Mr. W. Nucbe minister of industry and commerce Zimbabwe. During the discussions Mr. Scindia referred to the historical ties and their common struggle against colonialism and apartheid. Mr. Scindia complimented the Zimbabwe Government for their recently launched Midterm Plan which aims to promote economic growth and sustainable development in the country. He offered India’s full support in the development of telecom, highways and railways sectors. In particular, in the rail sector where India had gained considerable expertise in laying of tracks and development of rolling stock, IRCON and RITES could assist Zimbabwe in the expansion and rehabilitation of its rail infrastructure. In the aviation sector also India could provide technical assistance to Zimbabwe.

Apart from bilateral meeting with Mr. W Nucbe, bilateral meetings were also held with Mr. N.T. Goche minister of transport and Infrastructure, Minister of energy, and the Minister of agriculture. Mr. Scindia informed his Zimbabwe counterpart that it had been decided to further strengthen the India-Zimbabwe bilateral ties by setting up Rural technology Park and Food testing laboratory in Zimbabwe.

Addressing the business conference “Doing Business in Zimbabwe: Investment opportunities and Challenges”, organized by the Confederation of Indian Industries, Hon’ble minister announced the setting up of the Indo-Zimbabwe Chamber of Commerce, which will facilitate interaction between the business communities of both the countries and facilitate interaction between business and Government at both ends. The business conference was attended by Mr. N.T. Goche minister of transport and Infrastructure, minister of energy, minister of agriculture and deputy minister of health, Government of Zimbabwe.

Mr. Scindia stressed that there is scope for significant diversification of Indian exports to Zimbabwe, and Zimbabwean exports to India, and to substantially increase the present low level of bilateral trade of US $125 mn registered in 2010-11. He highlighted the fact that in the coming years maximum growth will be from south-south trade amongst the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Addressing a press conference in Harare, Mr. Scindia said “When I look at the potential of our bilateral trade and investment relations, I am quite convinced that we have only touched the tip of the iceberg. A resurgent Indian economy has much to offer Zimbabwe in terms of investments, technology, skills, products and services in diverse economic and social streams. The challenge, for all of us, lies in translating this potential and promise into multiple partnerships in diverse business sectors.”

The minister also appreciated the contribution of 10000 strong Indian Diaspora in Zimbabwe to the economy of Zimbabwe. Speaking about the potential areas of cooperation between the two countries, he mentioned that Zimbabwe has the world’s largest platinum reserves and also possesses large reserves of gold, coal, asbestos, copper, nickel and iron ore. Indian mining companies could partner Zimbabwean mining majors in key value-added activities. He also mentioned about other business sectors, such as renewable energy, where Indian and Zimbabwean companies could strike project partnerships.

In the afternoon Mr. Scindia also called on the vice president HE Mrs. Joyce Mujuru and discussed about the existing state of the bilateral relations and possibility of taking the relations to the next level.

Indian public sector companies had a successful history of engagement with Zimbabwe and companies like Indian Railway Construction Company (IRCON), Rail India Technical & Economic Services (RITES), Water and Power Consultancy Services (WAPCOS) and Telecommunications India Ltd., (TCIL) had executed projects in Zimbabwe. Coal India had bid for development of coal mines in Zimbabwe. Kirlosker and Jain Irrigation have supplied pumps and irrigation equipment. India is helping Zimbabwe in capacity building and assisting in developing its own research and knowledge base by sharing experiences in various sectors such as SME, Power, Agriculture etc. Zimbabwe will soon join other African countries that are benefiting from the Pan-African e-Network, a project that will connect all 53 countries of the African Union (AU) with a satellite and fibre optic for sharing India’s expertise in education and health. Government of India also provides assistance to Zimbabwe under the ITEC programme for capacity building.

AMERICAS
The eleventh U.S.-India Defence Policy Group (DPG) meeting was held in Washington, DC on March 3-4, 2011. The meeting was co-chaired by Mr. Pradeep Kumar, Defence Secretary, Government of India and Under Secretary of Defence for Policy Ms. Michelle Flournoy. Defence Secretary Kumar also met Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs Mr. William Burns and Deputy Secretary of Defence William Lynn. Ambassador Meera Shankar also participated in these discussions.

Both sides reaffirmed that the bilateral defence cooperation is an important facet of the overall India-US strategic partnership. Defence Secretary Kumar and Under Secretary Flournoy expressed satisfaction at the progress of India-US bilateral defence relations. This was reflected in the increasing number of joint exercises that the two armed forces held regularly and procurement of defence equipment by India such as C-130J aircraft. The two sides had an extensive discussion on further strengthening bilateral defence ties, under the auspices of the Defence Framework Agreement of 2005 particularly in the areas of maritime security, counterterrorism, humanitarian assistance/disaster relief, and personnel exchanges. In this context they also welcomed the removal of Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) and Bharat Dynamics Limited from the US Entities List and noted that this opened up new opportunities for cooperation in the field of defence supplies as well as industrial and technological cooperation between India and the US.

The DPG reviewed the reports of the four sub-groups - Military Cooperation Group, Joint Technology Group, Senior Security Technology Group and Senior Technology Security Group and the Defence Procurement & Production Group (DPPG) that had held their meetings during the year and provided guidance for their work in the next year.

The DPG also included a policy-level dialogue on the global strategic and security situation. Both sides also discussed the multilateral security architecture in Asia and looked forward to continued cooperation in these organizations.

The two sides agreed that the next Defence Policy Group would be held in New Delhi, India early next year.
556. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the postponement of India - USA Strategic Dialogue due to state elections in India and situation in West Asia and North Africa.

New Delhi, March 11, 2011.

India and the United States were planning to hold the second India-US Strategic Dialogue, co-chaired by External Affairs Minister and the US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, in New Delhi in early part of April 2011. In view of the State elections in India and ongoing developments in West Asia and North Africa, the two sides have decided to reschedule the Strategic Dialogue and will hold it at the earliest available opportunity. The date for the Strategic Dialogue will be decided through mutual consultation.

India-US Strategic Dialogue is a principal mechanism for advancing bilateral cooperation across the full spectrum of the relationship and exchanging views on global and regional issues of mutual interest.

India and the United States will have a number of important bilateral events over the next few weeks, including the visit of Commerce Secretary to Washington DC in March 2011; the meeting of the India-US Joint Working Group in Counter Terrorism on March 25, 2011 in New Delhi; the meeting of the High Technology Cooperation Group in India in May 2011; and, the India-US Higher Education Summit in June 2011 in Washington DC. The first Homeland Security Dialogue and the meeting of the Joint Working Group on Space Cooperation will also be scheduled in the coming weeks.

557.  Press Release issued by the Prime Minister's Office giving reaction of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to the killing of Osama Bin Laden.

New Delhi, May 2, 2011.

"I welcome it as a significant step forward and hope that it will deal a decisive blow to Al Qaeda and other terrorist groups. The international community and Pakistan in particular must work comprehensively to end the activities of all such groups who threaten civilized behaviour and kill innocent men, women and children."

New Delhi, May 2, 2011.

President Obama of the United States has just announced that his government has conducted a successful operation that has resulted in the death of Osama bin Laden deep inside Pakistan. This operation brings to closure an almost decade-long search for the head of the Al Qaeda. It is a historic development and victorious milestone in the global war against the forces of terrorism. Over the years, thousands of innocent lives of men, women and children have been tragically lost at the hands of terrorist groups. The world must not let down its united effort to overcome terrorism and eliminate the safe havens and sanctuaries that have been provided to terrorists in our own neighbourhood. The struggle must continue unabated.

559. Reaction of Home Minister P. Chadamaram to the killing of Osama Bin Laden.

New Delhi, May 2, 2011.

"Earlier today the United States Government informed the Government of India that Osama Bin Laden had been killed by security forces somewhere "deep inside Pakistan." After the September 11, 2001 terror attack, the US had reason to seek Osama Bin Laden and bring him and his accomplices to justice.

We take note with grave concern that part of the statement in which President Obama said that the fire fight in which Osama Bin Laden was killed took place in Abbotabad "deep inside Pakistan". This fact underlines our concern that terrorists belonging to different organisations find sanctuary in Pakistan. We believe that the perpetrators of the Mumbai terror attack, including the controllers and handlers of the terrorists who actually carried out the attack, continue to be sheltered in Pakistan. We once again call upon the Government of Pakistan to arrest the persons whose names have been handed over to the Interior Minister of Pakistan as well as provide voice samples of certain persons who are suspected to be among the controllers and handlers of the terrorists."

560. Press Release issued by Prime Minister's Office on the telephonic talk between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Barack Obama.

New Delhi, May 9, 2011.

The Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh spoke to President Obama of the United States of America this evening. It was a warm conversation which covered wide-ranging subjects. They discussed further growth and development of India-US relations and the situation in the region.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Media reports on the talks said that Prime Minister Manmohan Singh spoke to United States President Barack Obama against the backdrop of tumultuous developments in the region, including the killing of al-Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden in neighbouring Pakistan and the continuing unrest in West Asia and North Africa, besides the start of the third round of the China-U.S. Strategic and Economic Dialogue. The reports further pointed out that the two leaders spoke at a time when U.S. companies in the race missed out on a lucrative Indian Air Force tender for fighter aircraft and the entry of American companies in the Indian nuclear power-based electricity sector due to the Nuclear Liability Act. There was reportedly a problem at the nuclear non-proliferation end too in the light of the position taken by the NSG on ENR facilities to countries that did not sign the NPT. Both countries are also concerned about the situation in the Arab world, the main source of their petroleum supplies, and are interested in a political solution in Afghanistan that marginalises groups espousing militant ideology.

New Delhi, May 27, 2011.

Secretary Napolitano

- It is a great pleasure to welcome you and your delegation to India. I hope you had a good visit to Mumbai. We had a very good discussion a few minutes ago.

- I am honoured to launch with you today the India-US Homeland Security Dialogue. This is an important milestone in India-US relations and adds a very important dimension to the growing strategic partnership between our two countries.

- It implements one of the key strategic outcomes of the visit of President Barack Obama to India in November 2010, during which Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama announced the Homeland Security Dialogue. I quote from their Joint Statement - "Building upon the Counter Terrorism Initiative signed in July 2010, the two leaders announced a new Homeland Security Dialogue between the Ministry of Home Affairs and the Department of Homeland Security and agreed to further deepen operational cooperation, counter-terrorism technology transfers and capacity building. The two leaders also emphasized the importance of close cooperation in combating terrorist financing and in protecting the international financial system."

- In a world of complex challenges, including new and emerging forms of threats, terrorism remains a principal challenge for our two countries. The events of the past few days, especially inside Pakistan, speak to the successes and to the enduring risks and challenges. Despite extraordinary efforts and significant successes against the forces of terrorism, its threat remains strong.

- Our two countries - indeed, the global community - must also deal with a range of other challenges, including counterfeit currency, narcotics trafficking, threats and risks in the cyber space, etc.

- Madam Secretary, it is a truism to say that India lives in perhaps the most difficult neighbourhood in the world. The global epicenter of terrorism is in our immediate western neighbourhood. The vast infrastructure of terrorism in Pakistan has for long flourished as an instrument of state policy. Today, different terrorist groups, operating from the safe havens in Pakistan, are becoming increasingly fused; the society in Pakistan has become increasingly radicalized; its economy has weakened; and, the state structure in Pakistan has become fragile. Today, Pakistan itself faces a major threat from the same forces. Its people as well as its state institutions are under attack.

- Terrorist infiltration or fake currency inflow does not only take place through our western border, but is often routed through countries that we share open borders with. We also have to deal with the challenge of large scale migrations from across our borders. Insurgent groups have some times found refuge in our neighbouring countries. Internal instability in our neighbouring countries has a direct bearing on the population in our border states.

- Given the complexity of our region, our Government has a comprehensive neighbourhood strategy that is based on political engagement, especially with Pakistan; support for political stability; assistance for economic development; and, improved connectivity and market access for our neighbours to the Indian economy. A stable, peaceful and prosperous neighbourhood is vital for the security of the people of India.

- One of the key elements of the India-US relationship is our engagement on the issue of terrorism and on counter-terrorism cooperation. Dealing with the challenge of terrorism is a priority for the people of India. There has always been great public and political expectation about India-US cooperation on counter-terrorism. This is because of our shared values, the growth of strategic partnership between our two countries, US expertise and capabilities, and the perception in India that the United States exercises a strong influence on the country that is the hub of global terror.

- A strong and effective India-US cooperation in homeland security and counter-terrorism is indispensable for our strategic partnership.

- India and the United States established a Joint Working Group on Counter-terrorism as early as February 2000. It had its ninth meeting recently. Our two countries signed a Counter-terrorism Cooperation Initiative in July 2010. There are other institutional mechanisms, such as the Working Group on Aviation Security, Working Group on Information and Communication Technology and the Defence Policy Group, which provide avenues for our cooperation. India's membership of FATF has strengthened our ability to work with each other on the financial aspects of terrorism.

- I recall my own visit to the United States in September 2009, which provided me the opportunity to identify areas in which we could learn from and work with each other.
Certainly, US political support and operational cooperation during and after the Mumbai attack meant a great deal to the people of India. We appreciate the US efforts to bring the perpetrators of Mumbai terror attack, and others associated with it, to justice. Even as we meet, the trial of Tahawwur Rana is taking place in Chicago. Prime Minister and President Obama, during their November 2008 meeting, called for Pakistan to bring to justice the perpetrators of the November 2008 Mumbai attacks.

Our cooperation must cover all aspects of the challenges that we face: anticipating and predicting threats, taking preventive or pre-emptive measures, or responding effectively and quickly to incidents. Therefore, we must further deepen our ties in intelligence, information and assessment sharing; cooperation in investigations and forensics; protecting cities, infrastructure, people and trade; and, developing capabilities to diffuse and terminate any incident.

I also want to stress the importance of developing and sharing appropriate technologies, equipment and systems for homeland security. I recognise that acquisition will be largely from the private sector, but as governments, we must continue a strategic dialogue to share information, experiences and assessment on technologies and systems; identify technology needs, trends and gaps; and, address licensing and other terms relating to transfer of counter-terrorism and homeland security equipment and technology to each other, in the spirit of the strategic partnership between the two countries. We would also work out a mechanism for government-private sector interface.

I would propose that our Home Secretary and Deputy Secretary for Homeland Security meet after six months to review progress on our calendar.

Before I conclude, I would also like to thank Ambassador Roemer, who has had an excellent track record in public life, including in Congress, in the cause of addressing the security challenges facing the United States. He has also been tireless in his efforts over the course of the past two years to promote India-US relationship and our counter-terrorism cooperation, in particular. The Counter-terrorism Cooperation Initiative is an important lasting contribution. Appropriately enough, his last bilateral dialogue as US Ambassador to India is in Homeland Security. I also thank my colleagues, especially Home Secretary G.K. Pillai and Ambassador Meera Shankar, for their outstanding efforts in putting together this dialogue, and, more broadly, in promoting our cooperation.

May I welcome you, once again, Madam Secretary to Delhi.

New Delhi, May 27, 2011.

India - USA Homeland Security Dialogue was held in New Delhi here today. The Indian delegation was led by the Union Home Minister, Shri. P. Chidambaram and the US side by their Secretary, Homeland Security Department, Ms Janet Napolitano. The two sides issued a joint statement at the end of the talks. Following is the text of the Joint Statement.

"Home Minister P. Chidambaram and U.S. Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano launched today in New Delhi the India-U.S. Homeland Security Dialogue, which was announced by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Barack Obama in November 2010 as part of the global strategic partnership between India and the United States.

Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano affirmed the strategic importance of cooperation for the security of the two countries and their people, based on their shared values of democracy, pluralism and openness; the threat of terrorism and other challenges, including cyber security, counterfeit currency, illicit financing and transnational crimes; and, the deepening technological and economic partnership between India and the United States.

The leaders expressed satisfaction with the growth in counter-terrorism and related security cooperation between India and the United States. They noted the contribution of existing mechanisms such as the Joint Working Group on Counter-terrorism, established in 2000, the Defense Policy Group, the Joint Working Group on Information and Communications Technology and the Aviation Security Working Group and the Counter-terrorism Cooperation Initiative of July 2010 in advancing India-U.S. cooperation.

They discussed their cooperation in the investigations into the Mumbai terror attack in November 2008 and reiterated their governments' commitment to bring the perpetrators and the supporters of the Mumbai attack to justice. As Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Barack Obama stated in November 2010, the Minister and Secretary called on Pakistan to move expeditiously in prosecuting those involved in the Mumbai terror attack. Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano committed their governments to comprehensive sharing of information relating to the Mumbai attack. The leaders reaffirmed their governments' resolve to defeating the forces of terrorism and called for effective steps by all countries to eliminate safe havens and infrastructure for terrorism.
Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano today committed to expand India-U.S. cooperation to further strengthen their capacity to secure their countries and protect their people. The two leaders agreed to share ideas and experiences on the ongoing transformation of their countries’ security-related organizational structures and systems as well regulatory framework, in a democratic and federal environment.

They decided to strengthen agency-to-agency engagement, including in the areas of intelligence exchange, information sharing, forensics and investigation, access and sharing of data relating to terrorism, security of infrastructure, transportation and trade, conducting joint needs assessments, combating counterfeit currency, countering illicit financing and transnational crime. They agreed that the two sides shall designate points of contact and establish protocols for engagement.

They decided to foster capacity building in areas including counter-terrorism, counter-narcotics, counterfeit currency, illicit financing and transnational crime, security of infrastructure, transportation and trade, coastal security and large city policing. They agreed on the need for appropriate government agencies to work together and share best practices to enhance the security and resilience of the global supply chain.

They affirmed the importance of increased dialogue and cooperation in the area of cyber security. They welcomed the decision of the two governments to negotiate a MoU between CERT-IN and U.S.-CERT, the designated agencies for information exchange. They also decided to cooperate in capacity building and to work together, and with other countries, to advance cyber security standards.

Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano agreed that the two governments should maintain a regular dialogue to share information and assessment on equipment, technologies and systems for homeland security and counter-terrorism; and, to facilitate bilateral technology transfer and trade in these items, in the spirit of the strategic partnership between the two countries. They noted the role of the private sector in India and the U.S. in providing technological solutions and equipment, and they agreed to explore engagement between the governments and the private sectors through appropriate forums.

Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano agreed on a calendar of events, collaborative activities and initiatives to be implemented over the next twelve months. They also decided that the Home Secretary of India and the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security should meet at the end of six months to review progress in their collaboration.
Home Minister Chidambaram and Secretary Napolitano committed to hold the Homeland Security Dialogue annually to set strategic directions for continued cooperation in homeland security.

During her visit to India, Secretary Napolitano also met with senior police officials in Mumbai and visited the commemorative memorial of 26/11 in Mumbai. Secretary Napolitano called on Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee, Defence Minister A.K. Antony, Minister for Communications and Information Technology Kapil Sibal and Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao. Secretary Napolitano thanked Home Minister Chidambaram for the warm hospitality extended to her and her delegation and invited him for the next round of the India-U.S. Homeland Security Dialogue in Washington DC at a mutually convenient date next year.

At the joint press conference held at the end of their talks, Ms. Napolitano agreed that both countries faced a "common threat and we must develop common approaches to protecting critical infrastructure and ensuring free flow of people and commerce across our borders."

Asked about the Lashkar-e-Taiba being on the list of banned terrorist outfits, Ms. Napolitano said: "LeT is right up there; it ranks in the terror list along with al-Qaeda." However, she did not offer any comment when it was pointed out that LeT founder Hafiz Saeed was still moving about freely in Pakistan. "I think, in my judgment, the LeT ranks right up there in the al-Qaeda and related groups as terrorist organisations, one that seeks to harm people and takes innocent lives. Our perspective, the U.S. perspective, is LeT is very, very, I do not want to say, important as that gives it too much credibility, but an organisation that is of the same ranking as al-Qaeda-related groups," She said.
563. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the visit of Minister Anand Sharma to the United States.

Shri Anand Sharma the Union Minister Commerce and Industry is on a four day visit to the United States during his visit he held discussions with Ambassador Ron Kirk, the United States Trade Representative on 22nd June 2011. Shri Sharma and Ambassador Kirk agreed to re-invigorate the Trade Policy Forum (TPF) and make it more robust and effective in resolving bilateral commercial issues, while maintaining the political leadership of the process. The two sides also agreed to fast-track the technical negotiations for an early conclusion of the India-US Bilateral Investment Agreement. There would be two rounds of negotiations before the next meeting of the Ministerial level TPF expected to be held in October 2011 in India. In their interaction, they covered the entire range of issues in bilateral trade and commercial engagement.

Shri Sharma apprised Ambassador Kirk of various policy approaches being taken by India to sustain its high GDP growth and the opportunities it offered for the U.S. businesses to develop partnerships with the Indian private sector. He mentioned infrastructure, agriculture and agro-processing; food processing; cold chain logistics; manufacturing of electronic devices including chip design as areas with bilateral cooperative possibilities. He also raised issues of importance for the Indian industry in their business operations in the United States. The Indian Minister later informed that, the United States welcomed the unilateral action taken by India in reducing tariffs on a number of products, including raw pistachios, cranberry products, seedless raisins, processed foods, medical equipment, fertilizers, chemicals, heavy machinery, etc. USTR also appreciated India’s efforts towards increased cooperation in services and on improving the investment environment.

Earlier on 22nd June 2011, Shri Sharma addressed a gathering of policy makers, economists and scholars at the Centre for Strategic and International Studies. He highlighted the increasing role of emerging economies in the perspective of the financial and economic crisis, which is causing a rebalancing of the global economy. He also stressed the necessity to build and strengthen bilateral business and institutional partnerships between the two countries. He informed the audience about India’s plans to create National Manufacturing and Investment Zones, which would become hubs of innovation and manufacturing.

On 21st June 2011, The Commerce & Industry Minister held a CEO Industry Roundtable in New York where he interacted with select leaders of investment firms and big businesses with keen interest in commercial opportunities in India.

Joint Statement issued after the Second Ministerial Meeting of the India - USA Economic and Financial Partnership.

Washington D.C., June 29, 2011.

India and the United States will work together to expand trade and investment links between their economies, and will further develop and strengthen their financial systems. India and the United States will also work together in the G-20 on an effective mutual assessment process to bring about strong, sustained, and balanced global growth. This was stated in a joint statement issued at the end of day long deliberations at the Second Cabinet level meeting of the U.S.-India Economic and Financial Partnership in Washington, D.C yesterday. The first meeting of the US-India Economic and Financial Partnership was held last year in April, 2010 in Delhi. The joint statement signed by both U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Mr Timothy Geithner and Indian Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee was issued at the end of second ministerial level meeting of the U.S.-India Economic and Financial Partnership in Washington, D.C yesterday. The joint statement said that the United States is committed to making the investments in technology, skills and infrastructure necessary to maintain and enhance U.S. competitiveness in the global economy. It said that India intends to take steps to marshall private and public saving to meet the infrastructure needs of a rapidly growing Indian economy. Both the countries agreed to work together to expand trade and investment links between two economies and to develop and strengthen their financial systems. In the meeting, India and U.S. discussed the challenges that both economies faced in ensuring a strong recovery and price stability in the short term, as well as the range of policies necessary to reach growth at our full potential domestically.

According to the joint statement, the two sides agreed to a robust roadmap for the coming year that included deeper engagement in the following areas within each pillar of the Partnership:

- Macroeconomic challenges, including growth, unemployment, inflation, global liquidity, commodity prices, international capital flows and fiscal consolidation.
- Financial sector reforms, including deepening of capital markets, financial inclusion, and ensuring the stability, transparency, and integrity of the financial system.
- Infrastructure finance, including innovative strategies to mobilize capital for infrastructure development, and sharing best practices and building capacity for design and successful execution of Public Private Partnerships.
The statement said that since the April 2010 launch in Delhi, India-US Partnership had led to deeper institutional relationships and exchanges between U.S. and Indian economic and financial sector regulators - both of which had proven critical to technical cooperation, capacity building, and the removal of impediments to realizing our relationship's full economic potential.

Building on the success of the first year of the Partnership, India and U.S. decided to continue to strengthen our economic and financial partnership in order to realize the full economic and strategic potential of the U.S.-India partnership to achieve maximum benefits for Americans and Indians.

As per the joint statement, the U.S.-India relationship offered enormous economic opportunities for Americans and Indians alike. Through stronger collaboration and coordination amongst their economic and financial policymakers, this Partnership had sought to deepen U.S.-India bilateral and multilateral engagement in order to fully capitalize on the wealth of economic opportunities between the two nations. It said that the U.S.-India economic relationship had made significant progress in recent years. Over the past decade, trade and investment between the two countries had expanded across a variety of industries and sectors. Between 2000 and 2010, Indian exports to the United States had grown by nearly 180 percent and American exports to India had increased over four times. Meanwhile, the combined bilateral U.S.-India foreign direct investment had grown by nearly 165 percent between 2005 and 2009. Despite this progress, and especially given the size of the two respective economies, the joint statement recognized that there remained untapped potential and opportunity to expand trade and investment linkages to the benefit of both countries.
The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that the India-US Financial and Economic Partnership which was launched last year in New Delhi, has succeeded in giving an impetus to the rapidly expanding financial and economic engagement between our two countries. The Finance Minister said that meaningful exchange of views have since then taken place at sub-cabinet level and through working group meetings. He said that it has resulted in better understanding of each other's economic policies and mutual appreciation of our respective positions in many international economic fora, including at the G-20.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee was addressing the Second Meeting of India-US Financial and Economic Partnership in Washington D.C., yesterday. Shri Mukherjee was leading the Indian delegation which included among others Dr Subbarao, Governor, RBI, Shri R.Gopalan, Secretary, Department of Economic Affairs, Shri Shashi Kant Sharma, Secretary, Department of Financial Services, Dr Kaushik Basu, Chief Economic Adviser, Shri Subhir Gokaran, Deputy Governor, RBI, Shri B.C.Khatua, Chairman, Forward Market Commission and Ms Meera Shankar, Indian Ambassador to USA.

The US delegation on the other hand was led by Mr Timothy Geithner, Secretary, US Department of Treasury and included among others Mr Ben S Bernanke, Chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, Mr Austan Goolsbee, Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers to the President of US, Ms Mary L Schapiro, Chairman, US Securities and Exchange Commission, Mr Gary Genseles, Chairman, Commodity Futures Trading Commission, Mr Martin J Gruenberg, Vice Chairman, FDIC Board of Directors and Mr Nathan Sheets, Director, Division of International Finance among others.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that our partnership is based on common values and interests, a shared vision of the world, and the deep-rooted ties of friendship among our people. Shri Mukherjee said that as the world's largest democracies and the leading market economies, we are committed to promoting freedom in our societies, which have strong tradition of nursing pluralism and tolerance. He said that this makes our relationship unique and casts upon us the responsibility to define and influence the developments that would help shape the 21st century. Shri Mukherjee said that indeed, US President Obama has characterized the India-US relationship as one of the defining partnerships of the 21st century.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that we have continued to deepen and expand our strategic partnership as outlined by US President Obama and our Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh. He said that President Obama's last year's visit to India has resulted in a number of important strategic outcomes that have seen progress in implementation. Shri Mukherjee said that the US has eased controls on high-technology exports for sectors like defence and space. He said that we also appreciate the intention of the United States to support India's full membership in the four multilateral export control regimes. The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee said that there has been progress on a number of bilateral agreements in the areas of science, technology and innovation, and clean energy research. He said that we have also taken concrete steps in developing joint projects for food security and agriculture in African countries.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that our economic relations are also rapidly growing. He said that bilateral trade grew by 30 per cent in 2010 beside investments in each other's economies continue to expand. The Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee said that the engagement of people and enterprises of the two countries remains the cornerstone of our relationship.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that India as one of the world's fastest growing economies and the United States, the world's largest economy, are committed to achieve a high growth global economy that is both stable and sustainable. Shri Mukherjee said that through our bilateral engagements and by working together in multilateral fora like the G-20, both the countries can expand economic opportunities and prosperity worldwide.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that the Indian Government attaches high importance to the India-US strategic partnership, both in the pursuit of India's national development goals and for advancing global peace, stability and progress. Shri Mukherjee said that we are committed to deepening our strategic partnership and enhancing dialogue and cooperation in various facets of our economic relationship.

The Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that we have a rich and varied agenda for discussions before us for this second meeting and is looking forward to have a very productive and comprehensive exchange of views on issues that have been identified.
The text of the Opening Statement made by the Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee on the occasion is given below:

"It is a great pleasure to be here for the second meeting of the India-US Financial and Economic Partnership. I am happy that the Partnership, which we launched last year in New Delhi, has succeeded in giving an impetus to the rapidly expanding financial and economic engagement between our two countries. 566. Statement by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton.

New Delhi, July 15, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon and sorry to keep you waiting for a bit.

My colleague Joint Secretary (AMS) Jawed Ashraf and I would like to brief you about the official visit of US Secretary of State Mrs. Hillary Clinton who comes on the 18th July primarily for the 2nd round of the India-US Strategic Dialogue. She would be accompanied by a 25-member delegation drawn from various Departments of US Administration.

To give you an idea of the programme and the delegation, the Indian delegation led by the EAM and would include Deputy-Chairman of Planning Commission Dr. Montek Singh Ahluwalia; Dr. Sam Pitroda, Advisor to PM; Foreign Secretary Shrimati Nirupama Rao; Foreign Secretary Designate Shri Ranjan Mathai; Commerce Secretary; Secretary, Department of Science and Technology; Home Secretary; Secretary, Education; Secretary, Environment and Forests; Director (IB) and other senior officials including Joint Secretary Jawed Ashraf.

From the US side the delegation led by Secretary Clinton would include the Director of National Intelligence Mr. James Clapper; Assistant to President on Science and Technology Mr. John Holdren; Deputy Energy Secretary Mr. Daniel Poneman; Deputy Secretary, Department of Homeland Security, Ms Jane Lute; as well as a number of other senior officials from various Departments of the US Administration.

Secretary Clinton arrives on Monday the 18th evening. On 19th she meets with the National Security Advisor; has delegation-level talks with the External Affairs Minister. Thereafter, they would hold a joint press conference. She would also have meetings with the Leader of Opposition Shrimati Sushma Swaraj, Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee, call on Chairperson UPA Shrimati Sonia Gandhi; call on the Prime Minister of India. On the 20th of July, Wednesday, she leaves for Chennai where she would have a number of engagements. She leaves Chennai on Thursday, 21st of July.

You are aware that in July 2009, India and USA had agreed to launch a Ministerial level strategic dialogue to focus on bilateral relationship and dialogue mechanisms along five pillars of mutual interest namely: strategic cooperation, energy and climate change, education and development, economy, trade and agriculture, science and technology, health and innovation. This comprehensive dialogue architecture covers 18 sectors of bilateral engagement.

EAM and Secretary Clinton co-chaired the inaugural strategic dialogue in Washington on the 3rd of June. EAM's delegation had included Minister for Human Resource Development; Deputy-Chairman, Planning Commission; Minister of State for Science and Technology; Foreign Secretary; and senior officials from various Ministries and Departments.

The Strategic Dialogue provides an opportunity to take stock of the progress in bilateral relationship, bilateral cooperation, as well as to consult on global and regional issues of interest, besides charting out a short to medium-term roadmap of cooperation in priority sectors for the two Governments.

The strategic dialogue mechanism has come to be regarded as one of the very effective mechanisms to maintain the momentum of our rapidly deepening and expanding global strategic partnership that was outlined by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama during Prime Minister's state visit to Washington in November, 2009. It was reaffirmed during President Obama's reciprocal state visit to India in November last year.

It is no exaggeration to say that the relationship has got transformed in recent years with both sides taking and having taken a series of new initiatives to take the relationship to a qualitatively new level. India and USA are focusing on simultaneously further strengthening engagement in political, economic, strategic and security spheres, with greater priority to areas like economy, energy, environment, education and security.
Bilateral engagement both at senior Ministerial and official levels as well as through functional mechanisms remains robust. High-level visits in recent months from our side just in the last few months, include that of our Finance Minister, Commerce and Industries Minister, National Security Advisor, and Foreign Secretary. Likewise, from the US side we have hosted Commerce Secretary Gary Locke, Homeland Security Secretary Ms Janet Napolitano, Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan Marc Grossman, and other US dignitaries.

I would like to note that of the 25 bilateral mechanisms including Strategic Security Dialogue, Defence Policy Group, High Technology Cooperation Group, and Joint Working Group on Counterterrorism have met in recent months. The eighth meeting of the JWG on Counterterrorism was held in New Delhi in March this year to exchange threat assessments and review ongoing cooperation in combating terrorism including intelligence-sharing and capacity-building. Also, the first ever India-US Homeland Security Dialogue took place in New Delhi on the 26th of May this year.

Consequent to the Defence Cooperation Framework that was agreed upon in 2005, our defence exchanges have picked up steam and have included military exercises, reciprocal visits of Service Chiefs, defence modernization, technology transfer, and so on.

Cooperation in the energy sector including clean energy and energy efficiency has emerged as one of the top priorities in the relationship. During President Obama’s visit both sides reaffirmed their commitment to building a green economy of the future through the bilateral Partnership to Advance Clean Energy called PACE.

If one takes both goods and services into account, then USA becomes our largest business partner. In 2010, bilateral trade increased 30 per cent to close on $ 50 billion. We have the 2008 figure of trade in services which was 38 billion dollars. So, we are looking at trade in goods and services of over 88 billion dollars annually. Similarly, investments in both directions have been growing rapidly.

I mentioned a number of areas of cooperation. Let me add one more - education, which received a fillip with the Singh-Obama 21st century knowledge initiative unveiled in 2009. Nearly 103,000 Indian students were studying in American universities in 2008-09.

The regular high-level interactions and cooperation has resulted in increasing mutual understanding and greater convergence on a wide range of international issues. Both sides, for example, have been holding regular consultation and coordination to see a stable, democratic and prosperous Afghanistan. USA has also been appreciative of the positive role that India has been playing in achieving the said objective.

EAM is looking forward to the official visit of Secretary Clinton and members of her delegation, as well as to hold in-depth exchange of views on a broad canvas of issues and matters of interest between the two countries.

Thank you.

567. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Science and Technology on need to enhance cooperation between India and US in Science & Technology Coordination.

New Delhi, July 18, 2011.

India and the US have agreed to stepping up Science & Technology coordination between the two countries in cross-cutting areas relating to energy, agriculture, affordable healthcare, nutrition and monsoon forecasting. This was agreed upon during a meeting between Dr. John P. Holdren, Assistant to the US President for Science & Technology and Director of the White House Office of Science and Technology and Dr. Ashwani Kumar, Minister of State for Planning, Science & Technology and Earth Sciences in New Delhi today. The meeting was held in the context of the ongoing Indo-US Strategic Dialogue. India and the US have embarked upon a strategic relationship which specifically identifies science, technology and innovation as a major focus of future relationship in the 21st century.

In his address Dr. Kumar stated that there are major issues facing us in the areas of food, agriculture, nutrition, energy and water. In this connection research on monsoon is very crucial, as well as forecasting extreme events like floods and droughts, pests, crops etc. There is a need to work towards making agriculture resilient. He stated the need for further research on forecasting various hazards like cyclones and in this connection, usage of instrumental spectra aircraft is essential. Dr. Holdren agreed to look into this aspect. He also appreciated the sharing of data on issues relating to monsoon and flood and agreed to further strengthening the exchange of data. Dr. Kumar raised the importance of facilitating exchange of scientists from both the countries by addressing bottlenecks relating to Visa for S&T professionals. He urged for a liberal visa regime to ensure seamless issuance of visas for Indian scientists willing to work in the US. He also expressed India’s preparedness to substantially increase resource investment in promoting agricultural crops leading to affordable innovation in key sectors. Dr. Holdren also responded favourably to addressing issues such as Visa for S&T professionals and stepping up resources for S&T cooperation.

There was general consensus on substantially increasing financial outlay by both sides, for example, the Indo-US Science and Technology Endowment Fund which is currently 30 million dollars could have its corpus increased and the current allocation of 50 million dollars for both the sides for next 5 years could be enhanced to 100 million dollars.

568. Press Release issued by Ministry of Civil Aviation on the signing of the India - USA Aviation Safety Agreement.

New Delhi, July 18, 2011.

The bilateral Aviation Safety Agreement (BASA) between India and the U.S.A. has been signed by Dr. Nasim Zaidi, Secretary, Civil Aviation and Mr. J. Randolph Babbitt, Administrator, Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). The signing coincides with the visit of US Secretary of State Ms. Hillary Clinton to India. The signing took place in the presence of Senior Officers from the Ministry, DGCA, AAI from the Indian side and FAA and USTDA from the US side.

BASA will facilitate reciprocal airworthiness certification of civil aeronautical products imported/exported between the two signatory authorities. Indian standards would be comparable to global standards and its aeronautical products would be accepted by the U.S.

The nascent aircraft manufacturing industry in India would be hugely benefitted and it would spur trade between the two sides. It would demonstrate that India has the capability to develop FAA certifiable aircraft articles/appliances. It would encourage the civil aeronautical products industry which will eventually lead to self sufficiency in the sector.

BASA would encourage indigenous aircraft and aeronautical products industry and the US acceptance of Indian products will help their global acceptance. It would lessen the economic burden imposed on the aviation industry and operators by redundant technical inspections, evaluations and testing.

The next stage is to sign the implementation Procedures for Airworthiness (IPA) which provides for airworthiness technical cooperation between FAA and its counterpart civil aviation authorities. The scope of IPA can be enhanced from time to time. The USA has signed BASA with 24 countries.

New Delhi, July 19, 2011.

India's Minister of External Affairs Shri S.M. Krishna and the U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton met in New Delhi on July 19, 2011, for the second annual meeting of the India-U.S. Strategic Dialogue. The leaders recognized the achievements made since the inaugural Strategic Dialogue in June 2010 and President Obama's historic visit to India in November 2010 in advancing our two countries' shared interests. They committed to continuing to broaden and deepen the India-U.S. global strategic partnership.

As a testament to the relationship's extraordinary breadth and depth, Secretary Clinton was accompanied by Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, the President's Advisor for Science and Technology Dr. John P. Holdren, Department of Energy Deputy Secretary Daniel Poneman, Department of Homeland Security Deputy Secretary Jane Holl Lute, and other senior U.S. government officials.

Minister Krishna was joined by Deputy Chairman of Planning Commission Montek Singh Ahuwalia, Prime Minister's Public Information Infrastructure and Innovation Advisor Sam Pitroda, Foreign Secretary Nirupama Rao, and other senior officials.

Minister Krishna was also joined at the working lunch by Home Minister P. Chidambaram and Minister for Human Resource Development and Information Technology Kapil Sibal.

As part of Secretary Clinton's visit to India, she met with Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, Chairperson of the United Progressive Alliance Sonia Gandhi. Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee, Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha Sushma Swaraj, and National Security Advisor Shivshankar Menon.

Secretary Clinton offered her prayers and sympathies to the victims of the despicable attacks in Mumbai on July 13. The American people stand with the Indian people in times of trial, and offer support to India's efforts to bring the perpetrators of these terrible crimes to justice. Minister Krishna welcomed the expressions of support from the Secretary, the President, and the U.S. Congress. The two leaders resolved to strengthen cooperation between their governments to fight against terrorism.

Since the inaugural Strategic Dialogue in 2010, the India-U.S. partnership has resulted in advances in nearly every area of human endeavor. The two sides have expanded their strategic consultations to cover all major issues and regions of the world. They have increased counterterrorism cooperation, intelligence sharing, and law enforcement exchanges. They have continued to expand their defence cooperation. They have expanded their growing partnership on export controls and non-proliferation. They have witnessed an expansion of the already robust people-to-people ties; scientific, space, and technology collaboration; clean energy cooperation; and connections among entrepreneurs and social innovators.

The two leaders emphasized our countries' shared values - pluralism, tolerance, openness, and respect for fundamental freedoms and human rights. They reiterated Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh's and President Barack Obama's pledge to harness these shared strengths and to expand the India-U.S. global partnership for the benefit of their countries; and, for peace, stability, and prosperity in Asia and the world.

Today, the two leaders reviewed progress in bilateral relations and set new goals to further strengthen the India-U.S. Global Strategic Partnership.

Global Stability and Prosperity

- Marking the expansion of strategic consultations, the two sides launched a Central Asia Dialogue in June 2011 in New Delhi and a West Asia Dialogue in July 2011 in Washington DC. The two sides intend to expand strategic consultations to other regions, including Latin America and Caribbean, and plan to hold the fourth round of the East Asia Dialogue in September 2011.

- India, the United States, and Japan plan to commence a trilateral dialogue at senior official level.

- They welcomed the launch of bilateral dialogue on United Nations matters in New Delhi in March 2011. The two sides intend to continue this dialogue and meet next in Washington in early 2012, while continuing regular consultations between capitals and in UN cities as appropriate.

- Following on the successful meeting of the Joint Working Group (JWG) on UN Peacekeeping Operations in March 2011 in New Delhi, the two countries hope to conduct their 10th meeting of the JWG in early 2012.

- The two sides reaffirmed their commitment for consultation, coordination, and cooperation on Afghanistan, and to work jointly in Afghanistan in capacity building, agriculture, and women's empowerment, expanding on work already underway. Both sides agreed to Afghan-led, Afghan-owned, and inclusive reconciliation.

- The two sides acknowledged that increased trade, transit, and commercial linkages across South and Central Asia will benefit Afghanistan and contribute to the region's long-term peace, stability, and prosperity.

- The two sides intend to promote food security in Africa through a triangular cooperation program with Liberia, Malawi, and Kenya. A promising area of potential collaboration includes the participation of Africans at Indian universities and research and technical institutes in mutually agreed capacity building programs. The two sides agree to explore additional areas based on requests from the three African countries.

- As part of the India-U.S. Dialogue on Open Government launched in November 2010, the two countries have committed to jointly create an open source "Data.gov" platform by the first quarter of 2012 to be taken to interested countries globally. Leveraging the high-technology strengths and institutional expertise of both India and the United States, the "open source" platform is intended to provide citizens access to Government information via a user-friendly website and a package of e-Governance applications to enhance public service delivery.

- The two sides reiterated their commitment to work together to strengthen election management capacity in interested countries. They welcomed the technical collaboration between the Indian International Institute of Democracy and Election Management and the Washington DC-based International Federation of Electoral Systems.

- Secretary Clinton recalled President Obama's statement that, in the years ahead, the United States looks forward to a reformed UN Security Council that includes India as a permanent member.
Enhancing the U.S. - India Bilateral Relationship Defence, security and counter-terrorism

- The two sides launched the Homeland Security Dialogue in May 2011 in New Delhi, and have decided upon a program of cooperation in global supply chain management, megacity policing, combating counterfeit currency and illicit financing, cyber security, critical infrastructure protection, and capacity building and technology upgrading.

- They reiterated their commitment to further strengthen counter-terrorism cooperation, including through intelligence sharing, information exchange, operational cooperation, and access to advanced counter-terrorism technology and equipment. The two sides had their ninth meeting of the Joint Working Group on Counter-terrorism in March 2011 in New Delhi.

- The two leaders reiterated that success in Afghanistan and regional and global security requires elimination of safe havens and infrastructure for terrorism and violent extremism in Afghanistan and Pakistan. Condemning terrorism in all its forms, the two sides confirmed that all terrorist networks must be defeated and called for Pakistan to move expeditiously in prosecuting those involved in the November 2008 Mumbai terror attack.

- The two sides reiterated their commitment on comprehensive sharing of information on the investigations and trials relating to the November 2008 Mumbai terror attack.

- The two countries held cyber consultations on July 18, led by their two National Security Councils, at which they exchanged views on a broad range of cyberspace issues and coordinated bilateral cooperation on cyber issues. The United States and India signed on 19 July 2011 a Memorandum of Understanding between our Computer Emergency Response Teams (CERT-IN and US-CERT) to exchange information on cyber attacks and mutual response to cybersecurity incidents, to cooperate on cybersecurity technology, and to exchange information on cybersecurity policy and best practices and capacity building and exchange of experts.

- India and the United States welcomed progress in bilateral defence cooperation. The Defence Policy Group met in March 2011 and plans to meet again in early 2012.

- The two sides noted India's defence orders from U.S. companies have reached a cumulative value of over USD 8.0 billion in the last decade.
The two sides noted that these sales reflect strengthened cooperation. Both sides also affirmed their desire to strengthen cooperation through technology transfer, and joint research, development and production of defence items.

- They noted progress in defence bilateral exchanges, exercises, capacity building, information sharing, including in the areas of counternarcotics, counter piracy, maritime safety and humanitarian assistance/disaster relief. They affirmed the importance of maritime security, unimpeded commerce, and freedom of navigation, in accordance with international law, and the peaceful settlement of disputes.

- The United States and India agreed to continue consultations on maritime security cooperation in the Indian Ocean Region in existing forums such as Defense Policy Group and its appropriate sub-groups. They also agreed to exchange views on promoting regional security architecture that enhances maritime security in the Indian Ocean Region.

- The United States welcomed India's decision to chair a plenary of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia in 2012.

Civil Nuclear Cooperation

- The two leaders welcomed the continued commitment of the two governments for full implementation of the India-U.S. civil nuclear energy cooperation agreement. They reiterated their commitment to build strong India - U.S. civil nuclear energy cooperation through the participation of U.S. nuclear energy firms in India on the basis of mutually acceptable technical and commercial terms and conditions that enable a viable tariff regime for electricity generated. They noted that the United States has ratified the Convention on Supplementary Compensation (CSC) and India intends to ratify the CSC within this year. They further noted that India is committed to ensuring a level playing field for U.S. companies seeking to enter the Indian nuclear energy sector, consistent with India's national and international legal obligations.

- The United States looks forward to hosting a senior-level Indian delegation at the U.S.-India Civil Nuclear Energy Working Group (CNEWG) next week at Oak Ridge Laboratory.

Membership of Export Control Regimes

- Both sides expressed satisfaction with the progress we have achieved together towards India's full membership of the four multilateral export control regimes - Nuclear Suppliers Group, Missile Technology Control
Regime, Australia Group and the Wassenaar Arrangement - in a phased manner consistent with the core principles of these regimes, as the Government of India takes steps towards the full adoption of the regimes' export control requirements.

Export Control Cooperation

- India welcomed steps taken by the United States to remove Indian entities from the U.S. Department of Commerce’s ‘Entity List’ and realignment of India in U.S. export control regulations. Both sides agreed to continue efforts to fulfill objectives of strengthening export control cooperation envisaged in the Joint Statement of November 2010 as well as on the basis of discussions in the High Technology Cooperation Group held earlier this month.

Nuclear Security

- The two sides looked forward to holding later this year the first meeting of the U.S.-India Joint Working Group to implement the MOU on Cooperation with India’s Global Centre for Nuclear Energy Partnerships.

Strategic Security Dialogue

- Both sides view the Strategic Security Dialogue, the last round of which was held in Vienna on 14 June 2011, as a vital element in their dialogue architecture which has strengthened the common ground in promoting global non-proliferation objectives. Both sides also discussed key issues on the multilateral agenda, and looked forward to the commencement of negotiations of the Fissile Missile Cutoff Treaty in the Conference on Disarmament.

Prosperity

- The two sides welcomed increases of 30 percent in bilateral trade in 2010 over the previous year and the balanced and positive growth in services trade. They also welcomed the increase in foreign direct investment flows in both directions.
- The two governments plan to resume technical-level negotiations on a bilateral investment treaty (BIT) in August in Washington D.C. A BIT would enhance transparency and predictability for investors, and support economic growth and job creation in both countries.
- The two sides reiterated their commitment to take steps to expand trade ties. The India-U.S. Trade Policy Forum plans to meet in October 2011, and on-going public-private discussions are to continue under the Commercial Dialogue.
• The two governments intend to participate in the first Consular Dialogue on July 25 in Washington DC for a full discussion of visa and other consular matters.

• The two governments signed a Bilateral Aviation Safety Agreement (BASA) on July 18.

• The U.S. Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC), the U.S. Export-Import Bank, the U.S. Trade Development Agency (USTDA), and U.S. Agency for International Development, in coordination with multiple U.S. government agencies, are participating in the development of clean and renewable energy projects, energy-efficient buildings and Smart Grids in India. The two leaders welcomed the progress in the USTDA supported bilateral Energy Cooperation Programme, announced in November 2010, which works with Indian and U.S. businesses on deployment of clean energy technology in India. The bilateral Joint Clean Energy Research and Development Center is accepting applications for its $100 million, five-year program that is stimulating new collaboration between the United States' and India's public and private sectors in solar energy, energy-efficient buildings, and advanced biofuels.

• The India-U.S. agriculture dialogue was launched in September 2010 to intensify collaboration with India on food security, including joint work with third countries. USTDA hosted a trade mission to the United States for business and government representatives from India in the cold storage field.

• The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Ministry of Earth Sciences have set up a "monsoon desk" to share the latest monsoon prediction models, which are now providing forecasts for the 2011 Indian monsoon season.

Women’s Empowerment

• The Women’s Empowerment Dialogue is planned for September 2011 in New Delhi.

Education, Innovation, Science and Technology

• The United States and India plan to host a Higher Education Summit in Washington D.C. on October 13 to highlight and emphasize the many avenues through which the higher education communities in the United States and India collaborate.

• The United States and India plan to expand its higher education dialogue, to be co-chaired by the U.S. Secretary of State and Indian Minister of Human Resource Development to convene annually, incorporating the private/non-governmental sectors and higher education communities to inform government-to-government discussions.

- As part of the Obama-Singh 21st Century Knowledge Initiative (OSI), the two governments announced the publication of their requests for proposals from post-secondary educational institutions that support OSI's goals of strengthening teaching, research, and administration of both U.S. and Indian institutions through university linkages and junior faculty development.

- The United States created the Passport to India initiative to encourage an increase in the number of American students studying and interning in India. The leaders recognized the great bridge of mutual understanding resulting from the more than 100,000 Indian students studying and interning in the United States.

- The United States’ Department of Energy and India's Department of Atomic Energy signed an Implementing Agreement on Discovery Science that provide provides the framework for cooperation in accelerator and particle detector research and development at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, Thomas Jefferson National Accelerator Facility, and Brookhaven National Laboratory.

- The India-U.S. S&T Endowment Board, established by Secretary Clinton and Minister Krishna in 2009, plans to award nearly $3 million annually to entrepreneurial projects that commercialize technologies to improve health and empower citizens. The two sides are strongly encouraged by the response to this initiative, which attracted over 380 joint India-U.S. proposals. The Endowment plans to announce the first set of grantees by September 2011.

- The India-U.S. S&T Forum, now in its tenth year, has convened activities that have led to the interaction of nearly 10,000 Indian and U.S. scientists and technologists.

- As a follow up to the successful India-U.S. Innovation Roundtable held in September 2010 in New Delhi, the two sides agreed to hold another Innovation Roundtable in early 2012.

- India and the United States plan to host their third annual Women in Science workshop in September 2011.

Space

- The U.S. - India Joint Space Working Group on Civil Space Cooperation met in July 2011 in Bangalore. Building on the successful Chandrayan-
1 lunar mission, NASA and ISRO reviewed potential areas for future cooperation in earth observation, space exploration, space sciences and satellite navigation. Both sides agreed for early finalization three new implementing arrangements for sharing satellite data on oceans and global weather patterns. Recognising the research opportunities available on the International Space Station, both sides agreed to explore the possibilities of joint experiments. NASA reiterated its willingness to discuss potential cooperation with ISRO on human spaceflight activities. The two sides also agreed to expand upon previous work in the area of global navigation satellite systems (GNSS) with the goal of promoting compatibility and interoperability between the U.S. Global Positioning System, India’s Navigation systems, and those of other countries.

Secretary Clinton thanked the Minister, the Government, and the people of India for their gracious hospitality, their warm welcome, and their hard work in making this year’s Strategic Dialogue a success. Secretary Clinton thanked Minister Krishna for his strong support for the India-U.S. relationship.

Minister Krishna thanked the Secretary for her participation and engagement in this year’s Strategic Dialogue and for the commitment and dedication she has given to the U.S.-India global partnership.

The next meeting of the Strategic Dialogue is planned for Washington D.C. in 2012.

New Delhi, July 19, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. Welcome to the Joint Press Interaction. The External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna would be making an opening statement. Next, Secretary of State Mrs Hillary Clinton will be addressing the media.

I would like to invite the External Affairs Minister to please address the media. Sir.

External Affairs Minister of India (Shri S.M. Krishna): Your Excellency Secretary of State of the United States of America Mrs. Hillary Clinton, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is a great pleasure to welcome you, Madam Secretary, back to India, on the second anniversary of your first visit as Secretary of State.

You have been a steadfast friend of India, unwavering in your commitment to India-U.S. strategic partnership. And, you have been a champion of causes that have touched the lives of millions, especially weak and the vulnerable, around the world.

Two years ago almost to this very day in Delhi, we announced the Strategic Dialogue. The Strategic Dialogue is the bedrock on which we are building our global strategic partnership that would be one of the defining relationships of the 21st century. This is the vision of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama.

I thank you for bringing a very impressive delegation. I would also like to thank my colleagues and some of the top officials in the government for joining us in this dialogue. Their presence reflects the depth of our engagement and the diversity of our cooperation.

Ladies and gentlemen, Secretary Clinton and I met for two and a half hours and then continued our discussions over lunch. We reviewed our bilateral relations. We discussed our vision and ambitions for the relationship. And, we discussed a broad range of regional and global developments.

We expressed satisfaction at the momentum in our relationship and all round progress in our cooperation. We welcomed the maturity and mutual confidence in our relationship.

We have expanded our political consultations, touching on all major issues and regions of the world. Our intelligence and counterterrorism cooperation has deepened. Our nonproliferation partnership has grown. We are working towards expanding bilateral economic ties.

There are extraordinary examples of our cooperation to harness the power of science, technology and innovation to address challenges in the realm of healthcare, education, environment, clean energy and agriculture.

Our two governments have instituted a number of innovative programmes for advancing our cooperation in clean and renewable energy and energy efficiency. We are pleased with our progress in this area.

We are creating opportunities for our youth and empowering our people. And, now we are extending the benefits of our cooperation to other countries in areas like food security.

We reiterated our commitment to taking forward civil nuclear energy cooperation on the basis of full implementation of mutual commitments. We were reassured that United States reaffirmed its commitment for full civil nuclear cooperation. I expressed appreciation for our ongoing engagement and full support of the US for India's full membership of the four export control regimes and our expectation of progress in tandem on the four regimes. We discussed UNSC reforms and India's permanent membership of a reformed UN Security Council.

We stressed the importance of defence cooperation in our strategic partnership and expressed satisfaction at the progress we are making in defence cooperation, including in defence trade and collaborations, through our various bilateral defence mechanisms.

While we lauded the growth in trade and investment flows in both directions, we also acknowledged that there was enormous potential for further expansion. We have agreed to resume negotiations on a bilateral investment treaty. I also took the opportunity to convey to Secretary Clinton the concerns of our IT companies in sending their professionals to execute projects and conduct business in the United States. I highlighted that Indian IT companies are contributing to the US economy through investments, employment and supporting US competitiveness. I also requested Secretary Clinton to consider a Totalisation Agreement with India. I thanked Secretary Clinton for her assurance that she will work with the concerned US agencies to seek an early and satisfactory solution for the students affected by the closure of Tri-Valley University.

I expressed our sincere appreciation for the solidarity and support extended by President Obama, Secretary Clinton and the people of the United States after the recent Mumbai terrorist attack.
We had good discussions on terrorism in our region, both during the dialogue and in other meetings on the margin. We resolved to intensify our cooperation to fight terrorism. Both sides remain committed to comprehensive sharing of information on the Mumbai terror attack of 2008.

We have also increased our engagement in the important area of cyber security. We are pleased with the MOU for cooperation between the Indian Computer Emergency Response Team (CERT-IN) and the U.S. CERT.

We discussed the challenges in Afghanistan and Pakistan, and our efforts to address them. We agreed to remain in close touch as the transition phase gets underway in Afghanistan. We also discussed our efforts for reconstruction, development and capacity building in Afghanistan. We acknowledged that regional trade, transit and commercial activities in South and Central Asia would benefit Afghanistan and support regional stability and prosperity. We underscored the importance of elimination of terrorist sanctuaries in Pakistan for regional stability and security and for Pakistan's future.

We discussed our shared interest in peaceful and stable Asia, Pacific and the Indian Ocean region, and the evolution of an open, balanced and inclusive architecture in the region. We will continue to work together, and with other countries, towards this goal through various mechanisms, such as our bilateral dialogue, the regional forums and our trilateral dialogue with Japan. Secretary Clinton and I will continue this engagement in the ARF meeting later this week.

India has vital interests and strong relationships in the Gulf, West Asia and North Africa. Last week, India and the US launched our West Asia Dialogue. Today, Secretary Clinton and I expressed the hope for the fulfillment of the aspirations of the people of the region and for early restoration of peace and stability. Secretary Clinton briefed me on the Libya Contact Group meeting in Turkey last week. We agreed to remain in touch as the situation evolves in the region.

This was a truly productive and comprehensive meeting, consistent with our strategic partnership and the extraordinary breadth of our engagement. Today, we were able to highlight not only the tangible and meaningful progress that we are continually making, but also indentified goals and set priorities for the future.

We are in the midst of our monsoon season - a time of renewal and rejuvenation. So, today, Secretary Clinton and I reaffirmed and renewed our commitment to build a strong global strategic partnership and invigorate our cooperation with a new momentum.
Madam Secretary, I wish you a good visit to Chennai. I think you will be the first Secretary of State to visit Chennai. So, that is going to be a very important visit. And all the best for you in the coming days. Thank you.

US Secretary of State (Mrs. Hillary Clinton): Thank you very much Minister Krishna and thank you to all the members of the Indian Government who are joined with us today in this very productive meeting.

The Minister has provided a comprehensive overview of our discussion in the areas of economic partnership, clean energy, climate change, science and technology and so much else. I also want to mention the emphasis we placed on counterterrorism and homeland security that is obviously an issue that is first and foremost on all of our minds after the bombings in Mumbai last week. And again let me convey on behalf of the United States our deep sympathy and our outrage to the people and Government of India, and pledge our support to you in your fight which is also our fight against terrorism and violent extremism.

Today I want to just emphasise three of the issues we discussed because I can only echo what the Minister said about the depth and breadth of our conversation. He at the end referenced the monsoon season and I have to say it felt like we were in a monsoon with all of the many issues and reports that were being made by our officials outlining the extraordinary progress that has occurred. And there will be a Joint Statement released which will detail in probably more specifics than one can grasp everything that this Strategic Dialogue Partnership has already accomplished.

But let me just quickly reference trade and investment because we think as much progress as we have made, both the United States and India can take further steps to reduce barriers, open our markets and encourage new business partnerships to create jobs and opportunity for millions of our people while strengthening both of our nations’ economic competitiveness.

Secondly, on security cooperation we are deepening and expanding our efforts and making great strides together on behalf of counterterrorism but also with respect to maritime security, we believe strengthening our military-to-military ties including through the sale of defence technologies will assist the Indian and American militaries to work together in a constructive way on everything from patrolling the seas, combating piracy, providing relief to the victims of natural disasters.

And finally with regard to our civil nuclear agreement, this represents a major investment by both of our countries in this critical bilateral relationship. We need to resolve those issues that still remain so we can reap the rewards of the extraordinary work that both of our Governments have done.
These opportunities along with the others that the Minister referenced are within our reach because of the intensive work that we have undertaken in the last two and a half years built on the years before going back into the 1990s. We are building habits of cooperation and bonds of trust. And we are standing on a firm foundation. And we believe that we can do even more work to ensure that this important dialogue leads to concrete and coordinated steps that will produce measurable progress for the wellbeing and betterment of the Indian and American people.

As President Obama has said, we believe this relationship will be a defining partnership of the 21st century, and we wholeheartedly support the rise of India as a regional and global leader. I will be tonight and tomorrow when I will speak at greater length on our view of India's role in the region and the world. We believe that this incredibly important partnership between us is strengthening us and equipping us better to meet the challenges ahead.

So, again Minister, thank you for your leadership and the hard work of your colleagues; and I want to thank my colleagues in Government as well that the real winners of our enhanced partnership and our Strategic Dialogue will be the people of our two countries. And that is what we hope to see in the years to come that will better the lives of men, women and children who so richly deserve and merit that kind of future.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Madam Secretary.

The External Affairs Minister and Secretary of State would be happy to take two questions from each side. I would request you to please limit yourself to one question either to the Secretary of State or the External Affairs Minister. The first question goes to the American side.

Question (American Media): Madam Secretary, the talks between India and Pakistan seem stuck in this stop-start mode with one of the many problems being the fact that after the Mumbai attacks Pakistan is still stalling on prosecution. To your mind, is Pakistan doing everything it can to combat terrorism? Are you exerting pressure on them?

Secretary of State: William, first let me say that we are encouraged by the dialogue occurring between India and Pakistan. I was briefed on the recent developments today by the Foreign Secretary and also discussed with both the National Security Advisor and the Minister. And we think this is the most promising approach to encourage both sides to build more confidence between them and work to implement the kinds of steps that will demonstrate the improved atmosphere that is so necessary for us to deal with the underlying problem of terrorism.
From the United States perspective, we do see Pakistan as a key ally in the fight against terrorism. We have made the point repeatedly to our Pakistani colleagues that terrorists threaten both of us and terrorists have actually killed more Pakistanis in bombings of mosques and markets and attacks on police stations and government buildings than Americans. And so we recognize that Pakistan must act on its own behalf first and foremost to protect its own territory and sovereignty and to protect the lives of the people of Pakistan. And we have made it clear that we want a long-term relationship with Pakistan based on common interests including a mutual recognition that we cannot tolerate a safe haven for terrorists anywhere. And when we know the location of terrorists whose intentions are clear, we need to work together in order to prevent those terrorists from taking innocent lives and threatening our institutions of the State.

During my visits to Pakistan including my most recent one we have made it clear to the Pakistani Government that confronting violent extremism of all sorts is in its interest. We do not believe that there are any terrorists who should be given safe havens and free pass by any government. Because left unchecked, if the consequences of that kind of terrorist activity and intimidation can become very difficult to manage and control. So, both in the interest of Pakistan's own future, in the interest of an improved relationship between Pakistan and India and in the interest of regional stability, we are working with and we will continue to work with the Government of Pakistan to try to tackle this mutual threat.

Question (Indian Media): Madam Secretary, about three years ago India got a clean waiver from the Nuclear Suppliers Group. But last month's NSG meeting has raised apprehension that India might again be subjected to discrimination when it comes to transfer of sensitive technologies like the ENR. Can you, Madam Secretary, today set the record straight on the NSG's intentions and since the Indo-US nuclear deal is at the heart of this issue, can you also clarify whether the US will provide the ENR technology to India?

US Secretary of State: Let me begin by saying that the United States remains fully committed to expanding our civil nuclear cooperation with India. I was one of the two co-chairs of the India Caucus when I served as a Senator from New York and I worked very hard to achieve the landmark legislation in our Congress that was then matched by a similar legislation in yours. And we have made it also clear that we strongly support India's full membership in the four export control regimes including the Nuclear Suppliers Group in a phased manner.

The Nuclear Suppliers Group Clean Waiver was an important joint accomplishment for both our governments and we stand by it. Nothing about the new enrichment and reprocessing transfer restrictions agreed to by the Nuclear Suppliers Group members should be construed as detracting from the unique impact and importance of the US-India civil nuclear agreement or our commitment to full civil nuclear cooperation. But I have to add that we are looking forward to India ratifying the convention on supplementary compensation for nuclear damage during this year, before the end of this year, and we would encourage engagement with the International Atomic Energy Agency to ensure that the liability regime that India adopts by law fully conforms with the international requirements under the convention. So, we stand by our agreement. Many of us worked very hard for that agreement. We are committed to it. But we do expect it to be enforceable and actionable in all regards.

Question (American Media): This is a question for Minister Krishna. Mr. Minister, what assurances did you receive from Secretary Clinton about President Obama’s plan for Afghanistan? Are you persuaded that Washington will not allow a deal that will leave the Taliban in power? And more broadly, do you feel that President Obama’s plan can work? Or do you think that we should also be working on a plan B?

External Affairs Minister: India has been closely following the happenings in Afghanistan. We have a special relationship with Afghanistan which is civilizational as well as transactional. We have fraternal relationship with Afghanistan. We have impressed upon the United States and the other countries who have made their presence in Afghanistan that it is necessary for them to continue in Afghanistan depending upon the comfort level of the Government of Afghanistan and the President of Afghanistan Mr. Karzai; and it is necessary for the United States to factor in Afghanistan’s ground realities as they see it, so that they can appreciate that Afghanistan would be in a position to defend itself against the terrorists sponsored by Taliban. So, I think in the larger interest of the region that it is necessary for the United States to work very closely with President Karzai and the Government of Afghanistan and thereby create conditions where terrorists do not make any more advances in Afghanistan.

Question (Indian Media): My question is for Secretary of State Mrs. Clinton. Madam, you just pledged support to India in fight against terror with reference to the Mumbai blast that happened on 13th July. My question specifically is, what kind of assistance would US provide to India so that the perpetrators of this 13th July attack are brought to justice? And very specifically, as far as 26/11 Mumbai attack is concerned, three years have passed by and Pakistan has not been able to bring the perpetrators of that attack to justice as well. And there are concerns in India as to how serious is America in following these cases. What would you do, Madam, to assuage our concerns in that matter?

Secretary of State: First let me say that there is a great deal of cooperation ongoing between our two Governments with respect to counterterrorism, not only sharing of information but also very clear operational discussions and planning and investigation assistance and a list of other related matters that we think have a tremendously beneficial impact for both of us because a lot of the terrorist networks that threaten you also threaten us. So, this is a mutually cooperative and essential operational relationship. And in the aftermath of the attacks of 2008 in Mumbai, we made it very clear that there was an absolute international responsibility to cooperate to bring the perpetrators to justice, we have made that equally forcefully clear to Pakistan that it has a special obligation to do so transparently, fully and urgently. And it is US policy that we believe the perpetrators need to be brought to justice and have urged Pakistan to do so. Obviously there is a limit to what both the United States and India can do but we intend to continue to press as hard as possible. In the mean time we are going to increase our cooperation and I think that the fact that our Director of National Intelligence General Clapper is here today is testimony to the importance we place on this. And he has been having a series of very significant meetings looking at how we can do more to protect both of us from the scourge of terrorism.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Madam Secretary.

This brings the interaction to a close. Thank you for your presence.

New Delhi, July 19, 2011.

Today afternoon, a high level US delegation led by Special Envoy for Climate Change Mr. Todd Stern met Smt. Jayanthi Natarajan, Minister of State (Independent Charge) for Environment & Forests. It will be recollected that India and the USA have a long history of cooperation on environmental and forestry issues and the present meeting was in continuation of that engagement. Yesterday, the US and the Indian officials had technical level meeting to discuss climate change issues of mutual concern under the leadership of Mr. Todd Stern and Dr. T. Chatterjee, Secretary, Ministry of Environment & Forests respectively. During the meeting, scientific and technical cooperation between the two countries on issues relating to climate change, both present and future, were deliberated upon. Both sides exchanged their views, in a cordial atmosphere on bilateral issues and the ongoing climate change negotiations in the multilateral fora under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). Both sides agreed that operationalization of the Cancun decision in a balanced manner should be the goal for the meeting of the Conference of Parties under UNFCCC at Durban in December 2011. During the exchange of views, Minister Smt. Natarajan brought out the Indian perspective about the balanced outcome on both the LCA and KP tracks under the Bali Road Map, the importance to remain engaged on issues such as equity, accelerated transfer of technologies and trade measures at and beyond Durban and the crucial role of Indo-US programmes regarding science of climate change to further strengthen the bilateral engagement. Mr. Stern conveyed his view on transparency arrangements, i.e. International Assessment and Review (IAR) for developed countries and International Consultations and Analysis (ICA) for developing countries, the principles and approaches for functioning of the Green Climate Fund, the Technology Mechanism, the Financial Mechanism and the legal form of the Agreed Outcome of the LCA process.

At the end of the meeting, both sides agreed that the Indo-US dialogue on Climate Change issues would be continued at the scientific level, the negotiators level and the Ministerial level.

572. Response of Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs to comments by the US State Department on handling of protest fast by Social Activist Anna Hazare.

New Delhi, August 12, 2011.

In response to a question the Official Spokesperson said,

"We have seen the needless comments by the US State Department Spokesperson on handling of peaceful protests in India. Freedoms of speech and expression, as well as, of peaceful assembly, are enshrined in the Constitution of India and exercised by citizens of this country of 1.2 billion people."

◆◆◆◆◆

The Spokesperson was reacting to remarks made by the State Department spokesperson Victoria Nuland who said: "As you know, we support the right of peaceful, non-violent protest around the world. That said, India is a democracy and we count on India to exercise appropriate democratic restraint in the way it deals with peaceful protest." Meanwhile US Senator John McCain who was also Republican candidate for the last US presidential elections, while on a tour of India clarified that US was not behind Anna Hazare's agitation by observing that "the US does not involve itself in what is taking place in the world's largest democracy and neither has it any such intention". He described Indian democracy as "strong and successful" which would be able to address the current domestic dispute.

New Delhi, September 16, 2011.

In response to a question, the official spokesperson said,

"India welcomes the designation yesterday by the U.S. Secretary of State of Indian Mujahideen (IM) as a Foreign Terrorist Organization (FTO) and as Specially Designated Global Terrorist. The U.S. designation reflects our shared commitment to combat terrorism, as well as, the strong and growing bilateral counter-terrorism cooperation, which is an important component of the India-U.S. strategic partnership.

The designation also recognises that IM has links with Pakistan-based Lashkar e-Tayyiba (LeT), Jaish-e-Mohammed (JEM) and Harakat ul-Jihad-i-Islami (HUJI), and notes that IM was responsible for dozens of bomb attacks throughout India since 2005 including playing a facilitative role in the 2008 Mumbai terrorist attack carried out by LeT. This underscores once again the destructive agenda of these organizations with trans-regional links and operations, and the responsibility of all countries in our neighbourhood and beyond, to join hands with the international community to root out the menace of terrorism, once and for all".

The comments of the Spokesperson came in the wake of the US announcement on September 15 that it had listed IM as a terrorist organisation.
574. Address of Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee at the US - India Business Council - FICCI meeting.

New York, September 21, 2011.

"I am extremely pleased to be here this evening and have this opportunity to share some thoughts with investors, business leaders and industry captains of the two countries and the global community. Indeed, we seek your engagement in all aspects of economic activities in India, and likewise look for similar engagement for Indian enterprise in this land of opportunities.

No country has been immune to the contagion from the fallout of global financial crisis in 2008. Though the economic downturn was moderated and growth resumed in the second half of 2009 in most economies, the pace of recovery remained uneven. Advanced economies grew more slowly than before, while emerging economies like China and India led the way, with Latin America and Africa following closely. It appeared that policy makers had learnt their lessons from history by honing and harmonising the use of macro-economic policy and keeping markets open. At the same time, countries in the developed and the developing world adopted revival strategies, in keeping with the needs of their respective contexts, though with varying degree of success.

Developments in recent months have been less encouraging. There is widespread apprehension that even the tepid global economic recovery that we have seen so far is stalling. Slowing global aggregate demand, unresolved Euro debt crisis, high commodity and oil prices, inflationary pressures and stressed currencies have shaved 1 to 1.5 per cent off global GDP in the past six to eight months. Growth in most advanced economies has declined in the second quarter of 2011 and emerging markets are witnessing a combination of moderation in growth and rising inflation. Uncertainties continue to persist.

Advanced economies, the Euro zone and the US, are seized with sovereign debt problems. This is making financial markets nervous. There are structural constraints coming in the way of advanced economies returning to their trend growth path. As a result, their fiscal position looks increasingly unsustainable. Despite the aggressive fiscal and monetary policy, unemployment continues to be at its highest in many advanced countries.

Emerging markets recovered quickly from global slowdown, but are facing elevated commodity prices, inflation, moderating growth and volatile capital flows all at once. Central banks have been forced to raise policy rates repeatedly, potentially compromising growth in the short-term. It is true that emerging economies are relatively better placed with regard to their public debt and fiscal deficit due to their stronger growth momentum and relatively robust banking systems. Their downside risks are on account of high oil and commodity prices and volatility in capital flows, partly due to the easy money policies in advanced countries.

It is against this backdrop, India as one of the largest and among the most dynamic emerging economies continues to be a key driver of global growth. After a GDP growth rate of over 9 per cent in the three years leading to the crisis, a slowdown to 6.8 per cent in the crisis year of 2008-09, followed by strong recovery of over 8 per cent in the two years following the slowdown, India has demonstrated its resilience and the capacity to overcome adversities in its development path.

There is a consensus among analysts that India has a remarkable stretch of growth over the next thirty years. Several reasons support growth to be sustained at a high rate of 8 to 9 per cent per annum. First, the savings and investment ratios have gone up in the last few years and are reminiscent of the high growth East Asian economies. Secondly, India's working age population is young with over half the population is in the twenties. Thirdly, growing middle class incomes have led to self sustaining buoyancy in domestic demand, particularly in the rural areas. Fourthly, India is making rapid progress in infrastructure, both social and physical and along with better access to cutting edge technology is likely to see improvement in productivity. Although these are the primary factors for India's dynamic growth, there are many other drivers of India's growth story including the energy and vibrancy of our entrepreneurs, strong services sectors, emerging knowledge spheres and sunrise sectors and growing number of engineers and scientists.

India's economic progress is not only a key factor of stability in the global economy, but also a source of immense economic opportunity for the world. India presents a rapidly growing market with a large and growing middle class. India has a population of 1.2 billion which translates to that many numbers of potential consumers. As high growth trajectory is sustained, with a corresponding increase in the disposable incomes from expanding work force and increasing wages, India will become one of the largest consumer markets in the world by 2030. In infrastructure sector alone our investment needs over the next five years 2012-2017, which happens to be the period of India's Twelfth Five Year Plan, stand at US$ 1 trillion. We expect 50 per cent of this investment to come from the private sector. These developments create major opportunities for companies both domestic and foreign.

We are not taking this future for granted. Indeed, in a globalised world where developments from one part of the world are being rapidly transmitted to the other, we cannot afford to do so. We are aware that we have to consciously work towards realizing our developmental goals and national aspirations. Even while pressing the accelerator for growth, our priority is to make growth inclusive and sustainable, focusing on a broad-based strategy that encompasses all three sectors - agriculture, manufacturing and services. We are working on a strategy that provides ample opportunities for people to grow and climb the ladder of productivity and knowledge towards higher incomes and well-being.

The economic reforms initiated during the early 1990s have borne good results for the Indian economy. We have taken steps in recent months, to take this process forward.

Legislations have been introduced in the Parliament to address some issues in the financial sector including insurance, banking, and pension sectors. We have set up Financial Sector Legislative Reforms Commission to review financial sector laws with the objective of bringing them in tune with current requirements and global best practices. An apex-level Financial Stability and Development Council has also been established to strengthen and institutionalize the mechanism for maintaining financial stability.

We are working to build a policy consensus on a number of pending issues such as introduction of Goods and Services Tax, a new and facilitative National Manufacturing Policy, further liberalisation of FDI, including in retail, deepening and strengthening financial markets for long term investments.

Our new foreign trade policy is ambitious and aims at doubling exports to $500 billion in the next three years. The policy is backed up with a range of progressive measures including facilitation of investments, simplification of administrative procedures, streamlining of clearances and customs duty systems to name a few. As the Indian export sector continues to transform from low-value added goods to capital and skill intensive and technology rich manufactured products, doubling of exports in three years is not only attainable, but is well within our reach.

Better infrastructure development in new townships is the focus of investment now and would be for sometime in the near future. A recent study by McKinsey estimates that by 2030, 65 cities will have a population of more than one million and would account for 600 million of India’s population. The share of GDP from these cities could rise to 70 per cent. Over the next 20 years, cities would require a capital expenditure of $1.2 Trillion, opening up huge opportunities for investment for foreign investors and capital equipment manufactures. The installed power capacity is expected to increase by five times over the next two decades to maintain a growth rate of 8 to 9 per cent.

Sizeable portion of investment in infrastructure in the future is expected to be from the private sector and we recognize that the development of domestic long-term capital markets is critical for private sector investment in infrastructure.
We have taken several measures in this context including establishment of Infrastructure Debt Fund, reduction in the withholding tax from 20 per cent to 5 per cent and exemption from income tax; permitting Indian Mutual Funds to directly attract investments from foreign investors; increase in ceiling for investments by FIIs in corporate bonds from USD 15 billion to USD 40 billion. We intend to introduce the new Direct Tax Code in the next financial year.

Long term investment opportunities have opened up in the Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor and the Delhi Mumbai Dedicated Rail Freight Corridor. Along these corridors, nine mega industrial zones each covering 200-250 square kilometres as well as three ports and six airports in six States are envisaged. A US enclave within one of the mega industrial zones would be an excellent ecosystem for ramping up manufacturing in high technology sectors that are currently emerging. New products and designs originating from these zones could meet the demands of the domestic markets as well as other vibrant proximate markets in Asia.

For India, sustainable development is a necessity. Long-term perspective plan on energy and the ambitious National Action Plan on Climate Change seek to increase the share of clean and renewable energy in the energy mix and increase energy efficiency across the economy, promote development objectives while also yielding mutual benefits for addressing climate change effectively. The Government has launched a National Solar Mission and is committed to establish a strong manufacturing base in this field. In November 2009, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and President Obama launched a Clean Energy and Climate Change Initiative to advance cooperation in clean and renewable energy, and energy efficiency. Solar and Wind energy expansion offers opportunities for green tech companies in US for building long term partnership with industry in India.

India USA economic relations are getting stronger and are more robust than they were a decade ago. At the core of the US India Economic and Financial Partnership launched last year is the well grounded recognition to generate common response through convergence of each other’s strengths in the field of innovation and technology.

The US is the largest source of technical collaboration for Indian companies. There is tremendous potential for closer collaboration between educational institutions of our two countries and what is required is a jointly forged key to unlock this potential. There are at least 100,000 Indian students in US universities today. As India moves ahead with the educational reforms envisaging expansion and upgradation of the educational infrastructure, US universities can actively engage in India.
India’s economic partnership with the United States is built on a strong framework, based on mutual benefit. Our ties are growing rapidly. Today, the US is one of our leading trade partners and a major source of investment. High growth in India would continue to deliver positive spillover effect for the US. Between 2002 and 2009, US exports to India have quadrupled and the US services tripled. Last year, US-India trade in goods witnessed a 17 per cent growth. Currently, India is only the 12th largest trading partner of the US. So, there is a long way forward in moving together for harvesting mutual benefits.

We have institutionalised the US India Economic and Financial Partnership with regular engagement at highest levels in Government. I have no doubt that the private business and commercial engagement will continue to be the key driver of bilateral economic cooperation even as, we, at the Government level, explore fresh areas of collaboration.

September 23, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma Commerce, Industry and Textiles Minister of India along with Shri Pranab Mukherjee, Finance Minister and Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission led the Government of India delegation to the India-U.S. CEO Forum meeting in Washington D.C. on September 22, 2011. The Forum comprises top CEOs from both sides and is co-chaired by Ratan Tata on the Indian side and David M. Cote, CEO of Honeywell Corporation of the USA. Minister Sharma and the United States Trade Representative (USTR), Ambassador Ron Kirk chaired the session on Review of CEO/Government collaborative projects in different areas including energy efficient buildings, water, agriculture, health care/diabetes; Strategic, high tech and defence trade; and facilitating business travel and totalization agreement. US Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner, Deputy National Security Advisor Mr. Michael Froman led the US Government delegation.

Minister Sharma underscored the importance of free movement of professionals between the two countries. He specifically pointed to serious problems being faced by the Indian IT industry in obtaining H1B and L1 visas and sought its early redressal. He drew attention to the estimates by the Indian industry that the uptake of H1B visa this year has been less than half of annual prescribed limit, and the rejection rates have gone up. He also elaborated on the need and importance of the early signing of the India-U.S. Totalization Agreement. He said that India has signed totalization agreements with several European countries, whose social security systems are different from the Indian system, and from the U.S. system. The United States has also has signed bilateral social security agreements with the same European countries. As such, the differing systems of social security should not be an impediment in signing of the India-U.S. Totalization Agreement.

Minister Sharma acknowledged the important role played by the CEO Forum in policy advocacy that has resulted in tangible policy changes on both sides. He informed the Forum about the positive feedback he had received in his interaction with CEOs in Chicago and Dallas before the CEO Forum meeting. There is a perceptible change in the paradigm for interaction between India and the US from "Buy-Sell" to a long-term investment in the strategic partnership. He spoke about the changes made in FDI policy in India over the last year including allowing FDI in Limited Liability Partnership and removal of the condition of clearance from a previous Joint Venture partner if an investing firm proposes to enter into a fresh Joint Venture partnership with a new partner in the same sector. He also informed the Forum about the consolidation and simplification of FDI policy in India. He assured the CEOs about India's continued determination to keep improving the business and investment environment in the country aimed at meeting government's liberal economic reform agenda.

Shri Sharma said that India and the United States are moving forward with negotiations on the Bilateral Investment Treaty and two rounds of technical negotiations are scheduled to be held before the next round of Ministerial Trade Policy Forum.

Minister Sharma outlined the key elements of the National Manufacturing Policy, which strives to create an improved business environment through greater emphasis on self-regulation, innovation, and simplification. He invited the US investors for establishment of National Investment and Manufacturing Zones, conceived as Integrated Greenfield Mega Industrial town ships and urged the CEO Forum to suggest global best practices for these new town ships.

CITM assessed that in the current situations of global economic uncertainty, the issues of food and energy security have returned and resort to protectionist tendencies could delay the recovery and would be counter-productive.

The deliberations of the CEO Forum identified the areas of Clean Energy; Technology, Health, Agriculture, and Education; Trade, Security and Aviation; Trade and Agriculture; Energy efficient buildings project for expansion and deepening of business-to-business ties.
576. Press Release issued by the Ministry of Human Resource Development on the importance of Indo – US partnership in Education.

New Delhi, October 13, 2011.

Shri Kapil Sibal, Union Minister for Human Resource Development has underlined the importance of partnership between India and the USA in the educational arena. He was addressing the US India Business Council, here today. He said the two countries through partnership can find the solutions for tomorrow, also at the same time pointing out how in today’s interconnected world, problems do not remain confined to the region in which they emerge. He also underlined that solutions to global problems can only be arrived at by studying them in the regions that they exist.

Shri Sibal pointed out that that India is the land of opportunity, with its vast demographic advantage. He said that in fact this demographic advantage must be harnessed in a manner to serve the world. He also spoke about the need in India to vastly scale up college and university infrastructure to meet the goals of a GER of 30% in 10 years.

In his talk, Shri Sibal wondered as to what would be the structure of universities in the 21st century. He also spoke about how differently the cities of the future world will need to be constructed in the context of global warming and also how the growing scarcity of water, for human consumption and also for agriculture would need solutions. He said how an enhanced educational partnership between the two countries could help find solutions for these challenges.

The US Deputy Secretary of State, Mr. William Burns, speaking on the occasion stated that education is one of the pillars of the strategic partnership between India and the US. He said that they had high expectations of this relationship in the years ahead.

During the programme, a joint initiative of the Tata Institute of Social Sciences and Rutgers University, ‘India Centre for Sustainable Growth and Talent Development’ was also inaugurated. This programme will see collaboration between the two institutions in the areas of Women’s Leadership and on Vocational Education Programmes.

577. Statements to media by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and the US President Obama at Bali on the sidelines of the East Asia Summit.

Bali (Indonesia), November 18, 2011.

President Obama: Well, it is a great pleasure, once again, to meet with my dear friend, Prime Minister Singh, and his delegation.

Last year around this time, I embarked on what was an extraordinary trip to India, in which we continued to strengthen the bonds, both commercial, on the security side, and strategic between the world’s two largest democracies. And since that time, we’ve continued to make progress on a wide range of issues. The bonds between our countries are not just at the leadership level, but they’re, obviously, at the person-to-person level given the extraordinary contributions of Indian Americans to our culture, our politics, and our economy.

This will be a outstanding opportunity for us to continue to explore how we can work together, not only on bilateral issues but also in multilateral fora, like the East Asia Summit, which we believe can be the premiere arena for us to be able to work together on a wide range of issues, such as maritime security or nonproliferation, as well as expanding the kind of cooperation on disaster relief and humanitarian aid that’s so important.

So, Mr. Prime Minister, it’s wonderful to see you again. I look forward to a productive discussion, and I very much appreciate all our cooperation.

Prime Minister: Mr. President, it’s always a great pleasure and privilege to greet you. And I recall with immense pleasure your historic visit to our country by the same time last year. And in the last one year, we have made progress in every direction, strengthening our bilateral cooperation — in the economy, investment, trade, in the field of higher education, in the field of clean energy, and strategy and defense relations.

And I am very happy to report to you that there are, today, no irritants whatsoever in our working together on a multiplicity of areas, both bilateral, regional, and global issues. It’s a privilege for India to find you and your administration as deeply invested in ensuring that India makes a success of its historic journey to have the social and economic transformation carried out in the framework of an open society, a democratic polity, committed to the rule of law, and respect for full human freedoms.

Mr. President, in the last one year, we have strengthened in many ways the path that you set out in your historic visit. And whether it is in civil nuclear cooperation, whether it is in humanitarian relief and disaster management, maritime security — all these are issues which unite us in our quest for a world free from the threat of war, want and exploitation.

With these words, I once again thank you for giving me this opportunity to meet with you. And that’s something which the people of India value a great deal. To find the goodwill that you have shown in your presidency is something we deeply appreciate.

Thank you very much.

President Obama: Thank you, everyone.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

It was an hour-long meeting that the two leaders had in Bali on the sidelines of the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) summit. The offer by the Prime Minister, a day after India notified the rules for implementing the law enacted by Parliament in August 2010, were intended to allay the apprehensions of the American suppliers of the nuclear energy equipment.

After his talks with President Obama, Prime Minister told the journalists “I explained to President Obama that we have a law in place and the rules have been formulated. These will lie in Parliament for 30 days. Therefore, we have gone some way to respond to the concerns of the American companies and, within the four corners of the law of the land, we are willing to address specific grievances.”

Media reports said that Prime Minister briefed President Obama on his discussions with Pakistan Prime Minister Yusuf Raza Gilani on the sidelines of the SAARC Summit in Maldives and the Afghanistan President Hamid Karzai during his recent visit to India. The Prime Minister also referred to the recommendations of the India-U.S. CEO Forum on strengthening the involvement of the two countries on the economic front and said India would look forward to investments by U.S. companies in the infrastructure sectors. It may be mentioned that only recently, India has allowed 26 per cent Foreign Direct Investment in pension, aviation and the retail sector, a demand Washington has been making.
In the morning, Prime Minister had a warm and friendly meeting with President Obama lasting over an hour. As you know, this meeting took place after a year after President Obama’s visit to India in November 2010 which he described in his words as extraordinary. He also mentioned that we have continued to strengthen our bonds, commercial, security and strategic, as between the two democracies. He said that there is a great amount of progress on all the issues and that he expressed the hope that we would work together bilaterally, regionally and in the multilateral fora specifying the East Asia Summit where he identified issues such as maritime security, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief.

Prime Minister recalled President Obama’s historic visit to our country, that we have made progress in every direction since the visit, in innovation, economy, investment, higher education, clean energy, strategy and defence. He underlined that that there are no irritants in working together bilaterally, on regional matters, and globally. We have strengthened in many ways the paths set out during the visit whether in civil nuclear cooperation, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief, maritime issues, on which we can cooperate and engage. We have a strategic dialogue that covers a number of areas. He expressed that we welcome US to the East Asia Summit.

He also emphasized that we envisage that EAS should respect the centrality of ASEAN countries, and it should be ASEAN-led. He said that we look toward greater integration of the region and we wish to participate in the new architecture that is being developed. Both called for greater cooperation in trade and investment and for its facilitation.

Prime Minister referred to the recommendations of the CEO Forum which has been set up between India and the United States as being very useful. He invited US companies to invest in the opportunities being created by the infrastructural expansion in India in which over one trillion dollars will be invested in the next five years. He spoke of the Indian growth story of 8.5 per cent over the last five years, the prospects for the future based on our high savings rate of 35 per cent and investment rate of 37 per cent. He underlined our Government’s desire for inclusive growth and for participation of every Indian in it and for every Indian to have a share in it. The two leaders also discussed regional developments among other things.
Question: The Prime Minister told us after his meeting with President Obama about what he conveyed on the issue of nuclear liability. I just wanted to know what the President had to say and how he reacted to the liability rules and if anything in particular was said by the US side.............

Secretary (East): I think I cannot add anything more to what Prime Minister told you directly on the concerns on the nuclear liability law etc. I will leave it at that.

* * * * *

Question: Sir, there was a demand from the Americans that Indian nuclear liability law should be vetted by the IAEA. Is it their stand still? Secondly, the Prime Minister’s statement says that India has done within the four corners of the law of the land. Is there anything that India specifically can do to close the deal with supplier liability?

Secretary (East): I would not like to add to what the Prime Minister has clearly expressed as his view.

Question: Sir, was there any issue of Iran that was raised in the meeting between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama?

Secretary (East): Yes, there was an exchange of views in the context of the recent IAEA report.

Question: With whom? Both leaders or only with President Obama?

Secretary (East): President Obama.

Question: And, what was said?

Secretary (East): Prime Minister reiterated the view that the matter needs to be dealt with diplomatically.

Question: What issues did the American side raise?

Secretary (East): There was a general exchange of views on this … a passing reference to the IAEA report and Prime Minister reiterated India’s stand on it.

Question: Only that! What were all the issues that were raised?

Secretary (East): On the regional issues they discussed developments in Afghanistan. Prime Minister briefed him on our relations with the country and his interactions with President Karzai who had visited India recently. And President Obama apprised Prime Minister of his appreciation for the developments taking place there.
Question: Mr. Secretary, you mentioned that in the meeting with Premier Wen Jiabao, the issue of the economy was raised ...(Inaudible)... was this issue also discussed in the meeting with President Obama earlier on the ...(Inaudible)... the next summit? Can you just share ...(Inaudible)...

Secretary (East): As you know, both of them had been at Cannes for the G20 Summit and they exchanged views on the present state of the global economy, the developments in Europe and in the Euro zone, and the need for concerted global action to deal with the challenges that arise.

Question: The basic question is the response of the US President to Indian Prime Minister’s statement that everything has been sorted out in the framework of the sitting law on the nuclear liability.

Official Spokesperson: Mr. Chandra, can I interject? Same question, same answer.

Question: I think you should say something, something should come out.

Official Spokesperson: All right.

Question: Did Pakistan come up during the meeting with President Obama and what was discussed?

Secretary (East): Yes. Prime Minister mentioned about his meeting with Prime Minister Gilani at the SAARC Summit and the details of it, and the steps being taken by the two countries.

Question: Mr. Secretary, there have been reports in the Chinese media. Did Premier Wen raise this issue of the military build up with the Prime Minister, were there any discussions on any of the outstanding issues as far as border talks are concerned?

Secretary (East): Nothing on the issue that you raised but both sides welcomed the resumption of defence exchanges. In the context of the boundary, they referred to the decision for the Joint mechanism which is to be set up and which was taken during Premier Wen’s visit last year. And they also noted with satisfaction that the boundary was peaceful and tranquil.

Question: Just an addition to the question on the angle that the Prime Minister talked about his meeting with Gilani. Did President Obama talk about their issues with Pakistan? Did he say anything about the US-Pakistan relationship?

Secretary (East): Prime Minister basically spoke about his meeting with Prime Minister Gilani.
Question: Mr. Secretary, during the meetings with President Obama and also Premier Wen, was the Prime Minister’s view on increasing US military ties with Australia ...(Inaudible)... What is India’s view? Was India ...(Inaudible)... increasing its partnership with ASEAN in ...(Inaudible)...

Secretary (East): As I said right in the beginning, we look at ASEAN as central to the East Asia Summit process which should we feel be led by ASEAN. We have, as I mentioned, a long relationship with ASEAN and we would be commemorating the twentieth anniversary of our dialogue partnership next year, and the tenth anniversary of our summit level partnership which we will be commemorating in India.

Question: Was South China Sea referred to in the discussion between Prime Minister Singh and President Obama?

Secretary (East): As I said right in the beginning, they discussed cooperation in maritime issues.

Question: Mr. Secretary, did the question of American bases in Australia come up when Obama spoke to Prime Minister?

Secretary (East): No.

Statement of the Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on the need for the US Government to correct its maps on India.

New Delhi, November 21, 2011.

“The Government is aware of the gross inaccuracies, in the map of India, on the US State Department website. The Government has consistently rejected incorrect depiction of India’s borders on maps used by the US Government. It has used every opportunity to convey to the US side its concern in this regard, and has asked that these maps be corrected.

This position was reiterated by a senior MEA official to the US Deputy Chief of Mission today, who assured us that the US Embassy would convey our concerns to the US State Department.

The Government takes this opportunity to reaffirm that the entire State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and has consistently conveyed to the international community that maps of India should depict the boundaries of our country correctly.”

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

A U.S State Department Spokesperson clarified that the map of India on the Department’s website, which showed Pakistan Occupied Kashmir as part of the territory of Pakistan, “did contain some inaccuracies which were associated with the boundaries of some geographic features” which it said “unintentional” and that the Department was getting the map fixed and “put up a fixed map”. The Spokesperson Ms. Nuland reiterated, “We will put up the new map when we acquire one that we are confident is accurate.”
580. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce on the meeting between Minister Anand Sharma with the visiting Brazilian Foreign Minister Antonio Partiota.

New Delhi, March 8, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry in his meeting with Mr. Antonio Patriota, Minister of External Relations, Brazil, here today, said that India is desirous to forge stronger trade and economic ties with Brazil. He further added that economic complementarities between the two countries would cement the trade and economic relations further and help in the inclusive growth of both the countries. Both sides agreed for setting up of CEOs Forum and identified the priority sectors viz., energy, oil, tourism, pharma, value-added manufacturing, mining, agro-processing etc. Shri Sharma expressed satisfaction as regards signing of Air Service Agreement between India and Brazil.

During the interaction, Shri Sharma expressed satisfaction on increasing bilateral trade to US $ 7.73 billion in 2010 between the two countries. He mentioned to the visiting Minister that both the countries could make sincere efforts to achieve the target of having bilateral trade of US $ 10 billion over the next few years. Shri Sharma also highlighted about the vast potential for cooperation between the two countries viz., SMEs, IT, science & technology, engineering, energy, infrastructure, nuclear power etc.

In the bilateral meeting, Shri Sharma raised the issue of imposition of anti-dumping duties on Indian products such as: PET Films (Polyethylene Terephthalate), Jute yarn, Jute Bags Nitrile Rubber (NBR) and stainless steel. He further informed that at present no antidumping duty has been imposed by India on import of any items from Brazil. During the discussions, he also raised the issue of flexibility in business visas.

Interacting with the Brazilian Minister, Shri Sharma mentioned that there is a proposal for organizing “India Show” in Sao Paulo in March, 2011. The proposed occasion will serve an ideal platform for a number of Indian and Latin American entrepreneurs / companies to explore and discuss business opportunities and tie-ups in trade and investment, he added.

India’s main exports to Brazil are equipments related to wind energy, coke of coal, lignite, naphtha, cotton & polyester yarns, medicines & chemicals, vaccines for human medicines and aviation fuel. India’s main imports from Brazil are crude oil, copper sulphates, soya oil, asbestos, valves, motor pumps, airplanes, wheat, precious & semi-precious stones, etc. Total foreign direct investment (FDI) inflows received from Brazil during April 2000 to December 2010 is to the tune of US $ 4.55 million. Main sectors of investment from Brazil are plastic products, manufacture of leather products, allopathic pharmaceutical preparations, data processing, software development and computer consultancy services.

New Delhi, March 8, 2011.

At the invitation of Shri S. M. Krishna, External Affairs Minister of India, H. E. Antonio Patriota, Foreign Minister of Brazil visited New Delhi on 8th March 2011 for the Bilateral and the IBSA Ministerial meetings. The Foreign Ministers of India, Brazil and South Africa made a joint call on Prime Minister of India on 8th March 2011. The Foreign Minister of Brazil met Shri Vyalar Ravi Minister for Indian Overseas Affairs and Civil Aviation with whom a bilateral Air Services Agreement was signed. He also met Commerce and Industry Minister Shri Anand Sharma with whom he discussed bilateral trade and investment issues and matters pertaining to WTO. Earlier, National Security Advisor and the visiting dignitary led their respective delegations for the 3rd India-Brazil strategic Dialogue on 5th March 2011.

2. The two Foreign Ministers held comprehensive discussions which covered all aspects of bilateral relations and multilateral issues such as the UNSC agenda, IBSA, BRICS, G-20, Doha Round, disarmament and non-proliferation, climate change and human rights. They also exchanged views on regional developments in Afghanistan-Pakistan, Koreas, Middle East, Haiti etc. As current members of the UN Security Council the Ministers reiterated the commitment of both countries to work towards common objectives.

3. The Ministers reaffirmed their commitment to the reform of the United Nations, particularly the Security Council through its expansion in the permanent and non-permanent categories, with increased representation of developing countries in both, in order to improve its efficiency, representativeness, and legitimacy, and for it to better meet the contemporary challenges faced by the international community. The Ministers reiterated mutual support for their countries’, as well as for African permanent membership in an expanded UNSC. They recalled their meetings in New York on 11 February and reiterated their resolve to take the process of UNSC reform toward a concrete outcome during the current session of the UNGA, with a view to achieving reform at the earliest. They agreed on the interlinkages between peace, security and development, as highlighted during an open debate chaired by Brazil on February 11th, 2011, at the UNSC.

4. While acknowledging the growing importance of developing countries and their role in shaping a more balanced international order in a multipolar world, the two Foreign Ministers welcomed the convergence of positions between Brazil and India in multilateral fora as well as in groups such as IBSA and BRICS. They stressed that their concurrent presence in the Security Council during the year 2011 provides an opportunity to work closely together in order to bring their perspectives into the work of the Council and to strengthen the voice of developing countries in that forum. They reiterated the commitment of their countries to consult and coordinate their approaches and positions both in New York and in capitals on issues on the agenda of the Security Council.

5. Both the Ministers noted that the bilateral Strategic Partnership has evolved comprehensively and covered a wide gamut of areas of mutual interest. Both ministers agreed that the India-Brazil Joint Commission Meeting should take place at the earliest.

6. The Ministers expressed satisfaction that bilateral trade & investment have grown significantly in recent years. Bilateral trade at $ 7.8 billion in 2010 registered a growth rate of 25% over the previous year and at this rate both sides hoped to achieve the trade target of $ 10 billion. Acknowledging the Trade Monitoring Mechanism (TMM) as a useful platform for removing obstacles in the bilateral trade, the Ministers hoped the third meeting of the TMM would soon be held in New Delhi. The Ministers urged the CEOs from prominent companies of the two countries to meet soon in order to identify areas of cooperation. They also agreed to facilitate expeditious issue of business visa to promote greater trade and investments in each other’s countries.

7. The Ministers recognized that bilateral defense cooperation has enormous potential and expressed confidence that the Joint Defence Committee will explore development of mutually beneficial collaborative projects. The Ministers also welcomed the visit to Brazil of Indian Air Force Chief (Oct 2010), Chief of the Naval Staff (Feb 2011) and the visit to India of the Brazilian Defence Minister (Mar 2010) and Commander of the Navy (Aug 2010).

8. In the areas of Science and Technology, the Ministers directed that new projects be undertaken by apex national institutions in the two countries for development of commercially viable joint research. The Ministers emphasized that both sides should work towards harnessing the vast potential for cooperation in the field of Information Technology.

9. Recognizing that Agriculture is an important area of bilateral cooperation, the Ministers noted with satisfaction the visit of Shri Sharad Pawar, Hon’ble Minister of Agriculture and Minister of Consumer Affairs, Food and Public Distribution to Brazil in September 2010. They also directed ICAR and Embrapa (The Brazilian Agricultural Research Agency) to sign a new biennial action plan at an early date so that bilateral cooperation between the two organizations moves forward. The Ministers also noted the potential for cooperation in the field of ethanol.

10. Both sides recognised that Energy Security is an important component of the Strategic Partnership. The ministers reiterated the need to enhance cooperation in hydrocarbons, bio-fuels, wind energy and hydro power. They noted the growing Indian investments in hydrocarbons in Brazil and its keenness to further collaborate with Petrobras in the exploration of oil and infrastructure creation. They also emphasized the need for cooperation in the mining sector where there are ample opportunities for mutually beneficial partnerships. They welcomed the proposed visit of Shri Dinsa J. Patel, Minister of State for Mines (Independent Charge) to Brazil in May 2011.

11. The Ministers recognized the potential in civil nuclear cooperation between the two sides and resolved to enhance cooperation in this sector. They hoped that Chairman of the Brazilian National Nuclear Energy Commission would visit India soon.

12. The Ministers reiterated the interest of both sides in furthering cooperation in the Space sector. They expressed satisfaction at the setting up of a ground station at Cuiaba in Brazil by ISRO for reception of Resourcesat-1 signals. They welcomed the proposal of a Brazilian delegation to visit ISRO to create a Joint Working Group.

13. The Ministers also reaffirmed their commitment for cooperation in the field of education and expressed interest in extending the Educational Exchange Program beyond 2011. They welcomed the ‘in principle’ agreement of FGV for establishment of a Chair of Indian Studies in the FGV in Rio de Janeiro. The Ministers welcomed the proposal of Cultural Exchange Program between Brazil and India and express happiness at the cultural events organized by Brazil in India in the last year and at the planned Week of Indian culture in Brazil by India in May 2011. Brazilian side welcomed the proposal of opening of an Indian Culture Center in Sao Paulo, Brazil and expressed its full support for its smooth functioning.
14. The Ministers reiterated the need for enhancing cooperation in sports under the MOU signed in February 2008 between India and Brazil and welcomed the initiative to celebrate the decade of sports in Brazil. They also welcomed the proposal of sending football coaches to India for training of Indian players.

15. The Ministers noted with satisfaction the gradually increasing flow of persons between the two countries. They expressed hope for an early conclusion of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and a bilateral Agreement on Transfer of Sentenced Persons being negotiated by both sides.

16. The Foreign Minister of Brazil thanked the Indian Foreign Minister for the hospitality extended to him and his delegation during the visit. He invited the Indian Foreign Minister to visit Brazil in the near future, which was accepted with pleasure.

582. Briefing by Secretary (ER) Manbir Singh on Prime Minister’s meetings with Presidents of Brazil and South Africa.

Sanya (China), April 14, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good evening. Prime Minister has had two important bilateral meetings with his IBSA counterparts in the second half of today and Secretary (ER) would give you a perspective on the meetings.

Secretary (ER) (Shri Manbir Singh): Thank you, gentlemen.

The Prime Minister met the President of Brazil and thereafter the President of South Africa this afternoon. The first meeting was with the President of Brazil. It was very friendly. The Prime Minister congratulated her on her becoming the President and wished her a very successful tenure. He said there had been a dynamic growth in the relationship between the two countries, and he said that the people of India held her in very high esteem. Then the President started by similar sentiments that India was a country with which Brazil wanted to develop relations; the relationship was very historic.

And then the Prime Minister immediately coming to trade said that the trade between the two countries was on the lower side, it was just eight million dollars, and keeping in view that that the large synergies that can be effected in the trade an economic interaction between the two countries, there was a great potential. The President also felt the same and she suggested that we could set up joint ventures in the information field and also in high technology areas. And the Prime Minister also suggested that there used to be CEO’s Forum between Brazil and India and that needs to be reactivated.

The Prime Minister also said that IBSA was a unique forum that has united three great democracies - democracies of Brazil, South Africa and India - and we should also look at increased cooperation in science and technology, information technology, nanotechnology, and also set up very close interaction between our scientists and technologists to work together. The President agreed with that.

Prime Minister expressed to the President that he was grateful that Brazil had supported India in the Nuclear Suppliers Group. You know that there was that election last year in the Nuclear Suppliers Group and Brazil had come out with very open support and had been active. So, the Prime Minister was thankful to her.

Both the President and the Prime Minister spoke about the UN reforms and also the expansion of the UN Security Council and both expressed that they would very actively work together to realize the expansion in the UNSC and the aspirations of both India and Brazil.

The Prime Minister also said that we are talking about reforms in the International Monetary System and in the G20 President Sarkozy is pushing that these reforms should take place early and also he is talking about energy security and food security. And the President suggested that before the G20 Summit meets, financial experts from India as well as from Brazil should get together and work out as to what could be the exact nature of that reforms and what would be the implications, and how the developing countries are likely to be affected so that they can push those reforms which would benefit the developing countries.

Then they spoke about IBSA and what needs to be done with regard to IBSA. It was important because we are here for the BRICS but there were some people who were expressing that what happens to IBSA. But we found that both the Prime Minister and President were very strong that the IBSA has to be strengthened, IBSA grouping which brings democracies, plural countries, countries with great tolerance together and economic issues should bring them closer.

The Prime Minister also said that Brazil has made a lot of improvement in welfare activities for its people. He said that India would like to share Brazil’s development experience. And the President responded to that by saying that they had worked very hard for social inclusion as well as for social security, and eradication of extreme poverty from Brazil was a very very high priority for them. And she said that both Brazil and India could set up a forum whereby they could exchange experiences on social welfare and social improvement. She also said that Brazil was launching a huge programme to develop skills in the rural areas and amongst the people who do not possess skills. The Prime Minister said that we also in India had a target of imparting skills to about 500 million people by 2020. So, they had a very good discussion and exchange of views on what needs to be done for economic development and welfare of the people.

This was with regard to the meeting with Brazil.

With regard to South Africa, the President of South Africa was very thankful to the Prime Minister and said that India had played a very key role in South Africa becoming a member of the BRICS and he spoke in very laudatory terms about the BRICS, and the future and the potential that the grouping has, and said that he was very thankful to India that it helped South Africa become a member.

Our Prime Minister spoke about the trade and said that the trade with South Africa was progressing very satisfactorily. Our Commerce and Industries Minister was present. He said that the target had been 12 billion dollars till 2012 but that target is going to be realized much earlier. So, the target for 2012 has been increased to 15 billion dollars.

President Zuma also said that he would confirm that they would be sending an invitation to President Patil to visit South Africa next year in 2012. He also said that they intent to invite Shrimati Sonia Gandhi for the centennial celebrations of the ANC which will take place. Prime Minister said that he thanked for both the invitations. He said we give utmost importance to your invitations and we will respond to you.

The President also congratulated the Prime Minister on India’s win in the cricket tournament and said that once India had won from South Africa he was sure that India was going to win the trophy.

The President and the Prime Minister then again spoke about the UN reforms and democratization of the UNSC with more deserving members becoming members and how both the countries could coordinate with each other in achieving this objective.

On IBSA again the President of South Africa was very supportive and said like the President of Brazil that IBSA needed to be encouraged and all the three countries needed to work together.
There was a passing mention about defence cooperation between the two countries and the second round of naval exercises are going to be held between South Africa and India. Both felt that this cooperation could be profitably further strengthened. Then there were some discussions on both Libya and Cote d'Ivoire, Ivory Coast; and the President gave his assessment of how South Africa viewed the events in both the countries because South Africa is the Chairman of the African Union and they are helping to set up a dialogue and reconcile differences.

That is what it is. Thank you.

Question: India had banned a South African firm Denel for allegations of corruption and South Africa wants to lift the ban on that South African company. Did Mr. Zuma raise this issue with the Prime Minister?

Secretary (ER): This issue was not raised at all.

Question: Did South Africa issue any statement on nuclear issues or nuclear power?

Secretary (ER): Nuclear power only came up in the BRICS conference as I told you earlier in the afternoon.

Question: Did the ...(Inaudible)... naval exercises?

Secretary (ER): This was just mentioned that the second naval exercises will take place.

Question: Just one basic question. How long did the meetings with the two leaders last?

Secretary (ER): The meetings took place for about 45 minutes each.

Official Spokesperson: I take it that there are no more questions.

Thank you very much.
583. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the 5th India - Brazil Joint Commission Meeting.

New Delhi, December 8, 2011.

Foreign Minister of Federative Republic of Brazil H.E. Antonio Patriota, will be visiting India from 11-13 December, 2011 to co-chair the Fifth India Brazil Joint Commission Meeting (JCM) with EAM Sh. S. M. Krishna. He will be accompanied by a 20-member delegation.

During the JCM on 12 December, 2011 both sides will discuss the entire gamut of India-Brazil Strategic Partnership including Political, Economic and Commercial, Agriculture, Science and Technology, Defence, Cultural, Hydrocarbon, etc. They will also exchange views on regional developments and international matters of common interest.

Diplomatic relations between India and Brazil were established in 1948. Both countries enjoy cordial and friendly relations, which are characterized by regular exchange of visits at all levels, shared values and commonality of interests. The mutually beneficially Strategic Partnership covers a wide gamut of our relations. India and Brazil maintain close contacts in the multilateral fora, in particular in the UN, WTO and G-20. Cooperation through IBSA, BRICS and BASIC is another dimension of our relations. Prime Minister met President of Brazil Dilma Rousseff on the margins of the IBSA Summit in Pretoria in October, 2011.

Brazil is the largest trading partner of India in Latin American and Caribbean. Bilateral trade has grown significantly from US$ 828 million in 2000 to US$ 7.7 billion in 2010. India’s exports are valued at US$ 4.2 billion and imports at US$ 3.5 billion. From January to October 2011, bilateral trade has recorded US$ 8.01 billion. Indian companies have made significant investments in Brazil which are estimated at US$ 2.5 billion in the fields of agriculture, IT, pharma, manufacturing, hydrocarbons, etc. Indian Culture Centre was established in May 2011 in Sao Paulo.

COLOMBIA

New Delhi, May 13, 2011.

India today signed a Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) with the Republic of Colombia for the avoidance of double taxation and for the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income. The Agreement was signed by Shri Sudhir Chandra, Chairman, Central Board of Direct Taxes on behalf of the Government of India and by Mr. Juan Alfredo Pinto Saavedra, Ambassador of the Republic of Colombia to India, on behalf of the Republic of Colombia.

The DTAA provides that business profits will be taxable in the source State if the activities of an enterprise constitute a permanent establishment in the source State. Examples of permanent establishment include a branch, factory etc. Profits of a construction, assembly or installation projects will be taxed in the State of source if the project continues in that State for more than six months.

Profits derived by an enterprise from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic shall be taxable in the country of residence of the enterprise. Dividends, interest and royalty income will be taxed both in the country of residence and in the country of source. However, the maximum rate of tax to be charged in the country of source will not exceed 5% in the case of dividends and 10% in the case of interest and royalties. Capital gains from the sale of shares will be taxable in the country of source.

The Agreement further incorporates provisions for effective exchange of information and assistance in collection of taxes between tax authorities of the two countries in line with internationally accepted standards including exchange of banking information and incorporates anti-abuse provisions to ensure that the benefits of the Agreement are availed of by the genuine residents of the two countries.

The Agreement will provide tax stability to the residents of India and Colombia and facilitate mutual economic cooperation as well as stimulate the flow of investment, technology and services between India and Colombia.

DOMINICA

586. Address by Minister of State Mrs. Preneet Kaur at the Seminar on “India-Dominican Republic: Trade and Investment Opportunities”.

New Delhi, February 2, 2011.

H.E. Dr. Leonel Fernandez Reyna, President of the Dominican Republic
H.E. Mr. Eddy Martinez Manzueta, Hon’ble Minister and Executive Director, Export and Investment Centre Excellency Mr. Hans Dannenberg Castellanos, Ambassador of the Dominican Republic Distinguished members of the President’s delegation
Members of the Diplomatic core
Officials of FICCI, CII and ASSOCHAM
Friends from Media,
Ladies and gentleman

It gives me great pleasure to address this gathering on the important occasion of the visit of the President of the Dominican Republic. At the outset, I would like to welcome President Fernandez and members of his delegation. I would also like to take this opportunity to congratulate our Apex Chambers of Commerce such as FICCI, CII and ASSOCHAM for organizing this important seminar.
Excellency, we are indeed delighted that you could spare some time out of your busy schedule to visit India. We in India admire your vision and statesmanship. We are aware of the significant contribution you have made for the regional integration of Latin America and the Caribbean region. We are also conscious of your abiding interest in India and the special role you played for strengthening and deepening our bilateral relations.

Ladies and gentlemen, as you all know I have assumed the charge as the Minister of State for External Affairs only recently. This is my second stint in this capacity. I must, however, confess that although Latin America and Caribbean region is new to me, it has always fascinated me; its diversity, dynamic entrepreneurship, cultural vibrancy and, above all, its people who are full of zest for life.

The Government of India is keen to expand and diversify our relations with this region. We are aware of the enormous change that has occurred in Latin America over the last decade. It is politically stable and most of the countries are focusing on development and inclusive agenda. Moreover from India's point of view it offers enormous opportunities. The region has a combined GDP of over US$ 42 trillion, a trade turn-over of over US$ 1.5 trillion and a population base of over 600 million people. We are aware of the vast natural resources in terms of land, water availability, minerals and hydrocarbons.

The way our two regions are interacting with each other is reflective of the growing realisation about each other’s potential. The exchange of visits at the level of Head of State /Head of Government, ministerial, official, business and people to people contacts have increased manifold in the last decade. There have been several Parliamentary delegations from Latin America that have visited India in the last one year, particularly from Uruguay, Paraguay, Mexico and, only last week from Chile. Our cooperation at multilateral forums, particularly in the UN is moving ahead. We deeply appreciate the countries of the region for their support to India in its bid for the non-permanent membership of the UNSC. In particular, we value Dominican Republic’s expression of open support to India's aspiration for the permanent membership of an expanded UNSC. We hope others in the region will follow suit.

Our mutual trade and economic interests underpin our relations with the LAC region. Distance is no longer an impediment but direct transportation links have to be further developed. Bilateral trade has grown significantly from US$ 2 billion in 2000 to over US$ 17 billion in 2009. Going by this trend, I have no doubt; we will be able to double this figure in five years given the enthusiasm of the entrepreneurs on both sides. India’s investments in the region have also grown significantly to over US$ 12 billion. While Indian investments would continue to grow in the traditional sectors such as hydrocarbons, agricultural farming and mining, our presence in other sectors such as automobiles, IT, pharmaceuticals, engineering, gems & jewellery, food processing will expand. It is satisfying to note that the technical cooperation between our two regions is moving at an impressive pace. Several countries in the region are availing of ITEC programmes which facilitate exchange of experts between our two countries. India has also set up IT centres in various countries in the region. All these initiatives are contributing in a modest way in the efforts of these countries for development of human resource. This is in line with our abiding commitment to South-South cooperation.

Also, to supplement the efforts of our business people, the Government of India in close collaboration with apex chambers of commerce and industry such as FICCI, ASSOCHAM and CII is aiming to enhance awareness about the region’s potential. Seminars, business conclaves and conferences like the one today are excellent initiatives in the exercise of awareness building. Similarly, education and culture are other avenues through which we aim to amplify this awareness. The Indian Council for Cultural Relations is regularly sending and receiving cultural troupes from the region. It is also setting up Indian cultural centres in selected countries in the region.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is our deep desire to build comprehensive relations with Dominican Republic. Our bilateral interactions at all levels are steadily growing and our multilateral cooperation is deepening. Although a bilateral trade of over US$100 million is not very large, we are conscious of the vast potential that exist for greater trade and investment in the Dominican Republic. We look at Dominican Republic as a bridge between the Caribbean and Central American region as well as a gateway to the North American Markets. Excellency, we in India are also aware of your vision for Dominican Republic to make it an IT hub for the Caribbean region. We would like to encourage Indian businessmen to invest in Dominican Republic in potential areas for mutually beneficial partnership. There is enormous scope in renewable energy sources, hospitality, tourism, film industry & animation and IT sectors. I am confident that the large business delegation that is accompanying the President will have fruitful and productive interactions during their stay here in India.

Excellency, we have no doubt that your visit will provide enormous impetus for greater business interactions between our two countries. Let me reiterate once again the commitment of the Government of India to build an enduring partnership with Dominican Republic.

Thank you,

Jai Hind.

589. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on ICCR's Chair at the University of Vienna.

New Delhi, February 4, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and the University of Vienna, Vienna, Austria signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on February 3rd, 2011 for establishment of ICCR's Short -Term Chair of Indian Studies at the University. Ambassador of India to Austria, Shri Dinkar Khullar signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR alongwith Prof. Mag. Dr. Sussane Weigelin-Schwiedrzik, Dean, Faculty of Philological-Cultural Studies, University of Vienna.

Under the terms of the agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the University of Vienna, shall appoint an Indian academician who would be visiting the University for a period of one semester in each academic year. The Chair would commence from September 2011 and the MoU would remain valid for four years till 2015.

This Chair is the first ever Chair of Indian Studies in any of the Universities in Austria and can be considered as a first step in propagation of India related studies in Austria, thereby, fulfilling ICCR's larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural bonds and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.

590. Media Briefing by Secretary (West) on President’s visit to Switzerland and Austria.

New Delhi, September 29, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon and welcome.

You are aware that Hon. Rashtrapatiji, President of India, would be leaving on state visits tomorrow, first to the Swiss Confederation and next to Austria. Secretary (West) Mr. M. Ganapathi, who assumed office on the first of September this year, is here to brief you about the two important state visits of the President of India. He is joined by my colleague to his right Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison who is our Joint Secretary for Central Europe and also for Europe West. To my left is my dear colleague, Mrs. Archana Datta, who is the Officer on Special Duty in the President’s Secretariat.
Today we are very happy to have two distinguished guests – the Ambassador of Austria and the Charge D'affaires of the Swiss Confederation. Welcome to both of you. We are delighted that you are with us.

I will request Secretary (West) to make his opening statement and thereafter he will be happy to take a few questions.

Secretary (West) (Shri M. Ganapathi): Thank you Vishnu.

Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen, friends from the media, my colleagues Shri Vishnu Prakash, Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison, and Mrs. Archana Datta.

I would also like to recognise the presence today afternoon of His Excellency Dr. Ferdinand Maultaschl, the Ambassador of the Republic of Austria to India, and the Charge D'Affaires of the Swiss Confederation to India.

As my colleague Vishnu Prakash mentioned, the Hon. President of India will be on a State Visit to the Swiss Confederation from September 30 to October 4, 2011. The President will thereafter pay a State Visit to the Republic of Austria from October 4 to 7, 2011.

The members of the delegation accompanying the President of India will include Shri Rajeev Shukla, the Hon. Minister of State for Parliamentary Affairs and the Hon. Members of Parliament Shri Vijay Jawaharlal Darda, Shri Prataprao Ganpatrao Jadhav, and Dr. Chinta Mohan. Senior officials including the Secretary to President Dr. Christy Fernandez and Secretary (West), Ministry of External Affairs would also be a part of the delegation, besides a number of business leaders and members of the media.

The President of the Swiss Confederation visited India for the first time in 1998 followed by another visit in 2003, and most recently Her Excellency Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey paid a State Visit to India in November 2007. Former President Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam visited Switzerland in 2005.

In Switzerland, the President will pay homage to the Father of the Nation, Mahatma Gandhi on October 2, 2011 at his statue in Geneva. The statue was unveiled in November 2007 to commemorate the 60th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Switzerland. While in Berne, the President will hold official talks with the President of the Swiss Confederation Her Excellency Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey, and other members of the Federal Council. The discussions, inter alia, are expected to cover various aspects of bilateral relations and regional and international issues.

While in Switzerland, the President will unveil a bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore at the University of Lausanne on October 4, 2011. An MoU is expected to be signed between the University and the Indian Council for Cultural Relations.
on setting up of a Chair on Indian Studies. It is significant that this event takes place at a time when we celebrate the 150th anniversary of the birth of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore.

The President will visit the European Organisation for Nuclear Research, which is better known by its acronym CERN, on October 1, 2011. This is one of the largest and most reputed centres for scientific research, particularly on particle physics, in the world.

The President will leave Switzerland on October 4, 2011, arriving in Vienna the same evening to commence her State Visit to the Republic of Austria.

The visit by His Excellency Mr. Heinz Fischer, the President of Austria in 2005 was the first visit at this level from Austria. Then President Shri K.R. Narayanan visited Austria in 1999.

While in Austria, the President will meet the President of Austria, His Excellency
Mr. Heinz Fischer and the Federal Chancellor of Austria, His Excellency Mr.
Werner Faymann. The President will visit the Austrian Parliament and meet the President of the National Council, Her Excellency Ms. Barbara Prammer and members of the Friends of India Group in the Austrian Parliament. During these meetings it is expected that the President will have detailed discussions on issues of mutual importance and interest in the bilateral, regional and international areas.

State Banquets will be hosted in honour of the President in Berne and Vienna.
The Governor and Mayor of Salzburg will host an official Banquet in honour of the President when the President visits Salzburg in Austria.

While in Switzerland and Austria, the President will also meet and address the members of the Indian community. There are around 15,500 Persons of Indian Origin in the Swiss Confederation and around 20,000 Persons of Indian Origin in Austria.

A 45-member business delegation will accompany the President of India to Switzerland and Austria. The members include representatives from the FICCI, CII and ASSOCHAM. The President will address the Indo-Swiss Business Forum in Berne on October 4, 2011 and the India-Austria Business Forum
Meet in Vienna on October 6, 2011.

India’s economic and commercial relations with Switzerland and Austria are comprehensive. Two-way trade in 2010 between India and Switzerland touched US$ 3.8 billion and between Austria and India it was over US$ 1.2 billion. With both Switzerland and Austria, we have a healthy level of investment related activity from these countries into India and also in the reverse direction. Both Switzerland and Austria are renowned for their experience and expertise in activities in the high technology related area, renewable and clean energy, infrastructure development, vocational education, small and medium enterprises, drugs and pharmaceuticals, biotechnology besides others. The presence of the business delegation will allow both sides to consider the opportunities which exists in not only taking forward the current commercial exchanges but also considering the considerable untapped potential which so exists.

Both Switzerland and Austria are important partners of India in Central Europe with both countries sharing with India core values of democracy, the rule of law, respect for individual freedoms, pluralism and free enterprise. The visit of our President is a part of the process of maintaining our high level engagement with Switzerland and Austria. The exchanges between the two countries in the political, Parliamentary, economic and commercial, cultural and science and technology fields have been gathering momentum. The State Visit of the Hon. President of India to both Switzerland and Austria would provide added impetus in the further expansion and consolidation of the historical friendship and cooperation between India and these two friendly countries.

Thank you.

Question: I would like to know the areas, in this particular visit, in which an agreement is likely to be signed between India and Switzerland. Is there any specific stress on clean energy transfer of technology?

Secretary (West): Various issues will be discussed and some agreements are in the stages of finalisation. So, we expect to have some of these finalised. I think as we go on we will have them delivered.

Question: Any specific areas?

Secretary (West): As I said, these are in the final stages of finalisation, and as we have it we will definitely let you know.

Official Spokesperson: In any case you know that we never disclose the details in advance - standard operating procedure.

Question: Can we know at least in which fields you think you will sign the agreements?

Secretary (West): As my colleague said and as I also mentioned, we do not talk of agreements before they are signed. So, wait for it to be delivered when we are in Berne and Vienna.

Official Spokesperson: And we will, as usual, very happily share all the details with you once the agreements are signed.
Question: Will the issue of money in Swiss bank accounts figure in the discussions? There has been so much public debate on how to get that money stashed in Swiss bank accounts back to the country, etc. Will there be any discussion on this?

Secretary (West): As I mentioned, when we have high level visits to various countries including in this case Switzerland and Austria the entire gamut of relations are touched upon. I think it would be incorrect for me to second guess what the leaders would discuss, but the entire gamut of bilateral, regional and international issues will be discussed between the leaders of the two countries.

Question: What is the significance of President's visit to CERN?

Secretary (West): This is one of the most important areas of research in particle physics and it has been in the news recently because of the Large Hadron Collider and the issue of neutrinos travelling faster than space. Of course that itself has opened up to debate as to how was this measured, whether the neutrinos did travel faster than light, was the Moon gravity in a different stage. So, I think when we have high level visits to various countries, places of importance not only from a historical and tourist perspective but also those areas which have lent themselves to science and technological development are also added and incorporated in the visit of high level leaders. And the President obviously is interested in the developments in science and technology which you know it is renowned for, and that is why the Hon. President is visiting CERN.

Question: Sir, I am just taking my cue from my colleague’s question. You clearly would not second guess but it is a possibility that the money stashed away in Swiss banks would be discussed.

Secretary (West): I would just like to repeat that the President would discuss the entire gamut of bilateral relations and also regional and international issues.

Question: Is there any possibility of the revised Double Taxation Avoidance Treaty being agreed upon?

Secretary (West): I think that is a very very good question. The amending protocol to the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement was concluded nearly hundred days ago. The procedure for that is, we have ratified it in India and in the case of the Swiss Confederation, after it is introduced in Parliament it has to wait for hundred days before it comes up as a ratified document. Thereafter, there will be exchange of letters between the two sides for it to be effective. One of the most important elements in the amended protocol is Article 26 relating to exchange of information.
Question: Exchange of information regarding what? What kind of information?

Secretary (West): Exchange of information on every aspect of double taxation related issues.

Question: Sir, I have a question on a separate subject. In the last couple of months there have been about fifty incursions of China in India. Is the Government of India taking this issue up with the Chinese authorities?

Official Spokesperson: You know that we have a very long boundary with China. The Line of Actual Control with China has not yet been delineated. Therefore, since the line has not been delineated, there is a difference in perceptions, which is very natural. As I said, it is a long border. So, from time to time the patrols do stray across. This is not new. This does happen. And we have also very good mechanisms between India and China where if there is any issue pertaining to the kind that you mentioned, it is immediately taken up and amicably resolved. I would like here to highlight that the India-China boundary is one of the most peaceful, one of the most tranquil boundaries that we have. So, that is where the matter rests.

Question: Sir, a few days back Dawood Ibrahim’s son’s wedding reception was held in Pakistan. Pakistan has always said that Dawood is not in Pakistan. Now it is confirmed after this wedding reception.

Official Spokesperson: So, you are answering your question.

Question: No, Sir, will our Ministry raise this issue with Pakistan Government?

Official Spokesperson: You are aware that we have a Most Wanted List of people and that list has been shared with Pakistan. We have taken up this issue of the most wanted people who we believe are in Pakistan or territories controlled by Pakistan. And they have told us that these people are not there, at least specifically about Mr. Dawood Ibrahim that he is not there.

Question: Sir, but if they have said he is not there and yet his son’s wedding...

Official Spokesperson: That is precisely my point.

Question: Who is leading the FICCI delegation and who are the members? ...(Unclear)... Is India looking towards Austria as a gateway to the Eastern Europe?

Secretary (West): I think that is a very important question and you rightly raised. It is good that is the last question.
We have, as I mentioned, delegation drawn up from FICCI, CII and the ASSOCHAM. The delegation is led by Mr. K.K. Modi who is a former President of FICCI and is the Chairman of Modi Enterprises. There are 16 members from FICCI; there are 13 members from CII; and around 16 members from ASSOCHAM. The areas covered by the delegation members include those in manufacturing, agrochemicals, banking and finance, FMCG, communications, infrastructure, biotechnology, engineering and manufacturing, information technology and the like. There is also the food processing, logistics, trading and textiles. Obviously both Switzerland and Austria have an important place in Central Europe. And as we see the Swiss and Austrian businessmen looking at India to have markets in this area, I am sure that Indian businessmen will also look at opportunities for having their presence in both Switzerland and Austria to look towards the EU and markets beyond.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

591. Statement of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the media on board her special flight on her State visit to Switzerland and Austria.

September 30, 2011.

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

I warmly welcome you on-board, as I begin my State Visits to the Swiss Confederation and the Republic of Austria, which are two important partners of India in Central Europe. India shares core values of democracy, the rule of law, and respect for human dignity with them.

The President of the Swiss Confederation Micheline Calmy-Rey paid a State Visit to India in November, 2007. The Austrian President Heinz Fischer had visited India in February 2005. My visit is a part of the process of maintaining our high level engagement with these friendly countries. Significantly, our relations with both countries have important historical highlights. The Treaty of Friendship signed by India with Switzerland, was one of the first treaties to be signed by India as an independent country. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru played an important role in facilitating an agreement on Austria’s State Treaty of 1955, which paved the way for Austria’s independence.

My first engagement would be a visit to the European Council for Nuclear Research, one of the world’s largest and most reputed centres for scientific research. India is an observer Member State to CERN, in which about 200 Indian/Indian origin scientists are working. On October 2, the birthday of the Father of our Nation - a day so important in our national calendar - I would be paying homage to Mahatma Gandhi at his statue in front of the United Nations building in Geneva, in Ariana Park located on the Avenue of Peace. The statue itself was unveiled on November 14, 2007 to commemorate the 60th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Switzerland. I would also be meeting the Indian community in Geneva.

Thereafter, in Berne I would be having wide-ranging discussions with President Calmy-Rey and other members of the Federal Council of Switzerland. It would be recalled that during President Calmy-Rey’s visit in 2007, the two sides had discussed the need to elevate the bilateral relationship to the level of a Privileged Partnership. This would, in our view, require a diversification and enhancement of cooperation and closer understanding on bilateral and multilateral issues of common concern. We would be discussing how to achieve this. Some of the areas which I would be highlighting in the bilateral context are economic and commercial cooperation, scientific ties, educational exchanges and people-to-people contacts.

I will be unveiling the bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore at the University of Lausanne on October 4, 2011 where a “Tagore Chair” on Indian Studies is also being set up. I am happy that these events are taking place in the year in which we are celebrating the 150th Anniversary of the birth of the Poet Laureate.

Today, economic and commercial cooperation have emerged as the core of the India-Switzerland relationship. Between 2006 and 2010, two-way trade has risen by approximately 36 percent and touched US$ 3.7 billion. Switzerland has emerged as one of the top investors in India as also a source of advanced technology in diverse fields such as engineering, precision instruments, textile production. We would like to see more Swiss firms using India as a manufacturing base for exports to third countries as well as an R &D centre. There is also an excellent potential for harnessing Swiss technologies to meet our developmental needs in areas such as renewable energy, energy efficiency and vocational education.

My visit to Austria aims at signalling the importance we attach to this bilateral relationship, and to further expand and strengthen our ties. In Vienna, my engagements include delegation-level discussions with the Austrian President Mr. Heinz Fischer and meetings with the Austrian Chancellor Mr. Werner Faymann and the Speaker of the Austrian Parliament, Ms. Barbara Prammer.

Our trade with Austria has increased by 55 percent between 2006 and 2010. It touched US $ 1.1 billion in 2010. Since the first Indo-Austrian industrial collaboration was signed in 1956, there has been significant cooperation through a large number of collaborations, know-how transfers and joint Ventures in multiple areas, including in our infrastructure sector such as railways, roads and steel production. We hope to enhance our economic partnership and cooperation in other areas.

Indian firms have begun to invest in Switzerland and Austria, using their location as a gateway to Europe. An Indian business delegation will be in Geneva and Vienna during my visit, to explore trade and investment opportunities.

It is important to promote people-to-people exchanges with Austria and Switzerland, where there is a strong interest in Indian culture and languages. In Austria, for example, Sanskrit began to be taught at the University of Vienna in 1845, which transformed itself into a popular separate Institute for South Asian, Tibetan and Buddhist Studies. In Switzerland, Sanskrit courses began in 1903 in the University of Lausanne and today there are thriving Centres for Indian Studies in the Universities of Lausanne as well as Zurich. Indian films are quite well-known in both countries and along with the numerous events focusing on India this year, would have given the Swiss and the Austrian citizens a good glimpse of India. We would like to see more tourists visiting India from both these countries.

Switzerland as well as Austria are active members of several international organizations; many of which are based in these countries. I would be exchanging views with my counterparts in both countries on international issues such as international terrorism, climate change and reforms of the United Nations.

I am confident that my visits to Switzerland and Austria would provide an additional momentum to our already existing multi-dimensional relations with these countries.

In these countries, the media will, I am sure, get an opportunity to see the potential that exists for mutually beneficial co-operation in many areas and sectors. In my interaction on 26th September, with the Indian Business delegation, which will be present in Berne and Vienna during my visit, I noted the general positive prognosis that they have about forging business ties with Swiss and Austrian enterprises.

I hope you will enjoy the visit.

Thank you.

592. Media Briefing by Secretary (West) in Vienna on President’s Ongoing Visit to Switzerland and Austria.

Vienna, October 4, 2011.

OSD (PR) to Hon. President (Shrimati Archana Datta): Good evening friends. We have with us Secretary (West) Mr. M. Ganapathi; Joint Secretary (CE) Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison; and our Ambassador Mr. Dinkar Khullar. We did not get time to have a briefing during our visit to Switzerland. Secretary (West) will wrap up the visit to Switzerland, and Ambassador will give you an introduction to the visit to Austria.

I would request Secretary (West) Mr. Ganapathi to brief you.

Secretary (West) (Shri M. Ganapathi): Thanks Archana.

First of all apologies for keeping you waiting, and also apologies for not having done the briefing in Switzerland because by the time we finished the banquet yesterday it was nearly 11 pm. So, I think it would have been too late.

Let me welcome my distinguished colleague and friend, Ambassador Dinkar Khullar. Ambassador Khullar has been here for nearly two years. I also welcome Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison, Joint Secretary (Central Europe & West Europe); Mrs. Archana Datta, OSD (PR) to the President; and Mr. Sailas Thangal, Director (XP). What I thought is that I will go through the entire visit in Switzerland right from day one so that you get the complete canvas of what happened, and then we will take it on from there.

The President’s visit was highly successful. The discussions of the President with the President of the Swiss Confederation Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey and her other colleagues on the Federal Council were held in a very cordial and friendly atmosphere. The talks were constructive and productive. Prior to the delegation-level talks, of course all of you are present, when the two Presidents spoke in the Federal Assembly building where they made their opening remarks. The delegation-level talks stretched for over an hour and a half - which was fairly long, more than what was intended – and thereafter the Presidents briefed the media.

The talks reflected mutual understanding and emphasised the importance accorded by both sides to the development and further consolidation of Indo-Swiss relations.

Earlier, in Geneva, the President paid homage to the Father of the Nation Mahatma Gandhi on his birth anniversary on October 2, which was nearly eighty years after the Father of our Nation’s visit to Switzerland.
The President in her talks recalled the highly successful visit of President Micheline Calmy-Rey to India in 2007, and thereafter her visit to India as the Foreign Minister of Switzerland in 2010. The President noted that her current visit to Switzerland was a continuation of the momentum which had been generated during President Calmy-Rey’s visits. Mrs. Calmy of course agreed with the President’s remarks; recalled the warm hospitality which she had been accorded in Delhi; and said that the discussions in Delhi were useful both in 2007 and 2010. The President in turn thanked the Swiss side for the warm hospitality, and noted that the country Switzerland was renowned for its panoramic beauty as also for its exceptional hospitality and its precision technology.

In the discussions the two sides underlined the strength of bilateral relations and the underlying values which governed the bilateral relations including democratic values, respect for the rule of law, human rights, pluralism and free enterprise. The two sides also recalled that Indo-Swiss relations have grown from strength to strength and were comprehensive and extensive ever since the signing of the Treaty of Friendship and Establishment which was signed on August 14, 1948, the first of such treaties which India signed with any country. The two sides also recalled the commercial relationship and the cultural interactions spread over nearly two centuries.

In the bilateral political arena, the President and her Swiss interlocutors touched on the regular exchange of visits at the highest level, and those by Ministers and officials leading to an exchange of ideas of mutual interest and mutual benefit. The President noted the strong foundation of the multifaceted bilateral relations. Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey mentioned the importance which the Swiss side gave to India in its foreign policy priorities. She also noted the importance of India in terms of the Asian dimension of the Swiss foreign policy.

In terms of commercial relations, the two sides noted that trade had grown significantly to touch Swiss Francs 3.5 billion, but added that there was a renewed need to consider the untapped potential which existed to take the cooperation forward. The President noted the areas of cooperation in diverse fields such as engineering, high technology, pharmaceuticals, precision instruments, infrastructure, food processing and textiles. Renewable energy was seen as an important area of cooperation. The Swiss side added IT cooperation to this slate. On trade, the President noted that this was heavily weighted in favour of Switzerland and called for steps to be taken towards redressing and improving the balance.

The Swiss side recalled the importance of vocational and educational training and mentioned the VET initiative vis-à-vis India. The President on her side underlined the importance of skill development of youth and encouraged the need for an inter-governmental approach besides the private sector initiative.

The President expressed satisfaction on cooperation in several areas in science and technology and welcomed further cooperation in this field, particularly in high technology areas. The Swiss side recalled the excellent cooperation in science and technology, noted the many joint research projects, and saw this as further steps towards consolidation of progress in S&T cooperation.

You would all recall that the President had visited CERN on the first day of her stay in Geneva, which was highly successful. She asked of course probing questions of the Director-General Dr. Rolf Heuer. Significantly in the bilateral talks, the Swiss side said that they fully supported India’s Associate Membership of CERN. You would have recalled that there were six Associate Members at present and the Swiss have said that they, fully supported our associate membership.

Cultural cooperation was seen by the President as a great value addition to people-to-people contacts. The President inaugurated today the Tagore Chair on Indian Studies at the University of Lausanne, and unveiled a bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, significantly during the 150th birth anniversary of Gurudev.

The President also addressed the members of the Indian community in Switzerland which was very well represented by over 300 members of the community.

The President thanked the Swiss side for its support to India’s candidature to a non-permanent seat of the UN Security Council for 2011-12. She sought Swiss support for India’s candidature as a permanent member of the Security Council. The Swiss side said that they supported UN reforms and considered India’s aspirations to a permanent membership as legitimate. They said that they were in favour of enlargement of the UNSC saying that India should be a permanent member, but emphasised that enlargement of permanent membership should follow the larger question of reform of the UN. The Swiss side in turn sought India’s support for its nonpermanent UNSC member candidacy for 2023-24.

During discussions on climate change which was touched upon in the discussions, the President noted that India’s carbon footprint was negligible. In the context of discussions on energy, the two sides touched upon cooperation on the subject of energy efficiency. I think we are already discussing an arrangement through an MoU for cooperation in this area and hopefully it should be signed in the near future.
The President noted that nuclear energy was an essential element of India’s national energy basket. She underscored that the safety of India’s nuclear power plants was a matter of highest priority for the Government of India, and that the Government would do all that it could to enhance transparency and boost public confidence. The President also emphasised India’s impeccable nonproliferation record. It is significant that Ambassador Dinkar Khullar, sitting next to me, is on the Governing Board. He is the Governor of India on the IAEA Board.

During the course of the visit the President addressed the Joint Business Forum along with President Micheline Calmy-Rey. The current state of trade and economic cooperation and the opportunities existing and the possibility of future areas of interaction were touched upon. As you aware, the President is accompanied by 45 member business delegation drawn from the FICCI, CII and the ASSOCHAM. The business delegation yesterday met the Federal Councilor and Minister for Economic Affairs Johann Schneider-Ammann who is seriously and sincerely interested in further development of Indo-Swiss business cooperation.

During discussions the President noted the ongoing discussions between India and the EU on an India-EU FTA agreement as also a broad-based trade and investment agreement. Both sides noted that when signed, this would give a tremendous opportunity for further growth of bilateral trade and economic cooperation.

The President and President Micheline Calmy-Rey noted the interest of the two sides in the establishment of a Privileged Partnership between India and Switzerland. You might recall that when Mrs. Calmy-Rey had visited India she had adumbrated this idea. The idea commits the two sides to elevate their relations to a new and higher level. It underlines the development of relations in a comprehensive manner by forging stronger political and economic ties, greater technology cooperation, intensification of cultural ties, educational linkages, development of human resources and people-to-people contacts. The Privileged Partnership should enhance all round cooperation between India and Switzerland and address the long-term interests and future challenges facing both the countries.

During the visit, yesterday afternoon both sides concluded an Indo-Swiss MoU on Financial Dialogue between the Ministry of Finance of India and the Federal Department of Finance of the Swiss Government. The dialogue will provide a general framework to facilitate interaction on macroeconomic and financial issues, and towards strengthening the financial and economic relationship between India and Switzerland. The dialogue will promote mutual cooperation in the financial sector, enable a deeper understanding of the respective macroeconomic environment and financial markets. The two sides will also exchange views on domestic and international macroeconomic situations, fiscal and monetary policies, financial reforms, financial sector strategies, policies thereunder and other developments in the bilateral, national, regional and global areas in the financial sector. The focus of discussions will naturally be on financial markets access, financial sector reforms, fiscal and tax issues. The discussions will alternately take place in India and Switzerland. And the MoU became effective upon its signature, which is, as of yesterday, October 3, 2011.

During the course of the discussions the President was informed on the procedural formalities on the subject of the Protocol amending the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Switzerland which was concluded in New Delhi on August 30, 2010. The initial Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Switzerland was signed on November 2, 1994. It was subsequently amended through a supplementary protocol signed in New Delhi on February 16, 2000.

While India has completed all the formalities relating to the ratification and entry into force of the Protocol amending the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement, and has conveyed the same to the Swiss side on the 30th October 2010, the President of the Swiss Confederation and her colleagues on the Federal Council informed the President that the Protocol has been introduced in the Swiss Parliament in June, 2011; it has to, according to the Constitution, lie on the table of the Parliament for 100 days which expires on the 6th of October which is three days from now; and thereafter, the Protocol would be ready on the Swiss side for ratification and entry into force. The Swiss side had also added is, once this is done, they would ask their Ambassador to notify us through diplomatic channels that they have completed their internal procedures regarding ratification and entry into force. And on the day we receive the letter, the Amending Protocol will come into effect on that day. Of course, they said it could be as early as within ten days from October 6, 2011.

The President hoped that the Swiss side would ensure that the protocol entered into force expeditiously as per the projected schedule and would be implemented effectively. Once the Protocol enters into force, the competent authority in India, which in this case would be the Central Board of Direct Taxes, can write to the competent authority in Switzerland as need be seeking tax related information for further action.

In various discussions and public speeches the President referred to the dangers of international terrorism. She emphasised the need to update the existing legal framework for cooperation which exists through and Exchange of Letters which were exchanged in 1989. The President sought the conclusion of an effective Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty on criminal matters which would be mutually beneficial. The Swiss side agreed to consider this in a positive frame of mind.
In overall terms the President was extremely satisfied with her Switzerland visit. She noted that the visit has maintained the momentum of high level cooperation and interaction, and that it would provide an impetus for further development and consolidation of bilateral cooperation. The significance of the warmth of the arrangements and the hospitality was reflected by the presence of President Micheline Calmy-Rey in all the President’s official engagements. And you would have noticed that she was standing on the tarmac till the aircraft literally took off.

The President commences the Austrian leg of her visit from today. This is the first Presidential visit after around twelve years. It signals the importance we attach to bilateral relations with Austria. The President’s engagements include meeting with the President of Austria His Excellency Mr. Heinz Fischer, talks with the Chancellor His Excellency Mr. Werner Faymann, and the President of the Austrian Parliament Ms. Barbara Prammer. The President will also meet the members of the Indian community and address a meeting of the Indo-Austrian Business Forum. The positive mood towards the commencement of the visit in Austria was reflected as you would have seen by two Eurofighter jets escorting Air India One from the Austrian border to the Vienna airport.

The President’s visit, besides Vienna, includes Salzburg also. Importantly, as you would know, weather in Switzerland was exceptionally good we do hope that weather in Austria will be equally good.

Thank you very much. If there are any questions, we will be very happy to take them.

Question: Sir, you mentioned that once the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement comes into force the CBDT can seek information from the Swiss side. But Switzerland has been saying that give us the specific names or account numbers and the evidence that it is ill-gotten money and then they will give you further information. Will India after this get a list of the Indians holding accounts in Swiss banks? Would India be getting such a list? Will it have a retrospective effect?

Secretary (West): It will take place from the first day of the next financial year after the signing - 1st January, 2011 for Switzerland and 1st April 2011 for India.

To answer your question, the normal practice is that the CBDT authorities, in our case the competent authority is CBDT, would gather whatever information is there and transmit it to the Swiss authorities for relevant return of information.

Question: Would we not be getting any specific list of Indians holding accounts in Swiss banks?
Secretary (West): I think the competent authority, as I said, will have to go on the basis of what has been agreed which is they will collect the evidence, present it to the Swiss authorities, and the Swiss authorities will have to examine and revert back to us.

Question: Sir, you said it will come into force from the first day of the financial year. Would the transactions before this date be covered under it?

Secretary (West): Exchange of information can be sought from that date. We can ask for information. When this amendment is ratified, we will observe it.

Question: Do you believe it will be game changer?

Secretary (West): We will maintain that the agreement is a good one; because there will be exchange of information. One has to see how it works out.

Question: How is this MoU different from a treaty?

Secretary (West): The MoU signed yesterday is a financial dialogue. Our two finance ministries will consult between them. This is purely financial related, tax related microeconomic financial issue. But the agreement prevalent here is amending Protocol on Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement. You will be aware this follows OECD norms. It happened under the G-20; then it followed the OECD model under Article 26 of Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement on Exchange of Information. That makes it more comprehensive.

Question: Sir, I will go back to the question on retrospective effect. For example, if the CBDT wants information on a specific account which was created in let us say 2006. Would India be able to give evidence and would India be able to get information on an account which is created about three or four years back?

Secretary (West): What I would say is, let me leave it to the CBDT to take it up from there. It is very important that competent authority should be in a position to answer. Whatever I do, I am not the competent authority nominated by the two Governments. I will leave it to the CBDT. But this is a positive step forward.

Question: There is one small confusion about this Privileged Partnership. Has it been elevated to that?

Secretary (West): There is agreement on the privileged partnership when Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey came to India in 2007. What we need is to structure the mechanisms, ensure the contents which go into privileged partnership and take it on from there from those fields which I have mentioned – political, economic, cultural, information technology and all that.

Question: Switzerland has backed India’s attempt for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council?
Secretary (West): What they said is that it is a legitimate claim but they would like to see the reform process precede enlargement.

Question: Sir, you said it will be done in ten days.

Secretary (West): I said that their president said it can be done even in ten days. On 6th their tens will be over. Thereafter they will take out their papers and we will receive a communication from their Ambassador, and the process will start from that day.

Question: That means it is not certain that it will come into force in ten days.

Secretary (West): It can happen in one day as well as in ten days. The President has requested to expedite it and complete it expeditiously so that we can implement it.

Question: Then we can start seeking information from the 1st of April, 2012.

Secretary (West): I think that is what it is. And this will include banking, tax information not having any domestic interest. But as I said, the competent authority is the CBDT. It will be better if they give the technical information.

Question: But the President said .........

Secretary (West): The President requested for it expeditious completion so that it could be implemented.

Question: In the Agenda for Austria it is stated that there will be cooperation in the Railways. Will a MoU signed? Please tell us something about it.

Secretary (West): As we said in Delhi and also our colleague Vishnu Prakash said we follow the standard operating procedure about the conclusion of an agreement. We say nothing at this stage as any thing can happen at the last stage. Besides this is Presidential privilege; the signatures are appended in her presence; we tell you tomorrow all about it.

Question: Fighter jets accompanying the President, is it a normal practice?

Ambassador of India to Austria (Shri Dinkar Khullar): It is done only for state visits. But they do not have the practice like we have of treating every visit a state visit. They have a lot of visits which are treated as working visits. They have official visits, they have working visits. This is certainly what we would consider an exclusive privilege that has been accorded to our President. It does not mean it would not be accorded to anyone else.

OSD (PR) to Hon. President: Thank you very much.

I am, indeed, very happy to be in Vienna. My delegation and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the reception, and for the generous hospitality accorded to us by the Government and the people of Austria. I bring greetings and good wishes from the people of India to the friendly people of Austria.

2. The firm foundations of our traditionally close and friendly relations were laid by the first generation of political leaders of our countries - Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru our first Prime Minister, Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. They nurtured the strong friendship between the two countries, and established the tradition of collaboration on development issues, both at the bilateral and multilateral levels.

3. Today, our bilateral relations are wide-ranging, multi-dimensional and mutually beneficial. Our shared and abiding commitment to the ideals of democracy and pluralism has only reinforced our close and friendly ties. My visit to Austria reaffirms our common commitment to take our relations onward to new heights.

4. I have had very fruitful discussions with President Fischer today. We recalled his milestone State visit to India in 2005, the first visit by any Austrian President to India. Our discussions today, built on the commitments in the Joint Statement issued on the occasion of President Fischer's visit. We covered the entire gamut of our bilateral relations, as well as regional and multilateral issues of concern to our countries.

5. Over the past six decades, we have developed strong ties and institutional framework for dialogue and cooperation in the political, economic, commercial, science and technology fields. Further strengthening the framework of bilateral relations, we have signed two Memoranda of Understanding today - one on Technology Specific Cooperation in the field of Railways and the second on Cooperation in Science and Technology.

6. A business delegation from India has accompanied me to explore business opportunities that exist between our two countries, and to give greater content to this important sphere of our interaction. I look forward to my participation in the Business Meet tomorrow, to listen to the views from the captains of industry from both sides, and encourage them to participate in our bilateral economic exchanges.
7. Among the areas we touched upon in our discussions was the issue of international terrorism which has emerged as a fundamental threat to global peace and security. Open and democratic societies like ours are particularly vulnerable to this menace. The terrorist attacks in Mumbai and recently in Delhi and elsewhere in the world, remind us that we must remain resolute and determined in our joint efforts to eliminate terrorism.

8. We see Austria as a partner in all international forums. India strongly believes that there is an urgent need to reform the United Nations. The Security Council needs to be restructured to reflect the contemporary realities, if it wishes to react effectively to the many emerging collective security challenges.

9. During our discussions I have also said that India is actively thinking of becoming a member of the International Anti-Corruption Academy in Vienna.

10. The understandings that we have arrived at, in today’s discussions, have further consolidated our mutually beneficial partnership. I have invited President Heinz Fischer to visit to India on mutually convenient dates, to be decided through diplomatic channels.

Thank You!
Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Reception hosted by Ambassador Dinkar Khullar for the Indian community.

Vienna, October 5, 2011.

Members of the Indian community - My Fellow Citizens,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am delighted to have this opportunity to interact with the Indian community which across the world today numbers over 25 million. Indians abroad are law-abiding, hardworking, and enterprising. With your energy, your dynamism, your entrepreneurship and your skills you have contributed much to the country of your birth, as well as the country you have selected to live in. Those of you in Austria are no exception.

I am informed that the Indian community in Austria exceeds twenty thousand. This number may appear relatively small; nonetheless, you are making a perceptible contribution in various walks of life. Amongst you are successful businessmen, medical professionals, academics, scientists, students and researchers, as well as management and engineering professionals. I am sure that the goodwill generated by all of you, contributes profoundly to the relationship between India and Austria.

Our two countries enjoy warm and close relations, the foundations of which were laid in the last Century by our leaders. One of our patriots and freedom fighters, Subhash Chandra Bose, came to Austria in 1934. He established the India-Central European Society in Vienna, for the promotion of commercial and cultural relations between Central Europe and India. You would also be aware of the important role played by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in facilitating an Agreement on Austria’s State Treaty of 1955. Austria’s neutrality and our policy of Non-Alignment saw close cooperation between the leaderships of our two countries. Our countries share a commitment to democracy, the rule of law and human rights, which binds our two peoples together. My own visit to Austria is aimed at giving new momentum to our bilateral relations. All of you can also contribute to this goal. I encourage you in your individual capacities to strengthen and help to expand the bilateral partnership.

The world is changing and India is changing too. The Indian economy has recorded impressive rates of growth on a sustained basis since our process of economic reforms began. India is among the most attractive destinations globally for doing business. Several Indian companies have expanded their global presence in various sectors across the world, including here in Austria. This has raised India’s profile among the comity of nations.
We are working to see how the economic dynamism of India, can be harnessed to benefit our peoples and raise their living standards. This is one of the important tasks in which we are engaged. We want our growth process to be inclusive, so that all sections of our populace can have improved standards of living. I am sure that you will be forthcoming in contributing to these national objectives. Your efforts will be most welcome as part of a collective Indian enterprise, in which you are participants. Even though you live overseas, we in India remain concerned about your welfare and progress. India has various initiatives for the benefit of its overseas diaspora. We have a full-fledged Ministry of Overseas Indian Affairs for the benefit and welfare of the Indian Diaspora. Each year, we celebrate Pravasi Bharatiya Divas. I hope to see many of you participating in such events.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the strong and vibrant political and economic partnership between India and Austria can only benefit from endeavours of people who forge ties of friendship. We, in India, are proud of all of you.

I take this opportunity to wish all of you a very happy Dussehra, which will be celebrated tomorrow. The many festivals that we observe in India are, of course, joyous occasions but they also speak about our rich and varied cultural traditions.

As Indians overseas, I am sure, festivals are also a time to invite your friends - the nationals of the countries that you live in - to be a part of the celebrations. This way, you share with them your happiness and, at the same time, acquaint them with India. I wish all of you and your families the very best for your future progress and prosperity.

Thank you.

Jai Hind!
595. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Banquet hosted in her honour by Austrian President Meinz Fischer.

Vienna, October 5, 2011.

Your Excellency President Fischer,
Madam Fischer,
Excellencies, Distinguished Guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen.

I am delighted to be here in this beautiful capital city of Vienna. Excellency and Madam Fischer, at the very outset, I would like to say that we are deeply touched by the warm reception and hospitality accorded to us in your beautiful country.

India greatly values the excellent relations it has with Austria. Excellency, as you know, our cultural and political links go back in time. An independent chair for Indology was established in the University of Vienna in 1880. Archduke Franz Ferdinand visited India, around a century ago. In 1921 and 1926 India’s national-poet and Nobel Laureate Rabindranath Tagore, whose 150th Birth Anniversary is being celebrated this year, was in Vienna. In his lecture on “Religion of the Forests” that he delivered here, he spoke of the importance of developing the values of compassion and caring. He said, “the highest purpose of this world is not merely living in it, knowing it and making use of it but it is realizing our own selves in it, through expansion of sympathy.” Later in the 1930s, one of our great patriots and freedom fighters, Netaji Subhash Chandra Bose had come to Vienna and established an India-Central European Society.

The foundations of the friendship between our two countries in recent times were laid by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Mrs. Indira Gandhi and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky. On the solid strength of this rich legacy we have built a relationship based on the common values we share. These have been further strengthened and sustained through exchanges at all levels.

I would like to recall your visit to India in February 2005 which is an important landmark in our bilateral relationship. Your deep interest in my country has helped to strengthen this partnership. I am confident that my visit would provide the momentum to our bilateral relationship, to take it to a new level.

As vibrant parliamentary democracies, India and Austria today share common values and aspirations. Both our countries have an abiding faith in the democratic values. Our unshakeable faith in the rule of law, respect for human rights, and resolve to preserve peace and foster international understanding, brings both of us much closer.
Over the past six decades we have developed strong ties and institutional framework for dialogue and cooperation in the political, economic and commercial and science and technology fields.

In recent years, our bilateral relationship has acquired a new dynamism particularly in the economic and commercial sector. The total bilateral trade between India and Austria has crossed over 1 billion Euros in 2008. There are many technical and business collaborations and tie-ups between Indian and Austrian companies.

This is only indicative of the vast potential of economic cooperation between our two countries. Excellency, there exists far greater scope for significantly expanding our bilateral economic cooperation. An economically resurgent India today offers a variety of investment opportunities, both in the traditional and new sectors. We look forward to greater cooperation and engagement between business communities on both sides. India would also like to benefit from Austrian expertise in advanced technology areas, environment and infrastructure sectors.

Excellency, the edifice of the relationship between nations gets reinforced by interaction and exchanges between its peoples. Hence, it is important to foster people to people exchanges, including through academic cooperation, as we look at future friendships. I am happy to note that a Chair in Indian Studies at the prestigious University of Vienna has started functioning recently.

Excellency,

We are living at a time when terrorism poses a threat to global peace and security. Democratic societies like those of India and Austria, which protect freedom and individual dignity, are particularly vulnerable to this threat. The terrorist attacks in Mumbai and recently in Delhi, remind us that the international community must resolutely persevere with its efforts to root out terrorism.

Austria plays an important role in Europe and in the world. Vienna is host to several UN organizations, in fields as diverse as nuclear energy, outer space, the fight against drugs, crime and corruption, which are issues of vital importance. We share your strong commitment to the UN and multilateralism. India strongly believes that there is urgent need to reform the UN. The Security Council should be restructured to reflect the changed realities to effectively respond to emerging collective security challenges. We see Austria as a partner in our efforts at international fora, to meet the new challenges that the international community now faces.

Given the excellent relations enjoyed by our two countries and the potential ahead, we in India would like to work closely with Austria, both in the bilateral as well as in the international context for the mutual benefit of our people, and progress and prosperity of the world as a whole.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in a toast:-

— to the good health of President Fischer and Madam Fischer; — to the prosperity and continued progress of the people of Austria; and — to the abiding friendship between our two countries and people

596. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Business interaction organized by Austrian Federal Economic Chambers.

Vienna, October 6, 2011.

It gives me great pleasure to be with the business representatives of the Austrian and Indian Industry here in Vienna today. The economic and commercial linkages between our two countries are at the core of our bilateral ties. Greater content and depth in this field would impart substance and dynamism to overall bilateral relations. Business communities therefore are important constituents of the India-Austria relationship.

Growth rates of over 20 percent in our bilateral trade registered in the current year are impressive by any standards but especially so in today’s global economic scenario. However, the current level of our trade of about 1.1 billion Euro is below the potential of our two countries. We must jointly endeavour to identify new openings and to optimise the utilization of existing opportunities to achieve this potential. India’s economic growth holds many possibilities for the expansion of bilateral economic cooperation. Sustained by the strong fundamentals, a GDP growth rate of the order of 8 percent has yielded tangible benefits, in terms of employment generation and improvement in the standards of living of the people, enlarging the market for consumers as well as industrial goods.

While our achievements have been many, we remain fully cognizant of the tasks that remain to be completed. All our citizens need to benefit from the development process, and India’s paramount interest is to ensure that our economic development has an inclusive character. The fulfilment of our goals would depend to a great extent on the ability to tackle the constraints in our physical infrastructure. India has been focussed on improving its infrastructure, and investments of close to one trillion US Dollars would be required in the coming years, to implement these plans. This provides an excellent investment opportunity for foreign companies. Power, roads, railways, airports and ports are all India’s overarching priorities. Austria has well-known strengths in these fields. I have witnessed first hand, here in Vienna, the excellent facilities established in urban areas which sets an example for the rest of the world. Austrian strengths in infrastructure, automotive and environment friendly technologies provide a good complementarity to the requirements of the Indian economy.

Many important firms from Austria have a long established presence in the fields of railways and engineering. Many companies have done well to consolidate on this foundation, and establish their physical presence in many business and industry centres of India in the last five years. Their expertise and specialized skills in tunnelling, bridges, energy systems, electrical equipment, and construction and many other fields, places them in an advantageous position to avail of the emerging opportunities in India today. Small and Medium Enterprises also offer another area of opportunity. Here, I would like to compliment the Austrian Federal Economic Chambers - WKO, including its offices in India, in proactively bringing the business communities of our two countries together. I have been told that, on an average, an Austrian business delegation visits India every month. I hope that this frequency only grows in the future, if our trade and industry co-operation has to grow.

A critical and an absolutely necessary input for the sustainable growth of a nation’s economy and all its sectors - industry, agriculture or business - is technology, which in turn, depends on research and development. I am convinced that there is need to be innovative in finding solutions to, not just Indian, but global challenges. Austria is known for the high quality of its research institutions oriented to industry and commercial application. I see this as an important component of our bilateral collaborations. India is fortunate to be endowed with rich human capital and a strong knowledge base. We have been successful in many frontier areas - space, nuclear energy, Information Technology and bio-technology, among others. I feel that it would be useful to share our knowledge and experience, to translate the cutting-edge knowledge of science into products for the market. This will yield benefits both in terms of new employment and new products for consumers.

We already have existing cooperation programmes between educational institutions of our two countries. Indian scholars are doing research in Linz, in the field of mathematics. The Technical Universities of Vienna and Graz have had joint programmes with the Indian Institutes of Technology, and it is good that two mini-satellites built by researchers from these two technical universities are being launched by ISRO - India’s space research organization. Technical education linkages would get a fillip and new momentum, if on both sides, businesses were to assess the value of such research and collaboration and promote them.

India and the EU are strategic partners. Austria is an integral part and important member of the EU. Our strong ties in the economic sphere will strengthen not just bilateral relations but our overall partnership with the EU. India and the EU are negotiating a broad based Trade and Investment Agreement which will, in our view, serve the mutual interest of both sides. I visualize great opportunities for expansion of trade in goods and services and two-way investment through this Agreement. I hope that this is concluded at the earliest to the mutual satisfaction of both partners.

In conclusion, I would like to share with you that my interactions in Austria, including at the highest political level, have left me in no doubt that the India-Austria relationship has a bright future. Our relationship is very old and time tested. My visit is to further strengthen these. I am confident that your deliberation today will contribute to the strengthening of these ties and add to their breadth and depth. I wish you success in your deliberations here. I wish you success in your deliberations here. I would like to especially thank President Fischer for his strong support to building ties between the two countries and for being present here.

Thank you!
Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Banquet hosted in her honour by Governor of Salzburg Ms. Gabi Burgstaller.

Salzburg, October 6, 2011.

It is indeed a pleasure for me as well as for the members of my delegation to be here today in Salzburg. I would like to express our deep appreciation for the warm reception and hospitality given to us in this beautiful Schloss Hellbrunn.

Austria has inherited one of the most outstanding cultural legacies in Europe which is so well reflected in this magnificent city. Your country is, indeed, a treasure house of Arts. The creative urge of your people to devote themselves to the world of arts and music, has played an important role in not only enriching your own cultural traditions, but that of the whole world. It, therefore, gives me special pleasure, to be here in this city, with which renowned musician Mozart is inextricably associated. In India, there is a following for Western classical music, and they all know of the great tradition of excellent music in Austria.

It is, therefore, not a surprise that our cultural ties are very strong. I am told that in your country, Yoga and Ayurveda have a large following. Indian films too are increasingly getting popular in Austria, and some of them have been shot in your scenic and splendorous country.

Like Austria, India too has its own pluralistic traditions and openness to other cultures. We believe in cultural inclusiveness and a “confluence of civilizations”. I am happy to learn that Indian artists who have performed during the ‘Szene Salzburg’ festival in the recent past, have received an overwhelming response from the city of Salzburg. We look forward to furthering such people to people exchanges.

May I once again extend our gratitude to you for having made our stay here so special. It is indeed, a matter of great pleasure for me and my delegation to have had the chance to visit this magnificent city. Earlier, in Vienna, President Fischer, who is a old friend of India and whom we deeply respect, and I had fruitful discussions, and I am confident that our bilateral relationship will further strengthen in many areas of mutual co-operation. On a personal note, I can say that I will take back many memories of the majestic beauty of Austria and the warmth of the friendship of its people.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in a toast:-
Interaction of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil with the media on board her special flight on way back to Delhi after her tours of Switzerland and Austria.

October 7, 2010.

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media,

I have just concluded my State visits to the Swiss Confederation and the Republic of Austria, countries which are important partners of India in Central Europe. India shares with them core values as well as strong historical ties of friendship. This has resulted in close mutual understanding and cooperation on a wide range of issues, as also exchange of high level visits.

We were received with exceptional warmth and cordiality in Berne and in Vienna. The gesture of President Micheline Calmy-Rey and President Heinz Fischer to graciously lend their presence in all my official engagements, spoke of their personal commitment to reinforcing the relationship with India. What is more, President Calmy-Rey travelled with me to Lausanne and President Fischer accompanied me to Salzburg.

It was an unparallelled honour for me to commence my visit by paying homage to the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, at his statue in Geneva, located close to the UN buildings. That this was on 2nd October, his birth anniversary, made it even more special, as I have always believed that Gandhiji belongs to the world; his philosophy has relevance for all.

Discussions that I had with President Micheline Calmy-Rey and the members of the Federal Council in Switzerland; and with President Heinz Fischer, Chancellor Werner Faymann and President of the National Council in Austria, were meaningful and productive. I observed a clear desire on their part to expand and broaden the canvas of our bilateral relations. I fully reciprocated — to the good health of President Fischer and Madam Fischer; — to the good health of Governor Gabi Burgstaller and Mr. Holzer;
— to the prosperity of the people of Salzburg and the Republic of Austria; and — to the abiding friendship and close cultural relations between our two countries and people.
these sentiments. We agreed to elevate our relationship with Switzerland to the level of a Privileged Partnership. With Austria we agreed to widen and deepen our traditional partnership.

In both the countries, there was agreement about the many opportunities to further our mutually beneficial partnership based on the complementary strengths of our economies. These include areas that are important for our development, and in which Switzerland and Austria are world leaders, such as infrastructure, clean technology and renewable energy. Linkages between small and medium enterprises were also identified as a promising possibility. I highlighted the importance that we in India attach to Vocational Education and suggested that both Switzerland and Austria could partner us in this area.

There is enthusiasm and optimism among the business community about the future commercial prospects with these countries. At the Business Forums in the two capitals, I stressed that new areas of cooperation in hydel and renewable energy should be actively explored. The Governor of Salzburg mentioned to me about the effective way in which they were using their water resources for generation of hydel power.

In the field of Science & Technology, we welcomed the solid progress that has already been achieved in our cooperation with both countries and agreed that it should be further encouraged.

My visit to the Centre for European Nuclear Research, CERN, during my stay in Geneva, was to understand the ongoing cutting-edge research in a premier organization in which India is already collaborating and with which increasing involvement is possible, including associate membership of CERN. I was impressed with the work of CERN. When I asked about research to reduce solar energy costs, so necessary for its wider use in a “sun-shine rich country” like India, the CERN Director said that they would be happy to work with India in energy efficiency and in the avoidance of wastage in transmission and distribution.

Bilateral agreements were concluded with the Governments of Switzerland and Austria. In Vienna, two Memoranda of Understanding were signed - one on Technology Specific Cooperation in the field of Railways and the second on Cooperation in Science and Technology. These are important areas for India.

With Switzerland, a Memorandum of Understanding for a Financial Dialogue was signed. This will provide a general framework to facilitate interaction on macroeconomic and financial issues, and towards strengthening the financial and economic relationship between India and Switzerland.
An Amending Protocol on the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Switzerland was concluded in New Delhi on August 30, 2010. India has completed all the formalities relating to the ratification and entry into force of this Protocol. During discussions, the Swiss President as well as the Swiss Federal Minister in charge of Finance informed me about their procedural requirements. After introducing the Protocol in Swiss Parliament, which was in June 2011, it has to lie on the table of the Parliament for 100 days - this expired yesterday, the 6th of October. I requested the Swiss side to take steps to ensure that the Protocol entered into force expeditiously and sought its effective implementation.

In the Swiss University of Lausanne, along with President Micheline Calmy-Rey, I unveiled a bronze bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, an appropriate event as we commemorate the 150th Anniversary of Gurudev Tagore’s birthday. A Memorandum of Understanding was signed to establish the ‘Tagore Chair on Indian Studies’. I hope that the MoU will help bring together scholars as well as students from both countries contributing to a better understanding between our two peoples.

Indeed, the leaderships of Austria as well as Switzerland agreed with us on the importance of initiatives for encouraging people-to-people contacts through academic interaction, cultural exchanges and tourism.

In Austria, during my meeting with the President of the National Council and other Parliamentarians, we discussed the need for expanding Parliamentary exchanges, in which Minister, Shri Rajeev Shukla and Members of Parliament, Shri Darda and Shri Jadhav actively participated. We agreed on promoting a regular and active dialogue between the youth leaders of our two countries drawn from the political and economic fields.

President Heinz Fischer mentioned that the International Anti-Corruption Academy had been established in Austria as a joint initiative with the UN Office on Drugs and Crime, European Anti Fraud Office and others. It has become functional since March this year.

I emphasized the overriding priority we accord to tackling corruption and informed him that India would give active consideration to become a member of this Academy.

Both Switzerland and Austria are active in international fora. I was happy that both Governments share our view that there is an urgent need for reforms of the United Nations. They acknowledged that India’s candidacy for a permanent seat in an expanded Security Council was unequivocally strong and legitimate.
I also discussed with my two counterparts other international issues of common interest and concern. Foremost, among them was international terrorism which poses a serious threat to world peace and security.

I was happy to meet representatives of the Indian community in both Switzerland and Austria during my stays in Geneva and Vienna respectively. I lauded their contribution in the development of India's cooperation with these countries.

I feel that my State Visits to Switzerland and Austria have been extremely fruitful. The understandings that I reached in my discussions will lead to further consolidation of our ties with Switzerland and Austria, particularly giving a boost to the economic pillar of our relationship.

I hope all of you enjoyed the trip and were able to walk in the amazing gardens in the cities we visited!

New Delhi, June 8, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and Charles University, Prague, Czech Republic signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on June 7th, 2011 for establishment of ICCR's Long-Term 'Chair of Indian Studies/Hindi Language' in the Charles University. Ambassador of India to Czech Republic, Shri Dinkar Prakash Srivastava, signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR alongside Prof. Michal Stehlik, Dean of Faculty of Arts, Charles University.

Under the terms of agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the University, shall appoint a suitable Indian academician as Visiting Professor to hold the Chair for a period of one year. During the period, the Visiting Professor would contribute to the academic life of the University by engaging in teaching, research and mentoring. The Chair would commence from September, 2011 and the MoU will remain valid for 2 years till 2013.
EUROPE

This is ICCR's first ever Chair in Czech Republic and can be considered as a major step in propagation of India related studies in Czech Republic and thereby fulfilling ICCR's larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural links and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.

DENMARK

601. Press Release issued by Ministry of Commerce and Industry on the visit of Danish Minister for Economy Brian Mikkelsen to increase bilateral cooperation in new areas of economic cooperation.

New Delhi, January 6, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry, in a bilateral meeting with Mr. Brian Mikkelsen, Minister for Economy of Denmark, here today, informed that India and Denmark should focus in the areas of IT, Telecommunication, Biotechnology, Food Processing, and Pharmaceuticals for a mutually beneficial economic engagement. He said that the growth in bilateral trade of 10.50% even in 2009-10 indicates the strong commercial ties between the two countries. Bilateral trade between India and Denmark reached US $ 1,172 billion (exports - $ 580 million and imports $ 592 million) during the year 2009-10, an increase over the quantum of US $ 1,061 billion of 2008-09.

During the meeting, Shri Sharma welcomed several new Joint Working Groups (JWGs) on Shipping, Food, Agriculture & Fisheries, Information Technology and Education set up during the recent first meeting of the India-Denmark Joint Commission. In addition to the existing Agreements on Bilateral Investment and Protection and Avoidance of Double Taxation, such a mechanism provides a framework for economic and industrial cooperation, he added.

Interacting with the visiting Minister, Shri Sharma mentioned that world leaders have re-affirmed their commitment to an early and balanced conclusion to the Doha Round. "India sees one of the main threats to the revival of trade flows in the rising protectionist pressures and continued delay in concluding the Doha Round. Therefore, strengthening the multilateral trading system by concluding the Doha Round at the earliest is imperative", he said.
Denmark ranks 28th in Foreign Direct Investments in India. Cumulative FDI inflows from Denmark are $173.12 million from April 2000 to Sept 2010. Danish investment has been in sectors of Construction, Transport Industry, Services, Telecom and Electrical Equipments. Indian companies invested in Denmark are Reliance Industries (yarn production), TCS, Suzlon Energy Ltd., Usha Martin and L&T Infotech.

The principal commodities being exported to Denmark include textiles, cotton yarn fabrics, transport equipment, machinery, electronic goods etc. India's imports from Denmark include petroleum crude & products, medicinal & pharmaceutical products, organic chemicals, electronic goods, professional instruments.

602. Response of Official Spokesperson to media question on the failure of the Danish authorities to extradite Kim Davy involved in the Purulia arms drop case.

New Delhi, July 8, 2011.

"We have been greatly disappointed on being informed that the Danish authorities cannot comply with India's request for the extradition of Neils Holck @ Kim Davy to India to stand trial for his role in the Purulia arms drop case. Government of Denmark had decided on April 9, 2010, to extradite Kim Davy to India but the Danish authorities failed to successfully defend their decision in the Danish courts and it is regrettable that they have decided not to appeal the High Court judgement in the Supreme Court. In our view, the judgement has grave and far-reaching implications and can only serve as an encouragement to terrorists and criminals. We also completely reject the grounds cited by the Danish court as the basis for its decision.

Our demand for the extradition of Kim Davy to India stands. He must face the law in India for his actions."

603. Speech of Foreign Secretary Smt. Nirupama Rao at the French Institute of International Relations.

[Mr. Dominique Moisi (DM), Special Advisor, IFRI welcomed the Foreign Secretary and made opening remarks: "We are very pleased and honoured to receive the Foreign Secretary of India, Nirupama Rao, who has had a remarkable career, and I think one of the very interesting time of your life was as the first woman Ambassador to China."

FS added: "And to Sri Lanka"

DM corrected himself: "And to Sri Lanka, you are absolutely right. But you are also a poet and title of collection of your poems, very beautiful evocative - Rain Rising - so, a diplomat and a poet, who will enlighten us on the "Role of India in Global Affairs". You have the floor."

Thank you Mr. Dominique Moisi, Special Advisor of the French Institute of International Relations. It is a pleasure to be here this evening. Distinguished invitees, ladies and gentlemen.

I must say this is a fortuitous confluence of time and place. A juncture where both France and India, who value multipolarity and cooperation to create a new global order, are able to play a greater role in influencing the future of the world.

India, buoyed by its rapid and sustainable economic growth seeks to play a role commensurate with its size and destiny, whether in UN Security Council or other multinational institutions and therefore, our strategic partner France, which also heads the G8 and G20 at the critical moment when international cooperation is imperative to take the world back on the path of economic recovery, so this is what I spoke of as a fortuitous confluence of time and place that we meet here today to discuss India’s role in global affairs.

It's also a time of profound political understanding between the highest political leadership of both our countries and President Sarkozy's unwavering support for an enhanced role of India on the global stage resonates deeply in my country. Our Prime Minister has clearly voiced this when he said, "It is our ardent wish that the partnership between our two democracies is further strengthened and deepened in the years to come." But the strength of our partnership goes far beyond a convergence of immediate interests since as fellow democracies and pluralistic open societies we respect freedom and human rights and believe deeply that values surrounding freedom and human rights must inform the emerging world order. The closer relationship between our two countries is sustained, and this is important, is sustained by popular support and which is perhaps why we give so much importance to our political, economic and commercial ties as also, to people-to-people ties, to educational, scientific, tourism and cultural cooperation between our two countries. We are of course very pleased that our enhanced strategic partnership in areas such as defence, civil nuclear energy, space, science and technology has further deepened and strengthened in recent years.

I also speak of our shared values and our vision. Two countries who believe in multilateralism, peaceful co-existence, justice, freedom, equality and fraternity - these are precisely the values that are required for a sustainable and equitable global order in the 21st century. That is why also India seeks to engage the international community in essential reforms of the international governance system, which is also one of the priorities of the French presidency of the G20. There is a clear need of in-depth reform of the United Nations, including of its Security Council. France, I am happy to say, has repeatedly affirmed its support for India to become a permanent member of the Security Council, of an expanded Security Council, in fact without further delay, as President Sarkozy said in Delhi in December last year at his press conference, and I quote, "It is not simply a question of India's interest, it is a question of global equilibrium. You cannot exclude a billion inhabitants from resolving the world's great issues."

What were the well-springs of India's foreign policies as we began life as an independent nation - there were issues such as decolonisation, the principles of peaceful co-existence among nations, striving for an equitable global system for socio-economic development, initiatives towards global disarmament and robust participation in United Nation's peace keeping. All this shaped the initial imprint left by India on global affairs in the last five decades of the 20th century. They are not irrelevant - these issues - to our participation in global affairs today, driving our foreign policy priorities and our desire for strategic autonomy, in addition to factors of external security, internal security, the need for sustained economic growth, our energy security, maritime security and of course access to technology and innovation to sustain our economic growth. Further, may I say that India is too large a country to be dovetailed in alliance type relationships. In order to modernise our country, we need to, and I believe we have succeeded in, forging well-rounded strategic relationships and partnerships with all the major powers. India has a keen sense of our potential to be a great power by virtue of our population, our resources and our strategic location.
The goal of our foreign policy is to create an external environment that promotes the furtherance of our economic growth targets and ambitions and, these as I said earlier, include the dimensions of capital inflows and access to technology and innovation as well as the promotion of a free, fair and open world trading system that recognizes the development imperatives of countries like India. And all this requires a peaceful and stable neighbourhood, and external environment, a balanced relationship with the major powers and a durable and equitable multilateral global order. That is why we have supported the process of reform and restructuring of the United Nations to make it better equipped, to effectively respond to the evolving needs of its membership. Objective realities underscore the need for thorough going and genuine UN reforms. An organisation, which is 6 decades old, its membership has expanded nearly 4 times since the charter was signed and the world today, as we all recognise, is very different from the world of 1945. The challenges of the 21st century - political, economic, social, environmental or demographic - are global in nature, and the world is more interconnected and interdependent than any period in world history. This necessitates the comprehensive reforms therefore, of the United Nations aimed at its revitalisation. It is essential that the Security Council be expanded in both its permanent and non-permanent categories, and that developing countries from Asia, from Africa and Latin America who are capable of taking on increased global responsibilities are included as its permanent members.

Just a short while ago the election of India to a non-permanent seat in the UN Security Council for the term 2011-12 expressed a resounding endorsement of faith by the international community in India’s ability to play a meaningful role in the Security Council. We strive to be a voice of moderation and constructive engagement in the decisions of the Security Council. Our priorities include, and will include peace and stability in our near and extended neighbourhood, including Afghanistan, the Middle East and Africa; counter terrorism including the prevention of the proliferation of the weapons of mass destruction to non-state actors and the strengthening of UN peace keeping. We will demonstrate to the international community that India on the Security Council is good for the world. During its current membership of the Security Council, India has become the chair of the counter terrorism committee as well as the working group 1566 which deals with threats to international peace and stability by terrorist acts. We have emphasised that terrorism is a global phenomenon whose destruction potential and lethal reach is enhanced by linkages to illicit trafficking of drugs and small arms and international money-laundering operations. To be effective, the fight against terrorism must be long-term, sustained and global. It must tackle not just the perpetrators of those acts but also those who sponsor them.
Domestic measures alone cannot deal with terrorism as long as countries continue to provide safe havens for terrorists and, let me also add that no cause justifies resorting to terror. Since the existing international conventions on terrorism covers the specific sectoral aspects, India has taken the initiative to pilot the comprehensive convention on international terrorism or the CCIT in the United Nations, with the objective of providing a comprehensive legal framework to combat terrorism. We are committed to continue our efforts for an early conclusion of negotiations on this crucial convention and its adoption by all the UN member states.

There is also a threat we face from piracy today and we are committed to fully support the international community in our efforts to counter piracy off the coast of Somalia. The Indian Navy is deployed in the Gulf of Aden and we have been able to successfully thwart several piracy attempts in these waters, India is among the founding members of the Contact Group on Piracy off the coast of Somalia - the CGPCS. As piracy is increasing and spreading from the Gulf of Aden and the Somali Basin to the larger Indian Ocean, our Navy is working with other navies in order to better coordinate the international effort to combat and eliminate this scourge. And, we have growing cooperation with the European Union, particularly with France especially on the sharing of the information and building of the capacities, including legal capacities and mechanisms in the region for detention and prosecution of pirates.

The international financial and economic crisis originated in the developed world from where it spread to the developing countries and emerging economies. India too, was adversely affected but to a comparatively a lesser extent. We fared much better than others on account of three factors. Firstly, the inherent strength of the Indian economy and sustained domestic demand that helped to mitigate the impact from external sources, especially on our exports and foreign investments. Secondly, the Indian financial and banking system proved sound and resilient and it successfully withstood the test of the time. Our regulatory measures were by and large able to insulate the Indian financial system and banking system from major shocks and setbacks from abroad. There exist a broad consensus that a financial and economic crisis of such proportions - today we call it a great recession - in the case of the present crisis - requires a well-coordinated global response. The G20 comprising of the most developed countries as well as the leading developing economies, emerging market economies have worked together, coupled together in meeting the challenges posed by the crisis and recession. Beginning at the level of Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors, we have raised the interaction to the Summit level where leaders meet and are able to send a strong message for building confidence and stability. In the meantime, while stimulus and growth packages have been nationally implemented, the G20 has enabled coordinated action that we believe has contributed to meeting the immediate challenge of the recession successfully. In the run-up to the next, that is the 6th G20 Summit in November 2011 in France under the French presidency, the G20 has embarked on a very ambitious and far-reaching, forward-looking agenda. On the one hand, this entails implementation of past G20 decisions, which is critical to the credibility of the G20.

Given the past record of the Group in combating the economic crisis we are optimistic that the G20 will deliver on its decisions. On the other hand, the G20 is looking to scale new heights as seen from the ever-expanding agenda covering the reform of the international monetary system, volatility in commodity markets, both in agricultural commodities in particular food security as well as fuel price fluctuations having a bearing on energy security and the challenge posed by continuing unemployment in many economies. All this needs to be looked at closely and India stands ready to engage with its partners in the G20 to address these challenges.

Turning to disarmament, we have championed the cause of universal disarmament and we share with France this goal as also the commitment to the reinforcement of the non-proliferation regime. India will be able to contribute to enhancing international efforts through full membership, which we seek to achieve, of multilateral export regimes like the NSG, the MTCR, the Australia Group and the Wassenaar Arrangement in a manner consistent with the procedures and objectives of these groups. We are appreciative of French support for our membership of these bodies. The constructive and forward-looking approach that was adopted towards India in September 2008 by the NSG - the Nuclear Suppliers Group - has enabled full international civil nuclear cooperation with India as also our nuclear energy cooperation agreements with major partners including the United States, Russia, France and the United Kingdom. These constitute not only a long overdue recognition of India's standing as a country with advanced nuclear technology and responsible behaviour but have also opened up significant opportunities for technical and technological collaboration. It is equally important to see the relevance of these developments in the context of our energy requirements and the challenges of climate change.

A major issue that faces the international community today is climate change and the issue is critical for us as the steps that we will take will have to be intrinsically linked with our growth prospects and needs and the development aspirations of our people. Nationally we have taken several steps to improve energy efficiency and ensure sustainable growth. It is important to note that despite our accounting for 17% of the global population, our own greenhouse gas emissions are currently only 4% of the global emissions. Even with 8-9% growth per annum our energy use has been growing at less than 4% per annum and therefore we welcome and we have welcomed the successful outcomes in Cancun on climate fund, technology mechanism adaptation framework and tropical forestry, the REDD+. We however believe that further work is required to strengthen the weak mitigation pledges by the developed countries, preventing unilateral trade actions in the name of climate change and sustenance of the dialogue on IPR as part of technology development and transfer.

Turning to our immediate neighbourhood, any visualisation of India’s global role must begin in our immediate neighbourhood, because situational factors in that environment affect our internal security and therefore merit our greatest attention. The Indian economy with its growth and the impact that this exerts beyond our borders is fast becoming an anchoring element in the region. We have articulated a policy in our neighbourhood that stresses the advantages of building networks and greater interconnectivity, trade and investment so that prosperity can be shared and that our region can benefit from India’s rapid economic growth and rising prosperity. We want to create an economic environment with our neighbours so that we can work together to build on our common objectives of economic development. A peaceful neighbourhood, let me add, is mandatory for realisation of our own vision of economic growth. We have made unilateral gestures and extended economic concessions such as the facility of duty-free access to the Indian market for imports from Bangladesh, Nepal, Bhutan and Sri Lanka. We have made proposals multilaterally within the framework of SAARC - the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation - where we have assumed asymmetric responsibilities. However, our vision of enhanced South Asian Cooperation for development is challenged, I will be frank, by violent extremism and terrorism, which originates in our region and finds sustenance and sanctuaries there.

The US operation against Osama bin Laden deep inside Pakistan earlier this week raises the question for all of us in this audience, of the sanctuary enjoyed by terrorists in that country. Our relationship with Pakistan has been complicated by the issue of terrorism and the need for Pakistan to take ameliorative action to eradicate terrorism against India. We desire friendly and cooperative relations with Pakistan. A stable Pakistan which acts as a bulwark against terrorism and extremism is in its own interest as much it is in our interest and in the interest of our region. Therefore we are determined to persevere with our dialogue with Pakistan in order to resolve outstanding issues so that our region is stable and so that the rationale of economic development in an atmosphere of peace for all of South Asia remains our steadfast goal. Recently, we have embarked on a comprehensive and serious dialogue with Pakistan on all issues of mutual interest and concern. As I said we hope Pakistan will address our terrorism related concerns including the investigations and trial of the accused in the Mumbai terrorist attacks effectively and transparently.

We are also committed to working for peace, democracy and inclusive development in Afghanistan. We are dedicated to assist the Afghan people in their civilian reconstruction programmes and capacity building to develop their nation. We share concerns regarding the existence of safe havens and sanctuaries for terrorist groups beyond Afghanistan's borders and the resurgence of these groups and we renew our call on the neighbours of Afghanistan to play a constructive role conducive to the country's stabilization and development in its regional environment.

Let me also briefly speak on Iran. India, as indeed France is committed to diplomacy to resolve the Iranian nuclear issue and we have clearly stated the need for Iran to take constructive and immediate steps to meet its obligations to the IAEA and the UN Security Council. It bears repetition, let me say, that Iran is one of our most important neighbours with whom we share civilizational links. Iran is also a crucial partner for India's energy security. We have an immense stake in a peaceful resolution of the complicated issues surrounding Iran's nuclear question.

The rise of China is a phenomenon that countries all over the world are learning to manage. India too places priority on its relations with China in the context of our regional and foreign policy. Like the rest of the world we seek to engage China proactively and constructively. There are elements of cooperation as well as competition in India-China relations, however our approach to China is not an antagonistic one. We believe there is sufficient space in the world and indeed in the developing world for the simultaneous rise of China and the growth of India. Economics is dynamising our relationship with China today and China has emerged as our largest trading partner. However the trade imbalance worries us and we are seeking greater market access in China for our pharmaceutical and IT products to cite a few examples. The boundary question between our two countries is being discussed but it remains still unresolved although both India and China are focussed on ensuring a peaceful resolution. Both sides have ensured the maintenance of peace and tranquillity in the India-China border areas. Both nations have also similar standpoints on global and international issues including climate change, biodiversity, reform of the international financial institutions and the world trade negotiations. We believe that the India-China relationship will be one of the most important in the world in the coming years of the 21st century.

I also wish to briefly comment on our bilateral relations with the United States. Our relations have matured over the years and are characterised by intensified dialogue, deepened understanding and broad-based cooperation. The relationship is based on shared values, increasingly convergent interests and enormous opportunities for mutually beneficial bilateral cooperation, and global partnership. During the November 2010 visit of President Obama to India, our leadership and the leadership of the United States reaffirmed that the India-US Strategic partnership is indispensable not only for their two countries but also for global stability and prosperity in the 21st century.

Let me also underline our understanding on the importance of what the European Union seeks to achieve through its ever closer union. We see the European Union as a key strategic partner in meeting India's development needs. We welcome the enhanced role of the European Union on the world stage consequent to the entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty. We welcome the significant progress in the negotiations in the India-EU broad-based Trade and Investment Agreement, which will bring significant economic benefits to both sides and further deepen and strengthen the bilateral economic relationship. In this regard we hope to achieve an ambitious and balanced conclusion in 2011. The India-EU Joint Declaration on international terrorism concluded during the 11th India-EU Summit held in Brussels in December last year underlines that our cooperation in combating international terrorism including trans-national terrorism is one of the key political priorities in the India-EU relationship and strategic partnership.

Finally, India's global role is also being articulated as it becomes an increasingly effective development and technical cooperation source for a number of countries in the region including in Africa. Education, agriculture, capacity building in a number of areas, private sector investments, trade and communication outreach define our relations with a number of African countries today. The role of India's soft power, the dynamism of its free and unfettered media, its entertainment industry and the attraction that Indian culture exerts are also very good for enhancing India's global influence today.

We have been following with serious concern the developments in Libya which have led to a loss of numerous lives and injuries to many more. We have advocated a peaceful resolution, a political resolution of the differences that exist between the opposing groups in Libya. We are concerned about the civilian population and the welfare of that population, I am including also the foreigners who live in Libya. We have 2000 Indians who are still there, although we arranged for the evacuation of almost 17000 of our people out of Libya in March but we still have 2000 Indians who elected to stay back there, and therefore we are concerned about the situation surrounding the violence that we have seen in Libya. We abstained on UN Security Council Resolution 1973 of March 17, 2011 to establish a no-fly zone in Libya. As I said we are gravely concerned by the violence there and we want a peaceful resolution of differences because there is a deteriorating humanitarian situation in that country and there is need for a ceasefire, there is need to protect the civilian population and of course to address the legitimate demands of the Libyan people.

Let me also add that the West Asian region is of vital importance to India and we closely monitor developments there. We have about six million Indians who live in the Gulf region, and this region is also extremely important, crucially important for our energy security. We are concerned at the recent crisis in the Ivory Coast especially at the suffering of the Ivorian people due to the escalation of the hostilities. We have been of the view that the mandate of the people has to be respected in that country and we have been supportive of the efforts made by the African Union to resolve the crisis peacefully. We understand the position of France on the crisis in the Ivory Coast because of your historical linkages with that country and we appreciate deeply the assistance rendered by France in evacuation efforts particularly evacuation of the Indian nationals in that country including the Indian Embassy staff in Abidjan. The help and cooperation received from France under unusual and difficult circumstances reflects the friendship and understanding between our two countries.

In conclusion let me say that India's global role today is determined by the calculus of our national interest. Our national interest in ensuring the flow of capital, technology and innovation to further accelerate our economic growth; our conviction that inclusive structures of dialogue and cooperation to address the new dimensions of security threats are necessary; that the institutions of global governance including the United Nations should reflect current realities and that the dynamism and energy of the Indian economic growth story must be shared in our region; that to sustain our growth trajectory we need an environment that is free from trans-national threats like terrorism. And keeping all this in mind we have consciously sought to engage and develop partnerships with both our neighbours and also the major powers with a strategic aim of ensuring that the balance of interest thus created ensures that we are able to better deal with the challenges that confront us and so that we derive tangible political security and economic benefits as a result. In an Asia-centred century we would naturally wish to ensure a role for India that is commensurate with its size, its growing economic strength, its democratic stability and proven capacity to manage our enormous diversity, contribution to global peace and security and what we see as our justified quest for a greater voice in a multilateral system that is balanced, equitable and representative of new global realities.

Once again I would like to thank the French Institute of Foreign Relations for having invited me to speak here this evening.
604. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Foreign Secretary Mrs. Nirupama Rao to Paris for India - France Foreign Office Consultations.

New Delhi, May 7, 2011.

Foreign Secretary Smt. Nirupama Rao visited Paris on May 5-6, 2011 for the annual Foreign Office Consultations between the Government of India and Government of France held on 6 May, 2011 which were led on the French side by His Excellency, Mr. Pierre Sellal, Secretary General of Ministry of Foreign Affairs of France. In their discussions, the two sides reviewed the entire range of bilateral relations including strategic cooperation in key areas including civil nuclear energy, defence, space, trade and investment, education and science and technology and culture. There was also an exchange of views on the regional and international situation. The two sides also discussed the evolving situation in North Africa and the Middle East, in particular Libya and Syria.

The two sides affirmed their determination to work together in the United Nations Security Council to promote peace and stability and a greater voice to the developing world through reform of the Security Council. They also agreed to work closely on G-20 issues during France’s Presidency of the G-20.

The discussions also gave an opportunity to look at further ways of strengthening the Strategic Partnership defined by the strong and future-oriented vision that was articulated during the visit of the President of France to India from 4-7 December, 2010.

During the visit, the Foreign Secretary met His Excellency, Mr. Jean-David Levitte, Diplomatic Advisor to the President and senior officials of the French Government and also addressed the Institut Francais des Relations Internationales (IFRI) on 5th May on the subject of ‘India’s Role in Global Affairs’.
Your Excellency, Minister Alain Juppe,

Distinguished representatives of the media from India and France,

It is indeed a great pleasure to welcome Minister Juppe to India. His visit is yet another reflection of the broadening bilateral engagement that characterizes our Strategic Partnership with France.

We have had very friendly, comprehensive and fruitful discussions today. We reviewed our cooperation in defence, space and civil nuclear energy, which are important pillars of our bilateral relations.

Our excellent bilateral relations with France are marked by mutual trust. We also have a good political understanding on a range of regional and global issues, of mutual interest.

The first Indo-French Joint Army Exercise ‘SHAKTI’ is currently underway in India at Chaubattia, focusing on Counter Insurgency and Counter Terrorism in mountainous environment. We have had useful interactions on the fight against piracy. We reiterated our commitment to continue to cooperate in the fight against terrorism.

We extend our congratulations to the scientists of both our countries on the successful launch of the Indo-French joint scientific satellite, Megha Tropiques, on 12th October. The satellite will provide important new data on the tropical atmosphere and will contribute to our understanding of the dynamics of the climate system. The international scientific community has been enthused by this project and we will be sharing information with other countries.

In the civil nuclear field, our Government remains committed to the Jaitapur Nuclear Power Project. We are awaiting the completion of the French Review of Safety Aspects of EPR Design. Both sides are committed to ensuring the highest levels of safety in the project.

We have renewed our determination to achieve the trade target of 12 billion Euros by 2012. We have invited greater French investments in our infrastructure, food processing industries, hi-tech and green technologies.

In the field of Science and Technology and Education, our cooperation is progressing well. We welcome French collaboration in creating Centre of Excellences in the Indian Institute of Technology, Rajasthan.
We discussed the situation in our respective regions and agreed to continue this dialogue at all levels.

We welcome support from France for India’s increasing role in world affairs. France has also been consistent in voicing support for India’s permanent membership of the UNSC and inclusion in other international fora, including the multilateral export control regimes. We greatly appreciate this gesture from France. We share common views on a large number of regional and global issues.

France will host the next G 20 Summit in Cannes next month. We will continue to remain in close touch with France on matters of global concern, particularly the global economic recovery and reform of the international financial system.

The Joint Statement that we have issued indicates the broad direction in which our strategic partnership is headed.

I take this opportunity once again to extend a warm welcome to Minister Alain Juppe and his delegation and wish them a very pleasant stay in India.

I now invite Minister Alain Juppe to make his remarks.

Thank you.
606. India-France Joint Statement issued on the visit of French Foreign Minister on Progress in “India-France Partnership for the Future”.

New Delhi, October 20, 2011.

The External Affairs Minister of the Republic of India, Shri S.M. Krishna and the Senior Minister for Foreign and European Affairs of the French Republic Mr. Alain Juppé met in New Delhi on 20 October 2011 and reviewed the progress on the implementation of the Joint Declaration on bilateral, regional and international issues of common interest and importance “India-France: Partnership for the Future” adopted by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and President Nicolas Sarkozy on December 6, 2010.

Reaffirming that the India-France Strategic Partnership has been steadily strengthening and widening in scope, they agreed on a roadmap for its further development.

Bilateral Trade and Economic Cooperation

The two Ministers recalled the target set in December 2010 of increasing bilateral trade to 12 billion by 2012 and reiterated their commitment to achieving it. They also welcomed the increase in foreign direct investment flows in both directions and agreed to address the genuine concerns of investors.

India and France have identified energy efficiency, renewable energy, preservation of biodiversity, urban services and infrastructure as promising fields of cooperation. To that end, Agence Française de Développement financing could be of relevance.

Space co-operation

Minister Krishna and Minister Juppé welcomed the successful launch of Megha-Tropiques satellite, a joint contribution to the global scientific community engaged in research on climate and weather systems. The forthcoming launch of SARAL, a joint satellite to study sea surface altitude would be another milestone in space cooperation. India and France encouraged Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) and the French National Space Agency (CNES) to pursue further cooperation in Earth System Science and Climate within the framework of the MoU signed in December 2010 and to explore new fields of cooperation in the future.

Defence Cooperation

India and France reaffirmed their continued interest in enhancing bilateral cooperation in Defence. They welcomed the success of the first joint exercise between the two Armies (Shakti, ongoing in October 2011), as also the exercises between their Navies (Varuna in January 2011) and Air Forces (Garuda in 2010).

The two countries welcomed the finalisation of the project for modernisation of Indian Air Force’s Mirage 2000 aircraft and noted ongoing efforts to finalise joint defence research and development programmes, namely the SRSAM and Kaveri programmes. They reiterated their desire to cooperate in other high technology programmes and projects in the defence sector in the future.

Both countries reaffirmed their interest in intensifying their cooperation in combating piracy in the Gulf of Aden off the coast of Somalia and other areas.

Civil Nuclear Cooperation

India and France agreed to an early entry into force of the agreement on intellectual property rights on the development of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. They recognized the importance of the highest levels of safety for nuclear power plants. They agreed to strengthen the cooperation between the Atomic Energy Regulatory Board of India and the Autorité de Sureté Nucléaire of France, and their technical support organizations. They welcomed the progress in the discussions between AREVA and NPCIL, aiming at finalizing the contract on the construction of two EPR reactors at Jaitapur and look forward to its early implementation. Following India’s enactment of civil nuclear liability legislation, both countries stand ready to further exchange views on this issue so as to ensure the appropriate framework for the sound development of their cooperation. They look forward to the conclusion of an agreement between ALSTOM, NPCIL and BHEL for supplying the Indian nuclear power program with the most recent technology for manufacturing turbo-generators.

Education, Science & Technology

The two Ministers agreed that both Governments will work together to encourage an increase in the flow of students and researchers in both directions. India and France will increase the number and academic level of exchange students. They share a long term ambition for bilateral cooperation at the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) in Rajasthan. France will finance scholarships for Indian students at the PhD level, depute professors to IIT Rajasthan and substantially contribute to the establishment of Joint Centres of Excellence/ research laboratories in the next five years. India welcomes this bilateral cooperation project in the higher education sector.
Culture
The two Ministers applauded the success of the cultural festivals Bonjour India and Namaste France. They committed to bolstering exchanges in the fields of culture and heritage. They took note of the success of the International seminar on “Traditions of cultural liberalism in India & France” organized in Paris in June 2011. They welcomed the future opening of an Indian cultural centre in Paris and looked forward to the upcoming Tagore exhibition in Paris.

Migration and consular issues
India and France welcomed the recent negotiations for a Human Resource Mobility Partnership Agreement where progress was made on the essential aspects. They underlined the positive impact that this agreement will have on a global approach to comprehensive migration, based on the intensification of business opportunities, exchanges of students, researchers and young professionals and better tackling of irregular migration. They agreed to continue this discussion and resolved to conclude the Agreement as early as possible. They also agreed to reinforce the dialogue on consular issues.

Regional and global challenges
Afghanistan
India and France reaffirmed their solidarity with Afghanistan. They welcomed the will of the international community to remain committed after the 2014 transition, through bilateral and multilateral fora. Looking ahead to the Istanbul Conference of November 2, they welcomed the commitment of the region to work for a stable, peaceful, democratic and independent Afghanistan, achieved through an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned process. They called for the continued engagement of the international community and increased cooperation in the region to work towards a terror-free Afghanistan. This would be in the interest of Afghanistan, the region and the international community at large.

Libya
The two countries support the efforts of the National Transition Council representing the Libyan people as a whole, to establish democratic institutions in a free Libya, to promote human rights, and to rebuild their country after the sufferings they have endured.

Middle East
Minister Krishna and Minister Juppé exchanged views on issues related to the Middle East including the peace process and the situation in Syria and agreed to continue the dialogue at all levels.
EU

Minister Krishna and Minister Juppé reiterated their willingness to participate in the strengthening of the relationship between the European Union and India. They called for a successful India-EU summit in February 2012. They agreed that India and the EU should continue to work for the early conclusion of the negotiations for a mutually beneficial and balanced Broad-based Trade and Investment Agreement (BTIA), which will lead to substantial increase in bilateral trade and investment flows.

Terrorism

India and France have endeavoured to jointly fight international terrorism, a common threat. They reiterated their view that terrorism cannot be justified on any grounds or attributed to any root causes. They noted that the bilateral Joint Working Group on Counterterrorism had met in Paris in June 2011. The two sides agreed to further expand information exchange and enhance counterterrorism cooperation in areas of mutual concern. They resolved to continue their efforts for early adoption of the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism at the UN.

G20

The two Ministers reaffirmed the role of the G20 as the premier forum for international economic cooperation. India fully supports the priorities put on the G20 agenda by the French presidency. India and France reiterated their commitment to working together in the G20, especially on global issues notably, addressing the Financial crisis, development including infrastructure and food security, social dimension, fight against corruption, innovative financing, commodity price volatility, reform of the international financial institutions and financial regulatory reforms. They are committed to make the G20 Summit in Cannes a success, and support the adoption of an ambitious action plan for growth.

UN Reform

France reaffirmed its support for India’s accession as a permanent member of an enlarged UN Security Council. India and France are committed to reinforce their consultations at the UN on issues pertaining to international peace and stability.

Non proliferation

The two countries will intensify their cooperation on non-proliferation challenges, and will continue to work towards India’s full membership to the four export control regimes.
Climate Change

The two Ministers stressed their resolve to address the challenges posed by Climate Change, firmly based on the principles and provisions of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), in particular the principle of Equity and Common but Differentiated Responsibilities. They reaffirmed their commitment to work together for an equitable, balanced and comprehensive outcome to the upcoming 17th Conference of Parties at Durban, South Africa.

GEORGIA

New Delhi, August 24, 2011.

The Government of India today signed an Agreement for Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with respect to Taxes on Income and on Capital (DTAA) with Government of Georgia. The Agreement was signed today by Mr. M.C.Joshi, Chairman, Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) on behalf of the Government of India and Mr. Zurab Katchkatchishvili, Ambassador of Georgia to India on behalf of the Government of Georgia.

The DTAA provides that business profits will be taxable in the source state if the activities of an enterprise constitute a Permanent Establishment (PE) in the source state. The Agreement provides for fixed place PE, building site, construction & installation PE, service PE, insurance PE and agency PE. The Agreement incorporates para 2 in Article concerning Associated Enterprises. This would enhance recourse to Mutual Agreement Procedure to relieve double taxation in cases involving transfer pricing adjustments. Dividends, interest and royalties & fees for technical services income will be taxed both in the country of residence and in the country of source. The low level of withholding rates of taxation for dividend (10%), interest (10%) and royalties & fees for technical services (10%) will promote greater investments, flow of technology and technical services between the two countries.

The Agreement incorporates provisions for effective exchange of information between tax authorities of the two countries in line with best international standards, including exchange of banking information and supplying of information without recourse to domestic interest. The Agreement also provides for sharing of information to other agencies with the consent of supplying state.

The Agreement has an article on assistance in collection of taxes, including provision for taking measures of conservancy. The Agreement incorporates anti-abuse (limitation of benefits) provisions to ensure that the benefits of the Agreement are availed of by the genuine residents of the two countries.

The Agreement will provide tax stability to the residents of India and Georgia and will facilitate mutual economic cooperation between the two countries. It will also stimulate the flow of investment, technology and services between India and Georgia.

GERMANY

New Delhi, March 31, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and Leipzig Graduate School of Management (HHL), Leipzig, Germany has signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) for establishment of ICCR's Long-Term Chair of ‘Corporate Responsibility & Governance’ at HHL. Ambassador of India to Germany, Shri Sudhir Vyas signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR alongwith Prof. Dr. Arni Vilks, Rector; Dr. Judith Marquardt, Chancellor; Prof. Dr. Andreas Pinkwart, Rector (Designate); and Dr. Axel Baisch, Chancellor (Designate) of HHL.

Under the terms of agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the HHL, shall appoint a suitable Indian academician to hold the Chair for a period of one year. During the period, the Visiting Professor would contribute to the academic life of the HHL by engaging in teaching, research and mentoring. The Chair would commence from September 1st, 2011 and the MoU will remain valid till August, 2012.

This Chair is ICCR's seventh chair in Germany. These are 5 Rotating/Short-Term Chairs in various universities of Germany and a Long-Term Heinrich Zimmer Chair of Indian Philosophy & Intellectual History at Ruprecht Karl's University of Heidelberg.

Establishment of this Chair is another major step in propagation of India related studies in Germany and thereby fulfilling ICCR's larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural bonds and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.

609. Decision of the Jury of Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding presided over by Vice President M. Hamid Ansari to confer the Award for the year 2009 on German Chancellor Angela Merkel.

New Delhi, May 9, 2011.

The Jury of the Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding chaired by Hon'ble Vice-President of India Shri Mohmmad Hamid Ansari has decided to confer the Award for the year 2009 on Dr. (Mrs.) Angela Dorothea Merkel, Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany. By honouring Chancellor Merkel with the Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding for the year 2009, India recognizes her personal devotion and enormous efforts for sustainable and equitable development, for good governance and understanding and for the creation of a world better positioned to handle the emerging challenges of the 21st century.

She has been sympathetic to developing countries and our own developmental imperatives and has led the search for a balanced solution based on principles of equity and sensitivity to the interests of the developing world.

The Award carries prize money of 1 crore (ten million) besides a trophy and citation.

610. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs and Joint Secretary (EW) on the visit of German Chancellor Angela Markel.

New Delhi, May 30, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good evening to you and welcome. Nice to see a full house! Let me first of all accord a very warm and special welcome to our media friends from Myanmar, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos who are here with us for a two-week training programme. Please join me in giving them a big hand. They are in the good hands of Prof. Shrivastava, the Project Director of Indian Institute of Mass Communications. Prof. Shrivastava, you have been a great friend and mentor for a large number of our media friends from all over the world who have been coming here at our invite. I really thank you very much.

Friends, my colleague Joint Secretary (Europe West), Mr. Seetharam, needs no introduction. He and I would attempt to brief you on this forthcoming very important head of a very important delegation and would be departing on 1st of June. Her visit marks the sixtieth anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Germany. I may add that we were amongst the first countries in the world to accord recognition to FRG after World War II.

During her visit she will also be conferred the Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding for the year 2009. This makes her the second German Head of Government to receive the prestigious award. Earlier in 1990 it was conferred on Chancellor Helmut Kohl. The award carries a prize money of Rs.10,000,000, a trophy and a citation.

Chancellor Merkel had paid a landmark state visit to India in October-November 2007 which had been preceded by the visit of our Prime Minister to Germany in April 2006. These two visits have put our relationship on a qualitatively higher pedestal.

Let me take you through the programme and the delegation. She arrives tomorrow and has a restricted meeting followed by delegation-level talks with the Prime Minister of India. The Chancellor and the Prime Minister thereafter meet with the Co-Chairs of the Indo-German Consultative Group. This is the group of industrialists. There is a signing of agreements, followed by a joint press conference. All these events take place at Hyderabad House. Next, the Prime Minister hosts a lunch for the visiting dignitary.

In the evening she calls on the President, Hon. Rashtrapati, who presents the Jawaharlal Nehru Award to Chancellor Merkel. Thereafter she departs for Siri Fort Auditorium where she would witness a classical concert, featuring German and Indian musicians, to mark the launch of the Year of Germany in India. In the evening, Prime Minister of India will host a private dinner in her honour. She leaves the day after tomorrow.

She would be accompanied by a high-power delegation that would include the State Secretary; the Federal Minister for Interior or the Home Minister; the Federal Minister for Defence; the Federal Minister for Transport, Building and Urban Affairs; the Federal Minister of Education and Research; the Federal Minister of Economics and Technology; Minister of State for the Federal Foreign Office - this is in addition to the Foreign Minister who met with the External Affairs Minister of India today, I will come to that later - the Federal Minister of Environment, Nature Conservation and Nuclear Safety; a number of Parliamentarians; senior officials; and a large business delegation.

We enjoy strategic partnership with Germany which was forged in 2001. In recent years the relationship has acquired greater depth and content and has truly become multifaceted. Way back in 2007, Germany identified India as one of the focus countries in Asia. Germany, an economic and technological powerhouse is not only our largest trading partner in Europe but also a very important source of high technology knowhow and skill development. Science and technological cooperation between the two countries is regarded as a vital pillar of our strategic partnership.

Another area which is gaining salience and become increasingly important is education, vocational training and infrastructure. I would like to clarify here that we are not seeking developmental assistance from Germany but indeed seeking their technological skills, their experience, their expertise and knowhow in establishing vocational training centres all across India.

We are both members of G20 which is now a premier forum for international economic cooperation. India and Germany have been consulting closely in the reforms of IFIs, in global governance structures, and in introduction of developmental agenda in the G20 process. India is keen and so is Germany to bring about greater equity and transparency in the global economic order.

India and Germany, along with Brazil and Japan, are G4 members. Germany and India are also nonpermanent members for the year 2011 and 2012. We enjoy a convergence of views on a host of issues, global, regional and of course bilateral between our two countries.

As I mentioned, Germany is one of our largest trading partners in the world and the largest trading partner in Europe. Bilateral trade grew a healthy 17 per cent in 2010 to cross 15.4 billion Euro. In the first few months of this year the trade has been growing at a healthier 25 per cent per annum and there is little doubt that we will easily attain the target of 20 billion Euro by 2012.
It is particularly of interest that in addition to our traditional goods like garments and textiles which we export to Germany, we are increasingly supplying engineering goods including electrical and electronic items, auto components and so on.

Germany is also the eighth largest investor in India with cumulative investments of 3.8 billion dollars between 1991 and 2010. Leading companies from Germany are present in India and the other way round.

We have a Joint Commission on industrial and economic cooperation led by the Finance Ministers which provides locomotion to our trade and economic ties. It has been meeting every two years very successfully, and the 17th session, was held in New Delhi last September.

Let me reiterate that technology transfer, vocational education and training are some of the sectors that we attach considerable importance to and there could be an important announcement in this regard during the visit.

Similarly, science and technological cooperation is one of the vital sectors and Germany is one of our leading and key partners in this area. Our cooperation dates back to 1971 and covers a wide spectrum of areas including biotechnology, aviation, geology, molecular physics, energy. Germany is renowned for its prowess in green and energy-efficient technologies and we have been benefiting from that, we have been cooperating with them and we are keen to work closely with Germany in this very important area because as you are aware energy security and self-sufficiency is one of the key priorities of the Government of India. We also have an Indo-German Science and Technological Centre which was set up in New Delhi in September 2008.

Let me breeze through some of the other important sectors, and we can come back to them if there is interest, which include defence, counterterrorism, strategic dialogue at the level of National Security Advisors who meet twice a year. The areas in addition to renewable energy that we are working closely together, include IT, biotechnology, the small and medium enterprises sector, infrastructure development and entertainment. In the energy sector particularly, we have been collaborating with our friends in areas like clean coal, wind energy, photovoltaic panels and some others.

The two sides have now decided to, although we have a very vast and effective institutional framework of dialogue, significantly upgrade the level and quality of our dialogue by going in for an Indo-German Inter-Governmental Dialogue. I would like to mention that this is a broad-based dialogue involving Ministers from two sides, which Germany has with very few of its partners. In Asia they have it with Israel and we are the second country in continental Asia with which they are going to have a dialogue of this nature. The first round today happened between the Foreign Minister of Germany and the External Affairs Minister and tomorrow there will be meetings between the Ministers of Human Resource Development, Defence, Home. This is a one-to-one dialogue between our Home Minister with their Interior Minister, our Defence Minister with their Defence Minister, Transport Minister with theirs, and so on. So, we are expecting - I mentioned to you, that six Cabinet Ministers are traveling with Chancellor Merkel - each of them will be holding dialogue, discussions with their counterparts in India tomorrow. You can hence see the qualitative scaling up of the level of the dialogue and the breadth of the dialogue between the two countries.

Also to mark the 50th year of establishment of diplomatic relations, a Festival of Germany under the theme 'Urban Spaces' will be taking place in India this year and roll over to 2012. We expect a number of leading German companies to showcase their capabilities in innovation, technology as well as their expertise in urban infrastructure and planning. Days of India would be held in Germany in 2012 and 2013 and the show will be called 'Connecting Cultures' where we are similarly like to showcase the best of our rich cultural heritage including in dance, music, literature, fine arts and the others.

In sum, we are very pleased with the quality of relationship between the two countries which has been nurtured by a regular high-level exchanges and dialogue. I will not take you through the details but to just highlight some of the important visits that have taken place in the recent past, it includes the state visit of the then German President Dr. Kohler in February 2010; Prime Minister Dr. Singh has visited Germany thrice already, I mentioned April 2006 which was an official visit, he was next in Germany in June 2007 for the G8-O5 Summit; and in December last year he also paid a visit to Germany. He and Chancellor Merkel have also been meeting regularly on the margins of international fora. Dr. Guido Westerwelle the Foreign Minister was here in October for comprehensive talks with the EAM, and today he had a broad-based exchange of views with the External Affairs Minister preparatory to the visit of the German Chancellor.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and the German Chancellor will hold in-depth consultations on bilateral issues to further consolidate our multifaceted ties. They will also have an exchange of views on regional and international matters or issues of common interest including perhaps the situation in our region, in the West Asia and North Africa and perhaps other areas and matters also. A number of agreements will be signed during the visit.

Let me pause here to invite questions which my colleague and I will be happy to take, as usual on the visit of the German Chancellor to India.
Question: Vishnu, you spoke of a strategic partnership and even the German side speaks a lot about strategic partnership; and you said that it has become multifaceted. Apart from the GSG 9 training the NSG commandos and the Eurofighter now being considered for purchase, in what way has Germany contributed to India’s security specifically? Can you sort of flesh out the strategic relationship? Also you spoke of the Defence Minister coming tomorrow, you spoke of the NSA meetings scheduled twice a year and all that. Apart from that, just flesh it out please.

Joint Secretary (Europe West) (Shri T.P. Seetharam): It is a very broad-based relationship of which the economic content is significant considering that it is the largest trading partner in Europe. The economic relationship is not just one of trading but also investment. As you know, a large number of German companies in the power sector like Siemens, almost every major German company in the automobile sector is active in India. As we are all aware, there are great capabilities in the technological field and that is something which they are willing to share with us in terms of transfer of technologies. So, it is not just trading but joint production and joint manufacturing in areas which are quite wide. This is also very much part of the strategic partnership. Strategic partnership is not purely only in terms of defence or counterterrorism. On American sector, again there has been cooperation between the two sides which goes beyond merely procurement of equipment of one kind or the other. You mentioned some of the items which are under consideration but that is a process for which a decision has to be taken.

Counterterrorism is an area again because there are groups which are active in say Germany which may be interest to our people in terms of security here. So, there is an existing mechanism for exchange of information and cooperation in these fields which would also include training, as you mentioned, apart from operational cooperation at various levels. The strategic dialogue at the NSA level covers broader areas including international developments. Since we are both members of the Security Council - at the moment we are members of the Security Council for a two-year period naturally but that involves our consultations, more frequent and covering larger areas than we ever did earlier. The fact that we are both members of the G4 again means that considerable coordination in our efforts to further the interest of expansion in the permanent category in the Security Council is something that we would discuss.

So, it is a very broad-based cooperation. It is a strategic cooperation I would cover in areas like energy, the kind of technologies that have developed for renewable energy. You would have seen the news items today of their decision to put an end to reliance on nuclear energy, which means they have to do more in terms of renewables and new energy areas and that offers a significant strategic cooperation between the two countries in terms of new and renewable energy sources. That is very strategic too. When you say strategic dialogue do not think only defence and counterterrorism.

Question: I wanted to ask you about the sudden change of views from them. Earlier they did not vote like India they did not go to the UNSC and then suddenly now they are all … change. How do you see this sort of thing?

Official Spokesperson: Can I invite you tomorrow to the Joint Press Conference? Why do you not ask that question to the Germans? It will be slightly difficult for us to tell you how the Germans see it. I invite you, to pose that question tomorrow at the Joint Press Conference.

Question: Do you think that the question of IMF succession will also be raised during the discussion? What is the position of India on this?

Official Spokesperson: I cannot anticipate what would be discussed and what will not be discussed. But may I invite your attention to the response of the Prime Minister of India which is on our MEA website. He was interacting with the media on his return from Africa when this question was posed to him. And his take was basically that in today’s world there is enough talent everywhere and it is in the common interest and in the interest of equity and transparency - I am not using the exact words of my Prime Minister but generally giving you a sense - the best talent should be holding a position, any important position in an IFI or structure of global governance because it affects everybody. I would certainly invite you to take a look at what the Prime Minister has said.

Question: You talked about renewable energy being a major aspect of your relationship as well. I am wondering whether you would like to engage with the Germans on civilian nuclear programmes as well. They halted their plans but there is much that India could learn from them.

Joint Secretary (Europe West): The Indian position regarding civil nuclear energy is slightly different from the German position and you are fully aware of that. So, we are looking for partners from all over the world. So, if any country has technology and is willing to share that with us particularly in terms of energy efficiency or energy security particularly in the context of nuclear energy, we would welcome that. But as you know, this is a very highly emotional issue now in Germany. So, we do not know if that would be something that they wish to discuss now. But the potential is always there.

Official Spokesperson: And let me remind you that Germany had supported the India-specific waiver at Vienna in September 2008 and we are working closely with them.
Question: Have you received any assurance of support for India's membership in the various nuclear clubs like NSG, or Australia Group or ... Official Spokesperson: We have already expressed our interest and desire to be part of those groups and we are working with our international partners to attain that objective.

Question: What about Germany? Have they assured?

Official Spokesperson: Ditto. It is also an international partner.

Thank you very much.

By the way, I should also just tell you that we also have in town the Egyptian Foreign Minister and today evening the External Affairs Minister will be holding delegation-level talks with the Foreign Minister of Egypt.

Thank you.

611. Joint Press Interaction by Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and German Chancellor Angela Markel.

New Delhi, May 31, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to everybody and welcome to the Joint Press Interaction.

Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh will be making an opening statement to the media, and next the Chancellor of Germany Her Excellency Angela Merkel would be addressing the media. May I invite the Prime Minister of India to please make his opening statement?

Prime Minister of India (Dr. Manmohan Singh): Your Excellency Chancellor Angela Merkel; distinguished Ministers; and members of the German delegation; ladies and gentlemen of the media.

I extend a very warm welcome to Chancellor Angela Merkel and to the distinguished members of her delegation. We are honoured to receive the Chancellor on her second visit to India since 2007.

Chancellor Merkel's visit coincides with the sixtieth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Germany. It is fitting that this should be so. Chancellor Merkel has been an ardent advocate of our strategic partnership. I have always admired her leadership qualities and valued our partnership.

I take this opportunity to congratulate Chancellor Merkel on the conferment of the Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding for the year 2009.

India and Germany enjoy a very close and multi-faceted relationship. There is enormous goodwill in India for the people and culture of Germany. There is admiration and respect for the advances made by Germany in engineering and technological development. The passion for quality, hardwork and innovation of the German people is admired by the people of India.

Germany is India’s largest trading partner in Europe and one of our most important partners for technological collaboration and joint research and development. It is also amongst the largest foreign investors in India. Our bilateral trade was more than 15 billion Euros last year, and is on course to reach the target of 20 billion Euros per year by 2012.

I have reiterated to the Chancellor our desire to have greater German investment in India, particularly in the areas of infrastructure, high technology, energy and basic and applied sciences. We wish to expand our production and R&D base and encourage more technology transfers.

India offers a stable and friendly investment climate and a large growing market. I welcome the progress that is being made on the issue of high technology exports from Germany to India. This will benefit both economies.

We have a lot to learn from Germany’s experience in vocational training and skill development. I am happy that a Memorandum of Understanding in this regard has been signed today.

I am also very happy that agreements in science and technology and research have been signed between some of our institutions. These will encourage greater exchanges in areas such as biotechnology, nano-technology and material sciences.

Our discussions today covered views on the situation in West Asia and North Africa, including developments in Libya and how they impact on regional peace and stability. We reviewed the latest developments in Afghanistan and Pakistan, and will continue our discussions on these matters. We both recognise that terrorism is a serious challenge that has to be fought on all fronts and not selectively.

As members of the G-4, we have agreed to keep in close touch on the issue of the reform of the United Nations Security Council.
I conveyed to Chancellor Merkel India’s interest in a strong, prosperous and open Eurozone that contributes fully to the global economic recovery process, in which Germany is playing a pivotal role. We will continue to work together within the G-20.

All in all, I have had very useful and wide ranging discussions with Chancellor Merkel. I thank Chancellor Merkel for her initiative in holding the first Inter-Governmental Consultations with India during her current visit.

I look forward to working with Chancellor Merkel to further strengthen our strategic partnership.

I thank you.

German Chancellor (Dr. Angela Merkel): (as per interpretation) Prime Minister; dear colleagues from both Cabinets; and ladies and gentlemen:

We are delighted to be guests here in India, this country that has enormous dynamism and where so many areas where you are trying to bring about solution to problems and forge ahead and promote development.

I am very pleased that we have been able to hold these first inter-governmental consultations between India and Germany. We had a very intensive discussion. We were able to see that there is already a very broad-based cooperation between our Ministries in foreign policy, in economics, in the environmental area, in education. After all education is one of the great challenges for India - educating, training young people and also shaping India into a science and research nation. There I think we have been able to put a lot of very interesting projects on tracks as could be seen by the sheer number of MoUs that were signed just now.

On the international stage, both internationally and nationally on international issues there is very good cooperation both bilaterally and multilaterally and also in regard to the energy policy, not only the political situation …(Inaudible)… together but also the …(Inaudible)… finance a greatest photovoltaic plant in the world has contributed firmness to it. And I think particularly in the area of renewable energy there is still a lot of scope for further cooperation.

The Home Affairs Ministers and the Defence Ministers also had talks here so that our cooperation can be further enhanced because we face similar challenges - fight against terrorism on the one hand and on the other hand we are united in the wish that Afghanistan may become a state and take security matters in its own hands. India is very much committed to that and Germany very much so. In many areas we have also sent a military mission to Afghanistan to stabilize the country.
We have very close economic ties. The Prime Minister has just now outlined how dynamic this is. We would like to have 20 billion trade volume by 2012. We have reached 15 by now. We have growth rates of over 15 per cent. So, there is a very dynamic development there and still a lot remains to be done.

The Ministers that are responsible for Infrastructure and for Urban Development have yet again brought home to us what great potential there still is to build up roads, railways and also to build up waste management plants and so on. So, there is a lot of scope for further cooperation.

We are participating in a lot of very interesting economic projects. It is certainly not a secret that with the Eurofighter we made very good proposals and suggestions. Germany is very much interested in further intensifying its relationship with India.

I would like to use this opportunity to thank my Indian counterpart for the very good international cooperation we enjoy at a global level. We quite often, Prime Minister, also not only meeting in India and Germany but also at global meetings - G20 for example and other fora of this kind. Our Foreign Ministries do quite a lot to foster this relationship further. And in a global world I think we both share this conviction, we can only live well together if we abide by similar rules and if we truly define global rules in such a way that they are beneficial for the developed countries, for the industrialized countries, but also for those countries that still have a great potential for further growth.

Germany is very interested in seeing to it that India is its partner in forging ahead, to be at your side. You have a very long and proud tradition. We would like to support you in achieving the same degree of prosperity that we have been able to achieve in a spirit of partnership.

We are celebrating this year sixty years of diplomatic ties. I think that is a very good moment to show that we also have a very good future ahead of us. In many cities of India there are celebrations that are scheduled on the occasion of this year. Maybe this will drive home to other Indians what great potential we have for our mutual relations.

Thank you again for welcoming us...(Inaudible)...

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Madam Chancellor.

The Prime Minister of India and the Chancellor will be happy to take two questions from each side. Please keep your questions brief and indicate to who the question is addressed to.

Question (German media): Mr. Prime Minister, to meet the growing need of energy for your country India is not only investing in renewable energies like solar, wind but also in nuclear power. You are pursuing a very ambitious plan to increase your ability to produce energy from nuclear plants. Can you tell us if you see it as the future of nuclear energy for India? Can you give us an idea about the capacity you are aiming at?

Madam Chancellor, how do you see the build up of nuclear energy here in India, in this country? And did you urge your partners, since Germany is now phasing out nuclear energy, that you would encourage your partners in India to follow along and follow in your footsteps so to speak?

Prime Minister of India: Nuclear energy today accounts for only about three per cent of total energy generated in our system. As of now, our capacity is less than 5,000 MW. We want to raise it to about 20,000 MW by the year 2020. Thereafter there are some projections but no firm decisions have been taken. One thing which is quite clear is that if India is to meet its emission targets, then nuclear energy along with renewable sources of energy, is a combination which we need. We will make every effort to ensure that safety norms in generation and utilization of nuclear power are world class, but we must have the option to make use of the nuclear energy, together with the heavy reliance on coal which is inevitable for quite sometime to come in our country.

German Chancellor (as per interpretation): I think it is up to each and every country to decide what energy mix it wishes to use to supply energy. We from the German side will see to it and champion also at an international level that safety standards for nuclear power plants are very good. We ourselves have said we want to phase our nuclear energy over a period of ten years. But for many many years we also had an energy mix in Germany in which nuclear power had its share. We are cooperating with India in many ways, and in renewables, and also I think we can do a lot to boost energy efficiency. If I understood the Environment Minister correctly, on the one hand you have the aim of building up renewables but also building up very efficient coal-fired power plants where the Germans are already working with you, and also building up photovoltaic plants. Over the next two years 20,000 MW are supposed to be generated which is about the volume that we still have generated by our nuclear power plants in Germany. So, building up a very broad-based energy mix with renewables here in India is a policy where we can obviously support you all along the way. I think what will be very important is to see to it that renewable energies can supply the base load for the grid and that put together with biomass and wind energy one can come to very good results.

Question (Indian Media): I have a question for each of the leaders. I would like to ask Chancellor Merkel if she can confirm that Germany is in fact now mediating between leaders of the Taliban as well as the Afghan Government in recent talks this month. And what, if any, is Germany’s idea of India’s role in Afghanistan even as it begins its pullout later this year?

I would like to ask Prime Minister Manmohan Singh if during your discussions you talked about who the next IMF Chief should be, and if there was any agreement on what the nationality or who that choice should be.

German Chancellor (as per interpretation): I already said that India and Germany share the same goal, Afghanistan has to develop an independent security architecture, taking its security into its own hands because this is a better possible protection against the terrorist attacks. We in Germany are of the opinion and we said this very clearly that we do not think a military solution alone is an option. We need a networked security architecture. This is why Germany for example will host the next Afghanistan Conference by the end of this year. The Afghan President and my Government agreed on part and parcel of reconciliation in the country... (inaudible)... reconciliation of all the forces if they fulfill the conditions for example renouncing the use of force and other conditions of this nature. So, Afghanistan Conference too will have as its motto again the transition of responsibility but always under the provision that reconciliation in the country is obviously part and parcel of this. This will only be possible with the Afghan forces and not against the Afghan forces.

Prime Minister of India: The question that Suhasini addressed to me relates to the next Managing Director of the IMF. Quite honestly we have not had a discussion on that subject. Our view is well-known that the best available person, regardless of his or her nationality, should be selected for such a prestigious post.

Question (German media): A question addressed to the Chancellor. You spoke about discussing the Eurofighter. Chancellor, did you receive any positive messages from the Indian side? And very briefly, you came here on the flight that was a bit bumpy in the sense that you were not allowed overflight initially over Iran. Will this have international consequences?

German Chancellor (as per interpretation): On the second issue let me say I am very glad that I arrived safely here in India, everything has turned out excellently. We have been able to hold Indo-German Inter-Governmental Consultation and that is the most important part of this.

On the other issue, we only mentioned the Eurofighter here, but obviously procurement procedures are very transparent here in India as they attempt to be the world over. We are convinced that we have the best product on offer as our competitors do too. We will certainly not exert any kind of influence on this process. We wish this to be a very transparent process and a smooth one. We are aware of the fact that we have a good product and we shall wait and see.
Question (Indian Media): Dr. Merkel, Germany is now speaking of an interim solution for the UN Security Council permanent seats. Is that a departure from the G4 consensus? And what does Dr. Singh think about it and what is India’s position on this?

German Chancellor (as per interpretation): First I should say that Germany still holds the view that we all at G4 do canvas for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council. I think the good thing is that something happens at all because the structural reform is obviously very necessary. And it is very good that Germany and India currently can work from their non permanent seats in the Security Council together on this. And we are actually aligning our policies as to how we can bring about reform. There is one thing that we would say that the current format and composition of the Security Council no longer reflects the current state of affairs. It still harks back to the days after the World War II. So, I think we should focus our energies and our capacity for speeding up this process which after all has already started a long time ago. Maybe together we can bring something about.

Prime Minister of India: The Chancellor has given a reply with which I am in agreement. Germany and India are members of the G4. We have been arguing for a long time that the global system, particularly the composition of the Security Council and its methods of working, need to be brought up to date in line with the contemporary realities because the world of 1945 is a world which is no longer existing and the new realities of the global scene have to be taken into account in looking at the reform of the structures of global governance. India and Germany have been partners in this exercise. I sincerely hope that this partnership will persist, that it will yield positive results.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you, Sir.

This brings the media event to a close. Thank you for your presence.

External Affairs Minister Shri S M Krishna visited Hungary from June 5-7, 2011 to attend ASEM Foreign Ministers Meeting. During his visit he also met Prime Minister of Hungary Mr. Viktor Orban on June 7, 2011 to discuss Indo-Hungarian bilateral relations. The Meeting was characterized by warmth and goodwill reflecting the excellent bilateral ties between the two countries.

Prime Minister Viktor Orban expressed keen desire for intensification of economic engagement with India. He also informed EAM of his intention to pay a bilateral visit to India at an early date. Highlighting the need for regular high level dialogue, he renewed the invitations extended by Hungary to Indian leaders to visit Hungary on mutually convenient dates.

During the meeting, Prime Minister Viktor Orban also reiterated Hungary's unequivocal support for India's permanent membership in an expanded UN Security Council.

EAM reciprocated India's keen desire to intensify Indo-Hungarian bilateral ties and stated that Prime Minter's proposed visit to India will provide further impetus to our growing bilateral ties.
Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Foreign Minister of Iceland Ossur Skarphedinsson.

New Delhi, May 3, 2011

Foreign Minister of Iceland, H.E. Dr. Ossur Skarphedinsson visited India from 25 April – 3 May 2011.

External Affairs Minister, Shri S M Krishna met the Foreign Minister of Iceland on 26 April. The two sides discussed issues related to bilateral ties as well as regional and international issues of common concern. The two Foreign Ministers noted that the 40% increase in our bilateral trade between 2009 and 2010 (valued at US$ 41 million) is a heartening development but there was still many untapped opportunities for the business communities in the two countries to explore. The two Ministers agreed that bilateral cooperation in the area of geothermal energy held enormous potential and should be promoted. Fisheries was identified as another area of fruitful collaboration.

During discussions regarding the need for reform of the UN Security Council, the visiting dignitary reiterated Iceland’s strong support for India’s permanent membership in an expanded Security Council. A warm invitation was extended to EAM to visit Iceland.

On 25 April, 2011, Foreign Minister Skarphedinsson met Shri Jairam Ramesh, Minister of State for Environment and Forests and discussed possibilities of cooperation in the area of Climate Change and Green Energy. He also met Shri Subodh Kant Sahay, Minister of Tourism to discuss the potential of tourism cooperation between the two countries.

Besides Delhi, the Foreign Minister of Iceland also visited Jammu and Kashmir (Leh and Srinagar), where he held meetings with the Minister of New and Renewable Energy of Government of India, Dr. Farookh Abdullah and Chief Minister Shri Omar Abdullah and also discussed cooperation in the area of renewable energy to exploit the State’s potential for mini hydro power projects and geothermal energy.

The Foreign Minister of Iceland also visited Agra and traveled to Mumbai where he inaugurated the Honorary Consulate of Iceland and met Shri Murli Deora, Minister for Corporate Affairs on 30 April 2011.

This was the first visit by the Foreign Minister of Iceland to India and comes after the successful visit of President Grimsson of Iceland to India in January 2010 and the visit of Minister of State for External Affairs, Smt. Preneet Kaur to Iceland in September 2010.

IRELAND

615. Speech by Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur at Unveiling of Tagore’s bust at St.Stephen’s Green.

Dublin, October 17, 2011.

Tanaiste,

Friends of India

It is wonderful to be here at this historic venue, to celebrate one of the many historical connections that our two countries share and cherish. I thank the Tanaiste for taking the time from his busy schedule to honour a noted Indian poet-philosopher and for inviting me to join him in this function. The statue of Rabindranath Tagore in St Stephen’s Green that we unveiled today is not only a tribute to him; it is also a monument to India-Ireland friendship.

Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, whose 150th birth Anniversary we mark this year, had unique links with Ireland through his connections with fellow noble laureate William Butler Yeats.

The event today is a companion piece to the inauguration of the Eamon de Valera Road in New Delhi’s Diplomatic Enclave on St Patrick’s Day 2007. De Valera’s friendship with our first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru linked between our two nationalist movements. A part of the Indian Constitution – the Directive Principles of State Policy – is drawn almost entirely from the Irish Constitution. These are only two strands of the India-Ireland association over the 19th and 20th centuries – an association whose intensity and diversity defied the geographical distance between our two countries and our relative sizes.

Today, we are adding new strands to the tapestry of the India-Ireland relationship through interactions in culture, trade, investment, education and tourism. There have been encouraging partnerships between our scientific and research organizations, which promise much more.

The Indian community in Ireland has been a valuable catalyst in the recent transformation of the India-Ireland relationship and has also played an important role in the various Tagore Anniversary events for which our function today is a curtain-raiser.

I believe that the Tagore Anniversary celebrations in Ireland – the launch of Stray Birds, the symposia, films and cultural shows will reignite the fervour of our many shared experiences of the past and reinvigorate our collaboration in the future.

To put it in the words of the Nobel Laureate himself, “Once we dreamt that we were strangers.

We wake up to find that we were dear to each other.”

Thank you

ITALY

616. Meeting between Minister of Commerce and Industry Anand Sharma and Italian Foreign Minister Franco Frattini.

Rome, February, 1, 2011.

Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce & Industry, met the Italian Foreign Minister, Mr. Franco Frattini, in Rome today and discussed bilateral relations and economic cooperation. During the meeting, Shri Sharma raised the issue of simplification of visa procedures for business leaders and professionals. In a significant development, the Foreign Minister of Italy assured Shri Sharma that major simplification will be made in the visa regime for business, students & researchers and official/diplomatic passport holders. He said that, in the new Schengen visa regime, flexibilities provided for the national visa regime will be explored fully to see for long term multiple entry visas for up to 3 years for these categories. He further said that he will also explore the possibility of using the certification from Industry Chambers from both the countries to certify the credentials for business visa.

In the bilateral meeting, Shri Sharma has informed that following the contraction of bilateral trade in 2009 as a result of the global economic downturn, the volume of trade has registered a healthy rebound, growing at over 25% during the first three quarters of 2010. "This is a positive trend and we look forward to working with the Italian side to build up on it. We could work towards a target of doubling our bilateral trade to • 12 billion ($ 17.5 billion) in the next five years", Shri Sharma said.

Shri Sharma mentioned his counterpart that there is good scope for cooperation in sectors such as food processing, renewable energy, infrastructure and high technology and Italian industries can capitalise on their technical expertise and experience with the cost-effective production and the talent pool of human resource available in India to engage in mutually-beneficial partnerships.

During the interaction, Shri Sharma said: "We look forward to high level exchanges between our two countries since we believe these would contribute to deepening our ties and render our engagement comprehensive and forward looking". He further informed that economic and commercial ties are an important facet of our bilateral relations and we want to see these develop to their full potential. "We look forward to Italian companies participating in India's growth story and utilizing more fully the opportunities which are offered", he added.

In a meeting with Mr. Paolo Romani, Italian Minister for Economic Development, in Rome yesterday, Shri Anand Sharma, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry, has emphasised the need for closer cooperation in the field of infrastructure and highlighted 10 areas for furthering the cooperation viz., infrastructure, manufacturing, design & innovation, ICT, leather, textile, agro-processing, pharma, tourism, training and automobiles. Shri Sharma and his counterpart agreed to form a Joint Business Council (JBC) managed by FICCI from India and CONFINDUSTRIA from Italy. The JBC will meet once a year coinciding with the bilateral ministerial meeting.

On cooperation in the leather industry, Shri Sharma emphasized that this is important labour-intensive sector and added that, Italy has already good presence there and India is keenly interested in upgrading technology and skills. Both sides agreed to hold 'Leather Show' at Milan next year. Both the Ministers discussed about the importance of SMEs and agreed that training in this sector is important area and very soon industry chambers of both the countries will organise workshops and seminars on SMEs. Recognising the Italian strength in design, both the Ministers agreed for linkages between Italian Design Institute and National Institute of Design in India.

Shri Sharma will be travelling to Milan and he will be participating in a Workshop on 'Italian Design' tomorrow. Representatives from trade associations, design schools, universities and major companies would be attending. He will also be meeting the President of Lombardia Region, Mr. Formigoni.

India-Italy bilateral trade touched US $ 7.36 billion during January - November 2010 as compared to US $ 6.75 billion in 2009. Italy ranks 12th in FDI approvals during April, 2000 to November, 2010 and total FDI inflows from Italy are US $ 0.92 billion during this period.

LITHUANIA

617. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on ICCR setting up Chair of Indian Studies at MYKOLAS University in Lithuania.

New Delhi, February 1, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and the Mykolas Romeris University, Vilnius, Lithuania signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on January 31st, 2011 for establishment of ICCR’s Chair of Indian Studies at the Institute of Humanities at the University. Ambassador of India to Warsaw, Shri Deepak Vohra signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR along with Prof. Alvydas Pumputis, Rector, Mykolas Romeris University. The signing ceremony was also attended by Ms. Dangute Mikutiene, Chairman, Siemas Group for Inter-Parliamentary Relations with India, Ms. Diana Mickevicience, Director of the Department of America, Asia, Africa & Pacific of the Lithuanian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and other officials of the University.

Under the terms of the agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the Mykolas Romeris University, shall appoint an Indian academician who would be visiting the University for a period of two years. The Indian academician would lecture on issues of India’s economy and politics. The Chair would commence from September 2011 and the MoU would remain valid for four years till 2015.

This Chair is the first ever Chair of Indian Studies in any of the Universities in Lithuania and can be considered as a first step in propagation of India related studies in Lithuania, thereby, fulfilling ICCR’s larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural bonds and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.
Dr. Alvydas Pumputis, Rector of Mykolas Romeris University, Ambassador Deepak Vohra, Ladies and Gentlemen, Friends, LABA DIENNA!

I would like to begin by expressing my deep appreciation to Dr Pumputis and Mykolas Romeris University for giving me this opportunity to share some thoughts about India. I am honoured to be here.

Though relatively young - Mykolas Romeris University has achieved much since its establishment in 2004. It enjoys full membership of the International Association of Universities and the European Association for International Education as well as several other international bodies. It has earned a solid reputation as a modern and dynamic university and we appreciate the initiative it has taken to establish a long term chair of Indian Studies expected to be operational by September 2011.

India is not new to the people of Lithuania. Lithuanian is widely acknowledged to be the Indo-European language grammatically closest to Sanskrit. This implies ancient linguistic and cultural links between our two countries. 'Dievas', the name of God in Lithuanian is very similar to the Sanskrit word 'Deva'. In more recent times, the first direct knowledge about India reached Lithuania through Lithuanian Christian missionaries who first went to India in the 16th century.

I am told that one of the prominent Lithuanian philosophers and ideologists of the 19th-20th centuries national movement, the theosophist Vydunas, was extremely interested in Indian philosophy. He even created his own philosophical system closely based on the Vedanta. More recently, thirteen Hymns of the Rig Veda, one of India's most ancient texts, have been translated into the Lithuanian language by Professor Ricardo Mironas.

The title of the book by Lithuanian Indologist Vytautas Narvila "Distant, yet very close" is indeed an apt description of our two countries and the chair of Indian studies at Mykolas Romeris University will ensure that even in the 21st century, the mutual interest which has drawn our people towards each other over the past continues to grow and strengthen in the future.

Before India gained independence, the father of our nation, Mahatma Gandhi often used to quote our Nobel Laureate poet Rabindranath Tagore and say "I would let the winds of the world blow through the doors and windows of my house but I will not be blown away.”

These words described the spirit of India and Indians then; and they do so even more today. 21st Century is the age of globalization, it is the age of technology, it is the age of communication, and it is the age of change. India is open to all these dynamic forces. Indeed it has embraced them. Yet, it adheres to some unchanging values and attributes.

First and foremost among them is democracy. Probably the most-repeated description of India is that it is the world's largest democracy. You would have heard this on countless occasions. But this very fact is so fundamental to India's existence, progress and its international role that it merits all the attention and reiteration.

The person after whom your University is named was the father of Lithuania's interwar Constitutional Law. Last year we celebrated our own Constitution's sixtieth anniversary. The Constitution is the foundation of our democratic system and has proved to be flexible enough to accommodate the many changes that India has seen over the last six decades. Through constitutional amendments, we have been able to foster changes like the steady empowering of women, creating a grass-roots structure of political democracy by using the traditional village councils called panchayats and providing equity for the most socially disadvantaged.

Another equally vital, defining value of India, preserved and protected by the Constitution, is its multi-religious, multi-ethnic, multi-linguistic character. ‘Unity in Diversity’ is our mantra. It will remain so in the 21st Century.

The other attribute of modern India is the success and sustainability of our economic reforms and growth. Initiated in 1991, these reforms have created the close to two trillion-dollar Indian economy, which is today the second fastest growing major economy in the world. India has demonstrated that it is possible to build democracy and development together. India's GDP growth during the current financial year is expected to touch 9%. India today ranks as the world's fourth-largest economy (in purchasing power parity terms) and is an important player in the Group of 20 (G20) economies.

However, I must point out that the story of an economically vibrant India is not something of recent origin. The wealth of India was the stuff of commercial folklore in the 16th and 17th centuries. It was this wealth that attracted successive waves of traders and conquerors. In the period between 1500 and 1700 when Europe was just waking up to Renaissance and the Industrial Revolution, India accounted for about a quarter of the world's output. Its decline dates from its colonization in the 19th century.
The Indian economy broke free definitively from the low 'Hindu Growth rate' of 3-3.5% after the reforms and liberalization that began in the last decade of the 20th Century. The chief architect of those reforms was Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh, who was then the Finance Minister. He lowered tariffs and other trade barriers, scrapped industrial licensing, reduced tax rates, devalued the rupee, opened India to foreign investment, and rolled back currency controls. Many of these measures were gradual, but they signaled a decisive break with the past. Observers sometimes said that the pace of reforms could have been faster. However, as a democracy, the Government took the time to build a consensus before bringing changes. This has made the process irreversible - slow but sure.

Since the economy was opened up in 1991, India has improved its competitiveness tremendously: there has been a telecommunications revolution, interest rates have come down, capital is plentiful, highways and ports have improved, and real estate markets are becoming transparent. More than 100 Indian companies now have a market capitalization of over a billion dollars, and some of these have become global brands.

In the past two decades, the size of the Indian middle class has quadrupled and 1 percent of the country’s poor have crossed the poverty line every year. At the same time, population growth has slowed to about 1.7 percent today - thereby ensuring that growth has brought larger per capita income gains.

The notable thing about India's rise in the 21st century is not that it is new, but that its path has been unique. Rather than following the classic Asian strategy -- exporting labor-intensive, low-priced manufactured goods to the West -- India has relied on its domestic market more than exports, consumption more than investment, services more than industry, and high-tech more than low-skilled manufacturing. In sum, it has not been the typical pattern of economic growth, from agrarian-to-industrialized-to-services economy. Instead, India's economic development has been driven by a technologically-advanced services sector, innovation, education and free markets. This approach has meant that the Indian economy has shown a degree of stability that is as impressive as the rate of its expansion.

Another remarkable feature is that the entrepreneur is clearly at the centre of India's success story. Indian entrepreneurs claim that they are harder because they have had to fight not only their competitors but also the state regulations of early years!

A recent development is the new confidence of Indian manufacturing. The world's lowest cost car was conceptualized, engineered and manufactured in India. So, while services still grow faster than industry and account for about 54% of the output, manufacturing is getting only better - in volume and in sophistication.

Looking ahead, there are strong grounds for optimism about India's economic prosperity in the long-term. India's financial institutions are strong and its tradition of adherence to the rule of law will attract more economic activity in the future. India's banking system has proven itself to be a model of stability during the recent global recession.

What's more, while it is an ancient civilization, India today is a predominantly young country. One of the biggest advantages that India enjoys is what has been termed the "Demographic Dividend,' as it continues its march into the 21st century. Half of India's population is under 25 years old. Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, speaking of the dawn of the 'Indian Century,' said that 'it is in India's superb human capital that our advantage lies.' By 2020, 47% of Indians will be between 15 and 59 years. Astoundingly, over the next two decades, India will add about a quarter of a billion workers to its labor force - a figure that nearly approximates the entire current US population. As a result, by 2020 India will provide 25 percent of the global workforce - and have a huge domestic consumption market. India's edge is even more apparent when compared to long-term demographic trends under way in today's major global powers, most of which will experience significant declines in their working-age populations.

Out of the Fortune 500 companies, 125 now have research and development bases in India -- a testament to the quality of India's human capital.

However, India is conscious that the growth we have achieved thus far is not enough. To abolish poverty in India and to meet our development needs, we need to keep our economy growing at 8-10% every year for the next 20 years. As the literacy levels of our largely young population go up, we will have to ensure that their employment needs are also met which means that we require a rapidly expanding economy and the infrastructural growth of our cities and manufacturing sectors, so that we can reap the advantage of this demographic dividend for our economic growth.

I hope I have given you a sense of India in the 21st Century. Let me conclude with a brief word about the priorities of our foreign policy in this century. The foremost goal of our foreign policy is to provide a peaceful and secure environment for our continued growth. At the same time, we are committed to ensuring that the international institutions that are responsible for global peace, security, and socio-economic development, in which India participates willingly and substantially, mirror the democratic ethos that we all cherish.

Our experience of working within the United Nations since its inception has convinced us that there is urgent need to reform the United Nations, especially its Security Council, which is responsible for international peace and security. The current composition of the Security Council does not, in the view of the majority of the member-countries of the United Nations, reflect the global realities of the 21st century. India aspires to become a permanent member of the reformed UN Security Council, so that it can contribute most effectively to our common objective of preserving international peace and security.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Today, many say that the centre of gravity of the global economy has shifted to Asia in the 21st Century and have begun to call it "Asia's Century". Just a decade into the century, this may be a little premature. However, what is beyond any doubt is that it is a Century of Interdependence; a time where fortunes of all nations are linked together. In this inter-connected age, India stands totally committed to moving towards the imperatives of peace and inclusive development, within and outside its boundaries so that we can together create a safer and more prosperous world for all.

Thank you

New Delhi, July 26, 2011.

The Government of India today signed an Agreement and Protocol for Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with respect to Taxes on Income and on Capital (DTAA) with Government of Lithuania. The Agreement and the Protocol were signed by Shri Prakash Chandra, Chairman, Central Board of Direct Taxes, on behalf of the Government of India and Mr. Petras Simeliunas, Ambassador, Republic of Lithuania to India, on behalf of the Government of Lithuania. Lithuania is the first Baltic country with which DTAA has been signed by India.

The DTAA provides that business profits will be taxable in the source state if the activities of an enterprise constitute a permanent establishment (PE) in the source state. The Agreement provides for fixed place PE, building site, construction & installation PE, service PE, Off-shore exploration / exploitation PE and agency PE.
The Agreement incorporate para 2 in Article concerning Associated Enterprises. This would enhance recourse to Mutual Agreement Procedure to relieve double taxation in cases involving transfer pricing adjustments.

Dividends, interest and royalties & fees for technical services income will be taxed both in the country of residence and in the country of source. The low level of withholding rates of taxation for dividend (5% & 15%), interest (10%) and royalties & fees for technical services (10%) will promote greater investments, flow of technology and technical services between the two countries.

The Agreement further incorporates provisions for effective exchange of information between tax authorities of the two countries in line with latest international standard, including exchange of banking information and supplying of information without recourse to domestic interest. Further, the Agreement provides for sharing of information to other agencies with the consent of supplying state.

The Agreement also has an article on assistance in collection of taxes. This article also includes provision for taking measures of conservancy. The Agreement incorporates anti-abuse (limitation of benefits) provisions to ensure that the benefits of the Agreement are availed of by the genuine residents of the two countries.

The Agreement will provide tax stability to the residents of India and Lithuania and will facilitate mutual economic cooperation between the two countries. It will also stimulate the flow of investment, technology and services between India and Lithuania.

620. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the official visit of Foreign Minister of Netherlands.

New Delhi, July 5, 2011.

At the invitation of External Affairs Minister (EAM), Minister of Foreign Affairs of Netherlands, Prof. Dr. Uri Rosenthal, is on an official visit to India from 4th to 6th July 2011.

A founding member of EU and NATO, Netherlands is one of the most developed countries and the 16th largest economy globally. The Hague has arguably come to be regarded as the legal capital of the world. With over Euro 5 billion in bilateral trade which is in India’s favour, Netherlands is among India’s key economic partners. People of Indian origin comprise more than 1% of the country’s population.

EAM had extensive discussions on a wide range of bilateral, regional and international issues with his Dutch counterpart. It was noted that both countries shared a number of common interests and values. Prof. Dr. Rosenthal hailed India as the oldest democracy of Asia. The sides agreed to redouble efforts to enhance trade and economic ties. Prof. Dr. Rosenthal welcomed the decision of SBI to open a branch in Netherlands. EAM conveyed that India would be setting up an Indian Cultural Centre in Netherlands in the near future.

Prof. Dr. Rosenthal expressed Netherlands’ support for India’s permanent membership in an expanded UN Security Council, besides also endorsing efforts of G4 towards the said objective.

The Ministers exchanged views on the situation in Afghanistan and Pakistan, West Asia and North African region, global financial architecture as well as UN reforms. Prof. Dr. Rosenthal invited EAM to pay an official visit to Netherlands at a mutually convenient early date which was accepted with pleasure.

NORWAY

New Delhi, July 2011.

We are shocked and saddened by the attacks in Oslo and Utoya on 22 July 2011, which have led to loss of so many innocent lives and injuries to scores other. We condemn these senseless acts of violence. The government and people of India stand with the people and the Government of Norway at this tragic juncture.

***************

In a separate message the Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh too condemned this ghastly act:

The Prime Minister has condemned the Oslo violence saying that it was a grim reminder of the threat that extremist violence posed to open and democratic societies. In a letter to Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg of Norway Dr. Manmohan Singh condoled the loss of lives in the violence and said there was a need for all to unite in combating all forms of extremism.

622. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the ICCR establishing a Tamil Chair at the Institute of Oriental Philology, Jagielonian University, Crakow, Poland.

New Delhi, May 18, 2011.

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and Institute of Oriental Philology, Jagielonian University, Crakow, Poland signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on May 17th, 2011 for establishment of ICCR’s Long-Term Tamil Chair in the University. Ambassador of India to Poland, Shri Deepak Vohra signed the MoU on behalf of ICCR alongwith Prof. Michal du Vall, Vice Rector of Human Resources & Financial Management, Jagielonian University.

Under the terms of agreement, ICCR, in consultation with the University, shall appoint a suitable Indian academician as Visiting Professor of Tamil to hold the Tamil Chair for a period of two years. During the period, the Visiting Professor would contribute to the academic life of the University by engaging in teaching, research and study of Tamil language. The Chair would commence from September 2011 and the MoU will remain valid for 4 academic years till 2015.

Jagielonian University is the second oldest university to be founded in Central Europe and has an active Institute of Oriental Philology. Among various departments of the institute, Indology has the longest history of existence. Lectures in Sanskrit were started in the University in the sixties of the 19th Century and soon in 1893 a regular Chair for Sanskrit was established here. The modern Department of Indology offers education in civilizations, cultures and languages including Sanskrit and Hindi. This makes the Institute of Philology, an ideal place to institute ICCR’s Tamil Chair.

ICCR has two Chairs in Poland- one on Hindi and another on Tamil in Warsaw University. This Chair is ICCR’s third Chair in Poland. Establishment of this Chair is another major step in propagation of Indian languages in Poland as well as in Central Europe and thereby fulfilling ICCR’s larger mandate of fostering and strengthening academic and cultural links and towards enhancing knowledge and awareness about India.
The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Poland, H.E. Mr. Radoslaw Sikroski, is on an official visit to India from 11-12 July 2011. This is his first visit to a country outside Europe after Poland assumed Presidency of EU on 1st July, 2011. It became a member of EU in 2004 and of NATO in 1999.

Poland's relations with India are rooted in history and have traditionally been characterized by goodwill and cooperation. Last September, the Prime Minister of Poland, H.E. Donald Tusk, had paid a highly successful visit to India, which had re-energized the bilateral ties.

India and Poland enjoy a multifaceted mutually beneficial relationship and have a similarity of outlook on a host of matters of common interest. Poland has consistently supported India's aspirations for permanent membership of UNSC. She also endorsed our candidature for the non-permanent seat at UNSC for 2011-2012.

EAM congratulated Foreign Minister Sikorski on Poland's taking over the Presidency of the EU on July 1, 2011, and observed that Poland's active role in EU had added a valuable dimension to the bilateral ties.

EAM had in depth discussions on bilateral, regional and international issues with his Polish counterpart. It was agreed that an Agreement for visa exemption for diplomatic passport holder would be concluded at the earliest. Efforts would be made to speed up negotiations of all other pending agreements as well.

Relations between India and Poland encompass cooperation in areas like Trade and Investment, Energy, Science & Technology, Culture, Security and Defence. The two Ministers agreed to expand and deepen the broad-based bilateral cooperation including people-to-people exchanges.

India's exports to Poland increased 40 % to cross $ one billion in 2010 taking bilateral trade to an all time high of $ 1.4 billion. During the visit of Prime Minister Tusk in September 2010, both sides had agreed to double the trade volume by 2014, a target which seems to be well within sight. Over 20 Indian companies have already invested more than USD 2.25 billion in Poland in a number of sectors. Foreign Minister Sikorski stated that Poland was keen on enhancing its investment in India and welcomed Indian businessmen and skilled workers to Poland.
Views were also exchanged on Counter Terrorism as well as on the situation in Afghanistan, Pakistan, Central Asia, West Asia and North Africa and the EU.

Foreign Minister Radoslaw Sikroski invited EAM to pay a visit to Poland at an early mutually convenient date. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

624. Message of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Russian President Dimitry A. Medvedev condemning terrorist attack at Moscow Airport.

New Delhi, January 25, 2011.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, in a message today to the President of the Russian Federation H.E. Dimitry A. Medvedev, expressed his deep anguish and condemnation of the terrorist attack at Moscow's Domodedovo Airport*.

He conveyed his condolences at the loss of lives in the tragic incident. PM observed that 'Terrorism is a crime against humanity for which there can never be any justification'. He also stressed that "India and Russia must continue to work together to combat the evil forces of violence and extremism."

* It was a suicide attack at Domodedovo airport in which 35 people were killed and 180 wounded.

New Delhi, October 5, 2011.

In a spirit of cooperation and understanding, India and Russia held their annual meeting to review the defence ties in Moscow on Tuesday (04 Oct 2011) and expressed ‘readiness to take all necessary measures to further expand the cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis’.

In a Protocol signed after the Eleventh meeting of the India-Russia Inter-governmental Commission on Military Technical, co-chaired by the Defence Minister Shri AK Antony and his Russian counterpart Mr AE Serdyukov, the two sides noted with satisfaction that that during the period under review various diligent steps have been taken ‘to deepen interaction in the development of defence technologies, modernization of military equipment and joint manufacture of military-purpose products’.

‘Such cooperation involves the strengthening of interactions between the Armed Forces, defense industry enterprises and research agencies of the two countries’, the Protocol noted.

Visibly happy at the outcome, Shri Antony told a group of Indian journalists shortly after the talks: “Distinct improvements have taken place in the pace of progress of many critical projects in the last one year. We value our friendship a great deal. Together we would like to consolidate our relationship and take it forward”.

At the talks, the Indian delegation included the Defence Secretary Shri Shashikant Sharma, Secretary Defence Production Shri Shekhar Aggarwal, Indian Ambassador Shri Ajai Malhotra, Lt Gen MS Buttar, Air Marshal RK Sharma, Vice Admiral NN Kumar, Chief Controller of Research & Development of DRDO Dr. Avinash Chander, CMD Hindustan Aeronautics Limited Shri Ashok Nayak and DG Acquisition Shri Vivek Rae.

Speaking at the meeting, Shri Antony said India-Russia defence relationship has grown both in content and scope over the years. He said India highly values the time tested, strong and multi-faceted relationship with Russia.

‘There is a strong impulse, both at the level of the Government and among the people of India to further strengthen our special strategic partnership which is based on mutual trust and complimentarity of interests. The world in general and our region in particular, are witnessing significant developments which have an impact on regional and global security. In the evolving scenario, the special strategic partnership between our two countries assumes even greater significance. Both our countries must continue to strengthen our joint efforts to address these challenges.

Listing some of the projects where both sides have put in years of effort to bring success, Shri Antony said, ‘The project for joint development and production of the Fifth Generation Fighter Aircraft, BrahMos missile system, licensed production in India of T-90 tanks and SU-30 MKI aircraft are proud examples of our strong relationship. We are sure that the success of these projects would be models for the implementation of several other projects of mutual interest’, he said.

Referring to planned delivery of Aircraft Carrier INS Vikramaditya, Shri Antony said, ‘We are keenly awaiting the induction of the Aircraft Carrier into the Indian Navy. This project has attracted considerable public attention in India. We hope that the induction will take place, on schedule, by end 2012. We also hope that all activities on the MiG-29K are completed to achieve synchronization with the aircraft carrier’.

Nevertheless, Shri Antony drew the attention of the Russian side to the vexing issue of delayed export clearances for vital repair equipment for already contracted weapons systems. This has been affecting supplies of defence equipment and spares.

The Russian side assured the Indian side that the matter was receiving attention at highest levels in the Russian Government and efforts would made to institutionalize measures to avoid such delays in future.

Shri Antony expressed India’s concern at the tardy progress made in the design and development of the Multi-Role Transport Aircraft (MTA). The two sides agreed to accelerate the progress of this Project and they would be meeting later this month.

With regard to the Fifth Generation Fighter Aircraft (FGFA), being jointly designed and developed by India and Russia, both sides noted that the first stage of the preliminary design contract has been successfully completed and the second stage of the PD Contract is to be finalised before September, 2012. The training programme for the Indian engineers covering nearly 20 courses was completed in July, 2011. Both sides agreed to continue discussions for finalization of the R&D contract as per the agreed time lines of the general contract signed in December, 2008.
In his address, the Russian Defence Minister Mr Serdyukov described India-Russia defence tie as a ‘stable and promising relationship’. During the discussion, the Russian side spoke about their views on offsets. The Indian side informed that the Indian offset guidelines are presently under revision.

Regional security situation was also discussed by the two sides.

Mr Serdyukov hosted a banquet in honour of the visiting Indian delegation.

Shri Antony returns home tonight.

Media interaction of External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna after his meeting with the Russian Foreign Minister.

Moscow, November 16, 2011.

As Foreign Minister Lavrov has said, we have just completed detailed talks that have covered the preparations for the forthcoming Annual Summit on December 16. These issues pertain to our extensive bilateral cooperation program, and international issues that are of common concern to India and Russia.

I am happy with the preparations that have been done for the forthcoming
Summit meeting between Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and President
Medvedev. A very detailed agenda has been finalized. This will be the 12th Annual Summit since the establishment of our Strategic Partnership in 2000. It is satisfying that the agenda finalized for the Summit reflects the Special and Privileged nature of our strategic partnership.

We discussed several issues pertaining to our bilateral cooperation program.
Since the declaration of our Strategic Partnership a little over a decade ago, India-Russia cooperation has undergone a qualitative change in almost all areas of our interaction, and particularly the main areas such defense, space and nuclear energy. Both sides are currently making efforts to ensure that our cooperation in trade and investment cooperation increases both quantitatively and qualitatively, so that we are able to meet the target of US$ 20 billion by 2015. I will be discussing this issue in much greater detail tomorrow, in the meeting of the India Russia Inter Governmental Commission that H.E Deputy Prime Minister Sergei Ivanov and I co-chair.
Foreign Minister Lavrov and I also discussed the international situation, particularly the situation in Afghanistan, developments in the Middle East and North Africa, the Iran nuclear issue, developments in the Asia Pacific region, including the recently concluded APEC and EAS Summits. India and Russia share similar perceptions on such issues. We will continue to consult on them in the future, both bilaterally and in multilateral fora, such as the SCO, EAS, BRICS and at the United Nations General Assembly and UN Security Council.

Thank You.

628. Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai on Prime Minister’s visit to Russia.

New Delhi, December 14, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good evening and welcome. Nice to see a full house!

Foreign Secretary is here to brief you about the forthcoming visit of the Prime Minister of India to Russia. We also have with us Mr. Ajay Bisaria, Joint Secretary (Eurasia), who is to the right of Foreign Secretary. I have also great pleasure in introducing my good friend and successor Mr. Akbaruddin, who is to my left. I would like to invite the Foreign Secretary to make an opening statement. Thereafter he will be happy to take your questions.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Good evening.

As you are aware, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh will be embarking on a two-day visit to Moscow tomorrow for the 12th Annual Summit meeting with the leadership of the Russian Federation. The programme is that he would have a restricted meeting followed by delegation-level talks with President Medvedev on the 16th. President Medvedev would also be hosting a luncheon banquet in honour of PM. Separately the two leaders would have a joint interaction with Indian and Russian CEOs. Thereafter, PM would also be meeting with Prime Minister Vladimir Putin.

Prime Minister will be accompanied by the National Security Adviser, the Principal Secretary to Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary and senior officials, besides a large media contingent. Several captains of trade and industry will be travelling separately to Moscow to participate in the CEOs meeting, which would be co-chaired on the Indian side by Shri Ravi Kant, Vice-Chairman and Managing Director of Tata Motors, and on the Russian side by Mr. V.P. Evtushenkov, Chairman of AFK Sistema.

This will be PM's fourth Annual Summit meeting with President Medvedev since the latter assumed the Presidency in 2008. Reflective of our time-tested and multifaceted relations, India and Russia had agreed on holding Annual Summit meetings in 2000, during the visit of then President Putin, when we had also decided to elevate our ties to the level of Strategic Partnership. Russia and now Japan are the only two of our partners with whom we have successfully institutionalized the practice of Annual Summits.

Efforts have been underway on both sides to not only maintain the momentum, but to infuse greater content in our robust bilateral ties. In the last few months, bilateral visits and talks have taken place at the level of our Home, Defense, Commerce, Health, Tourism, Steel and Power Ministers. Last month the External Affairs Minister Shri S.M. Krishna led a delegation to Moscow for the Inter-Governmental Commission Meeting to prepare for the forthcoming Summit.

India and Russia enjoy a diversified partnership spanning the fields of defence, nuclear energy, hydrocarbons, space, science and technology, education, trade and culture. It is precisely for these reasons that last year we elevated our Strategic Partnership to a 'special and privileged status.' Let me just elaborate on some of the features.

Russia is a key partner in our quest for energy security. We have excellent cooperation in the field of hydrocarbons, renewable and civil nuclear energy. ONGC Videsh Limited has completed a decade of profitable investment in the Sakhalin-I project. Some long-term LNG supply contracts have been signed in recent months between companies of both sides.

The March 2010 Inter-Governmental Agreement lays down the broad roadmap for our partnership in the area of civil nuclear energy. Construction of Kudankulam 1 and 2 nuclear power plants units are nearing completion with Russian technology. We are also in discussion on the techno-commercial aspects of Units 3 and 4 of Kudankulam. In June, we have signed an MoU with Russia on setting up of the Global Centre for Nuclear Energy Partnership, which as you know will be in Haryana, to undertake advanced studies in the field of nuclear research along with our other partners.

Our defence cooperation has for long been a vital facet of our relationship. We have moved well beyond a buyer-seller relationship to co-production through transfer of technologies.
We are also quite pleased with our cooperation in the space sector. In April we launched the Youthsat from Sriharikota. The satellite is the fruit of efforts put in by a group of Indian and Russian university students. Work is underway on the Chandrayan-2 mission and manned space flight programmes, as well as adoption and applications of GLONASS technologies.

Our trade and economic ties are growing but are still way below their actual potential. Bilateral trade is expected to be around US$ 9 billion this year. We have set a target of US$ 20 billion by 2015 and have identified the thrust sectors including pharmaceuticals, information technology, food products and gems and jewelry to help attain the target, at least from the point of our exports. We also find good prospects for cooperation in the mining and fertilizers sectors. It is for this reason that the CEOs meeting takes on a particular importance.

India and Russia enjoy a similarity of outlook on a host of regional and international issues. We have welcomed Russia’s inclusion in the East Asia Summit process and its initiatives on the global fight against piracy and terrorism. Our common outlook on the menace of terrorism has been underlined on several occasions, including through the Moscow Declaration on International Terrorism way back in November, 2001. The issue of terrorism and the situation in our respective neighborhoods are likely to figure in the upcoming Summit discussions.

Russia and India have been working well together in forums like the G20, BRICS and the UN. India would chair the BRICS in 2012 and we would be hosting the Summit in March. The Summit level discussions would seek to further strengthen bilateral consultation and coordination in regard to our participation in such international fora.

There is a strong national consensus in our country on having the closest of ties with Russia. And that is also what makes our relations with Russia ‘special and privileged’. A number of bilateral documents are likely to be signed during the visit. There will be a Joint Declaration issue during PM’s stay in Moscow reflecting the wide canvas of our cooperation and our common world view.

Thank you.

Question: Mr. Mathai, Mr. Putin is in a spot of bother at the moment. Is that likely to cast any shadow on the bilateral talks between the Indian Prime Minister and the Russian leadership?

Foreign Secretary: The Prime Minister is scheduled to meet Prime Minister Putin in the afternoon of the 16th. What is happening within Russia is strictly their internal affair. We do not expect any impact on the visit or on our bilateral discussions.
Question: Agreement on unit 3 and 4 of Kudankulam was to be signed. Has it been signed?

Foreign Secretary: The discussions are still going on. We will take a call on that. Question: A follow-up to that question. When will the negotiations for reactors 3 and 4 of the Kudankulam project be completed?

Foreign Secretary: The discussions, as I said, are ongoing. So, I cannot put a time frame on it.

Question: Foreign Secretary, I have a question relating to Iran and India’s oil purchases. There has been some speculation that the current payment system via Turkey may come to an end and Russia is a possible alternative. Is that something that could be discussed?

Foreign Secretary: We are continuing our oil purchases from Iran and we are looking at appropriate mechanisms for dealing with the payment with all possible avenues.

Question: Is it because the Turkish mechanism may well be coming to an end?

Foreign Secretary: I think that is a matter of speculation, I would not like to comment on it. As of now, this is a mechanism which is working.

Question: So, you are saying that you are looking at alternative mechanisms also apart from the current Turkey arrangement?

Foreign Secretary: We are looking at all appropriate mechanisms for conducting our trade with Iran.

Question: Last time Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and our Russian leaders signed one good agreement on culture here. Today you talked about possible meetings with CEOs and meetings with Prime Minister and President. What would be done? Will there be any meetings with cultural representatives of Russian Government?

Foreign Secretary: I think the subject of culture is certainly very important in our bilateral relations. During the Prime Minister’s talks with the President, certainly our cultural relations will be one of those areas which are covered. We do intend to have a celebration. I think it is called the Year of Russian Culture. I will ask the Joint Secretary to give you the details. But we are certainly working on a specific manifestation of Russian culture in India.

Joint Secretary (ERS) (Shri Ajay Bisaria): Yes, as Foreign Secretary said, culture is a very important component of the bilateral relationship. We already have had Year of India in Russia this year as also the celebrations of the 150th year of Tagore’s birth. Next year we plan to have a Year of Russia in India. We are planning various cultural events under that forum. We are also going to celebrate 65 years of diplomatic relations between our countries. Diplomatic relations, as you know, were set up in 1947. So, we will have a series of events for that as well.

Question: Sir, I would like to ask you about the Russian proposal for ENR facilities on the Russian soil. How do you see that proposal? And Russia has said no to the nuclear liability clause for Kudankulam 1 and 2. Could you explain the stated position of the MEA on this? And for 3 and 4, how is it going to go ahead?

Foreign Secretary: Cooperation in the nuclear field is one of the key pillars of our strategic partnership, as I said, and this has been ongoing for several decades. Russia played a key role in supporting the September 2008 NSG decision to exempt civilian nuclear cooperation with India from its guidelines. Russia supports Indian membership of the NSG and other existing global nonproliferation regimes. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Russia had issued a statement on July 14 clarifying that the NSG guidelines would in no way reverse the Russian commitments towards supporting India’s civilian nuclear agenda. And as you are aware, in March 2010 we had concluded an Inter-Government Agreement for broad-based cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy that envisages full civilian nuclear cooperation which includes a further agreement on ENR and such issues. As regards the nuclear liability, I am not aware that there has been any specific discussion but we are open to discussions with all our partners in regard to the liability law.

Question: Sir, the question of the development in North Africa and the West Asian region, BRICS countries have been under tremendous pressure to change their position like the UN Security Council. Will this come under discussion with Russia? Will you have any kind of review? What has developed in the Arab world is a matter of concern now with the spread of the radical Islam in these regions. Do you see it as a topic that the Prime Minister will be taking up with the Russian leadership?

Foreign Secretary: As I said, the situation in our respective regions would be of course one of the important focus areas of our discussions. Beyond that certainly I think the situation in West Asia and North Africa would also be one of the subjects of close discussion. You are correct that in Moscow on November 24th I think there was a meeting of the BRICS countries at the Deputy Foreign Ministers level, during which there was a particular discussion on the situation in West Asia. Certainly the situation is evolving and given that the situation in the beginning of November when we met or even in the middle of November is not exactly the same today in all the countries. This is a matter which will be reviewed. As you are aware, there have been some important developments in Yemen and in other countries. Certainly the entire region would be discussed when our two leaders meet.

Question: I would like to know if the regional situation especially the Afghanistan and Pakistan situation will be a matter of discussion on this visit. Also I would like to know if your Ministry is aware of the possibility that the Taliban open an office in Qatar in the near future and if this possibility is welcome for India?

Foreign Secretary: Certainly we would be discussing the situation in Afghanistan and Pakistan, particularly the prospects in Afghanistan. As you are aware, we have both participated in the conferences in Bonn and Istanbul. We have had a good dialogue with our Russian partners during those conferences. And certainly we would expect discussions to continue. Any development that affects the peace and stability in the region, and as you are aware this region and Central Asia is what is the geographical bridge between Russia and India, certainly would be an area of discussion.

As to your second question, we have also seen these media reports. There had been some such speculative reports even a little earlier. In fact, when we had been attending these international conferences, this is one of the subjects that used to be a matter of some speculation. As far as India is concerned, we have stated on every occasion that we support an Afghan-led, an Afghan-owned, and an inclusive peace process that clearly adheres to the redlines spelt out by the Government of Afghanistan with regard to its interaction with the international community. So, the question of this office and what role it could play has to be seen in the context of this principle. The redlines, if I may say, were reiterated again at the recently concluded Bonn Conference. They are that whatever talks take place must be on the basis that there is an acceptance of the Afghan Constitution, that the parties involved would cut all links with international terrorism, that there would be a specific abjuring of violence as the precondition, and that the parties are committed to a sovereign, stable and united Afghanistan. So, that is our response to this.

Question: Dr. Manmohan Singh being the leader of the largest democracy of the world, will he be congratulating when he will be meeting with the Russian leaders for their accomplishing of the recent Duma elections?

Foreign Secretary: His interaction first is with the President of Russia. Certainly in his discussions the fact that the elections have been concluded would be noted.

Question: There is a point of view in Russia and they say in the Russian President. The attitudes between two of our countries in defence is good and strong. But the attitudes in the sphere of economy are not so active. As far as I know, the Indian Government also thinks about this problem. So, will this question be discussed during the meeting? Will any agreements be signed to promote Indian companies to be more active in Russian market?

Foreign Secretary: I think we share the view that, as I said in my statement, the commercial and economic relations between our two countries are in fact far below their potential. Indian companies are now I think more and more conscious that the Russian and the CIS markets do hold out very big potential for them. I would say as a background to this, if you look at the level of interaction which has taken place at the St. Petersburg International Forum in June, and there was a business delegation which participated in the India-Russia Trade and Investment Forum in November. These are annual events but they are increasingly becoming more and more positive, more and more content-oriented.

I understand from those who have visited Moscow that you see now a bigger presence of Indian pharmaceutical companies in Russia. A couple of Indian banks have now established their presence – the Canara Bank, the SBI and I understand the ICICI Bank. A new and more simplified visa regime has come into force. It took effect actually from the 1st of December. I think now this should make the travel of our business people much more easy. We are also studying the possibility of setting up a Joint Investment Fund between the two countries. We hope that the private enterprises would take the right decisions once they see the opportunities. As far as the Government is concerned, we are discussing a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA). According to the news that we have heard, December 16, the day we are there, is perhaps going to be the day Russia joins the WTO. Maybe this is what we have heard in the news and this is anticipated. As I said, it is not our issue but this is what we have heard. Once that development is completed, then the Joint Study Group between India and Russia on the CECA would be able to make very concrete progress on how to take our bilateral economic and commercial relations forward. As to the agreements, what is being signed between the two Governments are broadly in the field of health and energy, and science and technology. But the companies themselves do have in mind the conclusion of some agreements. I do not have the specific details with me but those can be easily provided to you.

Question: Sir, would not India like the facility for reprocessing spent fuel to be in India and not in Russia as the Russians seem to be suggesting for now? Secondly, can you clarify whether Kudankulam 3 and 4 will be covered under the nuclear liability law.

Foreign Secretary: The issue of what the modalities for implementing our agreement which provides for ENR facilities is a matter on which the Department of Atomic Energy is actively engaged. They would have to come to a decision as to the exact modalities. On Kudankulam 3 and 4, the discussions, as I said, are at a very advance stage. The issues will be discussed directly between NPCIL and its counterpart, and also between the Department of Atomic Energy and its Russian counterpart.

Question: The Russian Ambassador is saying that we do not need a new one for 3 and 4, that 1 and 2 is already in existence.

Foreign Secretary: This will be examined by the Department but 1 and 2 came up in a particular timeframe. Now there is an existing law. So, the Experts Committees will look at it and then come to a conclusion.

Question: Foreign Secretary, the US is not in favour of the American troops being in Afghanistan beyond 2014 or having a permanent base there. Could you tell us what is the Indian position?

Foreign Secretary: The Indian position is that it is for Afghanistan to decide its own priorities. As far as we are concerned, any activity by the international community which helps in the process of stability and the reconstruction of Afghanistan in an atmosphere of security is helpful. But it is for Afghanistan to work out the kind of arrangements it wishes with the international community.

Question: Foreign Secretary, you just suggested that energy would be an important component of the talks. If you can tell us a little bit about Imperial Energy that seems to be a long-standing problem between ONGC and the Russians over this particular company and the ONGC would like the tax that has been taken to be given back to them. Can you tell us a little bit about that? Also, could you tell us a little bit about the CEOs Council that you said is meeting, and what are the prospects on that front?

Foreign Secretary: The prospects I was talking about in the field of energy are broadly in hydrocarbons, in renewables and in nuclear. We have already dealt with nuclear. In renewables we have an ongoing set of cooperations mainly under science and technology. But as far as the hydrocarbons are concerned, the OVL is keen to get involved in the development of Sakhalin-III. They are in discussions with Rosneft for this. OVL is also in talks with another company called Novatek to access gas deposits in the Yamal Peninsula in the North Eastern Siberian region. Petronet LNG has entered into contracts with subsidiaries of Gazprom for supplies of LNG from 20, 15, 16. The issue of Imperial’s tax liabilities is a matter which continues to be under discussion. As far as I know, the matter has not been finally settled yet but it will continue to be raised and discussed with the Russian side. On the CEOs forum, you could add some details.
Joint Secretary (ERS): As Foreign Secretary said, the Imperial Energy issue is subject of discussion for a while now and this will continue to be discussed in terms of stability of fiscal regimes in Russia and this is an issue that continues to be raised even at the Annual Summit level. As for the meeting of the CEOs, this is what we are calling India-Russia CEOs meet. On the Indian side it will be co-chaired by Mr. Ravi Kant, the MD and Vice-Chairman of the Tata Motors and on the Russian side by Mr. Evtushenkov. This is a group of about ten Chairmen of companies on each side and we would of course expect them to have an agenda and make recommendations on improving the bilateral relationship. The Foreign Secretary has already gone into the number of ideas that are on the table. One of the issues that this CEOs meet will talk about is the Joint Investment Fund. But there are other issues like connectivity and cooperation between regions that we hope this meeting would discuss and then make recommendations to the Government.

Question: Mr. Mathai, questions are being raised about Indian nuclear energy programme, about the go-slow and the decision paralysis. Say for example French are being kept on the wait in Jaitapur, and the Russians have been kept on the wait in Kudankulam 3 and 4. It is a case of the witness being more proactive than the prosecution as they say. Your comments please?

Foreign Secretary: The witness being more proactive than the prosecution! Meaning MEA being more active than DAE? What exactly do you mean? Question: What I mean is that rather than India, the French and the Russians are more proactive in helping us but we are not that much forthcoming because of whatever reasons as I say go-slow or decision paralysis.

Foreign Secretary: As far as we are concerned, the launching of these nuclear projects is a matter which would require a very intensive, very detailed discussions on a number of parameters. As far as I am aware, the head of the CEA, that is the French Atomic Energy Commission, Mr. Ligo was here in the month of November and he went back reasonably satisfied with the discussions he had with his counterparts both in terms of the nuclear energy cooperation with the DAE as well as on the level of progress achieved between Areva and NPCIL in regard to the Jaitapur project.

In regard to Kudankulam, as I said, the discussions are at an advanced stage and there are prospects for taking them forward fairly soon. I do not think this is a case where it would be appropriate to say that the witness is moving faster than the prosecution.

Question: Could you throw some light on the MoUs in the defence that may be signed?

Foreign Secretary: On the 16th of December I will surely do that.
Question: Continuing with that question on Kudankulam, there have been reports saying that the ongoing protests are stalling the signing of a final agreement on Kudankulam 3 and 4. Is that right?

Foreign Secretary: No, that is not right. But what I would like you to refer to is a statement, because one needs to understand Kudankulam in its context. This is from an interview which PM has given to the Russian media.

I quote, “The protests in Kudankulam reflect the concern among people about the safety of nuclear energy. People are also worried that such plants should not affect their livelihood and environment. The Government takes these concerns seriously. We have set up an independent group of experts to respond to all legitimate and genuine concerns and fears of the local people. If we have to develop nuclear energy in the country, it is essential that it is done with the support of the people. In India we are giving the highest priority to nuclear safety. I know that the Russian leadership also has the same priority, and has taken several initiatives including in the international arena which we welcome. As far as the India-Russia cooperation in the nuclear field is concerned, this will continue and we will fulfil our commitments. India has always regarded Russia as a partner who was with us in times of difficulty and even when there were restrictions on nuclear commerce with India. I wish to thank all the Russian experts who are working with us in the Kudankulam project.” I think that covers the issue rather better than I could.

Question: Returning to the subject of Iran, the United States and the EU are preparing to impose tough sanctions against Iran. Have the representatives or diplomats from those countries and the regions approached India about these preparations, informed India of the plans, or requested that India cooperate with them in some way?

Foreign Secretary: I would just like to say that the subject we are conscious, we abide by all sanctions which are being endorsed by the United Nations. As far as sanctions by individual countries, we take note of what is being planned. We continue to construct our relations with Iran according to what is best for us. We have certainly had occasion to discuss with our foreign interlocutors. The importance we attach to our energy security, the fact that a very large amount of India’s oil imports do emanate from Iran and in fact that in the current energy market it is not easy to consider that India can sort of manage without Iranian oil. Iranian oil is very important to India. So, I think that continues to be a very important issue for us. That is why we had sought the mechanisms for payments so that we continue our trade with Iran.

Question: Mr. Secretary, Defence Minister Anthony was in Russia a few weeks back. Will there be any new arms deals or purchases announced during the Prime Minister’s visit? And also will there be any progress on the delayed delivery of aircraft carrier?

Foreign Secretary: All the defence projects, as you said, were discussed intensively when the Raksha Mantri visited Russia in October. Whatever is being planned between the two countries, as I said, will be announced on the 16th of December and you will get all the answers you are looking for.

Question: Sir, do you have anything to say with regard to the Gorshkov deal? And are there any major agreements going to be signed during the visit?

Foreign Secretary: All I am aware of is that during the Raksha Mantri’s visit, and you were part of his delegation, we were told that matters are on track, whatever has been agreed to between our two Governments will continue, and deliveries will be made as per schedule.

Question: Any major agreements that are going to be signed?

Foreign Secretary: On the 16th of December I will let you know.

Question: At least the fields you can mention.

Foreign Secretary: I said health, science and defence.

Question: Mr. Mathai, two weeks ago the Jane’s Defence Weekly of London had published a report suggesting that India is going to train 20,000 to 30,000 Afghan troops by flying them into this country and providing them training in different bases in our country and providing them with small arms as well as tanks which we are likely to junk from our own security forces. Would you like to comment on that please?

Foreign Secretary: We are baffled by these reports because we have no idea where they emanated from. And certainly such vast numbers of people descending on to our territory, we have not even considered anything like that. I do not know why this speculation has begun.

Question: You have mentioned an Investment Fund that you are setting up with Russia. Can you give us a few more details, how big is it, what would you be investing in, would it be only for energy?

Joint Secretary (ERS): The idea of this fund is at a very preliminary stage. At this point of time the two sides have simply decided that they should explore the idea of setting up a Joint Investment Fund which would invest in projects in both countries and would lead to an increase in investment overall and, therefore, work towards a higher trade target as well. But the details are yet to be discussed and worked.
Question: Is it a kind of a united sovereign wealth fund?

Joint Secretary (ERS): As I said, the details are to be worked out. It is still under consideration stage.

Question: Is it a Government-to-Government fund or a private fund?

Official Spokesperson: The details are yet to be worked out. We will come back to you.

Foreign Secretary: It is an idea whose time has come.

Question: Sir, I would like to ask you about how you would rate the defence ties between the two countries post Russian rout of the MMRCA and the Gorshkov delays. How would you really rate this since you are not talking about the MoUs? Sir, since this rail and road link to Central Asia via Afghanistan, do you think that would be a part of talks between the Russian counterparts since it will give way to Indian goods in the entire Central Asia and Eurasia?

Foreign Secretary: Which rail link are you talking about?

Question: From India to Afghanistan via Chabahar Port. Do you think that will come?

Foreign Secretary: I think it is fair to say that the defence relationship between our two countries still remains robust and in excellent condition. Our two countries have developed by now a maturity and ability to discuss all matters in our defence relationship and we do not think the individual deals will be standing in the way of this overall relationship which is based on trust and confidence in each other. We have also signed in December 2009 an Inter-Governmental Agreement on after sales support to deal with the residual kinds of issues regarding delays, spare parts and other technology transfer kind of issues. This was again discussed when Raksha Mantri visited Russia in October, and the Russian leadership has again reaffirmed the importance they attach to resolving all such problems. We do not expect that the questions which you raised about the delays would affect the relationship.

As regards the lines into Central Asia, there are three different things we are talking about here. One is called the North-South corridor. That is to use rail lines from seaports in Iran into Central Asia. Those discussions are continuing. I am going to ask my colleague who has actually been involved in those discussions to give you some more details. What we are discussing today is a new set of ideas of linking Chabahar Port specifically. The previous North-South corridor had possibly been using other ports in Iran including Bandar Abbas. Chabahar is an idea of a relatively new port which would require a considerable degree of transport infrastructure to lead both into Afghanistan and then to link up with the rail lines going which would be the North-South corridor. These are two slightly different concepts. Both are under discussion. Could you add on the North-South corridor?

Joint Secretary (ERS): This is an idea which has been discussed with Russia basically on land connectivity between Russia and India through Central Asia. In fact during the last Joint Commission meeting in November this was one of the ideas that both countries decided to push forward based on the assumption that once we have good land connectivity between the countries trade itself could go up dramatically. As you know, Foreign Secretary mentioned the North-South corridor. India, Iran and Russia are original signatories to the 2000 agreement. And this has been an idea of discussing the corridor which goes through Astrakhan in Russia through the Caspian Sea and then from there traverses Iran and from Bandar Abbas to Mumbai. But we in India are very keen to move this forward. And in January India is taking the initiative of calling an all members for a meeting to revive this and push this idea forward and that includes all ten members and six observers of this project. But apart from that there are many projects on the table. You mentioned one of them which is the trans Afghan corridor which we are discussing with Uzbekistan. With Kazakhstan there is a separate route being discussed. So, there are essentially a number of connectivity ideas on the table and we are pushing all of them in order to improve this.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you. I have just a small item on the agenda left and that is to say goodbye to all of you. My successor is here. I think today is more or less my swan song. It has been absolutely great interacting with all of you. I would like to thank you for your friendship and support and say all the very best.

Foreign Secretary: May I just add to that saying how much we valued Vishnu’s constant interaction with all of you and the help he provided to me and to others in the Ministry as we came in, to begin our introductions to you and to say that if you wish to continue to enjoy his words of wisdom, please head to Seoul in Korea.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you.
I leave today for Russia to attend the India-Russia Annual Summit at the invitation of President Dmitry Medvedev.

The practice of Annual Summits between India and Russia over the last decade has provided a tremendous impetus to a relationship that is steeped in tradition and history. Today we enjoy a special and privileged Strategic Partnership with Russia. The Summits have focused high level attention on follow-up to the decisions that are taken and on charting new vistas for cooperation.

This year's Annual Summit takes place against the backdrop of a complex international environment. I look forward to an indepth exchange of views with the Russian leadership on the crisis facing the global economy and the political developments in our extended neighbourhood, including West Asia, the Gulf and Afghanistan and the impact of all this on peace and stability in the world. The perspectives of our countries on these developments are marked by a high degree of convergence.

I will discuss with President Medvedev how to further enhance our consultations in international forums like the United Nations Security Council, G 20, BRICS as well as the East Asia Summit which Russia has recently joined. I am convinced that India-Russia consultation on global issues is more necessary today than ever before.

Our bilateral relations with Russia are based on mutual trust, friendship and shared interests. Our relations encompass diverse sectors including nuclear energy, defence, space, science and technology, hydrocarbons, trade and investment and people-to-people exchanges. I will discuss mechanisms to further expand our bilateral cooperation, particularly in the trade, economic and commercial fields.

I also look forward to meeting Prime Minister Vladimir Putin during my visit. He has played a key role in the development of our Strategic Partnership, and has been the architect of our contemporary relationship. I will review with him the progress we have made in our relations since his visit to India in March 2010.

There is enormous mutual goodwill in our two countries for each other. Both our countries recognize the significant mutual benefit we derive from working together. I will utilize my visit to further expand our bilateral cooperation and further consolidate our coordination on regional and global issues. This is in our national interest and in the interest of global peace and prosperity.

Question: You are visiting Moscow right after the Parliamentary elections and on the eve of the Russian Presidential election, which almost coincide with an important date – the 65th anniversary of establishing diplomatic relations between our countries. Are you expecting any new accents in Russian-Indian relationship and what are their prospects?

Answer: Our relations with Russia have stood the test of time. In the decades gone by our relations have gained enormously in strength. They rest on a firm footing, and I see them expanding and diversifying in new areas in the future. This is because of the rapid progress both our societies have made which has opened opportunities for cooperation that did not exist before. There is also great mutual trust and convergence of views between our two countries. The practice of Annual Summits has played a major role in the evolution of our partnership. The intensity of contacts between us is quite extraordinary.

Today we have a ‘special and privileged’ partnership. It is a partnership which produces concrete results. We have bilateral mechanisms at all levels, governmental as also private. Our cooperation in defence, space, hydrocarbons and nuclear energy has seen steady benefits accruing to both countries. On international issues, there is convergence and commonality of views between India and Russia on major issues like the revival of the global economy, cooperation within BRICS, the situation in West Asia and North Africa and the challenges we face in Afghanistan.

I am looking forward to holding detailed discussions with President Medvedev and Prime Minister Putin on all these aspects.

I believe the time has come to place a much greater focus on the economic aspects of our relationship. Our trade and commercial cooperation needs to be become more contemporary and reflective of our capacities. We are already making efforts in this direction.

Over the last one year, there has been greater interaction in fields like information technology, pharmaceuticals, steel and diamonds. New ideas have been discussed such as exploring the possibility of creating a joint investment fund, studying a possible Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement with the broader Eurasian region, encouraging greater connectivity through the North South Transport Corridor, and linking Indian States with Russian regions. We should build upon these proposals.
[Note: The 65th Anniversary of establishment of India-Soviet Union diplomatic relations falls on April 13, 2012.]

Question: Next year our military and technical collaboration will celebrate the 50th anniversary. How do you assess its importance and what are the main features and major areas of the bilateral interaction in this sphere nowadays?

Answer: Our defence cooperation has always been an important pillar of our strategic partnership with Russia. Russia is India’s largest supplier of defence equipment and a most reliable partner.

Over time the nature of our defence relationship has changed from one of ‘buyer-seller’ to that of being partners in joint development of systems and in research and development. We would like this trend to gather further momentum, and I am confident that we are moving in the right direction. Overall, I see this aspect of our relationship as a mutually beneficial and essential link in our multifaceted relationship.

Question: The recent protest movement in Tamil Nadu has been hampering the timely start-up of Kudankulam NPP. Do you believe that it will not hinder the large scale Indian atomic energy programme, including implementation of Russian-Indian plans in this sphere?

Answer: The protests in Kudankulam reflect the concern among people about the safety of nuclear energy. People are also worried that such plants should not affect their livelihood and environment.

The Government takes these concerns seriously. We have set up an independent group of experts to respond to all the legitimate and genuine concerns and fears of the local people.

If we have to develop nuclear energy in the country it is essential that it is done with the support of the people. In India we are giving the highest priority to nuclear safety. I know that the Russian leadership also has the same priority and has taken several initiatives, including in the international arena, which we welcome.

As far as India-Russia cooperation in the nuclear field is concerned, this will continue and we will fulfil our commitments. India has always regarded Russia as partner who was with us in times of difficulty and even when there were restrictions on nuclear commerce with India. I wish to thank all the Russian experts who are working with us in the Kudankulam project.

Question: Russia is heading for modernization and innovative economic development. India has accumulated great positive experience in this area, including bio-nano-and information technologies. Is India ready to bring them to Russia? Whether Indian leading public and private companies are interested in joining such projects as Skolkovo or establishing joint ventures in advanced areas?

Answer: The Integrated Long Term Programme for Cooperation in the field of Science and Technology is India's biggest scientific collaboration programme with any country. This covers the full range of activities from basic research to developing industrial scale technologies in frontline areas such as nano-technology and biotechnology. Together with Russian scientists and R&D institutions, 500 projects have been implemented so far in a large number of areas.

At the last Summit in New Delhi in 2010, a new Agreement was signed that remains valid for the next 10 years and gives a fresh mandate for creating new innovation-based technology partnerships. A significant new feature of this programme is that it will implement joint mega projects in fields such as sustainable energy, affordable healthcare and informatics.

Both sides are also working to put in place a system to ensure rapid commercialization of R&D that is being done in laboratories. This includes the establishment of India-Russia Centres of Science and Technology in each other countries.

Indian participation in the Skolkovo Innovation Center and the Skolkovo Fund has been discussed between the two sides.

These are important areas and we would like to encourage much greater cooperation in these sectors among our industry associations.

Question: After South Africa’s accession to the BRICS, the forum has not only become more representative but also activated concerted actions in the international arena on burning global and regional issues. What do you think about the role of this dialogue mechanism in the changing world order and in tackling major present-day challenges?

Answer: It was Russia which took the initiative to host the first standalone Summit of BRIC countries in Yekaterinburg in 2009 which I had the privilege to attend. Since then the BRIC forum has been expanded to include South Africa. We have high regard for Russia’s role in BRICS.

The relevance of BRICS to the international order has increased over time. BRICS countries share similar positions on issues such as the reforms of the Bretton Woods Institutions, trade protectionism and the Doha Development Round, achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and support for a multi-polar, equitable and democratic world order.
At a time of economic uncertainty, especially in the Eurozone, growth and prosperity in the BRICS economies can play a significant role in ensuring economic and financial stability at a global level.

The agenda of BRICS has gone beyond the purely economic to include issues such as international terrorism, climate change and food and energy security. The world is also witnessing political and security challenges, especially in West Asia.

It is therefore all the more essential for BRICS countries to closely consult with each other at this time.

India will host the next BRICS Summit in New Delhi in March next year and we look forward to further strengthening our dialogue with all the BRICS partners.

Question: Combating terrorism is the key problem for both India and Russia, which are actively interacting both globally and regionally in this sphere. Which mechanisms of international cooperation – both established and emerging – do you consider most efficient in terms of establishing peace, security and stability in Afghanistan and eliminating the terror threat in general?

Answer: Large multiethnic and open democracies like India and Russia are especially vulnerable to terrorism. We are both united in our strong condemnation of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. There can be no justification whatsoever for acts of terrorism.

We closely cooperate in combating the threat of terrorism both at the bilateral and international levels. Our National Security Councils and special services are in touch with each other. At the multilateral level, we are working together for an early adoption of the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism by the United Nations.

Afghanistan is going through a crucial stage of transition. As neighbours, both India and Russia have a vital stake in peace and stability in Afghanistan. There should be regular consultation between our sides on the situation in Afghanistan.

Everyone wishes to see an end to terrorism in Afghanistan, most of all the people of Afghanistan themselves. We should support the people of Afghanistan in their process of transition and nation building and respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Afghanistan.

Question: One Indian proverb says that managing 1000 people is as hard as managing 3 persons. You have to manage the country of a billion population. What is the core of your approach and what are your main principles in managing this big and great India?
Answer: India is a large country of great diversity and complexity. We are an ancient civilisation but a young nation characterised by a vibrant economy.

Our task in government is to lift the millions of our countrymen out of poverty and to eradicate the scourge of illiteracy, hunger and disease. Our growth has to be balanced and inclusive, benefiting all sections of our society. At the international level, India cooperates with all countries to create an atmosphere that is conducive to meeting our national goals and realising the aspirations of our people. We strive to build peace, stability and harmony in the world.

I consider it a deep honour and privilege to have the opportunity to serve the people of India as Prime Minister.

631. Joint Press Interaction of Prime Minister and Russian President.

Moscow, December 16, 2011.

President of Russia (Mr. Dmitry Medvedev): Next year will see the 65th anniversary of our relationship with India...of visa procedures will contribute to the development of business ties within our countries. Today we will have a meeting with representatives of Indian business circles. And of course we will talk about different aspects of our cooperation including metallurgy, car manufacture, information technology, telecommunications, pharmaceuticals, medical services.

We will talk about defence industry as well. Moreover, our cooperation in military technical area with India has reached unprecedented level. We are interested in participation of our Indian partners in such big projects as development of multipurpose transport aircraft, the fighter jets of fifth generation. And of course we are interested in cooperation in the civil aircraft industry as well.

We have significant results in energy projects as well. We are cooperating productively on the project of Sakhalin 1. We have good opportunities to engage our Indian friends in the projects of oil and gas, in the projects of oil and petro complexes. Also we are implementing the commissioning of the first energy union of the Kudankulam station.

But our relationship would be poor if we had not the wide range of humanitarian relations. This year saw the festival of Indian culture in Russia, the event on the 150th anniversary of the birthday of Rabindranath Tagore, a prominent Indian cultural figure. We will implement different educational projects, we will promote tourism between different cities and regions, relations in the humanitarian area is one of the most prominent in our bilateral relations. Today we talked a lot about international and regional problems and we were talking about how to contribute to the strengthening or stability and security in the world using such forums as BRICS, G20, East Asia Summit and other platforms as well including of course the United Nations.

In long term we think that the partnership in the SCO will also grow. This organization has a growing potential in our region and we support the application of India to receive full size partnership in this organization we are also promoting the strengthening of security architecture in Asia Pacific region as well. We are cooperating in the United Nations Security Council. Russian Federation is a permanent member of the SC and India is a non-permanent member of the SC right now, and we see India as a strong candidate to the position of a permanent member in the United Nations Security Council. These are good mechanisms for positive cooperation in the area of international problems.

Of course we have talked with Mr. Prime Minister about the situation in the North Africa, about the Middle East, Afghanistan and Pakistan. And we have to promote all those positive processes. We have to contribute to all those positive processes that are now underway in related states. We have to contribute to the development of those states. And at the same time we have to take all necessary measures to combat drug-trafficking, drug crimes, terrorism, and create all conditions to promote the stable growth of global economy. We hope that in future we will cooperate here with our Indian partners.

Thank you for your attention.

Prime Minister (Dr. Manmohan Singh): Your Excellency President Medvedev, distinguished representatives of the media:

I am delighted to be in Moscow once again for the India-Russia Annual Summit. Our Summit has taken place just after the elections to the Russian State Duma, for which I conveyed my deep felicitations to His Excellency the President. President Medvedev and I have concluded a very extensive round of discussions which were held in an extremely warm, constructive and friendly spirit. We have reviewed our bilateral relations, which as is well known, are among the most substantive we have with any country. We also reviewed regional and global issues of concern to both of us.

In today’s world of uncertainties, regional flashpoints and economic slowdown the India-Russia relationship stands out a factor of peace, progress and stability in the world.
Our special and privileged strategic partnership has not just withstood the test of time. It has helped shape a balanced and inclusive world order, and it has contributed to the rapid growth of both our economies.

We reviewed the progress in the areas of civil nuclear energy, defence, space, oil and natural gas, science and technology, trade and investment, education and culture. A number of agreements have been signed in these areas.

We have agreed to celebrate the 65th anniversary of the establishment of formal diplomatic relations between India and Russia next year in a befitting manner.

Russia has been a tried and tested partner in the development of our nuclear energy programme. Both India and Russia are committed to ensuring the highest levels of nuclear safety. India welcomes the advocacy of nuclear safety by Russia at the international level.

The two sides have concluded negotiations and agreed on the terms and conditions for the Russian credit for Units 3 and 4 of the Kudankulam nuclear power project. We look forward to moving ahead with the roadmap for cooperation in the field of nuclear energy which we signed in 2010.

Our defence cooperation has reached a qualitatively new level, marked by joint design and development as well as co-production. We are satisfied at the progress of the major projects.

We reiterated our intention to enhance the scale of our bilateral trade and investment relations. The current trade volume of nine billion US dollars is far below the potential of our two economies. We will continue our focus on sectors such as oil and gas, telecommunications, pharmaceuticals, fertilizers, mining, space and technology and innovation. I am very happy that the India-Russia Science and Technology Centre has been inaugurated in Moscow.

India-Russia relations have global significance. We have been consulting closely in international forums, including the United Nations Security Council, BRICS and the East Asia Summit. India will host the next BRICS Summit in March 2012, for which I have invited President Medvedev.

We share similar views on threats to international security from terrorism, piracy and drug-trafficking. Our aims and objectives with regard to Afghanistan’s reconstruction and nation building efforts, and its ability to decide its own future without external interference are very similar. Both India and Russia have a strong interest in promoting stability and prosperity in the region, and we agreed to work closely toward this objective.
We reviewed the significant developments that are now taking place in West Asia and North Africa. We have agreed to keep in close touch on the developments in these regions.

We both agree on the need for the European Union to take urgent steps to address the Eurozone debt crisis, and restore market confidence.

India deeply values its close friendship and cooperation with Russia. We are committed to further deepening and strengthening it, and I believe we are on the right track.

I thank you.

Question: Good day. I have a question to Mr. Singh. Today a lot was said about the perspectives of cooperation between Russia and India in the nuclear field. Please comment on when the terms of launch of the first unit of Kudankulam will be set, and the new platform will be provided to the Russian nuclear experts to building Indian nuclear plant.

Prime Minister: We are committed to implement the roadmap which we have agreed with our Russian colleagues for the nuclear energy programmes. Kudankulam 1 and 2 are at advance stage and they are very close to being operationalised. There are some temporary problems, some agitations arising out of the concerns for nuclear safety and concerns about their impact on livelihood. But we are confident that we will overcome and we will be able to persuade some of these people that their concerns are adequately taken care of, that our nuclear plants are safe and sound, and that there is nothing to worry about with regard to their safety. That is a commitment both Russia and India will honour. I am, therefore, confident that in a couple of weeks we should be able to go ahead with operationalising Kudankulam 1 and thereafter by a period of six months Kudankulam.

Question: This is to both the leaders. So far the India-Russia cooperation has been driven mostly based on defence, science and space relationship. Do you think that in the future, as both of you have remarked in your opening remarks, the trade and business would be the future which will be driving the friendship and the relationship? Is that the way you are looking at it, both of you?

President of Russia: If we said that, we mean it. We think that both trade and business cooperation, investment are the basis for further economic cooperation between the two countries. In my introduction I said that we should not admit the development of cooperation only in one dimension. The growth of trade turnover needs …(Unclear)… and on the other hand investment growth is, they are both two sides of the same coin. We meet the business community because we are not only interested in the growth in numbers. We have a task to increase it up to 20 billion dollars in the year 2020. We are aiming at large and medium scale projects because in the field of cooperation, in economic field, it is important to have all the sectors of business of the two countries to be present there. Such contacts I hope will become stronger every year. We should work more actively find new fields of cooperation which is really important, considering the fact that the world economy is now in a bad situation. The development of economic relations between the two countries, as we are big international economic players, it really affects the social wellbeing of the citizens of the two countries. That is why we will pursue our business cooperation.

Prime Minister: I endorse what President Medvedev has said. Ours is a multifaceted relationship. Defence, science and technology, nuclear energy, space programmes have figured prominently in our areas of cooperation. But that does not mean that there is no scope for expanding cooperation in economic areas, trade and investment. These are going to be more important as we go along. And in areas of trade and investment we both agree that our potential is far bigger than what we have achieved thus far. So, the roadmap for the future is quite clear that this multifaceted relationship will grow in all directions but trade and investment growth will be one of the key areas to work for.

Question: My question is to Mr. Medvedev and the Prime Minister. How do you estimate the present role of BRICS in the international arena and what is the future of this platform?

President of Russia: We were quite precisely discussing with the distinguished Prime Minister Singh this issue today - the role of BRICS in the international arena. We came to the result that the role of this forum is going up. I recall that we with our colleagues with BRICS we were sitting at the table and discussing general issues of economic development, countering terrorism, some other issues. Nowadays our cooperation has become practical. We have the forum of BRICS. Very soon the next one will be held in India. The most important thing is that the forum became a mechanism of consultation. That is most important because the world is rapidly changing. The economies are in a very complicated situation. Financial crisis is still on. During the last G20 in France, before we had the meeting of the all the participants we had a brief meeting in the BRICS format and that demonstrates that this platform becomes a really important player that helps to agree the positions of the States, BRICS members, and to defend our positions during other international events. You all perfectly know what is BRICS. This is almost half of the world population and a significant part of GDP growth. This year, fifty per cent of the total of GDP is now within BRICS. This is a serious power. We are looking forward to the level of mutual trust and solidarity on various issues. We are hoping that it will go up.
Prime Minister: I think here too I agree with what President Medvedev has said. BRICS today represent the most dynamic economies in the world. And at a time when the global economy is in doldrums, when macroeconomic stability in many traditional growth poles of the world is not in place, it is very important that the five fast-growing countries represented in BRICS should consult with each other with a view to providing pathways in which we can together work with other countries of the world to bring about greater stability of the growth process in the world. But it is not only economics. There is scope for doing together things in the area of consultations with regard to other matters such as terrorism, piracy, global imbalances in the processes of governance, the reform of the Security Council and other international institutions. All these are areas where BRICS countries working together can make significant impact on the evolution of new approaches to dealing with these difficult issues.

Question: My question is for President Medvedev. India has been a very strong contender for the post of permanent seat in the United Nations Security Council. India and Russia are time-tested friends. Will Russia support India’s candidature and mobilize support for India’s cause?

President of Russia: It is a pity that you did not listen to my introduction. I have already given a very firm position. If you need a repetition I can say it once again. Indeed India is a special and privileged strategic partner for Russia, and we are considering India as a strong candidate for permanent presence in the Security Council, and the other members of the Security Council should agree on it and all the members of the United Nations and after agreeing perform the Security Council reform. You can have absolutely no doubt as for the support of the Russian Federation.

Thank you dear colleagues.
Speech of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at the luncheon hosted in his honour by the Russian President Medvedev.

Moscow, December 16, 2011.

Your Excellency President Medvedev,

Mrs Medvedeva,

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen

I am deeply moved by the warmth of the welcome and generous hospitality accorded to me. I have been a regular and frequent visitor to Russia and feel enriched each time I visit this great country.

Excellency,

The people of India rejoice in the great successes of the Russian people. Russia is regarded as a tried and trusted friend of India, that has stood with India at every juncture of our nation-building process. We owe a deep debt of gratitude to the people and successive leaderships of Russia.

Mr. President, your own personal contribution and the attention you have given to India has been a source of great encouragement to us. Under your Presidency, we have expanded the horizons of our cooperation and opened new doors.

Today, our relations span diverse sectors ranging from defence, space and nuclear energy to exchanges in the commercial, educational and cultural fields. The underlying basis to this cooperation is the trust and goodwill among our peoples, our cultural exchanges and people-to-people contacts in academia, science, tourism and businesspersons.

Next year we celebrate the 65th anniversary of the formal establishment of our diplomatic relations. We should mark this occasion by highlighting the benefits of our decades long partnership and creating greater awareness about each other among the younger generation.

The world is witnessing profound transformation and a shift in the global balance of power. At this time of transition, our relationship serves as an anchor of peace and stability.

It is essential that India and Russia work even more closely together at the international level. I am truly pleased at the manner in which our cooperation and exchanges within the United Nations, G-20 and BRICS have been progressing in recent years. We warmly welcome Russia’s participation in the East Asia Summit process. This will contribute to regional peace and prosperity.

As two large and diverse democracies, with rapidly transforming societies and economies, we must work together to ensure that the emerging international order is multipolar, based on respect for international law and equality amongst nations. India and Russia should promote a world order in which dialogue and cooperation and not conflict and confrontation are the basis for inter-state relations.

Excellency,

I am confident that India-Russia relations are poised to achieve even greater heights in the years to come.

Ladies and Gentlemen, may I request you to join me in raising a toast:

— To the health and well being of His Excellency the President of the Russian Federation and Mrs Medvedeva;

— To the long-standing tradition of close and continuing friendship and cooperation between India and Russia; and — To the prosperity, success and happiness of the friendly people of Russia.

Thank you.

Remarks by Prime Minister at the Joint Meeting with CEOs from India and Russia.

Moscow, December 16, 2011.

His Excellency Mr. Dmitry Medvedev, President of the Russian Federation, Distinguished Captains of Russian and Indian industry.

I am very happy to be here with President Medvedev to meet all of you.

In the last few years, the governments of both our countries have taken a policy decision to bring our economic and trade relations to the level of our cooperation in the traditional areas of cooperation such as defence, nuclear energy and space. We have set a target to raise our trade volume to 20 billion US dollars by 2015.

Apart from the Inter-Governmental Commission, we have set up several mechanisms to promote greater business-to-business interaction. These include the Forum on Trade and Investment and the CEO’s Council.

We would like to know from you what you feel needs to be done to promote the trade and investment aspect of our relationship.

Our government is committed to create a policy environment that is conducive for Russian companies to do business in India, and to invest in India. We are working with Russia in the areas of mutual recognition of standards and financial practices, facilitation of visa and other regulatory requirements, policy measures to promote trade and investment and creation of institutional mechanisms to address trade disputes.

The opportunity for a substantial expansion of our economic relations is now. At a time of a global economic slowdown, when traditional engines of growth are in difficulty, the Indian and Russian economies can be natural partners in reviving growth, creating infrastructure and generating surpluses.

India warmly welcomes Russia’s entry into the World Trade Organisation. We are also keen to enter into a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement with the Customs Union comprising Russia, Belarus and Kazakhstan. We have already decided to set up a Joint Study Group in this regard.

The initiative taken by Russia to launch an extensive economic modernization and privatization programme has opened new avenues for Indian companies.

The Indian economy, on the other hand, has grown at an average rate of 8.5% since 2004. While there will be a slowdown in the short term due to the global situation, we are aiming at a growth target of 9% in the next Five Year Plan.
period. I invite Russian industry to participate in our infrastructure and other development programmes.

I am encouraged by some of the success stories of investments and business tie-ups in the recent past. NMDC and Severstal are setting up a large joint venture in India to produce steel. Indian companies are discussing long-term agreements of supply of diamonds from Russia. The Steel Authority of India and the National Minerals Development Corporation are interested in procuring coking and thermal coal from Russia. Indian companies are keen to import metals like copper and nickel. There have been Russian investments in the telecommunications sector in India, and Indian investments in the oil and gas sector in Russia.

Yet there are vast unexplored areas that await exploitation. I refer in particular to the areas of pharmaceuticals, fertilisers, financial services, power, health, chemicals and aviation.

Innovation and commercialisation of scientific research and technologies have been identified by the India-Russia Forum as another thrust area of cooperation.

I call upon you to further intensify your efforts and make full use of the excellent political relations between our two countries to expand our trade and economic cooperation. I wish you all success in your endeavours.

I thank you.

Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai on Prime Minister’s official meetings in Moscow.

Moscow, December 16, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Syed Akbaruddin): Good evening friends. I will begin with an apology for having kept you a bit late here. We have tried our best to keep you informed of all developments throughout the day. By my reckoning, we have in driblets sent you about seven documents of various kinds so that you are able to understand what was happening throughout the day. We have here with us Foreign Secretary on my right. Beside him is Ambassador Malhotra who would give you a flavor of the events that have happened during the course of the day. I would request Foreign Secretary to make a statement and we would then open the floor for any questions that you may have.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you Akbar.

In fact the apology should really come from me because you were here all the time. We have been travelling for the last fifty minutes trying to battle traffic and come here. I know it is becoming a bit of a habit but I do try my best to adhere to time schedules. Frankly we finished the last meeting only after six and by the time we got back it was just after seven which is why we are here.

The Prime Minister had a very productive day in Moscow today. He had a two-hour long extensive meeting with his main host, the Russian President His Excellency Mr. Dmitry Medvedev in the Kremlin, first in a restricted format and then in a delegation-level format. He had an equally long meeting with the Prime Minister Mr. Vladimir Putin in the evening. During these meetings Prime Minister was accompanied by senior officials who deal with all the key strategic sectors of our long-term relationship. The Russian side was equally well represented during these meetings.

The meetings were very constructive. We were struck by the warmth and cordiality of the atmosphere which is not only in keeping with the tradition of Indo-Russian dialogue but it was particularly marked on this occasion. They covered the entire gamut of our strategic partnership and reviewed the progress achieved in the ongoing bilateral projects in a number of key areas, keeping in mind that the last bilateral summit was a year ago in December 2010 when Prime Minister Medvedev was in Delhi.

On the conclusion of the talks with the Russian leadership, a Joint Statement was adopted, which I believe all of you have seen, which apart from the strategic sectors which I have referred to, refers to India’s keen interest in hydrocarbons sector and the promotion of greater cooperation with Russian companies, in steel, mining, automobile, fertiliser, and pharmaceuticals sectors. I may mention that in between the meeting with the President and the meeting with Prime Minister Putin, both Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Medvedev were present with the CEOs who were concluding their deliberations. They both addressed the CEO’s forum and also heard viewpoints from the CEOs.

Coming back to the Joint Statement, it also reflects Russia’s support to India’s permanent membership of the UN Security Council, as also our full membership of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation. Prime Minister welcomed Russia’s accession to the WTO, which I understand has been formalised just a couple of hours ago. Both leaders exchanged views on a range of global and regional issues, including, apart from UN reforms to which I referred, Afghanistan, Iran, Libya, Syria, the subject of international terrorism and various other subjects.

I have already mentioned the Business Forum but I thought it is important to reflect on it once again because during the talks, even after the actual session with the Businessmen, Prime Minister Putin and Dr. Manmohan Singh and earlier President Medvedev and our Prime Minister, both emphasised that the trade and investment relationship between our two countries has not kept pace with the growth of our relationship in various other sectors, and that it continues to be considerably below potential.

Prime Minister noted for example that we had set ourselves a target of US dollars 20 billion by 2015, and that we have now crossed nine billion this year. But considering the size of our two economies and the very large number of areas of complementarity which have been identified, that this remains a rather small target. As I said, transport, pharmaceuticals, steel, banking, fertilisers, were some of the sectors in which our CEOs were represented today. We see this business relationship as being one of the most important areas of forward movement in the years to come.

As regards the cooperation in the civil nuclear sector, both leaders noted that they have reached agreement on the terms and conditions for the grant of Russian State credit for the construction of units 3 and 4 of the Kudankulam nuclear power plant site. Prime Minister and President agreed that next year we would be celebrating the 65th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Russia, that these would be done on a large scale including with cultural manifestations.

I would also like to mention that after the talks there were a total of five agreements which were signed between the two countries. I do not know if you have seen the list but I will just mention in passing the significance of some of them. The first was the Second Protocol on the licensed production of the Sukhoi-30MKI aircraft for another 42 units of this. It may be recalled that the inter-governmental agreement in general contract, the first one, for the Sukhois was signed in 2000 and that envisaged the manufacture of 140 Su-30s by HAL. In 2007 there was a protocol which envisaged the manufacture of a further 40 aircraft. The present protocol, as I said, envisages an additional 42. Right in the beginning 50 Su-30s were purchased in phases prior to the signing of the IGA in 2000. Therefore, this takes a total number of acquired or contracted aircraft in the IAF fleet to 272 Sukhoi-30s.

The second agreement was an MoU between the Competition Commission of India and the Federal Anti Monopoly Service of the Russian Federation. This was signed by Ambassador and the Head of the Russian Federal Anti Monopoly Service. It covers sharing of experience in the field of competition policy, conducting investigations, evolving joint consultative processes and exchange of information on our laws and legislation.

The third was the Protocol of Intentions between the Department of Science and Technology on our side and the Inter-Regional Association Siberian Accord for the Siberian Federal District of the Russian Federation, the subject being fly ash utilisation and safe management. You might ask why I am talking about fly ash. But I would like to say the protocol aims to facilitate the development and application of technologies for utilisation and safe management of fly ash in the Siberian Federal District. And it includes import of technologies from India. This is one of a kind where there are two way exchanges of technologies. I think the second significance of this is it is a good example of what both Governments are trying to seek that their scientific cooperation should lead to commercialisation and commercial ventures. This is one example of that.

The fourth was the Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation of drug quality and safety standards between the Central Drugs Standard Control Organisation of India and the Federal Service for Surveillance in the Sphere of Public Health and Social Development of the Russian Federation. The MoU will oversee the safety and quality issues between the two agencies in the area of drugs and it will provide an enabling environment for enhancing trade in quality pharmaceuticals. This is again signed by the Ambassador and the Acting Head of the Federal Service on Surveillance and Healthcare and Social Development.

As I have mentioned already in the context of the CEOs Forum, and I will ask the Ambassador to elaborate on this a little later, pharmaceuticals is one area where we see a very great potential for increase of Indian exports to this country. Having now reached a further understanding on quality and standards I think this is an enabling provision which should be of help.
The last was the educational exchange programme between the Ministry of Education and Science of the Russian Federation and our HRD Ministry, which is for an educational exchange programme as by its very name. It seeks to promote cooperation through specific inter-institutional arrangements, sharing in the field of pedagogy, seminars, exhibitions. There will be a Joint Working Group between our two countries to monitor its implementation. This too was signed by Ambassador with the Deputy Minister of Science and Education of the Russian Federation.

I will stop there and take a few questions.

Question: Russian President made a brief reference to cooperation in hydrocarbons sector when he talked about Sakhalin-1. Could you just amplify that remark and throw some light on that? And did it figure in the CEOs Forum meeting?

Foreign Secretary: The Russian President referred to Sakhalin-1 as a successful example of cooperation between our two countries. He said India is already receiving Liquefied Natural Gas from the Sakhalin-1 venture. The mention of that was to highlight the fact that we have actually made very concrete progress. This is an area in which India had invested. The investment has now led to actual flows of LNG to India which is a contribution to our energy security and a successful venture involving our Corporations. The Head of the ONGC Mr. Vasudev was part of the Indian CEOs Forum. He would certainly have been discussing with the Russians not only Sakhalin-1 but other prospective ventures in the field of hydrocarbons.

Question: Could you just provide us a readout on the meeting with the Prime Minister Vladimir Putin. Did Mr. Putin at any stage brief Prime Minister about the recent developments in Russia and the domestic situation here?

Foreign Secretary: I think the meeting with Prime Minister Putin was, you might say in continuation of the discussions which we held with the President. The two leaders reviewed the gamut of our bilateral relations with specific emphasis on some of the strategic sectors. They also reviewed the international situation, some regions of the world in particular. They also had a discussion relating to our cooperation in the international sphere including in fora such as the G20 and matters relating to the international financial crisis and so on. President did not refer, as far as I know, to the internal situation in Russia. This was not a part of the discussion to my knowledge.

Question: You were talking about the prospects of trade and commerce between the two countries and you identified pharmaceuticals as one of the sectors where we could do better. But why is that in comparison to other European nations or western nations, the cooperation in trade between India and Russia is not developing? Is it because there is not much for Russia to offer or much for India to offer to Russia?

Foreign Secretary: I think the trade is more heavily in Russia’s favour because they do have a lot to offer. We believe we also have a lot. Now there is a greater feeling in Russia, particularly among the business sectors, that there are a lot of areas in which Indian exports can be expanded to mutual benefit. Pharmaceuticals is just one of them. But I will ask the Ambassador to elaborate a little bit on the prospects.

Question: There are other areas like textiles or leather where I do not think India has made enough inroads into Russia as it has done in Europe or America.

Indian Ambassador to Russia (Shri Ajai Malhotra): First of all let us look at the facts. In the last five years our trade has doubled. Last year, the two-way trade was 8.5 billion dollars. This year in the first three months in fact there was a 30 per cent decline. But now the latest figures we have show that we will probably end the year with 9.5 billion dollars. We have picked up a lot towards the end of the year and we expect some more in the last month’s figures. So, we will certainly cross last year’s figure. That is a certainty. I think the prospects as we look ahead are I would not say bleak at all and in fact there are rather bright. The reason for that is we have been looking at opportunities which link up companies on either side and there are several good projects that might emerge out of this. A couple of them are in steel. One is the one that you may have read about Severstal and NMDC, which is almost ready to go. There is another one also in steel that may come through and it is being explored. And a small investment has been made already into marketing etc., for specialised steel in India. Similarly in diamonds the agreements and contracts that have been signed this year have been much bigger than in the previous year. The reason for that has been a decline in demand and off take in Europe and America and, therefore, willingness by big Russian companies and others to offer it to Indian companies who, as you know, are top of the scale in terms of cutting and polishing diamonds. So, that is another area where a fairly significant add on would be there. To give you the example of the steel plant, if that comes through, and certainly looking several years down the line, the net impact would be importing of about 750 million dollars worth of coking coal every year, that is at today’s prices.

So, one such arrangement can lead to a fairly large impact on the final figures. Similarly with our ...(Unclear)... the diamonds, the quantity of off take has almost trebled, as per their President, this year compared to last year. There are also good options in oil and gas. As you know, we have signed up for LNG with Gazprom looking at the year 2016 onwards. We are also looking at opportunities to link up with Novatek in the Yamal Peninsula. We are looking at opportunities to link up with Gazprom also. We are looking at opportunities on Sakhalin-3. So, our energy requirement is quite huge and I think this will again give a fairly big boost to figures.

Coming to textiles, there is scope to do much more. I think much of the import that is coming in is out of China and they have an advantage of a common border and land route and competitive in comparative price wise. But I think with the labour costs going up in China, as one reads in the newspapers, this could have a positive impact in terms of opportunities for our manufacturers to export up here. So, I think compared to our exports into USA etc., it is rather low. But even if you look in the West, more than 50 per cent of the market in Europe or America is really held by the Chinese though we have a fairly significant portion also.

I would like to add that one reason why we have not been doing so well is the lack of information about each other’s capabilities and opportunities and we are trying to promote that awareness, industry-wise and company-wise by meeting companies and industries at the CEO or other level and telling them and trying to match make for them. We want to make sure that we are not stuck with old stereotypes about each others. And I think this will also help in increasing our trade turn over. So, in several sectors there are good opportunities including pharmaceuticals.

Question: Going back to this Putin meeting, did the Prime Minister congratulate him on the Duma election results and what were the discussions in this regard? On this Haripur nuclear project that you were planning, there was this talk of offering an alternative site to it. Was this discussed in the bilateral meetings? With regard to defence projects, there are a series of projects like Gorshkov, fifth generation fighters, MTA and Nerpa submarine. What happened in this regard? What was the discussion? What is the progress on these talks?

Foreign Secretary: That is three questions in one.

The short answer to that is yes. He did congratulate Prime Minister Putin and President too in his meeting on the successful outcome of elections. He did that. There was not a discussion on it. He did convey his congratulations. They thanked him and said that they appreciated the gesture.

As regards Haripur, I think we have a formulation in the Joint Statement which is basically that we have told the Russians that the alternative site would be considered for the Russian nuclear plants. The important point is that Prime Minister emphasised that the point that the roadmap which we had laid out for the development of nuclear power plants would be adhered to, and if there is any issue regarding the site an alternative site would be made available.
As regards defence, Gorshkov did come up for discussion in the context of the satisfaction, I will say, that the schedules are being adhered to. When Raksha Mantri was here in the month of October there was a discussion regarding this matter of the schedules. Both sides are now clear that they would take the necessary action to make sure that there are no slippages. Prime Minister did mention that it is very important for us to ensure that the ship arrives on time. I think it says in the statement that the two sides took note of the progress made in important joint defence projects such as re-fitment of INS Vikramaditya, which is what it will be called, as well as the joint development and production of the Multi Role Transport Aircraft (MTA), the fifth generation fighter aircraft, and the licensed production of various Russian origin defence equipment and armaments in India. I think the Prime Minister Putin also emphasised the importance of these defence projects. The fifth generation fighter in particular was mentioned and I think both sides were satisfied with the progress we are making in this regard.

Question: Nuclear submarine?

Foreign Secretary: On nuclear submarine, I think the discussion will continue as you know.

Question: Earlier it was said that the deadline is 2013.

Indian Ambassador to Russia: End of 2012.

Foreign Secretary: 2013 means it will actually start sailing or whatever.

Question: This MTA and FGFA, there was this talk of next stage of agreements on sharing of work and the share of the project.

Foreign Secretary: They did not go into the details because most of these were actually covered by the Raksha Mantri when he was here, and our Ambassador was with him. But I think the two sides are satisfied with the level of progress and the systematic way in which both sides are proceeding on that.

Question: Sir, the Joint Statement of Prime Minister and President specifically mentions an equitable architecture for regional security arrangement, specifically mentioning that security arrangement of one country should not have a negative bearing on other. Would you like to elaborate on this, especially in the context of recent engagement of Russia and China on security level?

Foreign Secretary: The point was that we are all engaged in different levels. We have multiple partners with whom we engage. Russians have too, our other neighbours have too. I think it is a simple statement of principle that security is ultimately individual. I think that is the word used in that particular Joint Statement and that no arrangements enshrining the security principles of any two countries should deter from those of others. I do not think there was anything more than that. It is an established formulation which is used very often.

Question: First, does Russia’s accession to the WTO have any material impact on trade relations between Russia and India? Second, one of the things that seems to be missing in the economic relationship is trade in services. What are the barriers to trade in services from India to Russia? As you know, that is one of the key areas where India is competitive.

Foreign Secretary: I think the accession to the WTO was welcomed, particularly since it will have considerable positive enablers, you might say, for our trade and investment not only with Russia per se but in our plan to move forward to what is called a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement (CECA) with Russia and what is called the Customs Union - that is Russia, Belarus and Kazakhstan. We have a Joint Study Group. Now that Russia’s accession has been completed, this Joint Study Group to see how to take forward the concept of CECA with this entire Customs Union. Of course Russia would be the major partner in it, but Kazakhstan too is one of our very important trading partners. We will start work on this. And we think it would have definitely a very positive impact.

As regards trade in services, I think the fact that it is a member of the WTO will also once the WTO moves forward, but I will ask the Ambassador to talk. Have you had any specifics on trade in services, the NASSCOM and so on?

Indian Ambassador to Russia: We have had some interest. We hope to have a visit by the Minister of Communications from here into India at the invitation of NASSCOM for the big event that they have next year. But more than that I think finally we have Indian companies looking a little more at Russia. If we look at the extent of the trade in services that goes on with the USA, things are pretty negligible out here. But now for example, TCS have got some of the work in terms of banking, providing the systems for one of the major banks out here. And it is an example of what they can do. We expect that they will be able to sell it to maybe at least ten or a dozen such banks. And each of these contracts is worth several million dollars. So, I think finally Indian companies finding the market for services a little bit saturated in the West and given the economic downturn that has taken place are, per force of circumstances also looking for markets. And Russia makes sense because we have a lot of strength in IT and other technologies and we have a lot to offer in terms of what we can do in terms of services out here. So, certainly you are right, that is an area with great prospects, something that we would encourage our companies to look at. Earlier this year we did have a visit by the Principal Secretary to our Prime Minister who brought a delegation which included some of our IT companies and that has also opened up the market a bit in terms of interest amongst Indian companies.

Foreign Secretary: Thank you for that question. I would like to have the Ambassador just tell you, just to conclude this, the kind of range and diversity of our relationships. I think it was during one of the meetings we just went over the number of Ministers and the diversity of fields covered by the Ministerial visits. Do you have that list with you, what you were talking about? In the last six months I think of this year.

Indian Ambassador to Russia: For six months I can remember because I have been around for six months. I remember our Home Minister Mr. Chidambaram came here in June this year. Our Tourism Minister Mr. Sahai came here in September this year. And that led to some very useful outcomes. We have seen the number of tourists going to India increase by 25 per cent as a result of implementing certain changes in the visa policies by both the countries. It was an initiative which our Embassy took which has been reciprocated by the Russian side and effective 1st of December, they too have reciprocated in terms of changing their rules about giving visas to Indians who apply for them including Indian businessmen.

That I think helps a lot in increasing the flow of business between our two countries. Earlier, business visas and getting them itself was a major problem for Indians coming into Russia, and due to our taking a similar difficult stance, for Russians coming into India. Now that has changed. We are giving within three days a one year multiple entry visa and I think that will help. Then our Defence Minister came here in October. Our Power Minister came here in November. Our Commerce Minister came here also in November. Our Steel Minister came here in November. External Affairs Minister came here in November. Our National Security Advisor also came in November. Our Shipping Minister came in November. Though really he came for the United Russia Party congress but there was some interaction also on the bilateral side on that occasion. This itself gives an idea of the depth and extent of our cooperation that is taking place.

Foreign Secretary: Finally before we go away, I am going to ask the Ambassador to tell you the two Indian pieces of music that were played at the lunch.

Indian Ambassador to Russia: If I may add just one sentence with the hon. Foreign Secretary’s permission, I think the interaction between our Prime Minister and President started at about 11 o’clock and continued till about 4:30 pm. That is five and a half hours of valued time which itself is noteworthy, whether it was over lunch or otherwise. Our restricted meeting was two hours, as mentioned, but then entire interaction from 11 till 4:30 was there. As pointed out, during the lunch the accompanying music certainly had Russian favourites like Katyusha and ...(Unclear)…. In Russia these are popular songs. But they also had two Shankar Jaikishan numbers - one is Awara Hun from the film Awara, and the second is Jeena Yahan, Marna Yahan from Mera Naam Joker. And everyone was touched by the fact that the Presidential Orchestra of the Russian Federation had so competently and so nicely played those numbers. Both our Prime Minister and his wife and the President and his wife went to compliment and thank the orchestra for the very nice and touching gesture on their part.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

635. Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh: “Furthering the India-Russia Strategic Partnership to meet the challenges of a changing World”.

2. During the talks, the sides appreciated the advancement and further enhancement of the special and privileged strategic partnership between India and Russia. The sides noted that intense dialogue and regular high-level meetings that had taken place since the annual Summit in December 2010 helped to meet the challenges of the rapidly changing global situation and to promote close coordination of joint efforts in the international arena and also contributed to the continued implementation of large-scale trade, economic, investment, defence, scientific and technical projects, humanitarian and cultural exchanges, and people-to-people level contacts in the spirit of the traditional friendship between the two nations.
3. The sides noted with satisfaction that the entry into force of the Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Russian Federation on Mutual Simplification of Travel Documents for Certain Categories of Nationals of the two countries would promote broader business and scientific cooperation, boost professional, student and other exchanges between India and Russia.

4. The sides decided to commemorate the 65th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Russia in 2012 in both the countries in a fitting manner.

Enhancing bilateral trade, investments and innovative cooperation

5. The sides noted the fruitful work carried out by the India-Russia Intergovernmental Commission on Trade, Economic, Scientific, Technical and Cultural Cooperation which held its XVII session in Moscow on November 18, 2011. Decisions adopted by the Intergovernmental Commission and aimed at ensuring dynamic growth of bilateral economic ties focused on innovative and high-technology components, as well as investment projects that would contribute to the modernization and growth of both the economies. India welcomed Russia's impending entry into the WTO. The sides decided to jointly study the possibility of a Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement between India and the Belarus-Kazakhstan-Russia Custom Union. The sides decided to actively exchange business missions in various fields of cooperation and to work out details on industrial modernization opportunities in India. They decided to explore the setting up of a joint investment fund and to promote greater cooperation between the regions of the two countries. The sides expressed satisfaction that several joint projects in the Hydrocarbon, Steel, Mining, Automobile, Fertilizer and Pharmaceutical sectors are currently being pursued.

Energy Cooperation

6. The sides emphasized that cooperation in the energy sector had become one of the important pillars of the India-Russia Strategic Partnership. They reiterated their commitment to further long term joint collaboration in the civilian nuclear energy sector, as well as in the hydrocarbon sector.

7. The sides reiterated their commitment to implement their plans for a long term partnership in the field of peaceful nuclear energy as envisaged in the Agreement between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Russian Federation on Cooperation in the Use of Atomic Energy for Peaceful Purposes and the Road Map for strengthening large-scale cooperation between the Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Russian Federation in the peaceful use of nuclear energy which were concluded on March 12, 2010.
8. The sides noted with satisfaction the successful promotion of cooperation in the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and reaffirmed their commitment to the highest standards of safety of nuclear technologies. The sides recognized the competence and rich experience of Russian organizations in design and technical assistance and of Indian organizations in the construction of nuclear power plants and their technical expertise. The sides looked forward to the early commissioning of the first two units at Kudankulam.

9. As regards construction of Units 3 & 4 at the Kudankulam site, as envisaged in the “Inter-Governmental Agreement on Cooperation in the Construction of Additional Nuclear Plants Units at the Kudankulum site as well as in the Construction of Russian Design Nuclear Power Plants at New Sites in the Republic of India” of December 5, 2008, the sides noted with satisfaction that the discussions on the text of the Protocol for grant of State Credit by the Russian Federation to the Republic of India had been finalized and that negotiations on the techno-commercial offer on the construction of Units 3 and 4 were in an advanced stage. The sides reiterated their commitment to the agreements reached previously on the construction of Russian design nuclear power plants at new sites in the Republic of India.

10. The sides reiterated their commitment to deepening cooperation in the hydrocarbon sector, pursuant to the Framework Agreement for enhanced cooperation in oil and gas between the Republic of India and the Russian Federation that was signed on December 21, 2010. The Indian side reiterated its interest in equity participation through ONGC-OVL in new projects in Russia.

Space research

11. The sides commended the successful launch, by India, of the jointly built YouthSat for space science studies; and expressed satisfaction on the progress in implementation of the joint lunar exploration project. The sides agreed to continue cooperation in the space sector in the fields of satellite navigation and manned missions. The sides expressed mutual interest in using the Russian global navigation satellite system GLONASS and looked forward to furthering their cooperation in this field, including through the joint production of satellite navigation equipment and services for civilian users.

Military-Technical cooperation

12. The sides welcomed the outcome of the eleventh meeting of the India-Russia Inter Governmental Commission on Military-Technical Cooperation in addressing issues of mutual concern. The sides took note of the progress made in important joint defence projects such as the refitment of aircraft carrier INS Vikramaditya (Admiral Gorshkov), joint development and production of Multi-Role Transport Aircraft, Fifth Generation Fighter Aircraft and licensed production of various Russian origin defence equipment and armaments in India.

Scientific and technological cooperation

13. The sides noted with satisfaction that the major mechanism of interaction between India and Russia in the field of science and technology was the Integrated Long-Term Program (ILTP) for cooperation in the areas of science, technology and innovations for the period up to 2020 that is unique by its scale and diversity. The sides noted with satisfaction that the Moscow office of the India-Russia Science & Technology Centre (IRSTC) was inaugurated and that the New Delhi office would also be inaugurated shortly. They observed that the Centre would work in the very important area of commercialization of technologies. The sides agreed to support technology intensive programmes in areas such as bio-medical technology, nanotechnology, deep-ocean techniques and technologies, and information & communication technologies.

The sides encouraged the ongoing dialogue on technology intensive cooperation in areas of technology solutions for fly ash utilization.

Education

14. The sides noted the exchange of delegations of experts to hold discussions on a new intergovernmental Agreement on mutual recognition and equivalence of educational documents and degrees including medical documents and degrees. The sides agreed to continue their constructive discussions on the issue and to promote educational exchanges between the two countries.

Cultural and humanitarian exchanges

15. The sides noted the deep and rich cultural heritage of both the peoples and centuries-old bonds of friendship between them. The sides commended the impact of the Festival of Indian Culture in Russia held in Moscow, St Petersburg and Kazan in September 2011 under the Cultural Exchange Programme for 2010-2012 between the Ministry of Culture and Tourism of the Republic of India and the Ministry of Culture of the Russian Federation that was signed on December 7, 2009. A festival of Russian Culture in India is scheduled for 2012.

Coordination at the United Nations

16. As an important element of their Strategic Partnership, both sides reaffirmed their commitment to work together to strengthen the central coordinating role of the United Nations in international affairs as well as the crucial role of its Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security. In this context, they reiterated their agreement to further strengthen their cooperation on issues related to the reform of the UN and its Security Council and stressed that the reform of the UN Security Council should be carried out in a manner that makes this body more representative and effective in dealing with both present and emerging challenges. The Russian Federation expressed strong support to India for a permanent seat in an expanded UN Security Council. The two sides also expressed satisfaction with their cooperation in the UN Security Council since January 1, 2011, when India joined the Council as a non-permanent member, and agreed to take this cooperation forward.

International financial and economic architecture

17. The sides expressed concern over negative trends in the global economy. They noted that the financial and economic situation in the Euro zone was a source of particular concern. The sides welcomed the decisions of the Cannes Summit of the G-20, particularly, the Action Plan for steady, sustainable and balanced growth of the global economy. The sides emphasized that all countries needed to implement the Plan in an active and coordinated manner.

18. The sides identified successful completion of the IMF reform under the terms and conditions agreed in the framework of the G-20 as a key element of the general reform of the international financial architecture.

Situation in the Middle East and North Africa

19. In the context of the situation in the Middle East and North Africa, the sides reaffirmed their commitment to the principles of: searching the way to overcome crises in the region in compliance with law, exclusively through peaceful means, avoiding violence and outside intervention, through broad, inclusive national dialogue on democratic reforms, taking into account the legitimate rights and aspirations of the peoples of the region.

20. They agreed that the fundamental transformation taking place in the states of the Middle East and North Africa should not be used as a pretext to delay resolution of lasting conflicts, but rather as an incentive to settle them. They spoke in favour of achieving comprehensive, just and final settlement of the Arab-Israel conflict on the basis of universally recognized international legal framework including the relevant UN resolutions, the Madrid principles and the Arab Peace Initiative. The sides support an early resumption of the Palestinian-Israeli negotiations aiming at the establishment of an independent, viable and territorially unified Palestinian State within the borders based on the lines of 1967, with negotiated mutually agreed territorial exchanges and East Jerusalem as its capital as well as joint efforts of the Middle East Quartet of international mediators. They called upon for early restoration of Palestinian unity. A common All-Palestinian position based on PLO principles and the Arab Peace Initiative would contribute to progress towards a Palestine-Israeli settlement, as also peace and security for all the countries and peoples of the region.

Security and cooperation in the region of Asia and the Indian and Pacific Oceans

21. The sides reiterated their support to the creation of a transparent, open, comprehensive, and balanced architecture of security and cooperation in the region based on the recognized principles of international law as well as respect for the legitimate interests of all states. They emphasized their commitment to the principle of indivisibility of security, unacceptability of attempts to enhance their own security to the detriment of other states' security, inadmissibility of preservation and creation of new dividing lines. The sides acknowledged the necessity of addressing both traditional and new security threats - terrorism, extremism, WMD proliferation, illicit drug trafficking, organized crime and maritime piracy. They expressed readiness to work closely within the framework of the East Asia Summit, which they regard as a leaders-led forum for dialogue on broad strategic, political and economic issues of common interest and concern with the aim of promoting peace, stability and economic prosperity in East Asia.

22. The sides agreed that the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) had become an important factor for regional security and cooperation. Russia welcomed India’s intention to join the organization as a full-fledged member and expressed the belief that its participation would significantly increase the political weight of the SCO and give new quality and dimension to cooperation within its framework. Russia stated that it stood for joint efforts with other SCO members to accelerate the process of India’s full membership of the organization.

23. The sides noted that there were already several examples of successful regional cooperation formats operating in Asia and Indian and Pacific Ocean region, including the interaction between Russia, India and China (RIC). The importance of this format in fostering regional dialogue and cooperation was reaffirmed in the Joint Declaration of the 10th RIC Ministerial Meeting held on November 15, 2010 in Wuhan.

Development of BRICS Cooperation

24. The sides attached importance to strengthening cooperation among BRICS countries. They welcomed the growing role of BRICS in international political and economic life. The sides noted with satisfaction the progress achieved within the BRICS framework on cooperation in finance, trade, science and technology, agriculture and healthcare. Both sides reaffirmed their desire to jointly contribute to further development of cooperation within BRICS for the benefit of peoples of participating states.

The sides expressed confidence that the forthcoming BRICS Summit in 2012 to be chaired by India would be an important step towards strengthening the role of the grouping in the reform of global governance and towards further deepening intra-BRICS cooperation.

Disarmament and non-proliferation

25. India and the Russian Federation, as responsible states, possessing advanced nuclear technologies, share the objective of preventive proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery, including preventing their possible acquisition by terrorist groups. Both sides agreed on the need for all states possessing nuclear weapons to accelerate concrete progress on the steps leading to global nuclear disarmament in a way that promotes international stability, peace and undiminished and increased security for all.

26. Both sides expressed interest in strengthening multilateral export control regimes as an important component of the global non-proliferation regime. In this regard, the Russian side reiterated readiness to assist and promote a discussion and positive decision in the NSG on India’s full membership in the NSG, and welcomed India’s intention to seek full membership. India underscored its determination to actively contribute to international efforts aimed at strengthening nuclear non-proliferation regime. The Russian Federation also took into consideration India’s interest in full membership in MTCR and the Wassenaar Arrangement.

27. While recognizing the inherent right of states to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, India and the Russian Federation stressed the need for all states to comply with their respective obligations on non-proliferation. The sides support the central role of the IAEA and its safeguards system in the promotion of peaceful uses of nuclear energy, in accordance with its statute. The sides intend to support international efforts aimed at promoting peaceful uses of nuclear energy as part of a proliferation-resistant architecture of international cooperation, based on strict implementation of non-proliferation obligations.
As supplier states, the sides support multilateral approaches to the nuclear fuel cycle at the IAEA.

Combating Terrorism

28. The sides recalled the bilateral Moscow Declaration between India and the Russian Federation on International Terrorism signed on November 6, 2001 in Moscow. They strongly condemned the existence of safe havens and sanctuaries for terrorism, and reiterated that States that aid, abet or shelter terrorists were as guilty of acts of terrorism as their actual perpetrators.

29. Both sides reaffirmed the need for all states to combine efforts to vanquish terrorism. They agreed that there was no justification whatsoever for any act of terrorism, and that India and Russia being pluralistic states were especially vulnerable to acts of terrorism which are attacks against the values and freedoms, enshrined in their societies. Both sides reaffirmed that international terrorism is a threat to peace and security, a grave violation of human rights and a crime against humanity. They reaffirmed the central role of the United Nations in the combat against international terrorism and in this context called for an early adoption of the UN’s draft Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism.

Combating Illicit Drug Trafficking

30. The sides emphasized the importance of joint bilateral and multilateral efforts in the fight against illicit drug trafficking which poses a growing threat to international peace and stability, taking into account the fact that this criminal business had become one of the main financial source of international terrorism. The sides confirmed their intention to closely interact in preparation for the Third Ministerial Conference of the Paris Pact initiative to be held in Vienna on February 16, 2012.

Iran’s Nuclear Energy Programme

31. India and the Russian Federation expressed concern over the situation emerging around Iran’s nuclear programme. Both sides support a comprehensive and long-term settlement of the situation through exclusively political and diplomatic means by promoting dialogue. The sides noted in this context that unilateral sanctions could be counter-productive. They recognized Iran’s right to develop research, produce and use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes in conformity with its international obligations. India and the Russian Federation urged Iran to comply with the provisions of the relevant UN Security Council Resolutions and extend full cooperation to the IAEA.

32. The sides expressed their readiness to continue promoting the establishment of Afghanistan as a peaceful, democratic and independent state, free from terrorism, outside interference and drug-related crimes, with a sustainable economy. They expressed concern over escalation of extremist activity throughout the territory of the country, including previously relatively peaceful provinces, drug production growth, and unresolved socio-economic problems.
33. Supporting the transfer of responsibility for the situation in the country to the National Security Forces, the sides urge to intensify efforts to build up their capacity. The sides believe that the international military presence in Afghanistan should be linked to the security situation on the ground.

34. India and the Russian Federation support the efforts taken by the Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan to establish a peaceful dialogue with the armed opposition, provided that the process goes on under the Afghan leadership and that the fighters meet the redlines enunciated by the international community: the recognition of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, renunciation of violence and breaking with al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations. They consider it necessary to continue the UN Security Council sanctions regime as an essential anti-terror tool.

35. The sides noted with satisfaction the growing global understanding of the important role played by the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan neighboring states, states and organizations of the region, and urge to focus the efforts in the region on the development and improvement of sound structures of regional cooperation, like the SCO and SAARC amongst others. They expect that the international community in their efforts in this regard will respect the decisions taken by the countries of the region in the framework of these organizations.

36. The Prime Minister of the Republic of India expressed his gratitude for the hospitality and cordial welcome during his official visit to Moscow and extended an invitation to the President of the Russian Federation to visit India. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.
Prime Minister: I have just completed a very successful visit to Russia and I am very satisfied with the results of the annual summit with Russia which we have just concluded. Our strategic partnership with Russia, which is special and privileged, is steadily forging forward.

The depth and range of our relationship with Russia is growing. Our strong strategic partnership in nuclear energy, defence and space will, in future, be buttressed by a stronger economic relationship. Premier Putin mentioned that there are over 400 India-Russia cooperation projects under implementation today. President Medvedev and I met with some of our CEOs and there are good prospects in pharmaceuticals, steel, diamonds and hydrocarbons.

We met at a time of turbulence in the world economy and uncertainty in the international order. We therefore discussed the political and economic situation in Asia and the world. We were both convinced that this complicated situation requires improvement and democratization of processes of global governance. President Medvedev described India as a strong contender for a permanent seat on the UNSC. Our views on current international issues, many of which are congruent, are expressed in the joint statement which is with you.

This has been a year of active diplomacy for India, with our immediate neighbours in the subcontinent, with major powers, and with our extended neighbourhood in SE Asia and West Asia. Although we end the year with increased uncertainty in the international system, it is clear that India also has opportunities in the UNSC, and the forums of BRICS, SAARC, G-20 and elsewhere to be a factor of peace and stability in the international system.

Question 1: On operationalisation of Kudankulam when ground realities are different?

Answer: Well there are difficulties, there are some people who are worried about safety of nuclear reactors and we have gone out of our way to assure as much as we can that the nuclear reactors that are being put up at Kudankulam are the safest available anywhere in the world. We have appointed a group of fifteen experts to interact with the representatives appointed by the Tamil Nadu Government to interact with the local people and more and more people including the legislators and Members of Parliament I think they are increasingly of the view that this agitation is overdone. I have been in touch with Tamil Nadu Government and its my sincere hope that Tamil Nadu which is short of power supply will recognise that here is a plant of 2000 megawatts set up at a cost to the nation of 14000 crore rupees, we cannot simply let it idle, if it generates 2000 megawatts of power, nearly 1000 megawatts will be available for Tamil Nadu and the rest 1000 megawatts will be available for other states in the south. So I am confident that ultimately good sense will prevail, politics is sometimes I think too murky, but in the final analysis, I am convinced that good sense prevails and will prevail in this case.

Question 2: Parochial sentiments prevailing apart from Kudankulam, Tamil Nadu being riparian state it is not getting its share of power? The Chief Minister has asked for more power to meet its needs?

Answer: Well the Chief Minister has written a letter to me recently asking for some additional allocation of power from the Central Government. We are working at it, we recognise the need of Tamil Nadu, we will work with the government of Tamil Nadu to satisfy the legitimate requirements of power, in a manner which is consistent with the overall availability in the country.

Interjection: But no power has been given.

Answer: Well we are at it and I was told that the Power Ministry has already indicated 100 megawatts straight away.

* * *

Question 4: In 2014, ISAF quitting Afghanistan, what is the role you visualise of India Russia cooperation thereafter?

Answer: The US has announced that their forces will quit Afghanistan after 2014, but whether they will pull out their entire team or leave behind some people is not clear so far. As far as Russia and India are concerned, even after the American and other ISAF forces pull out of Afghanistan we have to recognise that Afghanistan happens to belong to a region where we all reside, therefore whatever happens in Afghanistan is of deep interest to Russia, is of deep interest to India and deep interest to all the neighbours of Afghanistan.

We have been engaged in a continuous dialogue with Russia on Afghanistan, we did that again, and I am very confident that both our countries recognise that it is a very serious issue and we should put all our wisdom, knowledge and experience into play to find a joint cooperative path to tackle this difficult problem.

Hon'ble Madam Speaker,

I rise to make a statement on a Court hearing in a Russian city on the Bhagwad Gita that was raised in this august House yesterday by Hon'ble Members Shri Bhartruhari Mahtab, Shri Mulayam Singh Yadav ji, Shri Sharad Yadav ji, Shri Lalu Prasad ji, Shri Hukumdev Narayan Yadav ji, Shri V. Aruna Kumar and Dr. Prasanna Kumar Patasani. A number of other Hon'ble members also conveyed their deep sense of anguish over this issue. At the outset, allow me to mention that I fully share the sentiments expressed by the Hon'ble Members of the House on this issue.

Hon'ble Members referred to media reports about a hearing conducted by a Court in the Russian city of Tomsk on whether a Russian language commentary on the Bhagwad Gita qualifies as “extremist” literature. I would like to inform this august House of the facts of this case.

The International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKCON) has been functioning in Russia for decades. ISKCON has faced periodic problems with respect to its properties and functioning in Moscow and elsewhere. On occasion, our Embassy has intervened on behalf of ISKCON with the local city authorities as well as with the Russian Government.

ISKCON conveyed to our Embassy that its branch in Tomsk, Eastern Siberia, had received a notice in June 2011, of a complaint filed by the Public Prosecutor’s Office in the local court. This complaint, apparently driven by some local individuals, was to the effect that the third Russian edition of the publication “Bhagwad Gita As It is” – a translation of a commentary by Swami Prabhupada, founder of ISKCON – had certain portions that were ‘objectionable’ and ‘extremist’ in nature.

Following the initial proceedings in August 2011, the District Court appointed its own three member expert group from the University of Kemerovo (in Siberia), which was to submit a report within three months. The final hearing in the Tomsk District Court was due on December 19, 2011, but has been rescheduled for December 28, 2011, as the Court has agreed to seek the opinion of the Russian Ombudsman on Human Rights in Tomsk District, and of Indologists from Moscow and St. Petersburg, who have greater knowledge and expertise on India.

Officials of the Embassy of India in Moscow and our Ambassador have been in regular touch with the local representatives of ISKCON, since this matter came to light in June 2011.

ISKCON representatives were advised to take legal recourse to counter this misdirected complaint. We have also taken up this matter at the senior levels of the Russian Government. The Ministry of External Affairs has been in regular touch with our Embassy in Moscow on this issue. The matter was also taken up with the Russian Ambassador based in India, H.E. Mr. Alexander Kadakin who is himself a well-known Indologist. In fact the Ambassador has been publicly critical of this episode. He has stated that Bhagavad-Gita is a great source of wisdom for the people of India and the world. He also said that Russia is a secular and democratic country where all religions enjoy equal respect.

The complaint in a local Russian court appears to be the work of some ignorant and misdirected or motivated individuals. While this complaint is patently absurd, we have treated this matter seriously and the Embassy of India is closely monitoring this legal case.

Hon'ble Members would agree that the Bhagwad Gita is not simply a religious text; it is one of the defining treatises of Indian thought and describes the very soul of our great civilization. The Gita is far above any cheap propaganda or attacks by the ignorant or the misdirected. In Russia itself, we have many great Indologists, scholars and experts who understand the essence of the Gita and have written on it with reverence and passion. We do not want to dignify with too much attention some misdirected individuals who have filed an absurd complaint. We are confident that our Russian friends, who understand our civilizational values and cultural sensitivities, will resolve this matter appropriately.

_Note: When the Russian Court dismissed the plea for the ban_ Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs made the following statement on December 28, 2011:

“We are happy to learn that the legal case in connection with the publication, ‘Bhagavad Gita as it is’, has been dismissed by the Hon’ble Court in Tomsk in the Russian Federation. We appreciate this sensible resolution of a sensitive issue and are glad to put this episode behind us. We also appreciate the efforts of all friends in Russia who made this outcome possible. This demonstrates yet again that the people of India and Russia have a deep understanding of each other’s cultures and will always reject any attempt to belittle our common civilisational values.”

SLOVENIA

638. Briefing by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs, Joint Secretary (CE) and Joint Secretary (ERS) on visit of Slovenian Prime Minister and External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna’s visit to ASTANA for SCO Summit.

New Delhi, June 13, 2011.

(For Briefing on EAM’s visit to Astana for the SCO Summit Please see Document No.138.)

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon. My colleague Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison, Joint Secretary (Central Europe), and Mr. Ajay Bisaria, Joint Secretary (Eurasia) and I will like to brief you about two important visits.

First the state visit which has already begun of the Prime Minister of Slovenia HE Borut Pahor who would be in India till the 16th. Let me take you through the outline of his programme and delegation. The dignitary has already landed in Mumbai. Today he would be meeting with the Governor, and as we speak he is paying homage at the 26/11 Memorial at the Taj Mahal Palace.

He arrives in New Delhi later in the evening. Tomorrow, Prime Minister of India accords a ceremonial welcome to him, at Rashtrapati Bhavan. There would be calls on him by EAM. He calls on the President. At 1300 hours tomorrow there will be a Joint Business meeting organized by CII, FICCI and ASSOCHAM. Thereafter there is a call on him by the Leader of Opposition Shrimati Sushma Swaraj.

Next there is a call by him on the Vice-President and tomorrow evening he meets the Prime Minister and holds delegation-level talks, which will be followed by signing of agreements and a banquet. On Wednesday, 15th, he visits Agra and thereafter proceeds to Bangalore where he would be meeting with the Governor and visiting some of the centres of excellence including the Indian Institute of Sciences, Infosys, Biocon and also Narayana hospital. He leaves for home on the 16th evening.

PM Pahor is leading a high-power delegation including the Minister of Economy, Minister of Health, Minister of Transport, the State Secretary for Higher Education, a large number of senior officials as well as businessmen.

This is the first formal visit of a Head of State or Government from Slovenia although the former President and present President of the country, have come here on a private visit and for an international conference last year, respectively.
We recognized Slovenia as a separate nation on the 11th of May 1992 paving the way for the official visit of their Foreign Minister within a week thereafter. Slovenia is a fellow democratic nation and a developed country which is already a member of EU, with a per capita income of more than $22,000. Our relations have been expanding steadily. Like India, Slovenia sees India as a priority country.

We do enjoy a similarity of outlook on a host of international and regional issues. Furthermore, Slovenia has been supportive of India's aspirations and sensitive to our concerns, including our permanent membership of the UN Security Council and the threat of terror that we face. Slovenia had strongly condemned the terror attacks on Mumbai.

Trade is growing rapidly and quadrupled in five years to cross Euro 245 million last year with a balance in India's favour. We are exporting non-traditional goods to Slovenia. The country also has strengths in sectors like pharmaceuticals, auto components, electrical and engineering services and products. A number of Indian companies are looking at servicing the Central and Southeastern European markets like Austria, Southern Germany, Hungary, Czech and so on through Slovenia. Tata Motors have already entered the Slovenian market in 2009.

To spur the process of economic development we already have an agreement on trade and economic cooperation, a double taxation avoidance agreement, and more agreements are in the pipeline. Slovenia also sees India as a potential source of investments and hence the business team that is traveling with the Prime Minister. We are both interested in widening the scope of cooperation including in areas like science and technology, culture, parliamentary exchanges and so on.

A bust of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore is likely to be installed later this year in Slovenia. And as I said, a number of agreements are likely to be signed during the state visit of the Prime Minister of Slovenia.

* * * * *

Question: I have a question on Slovenia. If we are in as much synergy as we are supposed to have with Slovenia, why does it take a Prime Minister from there nineteen years to travel here?

Joint Secretary (CE) (Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison): Thank you, Nilov for that question, I was trying to get my bit in.

Slovenia itself is twenty years old. In fact it is celebrating its 20th anniversary. Once it had emerged into independence - and it was the first country out of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to emerge into independence in almost entirely nonviolent manner - it was economically the most advanced Republic of the region, and it got membership of EU in 2004. I think that answers your question. From 1992 to 2004, it is a short period within which to complete the requirements of Euro integration. And that was its understandable priority. But do remember that its Foreign Minister visited India within seven days of our recognizing the country and the Prime Minister was invited by us in 2006 and there was some issue which came up internally and since then we have been trying to schedule these visits. So, this scheduling predates the actual date of the visit.

Official Spokesperson: And as I said, the President of the country did visit India in February 2010 for attending the Delhi Sustainable Development Summit. And we have had regular exchanges at different levels. And also, just to reiterate what Banashri has just mentioned, in 2004 they became a member of EU and in the last five years our trade has shot up 400 per cent. So, things have been moving at a pace which is more than satisfactory.

* * * * * * * * *

Thank you very much.

639. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Slovenian Prime Minister Borut Pahor.

New Delhi, June 14, 2011.

At the invitation of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh, the Prime Minister of the Republic of Slovenia, H.E. Mr. Borut Pahor is paying a state visit to India from the 13th to 16th of June.

This morning, the Prime Minister of Slovenia was given a ceremonial welcome by the Prime Minister of India in the forecourt of the Rashtrapati Bhavan and thereafter laid a wreath at the Mahatma Gandhi memorial at Rajghat.

In the evening, the Prime Minister and the visiting dignitary held delegation level talks. Welcoming the first-ever Prime Ministerial visit from either side, the Prime Minister said that India wanted to develop closer ties with Slovenia both bilaterally and in multilateral and regional forums, including the United Nations as well as the European Union. The Prime Minister expressed his happiness at the fact that the visit coincided with the 20th Anniversary of Slovenian Independence. The two leaders reviewed different aspects of bilateral relations and expressed satisfaction at the steady and multi-faceted growth in cooperation between the two countries, including continued expansion in bilateral trade, despite the global economic downturn. They noted that there was substantial potential still to be tapped and agreed that the Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement (BIPPA) to be signed after the talks would send a timely positive signal to the business communities in both countries.

The Prime Minister and his Slovenian counterpart discussed global issues like reform of the UN Security Council, the global financial situation and international terrorism. Prime Minister Pahor reaffirmed the support of Slovenia for a permanent seat for India in expanded Security Council.

The two Prime Ministers witnessed the signing of the BIPPA by Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherji and the Economy Minister of Slovenia Ms. Darja Radiæ.

An agreement between the Indian Bureau of Indian Standards and its Slovenian counterpart was also signed and is expected to boost bilateral trade by facilitating a better mutual understanding of standards and norms of traded goods. Another Agreement was signed between the University of Nova Gorica and the Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore to promote institutional cooperation in the field of research & education with a focus on Environmental sciences, Materials Science, Physics, Agriculture and Engineering.

Prime Minister Pahor was received by the President and the Vice President. Earlier in the day, Minister for External Affairs and the Leader of the Opposition called on the Prime Minister of Slovenia. In the afternoon, Prime Minister Pahor spoke at a business luncheon, which was also addressed by the Minister of State for External Affairs Smt. Preneet Kaur.

To further strengthen the growing interactions between the two Parliaments, it was decided to establish a Parliamentary Friendship Group with Slovenia on the occasion of the visit. A Friendship Group with India already exists in Slovenian Parliament.

Prime Minister Pahor’s delegation includes the Ministers of Economy, Health and Transport as well as senior officials from other Ministries. Representatives from the Slovenian media and from a number of Slovenian companies are also part of the accompanying delegation.

The Prime Minister and his delegation arrived in Mumbai yesterday. After a meeting with the Governor of Maharashtra, who hosted a lunch in his honour, Prime Minister Pahor paid homage at the 26/11 Memorial at the Hotel Taj Mahal.

On 15th June 2011, Prime Minister Pahor would be travelling to Agra, and proceed to Bangalore before returning to Slovenia.

India and Slovenia have traditionally enjoyed warm and friendly relations, and the economic ties date back to several decades when, as a constituent Republic of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, it made a major contribution to the healthy trade between the two countries. Today, Indo-Slovenian relations which are strengthened by a commitment to shared values of democracy, pluralism, diversity and the rule of law are becoming broad-based and diverse. The economic and trade component, though small in value, is increasing rapidly; with a growth of about 140% over 2008-10. Investments also are gradually increasing in both directions.

641. Media Briefing by Secretary (West) on President’s visit to Switzerland and Austria.

642. Statement of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the media on board her special flight on her State Visit to Switzerland and Austria.

September 30, 2011.

Please see Document No.591.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

643. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Reception for the Indian Community hosted by Ambassador of India.

Geneva, October 2, 2011.

I am delighted to have this opportunity to interact with the Indian community and with other friends of India residing in Switzerland, many of whom have travelled to Geneva from other parts of the country.

I always look forward to interacting with the Indian community and well-wishers of India during my overseas visits, as I believe that they form a bridge between the country where they reside and India. Relations between countries are, indeed, built and nurtured by people on both sides. India is proud of its people who went abroad and earned the respect of others by the dint of their hard work and enterprise. I am aware that here, in Switzerland too, Indians have made significant contributions to the development of this country and are held in high regard by the people of Switzerland. The goodwill generated by them contributes profoundly to the relationship between India and Switzerland.

Relations between our two countries have a long history. The Father of the Indian Nation, whose birth anniversary falls today, came here in 1931. This morning, eighty years later, on his birthday it was my privilege to pay homage at the statue of Mahatma in Switzerland, in the tranquil Ariana Park located on the aptly named Avenue of Peace. The world over, today, is being observed as the International Day of Non-Violence. It is an occasion to reaffirm the principles of truth, peace and non-violence which Gandhiji, not only strongly advocated but ardently observed throughout his life. These values are relevant for the whole world even today. It is also significant that the statue was unveiled in 1997 to mark the 60th Anniversary of the Treaty of Friendship and Establishment between India and Switzerland in August 1948, the first such Treaty that independent India signed.
Our countries share many commonalities. We have a commitment to the fundamental principles of democracy and federalism. Deeply ingrained in our people is the mutual respect for differences and diversity within our respective nations. Shared values of rule of law and respect for human dignity bind our two nations and peoples together. Both our countries also share scientific traditions. India, the home of mathematics, geometry and invention of the Zero has an ancient scientific culture, while Switzerland is a leader in innovation, scientific and technological excellence and creativity. Yesterday, I visited CERN and was most impressed with the research work being done there and with the contributions that Indian scientists were making to the various activities in CERN.

Our countries are now exploring the establishment of a privileged partnership. This is my first visit to Switzerland and its purpose is to maintain the momentum of political exchanges which underpin our bilateral relations, and give them fresh substance. All of you can also contribute to this goal and help enhance bilateral ties.

India’s growth offers many opportunities for mutually beneficial cooperation. The Indian economy recorded consistently high rates of growth since 2003 and even the global economic downturn had a limited impact. Today, India is among the most attractive destinations globally, for investments and business and foreign direct investment has increased over the last few years. Since the Indian economy opened up in 1991, Indian companies faced international competition rather well, and have expanded their global footprint; some are here in Switzerland. This underlines that the benefits of economic engagement with India, flow in both directions. In many cases these Indian companies have helped Swiss companies retain their competitive edge.

The overriding priority in India today is to ensure that the benefits of India’s economic growth should reach all sections of society, in particular the poorer sections, so that they too can have a better life. We are also aware of the challenges of ensuring that the aspirations of our youth, who constitute more than 50 percent of our population today, are met; that they have the opportunities to get education and training needed to allow India to garner the demographic dividend.

Like India, Switzerland has some of the most prestigious educational institutions in the world, and the number of Indian students studying here has been growing. Indians have also contributed their expertise in numerous faculties of these institutions. During my visit, a Tagore Chair will be established at the University of Lausanne. This is a timely initiative for two reasons. Firstly, this year marks the 150th Anniversary of the great Nobel Laureate’s birth. Secondly, Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore is no stranger to Switzerland, which he visited to meet Romain Rolland, the renowned French philosopher-author and fellow Nobel Laureate.

Cultural ties are a vital component of relations between India and Switzerland. I understand that much of the credit for promoting Indian culture in this country goes to you. You have established societies and groups devoted to India. We acknowledge your efforts in this regard and your achievements. Each year, Pravasi Bharatiya Divas is organized in India in January. This year it is being organized in Jaipur. This event celebrates the success that the Indian Diaspora has achieved all over the world, and its timing was chosen to coincide with and to commemorate the date when Mahatma Gandhi returned to India in 1915 after his sojourn in South Africa. I hope to see many of you participating in these celebrations in the future.

In conclusion, I would like to appreciate your many contributions to strengthening Indo-Swiss ties, and encourage you to continue your endeavours to build contacts with the people of this beautiful country, and to raise India’s profile in this country. The strong and vibrant political and economic partnership between India and Switzerland will benefit from these efforts.

I wish you, your families, and all our Swiss friends present here success, happiness and prosperity. The festive season in India has begun and I wish all of you a very happy Dussehra.

Thank you.

Jai Hind!

I bring warm greetings from the people of the largest democracy to one of the oldest democracies in the world. It is a privilege to be here in the Parliament House Building, the seat of Switzerland’s unique and robust democracy, to meet the President and Federal Councillors of the Swiss Confederation.

My delegation and I are deeply touched by the gracious welcome that we received on our arrival in your beautiful country. We have no doubt that this special warmth shown to us is not just a reflection of Switzerland’s world-famous expertise in faultless hospitality; it is also a demonstration of the strong bonds of friendship linking our two peoples and our two countries.

Our shared democratic values have fostered a close understanding between our two countries from the very beginning. The Treaty of Friendship with Switzerland was the first such Treaty that independent India signed. There has been much transformation that our two countries - and, indeed, the world itself - has seen over the past six decades, but yet India-Swiss relations have stood the test of time.

President Calmy-Rey’s State visit to India in November 2007 provided significant impetus to further strengthening of our existing bilateral ties. Since then, there have been numerous exchanges between the two countries at all levels, covering a wide canvas that encompasses political, economic and cultural relations. The last visit to India of Madame Calmy-Rey in August 2010, as the Foreign Minister kept up the momentum that had been generated and added more substance to our bilateral relationship. Visits by the then Federal Councillor for Economic Affairs Mrs. Leuthard in 2008 and 2009, and her successor Federal Councillor Mr. Amman in April this year, accompanied by a large business delegation, maintained the focus on the economic dimension of our relationship. From the Indian side too, many Ministers have visited Switzerland. The interaction between political leaders dealing with key areas has been most productive.

In the last five years, the Indian economy has been growing at a sustained and consistent rate, despite the global financial crisis. The macro economic fundamentals of the Indian economy are strong and its regulatory mechanisms are sound. The economy grew at 8.6 percent last year. Keeping pace with our growth and our expanding market, India-Switzerland economic and commercial relations have also expanded steadily. Bilateral trade between the two countries has crossed 3.5 Billion Euros and is continuing to increase. Two-way investments have also shown a steady upward trend. However, there is a great scope for enhancement of the current economic interaction through further cooperation and collaboration in a number of areas. There are strong complementarities between Switzerland’s technological capabilities, and our own strengths and demands for high technology. In key areas such as clean technology, environmental protection and urban waste collection, Swiss industries can provide us with innovative solutions.

Switzerland ranks amongst the leading countries in the world in harnessing renewable sources of energy, including both wind and hydro. Thus, renewable energy is clearly a sector where there is a great potential for bilateral cooperation. There is also scope for greater collaboration in biotechnology, where the two countries could focus on cutting edge areas, such as bio-electronics and bio-informatics, and food processing, in which Switzerland has developed great expertise.

India too has gained recognition from the world for its human resources that makes it an ideal Research and Development location. It has also emerged as a hub for high quality, cost-competitive manufacturing. These advantages offered by India, taken together with the innovative culture of Swiss enterprises, have created enormous synergies between our two economies which we should harness to benefit both our people.

Switzerland, situated in the heart of Europe, surrounded by major European markets, has begun to attract investments from well-known Indian companies which have already established a significant global presence. The entry into force of the Amending Protocol to the existing bilateral Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement, signed in August 2010 will boost this trend. A Memorandum of Understanding on Financial Dialogue, which will be signed today, would provide a useful forum for exchange of views on financial and macro-economic issues. The bilateral Social Security Agreement signed in 2009, would also help industry in regards to its liabilities and contribution towards social security of its employees. We look forward to the early conclusion of the Trade and Investment Agreement between India and the European Free Trade Area, which will give a further boost to bilateral economic relations.

We welcome the increased participation of small and medium enterprises in bilateral economic interaction, as they play a major role in employment generation, technology innovation and diversification of exports. However, there is need for building the necessary skill base and, in this context, vocational training is of great importance. The Vocational Education and Training Initiative between our two countries which has contributed to capacity building efforts in India, needs to be broadened in scope and reach. India has launched a massive national programme for skill development where we aim at training five hundred million skilled personnel by 2022. We would like Switzerland to be India’s partner in this mission. 2011 has been a year when India has been very visible in Switzerland. It was the ‘guest’ country at BASELWorld, the well-attended annual exhibition of watches and jewellery. It was the ‘guest of honour’ at the recently concluded Geneva Festival and the ‘focus’ country at Locarno Film Festival. Such events reinforce people-to-people contacts in our relations and must be encouraged.

Tomorrow, we will be launching a new chapter of bilateral cooperation with the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding with the University of Lausanne to establish the ‘Tagore Chair on Indian Studies’. This Chair would be pivotal in bringing together scholars as well as students from both countries.

On the multilateral stage too, our countries have been actively and constructively collaborating on a wide range of issues. Both Switzerland and India believe that the United Nations system needs to be reformed to make it more democratic and effective. India is convinced that this would require, among other things, the expansion of the UN Security Council. We strongly believe that India meets and satisfies all objective criteria for having a permanent seat in the expanded Security Council. We thank the Swiss Confederation for supporting our candidature for a non-permanent seat in the Council for 2011-12, and hope that it would be able to support India’s aspirations to a permanent seat as well.

International Terrorism is one of the multilateral issues on which India and Switzerland share a common view. We appreciate the strong and unequivocal condemnation by Switzerland of terrorist attacks in India. The international community needs to work together to eliminate the forces of terrorism, which are inflicting wanton destruction across the globe at will. This is vital for peace and stability in the world.

Another global challenge facing humanity today which requires an urgent, collective and coordinated global response is climate change. For a country like India, with one of the smallest carbon foot-prints in the world, the first and overriding priority is to alleviate poverty and to address our severe energy deficit. Half a billion people in India still do not have access to commercial energy. Despite our huge developmental challenges, we are doing everything possible, within our means and resources, to contribute to the global action on climate change through an ambitious National Action Plan on Climate Change. We have already declared our commitment to keep per capita emissions below the average per capita emissions of developed countries.

Excellency, the historical nature of our relationship has transformed in recent years to a truly multifaceted partnership, with the potential for contributing to the prosperity and security not only of our two peoples, but in the world. Let us work together steadfastly towards this lofty objective.

Thank you.
645. Statement by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil to the media in Berne.

Berne, October 3, 2011.

I bring warm greetings and good wishes from the people of India - the largest democracy, to the friendly people of Switzerland - one of the oldest and most robust democracies in the world.

My delegation and I would like to thank the Government and the people of Switzerland, for the warm hospitality that we have received from the very moment of our arrival. We are delighted to be in Berne - the capital of a country renowned the world over, as much for the panoramic beauty of its mountains and lakes, as for the faultless precision of its technology.

India and Switzerland have much in common that we cherish and guard zealously - democratic values, respect for the rule of law, human rights, diversity of languages and religions. These commonalities have fostered close mutual understanding and cooperation on a wide range of issues - bilateral as well as multilateral. This was evident in the atmosphere as well as the content of the productive discussions, that I and my delegation had with President Micheline Calmy-Rey and other members of the Federal Council today.

I thanked the President for her personal contribution towards the strengthening of our bilateral relations. Her State visit to India in November 2007 was the highlight of the celebration of the 60th Anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Friendship and Establishment between our two countries. This was among the first Treaties that India signed after its independence. During President Calmy-Rey’s visit, the two sides had agreed to discuss the elevation of the bilateral relationship to the level of a Privileged Partnership. We discussed today some of the steps we could take to achieve this goal. In our view, this would require an enhancement of the frequency, as well as the quality of our interaction in areas such as economic and commercial cooperation, scientific ties, educational exchanges and people-to-people contacts.

I informed the Federal Council that India’s overriding priority is to achieve rapid, sustainable and inclusive development over the coming decades. This led to discussions about the many opportunities for win-win partnerships that the complementary strengths of our economies offer. For example, Switzerland is a world leader in many areas which are important for our development, such as clean technology, renewable energy, energy efficiency and urban waste collection. On the other hand, India has emerged as a global Research and Development hub, thanks to its pool of scientific and technical manpower. It is steadily gaining recognition for its high quality, cost-effective manufacturing facilities. Thus partnering with India can help Swiss companies retain their competitive edge, in the Indian market as well as globally.

6. The two sides were happy to note that 2011 has been a year of high visibility for India in Switzerland. It was the ‘guest’ country at BASELWorld. It was the ‘guest of honour’ at the recently concluded Geneva Festival and the ‘focus’ country at Locarno Film Festival. Such events reinforce the people-to-people contacts in our relations and must be encouraged.

7. In our discussions, we touched on economic, financial and fiscal cooperation between India and Switzerland. We noted that the Amending Protocol to the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement would provide a framework for exchange of tax-related information of importance to either side, when it enters into force. A Memorandum of Understanding on Financial Dialogue was also signed, which would provide a useful forum for exchange of views on financial and macro-economic issues.

8. A business delegation from India has accompanied me to explore opportunities for commercial and economic collaboration with Swiss partners and energize this important aspect of our relationship. I look forward to participating along with President Micheline Calmy-Rey in the Business Forum tomorrow, to urge them to increase bilateral economic interaction and to learn from the captains of industry from both sides, what more we can do to encourage them.

9. Another important event tomorrow that I look forward to is the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding with the University of Lausanne to establish the ‘Tagore Chair on Indian Studies’ which, I hope, would help bring together scholars as well as students from both countries.

10. India views Switzerland as an important partner in all international fora. Therefore, we discussed the important issue of the reform of the United Nations, including the expansion of the Security Council. India profoundly believes that unless the Security Council is restructured to reflect the contemporary realities, its ability to react effectively to the many emerging collective security challenges would be hampered.

11. We also discussed some international issues of common interest and concern. Among the areas touched upon was international terrorism which poses a serious threat to world peace and security. Open, tolerant, democratic societies like ours are particularly vulnerable. The terrorist attacks in Mumbai and more recently in Delhi, remind us that we must resolve to work jointly to eliminate this scourge.

12. Ladies and Gentlemen of the media, let me conclude by saying that today’s discussions have further consolidated our historical relationship. Moreover, they have contributed towards making it a dynamic and multifaceted privileged partnership, which has the potential to enhance the prosperity and security, not only of our two peoples but in the world.

Thank you.

646. Speech of President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Banquet hosted in her honour by President of the Swiss Confederation Mrs. Micheline Calmy-Rey.

Berne, October 3, 2011.

Your Excellency President Micheline Calmy-Rey, Mr. Andre Calmy, Excellencies Federal Councillors, Presidents of the National Council and Council of States, Other Distinguished Guests,

It is indeed a pleasure for me as well as for the members of my delegation to be here today in Berne. I would like to thank you Your Excellency, for the warm reception and hospitality given to us in the beautiful and historic Bernerhof.

Switzerland is known all over the world for its unique democratic institutions, designed to give citizens a voice on major issues; it is only natural that the relations between Switzerland and India should be warm and friendly. The Treaty of Friendship and Establishment between India and Switzerland signed on 14th August 1948 by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, was one of the first treaties to be signed by India as an independent country. The words in this Treaty that “There shall be perpetual peace and unalterable friendship” between our two countries ring true today, and will for the years to come.

Switzerland’s contribution to India’s development in the early years after our Independence is appreciated and well-remembered. Today, as India emerges as a powerful engine of the global economy, new opportunities are emerging for mutually beneficial cooperation. The growing Indian middle class offers a huge market for the high quality consumer goods that Switzerland is famous for. The advanced technology developed in many areas by your firms, can help in the updating our techno-industrial base in sectors, which will sustain our development. India’s strengths in Research and Development, and the sophisticated yet cost-effective manufacturing facilities it offers, can help Swiss companies retain their competitive edge globally.

Excellency, the people of India are familiar with Switzerland. Your panoramic and picturesque sceneries have been the backdrop of many Indian movies. These films have made Switzerland an attractive destination for Indian travellers. More and more Indian tourists are coming here. As there have been a number of events in your country focusing on India, including its being the Guest of Honour, at the popular annual Geneva Festival, these will, I hope result in more Swiss people travelling to India.

People-to-people contacts including between students and academics add vigour to the relationship between countries. I am happy that we would be making an excellent beginning towards encouraging such educational exchanges, by establishing the Tagore Chair of Indian Studies at the University of Lausanne.

May I once again extend our gratitude to you for having made our stay here so special. It is indeed, a matter of great pleasure for me and my delegation to have had the chance to visit your beautiful country.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, I now invite you to join me in a toast to:-

- the success, good health and prosperity of Her Excellency President Micheline Calmy-Rey and Mr. Andre Calmy, the other Honourable Members of the Federal Council and their spouses;
- the further strengthening of our abiding friendship and multi-faceted ties; and
- the peace, progress and well-being of the peoples of India and Switzerland.

Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the Indo – Swiss Business Forum.

Berne, October 4, 2011.

I would like to begin by thanking the Economiesuisse, the Swiss India Chamber of Commerce as well as the members of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, for arranging this Conference during my visit to Switzerland. I am also happy to see members of CII and ASSOCHAM here amongst us. I am delighted to be with the representatives of Swiss and Indian industry here in Berne today. I am well aware that the partnership between India and Switzerland, owes a lot to the joint efforts of all of you gathered here.

Switzerland and India share many common values and beliefs. Foremost among them are the deep-rooted democratic system, a secular, multi-linguistic and multi-cultural society, and a respect for the rule of law and human rights. The warm and friendly bilateral relationship is a natural outcome of our shared values. The Treaty of Friendship and Establishment, signed by India and Switzerland in 1948, was among the first that independent India signed. It is the cornerstone on which the bilateral relationship has been built. It is a relationship which today encompasses collaboration and cooperation in diverse fields - political, economic, scientific and cultural. The objective of my State Visit to Switzerland is to accelerate our bilateral relations in all these spheres.

Let us begin by looking at the trade links between our two countries. These have a long history. It was in 1856 that the Volkhart Brothers set up companies in both countries, with the main purpose of trading in cotton and industrial goods. Today, Switzerland has emerged as a leading trading partner for India outside the EU. The liberalization of the Indian economy gave a real boost to two-way trade, which nearly doubled in ten years between 1995 and 2005, and increased at an even faster rate to cross Swiss Francs 3.5 billion last year; dipping only a little during 2009 due to the global economic downturn. However, the Indian and the Swiss economies have both demonstrated resilience. As a consequence, the first half of 2011 has seen continued upward surge in our commercial exchanges.

While bilateral trade trends are encouraging, we get a complete picture of the economic engagement between our two countries only when we also look at the investments. Switzerland is among the top foreign investors in India and currently ranks 11th. About 170 Joint Ventures and subsidiaries of Swiss companies are operating in India, in diverse fields including heavy engineering, precision tools, chemicals, pharmaceuticals, textiles and IT services. Switzerland has been a good source of technology transfer, helping Indian companies to upgrade their production capabilities. Over the last fifteen years, there have been over 7,800 technical collaborations between Indian and Swiss companies.

Recent developments have been promising and give strong grounds for optimism about the bright future of the economic partnership between India and Switzerland. Firstly, even though relatively small in number, Indian companies have begun to invest in Switzerland. This trend is bound to strengthen as Indian MNCs further expand their global operations. Secondly, Swiss Small and Medium Enterprises have begun to look at the opportunities that are offered by the growing Indian market, as well as its cost-effective manufacturing facilities. Thirdly, the bilateral Social Security Agreement signed in 2009, would also help the industry in regards to its liabilities and contribution towards social security of its employees.

India is at present the second fastest growing economy in the world. Since the 1990s the average growth rate has been more than 6 percent and it reached close to 9 percent in recent years. There was a decrease in the growth rate in 2008 due to the global economic crisis, but we fast reverted to our high growth path. I would like to highlight that India’s growth story is not only a reflection of the new dynamism of a young India, but it is also a reaffirmation that the values of democracy, pluralism and the rule of law can sustain high economic growth. Further, the economic transformation under way in India, not only augurs a better future for its one billion plus people; it has also helped India become an anchor of stability and a hub of opportunity for the global economy. It is, therefore, not surprising that India has been projected to become the second most attractive destination for Foreign Direct Investment in 2010-12, as per UNCTAD’s World Investment Report.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Swiss companies with their advanced technologies have been a part of India’s growth story. They have played an important role in building up India’s infrastructure and industrial base. They have profited from their ventures in India. Interestingly, a study conducted by the Swiss Embassy last year, based on the responses it received from 132 out of the 170 Swiss companies operating in India, found that despite the global economic recession, many of the existing collaborations were expanding. The past experience should leave no one in doubt that closer economic ties between our two countries will be a win-win partnership. India has launched a massive national programme for skill development where we aim at training 500 million skilled personnel by 2022. I call on Switzerland to be India’s partner in this mission. The Vocational Education and Training Initiative between our two countries that has contributed to capacity building efforts in India, can play an important role in this. We would like it to be further expanded and also to broaden its scope.
India is negotiating a Free Trade agreement with the European Free Trade Area which includes Switzerland. Trade as well as investments will get a definite boost from the conclusion of this Agreement.

It would be remiss of me not to recognize the role played by the business chambers, as well as the Embassies in the two countries, in enhancing the flow of information on investment and trade related issues. This has made an invaluable contribution to supporting the establishment of joint ventures and strategic alliances between enterprises of both countries. I urge them to keep up the good work.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

As you can see, there is tremendous potential to expand the Indo-Swiss bilateral partnership. I urge you to fully utilize the opportunity of meeting today, to impart further momentum to business relations between our two countries. You can be sure of a helping hand from the two governments, as they are committed to taking the bilateral economic ties to ever greater heights.

Thank you.

649. Speech by President Shrimati Pratibha Devisingh Patil at the unveiling of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore’s bust at the University of Lausanne.

Lausanne, October 4, 2011.

I am very happy to be in the historic University of Lausanne. Established as a School of Theology in 1537, it has come a long way over the centuries to emerge as one of the leading universities in Europe. It has constantly expanded and diversified its faculties, and has established active international exchange programs with universities across the world.

Today, on its campus, I will have the honour to unveil the statue of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, a personality of outstanding caliber and one deeply committed to the cause of education. He established, in the last century, Santiniketan, which is a renowned University in India. He sought to make Santiniketan, “the connecting thread between India and the world”. He saw education and learning as vehicles for appreciating the rich aspects of other cultures, while respecting one’s own culture. An MOU being signed today between the Indian Council for Cultural Relations and the University of Lausanne establishes the Rabindranath Tagore Chair on Indian Studies here, a pioneer venture which will begin with the teaching of Hindi. This will add a bit of India to the rich palette that this University offers.

Rabindranath Tagore became an international figure when “Gitanjali”, his anthology of poems was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1913. It was the first time that this prize was given to an Asian. He was not only a poet, writer, scholar, painter, educationist and philosopher but also, perhaps, the most able goodwill ambassador of modern India, and did a lot to acquaint the world about its marvelous as well as its vast and rich cultural ethos. He was a great patriot and an inspiration for our freedom movement. He was the author of India’s National Anthem. He visited your beautiful country at the invitation of French author and philosopher Romain Rolland, whom he counted among his close friends. Rolland was very anxious that, and I quote, “People see in Tagore only the sage, the educationist, the prophet, and they will not see the poet.” Unquote. Such was the multi-faceted personality of Rabindranath Tagore.

Rabindranath Tagore was, indeed, all of these and more - and is remembered for his writings and poems as well as his wisdom and vision. He wrote extensively on many subjects, forever arguing in favour of unity, harmony and peace. He grasped the wisdom of the past, and also understood the importance of new thinking for addressing the various challenges in an ever-evolving world. We, indeed, live in a dynamic world where change is constant. The agility with which we respond to new circumstances is a measure of our preparedness for taking advantage of emerging situations. Knowledge societies will be demanding both in the search for philosophies to live meaningful lives and in the use of technologies for human development. Societies of the 21st Century will be an outcome of how this generation, and succeeding generations, will act in the overall interest of the progress of the human race.

Rabindranath Tagore wrote, “The highest education is that which does not merely give us information but makes our life in harmony with all existence.” Students of institutions such as Lausanne University, with their education and intellectual capacity, can contribute much to the world by living in harmony with each other and with nature. It is only when you involve yourself with something bigger than your own personal advancements, that will you help in writing history and in shaping society. As citizens of the world you would, I am sure, work hard to realize your dreams. Dreams may not always be realized fully, but we must attempt to go out as far as we can in our efforts, for therein lies satisfaction and therein lies the strength of an individual. Before us, many amazing personalities like Rabindranath Tagore constantly strove to live noble lives.

The bronze bust of the great Nobel Laureate unveiled today in the University of Lausanne, is a tribute not only to him but is also a symbol of the close ties between India and Switzerland. This year marks the 150th Birth Centenary of this great personality and the Chair established today commemorates this. We have got from India, a collection of books written by and on Rabindranath Tagore, as well as some audio visual material which will be handed over to the University. I am sure these will be useful in studies about India.

I wish you the very best for your future.

Thank you.

TURKEY

651. Media Briefing by Secretary (West) M. Ganapathi on Vice-President’s visit to Turkey.

New Delhi, October 08, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good afternoon and welcome. Good to see all of you.

Vice-President of India would be paying an official visit to Turkey from the 10th to the 15th of October this month. Secretary (West) Mr. M Ganapathi is here to brief you about the forthcoming visit of the Vice-President. He is also joined by two of my colleagues, to his right Mrs. Banashri Bose Harrison, our Joint Secretary looking after Central Europe and Europe West, and to my left is Mr. P. Harish who is the Joint Secretary in the Vice-President’s Secretariat.

Sir, the floor is yours.

Secretary (West) (Shri M. Ganapathi): Thank you, Vishnu. Good afternoon friends from the media.

I am grateful that Mr. Vishnu Prakash, Joint Secretary (XP), Smt. Banashri Bose Harrison, Joint Secretary (Central and West Europe), and Shri P. Harish, Joint Secretary and OSD to the Hon. Vice-President of India could join us. I am grateful that all of you could spare a Saturday afternoon to be with us. Of course, among the many reasons is we just returned from our overseas visit overnight.

The Hon. Vice-President of India will be paying an official visit to Turkey from the 10th to the 15th of October, that is coming Monday.

The members of the delegation accompanying the Hon. Vice-President will include: Shri Mukul Wasnik, Minister of Social Justice and Empowerment, and the Hon. Members of Parliament Shri Sitaram Yechury, Shri Ranjitsingh Vijaysinh Patil, Shri Vijay Pal Singh and Smt. Ingrid McLeod. Senior officials, including Shri Shumshere Sheriff, Secretary to the Hon. Vice-President, and Shri Pinak Ranjan Chakravarty, Special Secretary (Public Diplomacy) from the Ministry of External Affairs will form part of the delegation. Members of the media will naturally accompany the Hon. Vice-President. And some members of the Indian business who are based in Turkey along with their representatives from India would join.

There have been a number of high-level visits in recent years between the two countries. In November 2008, we had the Prime Minister of Turkey, His Excellency Mr. Recep Tayyip Erdogan in India. The President of Turkey, Mr.
Abdullah Gul, visited us in February 2010. Hon. Vice-President's visit is in continuation of these high-level exchanges between India and Turkey.

The Hon. Vice-President’s visit commences in Ankara where he will hold delegation-level talks with a delegation of Members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly led by the Speaker of the Turkish Grand National Assembly His Excellency Mr. Camil Cicek. The Hon. Vice-President will be received by the President of Turkey, Mr. Abdullah Gul, and he is also expected to meet the Prime Minister of Turkey, His Excellency Mr. Recep Tayyip Erdogan. It is expected that during the discussions between the Hon. Vice-President and his Turkish counterparts the entire gamut of bilateral, regional and international issues will be covered.

The Hon. Vice-President will pay homage to the founder of the Republic of Turkey, Mustafa Kemal Ataturk at his Mausoleum in Ankara. He will also visit the historical Provinces of Konya and Nevsesir which is also better known as Cappadocia. He will visit Istanbul where he will participate in a Business Forum at the Turkish Chamber of Businessmen and Industrialists. While in Konya, the Hon. Vice-President will be conferred an Honorary Doctorate for International Relations by the Mevlana University.

India’s relations with Turkey have a historical bearing. The links between our two countries are civilisational, encompassing architecture, arts, language and cuisine. In fact I am told that the word pyaaz is a Turkish word, which I came to know only today. India recognises the geographical and geopolitical importance of Turkey as a strong democratic, vibrant and economically growing nation situated on the crossroads of Asia and Europe. Turkish leaders have noted the democratic ideals of India, the secular nature of its polity, its emerging economy and India’s position in regional and international politics. Both countries understand each other well drawing their inspiration from their historical connections and the long association between the leaders and the peoples of two countries.

From a people to people point of view, the name Urdu can be traced back to its Turkish origins. The Sufi philosophy of Mevlana Jelaluddin Rumi found a natural resonance in the subcontinent’s tradition of Sufism. And the Mevlana University I mentioned is also after Mevlana Jelaluddin Rumi.

In the economic and commercial area we see Turkey as among our important partners in the region today. Two-way trade between the two countries touched US$ 4 billion in 2010 of which India’s exports were of the order of US$ 3.4 billion and imports from Turkey into India accounted for US$ 606 million.

More than 112 Indian companies have registered their business in Turkey with investments in areas ranging from infrastructure and automobiles to IT and consultancy services. Some of the prominent Indian companies with a presence in Turkey include GMR Infrastructure Limited, which recently won the bid for the construction of the airport in Istanbul on a BOT basis, Tata Motors, Mahindra & Mahindra, Reliance, the Aditya Birla Group, Ispat, Tractors and Farm Equipment Limited, WIPRO and Dabur India Limited. Among the leading Turkish companies which have a presence in India in the infrastructure and oil and petrochemical sectors are LIMAK Construction and Fernas Construction Company.

The Indo-Turkish Joint Commission on Trade and Economic Cooperation is co-Chaired by the Commerce Ministers of the two countries to give direction towards further consolidation and development of economic and commercial cooperation between the two countries. Both India and Turkey also have signed an Agreement for Avoidance of Double Taxation as also an Agreement for Reciprocal Protection and Mutual Promotion of Investments. Agreements for development of Science and Technology and for cooperation in the IT sector also exist between the two countries. A Joint Study Group has also been commissioned to examine the feasibility of setting up a Free Trade Agreement between India and Turkey.

Cooperation in the cultural and education sectors has also been fairly active. Since 1995 an Indian Professor has been on deputation to the Indology Department in the Ankara University to teach Hindi. Similarly, two Turkish language Professors have been deputed to the Jawaharlal Nehru University and the Jamia Millia University. MoUs for cooperation have also been concluded between Universities in Turkey and India. Indian culture, including films, dance, yoga and Ayurveda and Indian cuisine obviously, have been drawing attention in Turkey.

Turkey’s first Nano-satellite – the ITUpSAT1 - manufactured by the Istanbul Technical University’s Faculty of Aeronautics was launched by ISRO’s PSLV C-14 launch vehicle on September 23, 2009.

There are just under 150 Indian nationals in Turkey with most of them in Istanbul working in commercial organisations. But we have seen a trend now where some Indian professionals have been moving to Turkey to work in their overseas offices there. There are around a dozen lecturers/professors and around two dozen Indian students in different Universities in Turkey including in the Mevlana University.

Both India and Turkey are members of the G20. Today Turkey is the 16th largest economy in the world. It is the only Eurasian country in NATO. Its association with Europe through the Customs Union with the EU could offer opportunities for Indian business.
I should also mention that both India and Turkey have been victims of international terrorism. Recently Ankara saw a bomb blast. Both our leaders have been concerned about the spread of international terrorism, and have called for steps to be taken to jointly eliminate this scourge.

Hon. Vice-President’s visit will provide an additional impetus and momentum towards further consolidation and strengthening of the broad-based, multifaceted and comprehensive partnership between India and the Republic of Turkey in areas of mutual interest to mutual benefit. This would also reinforce the close traditional and historical friendship between India and the Republic of Turkey.

Thank you.

Official Spokesperson: Any questions?

Question: You mentioned about Turkey’s secular credentials. Turkey of late is seeking refuge in its Islamic identity. It is becoming now more and more prominent. It seems that the fulcrum of the Islamic world is also moving to Turkey which is causing alarm in the West as well as in Israel. What is India’s position on this? Also, could you throw more light on the free trade agreement and the joint study group which is set up? When was it set up, when is it filing its report, and what would be the contours of this agreement?

Secretary (West): On the first question I would say it would be incorrect for us to comment on the internal affairs of any country.

On the Joint Study Group, it is still examining the details and it will take a little while. We will be able to revert back to you but right now I think it is still at a very preliminary examination stage.

Question: When was the last time an Indian Head of State or Prime Minister visited Turkey?

Secretary (West): We had Mr. Atal Bihari Vajpayee visit Turkey in 2003. Before that Shri Rajiv Gandhi had visited Turkey in 1988. Of course the first visit was by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in 1960.

Question by Turkish journalist: You said that the Prime Minister of Turkey visited India in 2008 and you have clearly pointed out that the relations between India and Turkey are booming in the sense of good cooperation as well. My question is on the Pakistan issue. Today you have, as I have observed, lots of problems with Pakistan. But till 2000, Turkey had a very close relation with Pakistan. But Prime Minister Erdogan’s party has kept a neutral position and kept a neutral position on the Kashmir issue as well. Today, the economic relations between India and Turkey are much better than those between...
Pakistan and Turkey. How does India see Turkey as regards Pakistan? Do you think that Turkey can play a role in the peace process between India and Pakistan?

Secretary (West): I will start by saying that during such high-level visits as that of the Vice-President of India, the entire gamut of bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest and mutual concern are touched upon. As you are aware, the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. We have repeatedly made it clear and it has been accepted by the international community that issues as they may be would be discussed bilaterally between the two countries.

Official Spokesperson: As the Secretary has mentioned, as far as the issue of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir is concerned, if there are any issues that can be, and are being discussed with Pakistan. As far as the relationship of Turkey with Pakistan is concerned, every country has a right to have a relationship with any country as it deems fit. So, you have your relationship. But what we are talking about is the relationship between India and Turkey and the Secretary has already spoken about the manner in which this robust relationship is developing further, is diversifying further and is deepening further.

Question: Is there any specific agreement, especially in business, which is going to be signed during this visit?

Secretary (West): I am told the standard operating procedure on agreements is, we do not announce agreements before the visit commences and takes place. So, we will have to wait till the visit concludes. But insofar as the business part of the visit is concerned, the Hon. Vice-President will be addressing, as I said, the Turkish Chamber of Businessmen and Industrialists in Istanbul where he will talk about Indo-Turkish economic and commercial cooperation and the opportunities available in India, to an audience which will include both Turkish and Indian business persons.

Question: Sir, what can be the possible areas, new areas of cooperation between the two countries during this visit?

Secretary (West): Naturally this has to be the economic and commercial sector.

Question: Which are these sectors?

Secretary (West): I think the traditional areas which have been going on. One of the strengths of the relationship has been in the cotton yarn textiles sector. But we would look at infrastructure development because India has set aside one trillion US dollars over the next five years for development of its infrastructure. And what is very important is, some of the Turkish companies have strengths in this area. Similarly we have, as I mentioned GMR International is already in Turkey looking at the airport. That is one area. Then we have IT sector which is going to be another important area, and automotive and automobile sector, and engineering. Of course education would be another area where we would look at opportunities as they come in.

Question: Sir, after the attack on flotilla there is a problem between Israel and Turkey. We have good relations with Israel as well. What would be our position in this case if the situation may worsen between Turkey and Israel in future?

Secretary (West): I will again put it this way that since we are talking of the Vice-President’s visit, the entire gamut of relations which would have a regional and international bearing will be touched upon in the discussions. And it would be correct for all of you perhaps to wait when the Vice-President meets you and briefs you on the outcome of the visit on his return because that will be the best area to have an insight into what was discussed and what is the outcome.

Question by Turkish journalist: As I know, Hon. Vice-President’s uncle signed an agreement in 1951, just sixty years ago, between India and Turkey on cultural relations. I have got the information from the Turkish Embassy here that they are going to celebrate this year as the cultural and the society-based programmes. What kind of programmes India and Turkey will have in India? It is very interesting that the Vice-President’s visit to Turkey has different programmes Mevlana University, Honorary Doctorate will be given to him, and in Istanbul he will visit some of the intellectuals of Turkey as well. What kind of cultural fields India and Turkey will share?

Secretary (West): As I said, our cultural relations are historical right across the spectrum. I mentioned from the point of view of India films, dances, culture, theatre, they are all very popular. Similarly from Turkey some of your traditional dances are very well appreciated and known here. So, I think right now we have a programme of cultural cooperation. The next programme for 2012-2013 is already discussion. So, obviously when the officials of the Indian Council for Cultural Relations and the Turkish counterparts finalise the elements which would go into such cultural cooperation, this will also include various segments which you mentioned.

Official Spokesperson: I take it that there are no more questions.

Secretary (West): May I just say, enjoy your visit. Turkey is a very beautiful place among other things. Work and pleasure! Enjoy it.

Thank you.
652. Address by Vice President M. Hamid Ansari at the function to confer on him the Honorary Doctorate for International Relations by Mevlana University at Konya, Turkey.

Konya (Turkey), October 12, 2011.

“A man, never having seen water, is thrown blindfolded into it, and feels it. When the bandage is removed, he knows what it is. Until then, he only knows it by its effect”.

When one comes to the city of Mevlana, and to a university bearing his name, it is only appropriate to commence with his wisdom about the difference between feeling and knowing.

Needless to say, I am delighted to be here and feel elated by the honoured bestowed on me today. I come as a traveller who has known of the destination but has taken long to reach it. The Persian saying dair aayed, durust aayed does help console me.

Turkey and India have known each other for centuries. Both were important pillars of a seamless, borderless world of culture, art, spiritualism and philosophy that extended from Maghrib and Andulusia in the west to all corners of Asia in the east, enriched humanity for over a millennium, assimilated and synthesized many distinctive local, cultural and ethnic features and displayed much diversity within unity. Both contributed to it in ample measure; both take pride in this heritage.

There are similarities and parallelism in this heritage. This is most vividly evident in mysticism, the great spiritual current that runs through all religions. In Islam it is called Sufism and the period from the 9th to 15th century witnessed the emergence of a great many masters in Iraq, Iran, Khurasan, Turkey and India whose teachings are revered to this day and have a mass following. Amongst them were Jalaluddin Rumi in Turkey and Moinuddin Chishti in India. They were virtual contemporaries; Chishti died in 1236 and Rumi in 1273.

Nor were they alone. Yunus Emre in Anatolia who died in 1320, became a folk saint in his lifetime and is regarded as an outstanding example of Turkish humanism. Consider the following:

We regard no one's religion as contrary to ours
True love is born when all faiths are united as a whole

And:

The man who does not see the nations of the world as one
Is a rebel even if the pious claim he is holy “True faith”, he observed succinctly, “is in the head, not in the headgear”.

Almost a century and a half later Kabir, brought up in a weaver’s family in northern India, was a folk saint in a similar mould who sought to find commonalities in faiths. The theme was pervasive in his utterances. I draw attention of this audience to the following:

Allah the Invisible pervades in us all
You must realise it in your heart
He is the same both in Hindu and the Turk
Says Kabir, after due thought

And

If Allah dwells in a mosque alone,
What about the rest of space?
The Hindus believe that He abides in the image of the deity
The truth is missed in either case

And

Muslim’s mosque and Hindu’s temple
Make them follow separate paths
The Lord dwells in the heart of man
Both Hindus and Muslims miss that

The tradition, of reverence to mystics, and benefiting from their teachings of ascetic living, egalitarianism, and brotherhood of all faiths, continues to be a living reality in India and has contributed to the spiritual fertility of our society. An excellent example in modern times is one of India’s greatest poets, Mohammad Iqbal, who drank deeply from the fountain of Konya; many of his works and individual poems are vividly reflective of the impact of Mavlana’s teachings.

It is this backdrop of a plural society and a tradition of accommodation and synthesis that has allowed modern India and its democratic polity to develop and put into practice a secular polity. This is a basic feature our Constitution and cannot be amended.

Thus for different reasons, and traversing different paths, modern Turkey and modern India reached the same destination, considered essential for our wellbeing in the modern world.

If convergence characterised the spiritual realm, physical distance, infrequent contacts and complex considerations of statecraft conditioned political relations between our two countries in medieval times. In the last century, Indian public’s support for Turkey was evident during the Balkan War and Turkey’s struggle after World War I to regain independence, identity and dignity was keenly watched and admired. In 1935 the author Halide Edib spent some time in India, met Mahatma Gandhi and other leaders of our freedom struggle, gave extensive lectures about modern Turkey, and wrote that India was “nearer to my soul-climate than any other country not my own”.

Countries, like individuals, live by professed values and defined interests. The purpose of public policy is to develop the capacity to protect and promote these values and interests, and to respond to challenges.

The stability and fixed patterns and processes that were a feature of the Cold War period are today a matter of history. Instead, we face changing alliances and interests, new modes and instruments of conflict, and universalisation of normative standards of fundamental and human rights. This churning, and shift in world and regional power balances, will continue.

The unprecedented political and social challenges in every region of the world have been further compounded by the precarious global economic situation, described by Professor Jeffery Sachs as “the great failure of globalization”. It has, to quote an eminent Indian economist, “eroded social stability”.

It is in this context that I wish to speak to you about India’s world view.

Our view of the world stems from our civilisational heritage and experience of history. We do believe that every human irrespective of identity, affiliation, faith, nationality, gender or region has an inherent right to a better life, the development and utilization of his/her capabilities to the fullest, and to participate and contribute in productive ways to their communities and nations.

States have a duty to their citizens to enable them to freely choose their paths to development and self-fulfilment.

Based on these premises, India has also stood steadfast to the basic principle of full sovereignty and independence of peoples, and their states, in an inclusive, representative, and increasingly pluralist world community.

We abhor any attempt aimed at disruption of the national unity and the territorial integrity of States, and seek the observance of the letter and spirit of the Charter of the United Nations.

We want to see an inclusive world order, a world united by partnerships based on mutual respect and benefit, not divided into blocs or alliances of competing interests. We believe that the benefits of globalization must be inclusive, across and within nations. We remain convinced that dialogue and cooperation are the best way to address the new global challenges. Institutions of global political and economic governance, including the United Nations and Bretton Woods institutions, should reflect contemporary realities and not perpetuate historical contexts and divides.

The primary objective of Indian policy is to improve the lives of our own people through sustained development. For this we need a prolonged period of peace, a peaceful periphery and an enabling international environment that would allow us access to essential resources, technology, and permit free trade.

We cannot but notice the pockets of turbulence in our common area. India and West Asia have enjoyed cultural, intellectual and commercial ties since ancient times. The turmoil that some countries in West Asia and North Africa have experienced in recent months is a matter of great concern to us.

The people of the region seek to shape their own future and their wishes must prevail. However, violent means must be abjured by all sides. As a member of the Security Council since the beginning of this year, India has been underlining the need to resolve conflicts through political negotiations and diplomatic means, rather than through the use of force.

A primary cause of tension, instability and violence in the region is the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. India fully supports the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognizable borders side by side and at peace with Israel.

The conflict is political and cannot be resolved by force. At the same time, protracted negotiations over decades have not achieved the national goals of the Palestinian people and have fuelled disappointment and anger.

India was the first non-Arab country to recognize the Palestinian State in 1988 and will support its aspirations in the United Nations.

The upheaval in Libya is characterized by a fast changing situation and the Transitional National Council has now acquired effective control. We believe that the normalization of the situation should be in the hands of the Libyan people themselves - guided by democratic norms, respecting popular aspirations and preserving the sovereignty and integrity of Libya.

India has been in touch with the Transitional National Council in Benghazi and Cairo and has reiterated its willingness to extend all possible assistance to the people of Libya in their political transition, rebuilding and reconstruction activities.

We are concerned at the unfolding situation in Syria which has resulted in many deaths of civilians and security personnel. We deplore all violence, irrespective of who the perpetrators are. The Syrian government has announced some far-reaching measures and it should be given the time and space to implement them. The actions of the international community should facilitate an inclusive political engagement of the Syrian government and the opposition, rather than complicate the situation through threats of sanctions.

India firmly believes that observance of the rule of law is as important in international affairs as it is within countries and that the political, societal and economic destiny must be the choice of people. The international community has a role in assisting the process of transition, but that does not extend to imposition of external prescriptions.

The complex neighbourhood in which India is located has seen rapid and often, turbulent, change in the last thirty years. India has followed the same policy of dialogue, engagement and mutually beneficial cooperation that it urges on all international issues. Our neighbourhood policy seeks to articulate and promote the advantages of building networks of inter-connectivity, trade, and investment so that prosperity can be shared and the entire region can benefit from India’s rapid economic growth.

Afghanistan, geographically poised between south and central Asia, is a neighbour with historic people-to-people linkages. The fratricidal conflict there is a threat to regional and international peace and security. It is India’s view that the peace process should be Afghan-led, transparent, inclusive, and based on the acceptance of the Afghan Constitution. Our civilizational links with Afghanistan and our close friendship are embodied in the landmark Strategic Partnership Agreement that we signed during President Karzai’s visit to India last week.

The international community must take effective measures to guarantee the sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity of Afghanistan. The Afghan people have suffered enough and must be allowed to decide their destiny without external interference, coercion or intimidation. India will participate in the forthcoming conferences in Istanbul and Bonn to contribute to regional and international initiatives to support Afghanistan’s efforts at nation building.

We subscribe to the emerging patterns of partnership in Asia based on Asian regionalism, inter-regional dialogue forums with other regions, global and multilateral organizations, and robust bilateral cooperation. We believe that no partnership architecture should be exclusive or exclusionary. It should neither be a reflection of the emerging redistribution of global or regional power nor should it be a platform for projection of narrow economic and political interests of a nation or group of nations.
Furthermore, all disputes must be settled peacefully, without resort to violence, or the threat of violence. These have been the principles that have guided India’s “Look East” policy, and increasingly our “Look West” policy, in Asia.

The same cooperative approach is evident in our policy towards African countries. We are convinced that the people of Africa are its most precious resource. India has taken the lead in empowering them through technology, education and skill development. We have offered lines of credit worth US $5 billion and US $700 million in grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology and building new institutions.

All this adds up to an ardent policy of international cooperation. India, like Turkey, is a strong proponent of multilateralism and has been actively involved in the work of the United Nations. We believe reform and restructuring of the UN is necessary to make it better equipped to respond effectively in an era of transformational change in global affairs.

The call for democratization cannot be limited to nations and states, but must also extend to global governance. We should test the validity of the proposition, expounded many years back by an eminent political scientist, that “a theory of legitimate power is inescapably a theory of democracy in the interlocking processes and structures of the global system”.

Our efforts at the restructuring and reform of the United Nations are ongoing, and support for reform and expansion from member countries is gathering momentum.

Unless there is a cooperative framework among states and peoples, today’s challenges cannot be faced. A case in point is international terrorism. It is an immediate threat to all nations and knows no national boundaries. India has called for the adoption of a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism to help eradicate this scourge.

The same holds for the safety of sea lanes. Maritime commerce along the sea lanes of communication has been subjected to piracy being carried out with impunity from areas that are outside State control and not subject to international accountability.

Pandemics, global warming and climate change, sustainable development, and issues of equity, both within and across nations, pose substantial challenges to the international order. Each requires a cooperative and global approach.

As we survey this backdrop to our engagement and partnership, we must remember what binds us. Both our countries are secular democracies wherein the will of our peoples is embodied in the supremacy of our Parliaments. Turkey and India believe in the need to support and sustain our plural traditions and multi-cultural societies. Our economies are growing at an impressive rate leading to generation of incomes and employment opportunities to millions of our citizens and improving their standards of living.

Both the countries have faced terrorism and have collaborated at international fora on combating terrorism. We also have a common stake in the emergence of a cooperative multi-polar world order which recognizes the legitimate aspirations of all countries, big and small.

We do not share physical borders, but we do have a vast common extended neighbourhood – in Central Asia, West Asia and the Persian Gulf. I am convinced that enhanced engagement between India and Turkey is in the interests of our peoples and regions, global peace and cooperation, and tolerance and peaceful co-existence among nations. Our joint efforts can result in a more balanced, inclusive and sustainable development for the benefit of vast sections of humanity.

Allow me to conclude. It is evident that the world of tomorrow would be too small for discord, too interdependent for isolation, too evolved for prejudice. Perhaps Yunus Emre had anticipated it. I am fascinated by the following couplets:

Come let us all be friends for once
Let us make life easy on us
Let us be lovers and loved ones
The earth shall be left to no one..

I once again thank the University for honouring me today and convey the best wishes of the government and people of India for the continued progress and prosperity of Turkey.”
Ladies and Gentlemen

I am happy to be in the historic and beautiful city of Istanbul. I thank the leadership and people of Turkey for the warmth and hospitality shown to me and my delegation during the visit.

My meetings in Ankara with President Gul, Prime Minister Erdogan and my gracious host Speaker Cicek have made evident the fund of goodwill that exists and reflects the mutual determination for a multifaceted and dynamic partnership between our two countries.

I thank the Confederation of Businessmen and Industrialists of Turkey for hosting me today. We can together explore ways of furthering our mutual economic and commercial relations and take them into a higher orbit.

As one of the largest institution representing the business community in Turkey, TUSKON has taken the initiative in facilitating outreach between our business and industry. TUSKON was active in the successful trade and investment delegation that visited India in March 2008 led by the State Minister for Foreign Trade Mr. Kürşad Tüzmen. I understand that its members had more than 2000 one-on-one meetings. Its success is thus evident.

The next step should be the opening of a representative office in India to help consolidate the surging growth rate in bilateral trade and facilitate the realization of our ambitious trade and investment targets.

Ladies and Gentlemen

Turkey and India share many basic values and beliefs. We share a commitment to democracy, a profound belief in a secular polity, respect for the rule of law and upholding of human rights fundamental freedoms, and an economic system that could unshackle the energies and capabilities of our dynamic people and lead them to higher levels of prosperity and well being.

As members of the G 20, Turkey and India are witness to the momentous economic developments sweeping the global stage. We are witnessing a new and dangerous phase in the global economy that could threaten the global economic recovery that began in 2009. The IMF warned last month that the downside risks are “severe” and include “a downward spiral of increased uncertainty and risk aversion, dysfunctional financial markets, unsustainable debt dynamics, falling demand and rising unemployment”.

Even with policy interventions, the prognosis is for anaemic recovery in major advanced economies and a cyclical slowdown in emerging economies.

Developing countries would be hit with weakening external demand and need to enhance domestic demand in an inclusive manner, bear the rising burden of inflationary pressures, and strengthen macroeconomic and financial frameworks.

More than at any time in the past, nations and leaders are called upon to undertake collective economic actions and implement coordinated policies to enable a return to sustainable, balanced and inclusive growth.

The backdrop to our bilateral economic cooperation is thus one of global uncertainty. Yet, it has a silver lining. Turkey has in 2010 experienced a real GDP growth of 8.9 per cent and is expected to grow by 6.6 per cent this year. India too had real GDP growth of 10.1 per cent last year and is projected to grow at 7.8 per cent this year.

During the past five years, India had aimed at achieving faster and more inclusive growth, and has achieved an average GDP growth of 8.2 percent. This growth led to generation of incomes and employment opportunities to millions of our citizens and improved the living standards for the bulk of our population.

It has also enhanced revenue generation of the government enabling it to launch social sector programmes, aimed at reducing poverty and enabling inclusiveness. We attach high priority to them.

India has set a growth target of 9 per cent per annum for the five year period 2012-17 in the Twelfth Five Year Plan. This can not be achieved without doubling the investment in infrastructure during the next five years, from US $ 500 billion over the past five years to about one trillion dollars. We need more investments in roads and highways, new electricity generation and distribution networks, expanded and modernized railways networks, new and upgraded airport and port facilities. Such essential elements of infrastructure would provide our industry and agriculture with the connectivity needed for growth in production and trade, and for improving the quality of life of all of our people.

We have also reiterated our commitment to continue the process of economic reforms. In a multi-pronged manner, we are proceeding with tax reforms, especially the introduction of a Goods and Services Tax, financial sector reforms, legal reforms, and major reforms in education and skill development. We are also committed to the pursuit of prudent fiscal and monetary policies and controlling inflation.

This is the context in which I view the Turkey-India engagement.

In recent years, our mutual economic and commercial relations have become a major driving force of our bilateral relationship. Bilateral Trade has more than doubled in the last five years from US$ 1.5 billion in 2005 to US$ 4 billion in 2010, with an increasingly diverse export basket on both sides. For the current calendar year, the bilateral trade is expected to register a 80 plus percent increase over last year and touch US$ 6.5-7 billion, surpassing the target of US$ 5 billion that the two governments had set for 2012 during Prime Minister Erdogan’s landmark visit to India in 2008. This has been possible only due to the active exchanges and collaboration between our business communities, including that of members of TUSKON.

The trend in the flow of services and investments between our two countries is encouraging. Today, over hundred Indian companies have registered businesses, investments and operations here, spanning the IT sector, airport infrastructure, automobiles, steel, irrigation and personal care products. Considering the expertise and experience of the Turkish companies in construction of infrastructure, it has emerged as a leading sector for investments from Turkey into India.

I am confident that our business and industry would further strengthen the bilateral economic partnership. The prospects have never been brighter for us to intensify our engagement and tap our markets, and those of our regions and third countries to which we are important gateways.

I call upon you to harness the huge untapped potential to increase the volume and enhance the quality of our economic engagement. Both governments are your partners in this enterprise.

Thank you.
Union Finance Minister Shri Pranab Mukherjee said that the Indo-UK Economic and Financial Dialogue which was established in 2005 has contributed successfully in strengthening our bilateral relationship. He said that the significance of this dialogue is in laying the agenda and guidance for future engagement. Shri Mukherjee was speaking at the Fourth Ministerial Level Indo-UK Economic and Financial Dialogue at London today. He said that both the countries have identified a number of issues for joint collaboration. He said that he is sure that we will make further progress in the coming months in deepening our economic relations based on mutual appreciation of our respective concerns and aspirations. He said that this exchange of views will go a long way in improving our understanding of each other's position on issues of mutual concern. Shri Mukherjee said that India and UK share a strategic partnership and enjoy traditionally warm and close bilateral relations in diverse areas. Our two countries enjoy strong historical and cultural relations built on shared values and traditions. Since the visit of His Excellency, UK Prime Minister David Cameron to India in July 2010, we have seen our bilateral relations being elevated to an 'Enhanced Partnership for the Future'.

Finance Minister's Opening Remarks

Your Excellency Chancellor Osborne,

Distinguished Members of the Delegations,

It is a great pleasure to be here for the India-UK Economic and Financial Dialogue. I would like to thank you for the warm welcome accorded to me and my delegation. India and UK share a strategic partnership and enjoy traditionally warm and close bilateral relations in diverse areas. Our two countries enjoy strong historical and cultural relations built on shared values and traditions. Since the visit of His Excellency, Prime Minister of UK David Cameron to India in July 2010, we have seen our bilateral relations being elevated to an ‘Enhanced Partnership for the Future’.

2. I am happy that our high level exchanges at political, official and business levels have intensified in the recent past. This reflects mutual understanding and appreciation of each other’s views in various bilateral, regional as well as multilateral forums, including the UN and the G-20.
3. The timely and coordinated action of G-20 member countries helped in steering the global economy out of the unprecedented economic slowdown. IMF forecasts indicate that global economy is projected to grow at 4.3 per cent in 2011 and 4.5 per cent in 2012. The recovery is, however, slower than anticipated and downside risks have intensified in recent months.

4. A faster recovery in growth momentum in advanced economies is essential for putting the global economy on a sustained growth path of the pre-crisis period. At the same time, it is essential that the current growth drivers of the global economy, principally the emerging and some developing economies are able to sustain their momentum in the medium to long term. This is vital for global macro rebalancing as well as for creating the conditions for a faster recovery in the advanced economies. It is imperative that we address these challenges in a coordinated manner at the global level.

5. A renewed weakness in the US economy, the danger of sovereign debt crisis in peripheral Euro-zone countries and its spillover to financial markets, checking global recovery, are a continuing source of concern. The new package worked out by the IMF and the European Central Bank must aim at minimizing the probability of a recurrence of the crisis. Any half measures in pursuing structural reforms and fiscal consolidation will further erode market confidence, with the contagion spreading to other countries.

6. Several measures to reform international financial institutions and financial sector regulations have been initiated at the behest of the G-20. India as the co-chair of the Working Group on the Framework for Strong, Sustainable and Balanced Growth, is striving to bring about coordinated, country determined set of specific policy actions including, where possible, measurable objectives and clear time frames, to promote strong, sustainable and balanced growth. The credibility and future of the G-20 now rests on its ability to address and deliver on its ambitious and rapidly expanding agenda. The efforts must continue.

7. The Indian economy has been on a path of robust recovery since the global slowdown. With GDP growth estimated at 8.5 per cent in 2010-11 following 8 per cent in 2009-10, we have recorded one of the fastest growth rates in the world and are nearly back to our pre-crisis growth levels. We believe that growth potential for India is over 9 per cent. Our medium-term growth prospects are driven by sustained high savings and investment rates, the demographic dividend that is yet to peak and rising investment infrastructure. More importantly, Indian business enterprise has learnt to compete and create its place in international markets. Downside risks emanate mainly from continuing uncertainty about energy and commodity prices that have implications for meeting the fiscal targets, moderating domestic inflation and improving investment sentiments in the economy.

8. We were on a path of fiscal consolidation with fiscal deficit reaching 2.5 per cent of GDP in 2007-08. The fiscal expansion undertaken to counter economic slowdown led to fiscal deficit going up to 6.0 per cent in 2008-09 and 6.5 per cent in 2009-10. Since then we have reverted to consolidating our fiscal balance and succeeded in restricting the fiscal deficit to 4.7 per cent in 2010-11. We remain fully committed to continue on this path of fiscal prudence.

9. While there has been some progress in containing domestic inflation, it continues to be an area of concern. Supply side and monetary measures are being actively taken to address it. I look forward to hearing from you how UK is addressing the challenge of managing inflation.

10. In the last few years our focus has been on making growth more inclusive. A multi-pronged strategy that seeks to sustain high growth, with emphasis on creating entitlements to meet some basic human needs, building human capital, and improving delivery of various social welfare programmes, is being pursued. We are seeking to diversify our agriculture including by focusing on new regions of significant potential. We are also undertaking modernization of delivery mechanism of public programmes and services. An ambitious programme of issuing Unique Identification ID for all residents is being currently implemented.

11. We are in the process of deepening policy reforms in the financial sector and addressing gaps in the overall economic regulatory architecture. Financial inclusion remains a priority area for us. I must mention here that there is a significant presence of UK banks in India. They account for 50 per cent of total foreign bank branches in India.

12. The fast growth of the economy in recent years has placed increasing stress on physical infrastructure, such as electricity, railways, roads, ports, airports, irrigation, urban and rural water supply and sanitation, all of which suffer from a substantial capacity deficit. Our Twelfth Five Year Plan period (2012-2017) is an ambitious one for infrastructure development, with the projected spending likely to be doubled to around US$ 1 trillion. In order to sustain the high growth in infrastructure spending, it is essential to source more funds from the private sector. The Indian Government has laid emphasis on Public Private Partnerships (PPPs) which combine the efficiency and technological prowess of the private sector, with the public welfare orientation of Government. We have established financing scheme to support viability gap funding for PPP projects. We have established Special Purpose Vehicles called Infrastructure Debt Funds to harness offshore pension and insurance funds for accessing long tenor loans to PPP projects. The issues like land acquisition, environment clearance and resettlement and rehabilitation are under continuous policy churn, with a view to de-risking both greenfield and brownfield projects. Major steps are being taken to simplify and place the administrative procedures concerning taxation, trade and tariff on electronic interface, free of discretion and bureaucratic delays. This will set the tone for a vibrant and more efficient economy.

13. We attach high importance to our bilateral partnership. We are committed to deepening our strategic partnership and cooperation in various facets of our economic relationship. I am looking forward to having a very productive and comprehensive exchange of views on a wide range of issues that have been identified for discussions today.

Thank you.

***************

Finance Minister’s Intervening and Closing Remarks

Excellency,

UK continues to be a major trade and investment partner for India. The global economic slowdown saw our bilateral trade declining in 2009-10, but figures for 2010-11 indicate recovery. We look forward to intensifying our joint efforts to ensure that our bilateral trade can grow further in the coming years.

2. UK is one of the most preferred destinations for Indian business. There are more than 600 Indian companies located here. I understand that India was the third largest investor in UK in 2010, with more than 20 new acquisitions. UK is the fourth largest investor in India with significant investments in sectors like oil and gas, ports, electronics, as well as services. Our efforts are towards making India the preferred destination for your businesses.

3. An important part of the investment environment in a country is its taxation policy. The new Direct Taxes Code slated for implementation from April 1, 2012 and proposed Goods and Services Tax are measures that will help create a modern and more efficient tax system in India. India is now the 34th Country Member of Financial Action Task force. The FATF process will also help us in co-ordination of anti-money laundering/countering financing of terror (AML/CFT) efforts at the international level.

4. To make the FDI policy more user-friendly, all prior regulations guidelines have been consolidated into one comprehensive document, which is reviewed every six months. This has been done with the specific intent of enhancing clarity and predictability of our FDI policy to foreign investors. Ownership and control are now central to the FDI policy, and the methodology in this regard has been clearly defined. A major initiative has been the liberalisation of pricing and payment of technology transfer fee, trademark, and brand name and royalty payments. Discussions are currently underway to build consensus on further liberalisation of the FDI policy in retail and defence sector.

5. We intend to double the exports from India in the next three years to reach a level of US$ 500 billion. We are in the process of finalising a National Manufacturing Policy with the objective of increasing the share of manufacturing in our GDP from the current level of 16 per cent to a level of 25 per cent of GDP over the next decade.

6. To maintain the growth momentum in India it is essential to have a readily available skilled workforce. We have a ‘demographic dividend’ of a relatively younger population that needs to be harnessed. We are focusing on secondary education, increasing the percentage of our scholars in higher education and on providing skill training. We have set up National Skill Development Corporation (NSDC) to address the challenge of imparting skills through a large pool of quality vocational institutions on public private partnership mode. NSDC is well on course to achieve its mandate of creating 150 million skilled workforce by 2020, two years before the stipulated target year.

7. In the end, I am extremely happy that we have had very useful and productive discussions on economic and financial issues of importance for our 'Enhanced Partnership for the Future'. My colleagues and I have greatly benefited from these deliberations. I am confident that this exchange of views will go a long way in improving our understanding of each other's position on issues of mutual concern.

8. The Indo-UK Economic and Financial Dialogue which was established in 2005 has contributed successfully in strengthening our bilateral relationship. The significance of this dialogue is in laying the agenda and guidance for future engagement. We have identified a number of issues for joint collaboration. I am sure that we will make further progress in the coming months in deepening our economic relations based on mutual appreciation of our respective concerns and aspirations.

9. I would also like to extend an invitation to you to visit India for the next round of this dialogue.

Thank you.

"In the past few years, the global economy has experienced a profound shock. And as the economic recovery progresses, the UK and India are committed to securing improved living standards for all our citizens through strong economic and job growth. The recovery remains fragile and we are alert to the continuing challenges facing businesses and individuals from rising food and fuel prices, fiscal imbalances and volatile capital flows. In an increasingly globalised world economy, we can not tackle these challenges alone. We are committed to multilateral co-operation through the G20 and International Financial Institutions. This is more vital than ever before. The UK and India are taking determined action to address our respective fiscal imbalances and are working to strengthen the business environment. Both countries are committed to the implantation of credible, medium-term fiscal consolidation plans as we meet our commitments through the G20 Framework for strong, sustainable and balanced growth. We have agreed to work together in the G20, the IMF, the FSB and the other international financial institutions in the key areas of strengthening economic surveillance, capital flow management and financial sector reform, to increase the resilience of the global economic and financial system. We also agreed to deepen our dialogue and technical cooperation to reduce distortions in commodity markets through the G20.

It is in both our interests to have a strong, legitimate IMF as an anchor of global economic stability and prosperity. We welcome the recent review of IMF quotas and executive board reforms which will significantly increase the share and representation of dynamic emerging markets, like India, in the IMF and call on all members of the fund to ratify this agreement as soon as possible.

Both economies are sharing the gains from increased trade and investment flows. Both sides are fully committed to ensure the conclusion of an ambitious and balanced broad-based EU-India Free Trade Agreement by the end of the year, and remain committed to achieving a development-focused outcome on the Doha round.

On education and skills, we noted the good work already in hand through the UK India skills forum and UK India Education and Research Initiative to support partnerships between our countries in this field, including the work of UK colleges and businesses already cooperating with Indian counterparts to help deliver the growth demand for vocational skills in India.

The Government of India has targeted an infrastructure investment of one trillion dollars in its twelfth Five Year Plan, which starts next year. The dialogue welcomed the strong partnership between the UK and India which is working on ways to help meet this demand. Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee announced that the Infrastructure sector in India.

We discussed the steps that are proposed to be taken to widen the financial sector in India in order to develop a more efficient distribution of domestic saving into long term financing. Both sides welcomed the many vibrant partnerships and joint ventures between the UK and India in the insurance sector and looked forward to the widening and deepening of partnerships in these areas.

Finance Minister Shri Mukherjee mentioned the substantial presence of banks from the UK which comprise nearly 50 per cent of all foreign banks’ branches in India. Chancellor Osborne welcomed the fact that the UK was now home to more branches of Indian Banks than any other country in the world. Both sides discussed the vital role that foreign banks play in both our countries in driving innovation, furthering inclusion and bringing new technology into our markets.
Both sides welcomed the Reserve Bank of India's paper on foreign banks. The UK looked forward to the opportunity for its banks to grow businesses in India on a level playing field if they were to locally incorporate.

The Ministers noted with approval the recent agreement on the future shape of the United Kingdom's development programme in India.

Today's dialogue reaffirmed the continued strength of the UK-India economic and financial relations. We will continue to work closely throughout the year to follow through on our commitments and are very much looking forward to the next round of talks in 2012."

656. Response of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs on proposed debate in UK House of Commons on J & K.

New Delhi, September 15, 2011.

In response to questions on the proposed debate on 'Human Rights in Indian sub-continent' the Official Spokesperson said,

"We take due note of the proposed debate in the UK House of Commons later today, which we believe is an initiative of back-bencher MPs and does not reflect the position of the UK Government. Our views in the matter are known to UK. Suffice it to say at this juncture that India is a vibrant democracy which fully respects rule of law and human rights. Civil liberties and freedoms are enshrined in the Constitution of India as fundamental rights and are exercised by each and every citizen of this country of 1.2 billion people".

657. Press Release issued during the visit of Foreign Minister of Ukraine.

New Delhi, November 25, 2011.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Ukraine H.E. Kostyantyn Gryshchenko (UFM), accompanied by his spouse, senior officials and members of the Ukrainian business community, is on an official visit to India from 24 November till 27 November 2011.

2. The visiting Minister today held delegation-level talks with the EAM Shri S.M. Krishna, who also hosted a lunch in honour of the visiting dignitary. The two sides held wide ranging discussions on bilateral relations as well as on regional and international issues of mutual interest. While expressing satisfaction at the state of the multi-faceted relationship, both sides recognized considerable untapped potential, and agreed to work together to realize it. Bilateral trade has been witnessing a steady growth to touch US$2.24 billion in 2010-11. It was agreed to hold the next meeting of the Inter-Governmental Commission next year to impart further momentum to the economic and trade ties. It was also agreed to work out a mechanism to speed up the issuance of visas to make it easier for businessmen, tourists, students and others to travel in both directions. An agreement on visa exemption for diplomatic passport holders was signed by the two Ministers. Both sides further agreed to enhance mutually beneficial defence, cultural, educational, investment and other ties.

3. EAM and UFM also agreed to further enhance high level exchanges. The visiting Minister extended an invitation to EAM to visit Kyiv at an early date. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

4. The Foreign Ministers also exchanged notes on the situation in their respective regions and on international issues. UFM conveyed Ukraine’s support for India’s permanent membership of an extended UN Security Council. The FMs recognized terrorism as a global menace and pledged common efforts to root out this scourge.

5. FM Gryshchenko also called on the Vice President Shri Hamid Ansari and the Speaker of the Lok Sabha, Smt. Meira Kumar. He met the Commerce & Industry Minister, Shri Anand Sharma, to discuss details of bilateral economic cooperation. He would also be paying a visit to Agra.

Subjected to competing pulls from Russia and the European Union, Ukraine is looking at Asia, especially India, for collaboration in a large number of areas including civil nuclear energy, visiting Ukraine Foreign Minister Kostyantyn Gryshchenko told The Hindu in an interview. “India is a very important part of what we need to understand and it is part of our future destiny. Today the world is changing and being simply Europe-centred is not the answer to the future of [Ukraine’s] survival and progress,” said Mr. Gryshchenko. “We are not simply a transit country which guarantees the best and safest transit routes for gas from Russia to Europe………… There are a number of areas where Ukraine can be useful,” he said. Kiev is already modernising the An-32s, backbone of the Indian Air Force’s transport and troop replenishment fleet, and wants a more wide-ranging relationship. Speaking of areas of cooperation he said India and Ukraine could begin by coordinating efforts against pirates off the Gulf of Aden, described by him as a “scourge that affects both countries,” exchanging notes on United Nations peace keeping operations, and moving towards interoperability between the militaries through joint exercises. “We are openly interested in helping India to upgrade its capabilities to negate any intention [by another country] to start aggressive action. We welcome any opportunity to provide India defence systems that contribute to increasing stability in the region,” said the Minister in the Hindu interview.
Joint Press Statement of Ministerial Meeting of the G4 countries (Brazil, Germany, India and Japan).

1. The Minister of External Affairs of India, the Federal Minister for Foreign Affairs of Germany, the Minister of External Relations of Brazil and the State Secretary for Foreign Affairs of Japan met in New York on 11 February 2011, for the second time in the last six months, to exchange views on Security Council reform.

2. The Ministers agreed that as democracies with shared political values including respect for the rule of law, respect for human rights and a commitment to multilateralism, the G4 countries hold a number of common positions on the major contemporary challenges to international peace and security. They noted with satisfaction the important contributions being made by their countries to the working of the Security Council and to the maintenance of international peace and security. They reaffirmed their willingness and capacity to take on major responsibilities in this regard. They stated that the international system would benefit from the expansion of the UN Security Council, which would ensure that the Council is truly reflective of current geopolitical realities and make it stronger, more representative, legitimate, effective and efficient.

3. In this context, the G4 countries reiterated their commitments as aspiring new permanent members of the UN Security Council, as well as their support for each other’s candidatures. The G4 countries also reaffirmed their view of the importance of Africa to be represented in the permanent membership of an enlarged Council. They also reconfirmed the need for additional non-permanent members and improvement in the Council’s working methods.

4. The Ministers expressed gratitude for the efforts made by the President of the General Assembly, H.E. Mr. Joseph Deiss and Ambassador Zahir Tanin, the Chair of the intergovernmental negotiations, for their facilitating role in the negotiations among the Member States. The Ministers stressed that the ongoing intergovernmental negotiations made it clear that the overwhelming majority of the Member States support expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent categories of the Security Council membership, as well as increased representation of developing countries in both.

5. The Ministers recognized that there is widespread support for a Member-States driven initiative to take the process of the much-needed reform of the Security Council towards a concrete outcome in the current session of the UN General Assembly.
6. The Ministers, therefore, agreed to press ahead, with all necessary steps to achieve at the earliest an expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent membership categories of the Security Council. Towards this goal, the G4 countries reaffirmed their readiness to reach out to other countries and to work in close cooperation with them in a spirit of flexibility.

7. Finally, the Ministers agreed to meet again within the coming quarter to review progress on the decisions taken.

Mr. President,

I would like to begin by thanking the Brazilian Presidency for organizing this debate. Brazil and India have a very special relationship. It is a great honour for me to make my first appearance in this Council under Brazilian Presidency. India returns to the Security Council after 19 years. These years have been transformational for India. We believe that an effective and efficient Security Council is in our common interest and we will work towards strengthening it.

Mr. President,
Mahatma Gandhi, the father of our nation, said that “Poverty is the worst form of violence.” The Charter of the United Nations, recognizing that violence and the lack of development are interrelated, commits the United Nations to promoting “social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom.”

The international community, over the past two decades, has invested a large amount of human and material capital in peacekeeping operations and in peace building initiatives. Our collective experience in dealing with these conflicts shows that without peace, development suffers. At the same time, lack of development and of prospects for economic progress create fertile ground for violence and instability, which further sets back development. Unevenness of the development process and disparities prevailing on a regional, national and global scale feed into a vicious cycle. Our efforts should therefore focus on promoting development for all by encouraging economic activity and enhancing their livelihood security.

Mr. President,

India brings to this table almost sixty years of experience in overcoming many of the challenges of transforming a colonial legacy into a modern dynamic nation of a billion people who are trying to meet their aspirations within a democratic system dedicated to the rule of law. India has taken significant steps designed to accelerate the range and depth of welfare and social justice programmes. In recent years, these include the assurance of 100 days of employment to every person living in rural areas, the enactment of the Right to Information Act helping our citizens to become more aware and the Right to Education to help every Indian to share in the benefits of the country’s economic progress and also to contribute to it, the initiative for reservation for women in Parliament and in state legislatures to ensure equal partnership of women in our progress and the increase in reservation for women to 50 per cent in local bodies.

Mr. President,

Development has to be accompanied by inclusivity and tolerance. In this context, I quote the words of Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh: “The goal of the development process must be to include every last member of our society, particularly those who are at the margins. This not only broadens the support base for development, it also strengthens the government’s ability to perform its core developmental role.”

The lessons of inclusivity can also be applied to international efforts in the maintenance of peace and security. The process of implementing a peace agreement must run along with the provision of humanitarian and emergency assistance, resumption of economic activity, and the creation of political and administrative institutions that improve governance and include all stakeholders, particularly the weak and underprivileged.

We are greatly encouraged by the African Union’s efforts to develop Post-Conflict Reconstruction capacities. The success of NEPAD and the African Peer Review Mechanism has lessons that are relevant to national ownership.

The international community needs to ensure a predictable and enhanced flow of resources. It is instructive to note that the peacekeeping budget of the UN, which is about 8 billion US Dollars annually, is more than the combined budgets of UNDP and UNICEF. It is obvious that development expenditures need to be enhanced greatly if they are to make a dent on security problems.

We also need to ensure that collective security mechanisms intersect with our collective efforts for economic progress to mitigate the causes of persistent insecurity at a global level.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi once said that “A nation’s strength ultimately consists in what it can do on its own, and not in what it can borrow from others”. The international community can encourage, motivate and facilitate. It cannot impose solutions. The temptation to create a new orthodoxy, of talking down rather than of listening, must be avoided at all costs.

Mr. President,

No country has contributed as many peacekeepers to as many peacekeeping operations as India. Our peacekeepers have been early peacebuilders. We are also committed to contribute, bilaterally and multilaterally, to development initiatives. To this end, we are working through the IBSA (India, Brazil and South Africa) mechanism, with the African Union and with regional African groupings to promote South-South perspectives on development and security.

Mr. President,

The international structure for maintaining peace and security and peacebuilding needs to be reformed. Global power and the capacities to address problems are much more dispersed than they were six decades ago. The current framework must address these realities.

We understand the expectations that accompany our Council membership. We are acutely conscious of the need for effective coordination between the P5 and the elected members, especially those whose credentials for permanent membership stand acknowledged. On issues concerning international peace and security, all of us are on the same page. I am happy to note that this process of closer cooperation is making headway.
Mr. President,

In concluding, I would like to reaffirm India’s commitment to making its vast experience in over six decades of nation building available to global efforts towards greater development and improved security.

Thank you.

660. Opening Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of the Counter Terrorism Committee
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri.

Strasbourg, April 19-21, 2011.

Excellencies,
Dear colleagues,
Ladies and gentlemen,

In my capacity as Chairman of the Security Council Counter-Terrorism Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001), I am very pleased to welcome you all to this special meeting with international, regional and sub-regional organizations.

To begin with, I would like to extend my gratitude and appreciation to Secretary General of the Council of Europe, Mr. Thorbjørn Jagland, for having offered to host this event and for his, and his staffs’, invaluable help in organizing the meeting.

Excellencies, Ladies and gentlemen,

The United Nations was created “to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war.” The Council of Europe was created in the aftermath of the most violent war in human history. Both these institutions aim to build a world in which there is freedom from fear; a world in which we are free to channel our energies into furthering the common good.

When the United Nations and the Council of Europe were formed, the main threats to international peace and security arose from conventional war between states. It is a measure of the success of both organizations that we are not here today to discuss conventional war. Instead we are here to discuss the most pressing current threat to international peace and security, viz., asymmetric conflict unleashed by terrorists.
War has been replaced by the IED, the suicide bomber, attacks on innocent civilians, and assassinations. Battles have been replaced by 9/11, 26/11 and waves of suicide or remotely triggered explosions.

Conventional war was often about expanding borders. Today’s terrorists have made borders irrelevant. They recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others.

The human and economic costs of terrorism are staggering. While there is no accurate estimate of the cost of the war in Afghanistan, the amounts mentioned run not into hundreds of millions of dollars but billions per month.

I need not remind an audience such as this that every Euro of expenditure inflicted by terrorists is a Euro less for achieving the Millennium Development Goals, for investing in clean sources of energy and towards scientific research.

Both the Council of Europe and the United Nations have vital interest in battling this horrendous scourge. The Council of Europe remains an important partner for the CTC in our common efforts to deal with the terrorist threat. It has been playing a leading role in dealing with different aspects of terrorism including terrorism prevention, suppression of terrorism financing, prevention of incitement to commit terrorist acts, protection of victims of terrorism and cyber terrorism. My distinguished colleague Mike Smith would dwell in more detail on the specifics of our cooperative relationship.

We believe that terrorism needs to be countered by a combined international effort. We also believe that the United Nations is the best mechanism for developing this coherent transnational response.

Despite concerted efforts of the international community, much more needs to be done. Our normative framework of international conventions and protocols is still incomplete and riddled with loopholes. The Global Counter Terrorism Strategy adopted in 2006 and the institutionalization of Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force in 2009 are useful mechanisms but need to be strengthened substantially. The Security Council has also created a network of subsidiary bodies including the 1267 Committee, the 1373 Committee (CTC) and the 1540 Committee. The 1267 Committee, assisted by an Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team, is directed against the Taliban and Al-Qaeda. The Counter-Terrorism Committee (which I head), assisted by the Counter Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, implements resolution 1373 and other subsequent resolutions which obliges Member States to take a number of measures to prevent terrorist activities, criminalize various terrorist actions, assist and promote international cooperation, and adhere to international counter-terrorism instruments. The 1540 Committee - monitors compliance with resolution 1540, which calls on States to prevent non-State actors (including terrorist groups) from accessing weapons of mass destruction.

In countering terrorism, the United Nations adopted a sectoral approach. The inability of United Nations to agree on a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism, even when terrorism endangers us at every moment, remains one of the most important lacuna in the international legislative framework in the fight against terrorism. However, I am quite encouraged by the recently concluded Ad hoc Committee negotiations where a vast majority of States have shown the flexibility and the desire to move forward.

There are many reasons for this incomplete and incomprehensible response. I will touch on a few of them.

The first and the foremost reason is the very regrettable tendency of some to justify acts of terrorism. No religion provides sanction for the use of violence. Any ideology that uses terror, as present-day events have repeatedly demonstrated, is bound to fail. The practitioners of terrorism today choose to take up arms because they like to impose their beliefs. They have no patience or desire to go through peaceful or legal means. They are a violent and radical minority that is determined to hold a peaceful majority to ransom.

People living under foreign occupation have a legitimate and a just complaint. However, that cannot be a justification for violence. I come from the land of Mahatma Gandhi. He led what is now a nation of over a billion people to freedom through non-violence. The recent developments in the Middle East demonstrate that peaceful and non-violent mobilization of a population can be a more effective instrument of social change than violence.

In this context one cannot but describe the short-sighted and irresponsible tendencies of some to use terrorism as an instrument of policy as one of the greatest tragedies of our times. History suggests that these terrorists will be the first to turn on their erstwhile benefactors - particularly when these patrons have outlived their utility.

In our shared resolve in combating terrorism, it is absolutely essential that any measures taken by States to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law. However, some of us do a great disservice when we attempt to use the pretext of human rights and humanitarian agendas to justify terrorism. Targeted killing of civilians has nothing to do with root causation. It has everything to do with unpopular causes.

Another disturbing developments arising out of this ambivalence has been the tendency to overlook the victims of terrorism. The lack of recognition of their suffering and loss and the denial of justice can only weaken the efforts to universalize human rights.

Let us now turn to counter-terrorism efforts. Some of these strategies are based on meeting violence with greater violence. The limitations of this strategy are apparent and are reflected in the ongoing debate between Counter-Terrorism and Counter-Insurgency (COIN). Mahatma Gandhi, I would like to remind you at this stage, said that an eye for an eye makes the whole world go blind.

The Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) recognizes that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone, and that there is need to promote the rule of law, the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, good governance, tolerance and inclusiveness to offer a viable alternative to those who could be susceptible to terrorist recruitment and to radicalization leading to violence.

Poverty, in itself, can neither justify nor provides a full explanation for the actions of terrorists. It is important to remember that most of the terrorists and terrorist organizations do not have economic grievances. They include, in their ranks, highly educated people who understand economics and technology. They use the internet to propagate their beliefs, communicate through encrypted emails, use satellite phones and are on social networking sites. They use technology and money, and most importantly, the tolerance of free societies, to attack freedom, tolerance and progress. If I am not mistaken, all or most of the 9/11 terrorists could afford to study at western universities. Al Qaeda has no shortage of funds. Omar Saeed Sheikh, the British-Pakistani man who kidnapped and beheaded innocent Western tourists and then went on to kidnap and behead Daniel Pearl, studied at the London School of Economics.

The ability of terrorists to utilize modern technology is most evident in their ability to raise and transfer money. While the creation of this Committee itself is partly in recognition of this, the fact that remains that terrorists are still able to find money and resources. The LTTE in Sri Lanka retained its financial resources and its arms procurement activities till the end. The Taliban are able to procure weapons and explosives at will. Al Shabab in Somalia is able to channel resources through and obtain revenue from the port of Kishmaya. The revenues of Kishmaya port, which receives mostly cargo transshipped at Dubai, have given Al Shabab a source of sustained income that is sufficient to meet its requirements.

The international response to terrorism seems to have fallen short and it is obvious that we need a new global compact to tackle terrorism. We need to recognize terrorism for what it is, the gravest threat to international peace and security today.
The mechanism that has been developed to pool the resources and the knowledge of the international community needs to be augmented and made more effective. We would argue that the central requirement of an effective counter-terrorism strategy is the necessary political will to squarely face the challenge of terrorism. We need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists to gain succor and even legitimacy. We need an international mechanism to ensure accountability and justice. We must continue international efforts to enhance dialogue and broaden understanding among civilizations. We need concerted international efforts to expose and destroy the linkages that exist between terrorists and their supporters. We need to expand the scope of the legal instruments and expand enforcement efforts to destroy safe havens for terrorists, their financial flows and their support networks.

This year will mark the 10th anniversary of 9/11 and also of adoption of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001). This Special Meeting being held today offers an ideal setting for us all to not only brainstorm some of the most pressing challenges in the prevention of terrorism, but also through an informal interactive process to tap avenues for future cooperation.

In concluding, I would like to quote the great European philosopher Edmund Burke. He said that “All that it takes for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing.” This is the philosophy behind the creation of the United Nations and of the Council of Europe. It is in that spirit that I am here as Chairman of the United Nations Counter Terrorism Committee to urge greater cooperation between our organizations to face this contemporary evil.

The United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime is the main international instrument in the fight against transnational organized crime. It recognizes the need to foster and enhance close international cooperation in order to tackle those problems. The convention is further supplemented by three Protocols, which target specific areas and manifestations of organized crime namely Protocols to combat (1) trafficking in persons (2) migrant smuggling and (3) illicit trafficking in firearms.

The United Nations Convention against Corruption complements the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime. The Convention introduces a comprehensive set of standards, measures and rules that all countries can apply in order to strengthen their legal and regulatory regimes to fight corruption.

The Convention enumerates in detail the measures to prevent corruption, including the application of prevention policies and practices, the establishment of bodies for that purpose, the application of codes of conduct for public servants, and public procurement. It recommends promoting transparency and accountability in the management of public finances and in the private sector, with tougher accounting and auditing standards. Measures to prevent money-laundering are also provided for, together with measures to secure the independence of the judiciary, public reporting and participation of society are encouraged as preventive measures. The Convention recommends the State Parties to adopt such legislative and other measures as may be necessary to establish a whole series of criminal offences. These are:

- Corruption of national or foreign public officials and officials of public international organizations;
- embezzlement, misappropriation or other diversion by a public official of any public or private property;
- trading in influence;
- abuse of functions and illicit enrichment.

In the private sector, the Convention calls for the creation of offences of embezzlement and corruption. There are other offences relating to laundering the proceeds of crime, handling stolen property, obstructing the administration of justice, and participating in and attempting embezzlement or corruption.

Istanbul, May 12, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies,

Distinguished delegates,

It is an honour for me to participate in this Fourth United Nations Conference on Least Developed Countries.

I am grateful to the people and Government of Turkey for graciously hosting this conference and for the warm hospitality extended to me and my delegation. This historic city of Istanbul bridging the East and the West provides the perfect metaphorical setting to build a durable partnership between the international community and the Least Developed Countries (LDCs).

Mr. Chairman,

The Least Developed Countries are the most vulnerable and the poorest segment of the international community. Their marginalised existence, is a matter of grave concern to all those who believe in a just and humane society. The plight of the LDCs remains immeasurable. They have little or no capacity to absorb external shocks.

Mr. Chairman,

We live in an interconnected world where the global community shares a common destiny. What we do for the LDCs in reality is a matter of our collective interest. Supporting the cause of the LDCs goes far beyond the moral argument; it is an economic imperative and a political necessity. Without putting the LDCs in the forefront of the global development agenda, we can hardly expect progress on the Millennium Development Goals.

Mr. Chairman,

International support for the LDCs since 1971, when they were created as a special category of countries in the UN, has not been commensurate with their special needs. The Brussels Programme of Action has had limited success. It is no surprise then that so far only 3 countries have been able to graduate out of the Group in the last forty years.

With their limited domestic resources and meagre international support, the LDCs have worked hard to overcome their developmental challenges. But their structural weaknesses make their development a vicious cycle. The global financial, food and energy crises have had a debilitating impact on these countries reversing their hard won development gains. The LDCs are excessively dependent on global trade for economic sustenance. However, their share in global trade, in spite of preferential market access, was only 1% in 2009. There is an urgency to work for an early conclusion of the Doha Round to create more space for the LDCs in global trade.

Food and energy price volatility, threats posed by Climate Change and new and emerging challenges have further eroded the productive capacities of these countries. The debt situation in several LDCs remains untenable. While they remain saddled with myriad challenges, the LDCs are endowed with vast natural resources, huge potential for clean energy and a dynamic young population. What they need is a strong international partnership to unlock their true potential.

Mr. Chairman,

The LDCs have come to Istanbul with high expectations and so have we. I am hopeful that these expectations will be fulfilled. The Istanbul Programme of Action is a comprehensive document. It now needs to be backed by the highest political commitment and a genuine international partnership. I, therefore, urge all stakeholders to pledge their maximum support for the LDCs and enable them give a life of dignity and hope to their people. India, on its part, would do all it can and more for their cause.

In my appeal, I am reminded of the timeless wise words of our Father of the Nation, Mahatma Gandhi who said:

"The difference between what we do and what we are capable of doing would suffice to solve most of the world’s problems”.

The commitments made by the donor community on Official Development Assistance, market access, debt settlement, capacity building and transfer of technology must be renewed and scaled up for a meaningful implementation of the Istanbul Programme.

South-South Cooperation no doubt will play an important part in this endeavour but it cannot be substitute for North-South Cooperation. Developing countries which are themselves faced with insurmountable challenges cannot be expected to take on a responsibility that they don’t have the capacity to fulfil.

Mr. Chairman,

Sustained economic growth is fundamental to eradicating poverty in LDCs. In this regard, we are happy to see that the LDCs are taking major steps to attract Foreign Direct Investment and promote private enterprise to boost growth. We welcome the multi-stakeholder approach of the Conference to involve the Parliamentarians, the private sector and the civil society in addressing the special needs of LDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

India prides itself in standing shoulder to shoulder with the LDCs. Our strong ties with the LDCs have been nurtured through a shared history and common development needs. We feel particularly privileged to have played a historical role in the creation of the LDC category when we took lead to give shape to the idea at the Second UNCTAD Meeting in New Delhi in 1968. Our solidarity with the LDCs draws continuous inspiration from what our former Prime Minister Mrs. India Gandhi had to say at the 7th NAM Summit in New Delhi, and I quote:

“Faith in future has brought so many across the continents and the oceans to meet here. We are here because we do believe that minds and attitudes can and must be changed and the injustice and suffering can and must be diminished. Our world is small but it has room for all of us to live together and to improve the quality of lives for our peoples in peace and beauty”.

Mr. Chairman,

India remains fully committed to the needs of the LDCs. We have extended capacity building and economic assistance to the LDCs in their priority areas of development such as agriculture, infrastructure, telemedicine, energy, banking, and information technology under our flagship Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) Programme.

In keeping with the Hong Kong WTO Ministerial Declaration, we have extended duty free quota free preferential market access to their products. Our Lines of Credit worth 4.8 billion US Dollars to LDCs since 2003 and Aid for Trade programmes have led to expansion in India-LDC trade from 16.7 billion US Dollars in 2008-09 to 20.5 billion US Dollars in 2009-10, with the balance of trade being in favour of the LDCs.

Our private sector has invested more than 35 billion US Dollars in the LDCs since 2003.

During the India-LDC Ministerial Conference three months ago in New Delhi, we had announced a credit line facility of 500 million US Dollars for projects and programmes for the LDCs over the next five years under the existing Indian credit line regime for developing countries. Today, I have the pleasure to announce enhancement of that amount to 1 billion US Dollars. The additional 500 million US Dollars will come into the credit line immediately after the 500 million US Dollars announced last February are fully utilised by the beneficiaries.

At the India-LDC conference we had also offered 5 additional slots under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme to each LDC on an annual basis and a grant of 5 million US Dollars for the follow-up of the Istanbul Programme.

Mr. Chairman,

The Istanbul Programme is an opportunity to give to the Least Developed Countries their rightful due. Let us make the most of it.

Thank You.

663. Statement of Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs extending Indian support to the re-election of UN Secretary General Ban Ki Moon for the second term.

New Delhi, June 7, 2011.

In response to a question the Official Spokesperson said,

"The Asian Group at the UN met in New York on 6th June 2011 and endorsed by acclamation the candidature of UN Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon for a second term. India's Acting Permanent Representative, Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, was present at the meeting and conveyed India's support in the matter. The Chair of the Asian Group is writing to the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Security Council, informing them of the decision of the group."

Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of Counter Terrorism Committee, Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the Opening Plenary of the 10th Meeting of the Heads of Special Services, Security Agencies and Law-Enforcement Organizations.

Saint-Petersburg, (Russian Federation), July 6 – 7, 2011.

Mr. A. Bortnikov, Director, FSB and Hon’ble Chairman,

Excellencies, Distinguished Delegates, Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is a great privilege for me to speak to this distinguished audience in my personal capacity as Chairman of the Counter-Terrorism Committee of the United Nations Security Council.

As Heads of Special Services, Security Agencies and Law Enforcement Organisations, you are the people at the cutting edge of the battle against terrorism. You and your organisations are at the front-lines. It is you who must battle daily to confront and vanquish the threat that is posed by terrorist violence.

Terrorist violence is currently the greatest threat to international peace and security. It kills more people, threatens more governments and destabilizes more societies than war. It is a battle in the shadows in which the traditional combatant and the methods of conflict have been replaced by the sudden violence of a 9/11 in New York, by a 26/11 in Mumbai and by the attack on Moscow’s Domodedovo airport, by the remotely triggered explosion that kills and maims innocent civilians, and by assassinations. Governments today need to fear the suicide bomber and the improvised explosive device more than they fear conventional armies.

Terrorists are waging asymmetric warfare against the international community. Conventional war was often about expanding borders. Today’s terrorists have made borders irrelevant. It is globalised. Terrorists and terrorist organisations recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others. They have global logistical and supply chains; they have developed transnational financial systems; they use the latest and most sophisticated technologies and have command and control mechanisms that are able to operate across continents on a real-time basis. Terrorists might act locally, but their thinking and ambitions are global.

We are gathered here today because we recognize that this global threat requires a global response. The cooperation between you and your organizations will be amongst the most important determinants of success in this battle.

There is already a modicum of cooperation at the international level. The United Nations has created a normative framework of 13 international conventions and their protocols. The United Nations has adopted a Counter Terrorism Strategy in 2006. It also created a Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force in 2009.

The Security Council has also created a network of subsidiary bodies including the 1267 Committee, which has recently been split, the 1373 Committee (the CTC) and the 1540 Committee. At the same time, it needs to be recognized that gaps continue to exist in the international legislative and normative framework in countering terrorism. A Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism is regrettably, yet to be finalized.

Mr. Chairman

The Counter-Terrorism Committee (which I head), assisted by the Counter Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, is responsible for monitoring the implementation by member States of Security Council resolutions 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005). The obligations contained in these resolutions are wide-ranging and affect a broad swath of our lives, namely: financial and asset-based operations, movements of goods and people, identity and travel documents, communication, media, expression and association.

The Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) recognizes that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone. It also underscores the need to promote the rule of law, the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, good governance, tolerance and inclusiveness to offer a viable alternative to those who could be susceptible to terrorist recruitment and to radicalization leading to violence. It also encourages cooperation among CTC, CTED and the array of entities comprising the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force (CTITF).

While combating terrorism, it is absolutely essential that any measures taken by States to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

At the same time, terrorists must not be allowed to misuse the freedoms and safeguards of liberal states and societies to weaken them from within. We must, in particular, be vigilant against efforts to hijack the human rights and humanitarian agendas to rationalize terrorist violence. Terrorists do not fight for human rights. They kill, maim and terrorize to further regressive social practices, promote intolerance, and advance narrow political objectives.

The international response also needs to synergize efforts with regional and sub-regional organizations. The CTC enjoys a close and symbiotic relationship with international, regional and sub-regional organizations. I am happy to note that the CTC has a regular and fruitful exchange of views with this organization.
Recently, the CTC co-organized with the Council of Europe a Special Meeting with International, Regional and Sub-regional Organizations on the Prevention of Terrorism, in Strasbourg from 19-21 April 2011 that deliberated upon some of these challenges.

Participants at the Special Meeting grappled with the phenomenon of the internet, which can be abused to promote radicalization, incitement and terrorist recruitment. The Special Meeting proposed an approach for co-opting religious and civil society groups, as well as law enforcement agencies, to provide counter-narratives to reach the same audience for which the internet propaganda is directed, who are often disaffected youth, alienated from mainstream society.

In counter-terrorism, the international response also needs to be placed in perspective. It is only effective as a complement to determined national efforts. National agencies dealing with security and law enforcement issues must share information and perceptions. They must where required, act in harmony. They must be able to pool resources. A good example of the type of cooperation that is required is the pivotal role that the Federal Security Service has played in developing the International Counter-Terrorism Database. Professionals in this field appreciate that information is power and this shared database could be an extremely effective instrument in counter-terrorism cooperation.

We are two months away from the 10th Anniversary of 9/11 and also of adoption of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001). The resolution 1963 (2010) directs the CTC to organize a Special Meeting, open to the wider membership, to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the adoption of that resolution. The Special Meeting will take place at UN Headquarters on 28 September 2011 and will consider such pertinent and topical themes as the impact and achievements resulting from resolution 1373 (2001) over this ten-year time-frame; the risks, challenges and shortfalls in implementation that remain to be addressed; and practical ways and means to improve implementation.

Mr. Chairman,

Moving forward, we need to augment and make more effective the mechanisms that have been developed to pool the resources and the knowledge of the international community.

We need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists and criminals to gain succor and even legitimacy. We need an international mechanism to ensure accountability and justice. We need concerted international efforts to expose and destroy the linkages that exist between terrorists and criminals and their State and non-State supporters. We need to expand the scope of the legal instruments and expand enforcement efforts to destroy their safe havens, their financial flows and their support networks.
We would also argue that the need to squarely face the complicity of states is a central requirement if we are to succeed.

The Roman philosopher Seneca said that if we see wrong and do nothing to oppose it, we are guilty of encouraging it. The battle against terror will ultimately be won only if we are able to combine forces. We have the responsibility of ensuring that we do everything that is required of us in this common battle.

Thank You.

665. Explanation of Vote by India in the Human Rights Council on the Resolution on Syria.

Madame Chairperson,

1. India's traditional position on country specific resolutions is well known. We do not regard spotlighting and finger-pointing at a country for human right violations as helpful. We believe that engaging the country concerned in collaborative and constructive dialogue and partnership is a more pragmatic and productive way forward. This is what India along with its partners in IBSA, Brazil and South Africa has done.

2. However, since some members of this Council have found it necessary to propose a country specific resolution, it would have been desirable had this been done by consensus, without resorting to a vote, to reflect the shared perspective and unanimous views of the council. This has regrettably not happened.

3. We hope that our position on the vote is not misconstrued as condoning violations of human rights in any country, including Syria.

4. On the contrary, we believe that it is imperative for every society to have the means of addressing human rights violations through robust mechanisms within themselves. International scrutiny should be resorted to, only when such mechanisms are non-existent or have consistently failed.

5. For the afore-mentioned reasons, India will be abstaining on the vote."

I thank you Madame Chairperson

Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai on Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh’s visit to New York for UN General Assembly Session.

New Delhi, September 17, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good evening and a very warm welcome.

You are aware that the Prime Minister will be leaving for New York next week to participate in the High Level Segment of the 66th UN General Assembly Session. Foreign Secretary would like to brief you about the upcoming visit of the Prime Minister of India. I would also like to introduce my colleague Mr. Pavan Kapoor to the right of Foreign Secretary, who is the Joint Secretary for UN affairs.

Foreign Secretary will be making an opening statement and thereafter we will be happy to take your questions.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you.

The Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh will be visiting New York from 22nd to 26th of September to participate, as you have just heard, in the High Level Segment of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

His delegation would include the External Affairs Minister, the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister, NSA, myself, some senior officials, besides a large media component.

The current UNGA Session commenced on the 13th of September. This year, the General Debate including the addresses by the Heads of Delegation will take place from the 21st to the 30th of September. PM is scheduled to address the General Debate in the morning of 24th of September.

PM is also likely to hold bilateral meetings with a number of visiting Heads of State and Government during his stay in New York.

The present UN General Assembly Session is taking place at a time of continuing global economic and financial uncertainties, with food and fuel prices at their peak. The impact is being felt most severely by developing countries which are struggling to alleviate poverty and improve the living standards of its people. As a key emerging major economy, which is playing a constructive role in contributing to global economic recovery, we will reaffirm our commitment at the UN, to continue working with other countries and agencies, to further global economic and financial stability, as well as to foster strong, sustainable and balanced economic growth.
The Middle East and North Africa are witnessing socio-political upheaval and the situation is in a flux. During our membership of the Security Council since the 1st of January 2011, we have been underlining the need to resolve conflicts through negotiations and diplomatic means rather than the use of force. We will continue to encourage political and diplomatic processes for solutions to the problems of member nations.

In continuation of the initial remarks I made, we would continue to focus attention of the UN on poverty eradication as the foremost developmental challenge and the need to foster and sustain inclusive growth as a primary requirement for poverty eradication. It is imperative that the international community joins hands to ensure that every effort is made to attain the Millennium Development Goals by 2015. India would call for greater mobilization of resources, including honouring of ODA commitments, and policy action for attaining the MDGs. We will also actively engage with UN Member States on human rights issues and to strengthen the UN's humanitarian operations.

India’s priorities in the current session of the UNGA would include, continuing our efforts for reform of the UN with a view to creating an equitable system that is reflective of contemporary realities. We feel that unless comprehensive reform of the UN Security Council is undertaken, the process of UN reforms would only be piecemeal and incomplete. We along with the G-4 and other like-minded countries would continue to work proactively, to maintain the momentum for UN Security Council reforms.

India remains a votary of a robust UN role in maintenance of international peace and security, including through its peacekeeping operations and political processes. India has remained steadfast in its commitment to universal, non-discriminatory and total nuclear disarmament. Consistent with our concerns on terrorism and clandestine proliferation, we will emphasize the immediacy of effective measures to deny terrorists, possible access to WMD material. We will also be actively participating in the UN high level event on Nuclear Safety and Security which will be held on the 22nd of September.

The recent terrorist attack in New Delhi has once again served as a reminder of the constant threat posed by terrorism to the security of democratic societies and wellbeing of its citizens. We are currently chairing the Security Council's Committee on Counter-Terrorism, established by Resolution 1373 adopted in the wake of the September 2001 attacks. The Committee is organizing a special meeting on the 28th September 2011, which is the tenth anniversary of that resolution. We will reiterate the need for strong international cooperation and collective action against terrorism. We have time and again insisted on full compliance by all states of their obligations under various UN Resolutions and mechanisms on counterterrorism. We will also push for an early adoption of the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism (CCIT) that will provide a global normative framework against terrorism.

As I said earlier, the External Affairs Minister, Shri S. M. Krishna, will also be in New York to participate in this High Level Segment. He will represent India at a series of high-level events including:

1. The Annual Commonwealth Foreign Ministers' Meeting on the 22nd of September;
2. The Ministerial Meeting of BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa) on the 23rd of September which he will be indeed hosting;
3. The 35th Annual Meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the G-77 on 23rd of September;
4. An IBSA Ministerial Meeting also on the 23rd of September;
5. A Meeting with the Extended Troika of the Rio Group on 26th of September; and finally PM's visit to New York for this 66th UNGA session, at this important juncture, would enable India's voice to be articulated and heard at the august international body, which would also see the presence of a large number of world leaders. It will also enable him to exchange views with his counterparts both in formal and informal settings.

Thank you.

Question: What are the bilaterals on the sidelines? Could you shed some light on that?

Foreign Secretary: We are still working on the list. The requests are coming in even as we speak. Some notes are being exchanged both here and in New York. So, we do not have the absolute final list right now. As soon as it is ready, we will make it known.

Question: May I know the position of India on the request of the Palestinian people to be accepted as a state in the next General Assembly?

Foreign Secretary: I would like to say by way of background that India's commitment to the Palestinian cause is long established. India was the first non-Arab country to recognize the State of Palestine on the 16th of November, 1988 following the Algiers Declaration of the 15th of November of that year.
While we remain hopeful that the talks and negotiations would resume leading to a comprehensive peace process for final resolution of the Middle East conflict, India will support the Resolution on Palestine seeking membership of the UN.

Question: Any possibility of bilateral meeting at any level, Prime Minister level or Foreign Minister level, with China?

Foreign Secretary: As I said, the list is still under preparation. But to my knowledge this has not been proposed. There will be not a purely bilateral but in the context of BRICS, as I mentioned, on the 23rd of September there will be a Ministerial meeting which our External Affairs Minister will be hosting. So, in that context there would be an engagement.

Question: Will the Prime Minister be meeting President Obama?

Foreign Secretary: As I understand it, President Obama will be leaving New York before our Prime Minister arrives. So, I do not see the possibility.

Question: Mr. Mathai, what is the update on the UN Security Council reforms? Is the Prime Minister likely to be involved in a G4 Heads of Government informal meeting? I know the Foreign Ministers will be meeting. What is the latest? Where do we go from here?

Foreign Secretary: I think the latest on that is that as of now it is planned as a Foreign Minister level engagement between the G4. The four Ministers will take stock of where they are. There was a consultative meeting held among senior officials about a month back. What the Foreign Ministers will do is to review the outcome of that senior officials meeting, and then collectively decide what are the steps needed to be taken, and what is the direction in which to go. But I will ask my colleague to add a little bit to this.

Joint Secretary (UNP) (Shri Pavan Kapoor): Not too much to add except to say that, as Foreign Secretary said, the Director-Generals of the G4, as the senior officials or the sherpas as they are called, met in August in Japan. They have had a pretty extensive discussion to take stock of where things are but they felt that now the situation is right for Ministers to review the steps because they had, as you know, in February agreed to go for an outreach process, and now they feel it is time again for the Ministers to meet on the margins of UNGA. And that is what they plan to do and then decide the further steps.

Question: Sir, you just spoke about the India chairing the meeting of the UN Committee on Counter-terrorism. What really do we expect of this meeting apart from what you say that we are going to press for the Comprehensive Convention on Counterterrorism? Apart from that, what are the real expectations from this meet?
Foreign Secretary: The idea is to once again refocus attention of the international community on the dangers posed by terrorism. If we can push, as I said, for this comprehensive convention, we think that will be of great assistance in creating an international normative framework which is to say that all states do agree on certain basic steps that have to be taken to combat terrorism. We are, as I said, in the chair of the Security Council Committee on Counterterrorism. This being the tenth anniversary of a very major terrorist event, of course we face terrorism on a much more regular basis, it is to refocus attention. It is to once again seek an international consensus which can help us all move forward.

Question: We actually know this but I want you to say this for the sake of our cameras - our stand on Transitional Council in Libya

Foreign Secretary: There was a detailed statement which we worked on, which has been released only this morning. There was immediacy to it because in the context of the UN General Assembly Session which is already under way, there was a question of the acceptance of the credentials of the delegation of the Transitional National Council of Libya, and we have extended support to acceptance of their credentials. India has already been in contact with the Transitional National Council both in Benghazi and in Cairo. Our Charge d'affaires to Libya who is currently based in Tunis has formally established contact with the TNC Mission in Tunis. We are extending humanitarian assistance of about one million dollars through the UNOCHA to Libya and another two million of assistance is being processed as we speak. So, I think that is where we are. We have in fact accepted their credentials.

Question: Is there a meeting planned of the nuclear safety under UN Secretary-General’s Office next week, and are you going to attend it as a Sherpa?

Foreign Secretary: There is the UN High Level Event on Nuclear Safety. Yes, we will be attending it.

Question: Sir, I know about what sidelines situation is which you have mentioned. But is there anything specifically expected with Pakistan, any special meetings or any progress to the expected with India?

Foreign Secretary: Progress we are working on in the bilateral context and you are all familiar with the visit of the Foreign Minister here at the end of July. That is a separate issue. What we have heard is that the Prime Minister of Pakistan is in fact not going to New York for the UNGA, and that the Pakistani delegation is likely to be led by their Foreign Minister. As of now I have no information on anything being planned in terms of a meeting with the Pakistani side.

Question: Sir, we have been talking about poverty alleviation and financial crisis in the UNGA. India itself is facing price rise for a long time, Europe is under depression situation, and America is facing unemployment. Do you have any specific prescription for the UNGA to work on?

Foreign Secretary: I think what we are going to do is to make use of the Prime Minister's address to, as I said in some detail, call for collective measures where they are feasible and to refocus the attention of the world on these critical issues of poverty eradication through inclusive growth. The attempt to achieve the Millennium Development Goals I think is very much part and parcel of this whole business of poverty eradication.

Question: Coming back to Libya, about the recognition of the rebels' Government there, what is the position of India? Will there be some discussion with other countries about the recognition of their government?

Foreign Secretary: We recognize states and not governments. As I said, in the context of participation by the TNC in the UNGA we have extended our support to acceptance of their credentials. We have established contact with the TNC on our own. In terms of discussions with other countries, at the moment I do not know if there is anything planned. There was a major conference in Paris which was convened by President Sarkozy and Prime Minister Cameron. Our Minister of State for External Affairs participated in that meeting and established contact with the other countries and discussed matters relating to Libya. There is one addition to that.

Joint Secretary (UNP): As a follow-up to the Paris meeting there is also a high-level meeting in the UN on the 20th of September on Libya.

Foreign Secretary: And we will participate in that.

Question: At what level, Sir?

Foreign Secretary: Probably at this stage it will be me because I will be the first to arrive there.

Question: Staying on the PM's visit, there was a common BRICS position on this but China and Russia recognize TNC. Is there any conflict of opinion within the BRICS group on this issue?

Foreign Secretary: Not that I know of any conflict. As I have explained in some detail, we have also established contact with the TNC ourselves. We have held consultations with the Brazilians and the South Africans, both of them. And we continue to talk to them about the schedule which we have in mind. So, I think there is really no conflict there.

Question: Sir, would India be lobbying hard for Chinese support for India's permanent membership in UNSC in this UNGA Session?
Foreign Secretary: As I said, the first thing is that the G4 countries will meet among themselves and work out a common plan of action as to what next. Once the four Ministers meet among themselves, we will decide what are the next steps after that.

Question: Any meeting planned of the SAARC Foreign Ministers? Normally every year they meet on the sidelines of UNGA.

Joint Secretary (UNP): You are very right. There is always an informal meeting of SAARC Foreign Ministers. This year the Bhutanese Government who are the current chair of SAARC decided that since there is a SAARC Summit coming up very soon and the SAARC Foreign Ministers will be meeting before that, there is no need for such a meeting. However, we have just been told that the Maldivian Foreign Minister, the Maldivians who are now talking over the chair of SAARC, might hold an informal meeting on the margins of UNGA. So, it is still possible but it is not certain.

Foreign Secretary: I will just add to that. The External Affairs Minister paid a visit to the Maldives at the end of July during which a number of discussions were held particularly focusing on the forthcoming summit. If the schedule does work out for the other SAARC countries and the Maldivians take this initiative, we will be happy to participate in it. But, as I said, the schedule has to be worked out. Ultimately this is being looked at in New York because it is changing from hour to hour - the requests and what is possible and what is not possible.

Question: What are the chances of the short resolution on the UN Security Council reforms being put to vote in the UNGA?

Foreign Secretary: As I said, the decision on whether to go ahead, what steps to take has still not been made. That is the reason this meeting of the four Ministers acquires a particular importance because we have to take stock of where we are. As my colleague mentioned, the discussion which was held in Tokyo some weeks ago did reveal that there is much that needs to be done. We need to collectively reflect on what is the best way forward. After the last February decision, a very major outreach was begun. We understand that there was a very substantial support that was forthcoming from the countries which were contacted. So, perhaps they would once again take note of that and then decide what to do next.

Question: Sir, in your meeting with the Chinese side even at the Foreign Ministers' level, will the issues of intrusion in Ladakh and the Vietnam issue figure?

Foreign Secretary: As I said, the schedule is for a meeting of the group BRICS in which we are trying to in fact provide a particular economic focus to this grouping so that they can collectively deal with the agenda which we all agree on in terms of economic engagement and include more strongly we might say aligning our positions in global economic fora. Beyond that, I do not think there would be an occasion for specific issues.

Question: I have one question on counterterrorism since of course India is heading the UN Committee. Given the fact that India has constantly been talking about the Haqqani Network and in the context of the Afghan Taliban talks, Pakistan’s manoeuvring and the recent attacks on the US Embassy in Kabul which is attributed again to Haqqani brothers, does that in any way kind of change India’s position here, give you more strength to talk on the issue, or to raise the issue?

Foreign Secretary: I do not think the strength of our position is contingent on any single incident or any individual group. Certainly on the attack which took place in Kabul there is more than one view as to who is actually responsible for it. But our position is more general. It is more seeking a global consensus on how to move forward.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you.

667. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of the Counter Terrorism Committee Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UNSG’s Symposium on International Counter-Terrorism Cooperation.

September 19, 2011

Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies,

Ladies and gentlemen

Thank you for inviting me, in my capacity as Chairman of the Counter-Terrorism Committee, to participate in this Symposium on International Counter-Terrorism Cooperation.

Terrorism today constitutes the most serious challenge to international peace and security. Some States, including my own country, have been victims of this scourge for several decades. The horrific events of 9/11 terrorists attacks in this city, where the United Nations is headquartered, brought home to the western world its devastating consequences and changed the world profoundly thereafter.

Today, terrorists are not only truly globalised, but are also waging an asymmetric warfare against the international community.

They recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others. They have global logistical and supply chains; they have developed transnational financial systems; they use the latest and most sophisticated technologies and have command and control mechanisms that are able to operate across continents on a real-time basis.

Mr. Chairman,

Confronted with this global menace, the United Nations has developed a reasonably good legal framework aimed at countering terrorism and enhancing national, regional and sub-regional cooperation in this regard.

States have been obligated, among other actions, to criminalize terrorist acts, deny terrorist safe havens and financial resources, and ensure that terrorists are brought to justice and cooperate with other States to bring terrorists to justice.

On its part, the General assembly has adopted the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy which is a unique and universally agreed strategic framework to counter terrorism.

Further, the Security Council has created a network of subsidiary bodies including the 1373 Committee (CTC), the 1540 Committee, and the Al-Qaida Sanctions Committee, which are supported by expert bodies that are entrusted with the task of overseeing the implementation of relevant counter-terrorism resolutions adopted by the Council.

Despite these substantive achievements, there has been no let up in terrorist violence and the world continues to confront the challenge emanating from the epicenters of terrorism.

Mr. Chairman,

The central requirement of an effective counter-terrorism strategy is the necessary political will to squarely face the challenge of terrorism.

No cause or grievance could justify terrorism and we need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism.

Where States have the institutions and capacities, they must clamp down on terrorism. The States which do not have technical and institutional capacities, especially in failed states, the international community should assist in building their capacities to counter-terrorism.

Concerted international efforts are required to identify and expose the linkages that exist between terrorists and their supporters and to destroy terrorist safe havens, their financial flows and their support networks.

The Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) as well as the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy recognize that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone. The States need to implement the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy in an integrated manner in all its four pillars.

Our normative framework of international conventions and protocols is still incomplete and riddled with loopholes. There has been a long delay in adopting a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. I hope we will be able to adopt this Convention soon. This would help us in developing a legal and normative basis for an effective counter-terrorism cooperation framework.

Mr. Chairman,

We can do more to improve our collective efforts. Technical assistance, capacity building and sharing of best practices are vital components of successful collective strategies.

We need to further strengthen international cooperation amongst practitioners - prosecutors, police officers, judges, and immigration and border officials through sharing and developing best practices in counter terrorism efforts. I am happy to note the important strides made by UN entities including the CTITF and CTED in this area.

The specialized international and regional organizations have also an important role to play in building an understanding of the terrorist threat; in facilitating international cooperation in the field of counter-terrorism, especially through the provision of technical and related assistance.

At the national level we need to develop strategies that restrict the emotional and political space available to terrorists to carry out their propaganda. We must support all efforts to enhance dialogue between and amongst civilizations, ethnicities, and religions, and evolve a culture of tolerance, compassion and respect for diversity, especially amongst the young.

In addition, efforts should be made to develop comprehensive and integrated national counterterrorism strategies that fully comply with the rule of law; fully respect the dignity and human rights of all; and reach out to, and actively involve all parts of society and all communities. Such strategies must also effectively address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism including radicalization and recruitment for terrorism.

Mr. Chairman,

Before I conclude, I would like to take this opportunity to inform this august gathering that the Counter-Terrorism Committee will be commemorating the tenth anniversary of the adoption of Resolution 1373 (2001) and establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee on September 28, 2011. The Committee will also adopt an Outcome Document highlighting the progress achieved in implementing Resolution 1373 during the last 10 years and providing a roadmap for the future. This will be a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of States in their counter terrorism efforts. I encourage all delegations and stakeholders to attend that event in order to unequivocally convey our common resolve to battle terrorism.

Thank you.

668. Statement by Permanent Representative at UN and Chairman, Counter-Terrorism Committee Ambassador H.S. Puri at the UN Secretary General’s Symposium on International Counter-Terrorism Cooperation.

Further, the Security Council has created a network of subsidiary bodies including the 1373 Committee (CTC), the 1540 Committee, and the Al-Qaida Sanctions Committee, which are supported by expert bodies that are entrusted with the task of overseeing the implementation of relevant counter-terrorism resolutions adopted by the Council.

Despite these substantive achievements, there has been no let up in terrorist violence and the world continues to confront the challenge emanating from the epicenters of terrorism.

Mr. Chairman,

The central requirement of an effective counter-terrorism strategy is the necessary political will to squarely face the challenge of terrorism.

No cause or grievance could justify terrorism and we need to adopt a holistic approach that ensures zero-tolerance towards terrorism.
Where States have the institutions and capacities, they must clamp down on terrorism. The States which do not have technical and institutional capacities, especially in failed states, the international community should assist in building their capacities to counter-terrorism.

Concerted international efforts are required to identify and expose the linkages that exist between terrorists and their supporters and to destroy terrorist safe havens, their financial flows and their support networks.

The Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) as well as the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy recognize that terrorism will not be defeated by military means, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone. The States need to implement the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy in an integrated manner in all its four pillars.

Our normative framework of international conventions and protocols is still incomplete and riddled with loopholes. There has been a long delay in adopting a Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. I hope we will be able to adopt this Convention soon. This would help us in developing a legal and normative basis for an effective counter-terrorism cooperation framework.

Mr. Chairman,

We can do more to improve our collective efforts. Technical assistance, capacity building and sharing of best practices are vital components of successful collective strategies.

We need to further strengthen international cooperation amongst practitioners - prosecutors, police officers, judges, and immigration and border officials through sharing and developing best practices in counter terrorism efforts. I am happy to note the important strides made by UN entities including the CTITF and CTED in this area.

The specialized international and regional organizations have also an important role to play in building an understanding of the terrorist threat; in facilitating international cooperation in the field of counter-terrorism, especially through the provision of technical and related assistance.

At the national level we need to develop strategies that restrict the emotional and political space available to terrorists to carry out their propaganda. We must support all efforts to enhance dialogue between and amongst civilizations, ethnicities, and religions, and evolve a culture of tolerance, compassion and respect for diversity, especially amongst the young.

In addition, efforts should be made to develop comprehensive and integrated national counterterrorism strategies that fully comply with the rule of law; fully respect the dignity and human rights of all; and reach out to, and actively involve all parts of society and all communities. Such strategies must also effectively address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism including radicalization and recruitment for terrorism.

Mr. Chairman, before I conclude, I would like to take this opportunity to inform this august gathering that the Counter-Terrorism Committee will be commemorating the tenth anniversary of the adoption of Resolution 1373 (2001) and establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee on September 28, 2011. The Committee will also adopt an Outcome Document highlighting the progress achieved in implementing Resolution 1373 during the last 10 years and providing a roadmap for the future. This will be a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of States in their counter terrorism efforts. I encourage all delegations and stakeholders to attend that event in order to unequivocally convey our common resolve to battle terrorism.

Thank you.

669. Statement by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the UN Security Council’s High Level meeting on Conflict Prevention.

New York, September 22, 2011.

Your Excellency, Mr. President,

I would like to begin by congratulating Lebanon on its Presidency of the Security Council this month and express my deep appreciation at your personally presiding over this very important event.

I am, indeed, honored to participate in the discussions today and bring to you the good wishes of my Government.

We would also like to thank the Secretary General for his report and recommendations on the use of preventive diplomacy by the United Nations.

Mr. President,

If properly used, Preventive Diplomacy could become an essential element in the global community’s response to some of the major challenges facing the international system today and help in conflict prevention.
The adoption of the Charter of United Nations was supposed to herald the beginning of a new chapter in international relations.

One of the purposes of the United Nations as elaborated in Article 1 (1) of the Charter was to “bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace.”

The Charter therefore stresses the importance of adjustment or settlement of disputes by peaceful means which include negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements.

Over the last six decades, peaceful interventions by the United Nations have helped diffuse a number of conflict situations on a number of occasions.

These interventions, wherever undertaken with impartiality, fairness and equity, have earned for the United Nations a reputation for effective mediation.

The challenge before the international community is to build on this legacy and ensure that peaceful means for settlement of disputes remain relevant to current realities.

Mr. President,

Contemporary threats to international peace and security differ qualitatively from those prevalent six decades ago. Conventional war has been overtaken by intra-state and even borderless violence.

Low-intensity conflict, non-state actors and the terrorist-criminal-drug trafficking nexus threaten international stability and progress. It is recognized that these conflicts are extremely complicated and need complex solutions.

Unfortunately, recent developments seem to indicate a worrying trend towards increased reliance on the use of force as a mechanism for resolving some of these conflicts.

The limitations of using force too frequently and too quickly are many. Any respite that coercion brings about in the absence of a political settlement is likely to be short-lived.

Efforts at peaceful settlement of disputes may also suffer if force is used prematurely and without adequate deliberation.

Very frequently, the demonstration of the lack of patience in persisting with peaceful efforts is also likely to play into the hands of those who want the conflict to persist.
The use of force also leads to collateral damage. Such damage, whether human or material, has unpredictable effects on political conflict resolution processes while creating moral or normative dilemmas.

In many places use of force has prolonged conflicts – a situation where the cure turned out to be worse than the disease. The international community must not show undue eagerness for coercive arrangements in its hurry to bring peace.

Mr. President,

We are often reminded of the shortcomings and limitations of diplomacy and the need to intervene.

It is important, however, to remember that the tragic events of the past that are sought to justify intervention took place not because dialogue was ineffective but because of the lack of will on the part of the international community to act.

These failures do not in any way detract from the soundness of the principle of peaceful settlement of disputes or its means mentioned in the Charter.

It, of course, goes without saying that the peaceful method is a more difficult one. The great Indian Emperor Ashoka noted three millennia ago that “To do good is difficult.”

Preventive diplomacy takes time and commitment.

It requires a clear understanding of the nature and context of the conflict. It requires the ability to discern realistic solutions. It requires involvement of various stakeholders affected by conflict. It needs to incorporate the forces for stability and progress in a particular situation.

Mr. President,

Protection of their populations is the foremost responsibility of sovereign States. It is also their primary responsibility to prevent conflict.

As such, actions undertaken within the framework of conflict prevention by United Nations entities must be designed to support and complement, as appropriate, the conflict prevention roles of national Governments.

India has always opposed and will continue to oppose the use of force as the primary reaction to conflicts.

As the major Troop Contributing Country to United Nations peacekeeping operations we are more familiar than most with the limitations of force.

We note, however, that peacekeepers, who are also early peacebuilders are being asked to do more with less. This resource gap needs to be addressed.
The inability of the international community to match its mandates with resources ultimately affects the credibility of this Council and its authority in resolving disputes.

Mr. President,

There really is no sustainable alternative to political processes and that the primary focus of the United Nations should be the facilitation of a political settlement. Coercive measures should be avoided and used as a measure of last resort and implemented with extreme care and caution.

Decisions to use force should be free of political motives. The humanitarian imperative of providing succor to the suffering should not be used to further political objectives. This does humanitarianism and diplomacy a disservice.

Moreover, there are very good reasons why international law is based on the principle of consent. Efforts to circumvent this process are not prudent and cannot be expected to address the drivers of conflict on an enduring basis.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize the time-tested principles of national consent, impartiality, fairness and equity in all conflict prevention activities that the United Nations may undertake.

Thank you

670. Speech by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the High Level Symposium of South Africa’s contribution to the fight against Racism and Xenophobia [in the context of the Centenary Celebrations of the African National Congress].

New York, September 22, 2011.

Your Excellency President Zuma,

Your Excellency President Jonathan,

Your Excellency Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon,

Fellow Ministers and

Distinguished Guests,
It is a matter of pride for me to join other leaders and fellow Ministers in celebrating the forthcoming centenary of the African National Congress in January 2012. We in India fully share the joy of our South African brothers and sisters in celebrating their great victory over racism and colonialism.

The ANC was at the forefront of one of the greatest political struggles of history. Its campaign against racist oppression and injustice was a long and difficult one. It was only the vision of great leaders like Nelson Mandela, Walter Sisulu and Oliver Tambo and the enormous sacrifices of the South African people cutting across racial boundaries that ultimately ensured that truth and justice prevailed.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

I would like to take this opportunity to pay homage to the great leaders of the ANC and the many unnamed South Africans whose sacrifices for freedom and dignity have made it possible for us to celebrate this historic moment today.

The ANC’s triumph against institutionalized racism of apartheid was celebrated as much in India as in South Africa itself. Indeed, the success of the ANC was at once the success of all people across the world who have suffered under colonial and racist oppression.

The ANC’s greatness is not only in that it successfully and peacefully overthrew the apartheid state, but in that it managed to go beyond this by building a new democratic South Africa based on non-racialism and equal respect for all its people. The foresight of Nelson Mandela and his policy of national reconciliation has helped the ANC to forge a new rainbow nation out of the bitter hatred and division sown by apartheid.

We in India are proud of the success of South Africa’s democratic transition and its emergence as a leading nation in the world. Indeed, a very special bond unites our two nations.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

The Indian freedom struggle overthrew the mightiest empire of its time and did so peacefully. This would not have been possible without the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, leading us in Satyagraha. South Africa is the cradle of Satyagraha. It is there that Mahatma Gandhi first practiced ahimsa when confronted by the politics of evil. It is South Africa that turned Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, a young lawyer, into the Mahatma.

India’s commitment to the battle waged by the people of South Africa and by the ANC against apartheid was total. My country could not and did not remain indifferent to this crusade for freedom, equality and human dignity. In a message addressed to the South African people in 1946, Jawaharlal Nehru said that India would fight for the rights and honour of all South Africans, whatever may be the burden that we may have to carry. He promised to fight it in India, in South Africa and in the international assemblies. And fight it, we did.

Here, I would like to quote what the great Nelson Mandela has said about India: “This country and my own have long and cherished bonds of friendship. India shall always hold a place of honour in the ranks of our international solidarity partners. For it was India who first took up the case for us against apartheid at the United Nations. It was India who always stood at the head of the international community’s moral, political and material support to our cause to liberate our country from the bondage of racial oppression and racist rule. Today democratic South Africa has friends and supporters all over the world. We can today count amongst our allies some of the most powerful countries in the world. And we are very grateful for that support and friendship. We can, however, not forget for one moment those that stood by us when it was neither fashionable nor easy to do so. Amongst those, as I have said, India takes pride of place.”

We are also greatly proud of the role of our Indian brothers and sisters who made South Africa their home in this great struggle. The Natal Indian Congress and the Transvaal Indian Congress, both of which owe their origins to the Mahatma, stood shoulder to shoulder with the African National Congress in its endeavours. South Africans of Indian origin contributed significantly to the ANC and they continue to do so today.

Excellencies and Distinguished Guests,

It is a matter of pride for us that we have converted this rich legacy into a thriving bilateral relationship. Our nation-building efforts have been guided by a common philosophy that stresses tolerance and respect for diversity.

It is thus no surprise that we stand for principles and the rule of law in our respective nations and in international relations. We are natural partners and our partnership extends beyond the bilateral. Our common aspirations and common values unite us in the UN Security Council, in G-20, in the India-Brazil-South Africa (IBSA) forum, and in BRICS.

This is the century of Asia and Africa. The new dawn that the freedom fighters of India and the African National Congress dreamed about is upon us. We walked together in the walk to freedom; we now continue this journey into a better future for our two nations and for the entire world.

Thank you.

Statement by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai at the High Level Meeting of the United Nations General Assembly on Nuclear Safety and Security.

New York, September 22, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

We would like to convey our appreciation to the UN Secretary General for organizing this High Level Meeting on Nuclear Safety and Security. We would like to join other delegations in conveying our heartfelt condolences to Japan on the recent grave tragedy in that country. India associates itself with the Statement made on behalf of NAM member-states.

The Fukushima nuclear incident attracted worldwide attention and raised concerns about nuclear safety in the face of natural calamities of particularly large magnitudes. Just as the global nuclear industry drew valuable lessons from the Three Mile Island and Chernobyl accidents, after Fukushima, there is a strong expectation that global safety standards, implementation and crisis response procedures will be further strengthened, consolidated and updated in a continuous manner based on a scientific and objective analysis of the lessons learned.

India views nuclear energy as an essential element of its national energy basket. We are committed to taking forward our three stage nuclear programme based on a closed fuel cycle. We envisage a major expansion of nuclear energy in the coming decades – 20,000 MW by 2020 and projected to grow to 60,000 mw by 2030. Our nuclear safety track record has been impeccable over 345 reactor years of operation but we recognize the importance of continuous improvement and innovation in our nuclear safety standards and practices covering the entire range of activities – citing, design, construction, operation and up-gradation.

The Prime Minister of India has underscored that safety of our nuclear plants is a matter of the highest priority. The Government has undertaken a number of measures. These include the introduction of a bill in Parliament to change the functional status of AERB to a de jure independent Nuclear Regulatory Authority. Six safety review committees have looked into various aspects of nuclear safety and while detailed reviews are being evaluated, certain enhanced safety measures are already being implemented. India will invite the Operational Safety Review Teams of IAEA to assist in its own safety reviews and audit. All reactors, whether indigenous or imported will, without India’s National Disaster Management Authority has drawn up “Management of Nuclear and Radiological Emergencies” which provides a holistic and integrated approach to disaster management covering all its components – prevention, mitigation, preparedness, compliance with regulatory requirements, capacity development, response, relief, recovery, rehabilitation and reconstruction.

While recognizing that nuclear safety and nuclear security are national responsibilities, we consider it important to strengthen relevant international cooperative mechanisms to enhance public confidence in nuclear power as a safe, secure and clean source of energy. There is need for strengthened international cooperation, setting of new standards, peer reviews, sharing of experiences with a new emphasis of cooperation among all stakeholders - government, operators, regulators, industry, scientific and research bodies. A new international safety regime should be evolved on the basis of consultations and consensus through an inclusive and transparent process.

The IAEA has a central role to play in taking forward this process. We believe the Agency has the required mandate and has acquired considerable competence to facilitate international cooperation in this area. The Agency has, over the years, developed capabilities to undertake appropriate technical assessments through effective pooling of resources for the benefit of Member States.

The Convention on Nuclear Safety is the pillar of the international safety regime. We welcome the proposal to convene a special meeting of the Contracting Parties to this Convention to consider amendments to strengthen nuclear safety. This has to be done in a manner that does not affect the sovereign decision making process of the Contracting Parties. The Convention on Early Notification of a Nuclear Accident is an important instrument in terms of prompt information with the Agency and the states affected in cases of significant trans-boundary radiological incidents.

The IAEA Ministerial Conference on Nuclear Safety in June 2011 served as a platform to make an initial assessment of the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear accident and the lessons to be drawn from it. It also provided the necessary impetus to strengthen the international nuclear safety framework and emergency preparedness and response mechanisms. The Ministerial Declaration adopted by the Conference and the draft Nuclear Safety Action Plan provides a valuable basis for taking this process forward. We welcome the proposed High Level Conference to be organized by Japan and the IAEA in 2012 on nuclear safety. India has participated and benefitted from peer reviews of WANO and will be cooperating with the multi-national design evaluation programme of the OCED-NEA.

India will actively contribute to international efforts for enhanced nuclear safety standards and practices, evolved through consultations, based on a scientific and objective approach that allows sharing of scientific knowledge and India welcomes President Obama’s initiative to host the first Nuclear Security Summit in Washington in April 2010. We support the full implementation of the Summit Communiqué and the Work Plan. The second Summit in Seoul next year will provide a valuable opportunity for participating states to reaffirm their joint determination to contribute to global efforts to combat the threat of nuclear terrorism - one of the pressing challenges facing the international community.

The NSS process has strengthened resolve of participating states to address issues of nuclear terrorism and nuclear security through a collective international response based on effective action at the national level to prevent vulnerable nuclear material falling into hands of non-state actors and terrorist groups. India has participated actively in the NSS process and will host a meeting of the NSS Sherpas’ in New Delhi in January 2012.

India believes that the primary responsibility for ensuring nuclear security rests at the national level, but this must be accompanied by responsible behavior by States. All States should scrupulously abide by their international obligations. India has consistently supported IAEA’s central role in facilitating national efforts to strengthen nuclear security and in fostering effective international cooperation.

Universal adherence to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials (CPPNM) and early entry into force of its 2005 Amendment would go a long way in strengthening global efforts in the area of nuclear security. India is party to the CPPNM and is amongst the few countries which have ratified the 2005 amendment to the Convention. India is a party to the International Convention on Combating Nuclear Terrorism and supports its universalization.

India is establishing a Global Centre for Nuclear Energy Partnership to facilitate international cooperation and assist in building global capacity in areas such as Advanced Nuclear Energy Systems, Nuclear Security, Radiation Safety, and the application of Radioisotopes and Radiation Technology. International cooperation will be an important dimension of the Centre which will focus not only on training programmes, also in cooperation with the IAEA, but on new and innovative technological responses to meet the challenges of safety and security.
We are confident that through our common vision and joint action on enhanced nuclear safety and security standards we would be able to enhance public confidence in nuclear energy as a clean, affordable, safe and secure source of energy, vital to meeting global energy demands especially in developing countries. This meeting should therefore send a strong and unambiguous signal of support for nuclear energy while underlining our common determination to strengthen the mandate and resources of the IAEA to discharge its role and responsibilities.

Thank you.

672. Press Statement of the Ministerial Meeting of the G4 countries (Brazil, Germany, India and Japan) on the margins of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

1. The Minister of External Relations of Brazil, the Federal Minister for Foreign Affairs of Germany, the Minister of External Affairs of India, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Japan met in New York on 23 September 2011, in the margins of the opening of the 66th session of the United Nations General Assembly, to exchange views on Security Council reform.

2. Recalling their previous joint statements, in particular the declarations of 24 September 2010 and 11 February 2011, the G4 countries reiterated their common vision of an enlarged Security Council for the 21st century, expanded in both the permanent and non-permanent categories of membership, taking into consideration the contributions made by countries to the maintenance of international peace and security, as well as the need for increased representation of developing countries in both categories, in order to better reflect today’s geopolitical realities.

3. The Ministers discussed the initiative to promote consultations with Member States with regard to a draft resolution on expansion of the Security Council in both categories and improvement of its working methods. The initiative has been supported by a wide coalition of Member States, from all regional groups of the United Nations. Therefore, the Ministers expressed the view that such strong support should be considered as the basis for further discussion in the ongoing intergovernmental negotiations to create the momentum needed for real negotiations among Member States on this all-important matter.
4. The Ministers also welcomed the decision by the General Assembly to immediately continue the process of intergovernmental negotiations in the informal plenary of the 66th Session. They reaffirmed their full support to the negotiations and expressed their determination to work in close cooperation with other Member States in a spirit of flexibility and press ahead with all the necessary steps to achieve a concrete outcome in the current session of the UN General Assembly. In this regard, the G4 countries look forward to working closely with H.E. Mr. Nassir Abdulaziz Al-Nasser, President of the 66th session of the General Assembly.

5. The Ministers once again committed themselves to continue to work together in order to bring about the urgently needed reform of the Security Council.

Antonio de Aguiar Patriota
Minister of External Relations of Brazil

Guido Westerwelle
Federal Minister for Foreign Affairs of Germany

S. M. Krishna
Minister of External Affairs of India

Koichiro Gemba
Minister of Foreign Affairs of Japan
Your Excellency, Mr. President,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Allow me at the outset to congratulate you on assuming the Presidency of the General Assembly. I wish to assure you of India’s full cooperation in the conduct of the sixty-sixth session of the Assembly. It is also my great pleasure to welcome in our midst the new State of South Sudan.

Mr. President,

We meet at this session of the United Nations General Assembly at a time of great uncertainty and profound change. Till a few years ago the world had taken for granted the benefits of globalization and global interdependence. Today we are being called upon to cope with the negative dimensions of those very phenomena. Economic, social and political events in different parts of the world have coalesced together and their adverse impact is now being felt across countries and continents. The world economy is in trouble. The shoots of recovery which were visible after the economic and financial crisis of 2008 have yet to blossom. In many respects the crisis has deepened even further. The traditional engines of the global economy such as the United States, Europe and Japan, which are also the sources of global economic and financial stability, are faced with continued economic slowdown. Recessionary trends in these countries are affecting confidence in world financial and capital markets.

These developments are bound to have a negative impact on developing countries which also have to bear the additional burden of inflationary pressures. Declining global demand and availability of capital, increasing barriers to free trade and mounting debt pose a threat to the international monetary and financial system. Questions are being asked about the efficacy of the Bretton Woods institutions. There has been unprecedented social and political upheaval in West Asia, the Gulf and North Africa. People of these regions are demanding the right to shape their own future. Energy and food prices are once again spiraling and introducing fresh instability, especially for developing countries. The Palestinian question still remains unresolved and a source of great instability and violence. India is steadfast in its support for the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognizable borders side by side and at peace with Israel. We look forward to welcoming Palestine as an equal member of the United Nations. Terrorism continues to rear its ugly head and take a grievous toll of innocent lives.

New threats to international security have emerged. At a time when the world needs more international commerce, the sea lanes of communication across the Indian Ocean are under siege. Acts of piracy are being carried out with impunity from lands that are beyond the writ of any functioning state or international accountability. Iniquitous growth, inadequate job and education opportunities and denial of basic human freedoms are leading to growing radicalization of the youth, intolerance and extremism.

Mr. President,

We have no choice but to meet these challenges. We will succeed if we adopt a cooperative rather than a confrontationist approach.

We will succeed if we embrace once again the principles on which the United Nations was founded - internationalism and multilateralism. More importantly, we will succeed if our efforts have legitimacy and are pursued not just within the framework of law but also the spirit of the law. The observance of the rule of law is as important in international affairs as it is within countries. Societies cannot be reordered from outside through military force. People in all countries have the right to choose their own destiny and decide their own future. The international community has a role to play in assisting in the processes of transition and institution building, but the idea that prescriptions have to be imposed from outside is fraught with danger.

Actions taken under the authority of the United Nations must respect the unity, territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of individual states. Correspondingly, governments are duty bound to their citizens to create conditions that enable them to freely determine their pathways to development. This is the essence of democracy and fundamental human freedoms.

Mr. President,

There are many other things that we can do. We must address the issue of the deficit in global governance. We need a stronger and more effective United Nations. We need a United Nations that is sensitive to the aspirations of everyone - rich or poor, big or small. For this the United Nations and its principal organs, the General Assembly and the Security Council, must be revitalized and reformed. The reform and expansion of the Security Council are essential if it is to reflect contemporary reality. Such an outcome will enhance the Council’s credibility and effectiveness in dealing with global issues. Early reform of the Security Council must be pursued with renewed vigour and urgently enacted. We should not allow the global economic slowdown to become a trigger for building walls around ourselves through protectionism or erecting barriers to movement of people, services and capital. Effective ways and means must be deployed to promote coordination of macroeconomic policies of major economies. The reform of governance systems of international financial institutions ought to be pursued with speed and efficiency.

The development agenda must be brought firmly back to the centre stage of the United Nations’ priorities. We need a much more determined effort to ensure balanced, inclusive and sustainable development for the benefit of vast sections of humanity. Each of us can contribute to this task, but we can achieve far more if we act in partnership.

In the last few decades India has lifted tens of millions of its people out of abject poverty. We are in a position to feed our population better, to educate them better and to widen their economic choices. But we still have a very long way to go. We wish to quicken the pace of India’s transformation in partnership with the international community. A fast growing India can expand the boundaries for the global economy. A democratic, plural and secular India can contribute to tolerance and peaceful co-existence among nations. Developing countries need investment, technology and market access for their products. They need assistance in the areas of education, health, women’s empowerment and agriculture. During the recently held 4th United Nations - Least Developed Countries Conference, India has strengthened its partnership with the LDCs through significantly enhanced lines of credit and assistance in capacity building. We have to pay particular attention to Africa. Africa’s richest resources are not its minerals but its people. We have to empower them and open the doors for them to human advances in technology, education and skill development.

At the second India-Africa Forum Summit in Addis Ababa earlier this year India offered lines of credit worth five billion US dollars and an additional 700 million US dollars grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology and building new institutions. The United Nations should lead efforts in the area of food security. We need more cooperation in agricultural technologies, water conservation, land usage and productivity and stability in commodity prices.

Mr. President,

Developing countries need a peaceful external environment to grow. The fight against terrorism must be unrelenting. There cannot be selective approaches in dealing with terrorist groups or the infrastructure of terrorism. Terrorism has to be fought across all fronts. In South Asia there are encouraging signs of cooperation in the area of security, as exemplified in India’s cooperation with Bangladesh. Such cooperation is adding to the security of both our countries. The recent assassination of Professor Burhanuddin Rabbani in Kabul is a chilling reminder of the designs of the enemies of peace in Afghanistan. It is essential that the process of nation building and reconciliation in that country succeeds. This is vital for ensuring peace and security in the region.

India will play its part in helping the people of Afghanistan to build a better future for themselves, just as we are doing in other countries in South Asia. We will do so because prosperity and stability in our region are indivisible. We wish to see an open, inclusive and transparent architecture of regional cooperation in the Asia Pacific region and peaceful settlement of disputes. I call upon the United Nations to evolve a comprehensive and effective response to the problem of piracy in the Red Sea and off the coast of Somalia. As a littoral state of the Indian Ocean, India is ready to work with other countries in this regard. Simultaneously, the international community should continue with efforts to restore stability in Somalia. We have joined international efforts to provide humanitarian assistance to the countries afflicted with severe famine and drought in the Horn of Africa, specifically Somalia, Kenya and Djibouti. Nuclear proliferation continues to remain a threat to international security. The Action Plan put forward by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi for a Nuclear-Weapon-Free and Non-Violent World provides a concrete road map for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner.

I commend the United Nations for its efforts in focusing world attention on nuclear safety. Our plans for utilizing nuclear power to meet our energy needs hinge upon full satisfaction about the safety of nuclear energy. We have undertaken a thorough review of the safety of our nuclear plants. We support international efforts under the aegis of the International Atomic Energy Agency to enhance levels of safety and security.

Mr. President,

The perspectives that I have outlined to this august assembly are the ones that have guided our actions in the Security Council since India became a non-permanent member of the Council in January this year. There are still millions living in poverty across the world. Their plight has worsened, for no fault of theirs, due to the global economic and financial crisis of the recent years. The actions of governments around the world are therefore under close scrutiny. It is vitally important that through our actions and deeds we renew people’s faith in the charter and objectives of the United Nations. I am confident we can do this through statesmanship, foresight and collective efforts. India stands ready to play its part in this noble endeavour.

I thank you.
Media Briefing by Foreign Secretary Ranjan Mathai on day 3 of Prime Minister’s visit to New York for the UN General Assembly Session.

New York, September 24, 2011.

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): A very good afternoon to all of you and welcome. You have already seen and analysed, some of you have already reported upon, the address of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh at UNGA today. You are also aware that the Prime Minister has had two bilateral meetings, with the Prime Minister of Nepal and also with the President of the newest member of the comity of nations South Sudan. Foreign Secretary would like to brief you about the meetings, and also give you a perspective on Prime Minister’s address at UNGA.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you.

I am sure all of you have the full text of the Prime Minister’s speech. This was very well received. In it the Prime Minister who is addressing the UNGA for the first time since 2008 has in fact spelt out his analysis of the international situation as it is today and his vision on the kinds of areas in which global cooperation is called for. I would draw attention to two or three elements of it.

Prime Minister refers very clearly to the fact that the world economic crisis, which in 2008 he referred to when he was here, there was a time we thought we were out of the woods but it seems there is still need for intensive cooperation among all countries in the world to tackle this continued crisis. In this context he has also mentioned the continued feeling that the Bretton Woods institutions as they are, do require examination as together they are suitable for dealing with the current international realities.

The Prime Minister made a categorical reference again to our support for Palestine. He addressed that issue very clearly. He also referred to, he gave an analysis of the current transition which is taking place in many countries across the world, the tensions and turmoil. I draw attention to one particular statement in the speech, in which he says that societies cannot be reordered from outside. In fact the specific language is, “Societies cannot be reordered from outside through military force. People in all countries have a right to choose their own destiny and decide their own future.”

In addition I would mention that he referred to the need for the United Nations Security Council reform and I quote, “The reform and expansion of the Security Council are essential if it is to reflect contemporary reality. Such an outcome will enhance the Council’s credibility and effectiveness in dealing with global issues. Early reform of the Security Council must be pursued with renewed vigour and urgently enacted. “This particular line was greeted with applause on the floor.

There was also a reference to our own region South Asia and I draw attention to that also. In that the Prime Minister, after referring to the fight against terrorism, said, “In South Asia there are encouraging signs of cooperation in the area of security as exemplified in India’s cooperation with Bangladesh. Such cooperation is adding to the security of both our countries.” That is as much as I would like to say on the speech itself. I am sure all of you would have seen it and begun your own analyses. I will now move to the bilaterals.

Prime Minister met Prime Minister Bhattarai of Nepal this morning. External Affairs Minister was present. He noted that the Nepalese leader knew India well as he had studied in India in Chandigarh and also in Delhi. There was an exchange of views on bilateral relations and both emphasised that the ties between the two nations were very close and based on centuries old civilisational links. They referred to the tradition of friendship and cooperation and it was felt that steps should be taken to advance particularly the economic cooperation and other elements in our bilateral agenda.

The Nepalese Prime Minister explained the current developments in Nepal and the priorities of his Government, particularly to complete the peace process and the formation of the Constitution. Our Prime Minister wished the Nepalese Government success in these endeavours. PM also told the Nepalese Prime Minister that we were awaiting his visit which has been agreed to and the dates are being finalised.

PM later met President Salva Kiir of South Sudan. External Affairs Minister and the South Sudan Foreign Minister were both present at that meeting. PM began by again conveying his congratulations to the leader of the new State and the manner in which it had handled its emergence on to the world stage. The President conveyed his thanks to PM and recalled with particular pleasure India’s presence at the celebrations of South Sudan’s Independence where, as you may recall, India was represented by our Vice-President. Minister in President Salva Kiir’s office, Madam Cook, had visited India a few months ago.

President Kiir referred to the priorities and the needs of South Sudan which he described as being very great. But he drew particular attention to the need for assistance in areas such as medical facilities, agriculture, irrigation, education, infrastructure and energy. He suggested that India could provide assistance in this regard. And PM responded with the assurance that India would extend all assistance possible, particularly for capacity-building and human resource development in these areas.
President Kiir also referred to the scope for development of new railway lines to link South Sudan with the rest of the railway network in Africa and also access to the sea. He also spoke of the importance of Indian participation in the development of oil resources, hydrocarbon resources of South Sudan. It was then felt that the discussion should be followed up through an exchange of visits to assess the scope for Indian expertise participating in the development of South Sudan, particularly in fields like medicine, agriculture, railways, infrastructure and then to draw up a plan of action. The two Foreign Ministers have been charged with taking this forward.

PM invited President Kiir to visit India, and the President said he would be happy to take up the invitation as soon as the immediate priority of setting up the political institutions of the new country was completed.

After these two meetings, I would also like to mention that EAM had a separate meeting with the UK Foreign Secretary as he is called, the Foreign Minister of UK. The two Foreign Ministers discussed bilateral relations in the field particularly of economic affairs, trade, education, and also there was a reference to defence. The two leaders exchanged views on matters before the Security Council, in particular Libya, Syria and the reform of the Security Council. Mr. Hague took the opportunity to reiterate UK’s support to India for its permanent membership in an expanded Security Council. The two leaders also discussed issues before the forthcoming Commonwealth Summit which is to be held in Perth at the end of October.

Thank you.

Question: Sir, I was wondering if you know who all did the leader of South Sudan meet other than the Indian Prime Minister in terms of importance.

Foreign Secretary: I do not have a read-out on that but what I do know is that while we were waiting to receive him - our Prime Minister had just finished his address and come out and finished one meeting and gone to another room - it was remarked by the people handling protocol that the South Sudan Prime Minister had been very active in moving around and he had met a very large number of leaders. I happened to overhear that. But no, I did not check who others he met.

Question: You have pointed out this line in the speech, “Societies cannot be reordered from outside through military force”. Would that also, therefore, enlarge also to Libya and Syria where India has a different viewpoint in the UN Security Council compared to say countries like the United States? Secondly, is there anything more that can you tell us about the upcoming meeting with Secretary Clinton on Monday? Just an indication of the agenda for that meeting?
Foreign Secretary: First of all, I think the reference was not intended specifically to refer to any one situation, but it was a generalized response to a trend we are seeing in which, it started perhaps with Libya where a particular situation in the way it was developing, the UN Security Council did pass a Resolution and then we ended up with a campaign in which one side was supported. I think the idea was just to draw attention to the established principle of noninterference in the internal affairs of other countries; and that the role of the international community is to be as helpful as it can to assist countries in the stage of transition but form outside; that the actual political changes within a country have to be led by that country itself; and it is the role of the international community, perhaps the regional organizations taking the lead and the UN also to assist in this process. I think that was the intention.

Question: Is there any indication of the agenda for the meeting with Secretary Clinton?

Foreign Secretary: It will be a review of bilateral relations and also where we go forward. I am happy you raise this. We have had a number of interactions. The two Foreign Ministers already met in the context of the New Silk Road Initiative of Secretary Clinton of the United States with reference to Afghanistan and the regional cooperation in the context of Afghanistan. We have also participated in a meeting, but at officials’ level, on a US-led initiative for a Global Counterterrorism Forum. But we will be looking at all elements in our bilateral relations including the economic ties. There has been a very good meeting of the CEOs Forum, of which you are aware, and there have been some very useful recommendations which have emerged out of that. So, I think the two Foreign Ministers would take an opportunity to look at what other steps we now need to take to advance our commercial and economic relations.

Question: The reference of Prime Minister to external intervention in the sovereign nations, does it have any message to the United States of America which made an unwarranted comment on Anna Hazare movement in India? That was an unwarranted comment by the United States of America in the internal affairs of India. So, does India give a message that you need not interfere in other countries’ affairs?

Foreign Secretary: I think the Prime Minister’s speech and his remarks were intended to deal with the international situation as it is today and in terms of the kind of issues which the United Nations is tackling. I do not think any other inference would be correct. Even if you look at the remark that you are referring to, what did they say? They said they count on India. Maybe they count correctly. That is all I can say.

Question: Now on the Palestine issue and various other issues there is a slight slant in which we do not go with the United States of America. But do you expect any reaction from their side?

Foreign Secretary: I have just mentioned that we are also participating very closely with the United States in certain initiatives particularly the Afghan Silk Route Initiative and also the counterterrorism initiative which they have taken. We certainly will continue our dialogue on all issues. I do not think there is any response which we are anticipating.

Question: Can we put it like this, the Prime Minister intends to say that India will remain a friend and not an ally of America?

Foreign Secretary: That is your way of putting it.

Question: Foreign Secretary, South Sudan is a country that recognized the Transnational Government of Tamil Eelam, and TGTE also recognized South Sudan. Now that the Tamil Eelam has become a big subject in South India, especially the Tamil Nadu Government has passed a Resolution firmly condemning what is going on in Sri Lanka, was there any reference to the first country that became a TGTE in the bilateral discussion?

Foreign Secretary: No, there was no reference whatsoever to this subject.

Question: Sir, in the very beginning of his speech the Prime Minister expressed his concern about the negative impact of the globalisation. …(Unclear)… What do you think is the reason for or how do you look at this concern about the fallout of globalisation?

Foreign Secretary: I would not like to interpret what the PM has said, but I think in the speech itself he has mentioned particularly the issue of food security. I think, if you look at the speech in its entirety, it is clear that there are elements of the globalization as we understand it today which have begun to have an impact on food security. Similarly in the field of energy security, there are elements where you can see that the pace at which globalization is going on has implications for particularly the developing countries and their abilities to access food and energy. I think those are two areas where you see it. But he is also mentioning, if you see in the reference to the world economic crisis, the capacity for contagion in one region to spread across the globe very quickly. And he is just drawing attention, as you know his credentials as an economist are very well respected, to the possibilities that we need to build into our international system as we know it today, some elements of protection where these contagions cannot spread very easily.

Question: The globalization has brought a lot of investment to our country but that is not properly gathered. That is why issues like …(Unclear)… That also may be a concern for him. …(Unclear)…
Foreign Secretary: I personally see it in the international context, not specifically related only to India. I think it is a reference on behalf of the developing world.

Question: In the bilateral meeting with Nepalese Prime Minister, did our Prime Minister refer to the issue of the rehabilitation of the Maoist army in the Nepalese Army? …(Unclear)… to our domestic Maoist issues also?

Foreign Secretary: There was no reference to India. But, as I mentioned, the Prime Minister of Nepal did speak about the process, it is called a peace process I do not know why. And he explained those moves to create a new consensus on how to move forward there and the Prime Minister wished him well. I think there was no other specific reference.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you very much.

Second Media Briefing on Prime Minister’s Bilateral meetings:

Official Spokesperson (Shri Vishnu Prakash): Good evening. You are aware that the Prime Minister of India has had three important bilateral meetings today, first with the newly elected Prime Minister of Japan, next with the President of Iran, and just recently in the evening with the President of Sri Lanka. Also in parallel, the External Affairs Minister participated in the BRICS Foreign Ministers meeting as well as the G4 Foreign Ministers meeting. The Foreign Secretary is here to brief you about these meetings, especially the engagements of the Prime Minister today.

Foreign Secretary (Shri Ranjan Mathai): Thank you.

I will start with an apology for being a little late. The meetings ran a little longer than expected.

The Prime Minister, as JS(XP) has just mentioned, met the Japanese Prime Minister in the morning; and the meetings with the President of Iran and the President of Sri Lanka were in the evening today. I will start with the meeting with the Japanese Prime Minister Mr. Yoshihiko Noda. PM congratulated Mr. Noda on his appointment, which was recently, and said it was an honour to meet the Japanese PM so soon after he had taken office.

PM noted that there had been an intensification of relations with Japan in recent years with very close interaction between the Prime Minister and his Japanese counterparts. The two Prime Ministers reviewed bilateral relations, the Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (CEPA), regional affairs in the context of the forthcoming East Asia Summit, and the global partnership between India and Japan.
The Prime Ministers noted the progress on major bilateral projects including the Dedicated Freight Corridor (DFC) and the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor. They agreed to continue discussions on nuclear cooperation after noting that all countries are conducting safety reviews. The discussions also took in the reform of the Security Council and it was agreed that the G4 consultations should continue.

PM told the Prime Minister Noda that he was keenly looking forward to receiving the Japanese Prime Minister in India at the end of the year. It was agreed that the dates would be finalised through diplomatic channels.

During 2012, Japan and India would be marking the sixtieth anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations. The two sides would further deepen political dialogue, their economic relations, ties in the field of security, cultural and people-to-people relations. The two Prime Ministers noted with satisfaction that the close and constructive bilateral relations between the two countries were supported by a very strong political consensus across the board in both countries.

Prime Minister, as I said, met President Ahmadinejad of Iran. EAM and Foreign Minister Salehi were both present during this meeting. The two leaders reviewed bilateral relations. It was the first meeting between the two after a long time. They first of all dealt with the political dialogue, and President Ahmadinejad renewed his invitation to PM to visit Iran. PM accepted in principle and said the dates would be worked out. The agenda of bilateral visits also includes in the near future, a visit by the Speaker of our Lok Sabha who will be visiting Iran shortly.

The two leaders felt that the next meeting of the Joint Economic Commission should be held fairly soon. EAM on our side and the Foreign Minister of Iran would co-chair this. As soon as mutually convenient dates are worked out, preferably during the course of this year, the meeting will be held.

The two leaders also discussed the bilateral relations including major projects. They reviewed the situation in the region including Afghanistan. They also discussed developments in West Asia and North Africa. They agreed that there was need for further exchange of views on a regular basis between the two countries. They both noted the importance of the Nonaligned Movement, of which Iran is now the Chairperson.

Later in the evening PM met the President of Sri Lanka. He was accompanied by the EAM and the Sri Lanka EAM Prof G.L. Peiris was present. The two sides discussed bilateral relations and other matters of mutual interest. President Rajapakse briefed PM on developments relating to the devolution of powers through discussions between the Government of Sri Lanka and the TNA as the representatives of the Tamil parties. They also mentioned that parallel discussions are taking place within the Parliamentary Select Committee.

PM and President Rajapakse also discussed the issues of the resettlement of the displaced persons including the housing project which is being undertaken with Indian assistance. They also had a detailed discussion on the fisheries issue, and it was noted that another meeting of the Joint Working Group on Fisheries would soon be convened. It was felt also that further meetings between fishermen of the two countries should also be held as these are found to be useful.

I will come now to the meeting of the BRICS Foreign Ministers. EAM actually chaired the meeting this morning. As you are aware, the next BRICS Summit is to be held in India in the end of March, beginning of April, 2012. There is a very large economic agenda for the BRICS on which the Summit will be putting a particular emphasis.

All the BRICS members are currently members of the UNSC, and they have a convergence of views on a number of issues which are on the agenda of the Council. In this context, they discussed Libya, Syria and the Palestine issue. The BRICS members agreed that they should promote cooperation among other emerging economies and they support the early accession of Russia to the World Trade Organisation.

The BRICS members also had a discussion on climate change, and they supported the Common but Differentiated Obligations to deal with this challenge. They also believe there is need for greater financial and technological transfer to the developing countries and they will cooperate for a successful conclusion of the Rio+20. All the participants thanked EAM for hosting the meeting and agreed that there is need to remain in touch for preparations for the next BRICS Summit in New Delhi.

The last meeting which I will refer to was that of the G4 – Brazil, Germany, India and Japan - which also took place on the margins of the 66th Session. There is a Joint Statement which was prepared at the end of this meeting, which I presume has been circulated and you would all have it. So, I do not need to go into the details. All I will say is that the G4 countries reiterated their common vision of an enlarged Security Council for the 21st century, expansion in both permanent and non-permanent categories of membership taking into consideration the contributions made by the countries to the maintenance of international peace and security, as well as the need for increased representation of developing countries in both categories. The Ministers expressed the view that strong support should be considered as the basis for further discussion; and they noted that the inter-governmental negotiations are continuing in this session.
I will stop there and take any questions that you may have.

Question: Sir, there was some unpleasantness yesterday after President Ahmadinejad’s speech. The US delegation walked out because of certain remarks he made. Is this unpleasantness in any way - given the fact that the Prime Minister has met Mr. Ahmadinejad today and had a substantial dialogue, agreed to a visit, and so on - likely to have any impact on the India-US relationship?

Foreign Secretary: Actually the Prime Minister and President Ahmadinejad meeting was planned before we came here. The idea was basically to focus on our bilateral relationship, and also to have an exchange of views. As I said, Prime Minister took particular note of the fact that the Iranian President would be the Chair of the Nonaligned Movement.

Question: Staying with Iran, you said you discussed West Asia. On this whole Palestinian issue and Mr. Obama’s speech today, what is India’s stand?

Foreign Secretary: I do not think there was a discussion on the speech per se but they both reiterated their commitment that they support the Palestinian attempt to seek membership of the United Nations.

Question: Anything on Iran gas pipeline?

Foreign Secretary: Gas pipeline was not discussed today to the best of my knowledge, but they discussed a whole series of projects between the two countries including potential cooperation in the field of hydrocarbons.

Question: Was there any IBSA related meeting today? If so, who attended it, and can you put it in the context of the IBSA Summit which is coming up shortly?

Foreign Secretary: An IBSA meeting was in fact scheduled and it was on the programme of the External Affairs Minister. But I understand that the South African Minister had to leave. So, it was initially decided that a meeting would take place at the officials’ level rather than at the Ministerial level. That also did not materialise though they are leaving that to the lower level officials who have already had some discussions. It is in the context of the IBSA Summit, we will be participating in that. But the meeting could not be scheduled today.

Question: Foreign Secretary, in tomorrow’s speech that the Prime Minister makes, is there likely to be any reference to Palestinian statehood or to the Middle East region? Is there anything more that you can tell us about his possible references to the crisis in the Middle East region?

Foreign Secretary: I will comment on the Prime Minister’s speech after it is over. So, tomorrow you are free to ask me any question you want to on the speech. But let me say without necessarily referring to the speech that our position on the Palestinian issue is an established position; it is well-known. As far back as 1988 we recognised the Palestinian State. So, we should not be surprised if there is a reiteration of that. But I would not like to comment on the contents of the PM’s speech.

Question: Was there any kind of discussion about the reports of human rights abuses during the war against Tamil Tigers? There has also been a case that is filed today in the US Federal Court alleging human rights abuses, and there have been protests against Mr. Rajapakse’s visit to the United States. Any kind of informal discussion between the two leaders?

Foreign Secretary: I think the discussion was in general terms on the need for addressing the issue in Sri Lanka. Our Prime Minister reiterated that a successful conclusion of negotiations and discussions with the representatives of the Tamil parties would in fact obviate the need for outsiders to start passing judgment or to get involved. So, the emphasis was more on the political dialogue within Sri Lanka.

Question: Mr. Secretary, I wanted to ask about India’s position on developments in Syria. There is increasing dismay among the American diplomats that India and the United States do not see eye to eye on all these developments in Libya and Syria. Do you foresee any convergence on this? And what is the position of India on the developments there?

Foreign Secretary: If I can just refer to the BRICS Foreign Ministers statement which outlines some of these issues, they say the situation in Syria is complex and nothing should be done to exacerbate it; the Syrian authorities should exercise restraint in dealing with protestors and respect their human rights; at the same time political reforms should be implemented expeditiously; and the opposition groups should participate in an inclusive political process. I think the emphasis is, among countries like ours, on the need for the international community to be supportive of inclusive political process, but these necessarily should be led by those countries and the groups within those countries themselves.

Question: Sir, United States and Israel are almost threatening Iran. In our discussion with the Prime Minister, did the issue of nuclear programme of Iran, especially our worries including with Pakistan come up?

Foreign Secretary: As I said, the emphasis of our discussion was on the bilateral relationship, and this issue did not figure in that.

Question: The US position and our’s on Palestine issue are quite contrary to each other. Iran is also another area where our stand and US stand are quite different. Again on West Asia policy of US, our critical appraisal is very clear. But Indian PM’s meet with the Iranian President and there is no meeting with the US counterpart. So, can we say that this a reflection of the state of Indo-US relationship?

Foreign Secretary: No, I would not say that. The fact that the Prime Minister actually arrived in New York after the President of the US had left made the possibility of a bilateral meeting between the two leaders not feasible. But we are planning that there will be a meeting between the External Affairs Minister and the Secretary of State probably on Monday subject to confirmation.

Question: Foreign Secretary, in the discussion with the Iranian leader on Afghanistan, was there any talk on the role of various regional players in Afghanistan?

Foreign Secretary: There was a feeling that the regional countries must consult each other much more and that certainly India and Iran should have regular interchanges on the situation in Afghanistan and a peaceful resolution of those issues.

Question: Sir, if I can have a follow-up, is there any convergence of views between Iran and India on the future dispensation in Afghanistan? Does Iran fear Taliban as much as we do?

Foreign Secretary: I think both of us feel that the dispensation in Afghanistan which emerges should be Afghan led, it should be inclusive but it should be Afghan led; and the process has necessarily to be taken forward by the Afghans themselves; and it is for the regional countries to be supportive, to create a supportive and conducive climate for them to be able to do that.

Question: Sir, my question is related to Pakistan. There is this talk which has been generated both in Pakistan as well as in America about Admiral Mike Mullen saying that the Haqqani Network was the political arm of the ISI. Can you tell us, Sir, what is the Indian position on the comments made by Admiral Mullen?

Foreign Secretary: I would not like to comment on what the US leader has said about Pakistan. I think our own position on the issue of terrorism which we face is well-known. Beyond that I do not comment on what the US has said about Pakistan.

I would just like to mention that tomorrow PM would be addressing the UN General Assembly in the morning; and then after that there are bilateral meetings planned with the new Prime Minister of Nepal and the President of South Sudan.

Official Spokesperson: Thank you.

675. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of the Counter – Terrorism Committee Hardeep Singh Puri at the Special Meeting of the Counter Terrorism Committee.

Mr. Secretary General,

Excellencies,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I extend all of you a very warm welcome to the Special Meeting of the Counter -Terrorism Committee.

Today, as we commemorate the 10th anniversary of adoption of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee in pursuant to that resolution, we are reminded of the horrific events of 9/11 terrorist attacks and its aftermath.

The nature, intensity, coordination and sophistication of those horrendous attacks brought home the need for urgent and concerted action to collectively combat the scourge of terrorism.

Precisely on this day ten years ago, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1373 (2001), which has proven to be a major milestone in global counter-terrorism efforts. The Council unequivocally condemned the terrorist attacks, and introduced a far reaching set of measures aimed at bolstering the ability of United Nations Member States to prevent terrorist acts both within their borders and across regions.

I compliment the Secretary General, Mr. Ban Ki-moon, for taking an active role in furthering the agenda of the United Nations in addressing this threat, and in engaging the various United Nations bodies and agencies as well as Member States in the fight against terrorism.

Mr. Kofi Annan, then Secretary General, aptly summarized the sentiment of the moment when he addressed the General Assembly in September 2001. He said that the terror attacks were:

“… not only an attack on our innocent fellow citizens but an attack on our shared values. It struck at everything this Organization stands for: peace, freedom, tolerance, human rights, and the very idea of a united human family. It struck at all our efforts to create a true international society, based on the rule of law. “
Let us respond by affirming, with all our strength, our common humanity and the values that we share. We shall not allow them to be overthrown... Let us therefore respond to it in a way that strengthens international peace and security – by cementing the ties among nations, and not subjecting them to new strains. This Organization is the natural forum in which to build such a universal coalition. It alone can give global legitimacy to the long-term struggle against terrorism.

It has been a long and arduous journey since then spanning a decade. I am happy to report that the international community has vigorously responded to the call to rise up to the unprecedented challenges posed by terrorism.

The resolution 1373 (2001) has brought increasing solidarity and intensified dialogue among States concerning the threat posed by international terrorism and the means to confront it effectively. A lot of ground has been covered. As of 11 September 2001, only 2 States were signatories to all the 12 UN conventions relating to terrorism. That number has now grown to 111. In addition, a significant number of States have signed the 4 additional international instruments which have been added to complement the legislative regime.

Positive developments are also evident in other areas. Most States have now taken steps to criminalize terrorist acts in their domestic laws and regulations, in accordance with their obligations under the resolution and the relevant international instruments.

In compliance of their obligations under resolution 1373, States have also established Financial Intelligence Units and other mechanisms to monitor and guard more effectively against terrorist financing and money laundering and for effective cooperation and coordination of their efforts at the national and international levels.

New systems of border security, such as enhanced cargo screening and the introduction in most of the States of machine-readable travel documents, have been helpful in checking terrorists’ transnational activities.

There is better exchange of information among States. It appears that mutual legal assistance now occurs more systematically. Many of these advances are due to the continuing commitment of bilateral donors, United Nations agencies and others to providing technical assistance relevant to States’ implementation of the resolution.

Mr. Secretary General, Ladies and Gentlemen,

In spite of these achievements, it is important to acknowledge that 11 September 2011 symbolizes neither the beginning nor the end of terrorism.
Today, terrorists are not only truly globalised, but are also waging an asymmetric warfare against the international community.

They recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others. They have global logistical and supply chains; they have developed transnational financial systems; they use the latest and most sophisticated technologies and have command and control mechanisms that are able to operate across continents on a real-time basis.

There is hardly any region of the world that has not been scarred by terrorism during the past decade. The events in Abuja, Baghdad, Bali, Kabul, London, Madrid, Moscow, and Mumbai—to mention a few—are but footnotes to the tremendous personal tragedies involved.

We need to confront these challenges and we must confront them squarely and decisively. Much more remains to be done to make States free from the threat of terrorism. Some of the challenges facing us include the need to effectively address new threats brought on through increased use by terrorist groups and individuals of new information and communication technologies for recruitment, incitement and fundraising.

Challenges also remain in the area of countering terrorist financing, including the need to monitor more effectively new payment methods, informal money and value transfer systems, and the use of cash couriers. Furthermore, the problem of securing porous land and sea borders remains a major challenge for many States. We also need to bear in mind that bringing perpetrators to justice requires continued training to law enforcement and prosecution services.

Mr. Secretary General, Ladies and Gentlemen,

As we deliberate today to chart out our salient achievements as well as the key challenges and strategies towards overcoming the many ordeals which remain in our path, I call upon all Member States to remain true to the initial call echoed here ten years ago to respond to this challenge in a manner which affirms “our common humanity and the values that we share.”

I firmly believe that this is achievable through the introduction of counter-terrorism measures which uphold the rule of law and are compliant with States’ obligations under international law, in particular international human rights law, refugee law, and humanitarian law.

I call upon you all to rise up to this occasion with a renewed sense of purpose. Let us continue to work together to make the world a safer place for succeeding generations from the horrors of terrorism.

It is my expectation that our deliberations today will usher in a new qualitative and substantive improvement in the normative framework and we will adopt an ambitious outcome document that, will introduce a new ‘zero tolerance’ paradigm in the international community’s fight against terrorism.

Thank you.

676. Commemoration of the 10th anniversary of the establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC) under India’s Chairmanship at UNSC.

A Special meeting of the UN Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001) concerning counter-terrorism took place in New York on 28 September 2011, to commemorate its 10th anniversary. The meeting was chaired by India’s Permanent Representative Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri.

The unanimous adoption of resolution 1373 (2001) ten years ago, by the Security Council marked a major milestone in global counter-terrorism efforts. It has forged increasing solidarity and intensified dialogue among States concerning the threat posed by international terrorism. On 11 September 2001, only 2 States were signatories to all the 12 UN conventions relating to terrorism. That number has now grown to 111.

Most States have since taken steps to criminalize terrorist acts in their domestic laws and regulations. They have also established Financial Intelligence Units and other mechanisms to monitor and guard more effectively against terrorist financing and money laundering. New systems of border security have been put in place, such as enhanced cargo screening and the introduction of machine-readable travel documents, which have been helpful in checking terrorists’ transnational activities. Furthermore information exchange among States has improved.

At the meeting on September 28, Ambassador Puri noted that hardly any region of the world had remained unscarred by terrorism during the past decade. He called upon member States to confront the challenges squarely and decisively. Much more remained to be done, he said, to free the States from the threat of terrorism. He underlined the need for countering terrorist financing, including the need to monitor more effectively new payment methods, informal money and value transfer systems, and the use of cash couriers.

677. Statement by Minister of State Smt. Preneet Kaur at UNSC’s Debate on Security Sector Reform.

New York, October 12, 2011.

Mr. President,

Thank you for giving me the floor.

At the outset, I would like to congratulate you and your delegation on assuming the Presidency of the Security Council for the month of October and thank you for chairing this Debate.

I would also like to thank Under Secretary General Herve Ladsous for his statement.

Mr. President,

Security Sector Reform (SSR) in post-conflict countries on the agenda of the Security Council is an important issue. And I thank the Nigerian Presidency for organizing today’s Debate and for their useful Concept Note on this subject.

Successful Security Sector Reform, Mr President, is vital for establishing enduring peace and stability in countries that are in conflict or in a post-conflict peacebuilding phase. On the other hand, it is usually failure in SSR that causes some countries to remain mired in conflict for extended periods.

The Security Council’s Presidential Statement of 21 February 2007 and the Secretary General’s report on Security Sector Reform, submitted in January 2008 pursuant to the PRST, have comprehensively dealt with the complexity of this issue. They have also identified a number of concrete action points for implementation of Security Sector Reforms in conflict and post-conflict situations.

Mr. President,

For successful implementation of Security Sector Reforms, it is imperative to clearly recognize, at the outset, that it is an internal affair of a country. As such, the process must be led and owned by the concerned nation-state. The process must be driven by national requirements and not by donor priorities. The capacity driven approach that is being adopted needs to become an exercise of understanding and providing what the country concerned requires rather than an exercise in collating what donors can give.

Normative principles of Security Sector Reform should remain within the framework of national consent under Chapter VI of the UN Charter and should not seek to obfuscate the difference between the provisions of Chapters VI and VII.
This will ensure that the involvement of this Council and of the UN system more widely in Security Sector Reform remains country-specific and forms part of the comprehensive strategy for establishment of peace and stability.

Security Sector Reform will fail to consolidate the hard earned gains of peacekeeping unless it is based on organic growth and related to the political, socio-economic and cultural realities of the country concerned.

Mr. President,

Operational issues concerning Security Sector Reform should take into account the fact that security is a very broad term encompassing not just defence, police and other law enforcement agencies but also institutions responsible for border management, customs, civil emergencies, judiciary, etc.

Given such broad scope, it is necessary that the UN’s operational plans for Security Sector Reform in every situation should remain focused on the most critical sectors rather than get frittered away in peripherals.

The broad scope of this issue also calls for a long-term strategy and integrated efforts and coordination among different UN and other international agencies involved.

Country-specific configurations of the Peacebuilding Commission should have an important role to play in assisting the concerned country in developing such a long-term strategy and integrating and coordinating the international efforts.

The international community should clearly demonstrate its staying power and commitment to make available required resources for full implementation of operational plans for Security Sector Reform. Operational plans should also comprehensively factor political, socio-economic and cultural moorings of the country concerned based on interests of the national stakeholders.

In this connection, I must underline that we have noticed a tendency in this Council in recent months to authorize less than optimal manpower and other resources while expanding mandates. There are also calls for reviews of the mission even before a mission is established. This tendency – to ask UN missions to do more with less – does not augur well for successful implementation of operational plans to reform security sector on an enduring basis in conflict and post-conflict countries on the agenda of this Council.

We also hear arguments in favour of shortening mandates of UN missions even when the host countries favour continued presence of the concerned UN missions. Pre-mature drawdown or withdrawal of UN missions against the wishes of the host countries before the domestic institutions are fully capable of assuming their role risks relapse into conflict, which shall require larger resources in future.
Mr. President,

In conclusion, I would like to say that the role of the United Nations in Security Sector Reform must be based on its biggest strength – impartiality, equity and non-interference.

Following these principles, the UN system and the missions authorized by this Council will command respect and confidence of all stakeholders who, in turn, will cooperate with the UN leading to successful and enduring Security Sector Reforms.

In this connection, it is also important to recognize that there are countries that possess wide experience in implementing Security Sector capacity development in multi-ethnic, multi-religious and multi-lingual societies, giving primacy to human rights and the rule of law. In addition to uniformed services, the UN should also tap governments of such countries for secondment of human resources in all areas of SSR as their experiences are very similar and relevant to the challenges facing the countries on the agenda of the Security Council.

Thank you.

678. Statement by Permanent Representative and Chairman of the Counter Terrorism Committee Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative and Chairman, Counter Terrorism Committee (1373 Committee) at the Security Council in his national capacity on ‘Briefings by Chairmen of Subsidiary Bodies of the Security Council’.

New York, Date not stated.

Thank you once again, Mr. President, for giving me the floor. Now, I will deliver a statement in my national capacity. I believe there is a great deal of fusion with the statements made earlier by the three Chairmen of the 1267, 1373 and 1540 Committees.

As regards the work of the Al Qaida and the Taliban sanctions Committee (1267 Committee), the death of Osama bin Laden is a significant milestone in the global war against terrorism. However, it does not signify the end of Al-Qaida nor the end of terrorism. Without the elimination of terrorist safe heavens and sanctuaries, there can be no end to the global war on terror.

We believe that for security and stabilization of Afghanistan, it is important to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al Qaida, Taliban, LeT and other terror and extremist groups operating from within and outside Afghanistan borders. Attempts to differentiate between the Al-Qaida and the Taliban and other terrorist groups are fraught with difficulty since these groups are operationally and ideologically fused.

We support measures to strengthen the review process of the listings in the Consolidated List of the 1267 Committee through the Office of the Ombudsperson as per UN Security Council Resolution 1904. At the same time, we are concerned that the process of listing and de-listing in the Consolidated List continues to be subjected to political will and pressure – a scenario we cannot afford in our united fight against terrorism.

India supports Afghan Government’s efforts to reintegrate those individuals who abjure violence, give up armed struggle, do not have links with terrorist groups and are willing to abide by the values of democracy, pluralism and human rights as enshrined in the Afghan Constitution. At the same time, it is important that the ‘redlines’ on the reintegration process as laid down at the London Conference and later reaffirmed at the Kabul Conference are not diluted. Otherwise, we risk Afghanistan sliding back to becoming a safe haven for terrorists and extremist groups.

Concerning 1540 Committee, Mr. President, India has expressed its unwavering commitment to global efforts for preventing the proliferation of WMD and their means of delivery. India recognizes that proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery is a major challenge facing the international community.

Clandestine proliferation networks have led to insecurity for all and must not be allowed to reappear. It is important that the international community must join hands in eliminating the risks relating to sensitive materials and technologies falling into hands of terrorists and non-state actors. The focus on non-state actors should not diminish state accountability in combating terrorism, dismantling its support infrastructure or its linkages with WMD.

In conclusion, Mr. President, it is important to bear in mind that the success of implementation of counter-terrorism measures not only requires the fullest participation in processes that affect the collective security of all the nations equally.

Our collective endeavours should be to enhance coherence and synergy among different counter-terrorism structures that are dealing with the issue of terrorism within the UN.
INDIA’S FOREIGN RELATIONS–2011

SECTION-XI

INDIA AT THE UN
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to reiterate our appreciation for your stewardship of the Inter-governmental preparatory process of the 4th UN-LDC Conference to be held in Istanbul. As a Bureau member of the Preparatory Committee, you can count on India’s full support and understanding as we collectively prepare for the success of the conference.

At this juncture, my delegation would like to endorse the views expressed by Yemen on behalf of G-77 and Nepal on behalf of LDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

There is no denying that LDCs today represent the most vulnerable and poorest segment of the international community. In the age of globalisation, where peace and progress, and prosperity and security belong to a common space shared by all nations, there is little option for us but to accord the development of LDCs the highest global priority.

Our collective attention to the cause of LDCs so far has not been commensurate to the urgency of the situation. The situation has in fact further deteriorated: the number of LDCs which was 25 in 1971 has gone up to 48 in 2011. The Brussels Programme of Action met with only partial success.

For far too long we have studied and analysed the problems facing the LDCs, ranging from their structural weaknesses; lack of productive capacities, infrastructure, institutional strength and domestic resources; extreme poverty to vulnerabilities to external shocks.

It is time now to focus on the solutions. We must concentrate our efforts on strengthening international support measures in favour of development of LDCs and how domestic actions by LDCs themselves could lead to economic transformation.

Building productive capacities and infrastructure through fulfilment of ODA commitments which are clearly lagging behind, bilateral and multilateral technical and financial assistance, south–south cooperation and international trade measures should be our priority. Addressing fragmentation of ODA, improving quality of aid and directing it to productive sectors such as agriculture and income generating activities would be helpful in this regard.
The private sector has an important role to play in generating growth and opportunities in LDCs. The onus to create a domestic environment conducive to private enterprise and attracting foreign investment lies with the LDCs themselves. Economic policies followed by LDCs in Sub-Saharan Africa, who in spite of the multiple crises, have registered decent economic growth could be an exemplar for others to look at.

Mr. Chairman,

Due to their narrow or weak domestic market LDCs rely on international trade for growth. However, in spite of the duty free quota free market access to LDCs, their share in global trade continues to be below 1%. We must look at the impediments to the preferential market access including Rules of Origin provisions, erosion of preferential access and also ways and means to address supply side constraints.

The conclusion of Doha Development Round would help in integrating LDCs into the multilateral trading network. There is a sense of urgency among nations to conclude the Round in 2011. We must seize the opportunity.

The 4th Programme of Action for LDCs must necessarily emphasize on building resilience to new and emerging global challenges such as food security, energy security, climate change adaptation and mitigation, and economic volatility.

With majority of LDCs being net importers of food, improving agricultural productivity through enhanced investment, scientific inputs and market and credit access must be accorded high priority to ensure long term food security.

There is a strong case for assisting LDCs in technological leapfrogging to ensure energy security through clean technologies, overcoming climate change concerns and helping them to follow a sustainable path of development. The success of mobile telephony and solar energy programmes in several LDCs could be a guiding factor in this regard.

Mr. Chairman,

India fully supports the multi-stakeholder nature of engagement proposed for the Istanbul Conference. The presence of Parliamentarians, in particular, would add significant value in strengthening international support measures for LDCs.

India has been a steadfast supporter of LDCs. Our developmental assistance to LDCs is aimed at building productive capacities, institutional strength and technical expertise to create long term sustainability in these countries. Our private sector has invested more than US$ 15 billion in recent years in LDCs. We have extended Lines of credit of over US$ 4 billion to LDCs since 2004.
South-South Cooperation in recent times has become a major source of development assistance, investment and international trade for LDCs. It will be our endeavor to further strengthen this trend.

In the run up to the 4th UNLDC Conference, we would be hosting an India-LDC Ministerial Conference in cooperation with the UN-OHRLLS during 18-19 February 2011 in Delhi, where we are inviting the LDC Foreign Ministers and their Permanent Representatives in New York. We have also contributed US$ 250,000 to the UN Trust Fund to provide for travel of participants to the Istanbul Conference.

Mr. Chairman,

The Istanbul Conference is an opportunity for the global community to demonstrate its highest political commitment to the cause of LDCs and to put the LDCs’ development at the forefront of the global agenda. Let’s work towards this objective.

680. Remarks by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, during the handing over ceremony of the G- 77 Chairmanship.

New York, January 12, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Please accept my delegation’s best wishes on your assuming the Chair of G-77 for the year 2011. Argentina has had a long and distinguished association with the G-77.

Mr. Chairman, this meeting is not just a ceremonial or a ritual event: we have gathered here to deliberate on matters that could have an important bearing on the work of the Group.

Mr. Chairman,

The Group of 77 was founded in 1964, on June 15, 1964 to be precise, by the “Joint Declaration” of 77 countries issued at UNCTAD in 1964. The Group had its genesis in the collective desire for solidarity amongst developing countries, in their shared commitment to the need for development and to use their collective strength to bargain for multilateral outcomes that serve their developmental aspirations. The development paradigm that lay at the centre of the G-77’s birth drew heavily from Raul Prebisch’s work at ECLAC; his views on the centre—periphery, the grant of trade preferences in favour of developing countries in particular; and issues related to market access. Raul Prebisch was a distinguished son of Argentina. Prebisch’s unparalleled reputation resulted in his appointment as the founding Secretary-General of UNCTAD which he served from 1964-69. His views on trade and development were the linear progenitor of South-South cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,

The development paradigm itself has undergone a dramatic change since the founding of the Group. The G-77’s priorities also undergo constant evaluation and re-adjustment. But the Group’s fundamental principles in regard to development will continue to be its raison d’être and its continuing relevance and justification. The G-77 has to be in the vanguard of development.

Several countries of the Group including my own have made impressive economic progress in recent years. India has grown at an average of 7-8% for many years but we continue to face huge developmental challenges. In fact, we have more number of poor people in India than all the LDCs put together.

I often wonder why the G-77 is not taken with the seriousness it deserves. Does the fault lie in us? I am dismayed by the fact that not a single member of the Secretariat thought it fit to stay back to listen to what the member-States of the G-77 have to say. I can understand the Secretary General having to leave on account of important engagements. Surely, some one else from the Secretariat could be here. Absence of the Secretariat could result in the inference being drawn that this constitutes disrespect to the group. You might like to bring this to the attention of the Secretariat at an appropriate level.

Mr. Chairman,

The year gone by was one of significant developments and progress. The Group made substantial headway in ensuring that the interests of developing countries were actively pursued and, in most cases, protected.

Challenges and setbacks, if any, only added to our resoluteness to continue with our objective to create an equitable, sustainable and durable global development order.

In a larger measure, we owe this success to the committed leadership of Yemen which rightfully deserves our highest accolades.

I wish to thank Ambassador Al Saidi profusely for his distinguished services to the Group. We were particularly impressed by his tactical leadership during the MDG negotiations and his persuasive efforts to maintain the unity of the Group in trying and difficult times.

Mr. Chairman,

Challenges to multilateralism are many.

The efforts of the G-77 throughout the year have operated to strengthen multilateralism: witness the results we achieved in 2010 - UN WOMEN, success at Nagoya and Cancun. The unity of G-77 was an important factor in the creation of the Gender Entity.

Mr. Chairman,

The Year 2011 will witness several important and challenging events. The success of the LDC conference in Istanbul and COP 17 Climate Change conference, and the preparation for RIO-20 would require a clear demonstration of solidarity and purpose by the Group. On the Climate Change process, we are fortunate to have the guidance of your country’s vast experience in the field, and in particular the noted contribution of your distinguished diplomat Mr. Raul Estrada to the UNFCCC process.

Even as we prepare to fashion these events and their outcomes, we must bear in mind the interests of African countries, LDCs, LLDCs and SIDS. The Fourth UN-LDC conference in Istanbul in May, 2011 provides us an excellent opportunity to ensure that the International Community is not found wanting in respect of countries that need our help the most.

Our global engagement must continue to spotlight the urgency to meet the challenges of food security, energy security and climate change; sustainable development goals; economic stability and global growth; and democratizing global governance institutions.

Mr. Chairman,

As you lead the Group in 2011, you can be rest assured of India’s fullest support in your endeavors.

I once again take this opportunity to thank Yemen for their chairmanship of G-77 in 2010 and look forward, with a sense of optimism and encouragement, to the leadership of Argentina in 2011.

Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the open meeting of the UN Security Council on the Sudan.

New York, January 18, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President. I would also like to join other colleagues in thanking President Benjamin Mkapa, Head of the Secretary General’s Panel on Referenda, and SRSG Haile Menkerios for their useful briefings and, more important, for the commendable work they have been doing.

2. It is a matter of great satisfaction that the referendum in South Sudan, over a one week period, has been completed successfully and peacefully. A very large number of eligible voters are reported to have cast their ballot. By all accounts, the turnout was well above the required threshold of 60%. The South Sudan Referendum Commission (SSRC) and UNMIS, as also other international and regional organisations which partnered the Sudanese authorities, deserve our highest appreciation for the conduct of the referendum. That this was conducted peacefully and without violence is all the more remarkable.

3. Successful conduct of the referendum has met an important element in the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement reached between the Sudanese parties. The commitment of these parties, expressed at the highest levels, to respect the outcome of the referendum is equally praiseworthy.
We commend this commitment and hope that the same spirit of cooperation and commitment will be shown by the parties to resolve post-referendum issues which remain to be agreed upon.

4. While the referendum has been held without violence, we witnessed during the course of the week a high and worrying level of violence in the region of Abyei which led to loss of lives. This is a cause of concern. We urge the leaders of the Misseriya and Ngok Dinka communities to show restraint and faithfully implement the agreement which was reached with the mediation of the SRSG. We commend Mr Menkerios and the UNMIS for their roles in facilitating the parties reach agreement.

5. The violence witnessed last week in Abyei should remind us of the need to remain vigilant about the ground situation, which continues to remain fragile.
We hope that the parties will cease their support to the proxy forces and seek to resolve all issues through negotiations and dialogue.

6. Mr. President, the situation in Darfur also remains a cause for concern.
The problem there requires dialogue with participation of all groups, not only those armed but also civil society at large. We, therefore, urge all parties to return to the negotiating table and reach an agreement expeditiously.

Thank you, Mr. President.
Thank you, Mr. President.

I wish to thank Under Secretary General Lynn Pascoe for his comprehensive briefing. I would also like to thank the Permanent Observer of Palestine for his statement.

2. The situation in the Middle East continues to be difficult. The much awaited resumption of talks in September between Israel and Palestine lasted only a few meetings. Since then, there has been considerable erosion of mutual confidence between the two parties, thereby undermining the peace process.

3. Mr. President, the events of the last few months have been discouraging with stalled talks, resumption of settlement activity and humanitarian suffering in Gaza. On the positive side, despite the difficult situation in Gaza, the economy there grew by 8% in 2010. The World Bank reported that if Palestinian Authority maintains its current performance in institution building and public services, it is well positioned for the establishment of a State. Also, there were less number of violent incidents in the year 2010 than the previous years.

4. Unless broken, the current impasse has the potential of exacting a serious impact on the lives of the people, potentially contributing more fuel to an already combustible situation in the region. This should, therefore, strengthen our resolve in seeking to achieve a breakthrough in the current impasse so that both the parties return to talks.

5. Mr. President, India has a long-standing tradition of solidarity with the Palestinian people. It was expressed recently by our Prime Minister in his message on the occasion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Prime Minister reiterated India’s unwavering support for the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Road map and relevant UN Security Council Resolutions.

Also, India has long been contributing to the capacity and institution building of the Palestinian people with its material and technical assistance programmes.

6. In this connection, Mr President, I would also like to make a mention of the projects in which India is engaged with Brazil and South Africa through IBSA Forum. From the resources allocated from the IBSA Fund, we are undertaking partial reconstruction of the Al Quds Hospital in Gaza and also construction of an Indoor Multi purpose Sports Complex in Ramallah. Such projects, we believe, would be of some value to the Palestinian people in improving their health and recreational facilities.

7. Mr. President, we feel that genuine peace in the region requires resolution of other issues on the remaining tracks of the Middle East Peace Process, including restoration of other Arab lands that remain under occupation. Progress in the Lebanese and Syrian tracks of the peace process are therefore critical for achieving comprehensive and durable peace in the region. We are closely monitoring the situation in Lebanon which is deeply worrying. The Special Tribunal for Lebanon must be allowed to complete its work. We call on all sides to resolve their differences and maintain peace.

8. While this has been stated several times before, and in many eloquent ways, yet this central truth bears repetition: a just, fair, durable and credible solution to this vexed problem can only come from meaningful, sincere and result-oriented dialogue; a dialogue which is essentially forward looking. For this, it is important that the ongoing settlement activities by Israel cease forthwith. I would also add that the settlements in the occupied territories are illegal under international law. We remain convinced that the lasting peace in the region will contribute to global stability and prosperity.

9. It is, therefore, critical, Mr. President, for the international community to work closely with the parties with a view to encouraging them to resume direct negotiations. We are hopeful that the talks and negotiations would soon resume, leading to a comprehensive peace process for a final resolution of the conflict.

10. Thank you, Mr. President.
683. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on the situation in Haiti at the Security Council.

New York, January 20, 2011.

Mr. President,

Thank you, for giving me the floor. I join other colleagues in thanking USG for Peacekeeping Operation Alain Le Roy, and USG for OCHA Valerie Amos for their comprehensive and useful briefings on the situation in Haiti. I would also like to thank the Representative of Haiti for sharing with us his perspective of the situation in Haiti.

Mr. President.

It has been a very difficult year for the people of Haiti. Just as stability was beginning to be witnessed in the country and the indicators of economic development were showing an upward trend, the country was struck by a massive earthquake of 12th January 2010. The disaster took the lives of some 300,000 persons and injured an equal number.

An earthquake of this devastation, the worst in the region in more than 200 years, demanded relief operations of a huge magnitude. The international community rose to the occasion and undertook the challenge to help the people of Haiti. Our work continues and should continue till the Haitian people require our assistance in their efforts at reconstruction.

Last week, this Council adopted a Press Statement on the anniversary of the earthquake in Haiti. We wish to convey our sincere sympathies to the people and government of Haiti and also to the families of the UN personnel who lost their lives and assure them of our continued support.

Mr. President,

In the immediate aftermath of the earthquake, India made a cash contribution of US$ 5 million to the Government of Haiti towards relief measures as a token of our solidarity with the people of Haiti.

I would also like to recall that the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) was put to good use in the earliest stages of recovery work in Haiti. India attaches importance to this facility to which we have made significant contributions since its inception and to which we are contributing US$ 500,000 each year over three year period since 2009.

Further, recognizing the need to provide basic amenities – shelter, drinking water and sanitation to the Haitian people, we have joined Brazil and South Africa in expanding our IBSA, the India-Brazil-South Africa, Trust Fund's waste management project in Haiti, both in its area of coverage and scope of handling different types of waste. IBSA is spending over US$ 2 million in this effort and for reconstruction of a community health centre in Haiti.

Mr. President,

As we progress towards reconstruction and rehabilitation in Haiti, we think there is an urgent need for better coordination between aid agencies and donors with the Government of Haiti. This would not only avoid duplication but also direct the aid to sectors considered most necessary by Haiti.

The various UN agencies have to work hard towards improving Haiti’s technical capacity to fully and properly utilize the aid.

As far as India is concerned, we have pledged to reconstruct one of the Government ministries to be identified by the Government of Haiti.

Mr. President,

We highly commend and support the role played by MINUSTAH in the humanitarian and recovery efforts in aid of the local authorities in Haiti.

We are proud of their sterling efforts, both on its civil side as well as the military and police side, in the immediate aftermath of the disastrous earthquake, despite the tremendous losses that they themselves faced.

I also recall the contributions made by the Indian police officers deployed with MINUSTAH, presently numbering 470 in three contingents, two of which were deployed by India after the earthquake at the request of the United Nations.

The MINUSTAH peacekeepers continue to provide full support to the local authorities and we, therefore, urge all stakeholders that any action that impedes the work of MINUSTAH peacekeepers should be avoided.

Mr. President,

Even as Haiti was battling to overcome the disaster of the earthquake, it was struck by an outbreak of the cholera, which further aggravated the already grim situation.

And, in the midst of all this, the country has got embroiled in a political crisis following the presidential elections.

In so far as the cholera epidemic is concerned, we hope that the recent appointment of an independent panel of experts by the Secretary General to
Mr. President,

We think that concerted reconstruction and rehabilitation work demands stable political and administrative conditions. We, therefore, call upon all political actors in Haiti to exercise restraint and avoid actions that cause violence and distract focus from the urgently needed reconstruction and rehabilitation work. The focus of the UN should, of course, remain on the humanitarian and infrastructural work. It should not get too deeply involved in the domestic political process, which is better handled by the regional organizations in cooperation with the local political establishment.

Thank you, Mr. President.

684. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on post-Conflict Peacebuilding: Institution Building.

Mr. President,

The sustained attention of the Council to peacekeeping and peacebuilding is indicative of the fact that the Council recognizes that the success or failure of peacekeeping and peacebuilding will determine the continuing relevance of the United Nations and of this Council to many troubled parts of the world.

My delegation would, therefore, like to thank you for organizing this debate to focus on what is probably the most critical component of the peacebuilding agenda, the building of political and governance institutions. We would also like to thank you for the concept paper, which has provided a very useful background of the issues involved and made suggestions on the way forward.

I am grateful that the Secretary-General has himself chosen to be here today. His remarks were particularly insightful. They have given us a clear idea of the problems and the opportunities.
Mr. President,

Peace cannot be restored to post-conflict societies and their citizens cannot be freed from fear and want unless national authorities are able to govern effectively. The capacity of effective governance, in turn, depends on the existence of institutions that enable these authorities to respond effectively to the aspirations of people. This general political aphorism is substantiated by the experience of the international community in its peacekeeping and peacebuilding efforts during the last two decades.

Mr. President,

Over the past two decades this Council made huge investments of manpower and resources in designing and running “multidimensional” PKOs mandated to operate in “fragile” states. These have shown, at best, mixed results. A handful have delivered outcomes that may be termed satisfactory. Many have meandered as they attempted, over a decade or more, to be equal to the task of implementing their complex and ambitious mandates.

Unfortunately, conflicts remain and we are now in the midst of another paradigmatic shift in our efforts to contain and recover from conflict. One dimension of this shift, viz., the attempt to define the scope of peacebuilding is being increasingly clarified as “fragile” states define areas in which the international community can and is willing to support their nation-building activities. A second dimension, that of the relation between peacekeeping and peacebuilding, is also being clarified. A third dimension, the organizational context of peacebuilding, however, continues to lack uniformity. Some peacebuilding efforts are being managed by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, others by the Department of Political Affairs and yet others by the UN Resident Coordinator system.

At another level, the Peacebuilding Commission is working on expanding its effectiveness in a complicated multilateral context.

Peace building, therefore, is very much work in progress.

Mr. President,

India brings to this table the experience of almost sixty years of peacekeeping. We have contributed more peacekeepers to more peacekeeping operations than any other nation. We have also participated in every type of peacekeeping operation – from truce supervision to the current generation of complex PKOs.

Peacekeepers, Mr President, are early peace builders and Indian peacekeepers have been amongst the earliest UN peace builders.
Our experience in transforming a colonial legacy into a modern, dynamic nation that is both a democracy and a rapidly growing economy made Indian peacekeepers instinctively understand that no peace can be effective unless it is accompanied by growth of local institutions. Indian peacekeepers in UNTAC, UNOSOM II, MONUC, UNMIS, UNMIL, MINUSTAH and elsewhere have made conscious efforts to assist local authorities in restoring national structures that had collapsed during conflict. Our peacekeepers donned peace building hats and attempted to restore administrative processes, strengthened local policing and activated judicial mechanisms in areas they have served. They always attempt to work through indigenous mechanisms for conflict resolution and mediation in order to strengthen these local institutions so that they become viable political institutions. They have tried to get educational institutions to function and provided services such as livestock clinics to help local economies get going.

Mr. President,

Political and administrative institutions that decentralize governance are, in our experience the key to nation building. Institutions must be locally relevant and must include all stakeholders, particularly the weak and the under-privileged, in governance processes. India launched the largest ever exercise in democratic decentralization about two decades ago. Administrative and legislative powers were transferred to village and district level bodies and considerable thought and effort were devoted to making these institutions locally relevant.

The key to the success of these institutions, we have found, lies in what we call “inclusiveness”. Our process of democratic decentralization has ensured the election of about a million women to representative offices at all levels. Empowering those who have traditionally been at the margins of society has strengthened and transformed both democracy and governance in our country.

Mr. President, “inclusiveness” works in interesting ways.

The decision of the Government of India to aggressively recruit women police personnel allowed us to field a female Formed Police Unit, the first such formation composed entirely of women, in UNMIL. We understand that the presence of these Indian women police personnel has not only assisted in restoring faith in the local law enforcement system but has served as an example to Liberian women.

We believe that this is the type of institution-building that is required to bring stability in many of the conflict-prone areas that we are concerned with in this Council.
We have also built a significant capacity for training. Under Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme, we give training in some 5000 foreign students and experts in 220 odd courses from 158 countries across the globe. Similarly, through lines of credit, South-South Cooperation, and India Development Initiative, we have contributed to nation-building activities in various countries.

India has also contributed to peacebuilding through plurilateral mechanisms such as the India-Brazil and South Africa [IBSA] waste-management project in Haiti, where we also have police contingents deployed in MINSTAH.

Mr. President,

No amount of international will can replace national will and commitment. Moreover, peacebuilding cannot be undertaken in a hurry. Our role as peacebuilders has to be to assist, through long-term and patient involvement, the creation of the environment where this local will is allowed to express itself. It is also to provide the resources and the expertise that is often lacking in societies struggling to re-engineer themselves.

All this thus requires the international community to make available a predictable and appropriate level of resources over extended periods.

Mr. President,

UN capacity to help create institutions is contingent upon the Secretariat and the Funds and Programmes having skill sets and expertise that are relevant to these societies.

The move to create Civilian Capacities is a move in this direction. However, much more needs to be done.

It is hard to avoid the feeling that the UN presence on the ground is a ponderous bureaucracy rather than a lean institution that is quick to adapt and respond. Symptomatic of this malaise is the fact that the Secretariat takes up to 200 days to fill positions in the field leading to worrying vacancy levels.

The sourcing of these capacities must be driven by the needs of national authorities and not priorities of the donors. It also stands to reason that these capacities need to be sourced from governments of nations that have experience of relevance to these national authorities.

Serious consideration must also be given to the idea of an expansion of seconded staff to the UN. This would allow the UN to rapidly access necessary capabilities, deploy them swiftly and allow rapid scaling up and down. It is also likely to be more economical.
Mr. President,

In concluding, I would like to stress that as a responsible global citizen India will not be found lacking in responding to challenge of maintaining international peace and security through the peacebuilding process. Under Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme, we give training in some 5000 foreign students and experts in 220 odd courses from 158 countries across the globe. Similarly, through lines of credit, South-South Cooperation, and India Development Initiative, we have contributed to nation-building activities in various countries. India has also contributed to peacebuilding through innovative plurilateral mechanisms such as the India-Brazil-South Africa [IBSA] initiatives in Haiti, Guinea-Bissau and other nations.

Thank you, Mr. President.

685. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the First Regular Meeting of the Executive Board of the UN Women.

New York, January 24, 2011.

Madam President,

It is a matter of great satisfaction that UN Women has become operational and that the first meeting of the Executive Board is taking place today. We are happy to hear from Executive Director Madam Michelle Bachelet her vision for UN Women and also the 100-Day Action Plan for UN Women. Let me begin by thanking the newly constituted Secretariat of UN Women for providing all necessary documentations in a timely manner. Let me also commend the transition team of UN Women for their tireless and sincere efforts to successfully complete the transition phase of the merger of the four constituent parts into a single entity.

Madam President,

The creation of UN Women has been one of the most important transformational aspects of UN reform. I am glad that the UN Secretary-General was able to convince the Executive Director to lead this Organisation at its inception. The Entity has been rightly placed as one of his priority areas for action in 2011. We are confident in the Executive Director’s strong leadership of UN Women as well as to bring to the forefront the leadership role of UN in the field of gender equality and the empowerment of women.
Madam President,

The global, regional and national effort to ensure that women achieve the rightful place in society is still a faraway dream. UN Women has finally been created. Needless to say, the task at hand is enormous. Expectations are high. Goodwill is available in abundance. All this should not, however, blind us to the fact that unless there is effective prioritization, efforts will get diffused. Our effort should, therefore, be to prioritise the focus on gender equality, the empowerment of women and gender mainstreaming. We are happy to hear the very precise vision statement of the Executive Director. From my national perspective, the five priority areas which she has chosen are extremely important. These mirror the priorities of our Government as well as the extremely proactive civil society in India. The plan to strengthen the sub-regional office in India will help in providing the technical expertise and programme funds for these activities in India as well as for the whole of South Asia.

Madam President,

Putting as the first core principle the issue of demand-driven support to national partners is also well appreciated. This will ensure customizing the activities of UN Women in each country and guarantee, “to each, according to their needs”.

One of the major constraints for the initiation of the reform process was the issue of coordination. Multiplicity of UN actors in the field had led to lack of accountability and delays in identifying the right agency for cooperation. The 100-day Action Plan rightly addresses this as one of the core principles for UN Women. With strengthened field presence, this issue will be resolved. We welcome the idea of migration of posts in the field from programme funds to support budget. This will indeed give greater sustainability in technical assistance. We would also like to support the proposal of having appropriately senior level representations of UN Women in the field, to ensure better coordination and coherence within the UN system. In this regard, we would encourage UN Women to employ both international and national staff from within the region. They will have the advantage of socio-cultural understanding of women issues and would be able to effectively marry the national objectives with international obligations.

Madam President,

To ensure that UN Women stands for action, we would support all efforts to ensure that scarce resources are not diverted from programme activities in the field to administrative expenditure at UN Headquarters. UN Women will be measured by what and how it delivers in the field, not just by what it symbolizes. The first challenge of resource mobilization to fulfill its ambitious agenda is critical and would demonstrate the trust the international community bestows on UN Women. This needs a sound plan and a committed senior management. I am happy to see that the revisions which has been made in the support budget late last week, is the right steps in the right direction. This would also display to the contributors the professional and sincere approach of UN Women, as an agency for women, and not for UN.

The initial target of achieving resource mobilization of US $ 500 million is reasonable as well as modest. Although I do want to point out here that the Secretary General last year had actually proposed that UN Women should be created with the initial corpus of US $ 1 billion. This was also the demand of the developing countries and civil society. This might sound ambitious, but the lower target of US $ 500 million should not make us complacent and limit ourselves. Instead, we should be prepared to revisit this target later this year, and consider upward revision, in a realistic and practical manner. I would like to inform you that the Government of India is seized of the need to make appropriate contribution to UN Women.

Madam President,

We have noted the Executive Director would shortly constitute an Advisory Group of NGOs to feed into UN Women their perspective and expertise. I hope that such a group will be representative and have representation primarily from the grassroots organisations. There should also be efforts to ensure such interactions are established at the regional, sub-regional and country levels.

Madam President,

Yet another issue which needs attention is the agreement in resolution 64/289 to establish appropriate mechanisms to assist and support the realization of all the strategic objectives and actions agreed upon in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, as well as the national and international commitments stipulated in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly.

I am hopeful that the Executive Director will keep in mind these suggestions when she finalizes the Strategic Plan of UN Women in June 2011.

Madam President,

A good beginning is half the battle won. Today’s meeting, I see as the start of a new chapter in UN’s efforts in the field of gender equality and the empowerment of women. Let me conclude by appreciating UN Women team for adopting a transparent and consultative approach in this critical phase of transition and consolidation. The timely briefing by the Executive Director herself to various regional groups has dispelled doubts and raised the level of confidence and hope. Let me assure you my delegation’s full support and cooperation in this endeavor.

Thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

I would also join others in thanking Mr Jack Lang, Secretary General’s Special Advisor on Legal issues and Assistant Secretary General Stephen Mathias for their comprehensive and useful briefings on the problems of piracy off the coast of Somalia. I would also like to thank the Representative of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia for his perspective on the issue.

2. Mr. President, we have gone through Mr Lang’s report on the legal issues relating to piracy off the coast of Somalia carefully. It is comprehensive and contains many useful recommendations. It draws our attention to the disturbing fact that Somali pirates are operating further and further off from the Somali coast. The shift of attacks to the south and east of the Indian Ocean reflects the pirates’ ability to adapt in order to bypass the security corridor established by naval forces and to extend their reach to approximately 1000-1200 miles from Somali Coast. Piracy has also got more sophisticated and become an organised and lucrative activity.

3. Indeed, as Mr. Lang’s report states, piracy is gradually becoming an organised industry. Pirates have developed significant support structures whereby they are able to hold hijacked ships and crews hostage for months while their instigators and supporters hold negotiations for ransom. It is particularly worrying that the pirates have developed a modus vivendi with terrorist organisations.

4. Mr. President, according to the International Maritime Bureau, a record number of people, 1181 sailors, were taken hostage by pirates worldwide in 2010, of which the Somali attacks account for 1,016 hostages. Currently, the Somali pirates are holding 28 ships with more than 638 crew on board. During the year 2010, 53 ships were hijacked worldwide of which 49 were hijacked by Somali pirates. Compared to 2009, there was a 10 per cent increase in the number of pirate attacks in 2010, the total number being 445. Studies by different think tanks say that maritime piracy costs the global economy anywhere between $ 7 and 12 billion a year. Mr President, these figures are cause for a major concern for the international community.

5. The continuing instability in Somalia, Mr President, does not permit an effective response to the problem of piracy even though the Transitional Federal Government has identified counter-piracy as a major area of cooperation under the Kampala process. This process, therefore, needs to be revitalised and a major capacity building exercise needs to be undertaken in areas of security and police forces, legal and legislative frameworks, jurisdictional and correctional systems, etc.

6. We are in agreement with the Special Advisor of the Secretary General on the need to further strengthen international cooperation to tackle the problem of piracy. A comprehensive approach to tackle the problem has to be found to address this serious issue. In this context, my delegation wishes to propose the following measures:

- Reinforcement of tracking the trail of ransom money to different parts of the world, as was entrusted to the Interpol in the 6th CGPCS;
- Prosecution of the beneficiaries of ransom money for abetting piracy;
- Consideration of the conduct of the naval operations under the UN as the preferred option;
- Sanitization of the Somali coast line through identified corridors and buffer zones and tracking of fishing vessels around the Somali coast;
- Enactment of national laws on priority to criminalize piracy as defined in the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea and the prosecution of suspected, and imprisonment of convicted, pirates apprehended off the coast of Somalia as required under resolution 1918 (2010)

7. As a country with a coastline of over 7,500 kilometres, criminal activities in the international waters pose a serious threat to India. A large volume of India’s trade passes through the Gulf of Aden, estimated at about US$ 110 billion annually. About 24 Indian-flagged merchant ships transit the Gulf of Aden every month. Moreover, more than 6 percent of seafarers engaged in international shipping companies are Indian nationals. We, therefore, have a strong interest in ensuring the security of maritime traffic off the Somali coast, the Gulf of Aden and the Arabian Sea.

8. India has been actively engaged in anti-piracy operations. The Indian Navy commenced anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden from October 2008. A total of 23 Indian Navy ships have been deployed in the Gulf of Aden since then. In addition to escorting Indian flagged vessels, ships of other countries have also been provided protection. A total of 1487 ships, including 1321 foreign flagged vessels from different countries, have been escorted by Indian Navy ships in the Gulf of Aden since October 2008. 26 piracy attempts have been thwarted and no ship under Indian escort has been hijacked by pirates. We have also set up a 24x7 Communication Centre within the Indian Maritime Administration for coordination and facilitation in case of piracy. Taking serious note of recent spate in “Dhow Piracy”, India has banned operation of Indian Dhows in piracy infested areas. As the piracy prone area has expanded eastwards, the Indian Navy has made additional deployments off Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. Indian Navy has also deployed units to EEZ of Seychelles and Mauritius and its ships and aircrafts routinely patrol the waters off the Maldives. Following these deployments, there have been no hijack incidents in the east Arabian Sea since December 2010 consequent to one or two stray incidents that were suddenly experienced for a very brief period in end-November 2010. 9. India, as a founder-member of the ‘Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia’ (CGPCS), has been fully engaged in the efforts of the group to share information, coordinate actions of navies in combating piracy in the Gulf of Aden, raising public and merchant marine awareness and, examining legal and criminal justice issues with respect to apprehended pirates. Further, the Indian Navy has proactively cooperated with other navies through the SHADE (Shared Awareness and De-confliction) mechanism and otherwise.

Mr. President,

10. India would continue to contribute to international efforts aimed at increasing effective cooperation among States to tackle the problems of piracy. We also propose to actively engage in this Council’s work in the follow through of the recommendations made by the Secretary General’s Special Advisor and in ensuring the development of effective operational, legal and institutional response to the problems of piracy.

Thank you, Mr. President.
Thank you, Madam President.

2. I would also like to thank SRSG Haile Menkerios and President Benjamin Mkapa for their comprehensive and useful briefings on the current situation in the Sudan. I also thank the Representatives of the African Union, the Sudan and the Government of Southern Sudan for sharing their perspectives on the situation with us.

3. Madam President, as my other colleagues have mentioned, we are witnessing events which have far-reaching significance not only for the people of the Sudan, but also for the region and, indeed, for the entire African continent. A very large number of eligible voters, 97.58 per cent, participated in the referendum and an overwhelming number, 98.83 per cent, expressed their voice in favour of separation. For the organisation of a fair and transparent referendum, our thanks are due to the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission (SSRC) and also to the international organisations, the UN, EU, AU, IGAD and others, who partnered the SSRC. Most importantly, the leadership shown by President Bashir and First Vice President Salva Kiir is to be complimented because without their political will and cooperation the process could not have run as smoothly and peacefully as it did. We are glad that President Bashir has welcomed the results on 7 February as the will of the southern Sudanese people. We also welcome First Vice President Salva Kiir’s statement that the referendum was not the end of the road and he would cooperate with Khartoum to build strong relations.

4. The conclusion of the referendum process is, Madam President, only a milestone, albeit an important one, on the road to full implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) in the Sudan. Enormous challenges lay ahead. The issues of citizenship, status of Abyei, popular consultations in Southern Kordofan and Blue Nile provinces, border delineation and demarcation, division of resources, security arrangements, etc remain to be resolved. In this context, we are encouraged by the meeting held in Khartoum on 27th January between President Bashir and First Vice President Salva Kiir along with President Thabo Mbeki. Their agreement to promote sustainable peace and stability between the north and the south, to let the CPA institutions continue their work till the end of transition period, to continue with the work of the technical committee on border demarcation, and to resolve the status of Abyei are most welcome.
5. Madam President, the efforts of the Sudanese parties need to be supported by the international community. We should look beyond the referendum and assist the parties in their nation building exercise. Sustainable peace and stability can be firmly established only when the developmental needs of all the peoples of the Sudan are met. The fragility of the situation there was yet again demonstrated during the past week; more than 50 persons, including a UN staff member, were killed in clashes between the southern and northern soldiers from the joint integrated unit in Malakal in Upper Nile state. There are also several fault lines in Southern Sudan. Indeed, even as we deliberate here, we have received news of the killing of Minister Jimmy Lemi Milla of Southern Sudan. Even though this reportedly has a personal motive, it does highlight the security challenges in the region. We, therefore, think that unless the pending issues are resolved expeditiously and the process of building institutions of governance and economic development is accelerated, conflicts along those fault lines remain a real danger.

6. India, Madam President, has some 3,000 troops in the UNMIS and contributed six MI-17 helicopters. The Sudan is the largest recipient of Lines of Credit from India, with projects totalling nearly US$ 1 billion. India is the second largest investor in the Sudan. For capacity building in civilian sectors, India offers every year over 150 slots under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme and 20 scholarships for post-graduate and doctoral studies to the Sudan, both North and South. In July last year, we offered fellowships in Indian agriculture universities for 4 PhD and 6 M.Sc courses to the Sudan under the India-Africa Action Plan.

7. India stands ready to further enhance its assistance to the Sudan, as may be required by the governments of the Sudan and Southern Sudan. We urge the international community to increase its support to the Sudan in the areas of debt relief and economic investment and assistance so that the Sudanese leaders have material resources as well as public support for dealing with and surmounting the challenges facing them.

8. Madam President, last but not the least, the ground situation in Darfur is not much better than the last time this Council discussed the issue. While there have been some encouraging news about the two rebel groups deciding to send their teams to Doha, we are yet to see a breakthrough. The Council should, therefore, reiterate its demand that all the armed groups should agree to an immediate ceasefire and participate in the Doha peace process without delay or conditions so that the process can reach its successful conclusion. We commend the Government of Qatar for its sustained efforts for success of the Doha peace process. For the sustainable peace in Darfur, which includes all sections of the society, we welcome the initiatives of the government of the Sudan to start a Darfur-based Political Process which would build on the outcome of the Doha peace process. In this context, we commend the efforts of its High-level Implementation Panel led by President Mbeki and welcome the declaration of the African Union on 31 January for complete normalisation of relations between the international community and the Sudan.

Thank you, Madam President.

688. Statement by Counsellor at the Permanent Mission at the UN Vinay Kumar on UN Interim Administration in Kosovo (UNMIK).

New York, February 16, 2011.

Thank you, Madam President.

2. I would like to join other colleagues in thanking SRSG Lamberto Zannier for his briefing. I also want to thank H.E. Mr. Vuk Jeremic, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Serbia, for his country’s perspective on the situation in Kosovo. We have carefully listened to the statement of Kosovo’s representative Ms. Vlora Citaku.

3. Madame President, the Secretary General’s report on the United Nations Interim Administration in Kosovo (UNMIK) has brought out in detail the prevailing situation there. We note that with UNMIK’s facilitation, Belgrade and Pristina have continued cooperation on several issues, including those of missing persons and religious and cultural heritage. We encourage the two parties to address the remaining issues seriously and expeditiously. UNMIK should also continue its work in facilitating communication between the parties.

4. Madam President, while the overall security situation in Kosovo has remained relatively calm, the Secretary General’s report says that the continuing prevalence of individual as well as organised crimes makes the security situation potentially volatile. In this connection, the report of the Council of Europe’s Rapporteur, Mr. Dick Marty, which contains allegations of inhuman treatment of people and illicit trafficking in human organs, merits examination. We suggest that a thorough and impartial investigation be carried out of these allegations by an entity legally empowered to look into all aspects of the matter.

5. The Secretary General’s Report, Madam President, shows that a considerable number of tasks under Pillars I and II, concerning police and justice and civil administration, which are monitored by UNMIK, remain to be accomplished. Accordingly, we urge SRSG to continue to implement UNMIK’s mandate. We call upon all parties to fully cooperate with UNMIK and facilitate its work. We hope all the issues concerning Kosovo are resolved peacefully through consultation and dialogue. We also support extension of UNMIK’s mandate so that it continues to work towards fulfilment of the tasks mandated to it by this Council.

Thank you, Madam President.

689. Explanation of Vote delivered by Acting Permanent Representative Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri on 18 February 2011 after the vote on draft resolution S/2011/24 on “Settlements in Occupied Palestinian Territories”.

New York, February 18, 2011.

Madam President,

Consistent with our long-standing position of solidarity with the Palestinian people and our position that the settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories are illegal under international law; India has co-sponsored the resolution and voted in favour.

It is our sincere hope and expectation that wiser counsel will prevail among parties concerned and that the path of dialogue will be the only path followed to realize peace in the region.

Even though the Council today could not adopt the resolution, we expect that the sentiments expressed by the members of the Security Council will impel the parties to seriously introspect and realize that the only way to resolve the problem is to restart talks on all pending issues so that lasting peace is established and as mentioned by many in the Council today, we can welcome by September 2011 an independent viable united state of Palestine to the international community with East Jerusalem as its capital living side by side and at peace with Israel.

Thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Madam Chair,

Let me begin by congratulating you and members of the bureau on your reelection. My delegation attaches the greatest importance to the work of C-34 Committee and will cooperate with you fully in conducting the business of this session. My delegation also aligns itself broadly with the statement made by the Delegation of Morocco on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement. We thank Under Secretary Generals Alain Le Roy and Susana Malcorra for their briefings yesterday.

Madam Chair,

Peacekeeping is a flagship activity of the UN. The number of debates on peacekeeping in the Security Council in the first two months of this year indicates the enduring relevance of this activity. Peacekeepers on the ground are at an all time high and Peacekeeping budget has increased five folds over the last decade. Peacekeeping continues to be a critical tool with the UN to effect international peace and security. Our peacekeepers have carried out their duties in a commendable fashion given the severity of tasks, expanding mandates, shrinking resources, and complex political challenges. Past one year has been demanding for the peacekeepers and the time is to evaluate the approaches and strategies in all spheres of peacekeeping enterprise.

Madam Chair,

Peacekeeping has continued to deliver despite of imperfections induced by ambitious mandates, resource overstretch, challenges to integration & coherence, and the distances between the field and the headquarters. Disconnect between the mandates and their implementation compounds the Peacekeeping enterprise. Challenges of oversight, command & control, and human resource management do not make it any easier. Voices from the field continue to get drowned among the initiatives that we attempt at the Headquarters. My delegation recommends strong field orientation in everything we do and to leverage the expertise available with the TCCs and field experts in peacekeeping.

In order to address the issue of personnel overstretch it is incumbent that we expand the catchment of troop contributing countries. Those on the margins need to be encouraged to join the mainstream in order to ensure disbursed burden sharing and diversified capacity development. The Permanent members of the Security Council must lead by example by making their troops available under UN command and control.

During the past year we continued our engagements with various peacekeeping initiatives such as the New Horizon Non Paper, Global Field Support Strategy, Protection of Civilians, Robust Peacekeeping, Peacekeeping-Peacebuilding Nexus, and lately the Civilian Capacity Review mandated by the Secretary General.

Madam Chair,

My delegation, however, would like to strike a note of caution. The work that is currently being undertaken has serious implications on international law and on state sovereignty. A key issue in this context is the distinction between the actions of the Council under Chapters VI and VII. There is a time and a place for both and there should be no back-door method to obliterate the Council’s responsibility to attempt peaceful settlement of disputes. We must not mislead ourselves to believe that the shifting of mandates to another chapter will distinguish success from failure. Peacekeeping today stands on the firm foundations built over decades on the building blocks of neutrality, impartiality, consent and non-use of force. Alterations in the established rules of the game should not be undertaken with undue haste and without evidences from the ground. Our convictions must emanate from our own belief systems but also from what we observe and learn on the grounds.

Madam President, only extraordinary situations demand extraordinary measures. While we learn from the extremes we should desist practicing these in the routine.

The peacekeeping missions today need abundant caution while treading amid state sovereignty and international human right regimes. Armed militias that peacekeepers are faced with can hardly be described as helpless and victimized citizens. Principles of consent by host government, neutrality, and use of force in self-defence acquire different connotations in that context.

Madam Chair,

The protection of civilians is primarily the responsibility of the host country. This is an umbrella mandate that requires long-term strategies and engagements to protect women, children and civilians populations. Being the legitimate force on the ground, peacekeepers do bear an important responsibility in this regard. However, we must remember that peacekeepers cannot protect all the civilians, everywhere and at all times. The implementation of PoC mandate is inextricably linked with the success of the political process and its outcomes. In this context our strategies and guidelines in this regard should be realistic and informed of the ground realities.

Madam Chair,

Today, the bulk of peacekeeping presence is in protracted conflict. However, the peacekeeping missions have continued on the ground due to the political non-settlement of the conflicts. Protracted presence also complicates the operational challenges that peacekeeper is expected to surmount. Lasting, durable and sustainable peace requires that we at the UN think through the challenges before launching the missions. Not only do we need to manage the expectations of host populations but also those of ours. The practice of acting first and thinking later with hindsight needs to be abandoned. Peacekeeping is a long haul process and peacebuilding even more.

Madam Chair,

Peacekeeping and peacebuilding are processes that are complementary and not mutually exclusive. Early peacebuilding dividends enhance mission credibility among the to the host populations. Attempts to make these sequential or compartmentalized will be counterproductive. Success depends on the coherence, harmony, and synergy among peacekeeping and peacebuilding tasks. We are hopeful of the beginnings made by PBC in recent times and we look forward to greater complementarity and synergy between PBC and PBF in this regard. We must remain mindful that the self-sustaining institutions of basic governance will only allow successful drawdown of peacekeeping missions. Thus, the military component of peacekeeping missions will have to be supplemented, and not supplanted, by police and rule of law, and a capacity for development administration. The approach of segregating peacebuilding from peacekeeping tasks is counterproductive. We believe that theoretic compartmentalizations along thematic lines make implementation of integrated mission strategies difficult on the ground. To that extent the PBC and PBF projects must not be evaluated on a stand-alone basis but rather in tandem with the overall mission strategy, momentum, directions, and mission objectives. It is also imperative that the mission priorities are aligned firmly with national needs and priorities and are not transplanted from elsewhere.

We believe that the support to the national authorities in security sector reforms, rule of law, transitional justice and corrections is of critical importance. Restoration of national institutions of governance should be our top priority in the immediate aftermath of peace-restoration. We believe that the strategies of development and economic revitalization will not take roots unless grounded upon institutions of state administration. In these times of financial austerity we should also plan to do what we can afford to do.
Madam Chair,

The discourse over peacebuilding should not drown out the fact that much is left to be done in peacekeeping. A decade after the landmark Brahimi report, it is interesting to note which of its recommendations have been adopted and which ignored. The recommendation that mandates should be clear, credible and achievable is one of the areas where there has been virtually no movement. Troops on the ground find these mandates unrealistic and confusing. Secretariat reforms have also languished considerably. Enhanced coordination and cooperation among secretariat departments is desirable. HQ functions need to be harmonized better. Integrated mission models will remain mere paper strategies so long we do not make progress on this front.

Critical elements of mission execution such as leadership, mediation expertise, reporting efficiency, planning, oversight, information sharing, and political analysis both in real time and long term need further attention.

Madam Chair,

My delegation has been attentive to the briefings by DFS on the evolving global field support strategy. We are keen to witness its positive outcomes in day to day functioning of a peacekeeper’s life. We would also encourage DFS to engage the membership in substantive aspects of discussions and deliberation. We must not lose sight of its objectives that are about bringing efficiency to mission operations.

My delegation also notes SG’s efforts with regard to the Civilian Capacity Review. While we wait to hear its findings, my delegation would like to reiterate the importance of making this process consultative, inclusive and membership driven. We must also exercise vigilance in not prejudging the efficacy of any of its recommendations. Our thoughts and actions must be situated more in the fields and less in capitals taking due cognizance of existing expertise. Building upon the existing partnerships is far more critical for mission success than launching fresh beginnings.

My delegation appreciates and welcomes DPKO’s initiative towards gender mainstreaming in all Peacekeeping Missions. The performance of India’s female formed-police-unit in Liberia stands testimony to the value that women peacekeepers bring to this endeavor. I would like to take this opportunity to reiterate our stand with regard to zero tolerance in respect of disciplinary and conduct issues. My delegation would also like to point out that we contribute troops for a larger cause: that of peace in far off lands. The safety and security of UN peacekeepers must be of paramount concern to this organization, in whose name they serve.
Madam Chair,

India has partnered UN peacekeeping since its inception in the 1950s. I salute the Indian peacekeepers, as well as those from other countries, who have made the supreme sacrifice and laid down their lives while serving in UN Missions, most recently in the DRC. India today has the expertise, willingness and means to support peacekeeping and peacebuilding efforts. With about 100,000 personnel and eminent force commanders having served in over 40 missions, India remains committed to the furtherance of international peace and security as partner of the UN.

I Thank You Madam Chair.

691. Explanation of the Vote by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on the Resolution adopted concerning Libya at the Security Council.

New York, February 26, 2011.

Thank you, Madam President.

2. I take the floor to state that India has been following, with serious concern, the developments in Libya, which have resulted in loss of numerous lives and injuries to many more. We deplore the use of force, which is totally unacceptable. We earnestly hope that calm and stability are restored at the earliest without any further violence.

3. Madam President, we also have concerns about the safety of Indian nationals and their assets in Libya. We urge the authorities there to ensure their safety and welfare and facilitate departure of those desirous of leaving the country.

4. India is not a member of the International Criminal Court. Of the 192 members of the United Nations, only 114 are members of the ICC. 5 of the 15 members of the Council, including 3 Permanent Members, are not parties to the Rome Statute. Moreover, we would have preferred a calibrated and gradual approach.

5. We, however, note that several members of the Council, including our colleagues from Africa and the Middle East, believe that such a referral would have the effect of immediate cessation of violence and restoration of calm and stability. The letter from the Permanent Representative of Libya of 26 February 2011 addressed to you, Madam President has called for such a referral and strengthened this view. We have, therefore, gone along with the consensus in the Council. In this context, we draw attention to Para 6 of the resolution that concerns nationals from countries not parties to the Rome Statute. Similarly, the resolution also recalls in its preambular paras Article 16 of the Rome Statute under which no investigation or prosecution may be commenced or proceeded with by the International Criminal Court for a period for 12 months after a Security Council request to that effect.

I thank you.

692. Statement by Member Secretary National Commission for Women and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Ms. Zohra Chatterji on the Implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the Outcome of the 23rd Special Session of the General Assembly at the 55th Session of the Commission of the Status of Women.

Mr. Chairman

This is a historic session as it is the first session after the creation of UN Women. India wishes its first Executive Director, Ms Michelle Bachelet every success. The pooling of resources and merging of various UN organizations working for the advancement of women into “UN Women” sends a strong message that the advancement of women is to be dealt with using a more comprehensive and convergent gender approach, reinforced with adequate and more focused funding. India supports and welcomes this Strategy.

Mr. Chairman,

Over the years, women in India have increasingly overcome traditional mindsets and gender stereotypes. We are proud that today, we have the unique distinction of having all women at the top positions. The President of India, Speaker of the Lower House of the Parliament and the leader of the largest political party in the country as well as the leader of the opposition in the Lower House of the Parliament are all women.
Indian women entrepreneurs are occupying positions as top executives in banks and corporate board rooms in India as well as globally.

The Constitution of India guarantees equality of status of women and has laid the foundation for such advancement. It also permits reverse discrimination in favour of women and many important programmes have been designed specifically to benefit girls and women.

India’s central planning body, the Planning Commission of India, through its Five Year Plans is committed to enable women to be “equal partners and participants in development”. The ongoing Eleventh Five Year development plan of India (2007-12) has recognized women as agents of sustained socio-economic growth and change and funding as well as programmatic support is being provided to a large number of gender specific programmes and schemes, in addition to gender mainstreaming throughout the Government of India. Let me highlight, some of our major programmes and schemes.

Education:

Sustained effort has been made for removal of the barriers to girl’s education. By Constitutional amendment free and compulsory education up to the age of 14 is the responsibility of the State. Our National policy on Education articulates Government of India’s unequivocal commitment that “education will be used as an agent of basic change in the status of women.”

Reaching out to the girl child has also been central to the efforts of the Government of India to achieve MDG 2 and universalize elementary education. A two pronged gender strategy has been adopted to make the education system responsive to the needs of girls through targeted interventions which serve as a pull factor to enhance access and retention of girls in schools and also generate a community demand for girls’ education through training and mobilization. The strategy is showing results and today gender parity in enrolment has been achieved and there is improvement in other indicators as well.

Health:

Health is yet another important focus area. The National Rural Health Mission aims to provide quality health care for women, with provision for institutional deliveries. An additional programme, Conditional Maternity Benefit Scheme (Indira Gandhi Matriwta Sahayog Yojana) aims at improving the health and nutritional status of pregnant and lactating women.

Science and Technology:
Some of the programmatic efforts in relation to technology and women include:

a) provision of opportunities to women scientists to work from home to ensure that the talent of women scientists is not wasted

b) Large scale involvement of women scientists in developmental programmes

c) Provision of opportunities to girls in rural areas to access quality inputs in science and mathematics so that they can take up careers in science and engineering

d) Women scientists are being encouraged to pursue research in frontier areas of science and engineering, on problems of societal relevance

e) Supporting women scientists for self-employment by utilizing their specialized domain knowledge in areas such as patenting, proof reading, science journalism, technical translation, clinical pathology labs, medical transcription etc, to name a few

f) Motivation and encouragement to women scientists through National awards for outstanding performance.

India’s achievements in the IT sector have been acclaimed globally. Availability of jobs in BPOs and the flexibility to work from home have contributed significantly to women’s economic empowerment.

Another significant development has been mobile telephony in India where 13 million connections are added every month. Quietly a social revolution is taking place as millions of women especially in remote rural areas find themselves exposed to better market information, weather forecasts, and other information which is empowering them.

To preserve traditional knowledge, of which the major repositories are women, India has created the National Innovation Foundation, a unique initiative which has won global acclaim.

Employment:

The government of India has recently launched the National flagship programme NREGA (National Rural Employment Guarantee Act), under an Act of Parliament, aimed

So far a total employment of nearly 1 billion person days has been generated and almost 50 per cent of those employed have been women. The Act is sensitive to working conditions of women workers as it advocates providing accessible worksite (within 5 kms of workers’ residence), crèches for women with children below six and, above all, gender parity of wages.

The formation of Self Help Groups of women has enabled them to access cheap credit and generate means of self-employment. Over 2.2 million Self Help Groups have been set up at grassroots level throughout the country, which translates into more than 33 million households thus supported.

India has also enacted the Equal Remuneration of Work Act mandating payment of equal remuneration to men and women workers for the same or similar nature of work.

Training

India’s planning process spells out a three pronged strategy to empowering women including social empowerment, economic empowerment and gender justice. Provision of training and employment and income generation activities with both forward and backward linkages with the ultimate objective of making all women economically independent and self reliant is at the backbone of economic empowerment.

India has a wide network of central and state training institutes and polytechnics, which offer training courses for women to develop the professional skills required to find highly paid jobs or to be self employed. A National Vocational Training Institute for Women has been set up by the Central Government along with a number of regional institutes.

In the State sector, Vocational Training facilities exclusively for women at craftsmen level are provided through a network of Women Industrial Training Institutes. Training and Capacity building has also been included as an essential ingredient of all social sector programmes as well as schemes to foster entrepreneurship.

Addressing violence against women

The Indian government is striving to provide a safe environment for women to enable them to live their lives and engage in livelihoods with respect and dignity. We strongly condemn violence against women in all forms. India has enacted legislation against domestic violence, child marriage, and prenatal sex selection. More recently a legislation has been tabled in the Parliament for prevention of sexual harassment at the work place.

In several milestone decisions, the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India has established jurisprudence reinforcing women’s rights and the provision of a safe and healthy environment at home and work. The National Commission for Women also works as the autonomous watchdog for redressal of matters pertaining to deprivation of women’s rights and for recommending amendment of laws to promote gender justice and equality. One of the notable laws introduced in the area of women rights under the Hindu Succession Act has been the granting of equal rights to daughters in the inheritance of ancestral property. Mandatory registration of the wife in all property owned or acquired by the husband is another progressive step taken by many of the State Governments. Political empowerment

One of the largest exercises for political empowerment of women was undertaken in India in 1993, when one-third of the seats in local bodies were reserved for women. As a result, more than a million Indian women are now politically empowered at the grassroots level. This has enabled them to engage in the mainstream discourse of development as well as to wield decision making authority at the very level, which makes significant impact on their lives.

Convergence

India has recently set up a National Mission for Women’s Empowerment chaired by the Hon’ble Prime Minister of India. The Mission is responsible for setting goals and monitoring achievements with respect to the selected outcomes though the participating Ministries/Departments will continue to be responsible for implementing their respective schemes/programme.

The National Mission will also ensure similar convergence between activities of State government schemes/programmes, through the State Missions and other institutions such as National and State Commissions for women, civil society organizations and Panchayati Raj institutions.

Mr. Chairman,

Before I conclude, let me join other Member States and all the women civil society organisations in reaffirming our strong commitment to the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action.

Sixteen years ago, the aspirations of the Beijing Declaration may have appeared lofty and distant but together we have moved far along the road. We shall continue to strive for sustainable development, poverty eradication and realization of Millennium Development Goals.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
693. Intervention by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the Informal Meeting (closed) of the Plenary on the Inter-Governmental negotiations on the question of equitable representation on and the increase in the membership of the Security Council and other matters related to the Council.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by welcoming your decision as the Chair of the intergovernmental negotiations on Security Council reform to convene this meeting today. At the outset, I would like to place on record my delegation’s willingness and determination to continue to participate actively in these negotiations.

I would like to begin with a few words on the third revision of the negotiation text which forms the basis for our meeting.

When I entered this room this morning, Mr. Chairman, I thought of drawing inspiration from a major Bollywood movie. I know Indian movies used to be popular in Kabul. And in terms of size, as you would all know, Bollywood is bigger than Hollywood. I was reminded of a Bollywood movie of the last decade called Kabhi Khushi, Kabhie Gham which can be loosely translated as “Joy sometimes, despair at other times”. The title of the movie summed up our efforts here.

It gives me joy when I think about the transformation you, Mr. Chairman have brought about along with the member-states from the waffle of the OEWG to the start of intergovernmental negotiations in March 2009. This was followed by some despair which lifted when more than 140 countries wrote to you calling for the start of text-based negotiations.

Clearly, Mr. Chairman, you have attempted to imaginatively approach the issue of the modalities for shortening the text. You have called on member-states to “make great strides towards a substantive give and take.” Let me state that what you have produced is something on which we can work.

One of the earlier speakers referred to Rev3 as an “editorial fix.” My view is that if it is a fix, and here I am very careful in choosing words, because words have meaning and this will show up. On the other hand, even if there is a “fudge”, the strength of the positions can show the “fudge” for what it really is.

Seeing the fruits of your labour, I am convinced that you have done a good job under the circumstances. At the same time, however I would like to make a sincere plea to those who have been holding you back. Those very member-states that say please do not take precipitous action are also the ones who are trying to hold you back. But my answer to them is that both these positions can be satisfied. You maintain the process and we will give you the proposals.

Mr. Chairman,

Permit me to explain with a bit of personal example. I have spent 37 years in the Indian Foreign Service. During nearly half this period of time, the international community has spent considerable effort in achieving reform of the Security Council. We retire as Ambassadors quite early at 60. So, I don’t have many more years left. But I want to give encouragement to my younger colleagues sitting here behind me. One has just about one decade, is very mature and also looks quite like me. And the other who is younger and has about 25 years left in the service.

What do I tell them?

Do I tell them that something terrible and awful should happen – and I hope this never happens- for the appropriate international architecture to be put in place? How do I tell them that there are some in the Council who were victors of a past war and say well, we are permanent members and continue to perpetuate their privileged position? Do I tell them to be blind to the fact that in the months of January and February 2011, more than 70% of the Council’s meetings were on African issues and in terms of the amount of time spent, more than 90% of the Council’s attention was focused on African issues. And yet there is no single permanent member from Africa! Do I tell them that in the instance of the Latin American region, all slots have been filled up for the Council’s elected seats till 2034 and so there are no further opportunities. And be happy with this continuing under-representation. Do I tell them that it is par for the course that the large majority of the UN member-states, namely the small states, small island developing states, LDCs and LLDCs should never get a fair chance to serve on the Council just because it cannot be expanded?

And I must recall, Mr. Chairman, that we were in the Security Council one day on an issue on which there was no agreement and the PR of one of the P5 countries said that while there are some who oppose reform, they are not able to explain how the Council would be harmed by adding numbers when it is finding it difficult to deliver with the existing numbers.

Or Mr. Chairman, do I tell them that there are two clear choices. Either we continue to waffle or we make a determined push for reforms that should have already taken place.

At the same time, I see some light at the end of the tunnel. For those people who are holding your process back by calling for a member-states driven process, I would say there is a way out and that is by member-states themselves giving proposals to the Chair.

Mr. Chairman,

My delegation is of the view that it will not augur well for the reform or for the process if we were to try and contain it, in which case it can take the wrong shape. I recall what Machiavelli had said “The mass is wiser and more constant than the Prince.” I feel that reform will not come about because of the wishes of a few, but only through traction from the floor in the General Assembly. It will not happen because India wants it, but because there must be real equitable representation.

We have already seen in the L.69 statement delivered by Ambassador Raymond Wolfe of Jamaica a very good example of how such a member-states driven process can and should function and fully align ourselves with his statement. Again I must state that we have been subjected now for months on end to talk about the so-called “intermediate” and “interim” model, but have never found out what it actually is. I invite those who espouse this model to spell out what it means. In this regard, I ask myself, which is easier—take the approach of the so-called “transitional” model or the steps that will lead to expansion in both categories of membership. I ask why expend the same energy for a lesser result.

For the record, let me also reiterate that the overwhelming majority of UN member-states have expressed their clear preference for expansion of the Council in both permanent and non-permanent categories.

There is convergence regarding expanding the Security Council to 25/26. This must include an expansion in the permanent category from the present 5 to 11, with the addition by name of two new permanent seats from Africa, two new permanent seats from Asia, one new permanent seat from the Latin American and Caribbean region and one new permanent seat from the WEOG countries. The non-permanent category must be expanded from the present 10 to 14/15 with the addition of one new non-permanent seat each for the Asian, East European, GRULAC states and one/two non-permanent seats for the African states taking into account the need to ensure representation from developing countries, including small island developing states, wherein participation shall be on the basis of the concept of rotating seats.

Mr. Chairman,

There has been a lot of discussion on what kind of new permanent members should be allowed. If the a priori staring point is that new permanent members cannot have the same rights and obligations as the existing ones, then I am afraid, such a proposition is not saleable. However, if some of the new permanent members decide not to enforce their veto—and here I use my words carefully again because the Charter as far as I know talks only about “responsibilities and duties” and not about “rights” — till such a time as a comprehensive review is undertaken, they should be allowed to do so. This would of course be without prejudice to the proportionate changes in the minimum numbers needed to take decisions on matters other than the procedural ones in the reformed Council. This also does not however preclude from the immediacy of the task at hand, namely for restricting or limiting the use of the veto under certain circumstances such as: genocide, crimes against humanity and serious violations of international humanitarian law; war crimes, ethnic cleansing and terrorism.

We need to address these issues in a comprehensive manner. We must also take into account the fact that there is extreme reluctance today on the use of the veto.

Mr. Chairman,

India associates itself with the growing clamour for early reform of working methods of the Council.

India calls for the General Assembly and the Security Council as two principal organs of the UN to respect each other’s distinct roles, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, so as to secure the effective functioning of the UN as a whole.

And finally, there must be a comprehensive review after a period of fifteen years during which the entire structure of the Security Council would need to be revisited. Not to agree to a comprehensive review will lead to a demand, sooner rather than later, for changing the present structure. Any attempt to freeze the structure will only lead to a losing battle against the tides of change.

Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, we are both ready and willing to reach out to other countries and to work in close cooperation with them towards the goal of achieving urgent reform of the Council in keeping with the changing realities of the current times.

Let me assure you and through you our other colleagues and member-states of our willingness to remain constructive and reasonably flexible on all issues on the table in the months to come and urge other delegations to do likewise.

Thank you.

◆◆◆◆◆
Mr. Chairman,

Thank you for giving me the floor.

India associates itself with the statement made by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

It is now becoming increasingly clear that the concept of Green Economy is subsumed in the larger framework of sustainable development as defined by the Rio principles. There is also a convergence on the view that Green Economy should give equal focus to all the three pillars of sustainable development – economic, environment and social.

It is time for us to move from the ideal to the practical and from the maximum to the optimum in the journey towards developing the components of a road map for green global economy at the Rio 20.

For developing countries, poverty eradication and growth are overriding development priorities. Only when these priorities are taken into account will the idea of green economy become an effective driver of global growth.

We also believe that Green Economy to be effective and legitimate it must capture the underlying differences in the scale and scope of the economies of developed and developing countries. It must abide by the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities and stand the test of scrutiny on the principle of equity.

Enabling mechanisms consisting of financial, technological and capacity building support are a must for developing countries to join the road to Green Economy. India concluded a successful India–LDC Conference last month in which we announced 5 scholarships per year to each LDC and a credit line of USD 500 million for projects and programmes specifically for LDCs. But we must recognize that south-south cooperation can supplement North–South cooperation but not substitute it.

We must also ensure that Green Economy does not lead to trade protectionism.

An important component of Green Economy debate must be to address unsustainable consumption, production and life style patterns. Without adequate focus on this critical issue, we would again be caught treating the symptoms rather than the cause.

Now coming to the questions or issues that you have raised:

Priorities for Green economy:
Conservation of water, renewable energy, protection of land from degradation and conversion of waste into energy are our high priorities.

Tax Policies:
Tax incentives to promote environment friendly investments have been effectively and regularly used by India in the past. The rapid growth of wind power and solar power in India owe a great deal to tax incentives.

Successful models of green economy:
While India has its own successful models of green economy, this is an area in which we would like to borrow from the best practices from everywhere else in the world. There are also areas in which we can share technologies and experience with other countries.

How should Businesses promote green economy:
The environmental responsibilities of business should be built-in in the principles of corporate governance and corporate social responsibility. This is indeed the case in India. Polluters must pay for the pollution they create. Otherwise, they are rejected by the society sooner than later.

Costs of transition to the green economy and how to finance them:
At the current juncture, the high cost of green technologies and low cost of brown technologies deter the deployment of green technologies. Introducing disincentives to environment unfriendly technologies and enhancing the demand for environment friendly goods will in our opinion and experience lead to better prospects for green economy. Innovative financing like imposing a burden on polluters to pay for investments in clean technologies is another useful instrument.

Conclusion
Several developing countries, including India, realise the value of following the green growth path. Mahatma Gandhi said long before the 1972 Stockholm Conference that mother nature has enough for every one’s need but not for any one’s greed. India’s Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Guarantee Scheme, a Cash for Work programme is focussed on preservation and restoration of natural capital. About 84% of its investment goes into water conservation, irrigation and land development. India has also undertaken an ambitious Green India Mission to regenerate 10 million hectares of forests by 2020.

Our National Action Plan on Climate Change has 8 dedicated missions which place emphasis on energy efficiency, clean technology, renewable energy, public transport, resource efficiency and tax incentives, among other sustainable development tools.

It is our sincere hope that the Rio 20 Conference should be a mile stone towards sustainable development and not a mill stone around its neck. It is our understanding that if it tries to make Green Economy the norm and standard for a global development model which is target based and prescriptive, it may not be a workable option for developing countries who need policy space to follow their development priorities. We would recommend that the Green Economy framework be more of a direction and guidance for countries to follow the path of sustainability: it must be a voluntary programme of action. We see this approach as a practical way forward.

Thank You.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Mr. Chairman,

India would also like to join the list of Nations that have endorsed the views expressed by Argentina in its capacity as the Chair of G 77. Over the years, we have formalized any number of Covenants, Conventions, Protocols and Agreements in the area of sustainable development. A number of independent entities have also been set up to implement them. These entities operate independent of one another and often from different capitals. They also work in a compartmentalized manner but on overlapping mandates.
Naturally, this has resulted in a number of gaps, loss of synergy, duplication of efforts and most importantly - inadequate implementation. The questions framed by the secretariat to facilitate debate and discussion in this regard are very useful. As is obvious, they overlap among themselves and the answers too often straddle on several questions.

At the very outset, India would like to support selective clustering of compatible conventions in specific domains. The cooperation between different conventions dealing with hazardous wastes and chemicals, for example, is a useful case for assessing and determining the direction such efforts should take.

Secondly, we do not subscribe to the view that creating an overarching umbrella entity dedicated exclusively to environmental governance would lead to desired results. Instead, we believe that it would be useful for the Economic and Social Council to take charge and promote greater coordination and effectiveness in the ongoing activities of its functioning commissions and programs.

Thirdly, in our view, the International institutional architecture seeking to address global environmental challenges should remain firmly anchored in the principles of equity and “common but differentiated responsibilities” embodied in the Rio Declaration. A key aspect that the Institutional Framework should address relates to the support to the developing countries in terms of financial resources and technology transfer. This is absolutely essential for the success of environmental governance.

We believe that any consolidation and restructuring of global environmental governance that enhances regulatory control and develops across-the-board normative and prescriptive standards takes away the flexibility and safeguards available to developing countries under different environmental conventions. India supports a deeper science-policy interface in environmental governance.

We are conscious that organizations like UNEP have not been provided with adequate resources to undertake the task of integrating environment with social and economic development and building capacities in developing countries. These issues must be urgently addressed.

We also hope that the ongoing discussions on Institutional Framework shall take into account national priorities and culminate in a commonly agreed and balanced approach to successfully tackle the global environmental challenges.

Thank You.
696. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on Comprehensive

New York, March 10, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

First of all, I would like to place on record our appreciation to you, Mr President, for organizing today’s Open Debate, which is very timely and gives us an opportunity to discuss the situation in Somalia comprehensively.

I would like to thank, in particular, the Secretary General for setting the coordinates and tone for our discussion. I would also thank AU Chairman’s Special Representative for Somalia Ambassador Boubacar Gacoussou Diarra.

H.E. Mr. Mohamed Abdullahi Mohamed, Prime Minister of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia, deserves our special appreciation for his comprehensive outlining of the achievements of the Transitional Federal Government thus far as well as its plans for the immediate future. I draw inspiration, in particular, from your determination to regain your land, your identity and your dignity from the extremists. I would like to assure you, Mr.
Prime Minister, of India’s continued commitment to supporting every meaningful effort aimed at furthering peace, reconstruction and institution building in Somalia. In keeping with discussions held earlier this week in Mogadishu by our Ambassador, including with Your Excellency, we will examine ways of intensifying our cooperation aimed at building capacity in the various identified areas of interest and in dealing with the scourge of piracy.

India and Somalia are linked by two millennia of shared history and culture.
We are neighbours across the sea. In recent times, Mogadishu, Kismayo and other Somali cities have had thriving Indian communities and even today India is home to many Somalis. Indian teachers are fondly remembered by many Somalis.

In recent times, as Somalia fell into difficult circumstances, India contributed significant numbers of peacekeepers and naval and air assets [to UNITAF and UNOSOM-II] and the work of Indian medical units among the civil populace is recalled to this day. We also remain active in the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia while continuing with existing measures to protect our seafarers and maritime commerce.

Mr. President,

peace and security issues confronting Somalia as well as the immediate and greater region surrounding the country are matters that concern us all. I join in commending the TFG forces and AMISOM for their recent successes. We extend our sincere condolences over the sacrifices that both have made. We have had reports of the trying circumstances in which the various contingents operate. We also wish to record our appreciation for the good work being done by UNSOA. The Council should examine the recommendations made by the African Union and others for supporting AMISOM and Somalia and its people.

Mr. President,

international efforts to re-establish security in Somalia will, however, not be successful so long as Al Shabaab continues to generate internal resources for its activities. We would, therefore, like to see control of Kismayo port by TFG forces so that port earnings are not misappropriated by Al Shabaab. Simultaneously, serious efforts should be undertaken by all stakeholders to cut off supplies of arms to Al Shabaab.

It is important that any nexus between domestic destabilising forces and external support agencies that aims at the induction of outside combatants or arms and ammunition be broken. This requires effective monitoring of existing sanctions and a common commitment to honour them.

The drought in Somalia as well as in neighbouring countries has assumed alarming proportions in lands even otherwise not adequately blessed with water resources. We would be prepared to work with the TFG to assist the Somali people in this regard.

Mr. President,

One of the unfortunate outcomes of the larger and ongoing tragedy in Somalia is piracy. It has not only had a destabilizing effect on global and regional trade and security, but has also brought about much suffering to seafarers and their families. Killing of four US citizens recently by the pirates is only an example, and we strongly condemn this.

As I have mentioned in the debate in the Council on 25 January 2011, Somali pirates are operating further and further off from the Somali coast. A few recent incidents of piracy have taken place about 250 nautical miles away from the Indian coast. The shift of attacks to the south and east of the Indian Ocean reflects the pirates’ ability to adapt in order to bypass the security corridor established by naval forces and to extend their reach to approximately 1000-1200 miles from Somali Coast.

The Indian Navy and Coast Guard have stepped up their vigil against pirates in its EEZ. They have recently neutralized two ‘mother ships’ being used by the pirates.
The issue of sailors taken hostage by pirates and their plight is one that the Security Council has not addressed. My delegation feels that the ways and means of addressing this issue requires the most urgent and serious consideration of the UN. The International Maritime Bureau reported that in 2010 alone, 1,016 sailors of all nationalities were taken hostage by Somali pirates of whom 638 continue to remain hostage. It is a matter of serious concern for us that 53 Indian nationals who were aboard the hijacked ships are being held captive by pirates. The hostages are generally from working class backgrounds and often the only bread-winners of their families. The primary responsibility for the release of hostages lies with the owners of the ships concerned. In many cases, it has been observed that the owners of the ships involved do not take responsibility or display adequate interest in securing the release of the sailors under their employ. Sailors are in many circumstances required to endure very harsh conditions under the captivity of pirates and are often tortured by their captors. My delegation views this issue with the greatest concern. Democracies are, in particular, sensitive to public opinion and are impacted by a public sense of need to act on the adverse situations faced by their citizens. There has to be more effective action that the international community can collectively take. I was encouraged by the remarks of my Russian colleague. I look forward to receiving details of his initiative on piracy and supporting it.

India has been fully engaged in the efforts of the ‘Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia’ (CGPCS) to share information, coordinate actions of navies in combating piracy in the Gulf of Aden, raising public and merchant marine awareness and, examining legal and criminal justice issues with respect to apprehended pirates. The Indian Navy has been undertaking anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since October 2008.

Mr. President,

We will work with Somali authorities and support the work of the African Union and this Council in a constructive manner. We are happy that even through trying times, bilateral cooperation programmes such as the Pan-African e-Network are being successfully implemented in Somalia. We look forward also to a visit by the Deputy Prime Minister for Planning & International Cooperation H.E. Mr. Abdiweli Ali. We will remain engaged with Somalia.

Thank you, Mr. President.
697. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the Meeting of the Ad hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly.

New York, March 14, 2011.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Prior to the commencement of our session this afternoon, I had walked up to my distinguished colleague, Ambassador Sumi of Japan and shared with him how deeply saddened we are to see the images of the destruction caused by the massive earthquake and the following tsunami. I join other colleagues this afternoon in conveying our heartfelt condolences. The loss of lives is irreparable.

Japan is a country for which I have deep admiration and respect. Not only because I began my diplomatic career there, much like the first love, but also because Japan is one country which gives us the confidence of having the resilience of being able to not only overcome this very unfortunate act of nature but of coming out stronger.

So whilst we extend our condolences, we have no doubt that the brave people of Japan will be able to overcome this massive crisis that they are facing. And all I can say is that my country, and as indeed several others, spontaneously offered to make available whatever little assistance we can offer. We stand ready and shoulder to shoulder with the Japanese people and Government in their hour of grief.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record my delegation’s happiness in the decision taken by President of the General Assembly, Dr. Deiss to appoint two distinguished and independent-minded diplomats such as Ambassador Camillo
M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius ekuolis of Lithuania as Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group on General Assembly Revitalization for this session. I welcome your appointment and assure you of my delegation’s steadfast support and constructive participation in the deliberations of this Group.

Permit me also to express appreciation for the excellent work done by the Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group last year, Ambassador Sanja Štiglic of Slovenia and Ambassador Jorge Argüello of Argentina whose active involvement and able guidance ensured that the Assembly was able to adopt the most substantive and forward-looking resolution in the last five years-64/301. Equally, I would like to place on record my delegation’s appreciation for the work done by the Algerian delegation as the NAM Chair on this issue as well as for the other negotiating partners who worked in a spirit of cooperation. Naturally my delegation wishes to align itself with the statement made by Algeria on behalf of the NAM.

I must thank Ambassador Gonsalves for drawing our attention to the statement made by Ambassador Menon of Singapore in this very room last week. There is much that Ambassador Menon said which finds ready resonance with my delegation. And let me start with “Similarly, there are some amongst us Member States who need to stop obstructing the reform process.” That as you know is something which could be part of an Indian statement on reforms, Security Council reform in particular. He goes on to state, “Instead, we should focus on proposing constructive and pragmatic ideas.” That again would be a formulation that would fit well in any Indian statement in any of these discussions. Ambassador Menon says, “There are others who want everything to be dealt with in the General Assembly and nowhere else because they are afraid of losing control.” We entirely agree. Ambassador Menon also said, “We have to realize that no institution has the monopoly on seeking global solutions to global problems.” And he went on to develop ideas that I am entirely in agreement with, especially the General Assembly’s propensity to pass resolutions in numbers which leaves no time even for us to read.

But I want to pick on one issue which has been mentioned by one of the earlier speakers and develop that slightly this afternoon.

When we look at the subject of General Assembly Revitalization I am reminded of the proverb “putting the cart before the horse.” Co-Chairs this thought that came to me when I had the privilege of accompanying my External Affairs Minister from one thematic meeting to another last September during the general debate section. I wondered how entirely the wheel had turned and we had managed to reverse the established order of things, so much so, that the general debate itself became one of the many events during that jam-packed fortnight here in New York. We have all been brought up in the tradition that you have the general debate as the main focus and then you have one or two side events, high level thematic events. But here the order has been reversed entirely.

Now I wonder, after having spent nearly three months on the Security Council-and I will come back to it in a little while-whether we should create a new proverb or at least suggest one, namely “putting the horse on the cart” to capture our collective predicament.

Co-Chairs,

The starting point of my delegation’s position on the issue of General Assembly revitalization is the firm belief that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and in spirit.
The GA should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. This was the role intended for the Assembly in Article 10 of the UN Charter, namely that it discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, the ICJ as well as the Secretariat.

Co-Chairs,

My delegation participated actively in the deliberations of the Ad Hoc Working Group on Assembly revitalization in the 64th session. We provided a number of inputs at the meetings held during that last session. These inputs were provided in a spirit of constructive engagement and we are pleased that these were taken on board in the negotiations leading to the adoption of Resolution 64/301. While we are generally happy that Resolution 64/301 has been able to highlight some of the important steps required on our collective journey towards a revitalized General Assembly, we firmly believe, Co-chairs that we still have some distance to travel.

You have in your letter of 4th March called on delegations to provide concrete and targeted interventions for the purpose of the Working Group’s deliberations this session. I intend to respond to your call and place on record my delegation’s considered views on some of the important aspects of the issue of General Assembly Revitalization.

First of all, it is critical that we establish a proper relationship of respect for respective mandates between the General Assembly and the Security Council in the spirit of the Charter.

India joined the Security Council on 1st January this year, after a gap of 19 years. I noted very carefully the statement made by my distinguished colleague from Antigua and Barbuda speaking on behalf of the CARICOM. And if I heard his correctly, the entire CARICOM region has had the privilege of serving on the Council only for three occasions in the last 65 years of the Security Council’s existence!

During the time that we have spent on the Council, we have noticed that the Council’s agenda is, to say the least, overburdened. This is because the Council busies itself with themes which no doubt and certainly important, are still not directly connected to the real and immediate threats to international peace and security. This has left the Council with less time to focus on the real hotspots that constitute the real threats to international peace and security.

At the same time, however, we believe that remedial measures would only be half complete in the absence of serious introspection on what the General Assembly itself can do to mitigate the situation. Clearly, the Assembly will not be empowered merely by strengthening procedures. More important is the presence of political will to take concrete measures to reinforce the role and authority of the Assembly.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

The Assembly must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General. The continued circumscribing of the Assembly’s role and responsibilities in the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General needs to change in the interests of the United Nations system in general and the Assembly’s prerogatives in particular. And, as it was the General Assembly which limited its own role, it will have to be the General Assembly that claws back its rightful place in the process of selecting the Secretary-General. In this regard, it is also our considered view that in accordance with the NAM position that any mechanism that will be adopted would require a transitional period and would not be applicable to the immediate next process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General.

Co-Chairs,

I would now like to address two other important issues of relevance to our meeting here today.

First, in our view the Charter provisions clearly reflect the desire of the UN membership to have an international civil service which displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity and which is accountable therefore, if not in higher, but at least in equal measure as the Secretary General is to the General Assembly. In addition, we would welcome closer consideration of procedures for selecting, appointing and confirming the heads of the major Specialized Agencies, Funds and Programmes with a view to ensuring transparency, legitimacy and balanced representation.

Second, we believe that the Assembly and other entities that form part of the UN system must reflect diplomatic best practices in its day to day functioning. And here there is a lot of need for interaction and learning to be done from member-states.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In conclusion, let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative and policy-making and representative body of the international community.

You can expect India’s constructive support and participation in these efforts.

Thank You.
698. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri in the UN Security Council meeting to hear the briefing by the Chair of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1737 (Iran Sanctions Committee).

New York, March 17, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

2. I would join other colleagues in thanking Ambassador Nester Osorio for presenting the 90-day report of the 1737 Committee. We appreciate the work of the Committee and will continue to participate actively in its work under Ambassador Osorio’s Chairmanship.

3. Mr President, Iran is part of what has been defined as India’s “proximate neighbourhood”. We share a historical and civilizational relationship. The two countries maintain vibrant and lively people-to-people and cultural relations.
Iran is a major source of our energy and hydrocarbon supplies, and is thus important for our energy security. We are also discussing with Iran various projects in the energy sector.

4. Iran, located at the crossroads of the Indian sub-continent, Central Asia and Middle East, is an important country and has a role to play in regional issues. We have cooperated with Iran on issues such as restoration of peace and stability in Afghanistan as well as in developmental projects such as construction of Zaranj-Delaram road in western Afghanistan. Other areas of cooperation include trade and transit to Afghanistan, Central Asia and beyond within the framework of International North-South Transport Corridor, and fight against common threats we face from cross-border terrorism and extremism.

5. Mr. President, as a country abiding by all its obligations of international treaties and having strong credentials of non-proliferation, India has taken a consistent stand on the Iran nuclear issue. We support the right of all States, including Iran, to peaceful use of nuclear energy. Exercise of this right should be consistent with their international obligations.

6. As mentioned in the Joint Communiqué issued at the 10th Russia-India-China Ministerial Meeting at Wuhan in November 2010, Iran is entitled to the right to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, and should at the same time restore international confidence to the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear activities. To that end, we support intensification of efforts to address the Iranian nuclear issue by peaceful means, through dialogue and negotiation. We also believe that the International Atomic Energy Agency has a central role in resolution of technical issues concerning Iranian nuclear programme.
7. Mr President, we also call upon all sides to fully implement the resolutions this Council has adopted. There should be no violation of the measures mandated in those resolutions. At the same time, all efforts should be made to ensure that legitimate trade and economic activities of Iranian entities and those of other countries should not suffer. As member of the 1737 Committee, we will contribute towards Committee's work in that direction.

Thank you, Mr. President.

699. Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri on the situation in Afghanistan at the Security Council.

New York, March 17, 2011.

Mr. President,

I would like to thank you for giving me the floor and scheduling today's debate on the situation in Afghanistan in the context of renewal of UNAMA's mandate. I also thank Ambassador Zahir Tanin, Permanent Representative of Afghanistan for his statement. We are grateful for the latest report of the Secretary General and are appreciative of the briefing by the SRSG Staffan de Mistura. May I also thank the delegation of Germany for anchoring the negotiations on the draft Resolution on UNAMA.

The Kabul Conference last year marked the beginning of the Kabul Process - a new phase in the partnership of the Afghan Government and international community. The hallmark of the Kabul Process is Afghan ownership and leadership in realizing the shared pursuit of sustained and tangible improvements in security, governance and development in the country. The NATO Summit held in Lisbon in November 2010, provided a roadmap to transition to full Afghan security responsibility and leadership by the end of 2014.

We could not agree more with the observations in the UNSG's report that the transition must be Afghan owned, transition must be planned and implemented in a systematic manner and transition must ensure the protection and promotion of the human rights of all Afghans. It must be accompanied by an inclusive political process and intra-Afghan dialogue.
It is important the transition must be linked to the ground realities rather than rigid benchmarks along with a constant assessment and review of the evolving situation in Afghanistan. Building the strength and capabilities of Afghan National Security Forces, along with adequate enablers, is imperative to the transition of security responsibilities.

Afghan ownership and leadership is also critical for development and reconstruction in Afghanistan. This also implies greater coherence, coordination and further streamlining of international community’s developmental efforts including aligning of assistance with Afghan national priority programmes and increasingly working through Afghan institutions. It is also important to strengthen the UN’s own coherence and coordination among its various bodies working in Afghanistan in accordance with the priorities of the Government of Afghanistan.

India supports Afghan Government’s efforts to reintegrate those individuals who abjure violence, give up armed struggle, do not have links with terrorist groups, and are willing to abide by the values of democracy, pluralism and human rights as enshrined in the Afghan Constitution. It is important that we respect the ‘redlines’ for the process as reaffirmed at the Kabul Conference, otherwise we risk Afghanistan sliding back to becoming a safe haven for terrorists and extremist groups.

We appreciate the increasing collaboration among the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) and Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF), which has led to security gains in Southern Afghanistan and consolidation of security gains in Kabul. However, it is a matter of deep concern that the overall security situation continues to deteriorate in Afghanistan and there has in fact been a slight increase in security incidents as compared to last year. The recent instances of attack on civilians in Kabul Bank in Jalalabad and suicide attacks in Kabul indicate a change in tactics wherein the Taliban and other opposition groups are opting for soft civilian targets. They also point to the existence of a virtual army of suicide attackers who are being brainwashed, trained and deployed. The scale, location, character and magnitude of this has not been sufficiently analyzed in the urge to seek a political solution.

The continued resilience of the insurgents, their changing tactics, their numbers and their spreading out to areas earlier considered safe are a grim reminder that the security gains would remain transient unless the international community is able to firmly deal with safe heavens for terrorist groups outside Afghanistan borders. For security and stabilization of Afghanistan, it is important to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al Qaida, Taliban, LeT and other terrorist and extremist groups operating from within and outside Afghanistan borders. In fact, the Jalalabad attack, which bore the hallmark of a mini-Mumbai, point to a fusion of techniques and ideology of Al
Qaida and LeT with elements of the Taliban. The Afghan people must be allowed to re-build their land in conditions of peace and security free from interference from their neighbours and they must be the arbiters of their own destiny.

Afghanistan’s stability and economic developments depends a lot on its neighbours and the region as a whole. Afghanistan has an immense potential as a land bridge linking Central, West and South Asia and emerging as a trade, transport and energy hub. The recent developments in regional cooperation including the signing of the agreement on Turkmenistan-Afghanistan- Pakistan- India gas pipeline project would provide added impetus to regional cooperation. Part of solution lies in Afghanistan being increasingly regionally integrated. Growing economic inter-dependence would catalyze peace and prosperity in the region at large and in Afghanistan in particular. Afghanistan as a SAARC member since 2005 is increasingly becoming active as a fellow SAARC member. India as a neighbour will continue its efforts towards the development of Afghanistan.

India and Afghanistan share a strategic partnership based on the strong foundations of rich, historical and civilizational bonds and shared pursuit of regional peace and prosperity. India remains committed to partnering the Government and people of Afghanistan in the building of a peaceful, stable, democratic and pluralistic nation. Assisting Afghanistan in capacity building and skills for human resource development, and building Afghanistan’s public institutions is a special area of priority for India. Our cumulative developmental assistance stands at US $ 1.3 billion. In addition, India has committed to provide 100,000 tons of wheat for the Government and people of Afghanistan in view of the prevailing drought in the country.

The area of Afghanistan south of the Hindu Kush all the way up to the Ganges Delta, form a part of a single geographical and economic basin, with the plains of India constituting the centre of its economic gravity. It is by far Afghanistan’s largest regional market a potential source of investment, skills, training, technology and expertise and a model of democracy and natural institution building in a culturally comfortable context. Closer economic integration with India and other countries in the region is the key to Afghanistan’s future and prosperity.

In conclusion, Mr. President, we hope that the international community will continue to remain steadfast in its support to Afghanistan as per the priorities of the Afghan Government. We commend the good work done by UNAMA. In accordance with the wishes of the Afghan Government and as requested by the UN Secretary General in his latest report, India supports the renewal of the mandate of UNAMA for an additional period of one year.

Thank you.
India's Explanation of Vote after the vote on Libyan Resolution in the UN Security Council by Deputy Permanent Representative Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri.

New York, March 17, 2011.

India has been following with serious concern the developments in Libya, which have led to loss of numerous lives and injuries to many more. We are very concerned with the welfare of the civilian population and foreigners in Libya. We deplore the use of force, which is totally unacceptable, and must not be resorted to.

2. The UN Secretary-General has appointed a Special Envoy, who has just visited Libya. We support his appointment and welcome his mission. We have not had the benefit of his report or even a report from the Secretariat on his assessment as yet. This would have given us an objective analysis of the situation on ground. The African Union is also sending a High Level Panel to Libya to make serious efforts for a peaceful end to the crisis there. We must stress the importance of political efforts, including those of the Secretary-General's Special Envoy, to address the situation.

3. The resolution that the Council has adopted today authorizes far reaching measures under Chapter VII of the UN Charter with relatively little credible information on the situation on the ground in Libya. We also do not have clarity about details of enforcement measures, including who and with what assets will participate and how these measures will be exactly carried out. It is, of course, very important that there is full respect for sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Libya.

4. Mr. President, the financial measures that are proposed in the resolution could impact, directly or through indirect routes, ongoing trade and investment activities of a number of member-states thereby adversely affecting the economic interests of the Libyan people and others dependent on these trade and economic ties. Moreover, we had to ensure that the measures will mitigate and not exacerbate an already difficult situation for the people of Libya. Clarity in the resolution on any spill-over affects of these measures would have been very important.

5. Mr. President, we have abstained on the resolution in view of the above. I would like to re-emphasize that India continues to be gravely concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Libya and calls on the Libyan authorities to cease fire, protect the civilian population and address the legitimate demands of the Libyan people.

I thank you.
701. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, at the commemorative ceremony of the “International Day of Nowruz”.

Mr. President,

I am deeply honoured and privileged to participate today in the Nowruz celebrations - the first day in Persian New Year, at the United Nations.

Mr. President,

Zoroastrianism is one of the world’s most ancient faiths. It has been a belief of deep spiritual ethos and had a tremendous impact on humanity over millennia. Its contributions to the cause of world peace, brotherhood and understanding are particularly noteworthy.

One of its most well-known traditions is the celebration of Nowruz. This traditional practice dates back to more than 3 millennia. Interestingly, it is, even today, observed with the same traditional fervor and zeal in our part of the world.

We are particularly proud of the Zoroastrian community in India, which the Chef de Cabinet Under Secretary General Mr. Vijay Nambiar mentioned earlier. We call them the Parsi Community. This community has been justly acclaimed globally for their industry, positive outlook, entrepreneurship and robust vision.

The names of Tata, Godrej, Wadia are not only household names in India but also globally, thanks to the entrepreneurial ability of this community.

I also want to tell my distinguished colleagues, the Permanent Representatives of countries, who drive beautiful Jaguar cars. It is a Parsi community in India, the house of Tata, which has invested and now own this brand along with the Land Rover. I encourage you to use this car. This is an excellent piece of British engineering and Indian civilization.

Zoroastrianism has further enriched the composite culture of India and has been in the forefront of the effort to promote the material, spiritual and scientific advancement of our nation.

The four canons of Zoroastrianism: unity, non-violence, self-sacrifice and righteous life, articulate the theme of tolerance and understanding which are necessary to increase amity and mutual understanding in the world.

Mr. President,
For an agrarian country like India, the lives of more than 600 million people revolve around agriculture. Nowruz, which is the first day of advent of spring, is of particular importance to them.

It brings with it hope, gaiety and festivity. These festivities usher in the belief of blessings of Gods for good harvests and fertility of the land. In fact different parts of India celebrate these spring festivities with traditional fervor and passion.

Such celebrations go a long way in creating as well as strengthening an environment of tolerance, brotherhood, respect and understanding.

Regrettably, the advancements in the field of science and technology as well as economic development, has not resulted in commensurate progress in social, ethical, moral and cultural spheres.

Today the international community is confronted with enormous challenges of peace and security, rise of extremism and intolerance, incitement of hatred and violence, disparities and deprivation. These challenge the very foundation of our society and international community.

Occasions like Nowruz, help us ponder over the value of strengthening global peace through mutual understanding and respect for cultures and heritage of different societies.

After all, compassion, mercy and tolerance are the common values and beliefs among all the faiths and traditions of the world.

At the United Nations, we have to encourage the promotion of universal values and tradition, to learn from them and implement them for the greater good of mankind.

Let me commend this initiative which is worthy and timely.

Let me conclude by wishing all of you a very happy Nowruz — “Nowruz Mubarak”.

702. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN

Thank you, Mr. President.

Peacebuilding and peacekeeping-peacebuilding are and will remain core activities of the Council in the immediate future. Let me, therefore, begin by thanking you for organising this meeting today on Post-Conflict Peacebuilding.

The results of these initiatives will play a key role in determining the relevance and effectiveness of the Council and of the larger United Nations system in the decades to come.

2. Let me also thank the Peacebuilding Commission for its detailed and insightful report and Ambassador Peter Witting under whose able stewardship the report was prepared and who has presented the report to us today. I also thank Ambassador Gasana for his statement. The Peacebuilding Commission, in its Organisational Committee and Country Specific Configurations, has a central position in the global peacebuilding architecture. The working relationship of this Commission, the newest organ of the UN, with the Security Council and the General Assembly is thus of critical importance.

3. My delegation has been a member of the Commission since its inception. It favours close, regular and substantive interaction between the Commission, the Council and the Assembly so that the United Nations can deliver as one when it comes to setting the peacebuilding agenda.

4. Mr President, peacebuilding is a cooperative effort. The United Nations requires working with other peacebuilding actors, including international financial institutions. My delegation has noted the growing focus on the special characteristics of post-conflict situations amongst an increasing number of development and economic actors. This, we expect, will have a positive impact on peacebuilding and on the growing need for resources for peacebuilding initiatives.

5. In an arena with many players, the United Nations must, however, be conscious of the need for it to retain the high ground in developing the normative basis for peacebuilding. An international effort is underway to understand the linkages between development, peace and security and to suggest solutions.
The Council itself debated this issue 6 weeks ago. We must ensure that this effort is able to resist the temptation to create a new peacebuilding orthodoxy. Many of these efforts end up talking down rather than of listening. This must be avoided at all costs. 6. My delegation stresses that the United Nations must play the central role in identifying a common peacebuilding vision, in bringing together the various actors and in acting as bridge between national authorities and various peacebuilding and development actors.

7. Some of these issues were addressed by the Working Group on Lessons Learned, an effort with which we have been associated. We believe that its conclusions inter alia in relation to the role of the Peacebuilding Commission in marshalling resources, on the imperative of national dialogue in post-conflict situations and the role of youth, are particularly relevant to the further evolution of peacebuilding.

8. Mr. President, peacebuilding emerged from peacekeeping. The United Nations has made enormous investments of manpower and resources in “multidimensional” PKOs mandated to operate in “fragile” states. We are now in the midst of another paradigmatic shift into peacekeeping-peacebuilding operations or purely peacebuilding operations.

9. India brings to this table the experience of almost sixty years of peacekeeping. We have contributed more peacekeepers to more peacekeeping operations than any other nation. We have also participated in every type of peacekeeping operation – from truce supervision to the current generation of purely peacebuilding initiatives.

10. Based on its experience, my delegation stresses that peacekeeping is early peacebuilding. Our peacekeepers in UNTAC, UNOSOM II, MONUC, UNMIS, UNMIL, and MINUSTAH have been early peacebuilders. We believe that the process of implementing a peace agreement must run along with the provision of humanitarian and emergency assistance, with the creation of political institutions that can resolve conflicts, reconcile parties to conflicts and allow dialogue between the state and the governed, with Security Sector Reform, with administrative and economic restructuring, with empowering the weak, building a human rights culture and resuming economic activity.

11. Mr. President, national ownership is the key determinant of success in peacebuilding. The international community can encourage, motivate and facilitate. It cannot solve those problems which require national will and national ownership.

12. We believe, however, that the international community has the duty to make available appropriate capacities to national authorities. The solutions and capacities that these authorities seek are those that have been tried and tested in similar environments. Countries like India have successfully surmounted many of the challenges that have produced these conflicts. The shared colonial legacy that produced these challenges and our experience, and that of other nations who faced similar difficulties, has particular relevance to the problem at hand. The success of the all-female Indian Formed Police Unit in Liberia is a good example of how the capacities and experience in the global South can be leveraged in peacebuilding situations.

13. It is also the responsibility of the international community to provide the resources. Complex peacekeeping operations usually have a life span that is measured in years. Peacebuilding operations will last for decades and require a predictable and appropriate level of resources over extended periods.

14. Mr. President, India strongly supports the role and relevance of regional players in post-conflict scenarios. We are greatly encouraged by the African Union’s efforts to develop Post-Conflict Reconstruction capacities. The success of NEPAD and the African Peer Review Mechanism has many lessons that are relevant to the strengthening of national ownership.

15. Mr. President, the Secretariat and the Funds and Programmes must do more to become an effective player. Skill sets and expertise that are relevant to these societies need to be augmented. I have in an earlier debate spoken about the ponderous nature of the UN bureaucracy and pointed out that an organization that takes up to 200 days to fill positions in the field can hardly be a model worthy of emulation when it comes to institution-building.

16. Mr. President, in concluding, I would like to point out that India has engaged bilaterally with a number of nations on the peacekeeping-peacebuilding agenda in response to national requirements. We also have contributed, along with my fellow delegations from Brazil and South Africa, through plurilateral mechanisms such as the IBSA Trilateral initiative that is active in peacebuilding.

17. We are committed to this process and will continue to remain fully engaged.

Thank you, Mr. President.

◆◆◆◆
703. Explanation of Vote on Cote d'Ivoire resolution by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative, at Security Council.

Thank you, Mr. President.

India is seriously concerned at the prevailing situation in Cote d’Ivoire since the presidential elections last year. We have consistently held that both parties in Cote d’Ivoire should exercise maximum restraint and respect the outcome of the elections. We have urged the parties to ensure that there is no violence because it harms the wellbeing of the Ivoirian people and distracts from the main task of economic development, social cohesion and national reconciliation. During the last three months, we have supported all efforts to resolve the current problem peacefully and through dialogue. To that end, we have supported the efforts of the ECOWAS and African Union to find a political solution leading to restoration of democracy and will of the Ivoirian people at the earliest. With that objective in mind, we have voted in favour of the resolution today.

2. We want to put on record that the UN peacekeepers should draw their mandate from the relevant resolutions of the Security Council. They cannot be made instruments of regime change. Accordingly, the United Nations Operation in Cote d’Ivoire (UNOCI) should not become a party to the Ivoirian political stalemate. The UNOCI should also not get involved in a civil war but carry out its mandate with impartiality and ensuring safety and security of peacekeepers and civilians. In this context, we have noted that a UNOCI helicopter was fired at by the Forces Republicaines de Cote d’Ivoire (FRCI) on 29th March 2011. We call upon all parties to respect UNOCI’s military impartiality.

3. The Council has heard about various allegations of serious crimes committed against civilians in Cote d’Ivoire. There should be no a priori presumption about nature of these alleged crimes. Each allegation has to be investigated on a case-by-case basis by the competent national bodies and further action taken as per relevant laws.

4. We also want to place on report our growing concern at the tendency to hurry the process of adopting resolutions. We think that there should be enough time for deliberations and consultations with all concerned countries. In situations, such as those envisaged in the present resolution, it is imperative that Troop Contributing Countries be first consulted on the mandate of the UN peacekeepers. Such consultations are necessary not only for well considered decisions but also for an effective implementation of the mandate.
5. We also want to reiterate that India is not a member of the International Criminal Court. Of the 192 members of the United Nations, only 114 are members of the ICC. 5 of the 15 members of the Security Council, including 3 Permanent Members, are not parties to the Rome Statute. It is also important to note that there are clear legal provisions concerning state-parties to the Rome Statute. There are also guidelines for a state, which is not a party to the Rome Statute, to accept the exercise of jurisdiction by the ICC. These provisions and guidelines should be followed without exception. It merits underlining that there is no mandate in this resolution for the Security Council to refer the situation in Cote d’Ivoire to the ICC.

Thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

New York, April 5, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

At the outset let me congratulate you on the assumption of the chairmanship of UN Disarmament Commission. I assure you of my delegation’s full support in the discharge of your responsibilities. Let me also appreciate the important contributions of the UN Secretary General and High Representative of the Secretary General for Disarmament Affairs to our debate.

India associates itself with the statement made by Indonesia on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

India attaches high importance to the UN disarmament machinery put in place by consensus by the 10th Special Session of the UN General Assembly devoted to disarmament. The UNDC forms a vital part of that machinery as the specialized deliberative organ. It offers Member States a unique opportunity to bridge differences and arrive at principles and recommendations capable of universal acceptance. India believes that the UNDC can play a central role in developing consensus on disarmament issues facing the international community.
Mr. Chairman,

With regard to Working Group I on “Recommendations for achieving the objective of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons” we have had extensive exchange of views both in the last cycle as well as in the last two years of this cycle. However, it has not been possible to arrive at a consensus on these recommendations, though we came close to doing so in 2008. India remains willing to engage constructively with a view to developing such consensus in this year’s meetings.

Nuclear disarmament remains the highest priority for India and the Non-Aligned Movement. India has been consistent in its support for global, complete and verifiable nuclear disarmament. In 1988, Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi presented an Action Plan for a Nuclear-Weapon-Free and Non-Violent World Order to the Third Special Session of the UN on Disarmament. The Action Plan postulated a nuclear weapon free world in stages by 2010. The end of the Cold War kept alive the hope that we will be able to reach that goal but it was not to be. We are nowhere near to attaining that goal today than we were in 1988. The imperative need to move towards the goal of complete elimination of nuclear weapons remains as valid today as it was two decades back. We welcome the high level reaffirmations of this need in the recent past.

In June 2008, on the twentieth anniversary of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan, Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh asked others to join India in taking the critical first step - a commitment, preferably a binding legal commitment through an international instrument, to eliminate nuclear weapons within a time bound framework. Other leaders have also expressed their commitment to seek the goal of global zero.

India believes that nuclear disarmament can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework for achieving global and non-discriminatory nuclear disarmament. We also believe that progressive steps for the de-legitimization of nuclear weapons are essential to achieving the goal of their complete elimination. Measures to reduce nuclear dangers arising from accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons, increasing restraints on the use of nuclear weapons, de-alerting of nuclear weapons are pertinent in this regard.

India’s resolutions in the First Committee on a “Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons”, “Reducing Nuclear Dangers” give expression to some of these steps and have justifiably found support from a large number of countries. These steps were also part of a Working Paper presented by India at the 2007 session of the Disarmament Commission. The intent of the Working Paper, which reflects the spirit and substance of the Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan, was to stimulate debate and discussion on nuclear disarmament.
Mr. Chairman, the countries with the largest nuclear arsenals bear a special responsibility for progress on nuclear disarmament. In this regard we welcome the ratification of the new START agreement between the US and Russia. The two still hold more than 90% of the nuclear weapons in the world and the new START is a step in the right direction. We believe that there is need for a meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines.

Nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation are mutually reinforcing processes. We believe that the expansion of nuclear energy and reduction of proliferation risks must go hand in hand. The possibility of nuclear material falling into the hands of terrorists is real and could have catastrophic consequences. We are happy that our resolution on this issue entitled “Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction” is adopted by consensus in the UNGA every year.

Mr. Chairman,

Working Group II on “Elements of a draft Declaration of the 2010s as the Fourth Disarmament Decade” saw substantive discussions on the revised draft last year though consensus again eluded us. We hope that the discussions this year will see greater convergence of views and we will be able to achieve consensus on this important item.

The draft declaration should reflect the aspirations of the international community in the field of disarmament. We should aim at finding consensus on elements that will be of enduring validity, that uphold the priority for nuclear disarmament and complete elimination of all weapons of mass destruction, that address other dimensions of global security including space security, and that strengthen the international framework for addressing issues related to conventional arms, including small arms and light weapons and preventing their use by terrorists. As is its tradition, the UNDC should focus on these issues of security taking into account global interdependence of peoples and nations.

Mr. Chairman,

The third item on our agenda is “Practical confidence building measures in the field of conventional weapons”. This issue was also deliberated upon in two previous cycles of UNDC’s work, in 2001-03 and 2006-08. Although we are skeptical of how much progress can be achieved in the short time available this year given that we have not deliberated the issue in this cycle, we are ready for substantive deliberations on the issue.
Mr. Chairman,

In conclusion, I would like to reiterate that UNDC is an important part of the multilateral disarmament machinery. My delegation is committed to working constructively in the coming weeks for the success of this session of UNDC.

Thank you.

705. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on Haiti in the Security Council.

New York, April 6, 2011.

Thank you, Excellency.

First of all, I would like to congratulate His Excellency President Juan Santos on presiding over the Security Council’s Open Debate today. It is a matter of great satisfaction that Secretary General Ban Ki-moon and UN’s Special Envoy President Clinton as also President Garcia Preval of Haiti, the Foreign Minister of Colombia, the Vice Minister of Brazil and the Minister of State of UK are in our midst today. We appreciate their taking time off to address us on the situation in Haiti. Their participation in today’s debate underlines their commitment to the cause of Haiti. We have benefited a great deal from their views.

2. Mr. President, the Security Council along with the other organs of the UN system has continued to pay attention to the situation in Haiti by regular meetings and, in this context, we are glad that the Colombian Presidency of the Council has organized today’s Open Debate. We hope that sustained engagement of the international community and this Council in developments in Haiti will reassure not only the people and government of Haiti but also bring about greater coherence in the efforts of multilateral agencies and bilateral partners in the assistance of the Haitian authorities.

3. Mr. President, we all know well the extent of devastation that was caused in Haiti by the earthquake, which took the lives of some 300,000 and injured an equal number. While Haiti was still battling to overcome this disaster, an outbreak of cholera epidemic further aggravated an already grim situation. Amidst all this, the country plunged into a political crisis with a series of electoral disputes in Presidential and Legislative elections. Return of erstwhile Haitian leaders from exile seems to add to political tension.
4. This year too Haiti will face testing times with change in government and challenge of sustaining the recovery efforts. It is a matter of satisfaction that preliminary results of re-election held last month have been announced and Mr. Michel Martelly declared the winner. It is our hope that the final result of the presidential run-off would be announced soon and all political actors in Haiti will accept the result. In this connection, we note with appreciation the role played by regional organizations, particularly the Organization of American States (OAS) in resolving the electoral disputes in the first phase of presidential elections.

5. It is critical that the transition of power is smooth. We also hope the political leadership in Haiti will show maturity at this difficult time and live up to the expectations of their people.

6. Mr. President, Haiti requires continued and sustained support of the international community in its national efforts towards long-term recovery, reconstruction and development. With nearly 680,000 persons still living in camps, millions living in extremely difficult conditions, lack of access to clean water, sanitation and other basic services, the need of the hour is not only solidarity and commitment but also acceleration of the pace of reconstruction efforts. Simultaneously, it is also necessary to focus on governmental reforms towards good governance, rule of law and institution building in a process owned and led by Haiti.

7. Better coordination between aid agencies and donors with the Government of Haiti requires no emphasis. This would not only avoid duplication but also direct the aid to sectors considered most necessary by the Haitian government and people. The various UN agencies also have to work hard towards improving Haiti’s technical capacity to fully and properly utilize the aid.

8. Mr. President, India has made a modest contribution to the efforts of the Haitian authorities to deal with the situation there. In the immediate aftermath of the earthquake, India made a cash contribution of US$ 5 million to the Government of Haiti towards relief measures as a token of our solidarity with the people of Haiti. India also contributed US$ 500,000 to Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) that was put to good use in the earliest stages of recovery work in Haiti. We have also pledged to reconstruct one of the Government ministries to be identified by the Government of Haiti and we are awaiting an indication as to which building we should prepare to construct.

9. In recognizing the need to provide basic amenities – shelter, drinking water and sanitation to the Haitian people, we have joined Brazil and South Africa in expanding our IBSA, the India-Brazil-South Africa, Trust Fund’s waste management project in Haiti, both in its area of coverage and scope of handling different types of waste. IBSA is spending over US$ 2 million in this effort and for reconstruction of a community health centre in Haiti.
10. Mr. President, we highly commend and support the role played by MINUSTAH peacekeepers in the humanitarian and recovery efforts in aid of the local authorities in Haiti. We are proud of their sterling efforts, both on its civil side as well as the military and police side, in the immediate aftermath of the disastrous earthquake, despite the tremendous losses that they themselves suffered. We are also happy to note the important role played by MINUSTAH in ensuring peaceful run-off of elections in March 2011. I also recall the contributions made by the Indian police officers deployed with MINUSTAH, presently numbering 470 in three contingents, two of which were deployed by India after the earthquake at the request of the United Nations.

11. We hope, Mr. President, that this year Haiti with support from the international community will not only recover faster from the effects of last year’s disasters, but also show its political resilience to achieve much needed reforms to improve the living conditions of the Haitian population. India is committed to our collective efforts in achieving these goals.

Thank you, Mr. President.

706. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the Meeting of the Ad
hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly.

New York, April 13, 2011.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

I would like to register my delegation’s appreciation to the President of the General Assembly for taking time off from his very busy schedule and sharing with us his views on the role and authority of the General Assembly. His insightful views are very helpful in our present endeavour and the fact that he is sitting through this interaction is a pointer to the importance that he personally attaches to our work here.

Let me also start by placing on record my delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by the two Co-Chairs (Ambassador Camillo M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius ekuolis of Lithuania) to convene this meeting this afternoon.
We feel that it is useful for the Ad Hoc Working Group to dedicate one entire meeting to focus exclusively on the ways and means to implement relevant resolutions on General Assembly revitalization that have not been implemented till date, or if I may add to that, which are not being fully implemented or may I say implemented only in a proforma manner.

My delegation recalls the last meeting of our Group held on 14 March. On that occasion there was general consensus on the need for a comprehensive review of the inventory on the status of implementation of resolutions on GA revitalization. This provides a good basis for our deliberations today.

Co-Chairs,

We must keep in mind that the resolutions of the General Assembly on its revitalization have special significance both for the member states and the international community. Depending on the willingness of the member-states, such resolutions have the potential to act as the catalyst for bringing about transformative change in the working of the Assembly. The overriding consideration should be the need to continue the focus on those measures that restore and enhance the role and authority of the General Assembly.

In this regard, Co-Chairs, my delegation’s position is well known. India has consistently held the view that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and in spirit.

The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. This was the role intended for the Assembly in Article 10 of the UN Charter, namely that it discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, the ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, ICJ as well as the Secretariat.

There are two specific provisions in GA resolution 64/301 that address the subject matter of our discussions. And so it is necessary for us to be guided in our task by both in equal measure.

Paragraph 2 (a) tasks our Group to “identify further ways to enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, inter alia, by building on previous resolutions and evaluating the status of their implementation.” The responsibility placed on the Group is then fleshed out by paragraph 3 which calls, inter alia, for “a comprehensive review of the inventory” and “requests the Secretary-General to submit an update of the provisions of the General Assembly resolutions on revitalization that have been addressed to the Secretariat for implementation that have not yet been implemented, with an indication of the constraints and reasons that are behind any lack of implementation, for further consideration by the Ad Hoc Working Group.”

Therefore, it is our considered view that the key aspect is to have an assessment of and I underline “the constraints and reasons that are behind any lack of implementation.”

An assessment as I have just elaborated can be done in many ways. But we have to choose the methodology that is best suited and in keeping with the essential nature of the matter under scrutiny, namely resolutions related to General Assembly revitalization.

Co-Chairs,

Resolutions on General Assembly revitalization are the preserve of and fall within the domain of the Assembly itself. The resolutions may have originated from one group of member-states, but once adopted they belong to the entire membership.

I went through the inventory and I found that on working methods there are 72 provisions in the various resolutions, on the selection of the Secretary General there are 7 provisions and on the role and authority of the General Assembly there are 38 provisions. I believe our initial task today, distinguished Co-chairs is to focus on that last segment relating to the role and authority of the General Assembly with 38 provisions that have not yet been implemented.

It becomes very crucial therefore to muster the political will at the stage of implementation of these resolutions.

But we are required to look into the constraints if any and some questions suggest themselves. And I have tried to list some of them in my own mind and I will share those with you. Even if some of these resolutions were pursued by only a group, why were they not pursued? Is it because the group concerned lost interest in those resolutions having got them adopted in the General Assembly. That’s a question. Secondly, is it because some of these resolutions for instance give the impression of not being doable or they pose serious issues in implementation? If so, why was the issue of doability or implementability not addressed prior to the resolution having been adopted? And finally, most important of all, did we lose the political will or did we not summon the requisite political will to proceed with those resolutions?

Co-Chairs,

Paragraph 3 of Resolution 64/301 places on the Secretary-General a clear responsibility to give his views. We should therefore hear from the Secretariat their assessment.
Finally, let me also reiterate that my delegation attaches importance to the ongoing processes of revitalization of the General Assembly, including the various aspects of strengthening of its procedures, working methods, documentation and also ensuring due follow up.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Some comments were addressed to my delegation by my distinguished colleague from Algeria in the first part of his statement which represented his national position. He enquired and I respond to that, about issues relating to the improvement in the working methods of the Security Council, presumably because we have the privilege of serving on the Council and are also a member of the Non-Aligned Group.

And I want to assure my distinguished colleague that the issues relating to the improvement of the working methods of the Security Council is not only an issue that is being followed by us vigorously within what has come to be known as the E-10 or the elected ten members of the Security Council, but is also the subject of discussion between us and the permanent members of the Security Council and in fact is also getting attention in other groups. I would certainly utilize the opportunity of another meeting to brief the members of the NAM group along with other NAM members on the Council to have a fuller discussion. I feel to go into the discussion now may not be the most appropriate thing to do.

But let me conclude distinguished Co-chairs by reiterating India’s constructive support and participation in this present exercise.

Thank You.
707. Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at Informal Interactive Panel Discussion on “Human Security” at the UN General Assembly.

New York, April 15, 2011.

Mr. Moderator,

Thank you for giving me the floor. I have the benefit of speaking rather late in the afternoon after a full day’s discussion on the subject. I am not sure whether I have much to add, especially after all the nitty gritty which have been raised by the panelist as well as my distinguished colleagues here.

Mr. Moderator,

I have the privilege of speaking when his Excellency, the President of the General Assembly is here. I also have the privilege of speaking at the time, when after some six odd years we are making attempts to reinvigorate our efforts to try, at least, to reach the definitional aspects and what Human security is all about.

And for this I wish to acknowledge the work done by Ambassador Takasu. I have little doubt that his personal invigoration of the processes has been very much responsible.

Today, we have with us former President, President Obasanju and former speaker of the South African Parliament, Dr Frene Ginwala, and all the other distinguish panelist here to address us and educate us on the way forward.

I want to be relatively brief and say just a few things. First and foremost, I wish to say that we have been hearing a lot of debate over a number of years, on what really could constitute “Human Security” for the purposes of an international definition which would allow us to take things forward at the level of United Nations.

For most of us and most of the international community there is a good deal of clarity of what it should entail and we also need to understand quite clearly what it should not entail. In general, these are well known facts to all of us, sometime stated and sometime not stated.

From our perspective, the issue of “Human Security” needs to eschew the idea of interventionist approach. For us, it is quite clear and we need to work within the framework of the Charter, and principles of state sovereignty, etc; which are the bedrock of the multilateral and international relations in our world today. The definition also means to recognize the primacy of the States in taking care of issue of the human security for their population.
Let me rephrase this a little bit. The concepts need to be people-centric and it needs to encompass multi-dimensional and comprehensive parameters with development being the central and very big important component.

On the international scale, we need to recognize that today’s world which has achieved a fair deal of globalization; we are really talking about fairly complex situation with linkages at the national, regional and international level.

All of these demand that we work together in collaborative fashion, in which we are willing partners and in which we sit with the other parties concerned in the international communities and try and see what we can do to further work for the overall betterment of humankind and especially those in vulnerable situations across the world today.

Having said this, I just want to take a minute to say that is my country where democracy is the bedrock of our political fabric; where freedom is the word which is embossed in the brightest of colours and the brightest of lights; it is our national endeavour that we work towards inclusivity.

Our latest decadal census shows that we are a country with 17.5 % of the human population; we are about 1.21 billion and it is absolutely essential that every single Indian must achieve a quality of life which allows him or her to have a decent standard of life.

Already 17.5 % of the world is our responsibility, which is something we not only take seriously but is our national priority. Coupled with that, we have a country which believes that whatever we have for ourselves, we should try to the extent possible, share with others, especially, our brethren in countries where developing priorities are of an extremely high order and where vulnerability are great.

I want to end here and I want to assure you, Mr. Moderator, the panelist and Ambassador Takasu that we will be constructively engaged in ensuring that we have used six years, but we try and move forward quickly apace so that we can try and bring this thing in a conceptual manner to a closure and work forward for its implementation for the benefit of humankind.

Thank you very much Mr. Moderator.
India has supported Resolution 1977 extending the mandate of the 1540 Committee for a period of 10 years until 25 April 2021. This extended timeline has been included with a view to help plan on long-term and predictable basis assistance and cooperation programmes for States requesting such assistance from the 1540 Committee.

India has expressed its unwavering commitment to global efforts for preventing the proliferation of WMD and their means of delivery. India recognizes that proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery is a major challenge facing the international community. As a victim of terrorism for over three decades, we are fully cognizant of the catastrophic dangers that transfers of WMDs to non-state and terrorists could entail. Clandestine proliferation networks have led to insecurity for all and must not be allowed to reappear. The international community must join hands in eliminating the risks relating to sensitive materials and technologies falling into hands of terrorists and non-state actors. The focus on non-state actors should in no way diminish state accountability in combating terrorism, dismantling its support infrastructure or its linkages with WMD.

India had therefore supported the general objectives of UNSCR 1540. The resolution is in line with our own General Assembly resolution “Measures to prevent terrorists from gaining access to WMD”, adopted by consensus every year since it was first introduced in 2002.

India has enacted a number of effective laws and regulations and has put in place institutionalized administrative mechanisms to prohibit WMD access to terrorists and non state actors. After the adoption of UNSCR 1540, India took additional steps to further strengthen its existing legislative and regulatory mechanism for exercising controls over WMDs and their means of delivery. The WMD Act was enacted in June 2005. The Act provides for an integrated and over-arching legislation on prohibiting unlawful activities in relation to WMDs, their delivery systems and related materials, equipment and technologies. Amendments to the 1992 Foreign Trade (Development and Regulation) Act passed in 2010 further strengthened our national export control system. India is committed to maintaining effective national export controls consistent with the highest international standards and is prepared to make its contribution as a full member of the respective multilateral export control regimes.

India has fulfilled its obligations under the CWC including destruction of its chemical weapons stockpiles in advance of the timeline agreed under the Convention. India is also a State Party to the 1972 Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention (BTWC) and participates in the activities under the Convention.

India filed its report on UNSCR 1540 in November 2004 and has submitted periodic updates. An Indian Expert participated in the work of the 1540 Committee between 2007 and 2009. India has also expressed readiness to offer assistance to other countries in capacity building and in fulfilling their obligations under UNSCR 1540. India has also participated in 1540-related activities such as a Workshop on UNSCR 1540 implementation held jointly by US and Sri Lanka in Colombo in June 2009.

We welcomed President Obama’s initiative in convening a Summit on Nuclear Security in Washington in April 2010. India welcomed the adoption of the Summit Communiqué and the Work Plan which establishes a common platform for all participating states. We see the NSS process as building pragmatic and purposeful frameworks setting benchmarks and standards and in fostering confidence for international cooperation to supplement and not replace existing multilateral institutions such as the IAEA. India believes that the primary responsibility for ensuring nuclear security rests at the national level, but national responsibility must be accompanied by responsible behavior by States. All States should scrupulously abide by their international obligations.

Measures for the implementation of the resolution should be undertaken by the states based on their national practices and processes. The 1540 resolution has contributed to greater awareness amongst States on the need for effective measures at the national level to prevent terrorists and non-state actors gaining access to sensitive materials and technologies. Reporting by states of their implementation measures facilitates the overview of the implementation by the 1540 Committee.

Assistance and cooperation for States requesting such assistance is a key element of the implementation process. Such assistance programmes should be suited to the specific national or regional requirements. The 1540 Committee has also established cooperative relations with several international organizations. Consistent with their respective mandates, the IAEA and the OPCW can contribute to the objectives of the 1540 resolution. We also feel that the full implementation of the Communiqué and work Plan of the Nuclear Security Summit can also contribute to our common goals.
India remains committed to achieving the objectives of the 1540 resolution. India is also prepared to render necessary assistance to states requesting such assistance in fulfilling their obligations under the resolution. We hope that the extended deadline will also encourage the Committee to take forward its work in a spirit of transparency and cooperation so that all member states feel that they have a common stake in the successful implementation of UNSC Resolution 1540.

709. Statement by Acting Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri on the ‘Situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian Question’ in the Security Council.

New York, April 21, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I would like to join other colleagues in thanking Under Secretary General Mr. Lynn Pascoe for his comprehensive briefing. I would also like to thank the Permanent Representative of Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine for their statements which we have carefully noted.

Mr. President,

2. The situation in the Middle East continues to be grim with no sign of movement in peace talks. The expectation that Quartet would meet on 15th April and come up with a statement to enable both Palestinians and Israelis to resume talks has again not materialized. Lack of movement in even holding of talks is also contributing to increase in violence.

3. Moreover, it is imperative that hopes raised for a Palestinian State during last two years are not lost. The state building efforts of the Palestinian Authority have received commendations from various quarters including financial institutions like IMF and World Bank. The April 2011 report of the UN Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process is the latest to endorse the achievements of the Palestinian Authority.

4. The report makes it amply clear that the progress made in rule of law and human rights, livelihoods and productive sectors, education and culture, health, social protection, and infrastructure and water are now sufficient for a functioning government of a State. The Palestinian Authority has, therefore, shown its determination to persist with Prime Minister Fayyad’s Plan for achieving statehood. As we approach September 2011, these developments on the governance front should inject a sense of urgency for international efforts to resume peace talks.

Mr. President,

5. The main hindrance for resumption of peace talks is lack of mutual trust. Statements on existence of Israel, emanating from different sections of the Palestinian society, now and then only serve to aggravate this lack of mutual trust. Perception that these statements and continuing rocket attacks from the Gaza Strip against Israel increase the vulnerability of Israel needs to be viewed in this context. The recent spate of violence, including retaliation on Gaza after an attack on a school bus in Southern Israel, clearly shows the divisions that exist. These events deserve our strongest condemnation. We also condemn the killing of abducted Italian national in Gaza last week.

6. While we commend achievements in the territories administered by the Palestinian Authority, it is equally important to note the reason for the deplorable situation in Gaza, where even essentials are difficult to come by. The blockade on Gaza is adversely affecting the population who barely has access to essential commodities. The access of Gaza to essential commodities is imperative as it is also driving militant elements to vent their frustration through violence. Given this situation, humanitarian assistance to Gaza and its delivery should not exacerbate the precarious security situation. It would be prudent if established channels for delivery of humanitarian assistance are used. At the same time these channels must step up the efficacy of their delivery systems and look at stronger and more effective mechanisms for delivering humanitarian assistance.

7. We concur with the sense of the international community that freezing of settlement activity in the Palestinian territories could enable the peace talks to resume. Lack of unity among Palestinian factions is another major issue. We note the recent initiatives aimed at promoting intra-Palestinian unity and hope they would result in a meaningful rapprochement among various Palestinian groups.

8. Equally important are other issues enmeshed to the conflict relating to Arab lands that remain under Israeli occupation. Progress in the Lebanese and Syrian tracks are core to achievement of a comprehensive and durable peace in the region. In a region witnessing protests movements all around, continuing impasse in peace talks could have destabilizing effect on a much larger area. If the peace talks do not recommence quickly, we are afraid, unilateral steps by the parties would only increase the distance between them and further complicate the situation. We, therefore, call on the Quartet members to intensify their collective and individual efforts to break the stalemate.

9. Mr President, India has a long-standing tradition of solidarity with the Palestinian people. India has supported the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Roadmap and relevant UN Security Council Resolutions.

10. India has been contributing to the capacity and institution building of the Palestinian people with its material and technical assistance programmes. India has also extended assistance through IBSA forum. India is also contributing US $1 million to UNRWA continuing our solidarity with the Palestinian people in their pursuit of legitimate goals and quest for development based on dignity and self-reliance.

11. In conclusion, Mr. President, let me quote from a letter our first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru wrote on 11 July 1947 to Albert Einstein. He wrote: “I do not myself see how this problem can be resolved by violence and conflict on one side or the other. Even if such violence and conflict achieve certain ends for the moment, they must necessarily be temporary. I do earnestly hope that some kind of agreement might be arrived at between the Arabs and the Jews. I do not think even an outside power can impose its will for long or enforce some new arrangements against the will of the parties concerned”. These words were relevant more than 60 years back. They are even more relevant now. Agreement has to be reached between the parties through direct negotiations for it to be enduring.

12. To that end, we hope, parties will restart talks without further delay. Our expectation is that these talks would lead to a final and comprehensive resolution of the Middle East conflict, which has mired several generations in the region. We all owe to the future generations that they do not remain mired in this conflict. We, therefore, reiterate our call to both sides to show spirit of flexibility, compromise and political will to reach there.

Thank you, Mr. President.
710. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the United Nations
Security Council open briefing on the situation in Syria.

New York, April 27, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President,

We thank Under Secretary General Lynn Pascoe for his briefing on the situation in Syria.

Mr. President,

2. Syria has, historically and in contemporary times, been an important country in the Middle East. Its role in the Middle East peace process and in the stability of the wider region cannot be underemphasized. Thus, prolonged instability or unrest in Syria may have ramifications for the region and beyond.

3. Reports of violence during the recent demonstrations in parts of Syria resulting in the deaths of several demonstrators as well as security personnel are of concern. There have been reports of armed extremist elements mingling with the demonstrators and using the demonstrations to attack security personnel and damage government property and there is an apparent lack of information regarding those responsible for these violent attacks.

4. We have noted that the Government of Syria has appointed a Commission of Inquiry into the violence during the demonstrations and announced various measures to address the grievances of its people, including lifting of emergency laws, abolition of State Security Courts, transfer of investigative powers to the police etc. The Government has also announced procedures for organizing peaceful demonstrations. We hope these measures initiated by the Syrian government, as part of an inclusive process of political dialogue and reform, will initiate the process of meeting the aspirations of all sections of Syrian society.

5. As we deplore any violence from any quarter, the Council needs to make clear that it is the responsibility of sovereign states to respond to the aspirations of its people through administrative, political, economic and other measures. At the same time, it is for states to decide on the best course of action to maintain internal law and order and to prevent violence. The primary responsibility of the Council in this particular instance is to urge all sides to abjure violence in any form and to seek a resolution of grievances through peaceful means.
6. We believe regional and sub regional organizations have an important role to play in resolving the crisis in the region, including in Syria. It is essential that all efforts should be made to de-escalate tensions, rather than to exacerbate them. My delegation would support all measures designed to end violence and restore peace.

Thank you.

711. Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the Meeting of the Ad hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly.

New York, April 28, 2011.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record my delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by the two Co-Chairs (Ambassador Camillo M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius Eėkuolis of Lithuania) to convene this meeting to discuss the provisions concerning “working methods” in Resolution 64/301 on revitalization of the UN General Assembly.

The briefings by the Chair of the Second Committee, the Chair of the Informal Working Group on Documentation and Procedural Questions of the Security Council and the Secretariat are pertinent. We thank the Co-Chairs for their initiative in this regard.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

India has consistently held the view that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and in spirit.

The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues. This was the role intended for the Assembly in Article 10 of the UN Charter, namely that it discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, the ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, ICJ as well as the Secretariat.
Before I proceed to outline my delegation's views on the subjects under consideration in this meeting, let me state that we align ourselves with the statement that will be made by Algeria on behalf of the NAM.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In our view, the primacy of the Assembly flows from the universality of its membership as well as the diligent application of the principle of sovereign equality of all its members. Ownership therefore, of the Assembly's decisions and activities, is reflected in the degree of participation by member-states. So, if there is a foreboding sense of apathy towards the work done in the Assembly, the member-states are also partly to blame.

If the member-states, instead of engaging in substantive deliberations in the six main committees that could result in setting new norms, spend considerable resources on procedural issues they will only encourage the usurpation of their role by other institutions both within and outside the UN. A case in point is the agenda of the Assembly which contains a large number of items which have little or no bearing whatsoever with the most pressing contemporary concerns of relevance to all Member States as well as the international community as a whole. Similarly, there is an embarrassing reluctance to hold thematic debates on issues of relevance to the international community and of concern and interest to the Organization. In our view this is a matter of particular concern since outsourcing of such discussions, especially beyond the UN, militates against the notion of the Assembly's centrality to multilateralism.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

India is no stranger to the application of newer and modern technologies to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of electoral processes. In our considered view, the revitalization process of the General Assembly will benefit immensely if we are able to introduce those technologies that are efficient, and that ensure the security and confidentiality of the voting process.

In regard to the issue of the visibility and enhanced public awareness of the work of the General Assembly, our position is two-fold.

First, we, the member-states need to make the Assembly and its work more relevant to the evolving international system, in other words, the presence of political will to take concrete measures to reinforce the role and authority of the Assembly. We need to properly appreciate and then correctly situate the Assembly within the plurality of multilateral mechanisms that deal with global issues. Second, there are a number of best practices available in this regard in various international organizations, albeit on a smaller scale. Such best practices could be used as a guide to promote visibility and enhanced public awareness of the work of the General Assembly. To provide but one instance, we need to end the continuing anachronism of press briefings which remain off limits for delegates from various Permanent Missions accredited to the United Nations. In other words, this means, that while I can make a statement on the working of the UN General Assembly and other principal organs here at the UN headquarters, I cannot sit in as a silent observer in a press conference at the Dag Hammarskjold Library Auditorium!

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Before I conclude I would like to share my thoughts on the tasks being undertaken by the Informal Working Group on Documentation and Procedural Questions of the Security Council. I do not wish to repeat our position and demands in that respect. Rather, I wish to draw attention to the fact that despite years of efforts real progress in respect of improvements in the Security Council’s working methods has been minimal. Some permanent members continue to argue that reform of working methods cannot be discussed by non-Members. Even many decisions already taken by Council in Note S/2006/507 remain unimplemented. And there appears to be little appetite for the far-reaching reforms that the large majority is demanding.

This only strengthens our view that the many flaws in the Council’s working methods are only symptoms of a deeper malaise that lies in its structure and composition.

Clearly, genuine and lasting improvement of the working methods of the Council can only be possible as part of a comprehensive process of Security Council reform, based on both reform and expansion of its composition in permanent and non-permanent categories. Till there is a change in the real power structure of the Council i.e. its permanent membership, we cannot realistically expect the deep-seated changes that the large majority seeks.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Finally, let me also reiterate that my delegation attaches importance to the ongoing processes of revitalization of the General Assembly, including the various aspects of strengthening of its procedures, working methods, documentation and also ensuring due follow up. I would also like to reiterate India’s constructive support and participation in this present exercise. Thank you.

◆◆◆◆◆
Thank you, Mr. President.

I would like to thank the Prosecutor, Mr. Luis Moreno-Ocampo, for his briefing today. I have also taken note of his report to the Security Council submitted pursuant to paragraph 7 of Resolution 1970.

2. Mr. President, India, as you know, is not a signatory to the Rome Statute, and not a member of the International Criminal Court (ICC) for reasons that are well known. In our Explanation of Vote on Resolution 1970 on 26th February, I had noted that of the 192 members of the United Nations, only 114 are members of the ICC. 5 of the 15 members of the Council, including 3 Permanent Members, are not parties to the Rome Statute. But we had voted in favour of Resolution 1970 because several members of the Council, including our colleagues from Africa and the Middle East, believed that referral of the situation in Libya to the ICC would have the effect of immediate cessation of violence and restoration of calm and stability.

3. Unfortunately, the situation in Libya has continued to deteriorate and widespread violence continues. We remain seriously concerned at the developments in Libya and condemn the use of force against civilians. We reiterate our call to all parties to immediately cease attacks on civilians and engage in political dialogue to resolve the crisis. The longer the conflict continues, the greater the harm caused to the Libyan people, their economy and society.

4. Mr. President, we have noted that after his preliminary investigation, the Prosecutor, on the basis of available information, has decided that there are reasonable grounds to believe that crimes against humanity and war crimes have been committed and continue to be committed in Libya. We have also noted that the Office of the Prosecutor will submit its first application for an arrest warrant to Pre-Trial Chamber in the next weeks.

5. The Prosecutor should carry out a thorough and impartial investigation and not be influenced by non-judicial considerations. All those responsible for committing crimes, covered under the Rome Statute, should be held accountable, irrespective of which side to the conflict they may belong to and even if they have changed sides. Political considerations should not exonerate anybody from prosecution for the crimes committed. Any action by the ICC should fall strictly within the ambit of Resolution 1970, particularly paragraph 6 of the resolution that concerns the States which are not parties to the Rome Statute.

Thank you, Mr. President.
713. Statement by Acting Permanent Representative at the UN and Charge d'affaires, a.i Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the open debate of the UN Security Council on the Situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

New York, May 9, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I would like to join other colleagues in welcoming High Representative Valentin Inzko to the Council. I would thank him for the briefing and have noted his views on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina. We have noted the contents of his reports. His efforts deserve our support.

2. Mr. President, Bosnia-Herzegovina is a novel experiment in building a new nation from the rubbles of civil war that the peoples of former Yugoslavia had to endure during 1990s. It is never easy to build a multi-ethnic, multi-lingual, multi-cultural and multi-religious country. The problems that the High Representative has reported to us today are bound to be encountered on the path of building a nation inhabited by people of different faiths, ethnicities and languages. Representing a country of over 1.2 billion people with arguably the largest diversity, I commend the people of Bosnia-Herzegovina for their determination to form a nation based on unity in diversity and wish them success in their endeavours. Our experience has convinced us that though the path is long and arduous, the fruits are well-worth the efforts.

3. Resolution of the problems facing the Bosnian people calls for patience, determination and mutual accommodation. Unilateral actions, mutual suspicion and violation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace will only vitiate the political and social atmosphere and delay the achievement of their goals.

4. We would like to congratulate Bosnia and Herzegovina for the successful and smooth conduct of elections in October 2010 to elect the members of the Presidency and three Parliaments – one at the national level and one each for the two Entities. The parliament at the Entity-levels has begun to function. We hope the stalemate in formation of the Federation House of Peoples will also be resolved and the Parliamentary Assembly will be able to convene soon. Display of flexibility on the part of the parties and avoidance of divisive rhetoric would contribute towards this goal.

5. In this context, we welcome the High Representative’s assessment that the Presidency of Bosnia-Herzegovina has been operational and cooperation among the three members has improved in comparison to the previous mandate.

6. We are glad to note that EUFOR has been able to maintain a safe and secure environment in Bosnia-Herzegovina and support the views of the High Representative that its executive mandate should be extended.

7. The relations between India and Bosnia-Herzegovina, Mr President, are cordial and friendly, dating back to decades of friendship that we enjoyed with all the constituents of former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. There is enormous goodwill in India for the people of Bosnia-Herzegovina who share common values of respect for plurality, diversity and democracy. We have extended assistance in early nineties including despatching of Police Observers as part of the UN Mission to observe law and order. Recently, we have offered them help in establishing an IT centre. We stand ready to help in any other way that we can in the process of nation-building of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President,

I would like to thank the French Presidency for organizing this debate on Protection of Civilians, which, in our view, is very timely and relevant. I would also like to thank USGs Alain Le Roy and Valerie Amos and ASG Ivan Simonovic for their useful statements.

Mr. President,

It has been India’s consistent view that protection of its population is the foremost responsibilities of every state. One of the cardinal obligations under the Indian Constitution is that the right to life is one of the fundamental rights of all citizens, from which no derogation is permissible even in the times of emergency.

India’s commitment to this right is demonstrated at international level as well. India has, Mr President, contributed more troops to more peacekeeping operations than any other Member State. Our troops and policemen have been at the forefront of turning this Council’s word into deed. They have been protecting civilians much before this term came into common usage in this Council. More than five decades ago, Indian soldiers defended the civilians of Congo as part of the United Nations mission. Our contribution continues today in the DRC and other UN missions. We have remained at the cutting edge of many United Nations operations where civilians were under threat. Today we have a female Formed Police Unit, the first such formation composed entirely of women, in UNMIL. India, thus, brings to this table, Mr President, a quantum of experience in actually protecting civilians in peacekeeping missions that is unique in its relevance and in its variety and depth.

India has also participated actively in the normative debates in this Council and in the General Assembly on protection issues.

A recent seminar in New Delhi has, in this tradition of constructive engagement, broken new ground in drawing from the operational experience of peacekeepers in further evolution of this agenda.

Mr. President,

An enormous amount of the Council’s attention has been focused in the recent past on protection issues with the Council adopting a number of resolutions and statements on Protection of Civilians and on related issues of violence against women and children in situations of armed conflict. In bringing these issues within the purview of matters relating to international peace and security, the Council has placed protection issues squarely at the centre of the conflict resolution and peacekeeping agenda. This intense focus has, in some situations of conflict, shifted attention from the tried and tested methods of mediation and negotiation that are the staple of conflict resolution.

Protection of civilians when applied as a basis for Security Council action needs to respect the fundamental aspects of the UN Charter, including sovereignty and integrity of the Member States. Any decision to intervene that is associated with political motives distracts from the noble principles and needs to be avoided. Also, the response of the international community must be proportional to the threat, involve use the appropriate methods and make available adequate resources.

It is important that the principle of protecting civilians must be applied in a uniform manner. In case of a conflict, all sides need to abide by it. We must also be clear that the United Nations has a mandate to intervene only in situations where there is a threat to international peace and security. Any such decision by the Council to intervene must be based on credible and verifiable information. This requires much greater information flows when the Council is seized of a situation.
Mr. President,

In this context, I cannot but ask quis custodiet ipsos custodies? Who watches the guardians? There is a considerable sense of unease about the manner in which the humanitarian imperative of protecting civilians has been interpreted for actual action on the ground.

Mr. President,

Let me now turn to the question of Protecting Civilians in peacekeeping missions. The central issue in the implementation of the protection agenda, in the view of my delegation, is the question of resources. The resources that are being made available to current peacekeeping operations in order to fulfill these ambitious objectives are simply insufficient. It is also important that expectations from the peacekeepers are realistic and take into consideration the multiple resource constraints under which they function. MONUSCO, for example, has one peacekeeper for every 1,500 sq.km. The Mission lack enabling assets to allow the existing complement of peacekeepers to move and deploy in their areas of operation. The manner in which these missions are being made to operate on shoestring budgets and being constantly asked to do more with less does not augur well.

All the efforts of the Council to further the protection agenda will come to naught if this resource gap is not addressed.

Mr. President,

In concluding, my delegation would like to stress that force is not the only way of protecting civilians. It should only be the measure of last resort and be used only when all diplomatic and political efforts fail. There can be no substitute for national will and national efforts in creating an environment where civilians are secure. The efforts of the Council and of the international community require to be directed at assisting national authorities in developing these capabilities. This is the only sustainable method of protecting civilians because, as I said in the beginning, protection of its civilians is the foremost responsibility of every state.

Thank you.
715. Statement by Acting Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri in the General Assembly Debate of SAG’s Report to SG on Civilian Capacity Review.

Mr. President,

The need for enhanced civilian capacities in post conflict situations is an important imperative that must engage our attention in the United Nations. We are very appreciative of the work done by Mr. Jean-Marie Guehenno and the Senior Advisory Group in examining the issue in detail and making recommendations on how enhanced civilian capacities could be incorporated in the UN’s work in post conflict situations. We have noted that the Secretary-General has set up a Steering Committee to facilitate follow-up on this report and that his team will be led by Under-Secretary General Malcorra.

We are very appreciative of you, Mr. President, for organizing this debate in the General Assembly and initiating the process of inter-governmental discussions on the issues of civilian capacities in post conflict situation. Detailed discussions will have to take place in the C-34 and the Fifth committee so that their results are inclusive. This is particularly important as peacekeeping is one of the most important of UN’s enterprises. My delegation will engage itself in these deliberations in a pro-active and constructive manner to help realize goals of enhancing civilian capacities under the United Nations in post conflict situations.

Mr. President,

Peacekeeping has stood the test of time and will remain the critical pillar of UN conflict resolution activities for years to come. It also provides the umbrella for peace building.

The key requirement of today is that peacekeeping is adequately resourced and its structures strengthened. Post conflict situations and, indeed, those of prolonged conflict demand that serious attention is paid to building basic government structures and providing basic services, without which the chances of lapsing into conflict multiply manifold. The building of police capacities started many years back. Civilian capacities, including correctional services, legal and other services which form core government functions, are very important for ensuring basic administration and need to be incorporated into the UN ambit.

Their deployment will have a major impact on the staffing, resourcing and impact of peacekeeping missions but these must neither dilute nor detract from the requirements of peacekeeping. There will also be demands for beefing up headquarters for this enhanced civilian presence. But we need to eschew the setting up of large bureaucratic structures. Our focus must remain on the field.

Mr. President,

We are greatly encouraged by some of the fundamental assumptions of the Report, especially recognition of national ownership as the key determinant of success in preventing relapse into conflict and the importance of support to “core government functions”. It is critical that civilian capacity deployments are demand driven. Capacity mapping to locate existing capacities and identify gaps appears a useful tool.

The report has also provided interesting intellectual constructs to outline the discussion on civilian capacity. These include the “OPEN” framework and the cluster approach to identifying tasks and responsibilities in the aftermath of conflict. These could help in better defining peacebuilding priorities and tasks.

The concept of a lead agency has to be reconciled with the requirement of unity of command, so essential in peacekeeping, and to ensure that peacebuilding does not fall victim to turf battles.

Mr. President,

Recommendations on the manner in which civilian capacities are to be recruited are critical to the implementation of ideas on augmenting civilian capacities.

My delegation believes that the recruitment model should give primacy to a partnership with governments of Member-States and involve the secondment of government officials. This has a number of advantages. It gives the United Nations rapid access to the required capacities; it allows rapid scaling-up and scaling-down of capacities and facilitates burden-sharing amongst Member States. Above all it provides capacities that are trained to work in and establish government structures and would mesh well with the peacekeeping personnel on the ground. Peacekeeping is amongst the most effective of all United Nations ventures and its force generation model may be the most appropriate for recruiting civilian capacities. It is important to ensure a gender balance.

Mr. President,

My delegation also believes that the capacities that are being sourced must be relevant to the conditions in post-conflict situations. Here it stands to reason that the expertise that is most relevant is in fellow developing countries that have undertaken successful efforts in recent times in building governance structures and arranging for better delivery of basic services. The lessons that they have learnt and the capacities that they have developed are of great significance in this exercise.
There is an international shift in many fields towards sourcing capabilities from the global South driven by sound economic and functional considerations. United Nations efforts to source capacities from developing nation would be in consonance with these broad trends based on economies and efficiencies.

Mr. President,

The key challenge is implementation.

While there is growing interest in post-conflict situations on the part of many international organizations, the United Nations remains in the eyes of the affected, the most credible and legitimate representative of the international community.

It's peacekeeping activities have provided the bedrock of this trust. It is imperative that civilian capacities add to this credibility.

Thank you.

716. Statement by Secretary, Ministry of Environment and Forests Dr. T. Chatterjee at the opening session of the High Level Segment fo the 19th Session of the Commission on Sustainable Development at the 65th Session of the UN General Assembly.

Mr. Chairperson,

Excellencies and

Distinguished Delegates,

I am honoured to address this august assembly of luminaries from various Nation States and organizations on the occasion of the Policy Session of CSD-19. During the last few days, we have been able to make substantial progress towards arriving at a commonly agreed approach to the different thematic areas.

Mr. Chairperson,

India recognizes that transportation is a central component of economic growth and poverty eradication. In particular, rural connectivity holds the key to achievement of Millennium Development Goals. Improved all-weather road penetration coupled with safe, affordable and sustainable transport options are essential to ensuring access to services on one hand and markets on the other. In India, under the flagship Prime Minister’s Rural Road Programme, close to 180,000 rural habitations have been connected with all-weather roads in the last ten years. In this effort, carbon emission control and wild life preservation have not been given the go by. In forest areas, safeguards to black top roads using cold mix process and under- passes for animal movements, etc, are followed. Only up to 10 metres wide roads are built in eco-sensitive zones. In rapidly expanding urban areas of developing countries, mass transportation systems need to be fast tracked in order to address the mobility crisis as well as the problem of rising air pollution. Such public transportation systems also have the advantage of promoting the cause of equity while reducing the greenhouse gas emissions.

A related issue is that of cleaner fuel technologies. Delhi today has the world’s largest fleet of CNG operated buses, which is a successful example of low carbon sustainable transport. This by itself has brought down SPM levels in the capital’s ambient air. However, switching over to Euro-IV and Euro-V equivalent fuels requires considerable resources and upgradation of refining capacities towards which international financial assistance is needed by the developing countries in order to supplement their national efforts.

Mr. Chairperson,

You are aware that India has announced a voluntary reduction of carbon emission intensity of its GDP by 20-25% by 2020 from 2005 levels. Our National Action Plan on Climate Change, through its 8 missions focuses on promoting understanding of climate threats, adaptation and mitigation through measures like energy efficiency and natural resource conservation. The debate on green economy has to address not only the issue of energy but also the twin threats global food crisis and water crisis. In this context, a holistic approach to sustainable consumption and production framework becomes paramount.

Mr. Chairperson,

The current Session of CSD is extremely important from the point of view of establishment of a 10 year framework of Programme on Sustainable Consumption and Production. India believes that such a framework is vital to achieve the objectives of sustainable development. We hope that the developed countries will be taking a lead, in tandem with the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities. It is essential that the key programme areas as well as the coordination mechanism are well negotiated and conform to the basic principle of avoiding imposition of new constraints on the developing countries.
Institutional innovation has to be unleashed at all levels – local, national, regional and global - so as to devise new mechanisms of enhanced resource use efficiency, holistic planning and effective low cost regulation. India has set up a National Green Tribunal in 2010 as an independent specialized forum to fast track environmental justice and ensure sustainable development. Another initiative has been the establishment of the National Ganga River Basin Authority (NGRBA) which has adopted a holistic approach to river conservation. A new environmental Monitoring and Assessment Authority is also on the anvil.

Mr. Chairperson,

Another sector of vital importance is mining. Mining activities have the potential to transform lives and economies but they also have severe and often irreversible impact on not only environment and forests but national level internal security as well. Policy on mining should be guided by the Rio principles which enshrine that the States have the sovereign right to exploit their resources in accordance with national policies and legislations. Transparency in mining activities, upfront environmental impact assessment of such projects and a comprehensive strategy to check the adverse environmental and social impacts of mining activities are essential. India has a fairly robust system of environmental clearance as well as clearance for diversion of forest land. We have also adopted a National Rehabilitation and Resettlement Policy to address the issues related to displacement of local people. We urge that environmental consultations should take place even before allotment of mining areas for prospecting.

Mr. Chairperson,

India will be hosting a Ministerial Dialogue in New Delhi in October 2011 on Green Economy and Sustainable Development as a small contribution from our side in the run up to Rio+20. We will also be hosting the 11th meeting of the Conference of Parties (CoP 11) to the Convention of Biodiversity and the 6th meeting of the Conference of Parties (CoP/MoP 6) to the Cartagena Protocol on Bio-safety in October, 2012.

Finally, I hope, CSD-19 will come up with a clear roadmap and a workable strategy to achieve the imperatives of sustainable development.

Thank you, Mr. Chairperson.
717. Statement by Acting Permanent Representative at the UN

Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri, at the UN Security Council Debate on UNMIK.

New York, May 12, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I would like to join other colleagues in thanking Secretary General’s Special Representative and Head of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) H.E. Mr. Lamberto Zannier for his comprehensive briefing on the situation in Kosovo and the activities of UNMIK. I also want to thank H.E. Mr. Vuk Jeremic, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Republic of Serbia, for his statement outlining his country’s perspective on the situation in Kosovo. We have also carefully listened to the statement of Mr. Enver Hoxjaj, Pristina’s representative.

2. Mr. President, the Secretary General’s report on UNMIK for the quarter ending 15 April 2011 has brought out in detail the ground situation in Kosovo. We note with satisfaction that UNMIK continues with its endeavour to provide transitional administration to Kosovo, as mandated by the UNSC Resolution 1244(1999), with active cooperation and support of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), the Kosovo Force (KFOR) and the European Union Rule of Law Mission (EULEX).

3. We welcome the commencement of a dialogue process between Belgrade and Pristina, facilitated by the European Union in accordance with UNGA Resolution 298 of 13th October 2010. We all know that ‘from small beginnings come great things’. India has always believed that the Kosovo issue should be resolved peacefully through consultation and dialogue between the concerned parties. We are happy that both the sides have agreed to start discussing the topics which impact the daily lives of the affected population most. We hope that both sides would continue with a serious dialogue till these immediate issues are resolved and eventually begin to deliberate on more complex political issues. We urge that no party should take any unilateral action that undermines this reconciliation process.

4. We appreciate UNMIK’s contribution to facilitation of this dialogue process and feel that its continued engagement would be helpful.

5. We have also noted with satisfaction that UNMIK has facilitated cooperation between Belgrade and Pristina on the issues of missing persons, through the Working Group on Missing Persons, chaired by the International Committee of the Red Cross.
6. Mr. President, while the overall security situation in Kosovo, especially in the northern part, has remained relatively calm, it is a matter of concern that the underlying tension continues. Many untoward incidents of criminal assaults, armed robberies, murders, shootings, damage of religious places, etc. continue to be reported. We would appeal to the local authorities, especially the Kosovo Police, to be more vigilant and watchful.

7. The continued voluntary return of refugees, recorded by the UNHCR, is heartening but we are concerned by reports of opposition by some receiving communities.

8. It is noted that a population and housing census took place during the period of the report, except in the northern Kosovo where it would be conducted at a later date. It is hoped that the census would appropriately reflect the displaced persons and would not legalize any ethnic cleansing.

9. We have also noted the Secretary General’s view that the Kosovo authorities remain fundamentally skeptical about UNMIK facilitation of their engagement in international and regional initiatives. We hope that they would not seek to undermine UNMIK’s role, mandated by the UNSC and, instead, shall fully cooperate with UNMIK & other UN and EU institutions.

10. We agree with the Secretary General’s view that there is a need for thorough, impartial and independent investigation in the allegations contained in Special Rapporteur Dick Marty’s report. All stakeholders should agree on creation of a mechanism to carry out the follow up investigation, which should be fully supported by national and international entities present in Kosovo.

11. In conclusion, Mr. President, let me reiterate India’s consistent position that all issues concerning Kosovo should be resolved peacefully through consultation and dialogue between the concerned parties. Only thus can the aspirations of all the peoples be met on an enduring basis and lasting peace and stability be established in the region. We applaud the role being played by UNMIK for upholding the goals of the United Nation.

Thank you.
Mr. President,

Thank you for giving me the floor.

Peacekeeping operations mandated by this Council have been the main instrument for UN action on ground for conflict resolution. They have stood the test of time and will remain the critical pillar of UN activities for years to come. However, with the Council adding constantly to their mandates, the imperative is for placing adequate resource at the disposal of these missions.

With many of the situations where UN peacekeeping missions are operating being those of prolonged conflict or post conflict, it is essential that the UN missions involve themselves in building local capacities for provision of basic administration and essential services. Civilian capacities are critical in this endeavor and their presence in a significantly enhanced manner in peacekeeping missions must engage us in the UN.

We are, therefore, very appreciative of the work done by Mr. Jean-Marie Guehenno and the Senior Advisory Group in examining the issue in detail and making recommendations on how enhanced civilian capacities could be incorporated in the UN’s work in post conflict situations.

We have noted that the Secretary-General has set up a Steering Committee to facilitate follow-up on this report and that his team will be led by Under-Secretary General Malcorra.

Detailed discussions on the report and the issue of enhanced civilian capacities in peacekeeping missions will have to take place in the UN. It is essential that these discussions take place in inter-governmental settings and involve the C-34 and the Fifth committee. Significantly enhancing civilian capacities will have a major impact on the staffing, resourcing and impact of peacekeeping missions but these must neither dilute nor detract from the requirements of peacekeeping. The “OPEN” framework and the cluster approach to identifying tasks and responsibilities in the aftermath of conflict could help in better defining peacebuilding priorities and tasks.

The concept of a lead agency has to be reconciled with the requirement of unity of command, so essential in peacekeeping, and to ensure that peace-building does not fall victim to turf battles. There will also be demands for creating entities in New York to administer these enhanced civilian capacities. We need to avoid setting up large and top heavy bureaucratic structures. Our focus must remain on the field.

Mr. President,

The DPKO has been acting on provision of police capacities for many years and I am happy that India has been able to contribute both formed police units, including the first female FPU and senior police personnel to serve in management and command positions.

The report has identified several critical areas for providing core government functions, where civilian capacities are best suited. India has been included as one of the countries where capacity in several of these areas has been noted for possible tapping by the UN. In the past when called upon to provide civilian capacities for UN missions, India has responded in a prompt manner. I recall the secondment of several of our officials to the UN missions in former Yugoslavia and right now in Afghanistan.

Mr. President,

The report has underscored recognition of national ownership and the importance of support to "core government functions" to ensure success in preventing relapse into conflict. It is critical that national ownership is accepted in its real sense and not only by way of lip service while actually pushing for the favoured solutions by the donors. It is also critical that civilian capacity deployments are demand driven.

My delegation believes that the recruitment model should give primacy to a partnership with governments of Member-States and involve the secondment of government officials. It is also important to ensure a gender balance. This has a number of advantages. It gives the United Nations rapid access to the required capacities allowing rapid scaling-up and scaling-down of capacities. Above all it provides capacities that are trained to work in and establish government structures and would mesh well with the peacekeeping personnel on the ground. The force generation model of DPKO could be used to generate civilian capacities from member governments.

Mr. President,

My delegation also believes that the capacities that are being sourced must be relevant to the conditions in post-conflict situations. The expertise that is most relevant and actually tried on ground is in developing countries that have undertaken successful efforts in recent times in building governance structures and arranging for better delivery of basic services.
There is an international shift in many fields towards sourcing capabilities from the global South driven by sound economic and functional considerations.

United Nations efforts to source civilian capacities from developing nations would be in consonance with these broad trends.

Mr. President,

The United Nations remains in the eyes of the affected, the most credible and legitimate representative of the international community. Its peacekeeping activities have provided the bedrock of this trust. It is imperative that civilian capacities add to this credibility.

Thank you.

Istanbul, May 12, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies,

Distinguished delegates,

It is an honour for me to participate in this Fourth United Nations Conference on Least Developed Countries.

I am grateful to the people and Government of Turkey for graciously hosting this conference and for the warm hospitality extended to me and my delegation. This historic city of Istanbul bridging the East and the West provides the perfect metaphorical setting to build a durable partnership between the international community and the Least Developed Countries (LDCs).

Mr. Chairman,

The Least Developed Countries are the most vulnerable and the poorest segment of the international community. Their marginalised existence, is a matter of grave concern to all those who believe in a just and humane society. The plight of the LDCs remains immeasurable. They have little or no capacity to absorb external shocks.
Mr. Chairman,

We live in an interconnected world where the global community shares a common destiny. What we do for the LDCs in reality is a matter of our collective interest. Supporting the cause of the LDCs goes far beyond the moral argument; it is an economic imperative and a political necessity. Without putting the LDCs in the forefront of the global development agenda, we can hardly expect progress on the Millennium Development Goals.

Mr. Chairman,

International support for the LDCs since 1971, when they were created as a special category of countries in the UN, has not been commensurate with their special needs. The Brussels Programme of Action has had limited success. It is no surprise then that so far only 3 countries have been able to graduate out of the Group in the last forty years.

With their limited domestic resources and meagre international support, the LDCs have worked hard to overcome their developmental challenges. But their structural weaknesses make their development a vicious cycle. The global financial, food and energy crises have had a debilitating impact on these countries reversing their hard won development gains. The LDCs are excessively dependent on global trade for economic sustenance. However, their share in global trade, in spite of preferential market access, was only 1% in 2009. There is an urgency to work for an early conclusion of the Doha Round to create more space for the LDCs in global trade.

Food and energy price volatility, threats posed by Climate Change and new and emerging challenges have further eroded the productive capacities of these countries. The debt situation in several LDCs remains untenable. While they remain saddled with myriad challenges, the LDCs are endowed with vast natural resources, huge potential for clean energy and a dynamic young population. What they need is a strong international partnership to unlock their true potential.

Mr. Chairman,

The LDCs have come to Istanbul with high expectations and so have we. I am hopeful that these expectations will be fulfilled. The Istanbul Programme of Action is a comprehensive document. It now needs to be backed by the highest political commitment and a genuine international partnership. I, therefore, urge all stakeholders to pledge their maximum support for the LDCs and enable them give a life of dignity and hope to their people. India, on its part, would do all it can and more for their cause.

In my appeal, I am reminded of the timeless wise words of our Father of the Nation, Mahatma Gandhi who said:
“The difference between what we do and what we are capable of doing would suffice to solve most of the world’s problems”.

The commitments made by the donor community on Official Development Assistance, market access, debt settlement, capacity building and transfer of technology must be renewed and scaled up for a meaningful implementation of the Istanbul Programme.

South-South Cooperation no doubt will play an important part in this endeavour but it cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation. Developing countries which are themselves faced with insurmountable challenges cannot be expected to take on a responsibility that they don’t have the capacity to fulfil.

Mr. Chairman,

Sustained economic growth is fundamental to eradicating poverty in LDCs. In this regard, we are happy to see that the LDCs are taking major steps to attract Foreign Direct Investment and promote private enterprise to boost growth. We welcome the multi-stakeholder approach of the Conference to involve the Parliamentarians, the private sector and the civil society in addressing the special needs of LDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

India prides itself in standing shoulder to shoulder with the LDCs. Our strong ties with the LDCs have been nurtured through a shared history and common development needs. We feel particularly privileged to have played a historical role in the creation of the LDC category when we took lead to give shape to the idea at the Second UNCTAD Meeting in New Delhi in 1968. Our solidarity with the LDCs draws continuous inspiration from what our former Prime Minister Mrs. India Gandhi had to say at the 7th NAM Summit in New Delhi, and I quote:

“Faith in future has brought so many across the continents and the oceans to meet here. We are here because we do believe that minds and attitudes can and must be changed and the injustice and suffering can and must be diminished. Our world is small but it has room for all of us to live together and to improve the quality of lives for our peoples in peace and beauty”.

Mr. Chairman,

India remains fully committed to the needs of the LDCs. We have extended capacity building and economic assistance to the LDCs in their priority areas of development such as agriculture, infrastructure, telemedicine, energy, banking, and information technology under our flagship Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) Programme.
In keeping with the Hong Kong WTO Ministerial Declaration, we have extended duty free quota free preferential market access to their products. Our Lines of Credit worth 4.8 billion US Dollars to LDCs since 2003 and Aid for Trade programmes have led to expansion in India-LDC trade from 16.7 billion US Dollars in 2008-09 to 20.5 billion US Dollars in 2009-10, with the balance of trade being in favour of the LDCs.

Our private sector has invested more than 35 billion US Dollars in the LDCs since 2003.

During the India-LDC Ministerial Conference three months ago in New Delhi, we had announced a credit line facility of 500 million US Dollars for projects and programmes for the LDCs over the next five years under the existing Indian credit line regime for developing countries. Today, I have the pleasure to announce enhancement of that amount to 1 billion US Dollars. The additional 500 million US Dollars will come into the credit line immediately after the 500 million US Dollars announced last February are fully utilised by the beneficiaries.

At the India-LDC conference we had also offered 5 additional slots under the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme to each LDC on an annual basis and a grant of 5 million US Dollars for the follow-up of the Istanbul Programme.

Mr. Chairman,

The Istanbul Programme is an opportunity to give to the Least Developed Countries their rightful due. Let us make the most of it.

Thank You.
720. Joint Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC) Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on cooperation between the Al-Qaida and Taliban; Sanctions Committee, the Counter Terrorism Committee (CTC) and the Committee Established pursuant to the Resolution No. 1540 [2004] at the Security Council.

Introduction

On behalf of the Chairmen of the three subsidiary bodies of the Security Council established pursuant to resolutions 1267 (1999), 1373 (2001) and 1540 (2004) dealing with the issue of terrorism, I have the honour to update the Security Council on the continued cooperation between the three Committees and their expert groups, as requested by the Council in its resolutions 1822 (2008), 1963 (2010) and 1977 (2011), and elsewhere.

The three Committees continue to attach great importance to the coordination and cooperation between their respective expert groups (the Executive Directorate (CTED) of the Counter-Terrorism Committee, the Monitoring Team of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267 (1999) and the Expert Group of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540 (2004)); welcome their continued efforts to engage in joint outreach activities, exchange of information and joint meetings; and encourage the three groups to further enhance their cooperation. On the occasion of previous briefings, the Chairmen have provided a comparative table illustrating the mandates and areas of competence of the three Committees and their expert groups that is now updated to reflect the adoption of the recent resolutions.

Outreach

The three Committees continue to believe that these coordinated activities are very important tools for strengthening their dialogue with Member States; for helping to improve the overall understanding of their distinct, yet complementary mandates; and for assisting Member States in their implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Council.

The three expert groups continue to implement the common strategy on dealing with non- or late-reporting States through exchange of information and joint visits, when appropriate, and in assisting Member States in submitting their responses to the three Committees on their implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions. This week, representatives of the three groups will participate in a subregional workshop “on the United Nations Security Council resolutions against terrorism and their implementation”, to be held in Doha by the Government of Qatar, with the support of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

Working with international, regional and sub-regional organizations

The three expert groups continue to participate to platforms of common interest such as the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force (CTITF), United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), the Pacific Islands Forum and the Intergovernmental Action Group against Money laundering in West Africa (GIABA). Also, both CTED and the Monitoring Team are observers at the Eastern and South African Anti Money Laundering Group (ESAMLG).

CTITF continues to provide a useful framework within which the three expert groups can continue coordinate their activities and continue to share information, particularly on technical assistance. The expert groups contribute to the work of several CTITF Working Groups, and the Monitoring Team and CTED have assumed leading roles in some of these Groups. The three expert groups also participate in the Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism (I-ACT) Initiative. In November, the three expert groups held a consultative meeting of I-ACT focal points, hosted by CTED, and attended by other nine CTITF entities to discuss ways to enhance the use of this automated information system. The three expert groups also actively participate in the meeting of the CTITF Working Group on Border Management, chaired by CTED, and hosted by the World Customs Organization in Brussels in January 2011. The Monitoring Team, as the co-chair of the CTITF Working Group on Countering the Use of the Internet for Terrorist Purposes, also co-organized a conference in Saudi Arabia in January 2011 on the Use of Internet to Counter the Appeal of Extremist Violence, in which CTED participated. The three groups also participated in the second expert meeting under the project on “Implementing the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy in Central Asia”, held by CTITF in Tajikistan in March 2011.

Exchange of information

Exchange of information is carried out on a regular basis and through joint work conducted by two or more groups when participating in the same event, such as the recent CTED workshop on challenges to border control in the Maghreb and the Sahel, at which the Monitoring Team participated. Similarly, the Monitoring Team joined the Counter-Terrorism Committee’s recent special meeting with international, regional and sub-regional organizations, held at the headquarters of the Council of Europe in Strasbourg, on measures related to the prevention of terrorism. The two groups also contributed to the discussion on preventing the abuse of the non-profit sector to finance terrorism, co-organized by CTED in Bangkok in March 2011. Both CTED and the Expert Group of 1540 Committee also participated at the Ninth Meeting of National focal Points of Contact of the Inter-American Committee against Terrorism (CICTE) organized by the Organization of American States (OAS) in March 2011.

CTED continues to share with the two other expert groups the monthly reports of the Executive Director which include reports on all CTED missions. In addition to information on website, there is a reciprocal arrangement for access to electronic databases.

Joint meetings

The three expert groups continue to hold regular meetings in preparation for visits, workshops and other joint activities related to specific States, regions or themes. The Counter-Terrorism Committee also regularly invites the other two expert groups, CTITF and other relevant United Nations entities to meetings with international and regional organizations and to its thematic briefings in the framework of its official meetings, such as thematic briefing on the issue of assisting Member States to implement the requirements of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) with respect to cash couriers, and the briefing by the Secretary-General of OSCE in February 2011 to the Counter-Terrorism Committee.

Representation

Another emerging area of cooperation is for one of the three groups to represent another group at certain events. For example, the Monitoring team representing CTED at the FATF meeting held in Cape Town in November 2010, and CTED representing the Monitoring Team during its participation in the Meeting of International, regional and sub-regional organizations on cooperation in promoting the implementation of Security Council resolution 1540 (2004) organized by the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs and hosted by Austria in December 2010. CTED also represented the Monitoring Team during its participation in the Meeting of the Pacific Islands Forum Working Group on Counter-Terrorism (WGCT) in Auckland, New Zealand, which was co-chaired by New Zealand and the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat this month. CTED also conveys to Governments, on behalf of the Monitoring Team, requests to submit information and responses to the “1267” Committee. In general, during their participation in these various events, the expert groups continue to explain to participants the respective activities and mandates of the three Committees, as well as the content and purpose of the Global Strategy.
Co-location
As mentioned in the previous joint statement, co-location of the three expert groups would greatly contribute to enhanced cooperation and information exchange among them. We therefore appreciate the response by the Secretariat that they will continue exploring all options with a view towards co-locating the groups at the earliest possible opportunity, notwithstanding the challenges associated with such co-location.

Conclusion
The three subsidiary bodies and their respective expert groups will continue to cooperate and to coordinate their work, within their respective mandates with a view to ensuring an effective and efficient approach to counter-terrorism, whether within the framework of the United Nations or within the framework of the broader efforts of the international community. The three Committees look forward to receiving further guidance from the Council on areas of common interest and to further strengthening their joint activities.

721. Briefing by Permanent Representative at the UN and Chairman of the Counter Terrorism Committee (CTC) Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on Counter Terrorism at

Mr. President,

I have the honour to assume the Chairmanship of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001) from the beginning of this year. I would like to thank my distinguished predecessor Ambassador Erturul Apakan of Turkey for the excellent work in steering the Committee in 2010.

Today, it gives me great pleasure to brief the Council on the work of the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC) since the last briefing in November, 2010.

Mr. President,

Terrorism is a global scourge and constitutes one of the most serious threats to international peace and security. The United Nations strongly condemns terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, committed by whomever, wherever, and for whatever purposes. It is an attack on human rights, fundamental freedoms and democracy, threatening territorial integrity and security of States and destabilizing legitimately constituted Governments. The CTC, in accordance with its mandate, continues to work actively in advancing the global fight against terrorism.

The Committee in its work has been guided by relevant Security Council resolutions including resolution 1373 (2001), 1624 (2005) and 1963 (2010) and continues to play a critical role in promoting and facilitating their implementation.

The Security Council Presidential Statement adopted on May 2, 2011 in the aftermath of the death of Osama bin Laden stresses the need for full implementation of its resolutions on terrorism as well as other applicable international counter-terrorism instruments. It also calls on all States to work together to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of terrorist attacks while ensuring that measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

Important tools in the Committee’s work include Preliminary Implementation Assessments (PIA), visits to Member States, facilitating the provision of technical assistance, enhancing cooperation and coordination with international, regional and sub-regional organizations and identification and promotion of international best practices, codes and standards.

The Committee, through CTED, is also making use of alternative technologies, including video conferencing, to enhance its dialogue with Member States.

Mr. President,

The Committee continues to organize and participate in discussions and workshops on thematic and regional issues. The major issues considered by the Committee include the control of cash couriers, abuse of non-profit sector for terrorist financing, and application of good practices for the implementation and assessment of resolution 1624 (2005). Important workshops organized during this period include the launch of CTED’s global initiative in London from January 18-20, 2011 to prevent the abuse of the non-profit sector for terrorist financing within the framework of the CTITF Working Group on Tackling the Financing of Terrorism and the workshop on challenges to effective border control in the Sahel and the Maghreb region, organized in close cooperation with the International Organization for Migration (IOM), which was held in Nouakchott, Mauritania from April 4-6, 2011.
The Committee is also focussing on regional-specific discussions, on issues identified in the 2009 survey of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) by Member States (S/2009/620, annex). A regional discussion on Central Asia was held earlier this month.

In addition, the Committee and CTED continue to enhance their ongoing dialogue with Member States, donors and beneficiaries on the facilitation of technical assistance for capacity building.

Mr. President,

The Committee has adopted its work programme this year on an annual basis, which will be helpful in further streamlining the functioning of the Committee. Earlier, the Committee has been formulating its work programme on a biannual basis.

As part of enhancing its interaction with international and regional organizations and United Nations entities, the Committee has heard briefings on counter-terrorism in February this year by Ambassador Marc Perrin de Brichaumbaut, Secretary General of the OSCE, and Mr. Alexey Kuzyura, Head of the Working Group of the Meeting of Heads of Special Services of the Russian Federation.

Further, of particular significance is the CTC’s Special Meeting with international regional and sub-regional organizations on ‘Prevention of Terrorism’ held at Strasbourg, France from 19-21 April 2011 in collaboration with the Council of Europe. The Meeting offered an opportunity to the Committee, the CTED and various international, regional and sub-regional organizations to hold open and in-depth discussions about the preventive aspects of resolutions 1373 (2001), 1624 (2005) and 1963 (2010), and the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. The Special Meeting focussed on three main areas viz. prevention policies, comprehensive and integrated strategies, and the role of law enforcement in preventing terrorism. Experts from civil society organizations also actively participated in the event. The Committee appreciates the close cooperation and generous support from the Council of Europe in planning and hosting this event. While the Committee and CTED will follow up on this important meeting, the Chair’s summary is in process of being circulated as a document of the Security Council.

Mr. President,
This year marks an important milestone in the global counter-terrorism efforts as we approach the tenth anniversary of adoption of Resolution 1373 (2001). The Committee will organize a special meeting open to the wider membership and other relevant stakeholders, to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the adoption this resolution and the establishment of the Committee.

Other major upcoming events include a workshop in Islamabad, Pakistan for members of Parliament of Pakistan on strengthening the oversight role of the Parliament in the implementation of AML/CFT laws, the fourth Regional Workshop for Police Officers and Prosecutors in South Asia on Effectively Countering Terrorism, to be held in Thimphu, Bhutan, and a workshop in Belgrade for countries from South East Europe on the law enforcement aspects of preventing the financing of terrorism.

Mr. President,

I attach high priority to enhance transparency, public outreach and strengthening cooperation with international, regional and sub-regional organizations. Besides participating in the CTC’s Special Meeting at Strasbourg last month, I also participated in the meeting of the Inter-American Committee against Terrorism of the Organization of the American States held in Washington in March, 2011.

In conclusion, the Committee will continue to play a critical role in the global fight against terrorism. The Committee will try to do so in a more strategic and transparent manner so that it can more effectively contribute to the global counterterrorism efforts within its mandate. I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Mike Smith, Executive Director, CTED and his team for their excellent work. I also wish to thank the Secretariat for its continuous support.

Thank you.
Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the Meeting of the Ad
hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record my delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by the two Co-Chairs (Ambassador Camillo M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius ekuolis of Lithuania) to convene this meeting to discuss the role and responsibility of the General Assembly in the process of selecting and appointing Secretaries General of the United Nations and selection of other Executive Heads in the UN system organizations. This is a clear affirmation of the importance that the UN membership attaches to the issue. We will therefore try to sincerely and faithfully address all relevant aspects with a view to contribute positively to the work of this Working Group.

Naturally we align ourselves with the statement made by our colleague from Algeria on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Co-Chairs,

The fact is that the political role of the Secretary-General is writ large both in terms of the functions envisaged for him or her under the Charter as well as those that accrued to him or her over the years. The specific content of the Secretary-General’s political role is outlined in Articles 12 para 2 and 99 of the UN Charter and relevant rules of procedure of both the General Assembly and the Security Council. Further, over the past six decades, the good offices and mediatory roles of the Secretary General as well as the work of his Special Representatives have only served to reinforce and flesh out the political nature of the job.

In such a scenario, the continued circumscribing of the General Assembly’s role and responsibilities in the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General needs to change in the interests of the United Nations system in general and the Assembly’s prerogatives in particular. Permit me to elaborate on this.

Co-Chairs,

Member-states are well-aware of the fact that General Assembly Resolution 11 (1) of February 1946 which lays out the “Terms of appointment of the Secretary-General” was the product of an era gone by. It was the result of irreconcilable differences between the pre-eminent yet opposing power camps in the international system on the implementation of Article 97 of the Charter which states, “The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.” These differences arose because the Charter provision was not self-executing.

In our view, the 1946 Resolution erred on the side of caution when it broke down the decision-making process into two compartmentalized, linear procedures, one of which was to be carried out in the Council and the other in the Assembly. As a result, what we have today is one decision taken in the Council on nominating a candidate and another decision taken in the General Assembly on appointing the candidate. The error was compounded by the subsequent practice of the UN system of not insisting on a panel of candidates for the Assembly’s consideration despite the fact that the 1946 Resolution merely stated that it would be “desirable” as against obligatory “for the Security Council to proffer one candidate only for the consideration of the General Assembly.”

Further, the Security Council’s consideration of the process of recommendation of the only candidate for the post of Secretary-General was defined as a decision which “shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members, including the concurring votes of the permanent members”, while in the case of the Assembly it was to be a decision in which “a simple majority” of the members present and voting is sufficient. Herein lies the second error, that is similar processes having differential weightage. In other words, the “recommendation” stage of the process which is carried out by the Council overwhelmed the “appointment” stage which is the responsibility of the Assembly.

The combination of the factors and developments I have just mentioned has resulted in a situation whereby the Assembly’s role and responsibilities have gradually whittled away. Many have characterized this as converting the Assembly into a mere rubber-stamp of the Council’s recommendation.

Co-Chairs,

What is to be done? The answer is clear. Being the voice of the international community, the General Assembly must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General. In this regard, there are a number of important elements that the UN membership can consider as medium-term measures that could be applied the next time the post of Secretary General becomes vacant.
For instance, the General Assembly adopted resolutions 51/241 of 22 August 1997 and 60/286 of 9 October 2006, which outline in detail proposals on improving the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary-General. Further, the practice established by GA Resolution 11 (1) can be modified to allow for the Council to send a panel of names that the Assembly could choose from as against a single nomination. Additionally, if the member-states attach high importance to the role and responsibilities of the Assembly, we see no reason why the matter should not be “decided by a two-thirds majority” in terms of Article 18 (3) as against the one with a simple majority requirement in Resolution 11 (1). We could also identify objective criteria for the candidatures, including commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter, extensive leadership, administrative and diplomatic experience with due regard being given to regional rotation and gender equality. Equally useful and practical would be to encourage formal presentation of candidatures in a manner that allows sufficient time for interaction with member-states, and also requires candidates to present their views to all member-states of the General Assembly.

Co-Chairs,

Only with real changes can we ensure that the General Assembly exercises its judgment in the matter of the appointment of the Secretary-General, rather than merely rubber stamping proposals by the Security Council while ensuring that the appointment process does not become a divisive issue between the General Assembly and the Security Council. Indeed, as envisaged in the Charter, this is a process that involves both these organs and needs to be carried out in a collaborative exercise respecting each other’s mandate.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Permit me to briefly turn the matter of selection of other Executive Heads in the UN system organizations. Our position flows from the clear guidelines in the Charter.

The Charter provisions clearly reflect the desire of the UN membership to have an international civil service which displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity and which is accountable therefore, if not in higher, but at least in equal measure as the Secretary General is to the General Assembly. In addition, we would welcome closer consideration of procedures for selecting, appointing and confirming the heads of the major Specialized Agencies, Funds and Programmes with a view to ensuring transparency, legitimacy and balanced representation. We therefore,

In conclusion, distinguished Co-Chairs let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative, policy-making and representative body of the international community.

You can expect our constructive support and participation in your efforts.

Thank You.

723. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UNSC Debate on the Democratic Republic of Congo.

New York, May 18, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President,

1. I would like to thank the French Presidency of the Security Council for organizing this timely debate. I would also like to thank Secretary General Ban Ki-moon and Minister Tshibanda for their comprehensive briefings. The issues that they have raised and the approach they have suggested should guide us in today’s deliberations. We hope today’s debate would determine contours of international community’s approach to sustain the progress made so far in DRC.

Mr. President,

2. First of all, I would like join others in expressing our deepest regret for the tragic crash of MONUSCO-contracted airplane on April 4, 2011 in Kinshasa that resulted in loss of life of 33 passengers and crew that included UN staff. We express our heartfelt condolences to those who lost their loved ones, colleagues and friends.

Mr. President,

3. The Democratic Republic of Congo is witnessing a critical period in its history. The progress achieved so far in restoring peace and stability needs to be consolidated by entrenching democratic values, focusing on improving security and rule of law and adopting policies conducive for overall economic development of the country. The challenges are indeed difficult but not insurmountable.
4. Holding of credible elections this year would go a long way in sustaining stability in the country. We hope that elections will be held according to the time table in a free and fair manner. The Commission Electorale Nationale Independante (CENI) has already started work on voter registration, consultations with opposition parties and code of conduct. The civil society, media and NGOs should support CENI in creating awareness among the population.

5. India, as the largest democracy in the world, strongly believes in the importance of creating effective representative democratic institutions to address the problems of the society. The international community, including the UN and MONUSCO, should help the DRC authorities in holding free and fair elections.

Mr. President,

6. Long-term peace and stability cannot be sustained without security and this can only be ensured with effective enforcement of rule of law. Today, most part of DRC except eastern region is free from conflict that the country witnessed during the civil war. The presence of armed groups in eastern provinces of Kivu, Maniema and Katanga poses a serious threat to the existence of the State authorities and their capacity to protect civilians. Unabated acts of violence by elements of armed groups such as Forces Democratiques de Liberation du Rwanda (FDLR), Forces Nationales de Liberation (FNL) and Mayi-Mayi Yakutumba are a matter of serious concern. The situation has been further aggravated by acts of human right violations and sexual violence by elements of Force Armes de la Republique Democratique du Congo (FARDC). The involvement of various armed groups including some elements of security forces in illegal mining is also worrisome. Furthermore, the menace of Lord Resistance Army (LRA) is not just limited to Orientale province but is affecting the whole region. We are also gravely concerned with the precarious humanitarian situation.

7. Focus should, therefore, be on effective disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of various armed groups. The success achieved so far in DDR process should be sustained and issues of impunity dealt with. We are glad to note that the reforms in security, police and justice sector starting from training and sensitization to human rights issues, effective prosecution and expeditious judicial process are, indeed, priority for the government.

8. Security and law & order issues are intrinsically linked to economic development. It is now time for the international community to look beyond peacekeeping and help the DRC authorities in peace building efforts, including investments in agriculture, infrastructure and industries for overall economic development.
Mr. President,

9. MONUSCO peacekeepers have been doing the most commendable work in the most difficult circumstances. The soldier to population and soldier to land area ratios are extremely low in eastern DRC where MONUSCO is largely deployed. There is an urgent need for this Council to address the issues of resource gap for MONUSCO because security, rule of law, institution building and effective governance are processes that will have to be pursued simultaneously by this Mission. An integrated approach incorporating these objectives requires cooperation of all stakeholders and provision of adequate resources by the international community.

Mr. President,

10. India has had a long association with the DRC as one of the major troop contributing countries over the last five decades. Our first presence in the country dates as far back as March 1961 during the Katanga province crisis. Currently, our contribution to MONUSCO stands at 4,318 troops. Keeping in mind the resource gap in MONUSCO, we extended the service of our six utility helicopters till April this year. We continue to extend services of four combat helicopters beyond the committed period.

11. Indian contingent has made significant contributions in the humanitarian and development activities in eastern DRC, including building and rehabilitating community centers and vocational training schools, as well as setting up laboratories for IT training and building markets. In the course of its involvement in peacekeeping operations in Congo, 36 of our soldiers have made supreme sacrifice.

Mr. President,

12. In addition to its contribution to MONUSCO, India has also cooperated with the government of DRC in development programmes. We have a line of credit worth US$ 318.5 million for projects like power generation, railways, rural water supply and supply of buses. We have also offered to set up an IT center of Excellence and three learning stations under Hole-in-the-wall computer education project in DRC. India offers 60 training slots for short and medium term technical courses and 10 slots for longer-term professional courses. The two countries are cooperating in building of low cost houses. India remains committed to play its part in support of the government of DRC in strengthening and capacity building of its national institutions, both in security and civilian areas.

Thank you.
724. Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the Meeting of the Ad
hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

Let me start by placing on record my delegation’s happiness at the decision taken by the two Co-Chairs (Ambassador Camillo M. Gonsalves of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Ambassador Dalius Ėekuolis of Lithuania) to convene this meeting to discuss the subject of “enhancing the functions of the Office of the President of the General Assembly including strengthening its institutional memory, and its relationship with the Secretariat.”

Co-chairs,

In so far as my delegation is concerned, we view today’s discussions as part of an overall package which will result in the revitalization of the General Assembly.
This should, inter alia, ensure that the sanctity, and the role of this principal organ of the United Nations system is not only preserved but strengthened.

At the outset, permit me to align ourselves with the statement made by our colleague from Algeria on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Co-chairs,

We call for augmenting the resources to ensure the efficient and successful functioning of the office of the PGA in keeping with its dignity and prestige. In our mind, providing the resources in terms of protocol and security for the PGA needs to be done forthwith. The relevant provisions of 64/301 should be addressed without any delay.

We also need to finds ways and means to institutionalize the existing trust fund established to address the issue of the increasing financial burden associated with the enhanced activities and travel of the PGA. We need to have a sustainable system in place. And the first step in that direction is to have the full facts on the structure and working of this trust fund.

Co-Chairs,

There is a palpable desire among the wide UN membership to have a PGA’s office that displays the highest standards of professionalism, neutrality and integrity. We, the member-states should help in this process. There are a number of steps that can be taken in this regard.
First, we need to maintain the fine balance between two factors relevant to the composition of the office of the PGA. On the one hand, we must ensure that the geographical balance of General Assembly membership is reflected in the composition of the Cabinet of the President of the General Assembly. On the other hand, we must apply this principle in synergy with a merit based system that helps assemble the most effective team.

Second, a certain degree of continuity between the incoming and outgoing Presidents and their Cabinets is necessary. There are many ways to do this, but we believe that the two Presidents are the best judges of how to go about the same.

Distinguished Co-Chairs,

In conclusion, let me reiterate my delegation’s basic position that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected in letter and in spirit. We will continue to support your work in the future to ensure the success of our common endeavour to revitalize the General Assembly.

Thank you.

725. Statement by Acting Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the UN Security Council Debate on ICTY / ICTR.

New York, June 6, 2011.

Thank you Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to join others in thanking the President of the ICTY, Judge Robinson and the President of the ICTR, Judge Khan for their presentations and assessment of the work of the Tribunals. We also appreciate the briefings given by the two Prosecutors.

2. India welcomes the progress made by the two Tribunals in expediting their work. We appreciate the measures adopted to implement the Completion Strategy. The Tribunals have set up new benchmarks and adopted innovative procedures to expedite their day to day work, including e-Court and e-Filing, amendments to the rules of procedure and evidence and case management techniques. The adoption and implementation of e-Court and e-Filing procedures could serve as a useful model in national courts to which some of the cases have been transferred.

3. We are happy to note that the ICTY has transferred all low and mid-level accused from its trial docket to the national courts in accordance with the Council’s resolution 1503 and that the prosecutor is continuously monitoring the progress of the referred proceedings in national courts in the region. We also commend the efforts of the Prosecutor including training initiatives, aimed at strengthening the capacity of national systems to handle these cases through effective partnerships with national prosecutors and courts in the region.

4. Mr. President, it is critical that the Tribunals finish their work on time. We have listened very carefully to the concerns raised by the Presidents of the two Tribunals in relation to their ability to keep pace with their work while adhering to expected timelines until the ‘close of business’. The Judges have pointed out that the Tribunal’s trials and appeals continue to be affected by staffing shortages and the loss of highly efficient staff members. We share the concerns expressed by Judges, especially on the need for retaining adequate and experienced staff.

5. Careful consideration should be given to the suggestions made by the Tribunals on how to address this challenge. This is a practical issue and requires consideration of pragmatic and innovative solutions and we stand ready to work with other members of the Council to solve it.

6. Judge Robinson has also raised the issue concerning enforcement of sentences, which is an important one and needs further consideration.

7. Mr. President, we welcome the cooperation extended by all States concerned to the Tribunals, which is vital to ensure the completion of the mandates of the Tribunals as well as for the implementation of the Completion Strategy. The arrest of Ratko Mladi is an important example of effective cooperation and we appreciate Serbia’s sustained efforts in this regard. We hope that the remaining fugitives would be located soon and surrendered to the tribunals.

8. We also note with satisfaction the progress made by the ICTY Residual Mechanism Steering Committee in the implementation of International Residual mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (RM) established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1966 (2010). A multitude of factors are involved in this process and we hope that the RM Steering Committee, in coordination with the ICTR, the Office of Legal affairs (OLA), the Archives and Record Management Section and the Council’s Informal Working Group on International Tribunals (IWGIT), will accomplish this task smoothly and successfully. Any functional, operational or institutional issue in the Completion Strategy may be addressed by the Council as and when they arise.

9. In conclusion, Mr. President, we believe that the two Tribunals have admirably implemented their mandates. We consider that the support of the Security Council is crucial at this critical juncture in the life of the Tribunals. At the same time, we urge both Tribunals to take all necessary steps to keep the trial and appeal schedules on track. This will pave the way for successful trials of the remaining accused and a smooth transition to effective Residual Mechanism.

Thank you.

New York, June 7, 2011.

Mr. President [the President of Gabon],
We are honored by your presiding over the Council at this debate. Please allow me to join others in welcoming you to New York.

We would also like express our appreciation for the efforts of your delegation in organizing this debate and during the negotiation of the resolution.

My thanks are also due to the Secretary General, H.E. Mr Ban Ki-moon and UNAIDS Executive Director, Michel Sidibe, for their statements.

Mr. President,
HIV/AIDS is a scourge of our times. It has caused untold misery affecting the lives of millions of people across the globe though some parts of the world have been more adversely affected by HIV and AIDS than others.

I am glad that thirty years after the HIV became known, the efforts of the international community and national governments are beginning to show positive movements on our being able to tackle HIV and AIDS.
The need of the hour is to continue these efforts with acceleration and ensure that the international community is intense in its support of national efforts.

The lack of firm commitment for financial resources for developing countries to bolster their prevention and treatment systems, including through capacity building, and the high cost of medicines exacerbated through trade and IPR barriers for generics require serious and immediate attention of the international community.

Mr. President,

On our part in India we have strived with all determination to control and tackle the spread of HIV and AIDS with a massive National AIDS Control Programme at the centre of our efforts. The targeted intervention programme is buttressed with a more broad-based awareness and educational programmes. In addition, involvement of community and civil society at all stages of policy has also provided the necessary impetus in our success.

The latest statistics show an overall reduction in adult HIV prevalence and new infection in India. Adult HIV prevalence has declined from 0.41% in 2000 to 0.31% in 2009. Moreover, the estimated number of new annual HIV infections has reduced by more than 50% over the past decade, from 270,000 in 2000 to 120,000 in 2009. However, our disease burden in absolute terms is high at 2.27 million and it is estimated that nearly 172,000 people died of AIDS-related illnesses in India.

India’s contribution to the global fight against HIV and AIDS has gone well beyond our national boundaries. Dubbed as the “pharmacy of the world”, our pharmaceutical companies have been in the forefront to ensure supply and access of safe, effective, affordable and good quality generic anti-retroviral treatment for HIV and AIDS to other developing countries in dire need of such medicines.

Mr. President,

The immense challenge posed by the spread of HIV/AIDS has had across the board implications for societies on the economic, social, legal and moral fronts. It has weakened the abilities of affected people and societies from pursuing progress on well-being.

With the highest prevalence rates and disease burdens being in societies that have nothing to do with conflict, HIV and AIDS has not created conditions of instability and insecurity, apprehensions in UNSCR 1308 notwithstanding. We must, however, recognize the possibilities of the epidemic being fuelled in situations of armed conflict and post conflict.
In armed conflicts and post-conflict situations there is also lack of information or credible data on the magnitude of HIV and AIDS.

It is critical that UN response in the field in such situations is cognizant of this fact. UN Mission leaders, be it civilian or military, should be sensitive to this important global public health challenge.

We welcome the incorporation of HIV awareness activities in mandated activities of peacekeepers and outreach projects for vulnerable communities. Uniformed peacekeeping personnel can also be effective agents of change in such missions. We also strongly support HIV and AIDS preventive measures to be part of the preparation and discipline of peacekeeping forces. Well informed UN mission personnel in the field can make a significant difference to the success of such additional tasks assigned to them. In this context I would like to refer to the abhorrent and intolerable practice of sexual violence in situations of armed conflict, which could lead to the spread of HIV and AIDS.

We strongly support the orientation of the operational and peacekeeping activities of the United Nations towards recognizing the plight of women and children in conflict areas and proactively work towards preventing violence against them.

Mr. President,

The General Assembly is convening at High Level on HIV and AIDS from tomorrow with the presence of a large number of Heads of States and Governments and Ministers. We should not allow the vision of a world without HIV and AIDS to remain a dream. We are hopeful that the new Declaration, which will be adopted by the General Assembly on Friday, will demonstrate the strong commitment of the international community to face this global challenge in a resolute and determined manner.

Thank you, Mr. President.
Mr President,

Excellencies,

Distinguished Delegates,

Participants,

Ladies and Gentlemen!

At the outset, I would like to compliment the President of the General Assembly for organizing this High Level Event on HIV/AIDS. The UN Secretary General’s report has shown that the HIV/AIDS epidemic continues to outpace the response to contain and prevent its spread. This situation persists despite three decades of concerted efforts to combat this epidemic. Therefore, this High Level Meeting for comprehensively reviewing the progress in realizing the “Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS” and “Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS” adopted in 2001 & 2006, respectively comes at a very opportune time.

The presence of a large number of Heads of States and Governments, Health Ministers, other eminent leaders, representatives Civil Society, NGOs and professionals from around the globe is a clear endorsement of the need for this event. I also commend the efforts of the Permanent Representatives of Australia and Botswana for steering the difficult negotiations of the draft Declaration to a successful conclusion.

Mr. President,

permit me, with all humility to suggest, that along with declarations we need effective up scaling of our actions and resources if we wish to steal a march over this global epidemic. Our actions must match our words.

India has a strong prevention programme which goes hand in hand with care, support and treatment. We have been able to contain the epidemic with a prevalence of just 0.31 %. We have also brought about a decline of 50% in new infections annually. Over the last decade, there is evidence of stabilization of the epidemic with definite success in reversal in some parts of the country.
Our focus has been on high risk groups, expanding services and improving access to Anti Retro Viral Therapy. Universal access to second line ART and early infant diagnosis are in an advanced stage of being rolled out. Strategies for behaviour change communication include “The Red Ribbon Express”, which is a unique train that covers the length and breadth of the country disseminating awareness about HIV/AIDs and providing services to about 8 million people annually.

We are now at the threshold of commencing the next phase of the National AIDS Control Programme (NACP – IV). Mother to child transmission of the infection continues to be a challenge. We aspire to achieve zero transmission in the new born.

Our strategy in India is to convert the 27 million annual pregnancies into institutional deliveries for efficacious preventive interventions through better detection of HIV positivity amongst pregnant women. From a paltry Seven hundred thousand institutional deliveries in 2006, the number of institutional deliveries has increased to over 10 million in 2010. This year onwards institutional deliveries at government health institutions are being made cashless. Diagnostic tests, drugs, diet, transport would be provided free of cost to all pregnant women and sick new-born.

I am confident, that this significant step will help in the elimination of transmission of HIV from the mother to her new born, apart from further reducing IMR, MMR and improving immunization levels.

We are also launching a new initiative to deliver male and female contraceptives at the household level.

This scheme of door to door distribution, through Eight hundred thousand Accredited Social Health Activists (ASHAs), will initially be implemented in 233 districts of 17 provinces, covering an approximate population of 200 million and will be scaled-up to cover the entire country soon.

This will help us in prevention of spread of HIV infection and in our population stabilization efforts.

We are conscious that persons infected and affected with HIV still face stigma, which is not only a barrier for accessing services, but also a violation of their rights. India is committed to fight this stigma so that people living with HIV can live lives of dignity.

Investments in public health continue to be an over-riding priority of the Government of India.

Mr. President, Excellencies,
At today’s critical time in our efforts to combat HIV/AIDS, it is imperative that the international community remain highly engaged. A foremost requirement is to bridge the resource gap. It is essential that the international community continues to commit funds commensurate with the requirement for containing HIV/AIDS.

Besides, the international community has to dismantle barriers that obstruct universal access to treatment. A key barrier in universal access to treatment is the high cost of Anti Retro Viral medicines.

Pharmaceutical companies in my country have been providing high quality and affordable drugs for use not only in India but also supplying to around 200 countries. I would also like to take this opportunity to make it abundantly clear that these generic drugs are not cheap in terms of quality. It is important that considerations of commerce and profitability are not used to erect artificial barriers between life and death. I would also like to urge the international community to work together for removing barriers in the form of Intellectual Property Rights or other means. We must ensure, that all flexibilities in TRIPS must be used for better availability of affordable medicines.

Therefore, we need proactive and collective action from the international community to dismantle these barriers and improve the availability of accessible, affordable and quality drugs for the needy and impoverished.

Mr. President,

With these words, let me join others in reaffirming India’s strong commitment and firm resolve to fight this epidemic in a concerted and collaborative manner.

Thank you for attention.
Madam President,

At the outset, permit me to thank Administrator Helen Clark for her comprehensive opening remarks.

We take heart from the positive examples of progress in UNDP interventions across the world that Administrator Clark has flagged in the course of her remarks. These examples highlight the cross-cutting and multi-dimensional activities of the UNDP at the ground level encompassing, inter alia, poverty reduction, mitigating the impact of AIDS, increasing democratic governance, crisis prevention and recovery, environment and sustainable development, and strengthening development effectiveness.

Such a wide sweep of activities gives the UNDP a unique role within the UN system, thereby positioning it to combat persistent challenges that impede progress and bridge the gaps in the realization of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals. In this context, we welcome the UNDP’s strategic focus on reviving the organization to improve its ability to deliver development results in programme countries. Only a strong and robust organization can deliver the kind of change that is needed to truly revitalize the development agenda and to bring about sustainable, inclusive, and resilient development - the three broad goals for advancing human development reaffirmed in the mid-term review of the strategic plan.

The expectations from the UNDP as the largest developmental arm of the United Nations are enormous. While appreciating the complex nexus of issues that inform the development agenda, we would like to see a greater sense of urgency in addressing the core challenges of poverty eradication, food security and energy access that constitute the most pressing development issues facing programme countries. We further expect full alignment of UNDP activities and strategies with the national development strategies of programme countries, both in principle and practice. Only then do we have a real chance at delivering durable solutions and genuine progress.
My delegation believes that South-South cooperation is an important and practical mode of cooperation that can meaningfully supplement other streams of cooperation. If UNDP genuinely wants to invest in such cooperation, it not only needs to give it sustained attention at the highest levels, but also devote real resources to nurturing it and shore up its efforts in this direction. Moreover, the focus of such efforts should be to bring together the expertise and technical capacities of the South with UNDP resources in joint partnerships. India, for its part, is actively involved in exploring further options to step up its engagement with UNDP to share our development experiences with other developing countries.

Madam President,

In so far as India is concerned, while we have benefitted from robust economic growth in recent years, we remain cognizant that the largest concentration of poor in the world continues to remain in our country and our region. The government’s efforts are therefore focused on pushing for growth while simultaneously ensuring that the fruits of growth percolate to every section of society. We are pursuing this goal through a large plank of ambitious socio-economic development programmes.

The Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act, with an annual budget of US$ 8 billion, is the largest "cash for work" poverty alleviation programme in the world and has benefited 50 million rural households in India so far.

Indian law mandates that all Indian children in the age group of 6 to 14 years must receive free education. The Sarva Shikshya Abhiyan, a universal elementary education programme with an annual budget of US$ 3 billion has dramatically increased primary school enrolment. We also run the largest free school-lunch programme in the world to ensure that children remain in school while also giving them balanced nutrition. This is being supplemented by Saakshar Bharat, a special programme focused on female literacy launched in 2009.

In the area of women’s empowerment, India runs one of the largest-scale affirmative action initiatives ever by mandating that one-third of all elected positions in local government be reserved for women. We are striving to raise this figure even higher. More than a million women representatives already hold elected positions. A legislation to extend reservation of seats in Parliament is under consideration.

Our challenges in the areas of women’s and children’s health are enormous. We are undertaking multi-pronged strategy to ensure progress including through the National Rural Health Mission launched in 2005 to provide accessible, affordable, accountable, effective and reliable health care in the rural areas.

Madam President,

Before concluding, we would like to add our voice of support to those that have called for more sustained support to the most vulnerable and poorest amongst us. We encourage UNDP to enhance its focus on the development needs of the least developed countries and low-income countries. We expect to see UNDP play a pro-active role in the follow up to the LDC-IV conference in Istanbul. The success of the Istanbul Programme of Action (IPOA) is pivotal in order to improve the state of development in the world.

I thank you, Madam President.

Extempore Remarks delivered by Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri Deputy Permanent Representative of India to the United Nations At UNDP Segment of the Annual Session 2011 of the Executive Board of UNDP/UNFPA/UNOPS (June 13, 2011)

Madam President,

Thank you for giving me the floor, Madam President. My prepared statement is there for circulation. Please therefore allow me to offer some extempore remarks.

Madam President,

First of all I would like to join many others in thanking the Executive Director Ms. Helen Clark for her comprehensive opening remarks. We are meeting here at the time of reviewing the strategic plan. We are also meeting her about four years before our target deadline for meeting the MDGs.

Madam President,

you would agree that it is time for us to introspect, given that we still have a long way to go in meeting the MDGs, including the most important of the challenges, that of poverty eradication. Let me say so, I come from a country which has done well - we have had progress, we have had growth, but we have still continued to remain the country and the region with the largest concentration of poor. You know one speaks with a certain amount of knowledge, of having faced some of these issues.
In such a time, Madam Administrator, you would allow us to ask this simple question - What can UNDP do for us? You would allow us to mention at least in brief a few areas which are truly of high priority for us — for the UN’s major arm on development, the all encompassing body, which reaches out to the developing world for development.

We, of course, are completely with you in saying that we work for sustainable, inclusive and resilient development. Indeed the guiding motto of the Five Year plan currently in force in India is of inclusive growth — which you, Madam Administrator, and your colleagues are well aware of. We believe without doubt that a robust UNDP would be a very good thing for the organization and also for all of us who benefit from your activities.

I just want to make one small observation on an issue that keeps coming up — the issue of transparency — you know, coming from the world’s most open society, the largest number of NGOs, freedom of press, we are certainly for transparency and for the fact that it is very important. Member states as being integral to the UN and the UNDP are equally important — they all have their rightful place and I’m sure we can find means and ways of addressing one and the other in a synergized sort of manner.

Madam Administrator, what are the areas, in which I would request to see UNDP’s strong and active involvement - without doubt the first one is poverty eradication, I mentioned to you that we are four years away from the MDG target dates, we still have a long way to go, it is absolutely imperative, we know the limitation, we know financial situations in many parts of the world. But I think it behoves all of us, as the international community, particularly at the UN, that our organization - which is UNDP — stands at the forefront of poverty eradication.

Madam Administrator, I would like you to do this not only as a part of the implementation of programs but to throw your considerable weight behind poverty eradication, growth and inclusive growth in major international negotiations, international discussions and discourse in the global polity. This will certainly carry a great deal of weight and be of immense benefit to developing countries.

We of course have issues of energy access which stands paramount too. Today we are seeing a spike in global hydrocarbon prices; these are bound to have impact on many parts of the world where development still needs to be pursued in a very concerted manner. We see issues of food security, a day does not go by where we are not reminded, even though we might have some of the best and largest harvests in terms of quantity of grain, that we still face the prospect of droughts and famines – all of these need to be tackled. We hope to see the UNDP get more involved in this particular endeavor.

South-South cooperation, this is another area where you have been active, Madam Administrator. We have all been active in our own ways to the extent of capacities that we have. My country is certainly very proud of what we are able to do for fellow countries in the South, and even be able to provide financial partnerships in the way that we are able to do so. I believe this is an important and core area of the UNDP that is worth our while to nurture it through devotion of real resources, real efforts and management involvement. In terms of these efforts, I will leave you with the thought, of bringing together expertise and technical capacities of the South with UNDP resources for a joint partnership.

Let me stop here, Madam Administrator and Madam President, because time is running out and we have 30 odd speakers more. Before concluding, let me add my voice to those that have called for more sustained support to the most vulnerable and poorest amongst us. We encourage UNDP to enhance its focus on the development needs of the least developed countries and low-income countries. We expect to see UNDP play a pro-active role in the follow up to the LDC-IV conference in Istanbul. The success of the Istanbul Programme of Action (IPOA) is pivotal in order to improve the state of development in the world.

I thank you, Madam President.
Explanation of Vote by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri [After the adoption of the two resolutions succeeding 1267 Sanctions Regime] at the Security Council.

New York, June 17, 2011.

Mr. President,

Terrorism is one of the most serious threats to international peace and security.

International cooperation and concerted action against terrorists and their sponsors, including the complete dismantling of terrorist safe havens, sanctuaries, training grounds and financial and ideological support structures are the critical imperatives to defeat this scourge.

India has confronted terrorism for over three decades and continues to face the challenge of the rising forces of extremism and radicalism in our immediate neighborhood and beyond.

We have the strongest possible and unequivocal commitment to combating terrorism. We are fully supportive of all efforts – bilateral as well as multilateral, that strengthen the international community’s resolve in countering terrorism.

The syndicate of terrorism, with intricate interconnections, comprising Al-Qaeda, elements of the Taliban, Lashkar-e-Taiba and other terrorist groups that operate from within and outside Afghan borders are among the biggest threats from terrorism world-wide. These bonds have strengthened over the years.

Mr. President,

We have joined the consensus in favour of the resolutions adopted today to convey an unequivocal and resolute message from this Council of its steadfast determination in countering terrorism.

India fully supports an Afghan-led inclusive and transparent process of reconciliation, adhering to the redlines as enunciated by the Afghan Government in the London and Kabul communiqués. We respect the right of the Afghan people to decide their own destiny. The capacity of the Afghan Government and people to fight and overcome terrorism must be strengthened.
We also support the views and decisions of the Government and people of Afghanistan as they seek to build a more secure, stable and prosperous future and a strong democracy in their country.

We earnestly hope that the new sanctions regime on Afghanistan would contribute towards meeting these goals of political stability and economic reconstruction in a credible, inclusive and transparent manner. It is our expectation that this would enable the Afghan Government to have a greater say in confronting the challenges emanating from those constituting a threat to the peace, security and stability of Afghanistan.

It is critical that all sanctions regimes established by the Security Council are fair and transparent in their functioning. They must ensure due process in their working procedures and decision-making.

The enhancement of the powers of the Ombudsperson and reforms in de-listing procedures are important steps in this direction. We must ensure that these function in a manner that strengthens our counter-terrorism capacities and do not have implications on the functioning of other sanctions regimes.

Mr. President,

We have repeatedly expressed our concern in this Council that the functioning of the 1267 Sanctions Committee has been subject to political pulls and pressure. This is a scenario that we can ill-afford in our fight against terrorism.

Given the enormity and seriousness of the threat of terrorism, the international community should ensure that it does not in any way dilute or weaken the global legal regime to combat it. There is, in fact continuing urgency to strengthen and make it more comprehensive and effective.

The process of listings as well as de-listings needs to be guided by the same set of principles – fairness, credibility and transparency. Then only would it be ensured that the Sanctions Lists are really effective. We hope that as we move forward, we keep this critical requirement uppermost in our minds.

The work of the Monitoring team has documented the fact that there are linkages between Al-Qaeda and the Taliban. This is a serious matter and needs to be handled with the utmost vigilance. Taliban groups connected with Al Qaeda pose a continuous threat to peace and security in our region.
Mr. President,

Before I conclude, I would like to point out a discrepancy in the text of Al Qaida Sanctions Resolution as agreed to in the negotiations and what has been circulated today. The language in paragraph just before the operative part should read as:

Noting that, in some instances, certain individuals, groups, undertakings, and entities that meet the criteria for listing set forth in paragraph 3 of resolution XXXX (2011) may also meet the criteria for listing set forth in paragraph 4 of this resolution, instead of Noting that, in some instances, certain individuals, groups, undertakings, and entities that meet the criteria for listing set forth in paragraph 4 of this resolution may also meet the criteria for listing set forth in paragraph 3 of resolution XXXX (2011),

In conclusion, Mr. President, let me reiterate India’s steadfast commitment to international cooperation in the fight against terrorism. To this end, it will be our endeavour to work for the effective implementation of these two regimes and their enhanced efficacy.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
At the outset, I would like to thank President Thabo Mbeki and SRSG Haile Menkerios for their briefings on the situation in Abyei and other areas in the Sudan. I also want to thank the PR of the Sudan and Representative of the Government of South Sudan, Mr Ezekiel Lol Gatkuoth, for their statements.

2. Mr. President, over the past month, we witnessed serious deterioration in the security and humanitarian situations in Abyei, Southern Kordofan and adjoining areas. More than one hundred thousand persons are reported to have been displaced. The UNMIS peacekeepers have been obstructed in implementation of their mandate and access of the humanitarian agencies is also restricted. These developments not only underline the fragile security situation but also lack of trust between the CPA parties. As the post-referendum transition period nears its end, the ongoing conflicts can have disastrous consequences for the people inhabiting the region as the parties will divert scarce resources from the urgently needed nation-building tasks.

3. It is, therefore, necessary to expeditiously resolve the stalemate. We commend the efforts of the African Union’s High-level Implementation Panel, led by President Thabo Mbeki, and SRSG Haile Menkerios to facilitate dialogue between the parties and offer a package of agreements on outstanding CPA issues, including security arrangements for Abyei and border, sharing of oil wealth, etc. The negotiations that began last week have led to signing of an agreement on Abyei today. We support the continuing efforts by President Mbeki and SRSG Menkerios to mediate between the parties to resolve other issues and urge the parties to show a spirit of compromise, flexibility and political will to reach a comprehensive agreement other outstanding issues. We also appreciate the role played by Prime Minister Zenawi of Ethiopia for security arrangements for Abyei.

4. Mr. President, a number of pending problems between the North and the South Sudan have long and complicated historical backgrounds. Their resolution requires patience and an approach that takes into consideration long-term interests of all the peoples inhabiting the region. Any attempt to put artificial deadlines and preconceived ideas will not be helpful to enhance mutual trust between the parties, nor for the long-term resolution of the pending issues.
5. We urge all the parties concerned with and interested in the issues between the North and the South to encourage the parties to abjure violence and rededicate themselves to the same spirit in which they have implemented the CPA over the last six years. Unilateral actions, particularly military operations, will not be in the interest of either party. The parties should act with utmost restraint and refrain from provocative actions and ensure freedom of movement and access to UNMIS. They should work towards long-term cooperative relationship that will benefit both the North and the South and help them undertake urgently needed development activities. The international community, including the Security Council, should stand ready to support the parties in implementation of the agreements that they may reach. We hope that the agreement on Abyei’s security will be expeditiously endorsed by a resolution of this Council. To this end, we stand ready to work with the other members of the Council.

Thank you.

731. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UN Security Council briefing on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by thanking USG Patricia O’Brien for briefing the Council on the report of the Secretary General submitted pursuant to Resolution 1976 on the modalities for the establishment of specialized Somali courts to try suspected pirates in Somalia and outside, including an extraterritorial Somali specialized anti-piracy court, and the possible participation of international personnel and other international support and assistance.

2. The international community is facing an unprecedented and growing threat from piracy. The SG’s report presents a very alarming picture. Despite increased naval presence in the Internationally Recommended Transit Corridor (IRTC), piracy attacks off the coast of Somalia have continued to increase, as have the geographical range of the attacks and the level of violence employed by the pirates. As of 14th June, 23 ships are held by pirates, with a total of 477 hostages. The geographical area of the attacks now stretches to 2.8 million square miles, which is not easy for naval forces to patrol. The use of overwhelming force by pirates to overcome security personnel on board merchant ships and the use of hijacked crews as “human shields” is also a matter of serious concern. Piracy is not only a threat to the freedom of maritime navigation, it is causing destabilizing effects on global and regional trade and security, and jeopardizing the life of seafarers who are the lifeblood of international economy.

Mr. President,

3. To combat this menace this Council has adopted a multilateral and multidimensional approach that, as a first step, led to the establishment of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia (CGPCS) in January 2009 of which India is a founder member. Though naval ships deployed in the Gulf of Aden have successfully thwarted several piracy attempts and provided security escorts to merchant marine in these waters, the growing scope and expanding coverage of the problem indicates that the naval operations alone may not be sufficient and there is an urgent need to adopt a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy.

4. In this connection, I would like to mention the issue of seafarers who are the lifeline of merchant shipping. India contributes around 7% of the world’s merchant mariners and thus has an abiding interest in their safety and security. So far the main focus of our concerted efforts has been to protect the ships from pirate attacks and on issues related to prosecution and punishment of pirates. Keeping in view the increasing incidents of seafarers being taken as hostages and the intensity of violence used against them, there is a need to pay special attention on the safety, security and wellbeing of seafarers taken as hostage and their quick release by whatever means appropriate.

Mr. President,

5. In addition to naval solution, this Council is also focusing its attention on ways and means to effectively apprehend, prosecute and punish those who are engaged in committing piracy. Capacity building not only of Somalia but also of other States in the region is an essential component of these mechanisms.

6. India has welcomed efforts for countering piracy by enhancement of regional cooperation and capacity building of states in the region. The international community needs to recognize that any effort for prosecution and imprisonment of pirates cannot succeed without the effective involvement of the States in the region. The issue of imprisonment of convicted persons can be best addressed by building prison infrastructure in the region, ideally in Somalia. It is also important to ensure that sustained and predictable financing is available to the host States to handle the financial burden of prosecuting and imprisoning convicts over long durations.

7. Ensuring sound and prompt prosecution of piracy suspects and their imprisonment subsequent to trial is critical to prevent impunity and to deter further attacks. We fully support strengthening the ongoing assistance programmes of the United Nations extended to regional states to build capacities for prosecution and imprisonment of pirates. UN assistance could focus on the three main components of legal reform, capacity building for prosecution and trial of piracy cases, effective law enforcement, and improvement of prison infrastructure in Somalia and regional States.

8. We commend the efforts of UNODC which has significantly contributed in strengthening, in Puntland and Somaliland, the law enforcement, prosecutorial and judicial capacity. We are very encouraged by the number of piracy cases successfully prosecuted in Somalia and urge UNODC to continue their good efforts.

9. We also appreciate the efforts of UNDP in increasing prison capacity and improving its safety and security in Somalia so that those held responsible for committing acts of piracy can undergo imprisonment in their own country. This would also help in the smooth rehabilitation of convicts once they are released after completing their sentences. Establishment of more such prisons will also enable of transfer of convicted persons from other countries for undergoing rest of their sentence in Somalia.

10. We welcome the States in the region who have volunteered to cooperate in the prosecution and punishment of suspected pirates. We support the establishment of any extra-territorial Somali Court outside Somalia in which Somalis have an ownership – the courts which are manned by the Somali Judges and prosecutors in accordance with Somali Law. We are happy to note from the SG’s Report that the requisite expertise may be available in Somali diaspora and they are willing to contribute to the Somali cause.

Mr. President,

11. Participation of international component as judges and prosecutors in anti-piracy courts may not be a pragmatic and long term solution to the problem. Anti-piracy court cannot be equated with specialized international tribunals set up for dealing with cases of war crimes or crimes against humanity. Pirates belong to an ordinary class of criminals and they should be tried like any other criminal committing such offences on land.
12. Besides being cost effective, the approach with Somali ownership will be relatively easier to implement as it would utilize an existing jurisdiction with established crimes and procedures. The regional proximity would be useful for the purpose of the transfer of suspects by patrolling naval States, and the transfer of those convicted to third States for imprisonment.

Mr. President,

13. We fully support the finding in Annex IV of the Report that steps to disrupt land-based pirate activities and the associated financial flows are necessary in a multi-dimensional counter-piracy approach. Therefore, it is essential to investigate and prosecute individuals who provide the leadership and financial flows for the sustenance of piracy. This would require broader criminal legislation, including crimes of extortion, kidnapping, conspiracy, money laundering and financing of pirate activities. Given the limited capacity of Transitional Federal Government and other countries in the region, there is a strong need for capacity building in this area too with active collaboration of UNODC.

14. In conclusion, Mr President, we would like to emphasize that with the increased presence of international naval forces off the coast of Somalia and in the Gulf of Aden, pirates have moved to other areas and increased pirate activity has been witnessed in the larger Indian Ocean area outside IRTC. India has a strong and abiding interest in ensuring the security of maritime traffic off the Somali coast and the Gulf of Aden. We stand ready to contribute to any international efforts aimed at increasing effective cooperation among States to tackle the threat of piracy and armed robbery at sea and in safety and release of hostages taken by pirates.

Thank you.
732. Statement by Counsellor at the Permanent Mission of India at the UN Vinay Kumar at the UN Security Council briefing on the UN Office to African Union (UNOAU).

Thank you, Mr. President.

First of all, I would like to put on record our appreciation for your efforts in organizing this briefing today. I would also like to thank SRSG and Head of UNOAU Zachary Muburi-Muita for his comprehensive briefing.

2. Just last month, the Council visited Addis Ababa and had a very fruitful exchange of views with the members of the African Union Peace and Security Council and several other leaders in Africa. As much as two-third of the active items on the Council’s agenda concern Africa. About three-fourth of the Council’s time is spent on African issues. It would, therefore, be no exaggeration to say that the success of the efforts of this Council in Africa will significantly determine its overall effectiveness in maintaining international peace and security. In this connection, it is important for us to hear Africa’s voice so that the Council’s activities are not only based on Africa’s needs but also complement those of African countries and organizations. Cooperation with Africa will also enable the Council act with better understanding of the situation, and establish Africa’s ownership of the solutions and thereby promote lasting peace and security on the African continent.

3. Indeed, Mr. President, Chapter VIII of the UN Charter recognizes the importance of the regional organizations and their role in matters relating to international peace and security. The Charter also provides a broad framework for this Council’s cooperation with the regional organizations. We, therefore, welcome the setting up of the UN Office to the African Union. The Office will assist the AU in developing more effective peace and security partnership with the Security Council, strengthen coordination and cooperation between the AU and the UN System, ensure an appropriate level of representation to enhance the strategic and operational partnership of UN with AU and sub-regional organizations, and help the UN deliver key outputs in Africa in an integrated manner.

4. We think that the Office should develop a long-term perspective of its mandate and focus on capacity-building of African Union’s peace and security architecture so that AU becomes a more effective and capable partner of the UN system. To implement its mandate, the Office should be adequately staffed and resourced so that the constraints on its functioning are removed. The Office also needs active support of this Council to carry out its liaison work, particularly in the field of peacekeeping. Simultaneously, the Office should expeditiously work on establishing formalized structure of interaction with different AU bodies and sub-regional organizations. This would not only ensure effective flow of information between the UN and the AU but also help in regular follow up. It is our view that the progress on implementation of UNAU's mandate should be periodically reported to the Security Council. This is essential for understanding practical difficulties and gaining perspective of the Office operating in the field.

5. Mr President, for an effective and enduring cooperation between the UN and the AU, it is necessary that the Council not adopt a selective approach to this cooperation. While the Security Council has the primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security, the Council, as it is structured presently, needs to hear voices of other regions and countries not represented on permanent basis. Alongside the work on reforming the Council, it would add to the credibility of the Council’s action if serious consideration is given to the views of the African Union, particularly when AU can help in expeditiously and peacefully resolving a crisis. In this context, we think that the Council needs to pay heed to the views of the African Union in resolving the Libyan crisis.

6. Mr. President, we hold this view being fully mindful of the demonstrated ability of the African Union to solve problems in Africa. In cooperation with this Council, the AU’s high-level implementation panel for the Sudan has been instrumental in successful implementation of important aspects of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement. The panel is also engaged in resolving outstanding CPA issues as well as the crisis in Darfur. The AU peacekeeping mission in Somalia (AMISOM) is the mainstay of the international efforts to bring peace and stability to Somalia. These are but some examples of AU’s success in resolving African problems.

7. Conscious of AU’s role in handling African issues concerning not only peace and security but also social and development-related, India has institutionalized its cooperation with the African Union. I would like to recall here the historic visit of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Addis Ababa last month to participate in second Africa-India Forum Summit signifying the importance of our relations with African states. Given the similarity of our objectives with those the AU, the summit will serve to further deepen development partnership between India and AU, as also in the field of peace and security. India is contributing US$ 1.5 million to AU without any caveats for its AMISOM operations. India will also provide credit lines of US$ 5 billion for the next three years to help Africa achieve its development goals. India will provide an additional US$ 700 million for establishment of new institutions and training programmes in consultation with the African Union and its institutions.
India has also proposed 10,000 new scholarships under India-Africa Virtual University for African students after establishment of the University.

8. Mr. President, all these activities will enhance AU’s institutional capacity and help this Council as well in dealing with African issues in partnership with AU.

Thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Thank you, Mr. President.

2. I would join other colleagues in thanking Ambassador Nester Osorio for presenting the 90-day report of the 1737 Committee. We appreciate the work of the Committee under Ambassador Osorio’s stewardship. We also note the Panel of Experts’ report which is under consideration of the 1737 Committee.

3. Mr. President, as a country abiding by its obligations under international treaties and having strong credentials of non-proliferation, India has taken a consistent stand on the Iran nuclear issue. We support the right of all States, including Iran, to peaceful use of nuclear energy. Exercise of this right should, however, be consistent with their international obligations.

4. We believe that the International Atomic Energy Agency has a central role in resolution of technical issues concerning Iranian nuclear programme. Iran should cooperate fully with the IAEA to restore international confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear programme. We support intensification of efforts to address the Iranian nuclear issue by peaceful means, through dialogue and negotiation.

5. Mr. President, we call upon all sides to fully implement the resolutions this Council has adopted. All efforts should be made to ensure that legitimate trade and economic activities of Iran and other countries do not suffer while implementing the measures sanctioned by the relevant resolutions.

6. Earlier this month, the mandate of the Panel of Experts was extended for another year. We support the Panel’s work to assist the 1737 Committee in a fair and transparent manner. Like any other Panel, we expect that the work of the Panel will be in accordance with its mandate. On our part, we will continue to engage with other members of the Committee to enable its work effectively and efficiently.

Thank you.

New York, June 24, 2011.

Mr. President,

I would like to commence by thanking the Gabonese Presidency for organizing this session on transnational organized crime and drug trafficking.

I would also like to thank the Executive Director of the UNODC for his briefing.

Mr. President,

Transnational organized crime and drug trafficking does not exist in isolation. They belong to a malignant complex that includes terrorism, money laundering, illegal arms-trafficking and the illegal movement of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially deadly materials. This wider malignancy is destroying and destabilizing societies and nations.

Weak and fragile states, such as those on the agenda of this Council, are particularly vulnerable. Even as many parts of the world enjoy unprecedented peace, prosperity and technological advancement, they remain mired in unending conflict and misery. Some of these conflicts have lasted for decades, imposing a human cost that it is difficult to comprehend. Economies have been wrecked and human and material resources that could have fuelled progress have been diverted.

Non-state actors and criminal organizations are amongst the principal delinquents responsible for this state of affairs. They thrive in areas of conflict and in post-conflict situations. Their activities exploit the weaknesses of the nations they operate in and are designed to perpetuate these weaknesses.
Their success is evident from the fact that their organizational capacities and firepower match or even better those of many States. They have much in common with terrorists, with whom they ally, because they have the same objectives and use the same methods. Their motivations are also the same even as they attempt to mask these motivations with great sophistication.

One of the great tragedies of our times has been the inability of some States to see through the machinations of this criminal-terrorist nexus. Their shortsightedness has imposed a cost that the whole international community is bearing.

Mr. President,

The threat posed by drug trafficking deserves special mention.

More than 90% of the world’s production of opium takes place in India’s neighborhood. We are situated between the two large drug trafficking zones—the Golden Crescent centered around the Afghanistan area and the Golden Triangle in the Myanmar-Laos area. The illicit production and trafficking of drugs has spawned a huge network of criminal groups in our neighborhood with close links to various international terrorist networks. The money and resources generated from these activities are fuelling the growth of terrorism and funding extremist groups.

Mr. President,

It is evident that the threat posed by transnational organized crime, drug-trafficking, terrorism, money laundering, illegal arms-trafficking and the illegal movement of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially deadly materials requires a coordinated global response on the part of the international community.

We believe that the United Nations is the best mechanism for developing this coherent transnational response. India is committed to strengthening the international normative and legislative mechanisms that are required to create a framework for countering this threat.

In this connection, I am happy to inform you that India ratified the UN Convention against Transnational Organised Crimes and its three Protocols last month.

We are also strengthening this international framework by entering into several bilateral and pluri-lateral agreements and memoranda of understanding in this area.

Mr. President,
The UNODC also deals with corruption and I am glad to inform you that that the Government of India has ratified the UN Convention Against Corruption last month.

At the operational level, we are committed to strengthening the international structures that respond to these threats. We are committed to the sharing and exchange of information. We would also like to exchange best practices. We believe that assisting members states in training of law enforcement officials on a regular basis should receive priority in the international cooperation agenda.

We support UNODC efforts to assist in developing capacities, training and in creating the administrative, legal and institutional frameworks for fighting transnational organized crimes. Indian agencies are working in these fields with UNODC in some South Asian countries. We have contributed an amount of US $ 200,000 to the Paris Pact Initiative of UNODC and will host the meeting of the Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies this year.

Mr. President,

The late Prime Minister of India, Indira Gandhi, said, and I quote, “A nation’s strength ultimately consists in what it can do on its own.” We believe that determined national efforts are required. The cornerstone in this fight still is the supply reduction strategies by sustained alternative development programmes for the cultivators of drug-yielding crops as well as overall economic development of the concerned regions.

Mr. President,

India chairs the Counter-Terrorism Committee of the Council. We have found that terrorists and criminals nourish each other. Terrorists, like criminals and drug- traffickers, recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others.

An effective international counter-terrorism strategy must complement and supplement an effective international strategy to combat transnational organized crime, drug-trafficking, money laundering, illegal arms-trafficking and the illegal movement of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially deadly materials.

There is a need for a new global compact to tackle terrorism and transnational crime. We need to remove the moral and legal ambiguities that allow terrorists and criminals to gain succor and even legitimacy.

We need an international mechanism to ensure accountability and justice. We need concerted international efforts to expose and destroy the linkages that exist between terrorists and criminals and their State and non-State supporters. We need to expand the scope of the legal instruments and expand enforcement efforts to destroy their safe havens, their financial flows and their support networks.

We would also argue that the need to squarely face the complicity of states is a central requirement if we are to succeed.

Mr. President,

He, who does not prevent a crime when he can, encourages it.

India has been a targeted victim of crime and terrorism and has paid an enormous price over the years. Thousands of innocent victims have lost their lives. As we prepare to mark the 10th anniversary of 9/11, we should collectively resolve to confront and vanquish terror and the terror-crime nexus. We owe it to our future generations to give them a safe and secure world.

Thank you.

735. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the First Annual Meeting of the Executive Board of the UN Women.

New York, June 27, 2011.

Madam President,

I am happy to participate today in the first annual session of the Executive Board of UN Women. I would like to thank the Executive Director, Madam Bachelet for the presentation of the Strategic Plan of UN Women for the period 2011-13 including her report on her recent country visits. Madam President,

I have had the occasion to observe earlier that Madam Bachelet’s appointment as Executive Director augured well for UN Women which got off to an excellent start. We now see the evidence. The first Strategic Plan of UN Women should be ambitious, achievable and results oriented. We believe that this document is a critical document as it sets out the right note for the rest of the work to follow.
We are pleased to note that this document further develops the vision as well as the strategy for UN Women, which Madam Bachelet had set forth in the January meeting of the Executive Board of UN Women.

We are satisfied with the elements of the Strategic Plan and are particularly happy that the Strategic Plan takes into account our priorities for gender equality and the empowerment of women. The Strategic Plan which we have in front of us is comprehensive and has practical Management Results Framework (MRF) and Development Results Framework (DRF) with concrete and measurable results, targets, indicators and baselines.

UN Women has to play a strong leadership role globally as well as within the UN system on all women related issues. Needless to say, the elements of Strategic Plan have rightly captured all the major priorities of UN Women.

Madam President,

We are appreciative of the fact that the first core principle of the Strategic Plan is the issue of demand-driven support to national partners. This will ensure customizing the activities of UN Women in each country and guarantee, “to each, according to their needs”.

The gender issue, due to its cross-cutting nature, has resulted in engagement of multiplicity of UN actors in the field. We note that UN Women will develop coordination mechanisms that will enable the United Nations country team to “Deliver as One” in support of this issue. This is exactly the kind of coordination we seek to achieve.

We look forward to close cooperation with sub-regional office of UN Women in India in the coming days.

In addition, with the establishment of clear results based framework, we are confident that our own agencies in the field, as well as civil society will have better coordination and cooperation with the UN system.

Madam President,

Over the years, we have taken considerable steps to overcome traditional mindsets about women and gender stereotypes and ensure that women can play a more equitable role in all aspects of society. Today, we have made commendable progress, but challenges remain.

Our successes in the field of political empowerment are historic. We have more than a million women elected to local bodies, thereby enabling them to be the decision making authority in the mainstream discourse of development.
We have focused considerably on socio-economic empowerment of women, with focus on education, health, employment, micro-finance, access to agricultural land, social security measures and rural infrastructure.

This has inculcated the spirit of entrepreneurship in Indian women. They have been successful in breaking the “glass ceiling” in the corporate world and have come to occupy positions as top executives in banks and corporate board rooms, both in India as well as globally.

In addition, we are striving to provide a safe environment for women to enable them to live their lives and engage in livelihoods with respect and dignity.

We strongly condemn violence against women in all forms. India has enacted legislation against domestic violence, child marriage, and prenatal sex selection. More recently a Bill has been tabled in the Parliament for prevention of sexual harassment at the work place.

To address the problem of violence against women holistically, a multi-pronged strategy has been adopted including, legislation, advocacy and awareness raising as well as programs for socio-economic empowerment of women. We are happy that this important issue is being addressed in Development Results Goal 3 of the Strategic Plan.

The Government is also giving impetus to Gender Budgeting initiative for mainstreaming of gender concerns across sectors/schemes/programmes. While this is a continuing process, the budget allocation for women, as a percentage of the Union Budget, has increased from 4.5% in 2005-06 to 6.22% in 2011-12.

I must also mention that we are currently in the process of formulating our 12th National Five Year Plan. A multi-pronged approach to women’s empowerment is the hallmark of the comprehensive strategy towards ensuring “more inclusive and sustainable growth”.

We expect the UN Women to become a global knowledge hub with country-specific data on evidence-based and effective approaches on combating violence against women. We intend to draw from this the best practices for use and application in India.

Madam President,

I would like to touch upon one important aspect, which will largely determine the success of UN Women and to ensure that it does not meet the same fate of the former UNIFEM. That is the issue of financial resources.
Nearly 6 months after its operationalization, the actual contributions and pledges received are modest and only around US$ 80 million. This is not commensurate with the aspiration and ambition assigned to UN Women.

We must not be oblivious of the fact that activities enumerated in the Strategic Plan need resources. The Strategic Plan envisages financial requirement of nearly US $ 1.2 billion in 2011-13. If we have to ensure that UN Women stands for action, the donor community has to make generous contributions to UN Women.

India has made an actual contribution of US $ 1 million to UN Women in April. We will also be making an additional substantial contribution in the near future. We will provide full political and financial support to UN Women and call on others to do likewise.

We hope that the donor community will not only demonstrate strong political commitment but also equally demonstrate strong financial support in the form of predictable core funding to UN Women.

Madam President,

It is critical at this juncture that we endorse this Strategic Plan so that UN Women could kick start its activities in the field swiftly. The expectation and anticipations are high, and we must stand up to that.

The establishment of UN Women is one of the truly transformative steps and important reforms which the United Nations has undertaken. It is up to us, members of the Executive Board, to ensure that Madam Bachelet and her team are given the necessary authority, mandate and resources to deliver. Let me take this opportunity to once again reiterate India’s strong support for the Strategic Plan and its early implementation.

Thank you.
Extempore Remarks by Permanent Representative at the UN Hardeep Singh Puri at the Informal Thematic debate on “the United Nations in Global Governance”.

Thank you very much Mr. President.

I want to encourage my distinguished colleague from New Zealand to attend a few more interactive sessions on Security Council reform. There are indeed some interesting sessions which have taken place-interactive almost to the point where one of the participants said that you cannot change the outcome of the Second World War through Security Council reform! And these were not prepared speeches. This was emotion running riot.

Security Council reform certainly lies somewhere at the heart of this panel discussion. But I will come back to that in a minute.

Based on the inspiration that I have drawn from the very interesting, very incisive interventions of Ambassador Amorim and Professor Thakur, let me place before you four propositions. May be ‘propositions’ is not the correct word, because these are self-evident, so I would say these are truisms.

One: that organizational lethargy begets structural blind spots.

Two: the lessons of history will remain lessons of history if not properly learnt and understood.

Three: reform or step aside.

Four: denial is not a governance response.

And let me now start, Mr. President, by taking up one or two simple points which were made.

Why is ECOSOC not addressing the economic crisis in Greece?

ECOSOC could not even address the world economic and financial crisis, when it broke out in the last few months of 2008. The G20 Finance Ministers meeting in Sao Paolo, decided to convert the G20 to a Heads of State/Government, a Summit level meeting in order to address the crisis. Lo and behold, what would have happened if ECOSOC had actually addressed the world economic and financial crisis? In some respects, I am very glad that it didn’t. Otherwise, the total irrelevance of ECOSOC to that crisis would have stood out.
What do we do with ECOSOC?

I am not going to go into detail. ECOSOC had a certain utility when it was the electoral college and you needed it to get elected to the Human Rights Council. Now, that it is no longer the case. My recommendation to all those who are dealing with ECOSOC is: take a serious look, do some serious introspection and decide where you want to go with ECOSOC.

Now let me just say that in today’s world, we have talked about the challenges of climate change, the scourge of terrorism, violent and vicious forces of intolerance, unresolved development gaps, so on and so forth.

In the coming days, the United Nations is going to be tested not only by the political upheavals in North Africa and West Asia, but by a number of other issues.

Therefore I admire you, Mr. President, for the choice of your theme: that is “How can the UN remain relevant in addressing tomorrow’s global challenges”. There is an optimistic streak here, a presumption there that the UN is relevant today. And that what we do here actually has a bearing on what happens in the world.

Let me take one example, the so-called political process in Libya.

Resolution 1973 is absolutely clear. It talks about cessation of hostilities. We cannot get a ceasefire in the Security Council.

Why?

Because those who sit in the Council and those who voted in favour of 1973 have decided, may be due to mission creep, that regime change is an essential requirement. So, their position is, first the current political dispensation must give way and then the political process can start. In other words, if the current dispensation is not removed physically or otherwise, the kind of devastation which is going on there on a large scale will continue.

And I was astounded in the Security Council yesterday to have to hear from a senior member of the Secretariat saying it seems that Gaddafi has killed more civilians than NATO. Which means that you are acknowledging that NATO’s contribution to the killing of civilians-it was supposed to go in there for protection of civilians—is as significant.

These are very serious issues. If we cannot get action on a ceasefire in Libya in terms of our own resolution, Mr. President, we have a crisis on our hands and let us acknowledge that crisis.
We had the African Union High Level Panel in New York recently, they didn’t come to the Council, but to some other meeting. They said they have a road map. If the Council is serious about a ceasefire it should be encouraging the African Union as the regional grouping there to take responsibility and we should be backing that up. But no, because there are differences in terms of the approach.

Let me come to the second truism.

The lessons of history will remain lessons of history. Everyone knows that the institutions of global governance do not reflect the shift that has taken place of global economic reality, the power, the economic activity from Europe and the Americas to Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Reform or step aside is my third truism.

The G20 arose as a response to a global reality. Because the current institutions did not have the wherewithal to address the challenges which the G20 was able to. But what did we do in this organization. And I am like Ambassador Amorim — I am neither for nor against the G20. To me the G20 was a response, a product of the times.

What did we do?

We didn’t say, lets find out what we can do to deal with the macroeconomic issues that the G20 was addressing. And all the time we were carping on how the G20 does not have the legitimacy, the G20 must not do this; there must be a response. But nowhere did we say that the lessons learnt from the global economic and financial crisis must be utilized to reform the UN’s economic governance structures.

Denial is not a governance response.

I keep asking myself Mr. President, whether we need something terrible or awful to happen again before we can put in place another appropriate international architecture to replace the current one. The current one clearly reflects the outcome of the Second World War and the thinking’ to the victor belong the spoils.’ Do we remain blind to the fact that 70% of the Security Council’s meeting have been on Africa in the last six months that I have been on it. And in terms of the amount of time spent, more than 90% of the Council’s attention was on African issues. What more do we need to remind us on that. And yet there is there is not a single African country as a permanent member on the Council.

Where are we headed? And this is not the situation with the Security Council alone.
Recently, we had a large meeting of the Least Developed Countries in Istanbul. And there are 48 of them. Out of a total of 192 nations in the UN, a total of 48 are Least Developed Countries, and if you take the other categories—the small island developing states, the landlocked etc, and you remove the overlaps, you have a total of 90. There was not a single high-level representative of the G7 or the G8 in Istanbul. There was no new commitment on ODA. Existing commitments are sought to be reiterated where they can. Other countries, donors spoke of, you know resources not being available and a conscious attempt to divert attention from North-South commitments to South-South cooperation. Those of us who are active participants in South-South cooperation are very happy. But you know, South-South will take some time to bridge the gap between the flows from the North to the South. Some things are changing. There is more foreign direct investment from the South to the South than the ODA, which means that the market place is changing.

Let me conclude by saying that I find today’s session to be extremely optimistic. But the question is how relevant the UN is today and whether it will remain relevant in 2025. I am not entirely sure about our relevance beyond those of us who are actually involved in the industry of the UN. I think the market place’s perception of us is quite different.

Someone said that the Special Envoy of the SG is not being able to get an audience with a political leader here or there.

Why? There’s a very clear explanation.

Because we are not viewed, you know, as wanting to go in there and actually resolve the issue in an impartial manner. Because the shots are being called from elsewhere.

So my submission is, in order to be relevant we have to make ourselves relevant. And unless we have the political will for that, I am afraid there is going to be a problem.

Thank you.
Mr. President,

At the outset, I would like to congratulate you on assuming the President of the Security Council and commend the PR of Gabon and his team for steering the work of the Council in June. I also wish to thank you for scheduling today’s debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I also thank Ambassador Zahir Tanin, Permanent Representative of Afghanistan, for his statement. We are grateful for the latest report of the Secretary General and are appreciative of the briefing by SRSG Staffan de Mistura.

Mr. President,

2. Afghanistan is amidst the beginning of a phase of implementation of the transition where the Afghan National Security Forces would start assuming security responsibility in seven key areas including Kabul. This is a critical phase for Afghanistan as well as the international community.

3. We are deeply concerned that the challenges confronting Afghanistan, particularly on the security front, do not appear to be receding. On the contrary, the overall security environment continues to deteriorate. The Secretary General’s report notes that there has been a 51% increase in security incidents as compared to the same period in 2010, characterized by significant increase in suicide attacks, abductions and assassinations.

4. Terrorist attacks on the UNAMA compound in Mazar-e-Sharif and the Government buildings in Kandhar, the coordinated suicide attack at the highly secured Intercontinental Hotel in Kabul and on a hospital in Logar corroborate the change in tactics wherein the Taliban and other opposition groups are opting for soft civilian targets. As pointed out in our last statement on this subject on 17th March, these attacks point to a dangerous osmosis of ideologies, ambitions, training and operations among the syndicate of terrorism in the region with suicide terrorism as its main technique, and targets not limited to Afghanistan. This, the international community in its hurry to withdraw from a combat role in Afghanistan, will ignore at its peril.

5. It, therefore, becomes crucial that the transition must be linked to the ground realities rather than rigid timetable. A constant assessment and review of the evolving situation in coordination with the Afghan Government is essential in this regard.

6. We appreciate the enhanced collaboration among the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) and Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF).
Building the requisite strength and capabilities of ANSF, along with adequate enablers, is imperative to the transition of security responsibilities. It is important that the transition must be Afghan owned, transition must be planned and implemented in a systematic manner, and transition must ensure the protection and promotion of the human rights of all Afghans.

7. For security and stabilization of Afghanistan, it is important to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which include elements of the Al Qaida, Taliban, Laskar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups operating from within and outside Afghanistan’s borders. These groups are ideologically and operationally fused and their bonds have strengthened over the years.

8. As the Secretary General’s report points out, the insurgency in Afghanistan remains resilient, demonstrating capability to launch multiple complex attacks. The continued resilience of the insurgents, their changing tactics, their numbers and their spreading out to areas earlier considered safe are a grim reminder that the security gains would remain transient unless the international community is able to firmly deal with safe havens for terrorist groups outside Afghanistan’s borders.

9. India fully supports an Afghan-led inclusive and transparent process of reconciliation, adhering to the redlines as enunciated by the Afghan Government in the London and Kabul communiqués. It must be accompanied by an inclusive political process and intra-Afghan dialogue. It is important that antecedents of those willing to reintegrate must be ascertained and it needs to be ensured that they are genuine reconciled.

10. We support the views and decisions of the Government and people of Afghanistan as they seek to build a more secure, stable and prosperous future and a strong democracy in their country. The Afghan people must be allowed to re-build their land in conditions of peace and security free from interference from their neighbours and they must be the arbiters of their own destiny.

11. It is our expectation that the new sanctions regime established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1988 would enable the Afghan Government to have a greater say in confronting the challenges from those constituting a threat to peace, security and stability of Afghanistan. Afghan ownership and leadership are also vital for development and reconstruction in Afghanistan. This also implies greater coherence, coordination and further streamlining of international community’s development-related efforts including aligning of assistance with Afghan national priorities and increasingly working through Afghan institutions. We are happy to note that UNAMA continues to align its priorities with the Afghan government.

Mr. President,
12. India and Afghanistan share a strategic partnership based on the strong foundations of rich, historical and civilizational bonds and shared pursuit of regional peace and prosperity. India remains committed to partnering the Government and people of Afghanistan in the building of a peaceful, stable, democratic and pluralistic nation.

13. India’s assistance programme is spread across Afghanistan and spans almost the entire gamut of economic and social development activities. Assisting Afghanistan in its reconstruction efforts, in capacity building and skills for human resource development, and building Afghanistan’s public institutions is a special area of priority for India.

14. As mentioned by Ambassador Tanin in his statement, during his last visit to Afghanistan on May 12-13, 2011, our Prime Minister announced an additional assistance of US $ 500 million, over and above India’s existing commitments of US $ 1.5 billion.

15. Afghanistan’s stability and economic development depend a lot on its neighbours and the region as a whole. Closer economic integration with India and other countries in the region is the key to Afghanistan’s future and prosperity.

16. The area of Afghanistan south of the Hindu Kush all the way up to the Ganges Delta, form a part of a single geographical and economic basin, with the plains of India constituting the centre of its economic gravity. It is by far Afghanistan’s largest regional market – a potential source of investment, skills, training, technology and expertise and a model of democracy and natural institution building in a culturally comfortable context.

17. Afghanistan has an immense potential as a land bridge linking Central, West and South Asia and emerging as a trade, transport and energy hub. The recent developments in regional cooperation including the signing of the agreement on Turkmenistan- Afghanistan- Pakistan- India gas pipeline project would provide added impetus to regional cooperation. Growing economic interdependence would catalyze peace and prosperity in the region at large and in Afghanistan, in particular. Afghanistan as a SAARC member since 2005 is increasingly becoming active as a fellow SAARC member. India, as a neighbour, will continue its efforts towards the greater integration of Afghanistan in the regional framework.

18. In conclusion, Mr. President, we commend the good work done by UNAMA. At this critical juncture, it is imperative that the international community continues to remain steadfast in its support to the Government of Afghanistan as per its priorities.

Thank you.
Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me begin by welcoming you, Mr President, to New York. I thank you for chairing our open debate today. I also wish to welcome the honourable ministers from South Africa, Colombia, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Portugal to the Security Council. I also would like to note with appreciation the presence of the Secretary General. This underlines the importance we all attach to the issue under consideration. I would also like to express our appreciation for Germany’s able stewardship of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict and for organizing this debate.

Mr. President,

2. Rabindranath Tagore, the national poet of India, said that “Every child comes with the message that God is not yet discouraged of man.” Children constitute a third of humanity – the most important third. They are also the weakest and, therefore, the most susceptible to suffering. If we are to be judged by how we treat the weakest amongst us, then we have a lot to account for.

3. Children continue to suffer appallingly from violence, from hunger, and from illness. What is perhaps more tragic is the manner in which millions of children are condemned to live life in the margins, bereft of opportunity, and sometimes of hope. They do so when other more fortunate children embark upon lives of unprecedented prosperity and promise.

4. Mr. President, President Nelson Mandela has said that “We owe our children, the most vulnerable citizens in our society, a life free of violence and fear.” This is in some ways, the primary responsibility of every government, the most important element of the social contract between governments and citizens. The work of the United Nations on Children in general and on Children and Armed Conflict in particular, is therefore amongst its most important activities.

5. India believes that the international community has the responsibility, and indeed the obligation, to do its utmost to provide succor to children affected by armed conflict. We have engaged constructively in the ongoing efforts to make the efforts of the United Nations more relevant and effective in this area. We strongly support the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict. We have participated actively in its deliberations and will continue to contribute to the strengthening of a regime which protects children in situations of armed conflict.

6. The work being done by the international community in this area is, in some ways, at the cutting edge of international politics and international law. We need to move forward with deliberation after taking into account the concerns and experiences of member states. India has a number of concerns about the manner in which Security Council resolutions in this area are being interpreted. Several delegations that have spoken before me have raised the same concerns.

7. My delegation believes that the provisions of the Charter of United Nations must be followed consistently and scrupulously. Member States should not outsource the exercise of their basic prerogatives and responsibilities to international civil servants. The actions of the international community that have legal and judicial characteristics must be in accordance with the doctrine of natural justice and separation of powers. The principle of audi alteram partem or “hear both sides” must be adhered to. “Mandate creep” must be checked and countered.

8. Mr. President, India deplores grave violations and crimes against children during war. We have ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Optional Protocols and are committed to the norms and practices that are associated with this international regime.

9. The Government of India accords the highest priority to ensuring that the rights of children in India are protected. 19% of the worlds' children are Indian and we have created a legal and institutional framework to protect and promote their rights and their well being. A National Charter for Children has been adopted. Free and compulsory education upto the age of 14 years has been declared a fundamental right. A National Commission for Protection of Children has also been set up. A National Plan of Action for Children has also been adopted. The Government of India is committed to creating, through these and other initiatives, a protective environment for children.

10. In this connection, I would also like to point out that civil society in India is an integral part of this framework. We consider civil society to be a valued partner in our national and international efforts on children's issues.

11. Mr. President, India has been at the forefront of converting this Council's word into deed through its peacekeeping mandates. More than 100,000 Indian troops and policemen have participated in peacekeeping operations over the past five decades. Based on our experience on the ground, we would like to emphasize that the central challenge in the implementation of this Council’s mandates is the question of resources.
12. I am sure that SRSG Coomaraswamy, whose commitment to the job we greatly admire, will agree with me when I say that more Child Protection Advisors are required with more resources in peacekeeping missions. We would encourage the SRSG to work with national authorities in developing capacities to deal with children in armed conflict. We believe that support for efforts by national authorities to end impunity and ensure accountability should be a key focus area.

13. The Monitoring and Reporting Mechanism requires the involvement of Member States and close supervision by them in order to ensure veracity and credibility. We expect that the process of data collection and analysis and that of listing and de-listing will be carried out in a transparent and judicious manner under the close supervision of Member States.

14. Mr. President, vast numbers of children are affected and traumatized by armed conflict. However, we cannot lose sight of the economic and social marginalization of the poorest nations that is driving hundreds of millions more into the kind of childhood that could well make them part of tomorrow’s problems rather than tomorrow’s solutions. We need to address this broader picture, the destitution and desperation that claim even more lives than armed conflict, and that often pave the way for a fresh cycle of violence. This, unfortunately, does not attract the attention of the international media, nor can it be an issue on the mandate of the Security Council, but in our discussions here, we need to make sure that our focus is not distorted and that we do not lose sight of the larger emergency which faces us and which constitutes a global challenge.

15. In concluding, Mr. President, I would like to quote an English author who said that “Children begin by loving their parents; after a time, they judge them; rarely, if ever, do they forgive them.” We must not be found lacking in our efforts if we have any chance of forgiveness from the children who are our future.

Thank you.
739. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri in the Security Council meeting on the Sudan.

New York, July 13, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

It gives me great pleasure to welcome Vice President Dr. Riek Machar and other members of his delegation to the Council on this historic occasion. I also wish to welcome the honourable ministers participating in today’s session, yourself, Mr. President, and those from Brazil, Bosnia-Herzegovina, South Africa, France, Portugal, Russian Federation and United Kingdom to the Security Council. Their presence in our midst today underlines the importance we all attach to this occasion. I would like to thank Under Secretary General and my distinguished colleague the Permanent Representative of the Sudan Mr. Ali Osman for their statements.

2. Mr. President, sixty-four years ago India’s first Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru had declared, “at the stroke of the midnight hour, when the world sleeps, India will awake to life and freedom. A moment comes, which comes but rarely in history, when we step out from the old to the new, when an age ends, and when the soul of a nation, long suppressed, finds utterance.”

3. Today is one such moment of a tryst being kept with destiny when after a long struggle, the voice of the people of South Sudan has found expression. Let me, at the outset, convey the Government of India’s warm welcome to the new state of South Sudan born on 9 July 2011, after a peaceful and transparent Referendum where the people of South Sudan voted to form a new State. Our Vice President H.E. Mr. Hameed Ansari participated in the joyous celebrations in Juba on 9 July.

4. Mr. President, the Government of India commends the leadership of both the Sudan and South Sudan who have shown exemplary patience and maturity to see the fulfillment of this important CPA landmark, which India has supported from its very beginning in 2005. We, therefore, convey our congratulations to both the parties for successfully marching to this day.

5. India and Sudan share the most cordial of relations. We are deeply committed to the development and to the peace and prosperity of Sudan. It is in this context that India welcomes the developments over the past year in the Sudan which have brought peace closer to this troubled land. In particular, we welcome the emergence of South Sudan as a new State and the newest member of the international community. As a member of the Security Council, it has been our great pleasure to be associated with adoption of a resolution today that will lead to the General Assembly accepting the Council’s recommendation on South Sudan’s application for UN membership. We look forward to South Sudan joining the United Nations as a full fledged member tomorrow.

6. Mr. President, India and Sudan have deep-rooted ties. For over a hundred years, people of Indian origin have made Sudan their home. Nearly 10,000 persons of Indian origin live in Khartoum, Omdurman, Wad Madani and Port Sudan. The economic interaction between the two countries is substantial and our two-way trade is around US $ 1 billion per annum. This is among the largest with the countries of Africa. India was one of the first Asian countries to open a consulate in Juba. This will soon be upgraded to an Embassy. We look forward to the continued growth and diversification of these relations as the two Sudans chart their independent destinies.

7. There have recently been exchanges of high level visits from both sides. These interactions have facilitated substantial exchange of views for chartering the course of action and future road map for intensifying our relations with both Khartoum and Juba. For India, the two entities of Sudan taken together remain a major force and partner in Africa. The recent India-Africa Forum Summit held in Addis Ababa testifies to our commitment to working together with our African friends for the collective development of Africa.

8. Mr. President, India was witness to the Nivasha Agreement of January 2005 establishing the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA). We have watched the progress made in its implementation with keen interest and are happy to see an important CPA landmark achieved with South Sudan’s independence. We are sure that outstanding CPA issues, like status of Abyei etc. will also be dealt with by both sides in the same spirit of cooperation and mutual accommodation. In this regard, we deeply appreciate the work done by the Special Representative of the Secretary General, Mr. Haile Menkerios in overseeing the implementation of the CPA and in maintaining peace in the region. We are happy to note that the agreement between both sides to demilitarize Abyei, which demonstrates the will of the two sides to jointly move ahead towards a negotiated settlement. In keeping with this spirit of seeing a peaceful and prosperous region, we also support all ongoing efforts at achieving peace in Sudan, including the Darfur issue. We would like this issue to be resolved soon. Our appreciation is due to the State of Qatar and the African Union High Level Implementation Panel (AUHIP) on Sudan, led by Mr. Thabo Mbeki who has played a very significant role in this regard.

9. India has been one of the largest troop contributors to the United Nations Mission in Sudan (UNMIS) in addition to the notable contribution of Indian Police officers to both UNMIS and the Government of South Sudan. We have recently pledged US$ 5 million for development assistance to South Sudan as also other capacity building projects under our Aid to Africa and IAFS-II programme. Sudan is a major beneficiary under India’s Technical and Economic Cooperation programme. To continue our engagement with South Sudan under this programme, 75 additional seats have recently been announced for South Sudan. The Pan-Africa E-Network Project undertaken by India in Africa has been a huge success. We are considering to extend the entire package of Pan-Africa E-Network, including its tele-medicine and tele-education components, to South Sudan. As already indicated by the Hon’ble Foreign Minister of Brazil, India also intends to work along with Brazil and South Africa as part of the IBSA group and within the IBSA Fund on projects that benefit the peoples of both the Sudan and South Sudan.

10. Mr. President, we recognize that the Sudan and South Sudan will face enormous challenges in the years ahead as they chart their independent destinies. For its part, India is ready to assist this process, both on a bilateral basis and on the basis of its rapidly growing interaction with Africa. On behalf of the Government and the people of India, may I once again congratulate the leadership of both the Sudan and South Sudan for their statesmanship, their commitment to peace and to the welfare of their peoples. India stands ready to extend all possible assistance in their path to progress and prosperity.

Thank you.

740. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN
Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UN Security Council debate on “Impact of Climate Change”.

New York, July 20, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President,

At the outset, I would like to thank the Secretary General and UNEP Executive Director Achim Steiner for their statements.

Mr. President, the interest and participation that today’s open debate has evoked testifies to the importance that we all attach to the subject of climate change. I particularly want to acknowledge the presence of the President of Nauru and other dignitaries in our midst today and look forward to hearing their views on the issue under our consideration. Climate Change is a challenge that lies at the forefront of the global development agenda, and is close to the heart of Small Island States for whom it poses an existential threat.

Climate Change, in an overarching sense, is beginning to impact the security of the global community; in the same way as poverty, food security, and underdevelopment continue to undermine international well-being. Sweeping generalisations about Climate change leading to droughts, floods, changes in weather patterns, water and food scarcity and violent conflicts are, however, yet to be fully tested against empirical and scientific analyses.

The 4th IPCC report and other scientific authorities unequivocally speak of this uncertainty. This is also corroborated by the Secretary General’s report A/64/350 on “Climate Change and its possible security implications”, which concludes that while climate modelling has made considerable advances in forecasting the future behaviour of natural systems, the science of climate change and its physical impacts still confront a number of uncertainties.

Sea-level rise, on the other hand, is happening. There is verifiable evidence to suggest sea-level increase of a metre or more by 2100 which could lead to disappearance of several Small Island States and submergence of low lying coastal areas in many littoral States. We are particularly aware of its gravity given the vulnerability of our own people living on island chains and in coastal areas. There are also issues of “Statelessness”, and displacement of people which are deeply worrisome. Faced with these challenges, what must the global community do? The answer quite clearly, first and foremost, lies in taking remedial action today rather than focussing on implications of such climate induced disasters in the distant future.

Mr. President,
The Concept Paper for this debate states that the purpose of today’s engagement is to allow the Council to deliberate on security implications of climate change, consistent with its mandate, and advance the dialogue on this issue from the security perspective.

In this context, it is worth keeping in mind that while the Security Council can debate the issue and may recognise vulnerabilities and threats induced by climate change, it does not have the wherewithal to address the situation. The existential threat to Island States or food insecurity on account of climate change cannot be resolved or remedied by the Council under Article 39 of the UN Charter. Clearly, these issues need a broader approach anchored in development, adaptive capacity, risk assessment and institution build-up. We, therefore, have some difficulty in accepting the assertion made that the effects of climate change go beyond the mandate of the UNFCCC.

Mr. President,

If we are serious about addressing the vulnerabilities arising out of Climate Change, then our deliberations on climate change must focus on reducing GHG emissions and strengthening adaptive capacity of vulnerable countries.

Our agreed global goal for climate stabilisation by limiting the increase in global average temperature below 2 degrees above pre-industrial levels needs to be backed by mitigation commitments based on the principles of common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities and equity. Preserving the structure of the Kyoto Protocol and its second commitment period, early disbursement of the Fast Start Finance agreed at Cancun and operationalization of the Green Climate Fund, Technology Mechanism and Adaptation Committee are vital to imparting a renewed momentum to the UNFCCC process.

Those who are historically responsible for climate change must come forward with firm GHG commitments and ensure that there is adequate resource and technology flow to developing countries, in particular the Small Island States to allow them to adapt to climate change.

Mr. President,

If we are successful in undertaking necessary mitigation and adaptation measures, our pre-occupations about security implications of climate change, which in any case are yet to be fully established, to a large extent would be put to rest. This would also lighten the burden of “preventive diplomacy”, which has been so passionately argued for by some delegations.

In our view, what constitutes a bigger concern for international peace and security today is the threat that developing countries face from possible conflicts arising out of inadequate resources for development and poverty eradication. Sustained economic growth and development must, therefore, be pursued to allow developing countries alleviate poverty and meet basic standards of living for all. This in itself will make them more resilient to climate change vulnerabilities.

Mr. President,

The Concept Paper also highlights the vulnerability of food security while postulating its veritable nexus with climate change impact. This may well be the case. Our recent experience of food scarcity, as it happened in 2008, and high food inflation this year, though point to the preponderance of factors far removed from climate change that are holding global food security to ransom. Agricultural protectionism, excessive speculation in food commodity trading and diversion of crops for non-food purposes are leading us to unsustainable global food situation. This calls for urgent global attention.

Mr. President,

Our efforts to deliberate on the possible security implications of climate change would bear fruit only if we realise where the centre of gravity on this issue lies. We must not confuse political motion with action. Climate Change needs collective understanding and support of all Member States. Action must, therefore, lie in the UNFCCC. When confronted with the question of existential threat of the Small Island States, I am reminded of the words of Mahatma Gandhi - “All compromise is based on give and take, but there can be no give and take on fundamentals.” Lets us do our best for the Small Island States and for the humanity.

Thank you.
741. Opening Remarks by Minister of State for Youth Affairs and Sports Ajay Maken while Co-Chairing the Thematic Panel on “Strengthening International Cooperation regarding Youth and Enhancing Dialogue, Mutual Understanding and Active Youth participation as indispensable elements of efforts towards achieving Social Integration, Full Employment and the Eradication of Poverty at the High Level Meeting on Youth at the UN General Assembly.

Thank you Mr. Sanchez.

Excellencies,

My dear young men and women,

NAMASHKAR, Greetings from India

At the outset, I would like to join in expressing my condolences with the people and government of Norway and express solidarity with them at this hour.

Now coming back to the main topic, it is inspiring of that the UN has chosen dialogue and mutual understanding as the theme of the international year of youth and reinforced it by the slogan “our year, our voice”.

Dialogue accords space to divergent viewpoints and sensible arguments. This further enables ideas to emerge and ultimately lead to consensus and mutual understanding. This is the essence of any vibrant democracy. Needless to say, youth is the most vibrant, dynamic, positive and enthusiastic segment of the population and is potentially the most valuable human resource of the world.

Excellencies,

We, as part of the United Nations have reaffirmed the World Programme of Action for Youth fifteen years ago. Presently, we have focused on fifteen key areas which are of relevance to the youth of today. The aspirations are high, the challenges are daunting. But our resolve remains.

It is worth noting that every country has taken commendable steps to ensure that the youth are able to occupy their rightful place in the society.

The challenge of poverty eradication is still a very real problem which needs collective action. It is reported that over 200 million youth are in poverty. Poverty is a scourge, a curse and a human rights violation.

As the father of nation, Mahatma Gandhiji had said that nature can provide for everyone’s need but not for the greed. This is yet another issue which needs international cooperation.

The advancement in the field of information technology, with the considerable use of internet and mobile telephony among the youth, national boundaries are increasingly becoming irrelevant.

The global integration is such that a product sources its raw material from one country, manufactures its components in another, designs and develops somewhere else, assembles in yet another country and market elsewhere.

Globalization has resulted in creation of borderless world, with free movement of goods and services. But still there are hindrances for the smooth movement of youth across boundaries in pursuit of education and employment. This has resulted in the fruits of globalization not being equitably shared especially by the youth of today.

Youth, who are willing to move with this changing paradigm, unfortunately are confronted with the stark reality of obtuse and complicated procedures when it comes to international migration. We hope that this discussion and outcome today would stimulate further deliberation on the issue of international migration especially of the youth in the regional and international context.

Yet another area for international cooperation is the field of skill development of the youth. With skilled workers shortages affecting different regions of the world, it is expected that the demand for skilled workers from developing countries is likely to increase. This needs to be addressed by all of us. We also need to focus on greater cooperation so that youth are able to acquire the requisite knowledge, capacities, skills and ethical values along with the technical and vocational education and training.

In India also, we have been focusing on skill development of the youth in a concerted manner so that no youth should remain unemployed or under employed.

India is on threshold of transformation in terms of skill development. The Hon'ble Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh had launched a National Skill Development Mission under his chairmanship.

In addition, National Skill Development Corporation has also been set up to expedite the skill development. It aims to achieve skilling and up-skilling of more than 500 million people in India by 2022. This would enable greater employability and enhance the productivity and quality of youth in the society they live.

Let us use this forum to share our experience and learn from the good practices of each other. The youth of the world has tremendous potential. Let us appreciate it and capitalize it. The issues of international migration, skill development and focus on employability of youth are some of the more critical issues which need further deliberation in this forum.

Thank you, Mr. Sanchez.

742. Statement by Minister of State for Youth Affairs and Sports
Ajay Maken at the Plenary of the High Level Meeting on Youth at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, July 26, 2011.

Mr. President,

Let me begin by complimenting you for organizing this High Level Meeting on Youth. This meeting is a fitting tribute to the culmination of the “International Year of the Youth” at the United Nations.

Mr. President,

Last time when the United Nations commemorated the International Year of the Youth in 1985, we had the good fortune for having late Mr Rajiv Gandhi, as our youngest Prime Minister. He was instrumental in capitalizing the international momentum for the development of youth and setting up of the Ministry for Human Resource Development for the holistic development of youth. Under his able leadership, the Parliament also took a historic decision to lower the voting age to 18 years to enable the youth to participate in the democratic processes of our country. He went on to announce the first National Youth Policy in 1988.

In order to further enhance the involvement of youth in the democratic process of governance, the minimum age for elected representatives in around 300,000 local bodies was lowered to 21 years.

I am glad that today, my delegation has three of India’s young elected representatives, representing both Parliament and State Legislature, including the youngest Member of Parliament.

Mr. President,

The youth constitute the vibrant and dynamic segment of any society. They are also the most valuable human resource in any country. Our Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, has rightly referred to the youth as “the building blocks of the nation”.

Mr. President,

840 million, which is nearly 70% of India’s population of around 1.2 billion is under 35 years of age. India is, therefore, the country with the largest young population in the world.

Our special efforts are to ensure a high degree of skills development. The Prime Minister heads a National Skills Development Mission which aims at reaching out to nearly 500 million people in the country by 2022. We have also launched a Youth Employability Skills Development Programme, YES. In its first phase we will carry out a mapping of skills gap assessment district-wise and then marry the aspirations of the youth with the needs of the community.

The two field arms of my Ministry are National Service Scheme (NSS) and the Nehru Yuva Kendra Sangathan (NYKS). They have been entrusted with the job of carrying on youth related development activities. NYKS operate through 125,000 voluntary youth clubs spread all over the country and NSS has a membership of more than 3.2 million students spread over 251 Universities covering 15,000 colleges and 8000 higher secondary schools.

We are also in the process of revising our National Youth Policy. A draft of which has already been put up in the public domain for comments and feedback.

Mr. President,

The Rajiv Gandhi National Institute of Youth Development is our professional resource agency and acts as a think-tank of the Ministry of Youth Affairs and Sports. On the occasion of this International Year of the Youth, we are upgrading its status to that of an institution of national importance. Legislation to this effect is being moved in Parliament in the coming weeks itself.

Mr. President,

We are eagerly awaiting the deliberations and outcome of this High Level Meeting on Youth. This will help us to enhance our national initiatives in the empowerment of youth.

In conclusion I would like to reaffirm India’s strong commitment to developing mutual understanding and dialogue and extend our support to the Declaration to be adopted shortly.

Thank you.
743. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri at the UN Security Council Open Debate on the Middle East.

New York, July 26, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to welcome you, Mr. President, to New York and thank you for chairing this Open Debate. I would also like to thank Special Coordinator Robert Sherry for his comprehensive briefing and the Permanent Representative of Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine for their statements which have carefully noted.

2. Since our last Open Debate in this Council, Mr. President, the Palestinian factions signed an agreement. The main elements of the agreement include reform of PLO, holding of election by May 2012, establishment of unified agencies, national reconciliation and joint committee to implement the agreement. The unity between the Palestinian parties should not only end the division between the West Bank and Gaza, but also create state institutions in Gaza. To this end, we hope that the Palestinian parties would succeed in speedy implementation of the reconciliation agreement. We also hope that Hamas will not only accept the State of Israel as a reality, but also cooperate with the Palestinian Authority to deal with Israel’s security concerns.

4. Stalemate in peace talks, however, appears to be giving rise to a sense of desperation in the Palestinian territories. For more than four months now, the monthly debates on the Palestinian issue in this Council have hinged on a hope that the Quartet would put forward a set of practical steps, which could enable Palestinians and Israelis to resume talks. This hope was yet again belied when the Quartet meeting Washington on 11th July ended without any statement.

3. Over the last few years the Palestinian authority has made significant progress in building state institutions, improving the economy of the West Bank and rapprochement with various factions including Hamas. This progress has invited commendation from the international community at large. The state building efforts of the Palestinian Authority have, however, reached their geographical and institutional limits. Any further progress would require resumption of talks on final status issues.

4. The humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, meanwhile, remains a cause for serious concern. The blockade on Gaza is not only adversely affecting the population but also driving militant elements to vent their frustration through violence, thereby further complicating the situation on the ground and increasing Israel’s vulnerability and security concerns.
5. The stalemate in peace talks and grim humanitarian situation can further complicate an already fragile situation. We concur with the sense of the international community that freezing of settlement activity in the Palestinian territories could enable the peace talks to resume. We, therefore, call upon Israel to implement Prime Minister Netanhayu’s address to Knesset in May this year wherein he said that Israel could consider territorial compromise in return for security and recognition. Putting a stop to settlement activities should be the first step in this process.

6. Unless this essential step is taken and peace talks resume, the growing desperation may lead the parties to actions that can spiral out of control. As the month of September 2011 approaches, it is important to realize that there is limited time for Palestinians and Israelis to seize the opportunity.

7. Other issues relating to Arab lands that remain under Israeli occupation are equally important. Progress in the Lebanese and Syrian tracks constitute the essential core to achievement of a comprehensive and durable peace in the region. In a region witnessing protests movements all around, continuing impasse in peace talks could have destabilizing effect on a much larger area. In this context, events of 15 May and 5 June show how fragile the situation is and how easily violence can be incited on a larger scale, destabilizing the whole region. We are, therefore, afraid that if the peace talks do not recommence quickly, unilateral steps by the parties would ensue, which would increase the distance between them and make it more difficult to find a comprehensive settlement. We, therefore, call on the members of the Quartet to intensify their collective and individual efforts to break the stalemate.

8. Mr. President, India has a long-standing tradition of solidarity with the Palestinian people. India has supported the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united State of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital living within secure and recognized borders, side by side and at peace with Israel, as endorsed in the Arab Peace initiative, Quartet Roadmap and relevant UN Security Council Resolutions.

9. India has been assisting in the capacity and institution building of the Palestinian people with its material and technical assistance programmes. India has extended assistance through IBSA forum. India is also contributing US $ 1 million to UNRWA continuing our solidarity with the Palestinian people in their pursuit of legitimate goals and quest for development based on dignity and self-reliance. In addition, we have provided untied budgetary support of US$ 10 million to the Palestinian Authority for each of the past two years.

10. In conclusion, Mr. President, let me reiterate our expectation that the parties will restart talks without further delay. These talks should lead to a final and comprehensive resolution of the Middle East conflict. We owe it to ourselves and to the future generations of Israelis and Palestinians that they do not remain mired in a conflict but live in peace and security.

Thank you.

744. Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the Follow-up meeting to the High Level Meeting on Revitalizing the work on the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward Multilateral Disarmament negotiations at the 65th Session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Mr. President,

I join other colleagues in thanking you for convening this follow-up meeting to the High Level Meeting convened by the UN Secretary General which was attended by our External Affairs Minister His Excellency Shri S.M. Krishna on September 24, 2010.

India associates itself with the statement made on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Mr. President,

Almost one year has elapsed since the convening of the last HLM. The Conference on Disarmament is still unable to undertake its primary task of negotiating multilateral treaties. We share the disappointment among Member States on the continuing impasse in the CD. We believe that the CD or its rules of procedure are not to be blamed for this impasse. We believe that this meeting should send a strong message of support for the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum and to provide political impetus to the multilateral agenda, which includes early commencement of negotiations on FMCT in the Conference on Disarmament.

The Conference on Disarmament adopted a consensus decision in May 2009 on its Programme of work, which included immediate commencement of negotiations on a Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty. The High Level Meeting of 24
September 2010 demonstrated a very broad measure of support for CD/1864. In fact the first recommendation of that meeting, reiterated subsequently by the UN Secretary General in his address to the CD on January 26 this year, was for the CD to adopt that or a similar programme of work in 2011. India will not stand in the way if consensus emerges on a Programme of Work picking up from where we were in terms of the consensus decision CD/1864, if such a decision facilitates the early commencement of substantive work in the Conference, including negotiation of an FMCT, on the basis of the mandate contained in CD/1299. This is without prejudice to the priority we attach to nuclear disarmament.

India has been steadfast in its support for global, non-discriminatory verifiable nuclear disarmament. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi presented a visionary Action Plan for a Nuclear-Weapon-Free and Non-Violent World Order. This Action Plan sets out a roadmap for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner. It may be recalled that the Final Document of the First Special session on Disarmament accorded nuclear disarmament the highest priority. We believe that the goal of nuclear disarmament can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework that is global and non-discriminatory. There is need for a meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines.

Mr. President,

I would like to reaffirm our support for the CD as the single multilateral negotiating forum, recognized as such by the international community. The CD continues to have the mandate, the membership, the credibility and the rules of procedure to discharge this responsibility. It is up to member states to make it work, by negotiating multilateral treaties which can be implemented universally. Proposals that question the viability or relevance of the CD or even suggest unrealistic alternatives will not lead to useful or productive results in taking forward the agreed multilateral agenda with the participation of all relevant countries. We hope that our discussions today will build a positive momentum for the disarmament agenda and reaffirm the critical role of the CD as the single multilateral negotiating forum for achieving our common goals.

Thank you.
Statement by Deputy Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the Second Session of the Open Ended Working Group on Strengthening the Protection of Human Rights of Older Person.

New York, August 4, 2011.

Madam Co facilitator,

Thank you very much for giving me the floor. I want to thank you and all the panelists for their presentations.

Mr. Chairman,

I have a written speech prepared by my colleague, but I thought let me try and address some of the issues which are of critical importance.

I come from a country which, of course, has the second largest population in the world and the second largest population of older people in the world.

We are also a country, which is grappling with a growing population of older people and the need to find ways and means to address issues of people who are living longer in our society, in our economy, in our systems, both governmentally as well as the non-governmentally.

People living longer are a good development, and they should be able to enjoy the benefits of developments, globalization, etc.

India has seen in the last 10 to 15 years, high level of economic development. We have done fairly well in the field of medical sciences with a fairly high rise in the life expectancy.

But we have also seen, along with this, rapid urbanization in our country and increasing number of shifts from rural areas to urban areas. In fact, when one was growing up, it was a sort of axiomatic thing to say that 70% of India lived in rural areas. Today the figure, if we include urban conglomerations also, the urban population is nearly half of the population.

Rapid urbanization, globalization, improvement in health systems, all have resulted improvement in life expectancy but have certainly brought forward newer challenges. These are the challenges of security, health care, need for care and maintenance.

Addressing them is critical to ensure that older persons are able to lead a life of dignity and productivity.

Traditional norms and values of the Indian society laid stress on showing respect and providing care for the older persons. However, in recent times, society has witnessed a gradual but definite withering of joint family systems and such societal institutions especially in urban areas, where we talk of nuclear families and so on.

As a result of which, a large number of parents face the prospect of their families not really being in a position to care of them. This has also exposed them to lack of emotional, physical and financial support.

In India, we are also certainly coming to the realization that a productive life span i.e., up to 60 years of age is perhaps too early as one lives several years thereafter and has to provide for that. This may not be necessarily easy to cater to, in what have been the norms of society and of the economy in terms of paying employees and others.

We also have to reckon with the fact that people are living longer in rural areas and there is feminization of older persons as women live longer than men.

Our national effort has been to improve the quality of life of the older persons by providing basic amenities like shelter, food, medical care and entertainment opportunities. This has been done in a holistic manner by adopting multi-stakeholder approaches of involving not just governmental agencies but also the civil society.

I am very glad that we have a number of NGOs from India here, who are contributing valuably to the debate that we are having here.

Madam Co facilitator, Mr. Chairman,

There is a reference to the old age and need to provide opportunities and address their needs, in our Constitution. We also developed in 1999, a National Policy on Older Persons. We are currently reviewing this policy to make it comprehensive.

The National Policy reaffirms the commitment to ensure the well being of older persons. The policy envisages State support to ensure financial and food security, health care, shelter and other needs of older persons to improve the quality of their life.

Of course, like most of the countries in the world, we also have instituted systems of giving preferences to older persons. There are special exemptions for them in the Income Tax Act. Special reservation facilities have also been made for older persons in the railways and air travel, etc.

There are a number of programmatic schemes which have been undertaken by the Government of India. In particular, we have undertaken legislative action which is the Maintenance and Welfare of Parents and Senior Citizens Act, 2007. This act, in fact, provides the legal basis to ensure need based maintenance for parents and senior citizens and their welfare.

All this I am stating, basically, to say that there is awareness about the issue of older persons within government, within society, and certainly in large parts of the world.

I am, therefore, extremely appreciate of the work that you are doing here in this particular group. I would like to say that the discussion that has happened in the direction of whether we should have a Convention on the rights of older persons is something which has thrown up variety of views.

This is certainly important as we progress forward and think about it, and then try and come to a particular conclusion in which the global community can come together.

In our understanding, the most important thing is that we must strengthen our efforts in ensuring that older persons are able to live a life of dignity in the society.

I thank you very much Madam Co-facilitator and Mr. Chairman.

746. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN

New York, August 26, 2011.

I will now make a statement in my national capacity.

At the outset, I would like to thank Secretary General His Excellency Mr. Ban Ki-moon for his participation and statement in this Open Debate. I would also like to strongly condemn the terrorist attack on the UN office in Abuja and extend our condolences to the government and people of Nigeria and to the Secretary General and wider UN family.

2. Peacekeeping is a term that does not find mention in the UN charter. Yet, it has become the face of the United Nations. Consuming more resources, employing more people and occupying a greater share of the Security Council's time than any single other issue, no other Council instrument has had a greater impact on the provenance and application of international law and international humanitarian law as its peacekeeping mandates. Peacekeeping has also generated, for the United Nations, a reputation for impartiality and fairness.

3. India is proud to have been associated with UN peacekeeping from its very inception. As a country that has contributed more than 100,000 peacekeepers to virtually every United Nations peacekeeping operation in the past six decades, we are also conscious that much has changed since the first peacekeeping missions were launched more than five decades ago. 4. The geo-political environment in which peacekeeping is conducted today is vastly different from those days. Global capabilities, economic, political and military, have also shifted most significantly. Moreover, Peacekeeping Missions today deal predominantly with intra-state issues rather than the classic role of interposing troops between warring states. The peacekeeping agenda has also added new dimensions in various civilian and policing domains and the UN’s initiatives on peacebuilding demands a close examination into the entire enterprise of peacekeeping.

5. The challenge before the international community is to build on the legacy of peacekeeping and ensure that it remains relevant to current realities. Today UN Peacekeeping faces a number of challenges with the resource gap being the central one and peacekeepers being asked to do more with less. Ambitious agendas are not being backed with the financial, operational and logistical resources. This lack of resources tells on the operational effectiveness of peacekeeping and casts a shadow on the credibility of the Council’s mandates. Mandates also need to be relevant to realities in the ground.

6. Suggestions that the Council adopt a two-stage mandate creation process that takes into account the complexities on the ground and matches these with resource requirements need to be seriously and urgently considered by the Council.

The need for in-depth consultations with troop and police contributing countries should be an integral part of the mandate generation process.

7. We also note the slow and cumbersome process of recruitment for key positions. This process will not only be speeded up by greater reliance on seconded capacities from governments of member-states but also benefit from their real experiences in nation-building. This holds true not only for field positions but also in the management structures of DPKO and DFS.

8. Given the importance of Africa on the UN’s peacekeeping agenda, India supports the capacity building of the African Union’s peace and security architecture so that the AU becomes a more effective and capable partner of the UN system.

9. Peacekeeping is a partnership involving members of this Council, the General Assembly, TCCs and PCCs and the host country. It is critical that the guiding principles of consent, non-use of force except in self defence or defence of the mandate and impartiality are strenuously guarded. This is important to ensure that United Nations peacekeeping retains its credibility and universal acceptability. 10. Of late, several UN peacekeeping mandates have included tasks that raise questions on the fundamental tenet of consent. These place peacekeepers in difficult legal circumstances and thereby hamper effectiveness.

11. The principle of national ownership needs to occupy centre-stage in all peacekeeping and peacebuilding activities of the United Nations.

12. I would like to conclude by paying homage to those peacekeepers, including from my country, who laid down their lives while serving in UN Missions.

Thank You.

747. Extempore Remarks by Deputy Permanent Representative
Ambassador Manjeev Singh Puri at the UNDP Executive Board Second Regular Session.

New York, September 6, 2011.

Madam President,

Let me begin, at the outset, by thanking Administrator Helen Clark for her statement which highlights the priorities and challenges that animate the UNDP agenda.

She very rightly drew attention to the famine and starvation situation in the Horn of Africa. The international community needs to act quickly with the UN in the lead. In this day and age, none of us should see something like this in any part of the world.

India has a large UN programme and a large UN country office. We have enjoyed good cooperation with the UN. It has stood us well for years and decades. As the largest contributor to the UNDP’s regular budget among developing countries, India is unwaveringly committed to supporting and working with UNDP to bring about genuine change and enduring development in programme countries.

I welcome the presentation of the UNDP institutional budget estimates for the biennium 2012-2013, and note the significant volume reduction of US$ 120.1 million. We hope that this reduction will in no way put at risk the efficacy of programme activities in developing countries or dilute the focus of the strategic plan.

Madam President,

The development landscape today is in a difficult and challenging phase buffeted by the vagaries of global economic and financial developments. Food and fuel prices are at a peak and we are faced with looming challenges from environmental issues especially climate change. This is also the time that requires UNDP to be most responsive and receptive to the needs of vulnerable populations across the globe. As our delegation has often underscored, the only successful and sustainable interventions UNDP can make in programme countries are those that are aligned firmly with the priorities of national governments and on the principles of national ownership and leadership.

We support the intensification of focus on countries going through significant and fragile transitions, particularly in South Sudan and the Arab region. We are also in support of sustained attention on the special needs of LDCs in recognition of their unique challenges.

It is universally acknowledged that an adequate and predictable base of regular resources is a pre-requisite for UNDP to fulfill its mandate and face up to the core challenges in developing countries. We therefore view with concern the continual drop in the proportion of core resources as part of total contributions, as reaffirmed, by you Madam Administrator in your Report on Annual Review of the Financial Situation in 2010.

Without intending to sound alarmist, our apprehension is that lack of adequate funding could hold back or even reverse the development gains made so far in which UNDP has been playing a significant role. We urge the UNDP to redouble its efforts to gain enhanced access to funds, and in particular, core resources, so as to realize the goals set out in the strategic plan.

On the issue of the integrated budget, we appreciate the regular progress updates we have received. Our expectation is that the quest for harmonization of organization budgetary process among the UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF will ultimately lead to enhanced operational efficiency and reduce transaction costs in programme implementation at the country level. We also look forward to adoption of International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) in January 2012 by UNDP.
Madam President,

I will now turn to the important question of South-South cooperation that is very close to our hearts. I reiterate what my delegation has said in the past and that is, that UNDP needs to do far more to match its stated commitment with resources and attention at the ground and throughout the organization flowing from the highest levels. We will continue our dialogue with UNDP on ways and means to not only strengthen this mode of cooperation but also improve existing efforts and rectify problems which have been discovered in the process of implementation, including in our case, in the IBSA Trust Fund which involves India, Brazil and South Africa with the UNDP.

Our expectation remains that UNDP will intensify its efforts, and become a partner to programme countries in meeting the most pressing challenges of poverty eradication, food security, and energy access. While realizing that the UNDP has evolved into a large bureaucracy with an extensive agenda of complex interconnected issues, we must ensure that the effort on the ground does not get diffused and the focus remains firmly on these fundamental challenges. Concerted international action, in particular through the MDG agenda, has enabled major gains on poverty eradication. But millions even now continue to remain mired in poverty. It is therefore imperative that poverty eradication remains the overarching priority of the UNDP.

I thank you, Madam President.

Vienna, September 8, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies,

Distinguished colleagues,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I would like to begin by expressing my sincere thanks and gratitude to the OSCE for organizing this Workshop on Public-Private Partnership on Enhancing Tourism Security in partnership with the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) and United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) in this magnificent and historic city.

I avail this opportunity to present before you some thoughts in my personal capacity as Chair of the Counter Terrorism Committee.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism is a global scourge and has emerged as one of the most serious threats to international peace and security. Terrorist attacks in different parts of the world, their lethality and their enhanced sophistication continue to serve as a constant and grim reminder of our collective vulnerability to the terrorist threat.

2011 marks an important milestone in the global counter-terrorism efforts as it marks the 10th anniversary of 9/11 terrorist attacks, as well as the adoption of Resolution 1373 and the establishment of the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC).

The CTC will be organizing a Special Meeting open to the wider UN membership as well as international, regional and sub-regional organizations on September 28, 2011 to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the adoption of Resolution 1373. The Committee will also adopt an Outcome Document highlighting the progress achieved in implementing Resolution 1373 during the last 10 years and providing a roadmap for the future. This will be a major landmark in providing strategic direction to the work of the Committee aimed at strengthening capacity of Member States in their counter terrorism efforts.
Over the last ten years, the CTC has maintained a regular dialogue with almost all Member States. We are assisted in this process by the Counter Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (CTED), which has been conducting country visits in different parts of the world to assess implementation, and identify areas for improvement and best practices that could be shared with others.

We have also strengthened our cooperation with other international, regional and sub-regional organizations and have improved our coordination with other bodies within the UN system.

The CTC has a close and cooperative relationship with the OSCE and we hope to deepen this cooperation further in the coming years. This February, the Committee has had the opportunity to be briefed by the Secretary General of the OSCE.

The Global Implementation Survey prepared by CTED in 2008, 2009 and the latest one to be made public soon, provides a snapshot of where we stand in terms of our implementation efforts and provides useful recommendations for areas that need further improvement.

The international community has made good progress in countering terrorism during the last decade. However, much more needs to be done. Gaps continue to exist in the international legal framework against terrorism and the level of preparedness varies in different parts of the world.

We need concerted global efforts and the necessary political will of member states to squarely face the challenge of terrorism. While combating terrorism, it is also important that the counter terrorism measures must comply with all obligations of Member States under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

Mr. Chairman,

Tourism security is an important matter. Tourism remains vital due to its economic potential, as well as a means for promoting greater understanding, dialogue and appreciation about different cultures and peoples. It is closely related to global travel industry and employment generation. According to the World Tourism Organization, tourism is one of the top five export category for as many as 83% of countries and is the main source of foreign exchange earnings for at least 38% of the countries.

In 2010 itself, the international tourist arrivals were estimated at 940 million and contributed to US $ 919 billion in export earnings. This is equivalent to 30% of the world’s exports of commercial services and 6% of overall exports of goods and services. The impact of terrorist attacks on any tourist destination therefore, cannot be underestimated. For instance, the terrorist attacks in Bali in 2002 and 2005 ravaged the local Balinese economy that drew its sustenance and support from the tourism industry. Any decline in tourism spending generates a magnified negative impact on economy and employment.

The tourism industry remains a vulnerable target for terrorists. I am glad that this workshop has offered us an opportunity to delve into this aspect in a holistic manner and would be helpful in identifying ways and means to protect this sector from the threat of terrorism. It is worthwhile to point out here that the United Nations has been advocating the need for promoting dialogue and understanding among different civilizations.

The Security Council resolution 1963 (2010) recognizes the importance of the support of local communities, private sector, civil society and media for increasing awareness about the threats of terrorism and more effectively tackling them. Moreover, the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy recognizes the importance of developing public-private partnerships in protecting vulnerable targets. The UN Global Compact has also provided useful guidelines for the UN agencies to work with the private sector.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I am grateful for the opportunity to contribute to these important discussions. I look forward to learn from your experiences and to explore, we at the Counter Terrorism Committee, can contribute to your efforts.

Thank you, Mr. President. At the outset, I would like to join others in thanking SRSG Augustine Mahiga for his comprehensive briefing on recent developments in Somalia and for the Secretary General’s report. I would also like to welcome H.R. Dr Abdiweli Mohamed Ali, Prime Minister of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia, to the Council and thank him for his statement outlining his perspective on the situation in Somalia and the TFG’s plans for the future. I would also thank AU’s Special Representative for Somalia, Mr Boubacar Diarra and the EU’s representative Mr Pedro Serrano for their statements.

2. The worsening humanitarian situation in Somalia, caused by the famine, is a cause for serious concern. As the Secretary General’s report has noted, more than half of the Somali population is in the grip of this humanitarian crisis. While the international community has undertaken emergency measures to provide aid to those in need, nearly 2.8 million people are living in the hardest hit areas controlled by Al Shabaab, where access of humanitarian agencies is severely restricted. We urge all the Somali groups to provide unfettered access to the humanitarian agencies and facilitate the delivery of aid to all those in need. India has decided to provide humanitarian assistance of US$ 8 million to the countries afflicted with severe famine and drought in the Horn of Africa, i.e. Somalia, Kenya and Djibouti, through the World Food Programme (WFP). This is in addition to US$ 1.5 million contributed by us to the AU Trust Fund for Somalia and US$ 0.5 million to the UN Trust Fund, both for augmenting the AU Mission in Somalia (AMISOM). We appreciate the key role played by OCHA, WFP and other UN organizations in delivery of humanitarian assistance. We join others in calling upon member states to join the UN and AU efforts by responding positively to the humanitarian appeal.

3. Mr. President, while the international community is battling the humanitarian crisis, there have been some positive developments on the political and security fronts. The signing of the Kampala Accord and its subsequent approval by the Somali Parliament and formation of a new government have imparted a positive momentum to the political process that needs to be maintained in the extended transition period. We also welcome the holding of the High-Level Consultative Meeting on Ending the Transition in Somalia from 4-6 September in Mogadishu and the adoption of a roadmap as a result.
We reaffirm our support to this process and hope that the Transitional Federal Institutions (TFIs) will implement the roadmap in a time bound manner and complete the pending transition tasks. This alone would enable a genuine, inclusive and comprehensive national reconciliation to take place in Somalia for ending two decades long instability and insecurity. In this connection, we appreciate the engagement of the President and the Speaker of Somalia with the international community. We also thank SRSG Mahiga for his persistent efforts and cooperation with the Somali leaders and with the AU, East African Community, IGAD and other stakeholders.

4. The opportunity presented by the withdrawal of Al Shabaab from Mogadishu should be utilized by the TFG to increase its effective presence all over Mogadishu through delivery of basic services. This will not only enhance TFG’s legitimacy but also help the political process. There is an urgent need to bring the AMISOM’s strength to 12,000 as mandated by the Security Council. In this connection, we commend the governments of Uganda and Burundi for their contributions to AMISOM and sacrifices made by their peacekeepers.

5. Mr. President, AMISOM is the mainstay of international efforts for re-establishing security in Somalia. It is, therefore, imperative for the international community to urgently bridge the resource gaps that adversely impact AMISOM’s effectiveness in fulfilling its mandate. As the Secretary General has reported, without international support for equipping and outfitting additional troops, TCCs will continue to face difficulty in deploying peacekeepers in a timely manner. The member-states should contribute promptly to the UN and AU Trust Funds for AMISOM without caveats. As already mentioned, India has contributed US$ 2 million for AMISOM operations through the AU and UN Trust Funds without any caveats. We also support the extension of the mandate of AMISOM.

6. There is also a need for expanding the TFG forces and strengthening their capacities for long-term stability and security in Somalia. New recruitments have to be undertaken as well as full training and proper equipment provided.

7. Mr. President, piracy off the coast of Somalia remains a serious problem facing the international community. As of 31 August 2011, the Somali pirates held 19 ships and 405 hostages. Combating maritime piracy is, therefore, an important issue intrinsically linked with security situation in Somalia. So far, TFIs have not paid adequate attention to this problem. We hope that in the extended transition period, the TFIs will fully implement the benchmarks concerning piracy in the roadmap adopted on 6 September, including adoption of a legal framework against piracy, hostage-taking, payment of ransom, demarcation of Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ), establishment of operational coastguard, appointment of a counter-piracy coordinator, etc. In addition to the benchmarks in the roadmap, the TFIs should expeditiously implement the provisions contained in the relevant Security Council resolutions for restricting port revenues for Al Shabaab. In this connection, we will engage constructively with the members of the Security Council on the draft resolution on legal mechanism for prosecution and detention of pirates. We also stand ready to help in capacity building of the TFIs and the states in the region for effective measures against piracy off the coast of Somalia.

8. Further, given the growing scope and expanding coverage of the problem, the international community has to think about adopting a comprehensive counter-piracy strategy. In our view, such a strategy should involve:

- UN-led anti-piracy force to conduct naval operations. This would help in greater coordination in anti-piracy operations by various naval forces.
- Enactment of national laws on priority to criminalize piracy as defined in the UN Convention of the Law of the Sea.
- Effective sanitization of the Somali coastline along with identifying of safe corridors and buffer zones.

9. India has already taken several steps including anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since 2008 and has also deployed its ships in Eastern and North Eastern Arabian Sea. This has helped neutralize several attempts of piracy. While we will continue our counter-piracy operations, there is also an urgent need for the international community to address the serious problem of hostage-taking by pirates and consequent humanitarian problems faced by the hostages and their families. We hope that the Secretary General’s report on piracy, due in October, will contain concrete recommendations on all aspects of the problem of piracy, including hostage-taking and plight of hostages.

Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the outset, I would like to join others in thanking SRSG Mariano Fernandez for his comprehensive briefing on the recent developments in Haiti and for the Secretary General’s report.

2. Haiti is making steady but slow progress towards recovery since devastating earthquake that struck the country on 12 January 2010. Despite the death of an estimated 300,000 people, including civil servants and destruction of the capital Port-au-Prince, Haitians have shown tremendous resolve and determination to rebuild their country. Haitians need sustained support of the international community in this critical phase of recovery and reconstruction to improve the governance, create employment and undertake comprehensive reforms, including in police and judicial sectors.

3. The relatively peaceful conduct of the electoral process and transfer of power following the second round of presidential elections demonstrate the vibrancy of the Haitian society. The role played by regional organizations, particularly the Organization of American States (OAS), in the later stages of the elections also gave credibility to the entire process. We join others in congratulating the new President Michael Joseph Martelly on taking over from outgoing President Rene Garcia Preval and wish him success in his endeavours to restore political stability and undertake economic and social reconstruction.

4. The delay in formation of the new government has, however, slowed down the recovery efforts and could affect the fragile security situation as well. Nearly 634,000 IDPs are living in temporary shelters and depend on assistance for survival. The fact that only 47,000 have left these camps since March 2011 underscores the importance of effective administration and the need to accelerate efforts for creation of conducive environment to facilitate their return. The reduced donor funding is also affecting the reconstruction efforts. Clearly, the confidence of donor community has been eroded by political instability in the beginning of the year and the current stalemate in government formation. Together with the increasing food prices and unemployment, these developments make the affected population vulnerable to violence and exploitation.

5. If Haiti has to recover quickly from the effects of last year’s disasters, the political leadership has to show resilience to achieve much needed reforms to improve the living conditions of the Haitian population. It is, therefore, important that the political leaders of the country set aside their differences to reach a compromise on formation of the government as the first step.

6. MINUSTAH has played a commendable role from the beginning of its mandate in maintaining overall security and stability. The earthquake and resultant large-scale humanitarian efforts and the presidential and legislative elections threw up new challenges. MINUSTAH made sterling efforts along with other UN agencies in the immediate aftermath of the disastrous earthquake and also ensured peaceful elections this year. I also recall the contributions made by the Indian police officers deployed with MINUSTAH, presently numbering 470 in three contingents, two of which were deployed by India after the earthquake at the request of the United Nations.

7. While the role of MINUSTAH continues to be critical in the near future, it is a matter of satisfaction that the Haitian national institutions have gradually been assuming larger role with an objective to ultimately take over MINUSTAH's responsibilities. Against this backdrop, MINUSTAH should focus its efforts on supporting the political process, capacity building and consolidation of Haitian national institutions. We, therefore, agree with the Secretary General's recommendation of partial drawdown of the Mission's post-earthquake surge capabilities. We also support the extension of MINUSTAH's mandate for one more year as recommended by the Secretary General.

8. The outbreak of cholera epidemic which affected the population had also resulted in wild allegations about its origin. We are happy to note that the Independent Panel of Experts appointed by the Secretary General has not found any substance in those allegations. While the efforts to combat cholera continue, there is a need to focus on providing clean drinking water and better sanitation conditions to the population to avoid regular occurrence of the epidemic.

9. Mr President, India made a modest contribution to the efforts of the Haitian authorities to deal with the situation there. In the immediate aftermath of the earthquake, India made a cash contribution of US$ 5 million to the Government of Haiti towards relief measures as a token of our solidarity with the people of Haiti. India also contributed US$ 500,000 to the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) that was put to good use in the earliest stages of recovery work in Haiti. We have also undertaken a waste management project under a joint IBSA (India-Brazil-South Africa) initiative. In addition, at the request of the President of Haiti, the Government of India will support construction of 500 low-cost housing units.

10. In conclusion, Mr President, the continuing support of the international community coupled with stable and effective governance in Haiti would help the Haitians overcome the problems they are currently faced with. It is our hope that Haiti would soon emerge out of these problems and move towards stability and development.

Thank you.

751. Statement by Minister of Health and Family Welfare Ghulam
Nabi Azad at the High Level meeting of the UN General Assembly on the Prevention and Control of Noncommunicable Diseases.

Mr. President,

At the outset, please allow me to congratulate you on your assumption of the Presidency of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

I also thank you for convening this high level meeting on the extremely important and topical issue of Non-Communicable Diseases. These have emerged as the leading cause of disease, disability and death worldwide and are posing a mounting challenge to health care practitioners, administrators and policy makers world wide.

As far as India is concerned, we are faced with the triple burden of communicable diseases, new and re-emerging infections and the increasing incidence of noncommunicable diseases.

More than half of all deaths are now attributed to Non-Communicable Diseases.
However, we must recognize that conditions such as mental and neurological disorders also require special attention.

In fact, alarmed by the rising incidence of the non-communicable diseases and their impact on the health care delivery, a national summit was held in India subsequent to the Global Health Ministerial Conference on Healthy Lifestyles and Non-communicable Disease Control in Moscow in April 2011.

Besides the Delhi Call for Action from the national meet, we now also have 10 key messages from the recently held WHO South-East Asia Regional meeting at Jaipur in India.
As India’s Minister for Health, I am privileged to be here and believe that such a massive global effort will be very useful in sensitizing the policy makers at the highest level to the need to allocate sufficient resources to combat NCDs.

Mr. President,

We are conscious of the fact that Non Communicable Diseases are not only a health issue but also a development issue as they impact productivity and also impoverish the society due to high health expenditures.

The Government of India has launched a “National Programme for Prevention & Control of Cancer, Diabetes, Cardio Vascular Diseases (CVDs) and Stroke (NPCDCS)” and the “National Programme for Health Care of Elderly (NPHCE)”. This has been taken up for implementation as a pilot project covering 150 million population in 100 inaccessible and most backward districts during the current financial year (2011-2012) at a cost of USD 275 million.

The program includes:

Establishment of Non-Communicable Diseases (NCD) clinics at 100 district hospitals and 700 Community Health Centers (CHCs) for diagnosis and management of Cardiovascular Diseases (CVD), Diabetes & Stroke and separate Cardiac Care Unit in each district hospital.

Ensuring availability of life saving drugs through the provision of an additional USD 1,250 to each district hospital in 100 districts.

Provision of common diagnostic services at these 100 district hospitals for early detection of cancer. Provision is also being made for basic surgery, chemotherapy and palliative care at these hospitals.

Supporting chemotherapy through provision of drugs in these 100 district hospitals for 10,000 patients at the cost of USD 25 million.

Strengthening 65 centres as Tertiary Cancer Centres (TCCs) to provide comprehensive cancer care services at a cost of USD 1.5 million each.

Mr. President,

As I speak here today, screening of diabetes and hypertension is being carried out in these 100 identified Districts in 21 States and urban slums of 33 cities with more than 1 million population, where all adult males above 30 years of age and pregnant women of all age groups are being screened.

Our target is to screen 150 million people by March 2012 under this pilot project. This would be the largest such exercise attempted anywhere in the world. I am happy to state that this programme will be rolled out in the entire country in April 2012.
This national programme will also add to the many steps India has taken for the prevention and control of NCDs. A major health systems reform is underway in mission mode to re-vitalize primary health care since 2005. This platform is being used to integrate communicable and non-communicable diseases response at the cutting edge level.

Our commitment to tobacco control remains firm. India was one of the initial countries to sign and ratify the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control. We have passed a very comprehensive Tobacco Products control Act which bans:

i) smoking in public places,

ii) sale of tobacco products to those below 18 years of age or within 100 yards of an educational institution, and

iii) direct or indirect advertisement of tobacco products

Mr. President,

India’s technology innovations have led to affordable health care not only for our population but also for many other countries in the world. Prominent among these are re-combinant human insulin, poly-pill for prevention of cardio-vascular and stroke events, clot buster to enhance efficiency and a heart valve for rheumatic heart disease.

This august gathering will agree with me that it is difficult enough to be sick, but it is devastating to be poor and sick. We must therefore address the issue of trade barriers which restrict access to affordable and newly developed medicines. It is vital to ensure universal access to medicines, including through the full use of the flexibilities contained in the TRIPS Agreement and the Doha Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health.

This meeting provides us a historic opportunity in reaffirming our commitments, both financial and human resources, for combating the NCDs. We need to make concrete commitments on sharing global resources, technical expertise and best practices to build capacity to combat NCDs. In this regard, I would like to thank WHO in general and DG in particular for their continued support and assistance.

Mr. President,

In conclusion, let me reaffirm India’s strong commitment to the outcome document and our firm resolve to prevent and combat NCDs by improving accessibility and affordability of health care in a concerted and more collaborative manner.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

Excellencies and distinguished delegates,

Allow me at the outset to deeply appreciate your leadership in conducting this High Level Meeting. The discussion in this Meeting on “Desertification, land degradation and drought mitigation in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication” is indeed topical, given the significance it holds for developing countries.

Desertification and degradation are critical environmental issues. In India, where over 60% of the land area is dry or arid, this issue has serious implications for the livelihood and food security of millions of our people. Desertification, Land degradation, drought and poverty are mutually reinforcing – high livelihood dependency of people on natural resources, often leads to progressive resource degradation, but this degradation impoverishes the people even further. This constitutes a vicious cycle linking deteriorating natural resources to deteriorating livelihoods as people need to encroach further on fragile soils, sparse vegetation and limited water resources to meet their basic needs for food, shelter and livelihood.

Mr. Chairman,

Land degradation is both a cause and consequence of poverty. To fight both the problems synergistically, the policies of Government of India aim at a convergence between sustainable land management and poverty alleviation programmes. These innovative approaches are aimed to restore ecological balance by harnessing, conserving and developing degraded natural resources such as soil, vegetative cover and water while providing sustainable livelihoods.

India’s Mahatma Gandhi Rural Employment programme, which is perhaps the world’s largest cash-for-work programme, addresses the twin objectives of poverty reduction and ecosystem restoration. This scheme fosters conditions for inclusive growth including basic wage security, strengthening rural economy, capacity building of stakeholders, sustainable development of agro and natural resource based rural economy and poverty eradication.
In addition, Government of India’s Integrated Watershed Management Programme takes a livelihood-based approach towards land management. Under this programme so far, over 46,000 watershed projects have been sanctioned, covering an area of over 24 million hectares generating 580 million person-days of employment.

India’s National Afforestation Programme aims at restoring forests through plantation and natural regeneration for ecological security while meeting the fuel-wood, fodder and other needs of the rural communities. The project has resulted in the afforestation of 1.69 million hectares of land area so far.

In addition to these programmes, focused efforts are being made for highly degraded areas. Bundelkhand region, which is a highly degraded semi-arid region in Central India with a high incidence of poverty, has been provided with a special package. The package is being implemented under a multi-sectoral approach with primary focus on water resources and livelihood improvement.

India’s strong technical and institutional capacity in remote sensing and GIS data for natural resources management is also being utilized for a systematic inventory of the natural resource availability in the country.

Furthermore, India’s National Action Plan on Climate Change is a holistic programme for addressing various elements of environmental conservation and comprises of 8 Missions addressing land, energy, water, biodiversity and agriculture and is an important element of our efforts to fight desertification, land degradation and drought. The Mission on Sustainable Agriculture specifically focuses on dryland agriculture and risk management. The National Mission for a Green India focuses on environmental amelioration through climate mitigation, food security, water security, biodiversity conservation and livelihood security of forest dependent communities.

Mr. Chairman,

Internationally, India is actively engaged in programmes of cooperation and support to other developing countries, particularly in Africa which face challenges of desertification and land degradation. Under the India-Africa Forum Summit, our total allocation for agricultural support to African countries amounts to US$ 38.7 million. This includes over 300 new scholarships in agricultural sciences; customized training in water conservation and utilization, seed production, livestock management, farm mechanization and post-harvest processing; setting up of a new India-Africa University for Life and Earth Sciences; and the establishment of regional soil and water testing laboratories and farm centres in Africa to name a few.

Mr. Chairman,
Sustainable development in dry and arid lands is much more than just an environmental concern for developing countries; it is intrinsically linked to poverty eradication. As this issue straddles environmental conservation and livelihood and food security of people inhabiting these areas, it is necessary that our approach to curbing desertification and land degradation be holistic and people-centric, one that balances the requirements of science and sustainability of ecosystems with people’s aspirations for better living conditions and poverty eradication.

Thank you.

753. Intervention by External Affairs Minister S. M. Krishna at the meeting on New Silk Road in German House.

New York, September 22, 2011.

His Excellency, Mr. Zalmai Rassoul, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Islamic Republic of Afghanistan,

His Excellency, Mr. Guido Westerwelle, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Federal Republic of Germany,

Her Excellency Mrs. Hillary Clinton, Secretary of State of United States of America,

And Fellow Ministers,

At the outset, on behalf of the Government and people of India, I would like to convey my deepest condolences on the tragic demise of Prof. Burhanuddin Rabbani, Chairman of the High Peace Council and former President of Afghanistan in a dastardly act of terrorism which we strongly condemn.

It was not so long ago, about two months back, in the month of July, that I had an opportunity to receive Prof. Rabbani in Delhi and exchange views with him on his mission to bring about peace and reconciliation in Afghanistan.

We welcome the initiative of the international community to support and assist Afghanistan in building a self-reliant and sustainable economy, at a time when the country seeks to take control of its own destiny. With the onset of the drawdown of foreign security forces and the transition process, it is all the more important for the international community, especially the regional countries, to remain committed in this crucial phase, when Afghan national institutions are still being developed and consolidated.
It is also important that Afghanistan’s growth strategy is built upon the country’s comparative advantage of abundant natural resources and its strategic geographical location. These would have to be the building blocks of our vision for Afghanistan as a hub linking Central and South Asia through pipelines, trade and transit routes for the common good of the people of our region and the world. In our opinion, the New Silk Road initiative is an important step in that direction and will receive our support.

We are already undertaking reconstruction and development activities in Afghanistan, with our total bilateral assistance commitment reaching US $ 2 billion approximately. India has taken up projects in all parts of Afghanistan and in a wide range of sectors, which have been identified by the Afghan Government as priority areas.

We have laid special emphasis on capacity building and human resource development, which in our opinion would form the basis for a robust and self-reliant economy. Indian companies have presented bid for the development of the Hajigak iron ore reserves to the Afghan Government and India is participating in the TAPI (Turkmenistan, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India) gas pipeline project. These are projects which would call for large investments and express our resolve to cooperate with Afghanistan on plans involving regional integration for the mutual benefit of all stakeholders. SAARC, of which Afghanistan is a full member, is an important vehicle for regional economic cooperation within the South Asian region. We have always considered Afghanistan as a South Asian country with natural complementarities and synergies with other countries of South Asia and one which is uniquely placed to build bridges even beyond it. India’s rapidly growing economy and its large market make it a natural destination for Afghan exports. Similarly, India can be a cost effective and efficient source for Afghan imports. In this regard, we welcome the operationalization of APTAA (Afghanistan Pakistan Trade and Transit Agreement). This could serve as a start for trade and transit through the land route for other countries including India.

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh had succinctly articulated his vision for the region much before the idea of a New Silk Road initiative. I conclude by reiterating what he so eloquently stated: “I dream of a day, while retaining our respective identities, one can have breakfast in Amritsar, lunch in Lahore, and dinner in Kabul. That is how my forefathers lived. That is how I want our grandchildren to live.” The time has come for all of us to start the process of building a better future for the generations to come.

Thank you
New York, September 22, 2011.

Your Excellency, Mr. President (of Lebanon),

I would like to begin by congratulating Lebanon on its Presidency of the Security Council this month and express my deep appreciation at your personally presiding over this very important event.

I am, indeed, honored to participate in the discussions today and bring to you the good wishes of my Government.

We would also like to thank the Secretary General for his report and recommendations on the use of preventive diplomacy by the United Nations.

Mr. President,

If properly used, Preventive Diplomacy could become an essential element in the global community’s response to some of the major challenges facing the international system today and help in conflict prevention.

The adoption of the Charter of United Nations was supposed to herald the beginning of a new chapter in international relations.

One of the purposes of the United Nations as elaborated in Article 1 (1) of the Charter was to “bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace.”

The Charter therefore stresses the importance of adjustment or settlement of disputes by peaceful means which include negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements.

Over the last six decades, peaceful interventions by the United Nations have helped diffuse a number of conflict situations on a number of occasions.

These interventions, wherever undertaken with impartiality, fairness and equity, have earned for the United Nations a reputation for effective mediation.

The challenge before the international community is to build on this legacy and ensure that peaceful means for settlement of disputes remain relevant to current realities.

Mr. President,

Contemporary threats to international peace and security differ qualitatively from those prevalent six decades ago. Conventional war has been overtaken by intra-state and even borderless violence.

Low-intensity conflict, non-state actors and the terrorist-criminal-drug trafficking nexus threaten international stability and progress. It is recognized that these conflicts are extremely complicated and need complex solutions.

Unfortunately, recent developments seem to indicate a worrying trend towards increased reliance on the use of force as a mechanism for resolving some of these conflicts.

The limitations of using force too frequently and too quickly are many. Any respite that coercion brings about in the absence of a political settlement is likely to be short-lived.

Efforts at peaceful settlement of disputes may also suffer if force is used prematurely and without adequate deliberation.

Very frequently, the demonstration of the lack of patience in persisting with peaceful efforts is also likely to play into the hands of those who want the conflict to persist.

The use of force also leads to collateral damage. Such damage, whether human or material, has unpredictable effects on political conflict resolution processes while creating moral or normative dilemmas.

In many places use of force has prolonged conflicts – a situation where the cure turned out to be worse than the disease. The international community must not show undue eagerness for coercive arrangements in its hurry to bring peace.

Mr. President,

We are often reminded of the shortcomings and limitations of diplomacy and the need to intervene.

It is important, however, to remember that the tragic events of the past that are sought to justify intervention took place not because dialogue was ineffective but because of the lack of will on the part of the international community to act.

These failures do not in any way detract from the soundness of the principle of peaceful settlement of disputes or its means mentioned in the Charter.

It, of course, goes without saying that the peaceful method is a more difficult one. The great Indian Emperor Ashoka noted three millennia ago that “To do good is difficult.”
Preventive diplomacy takes time and commitment. It requires a clear understanding of the nature and context of the conflict. It requires the ability to discern realistic solutions. It requires involvement of various stakeholders affected by conflict. It needs to incorporate the forces for stability and progress in a particular situation.

Mr. President,

Protection of their populations is the foremost responsibility of sovereign States. It is also their primary responsibility to prevent conflict.

As such, actions undertaken within the framework of conflict prevention by United Nations entities must be designed to support and complement, as appropriate, the conflict prevention roles of national Governments.

India has always opposed and will continue to oppose the use of force as the primary reaction to conflicts.

As the major Troop Contributing Country to United Nations peacekeeping operations we are more familiar than most with the limitations of force.

We note, however, that peacekeepers, who are also early peacebuilders are being asked to do more with less. This resource gap needs to be addressed.

The inability of the international community to match its mandates with resources ultimately affects the credibility of this Council and its authority in resolving disputes.

Mr. President,

There really is no sustainable alternative to political processes and that the primary focus of the United Nations should be the facilitation of a political settlement. Coercive measures should be avoided and used as a measure of last resort and implemented with extreme care and caution.

Decisions to use force should be free of political motives. The humanitarian imperative of providing succor to the suffering should not be used to further political objectives. This does humanitarianism and diplomacy a disservice.

Moreover, there are very good reasons why international law is based on the principle of consent. Efforts to circumvent this process are not prudent and cannot be expected to address the drivers of conflict on an enduring basis.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize the time-tested principles of national consent, impartiality, fairness and equity in all conflict prevention activities that the United Nations may undertake.

Thank you
Mr. Co-Chair,
Excellencies,
Distinguished Delegates,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

The Durban Declaration and Programme for Action (DDPA) in 2001 was a reminder to the world that the challenge of Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance was far from over. Today, as we commemorate the 10th anniversary of that historic meeting, we can count our successes, but the journey is not yet over.

Mr Co-Chair,

The notion of racial superiority was at the bedrock of colonialism. Millions suffered from it and bore the brunt of inhuman, violent and degrading treatment. The close of era of colonization and imperialism at the end of World War II brought to an end this historic exploitation and injustice of countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Fortuitously, it also marked the advent of the peaceful mass movement pioneered by Mahatma Gandhi, who began his fight against colonialism with the struggle against racial discrimination in South Africa. His humiliating encounter with racial prejudice and discrimination as a young barrister in South Africa, when he was physically thrown out of the first class compartment of a train, merely because of skin colour, inspired him to fight against this abhorrent and intolerable practice.

It is a historic fact that millions joined Mahatma Gandhi in his epic struggle, which not only led to the dismantling of the colonial yoke in India, but also became an inspiration for many more struggles in the rest of the world.

It was, therefore, innate and instinctive for our founding fathers to build in adequate safeguards in our Constitution and the Indian Penal Code against racism and racial discrimination, and to enshrine the basic value of equality.

While Article 14 of the Constitution of India clearly states that the principle of equality cannot be denied, Article 15 expressly prohibits discrimination on the grounds of race. These two articles are reflective of the fundamental principles and values that are an integral part of the fabric that binds together a diverse country like India.

Mr Co-Chair,

Though the era of colonialism and imperialism is well behind us, it was unfortunate that people's attitudes and their very deeply ingrained beliefs continued to fuel racial hatred, prejudices and discrimination. This was particularly exacerbated by globalization and the movement of people across borders.

Durban Declaration in 2001 gave us a comprehensive, action-oriented document with concrete proposals and measures to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

It emphasized that there should not be any state-sponsored and institutionalized discrimination against any individual citizen or group of citizens; and that States do not condone or encourage regressive social attitudes which fuel such discriminatory attitudes and practices.

This Declaration was further strengthened by the Durban Review Conference (DRC) of April 2009, which assessed the effectiveness of the existing Durban follow-up mechanisms and other UN mechanisms dealing with racism and racial discrimination.

Mr Co-Chair,

At this 10th anniversary, regrettably, the challenge of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance continues to persist. Racial inequalities are widely evident in socio-economic indicators and patterns. Moreover, political violence induced by these is on the rise in various parts of the world and has become more brutal and vicious. This has been accentuated by lack of effective social integration and the re-emergence of feeling of xenophobia.

We have to continue our battle. We have to create greater political will and momentum internationally to develop more effective measures to enhance its implementation. International campaign will bear fruits only when, we, in our own countries promulgate stringent national laws, strictly implement them and most importantly, ensure that attitudes of people are changed.

Perhaps the most definitive guarantee against racial prejudice, discrimination and xenophobia is development and nurturing of multi-cultural, democratic and pluralistic traditions with the inculcation of values of tolerance and respect for diversity; and implementation of appropriate educational and legislative strategies.

Mr. Co-Chair,

We are happy that today we are adopting a concise outcome document of this commemorative event. It is important that our focus remains on eliminating the abhorrent practice of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and other related intolerance.

Mr Co-Chair,

As we work today towards a world free of the racial prejudices of the past, we have yet another opportunity to assess the successes and shortcomings in the implementation of DDPA and DRC. It is, yet another chance, to reaffirm our steadfast commitment to its effective implementation.

Thank you.

756. Intervention by Joint Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs Ravi Bangar on behalf of External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna at the Meeting of the Group of Fifteen (G-15) Ministers of Foreign Affairs.

New York, September 24, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

I am pleased to participate in the Ministerial meeting of the Group of 15. This Group was set up to enhance cooperation among the countries of the South, and engage in meaningful dialogue with the North. More than two decades later, the rationale for founding the Group not only continues to be valid, but has become even more relevant. The global situation today makes South-South cooperation not only useful, but imperative.

2. In today's world, we are viewed as emerging leaders with the potential to resuscitate a sluggish global economy and contribute to global stability and well-being. Our individual strengths, competencies and global influence would be multiplied manifold if we pool our resources together and develop 'win-win' synergies and complementarities. In the UN and other fora, intra-South cooperation has considerably strengthened our bargaining power and achieved favourable results on issues of common concern, in areas such as public health, intellectual property, biodiversity, etc. As the first and only such cross-regional grouping of influential developing countries, the Group of Fifteen has the potential to become a nodal hub for South-South cooperation.

3. For our Group to realize this potential, however, we will have to persist with the process of honest introspection that we embarked upon in the Tehran Summit. We have already demonstrated this resolve by acting upon the recommendations of the High-Level Task Force. The Group has established two Working Groups to consider concrete ways of revitalizing the Group’s Sectoral cooperation Projects and its institutional mechanisms. We are encouraged that the Working Group on Sectoral cooperation is identifying best practices for technical cooperation among G-15 countries with a view to replicating them in other member countries. We hope that the revised guidelines for effective implementation and monitoring of G-15 projects recommended by the HLTF, are also operationalized and would contribute further to improving G-15 projects. On the institutional front, we look forward to meaningful recommendations by the Working Group on Institutional Mechanisms aimed at streamlining the Technical Support Facility in order to enable it to contribute more directly and meaningfully to the Group’s activities and its revitalized role.

4. We are happy to note that action has already been initiated on several other key recommendations of the High-Level Task Force, such as articulation of common G-15 positions on key development issues on the international agenda; convening regular meetings of the G-15 Permanent Representatives in Geneva to supervise the Group’s activities; and strengthening of the G-15/G-8 dialogue. In this context, I wish to sincerely commend the outstanding leadership and commitment displayed by Sri Lanka, as the Chair of G-15, for carrying the Group together and leading these bold initiatives. We hope that the steps initiated in the Working Groups and elsewhere, will be further consolidated and institutionalized, leading to a refurbished and energized G-15.

Mr. Chairman,

5. We must ensure that this process of reform that the Group has embarked upon, is not a static one, artificially confined to implementing the HLTF’s recommendations. An organisation remains relevant and useful only as long as it adapts itself continually to changing realities and is responsive to shifting needs. We strongly believe that the G-15 must be ‘alive’ and constantly growing in response to the dynamic and fast-changing world we live in. The responsibility for ensuring this devolves upon all of us, both individually and collectively.
6. This includes responding to the fast-paced technological changes in the world, harnessing the tremendous reach and potential of information technologies, using the power of the media in its diverse platforms, identifying important global issues on the horizon and acting proactively on them, and involving our private sector partners more closely in the Group’s activities. It is critical that the Chambers of Commerce of G-15 member countries have an integral role in promoting intra G-15 business, trade and investment. Such forward-looking measures will enable the Group to play a more significant role in the international arena, commensurate with the potential and capabilities of its member countries.

Mr. Chairman,

7. On its part, India continues to remain fully committed to G-15. India has, in the past, actively participated in G-15 projects and has coordinated a number of them. We stand ready to share our development experiences and promote intra G-15 cooperation by collaborating in capacity-building, technical assistance and sectoral cooperation projects. We have a range of ongoing collaborative projects in developing countries in a variety of sectors and technical cooperation programs, that are demand-driven and result-oriented. We would be happy to replicate these templates and projects within the framework of G-15 cooperation. We also look forward to actively engaging with the Group on international development issues where we have shared concerns in areas such as reform of the international financial architecture, achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and in addressing the collective challenges we face.

8. Before concluding, I would like to reiterate our sincere appreciation and gratitude to Sri Lanka, the current Chair of G-15, for their excellent stewardship of the Group at a critical time, and for taking the Group forward in the right direction.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by thanking you for your esteemed leadership of the Group of 77 this year.

I also wish to take this opportunity to congratulate Algeria who would be chairing the Group next year. As I do so, I am reminded of the Charter of Algiers adopted at the First G-77 Ministerial meeting in 1967 that set out our common vision, and has ever been a source of inspiration.

India welcomes Nauru as the newest member of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

The founding principles of the G-77 are rooted in the aspirations of our peoples to lead a life of dignity and respect.

In today’s extremely uncertain global economic context, our development priorities, foremost of which is poverty eradication, face innumerable challenges. Developing countries are contending with a global environment that is least suited to pursue sustained economic growth.

The global economic and financial crisis was said to over in 2010, or at least that was what the developed world wanted us to believe. The G-77 was more perspective on the issue and kept reiterating that the crisis was far from over. Recent economic doldrums in developed countries stand to vindicate our position.

The precepts of development championed by the G-77 have stood the test of time, and give us added reasons to believe in our chosen path.

If only the world had taken note of our constant reminder that unsustainable pattern of consumption and production in the developed world needed urgent course correction, we could have avoided the unhealthy debt situation that plagues major economies today.

Mr. Chairman,

The collective strength of the Group must ensure that the limitations of the global financial crisis should not become an argument for shifting the focus of the global development agenda away from poverty eradication.
At the upcoming RIO plus 20 Conference, this must be our guiding parameter. We must seize the opportunity to bring back sustainable development to the forefront of global development agenda.

And while doing so, we must seek solutions to energy poverty, access to food, natural resource re-generation and the challenges of urbanisation in understanding “green economy”, a notion which in our opinion is subsumed in the existing framework of Sustainable Development.

Means of implementation supported by transfer of technology is fundamental to the success of RIO. The “generics” in medicines have shown how flexibility in the IPR regime could be used for greater public good. India would advocate a similar template to make Rio a success.

Mr. Chairman,

Financing for development is a critical issue today. The developed world is most reluctant to meets its ODA commitments. We saw this opposition most vividly during the Istanbul Conference for the LDCs. Arguments were made that globalisation had mainstreamed development where trade, FDI, remittance, innovative financing had become more important sources of development finance than ODA.

We must reject all such assertions which are based on convenience rather than any empirical understanding.

There is no substitute for ODA in meeting the Millennium Development Goals. South-South cooperation can only complement and not replace North-South Cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,

The G-77 has been the pillar of the UNFCCC negotiations on Climate Change. We must remain united in our pursuit of an outcome that is comprehensive, equitable and balanced based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibility. A second commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol is imperative in this regard.

We must also push for an early implementation of the Cancun Agreements including the Green Fund, the Technology Mechanism and the Adaptation Committee so as to ensure credible action on all the four pillars of the UNFCCC process – mitigation, adaptation, finance and technology. India is acutely aware of the existential threat that Climate Change poses to the Small Island Developing States and believes that adaptation needs of these countries must be met at the earliest.
Mr. Chairman,

It is the bounden duty of the Group to support those who need our cooperation the most. India reiterates that the special needs of LDCs, LLDCs, SIDS and countries in Africa must be given primacy in the Group’s agenda. The Istanbul Programme, the Mauritius Strategy for Implementation, the Almaty Programme and the issues deliberated at the recently held UN General Assembly meeting on Desertification should receive our highest attention.

Last year, we finalised the Access and Benefit Sharing Protocol after years of labour. As repository of 80% of the world’s biological diversity, we, the developing countries, must now concentrate on its implementation. Establishment of the Inter-Governmental Panel on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services to strengthen science-policy interface would be most rewarding in this pursuit.

Mr. Chairman,

The G-77 was conceived to seek equity and justice in the global economic order. In all these years, our steadfast unity and purpose have stood us in good stead. We shall continue to make tireless efforts for a better future for our peoples.

Thank you.
Statement by Additional Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs Dilip Sinha at the Second Ministerial Luncheon meeting of the Group of Friends at the United Against Human Trafficking.

New York, September 26, 2011.

Allow me begin by thanking Foreign Minister of Belarus H.E. Mr. Sergei Martynov for organizing the luncheon meeting. I also commend the important coordinating and steering role played by delegation of Belarus in New York for the successful adoption of the United Nations Global Plan of Action against Trafficking in Persons.

It is heartening to see that for the first time an agreement of the international community has been reached to address the scourge of trafficking in persons in a more holistic and comprehensive manner so as to ensure that human trafficking policies are integrated, balanced, coherent, result-oriented and people centric,

We welcome the lunch of the Global Plan of Action in 2010. This is an essential tool and yet another opportunity for the international community to recommit ourselves to fight this crime in a more coordinated and cooperative manner. The 4 Ps of preventing, protecting, prosecuting and partnership is a new clarion call in this fight, which needs to be adhered to and implemented.

The new element of partnership is crucial, as it points to be non-exclusiveness of Member States in this fight; instead it calls for an inclusive approach of all stakeholders, private sector and international organizations to work more closely in a cooperative and coordinated manner to tackle this menace.

Friends,

India is and will remain committed towards a world free of human trafficking, a heinous and abhorrent crime, our struggle against trafficking is well known. Our commitment to address the problem of trafficking in persons is well reflected in various national legislations and policies, including our obligation under regional and international mechanisms to which India is party to.

At the level of policy implementation, we have developed strategies which are holistic, participative and inclusive and are not restricted to direct intervention against trafficking only.

Anti-Trafficking Nodal Cells have been set up both at the Central and the provincial levels. We are adopting a victim-centric approach to these issues. We are working with the UN Office on Drugs and Crime for strengthening law enforcement responses in India against trafficking in persons. Training and capacity building are being enhanced. A comprehensive scheme for prevention of trafficking, rescue, rehabilitation, reintegration and repatriation of the victims of commercial sexual exploitation is already in existence. India also seeks to eradicate the menace through empowering the vulnerable sections of our society, who are its potential victims. This is also one of the core objectives of this Global Plan.

We are concerned at the growing scale worldwide of tracking of persons are recognize the complexities involved in dealing with this issue. We will continue to work in close cooperation with Belarus and other members of the Group of Friends in any future activities of the Group of Friends in the United Nations.

Thanking you,

759. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on the Situation in Afghanistan at the Security Council.

New York, September 29, 2011.

At the outset, Mr. President, I would like to thank you for scheduling today’s debate on the situation in Afghanistan. I welcome H.E. Mr. Zalmai Rassoul, Foreign Minister of Afghanistan for his presence in the Council and thank him for his statement. We are grateful for the latest report of the Secretary General and are appreciative of the briefing by SRSG Staffan de Mistura.

Mr. President,

We are deeply concerned that the overall security environment in Afghanistan continues to deteriorate. The latest Secretary General’s report notes that the average monthly number of security incidents is up 39% as compared to the same period in 2010. While the process of transition of security responsibilities to Afghan National Security Forces has commenced since July, 2011, it is indeed worrisome that there has been no let up in terrorist violence.

The Taliban has opted for attacking high-security targets, assassinations and launching complex suicide attacks in urban centres including Kabul. Important political figures and government officials had been killed in recent past including Ahmad Wali Karzai, the Chairman of the Kandahar Provincial Council and Ghulam Haidar Hameedi, Mayor of the Kandahar. The Intercontinental Hotel, the British Council and the US Embassy in Kabul have also been targeted.

We unreservedly condemn the assassination of Chairman of the High Peace Council and former President of Afghanistan Professor Burhanudin Rabbani last week. Tragically, the forces of terror and hatred have silenced yet another powerful voice of reason and peace in Afghanistan.

As we have repeatedly stressed in this Council, these attacks point to a dangerous osmosis of ideologies, ambitions, training and operations among the syndicate of terrorism in the region with suicide terrorism as its main technique, and targets not limited to Afghanistan.

The resilience of insurgents and their ability to target areas otherwise considered safe and secure, is a grim reminder that the security gains are still tenuous.

Mr. President,

For peace, stability and security in Afghanistan, it is imperative that the ongoing transition must be linked to the ground realities rather than rigid timetables. This, the international community in its hurry to withdraw from a combat role in Afghanistan, will ignore at its own peril.

The Secretary General’s latest report underscores that for success of transition, it is important that the Afghan National Security Forces continue to demonstrate enhanced independent capability and professionalism to assume an increasing level of responsibility and accountability.

We support further strengthening of the Afghan National Security Forces. This must go hand-in-hand with enhancement of their capabilities along with adequate enablers. It is important that the transition must be Afghan owned, the transition must be planned and implemented in a systematic manner, and the transition must ensure the protection and promotion of the human rights of all Afghans.

For security and stabilization of Afghanistan, it is important to isolate and root out the syndicate of terrorism which includes elements of the Al Qaeda, Taliban, Laskar-e-Taiba and other terrorist and extremist groups operating from within and outside Afghanistan’s borders. These groups are ideologically and operationally fused and their bonds have strengthened over the years. It would not be possible to consolidate the gains on the security front unless the international community is able to firmly deal with safe havens for terrorist groups outside Afghanistan’s borders.

We fully support an Afghan-led inclusive and transparent process of reconciliation, adhering to the redlines as enunciated by the Afghan Government in the London and Kabul communiqués. As we have earlier stressed, it must be accompanied by an inclusive political process and intra-Afghan dialogue and include renunciation of violence, cutting of ties to terrorist groups, and respect for the Afghan constitution with its protections for human rights, including the rights of women.

Mr. President,

Afghan ownership and leadership is also vital for development and reconstruction in Afghanistan. This also implies greater coherence, coordination and further streamlining of international community’s development-related efforts including aligning of assistance with Afghan national priorities and increasingly working through Afghan institutions. We are happy to note UNAMA’s efforts in this regard.

With the onset of the drawdown of foreign security forces and the transition process, it is all the more important for the international community, especially the regional countries, to remain committed in this crucial phase, when Afghan national institutions are still being developed and consolidated.

It is also important that Afghanistan’s growth strategy is built upon the country’s comparative advantage of abundant natural resources and its strategic geographical location. These would have to be the building blocks of our vision for Afghanistan as a hub linking Central and South Asia through pipelines, trade and transit routes for the common good of the people of our region and the world. We support the New Silk Road initiative as this would be an important step in that direction.

India remains committed to partnering the Government and people of Afghanistan in the building of a peaceful, stable, democratic and pluralistic nation. India’s assistance programme is spread across Afghanistan and spans almost the entire gamut of economic and social development activities. We are undertaking reconstruction and development activities in Afghanistan, with our total bilateral assistance commitment reaching US $ 2 billion approximately. We have laid special emphasis on capacity building and human resource development, which in our opinion are the building blocks for a robust and self-reliant economy.

Indian companies have evinced interest in exploitation of Afghanistan's iron ore reserves and India is also participating in the TAPI (Turkmenistan, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India) gas pipeline project. These are projects which would call for large investments and express our resolve to cooperate with Afghanistan on plans involving regional integration for the mutual benefit of all stakeholders.
SAARC, of which Afghanistan is a full member, is an important vehicle for regional economic cooperation within the South Asian region. We have always considered Afghanistan as a South Asian country with natural complementarities and synergies with other countries of South Asia and one which is uniquely placed to build bridges even beyond it. India’s rapidly growing economy and its large market make it a natural destination for Afghan exports. Similarly, India can be a cost effective and efficient source of Afghan imports.

Mr. President,

As the security transition moves forward, Afghanistan needs long-term commitment and support of the international community. We look forward to the forthcoming Istanbul and Bonn Conferences and the comprehensive review of UNAMA’s mandated activities and UN support in Afghanistan by the end of this year. We hope that these would contribute to efforts towards lasting peace, stability, economic sustainability and regional integration of Afghanistan in the years ahead.

Thank you.

760. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Moinul Hassan Ahamed on Agenda item 109 – Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism at the 6th Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 3, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me join others in congratulating you and other members of the Bureau on your election. I assure you full cooperation and support of my delegation.

We would like to thank the Secretary General for his annual report on “Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism”. The report gives an account of the measures taken at the national and international levels to combat terrorism and international legal instruments adopted for this purpose. The report also provides valuable information on workshops and training programs conducted during the reporting period on countering international terrorism.
Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism is a scourge that undermines peace, democracy and freedom. It endangers the very foundations of the continued existence of democratic societies. Terrorism has affected the whole world. There is hardly any region in the world that has not been scarred by terrorism during the past decade. The heinous terrorist attacks in New York, Abuja, Baghdad, Bali, Kabul, London, Madrid, Moscow, and Mumbai, repeatedly, - to name a few - are but the footnotes to the ugly imprints of terrorism.

Terrorists have become truly globalized. To give effect to their sinister plans, they recruit in one country, raise funds in another and operate in others. Terrorists advocate their own ideologies. They have developed global logistical supply chains and transnational financial support systems; terrorists use the latest and most sophisticated technologies to their advantage and have command and control mechanisms in place that enable them to operate across continents on a real time basis. All these complexities have posed enormous challenges in countering terrorism. International community has no option but confront these challenges unshakably and decisively.

As the Prime Minister of India Dr. Manmohan Singh has said on 24th September 2011 during the General debate of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly, the fight against terrorism must be unrelenting. There cannot be selective approaches in dealing with terrorist groups or the infrastructure of terrorism. Terrorism has to be fought across all fronts.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism is a global problem that requires global solutions. International community has invested considerable time and resources in developing a normative framework for countering terrorism.

The Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism adopted by UNGA Resolution 49/60 condemns international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. The Declaration also unequivocally condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable, whenever and by whoever committed whatever the considerations or factors that may be invoked to justify them. States are also obliged to refrain from organizing, acquiescing in or encouraging activities within their territories directed towards the commission of such acts.

States are also obliged to ensure that their territories are not used for terrorist establishments or training camps or for the preparation or organization of terrorist acts intended to be committed against other States or their citizens. This general framework is backed by 12 international conventions and five protocols adopted under the auspices of the United Nations. So far the United Nations has adopted a sectoral approach in these international instruments. These remain fundamental tools in the fight against terrorism.

Mr. Chairman,

India is a party to 13 international conventions and protocols. India is fully committed to its obligations under these conventions. Presently India, serving as a non-permanent member on the Security Council, is also Chairing the Counter Terrorism Committee (CTC) of the Security Council and contributing to the work of all other sanctions regimes, including the Al Qaida Sanctions Committee. We are very satisfied that the Counter Terrorism Committee is making good progress in its work under the Chairmanship of Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri and we congratulate him and other members of the CTC for their hard work. We also congratulate CTED for their excellent support.

At the National level, India has taken several steps to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism. Apart from strengthening our strategic and operational framework to combat terrorism effectively, we have also amended and strengthened our domestic legislation entitled Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967 which has integrated the sanctions regime of the Al Qaida Sanctions Committee established pursuant to resolutions 1267 and 1989.

The Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act incorporates provisions dealing with all aspects of terrorism including conspiracy and incitement to terrorism. The Act criminalizes raising of funds for terrorist activities, holding of proceeds of terrorism, harbouring of terrorists, unauthorized possession or use of any bomb, dynamite or hazardous explosive substance or other lethal weapons. The Weapons of Mass Destruction (Prevention) Act, 2005 provides detailed measures preventing the falling of weapons of mass destruction or dual use materials in the hands of terrorists and non-state actors.

To enhance international cooperation for the investigation, prosecution and extradition of persons involved in terrorism, organized crime, money laundering, terrorist financing and illicit drug trafficking, India has concluded forty bilateral treaties on extradition and mutual legal assistance in criminal matters. In the absence of a bilateral treaty, India can also cooperate under the relevant international conventions and on the basis of reciprocity. To effectively monitor and cooperate with international partners we have set up a Financial Intelligence Unit. India is also an active member of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

Mr. Chairman,

A lot has been accomplished but more remains to be done. We fully support the outcome document adopted by the Special Meeting of the Counter Terrorism
Committee of the Security Council held on 28 September 2011. The Special Meeting was held to commemorate the 10th Anniversary of the adoption of Resolution 1373 which was adopted in the aftermath of the 9/11 terrorist attacks in 2001 on this very City. We fully endorse the two consensus benchmarks that have been reflected in the outcome document that – the international community supports zero tolerance towards terrorism, and no cause or grievance, whatsoever, can justify terrorism. The General Debate of the 66th UNGA session also reflected that, over and above, the international community is willing to pursue its crusade against terrorism with an unquestionable political will to squarely face the challenge of terrorism and face it decisively.

International community should focus on further strengthening anti terrorism legal framework. At the same time States are required to implement the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy in an integrated manner. I would like to draw the attention of this Committee to the assertion made by the Secretary General that the comprehensiveness of the Global Counter Terrorism Strategy will not be complete without the conclusion of the Comprehensive Convention. The Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism (CCIT) is at an advance stage of its consideration before this Committee. We strongly urge all States to give due consideration to what the Secretary General expects us to do and make all efforts to conclude the CCIT during this Session.

Thank you.
Mr. President,

At the outset, permit me to extend my warm felicitations to you on your assumption of the important post of President of the 66th session of the UN General Assembly. You can count on the full cooperation and constructive support of my delegation as you steer our work over the next year.

Mr. President,

Less than a week has passed since our leaders assembled here in this very same hall to share their perspective and vision on the current international system.

Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh, addressed this august assembly on 24 September, 2011 and spelled out some of the daunting challenges confronting the international community in this time of flux and uncertainty.

Mr. President,

Terrorism is a scourge of humanity. It is a global problem that requires global solutions. It has spared no country or region in the world, be it New York, London, Abuja, or Mumbai, to name but a few places.

I am happy that the Counter Terrorism Committee of the Security Council, which India has the honour of chairing, adopted an outcome document on the 10th Anniversary of Resolution 1373 which contains the two consensus benchmarks, namely that the international community has zero tolerance towards terrorism, and no cause or grievance, whatsoever, can justify it.

India believes that the adoption of the Comprehensive Convention against International Terrorism would provide a solid legal basis for the fight against terrorism. In our view, the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy is incomplete in the absence of such a Comprehensive Convention.

Mr. President,

On the important issue of reforming the Security Council, the negotiations during the 65th session have demonstrated, without a shred of doubt, the strong support extended by the membership for expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent categories of Security Council.
We welcome the decision of the President of the General Assembly to re-appoint Ambassador Zahir Tanin as the Chair of the intergovernmental negotiations. We urge Ambassador Tanin to immediately convene an informal plenary meeting to discuss Council reform.

Mr. President,

Last year, the United Nations played a significant role in helping the people of South Sudan realize their aspirations. It was with a sense of accomplishment that India along with the rest of the international community welcomed the new country into our fold. The path ahead is by no means easy, but we are confident that we can, with adequate resolve, patience, and perseverance help the newborn nation as it embarks on the task of nation-building.

This year, we have another opportunity to transform the dreams of the Palestinian people into reality. As Prime Minister Manmohan Singh said to this Assembly on 24th September, “We look forward to welcoming Palestine as an equal member of the United Nations.”

Mr. President,

The population of our planet is set to cross the 7 billion mark this month. This is not a mere statistical milestone but is a reminder once again of the grinding poverty, inequality and deprivation that continue to be the fate for an unacceptably large cross-section of humanity. It also shines a spotlight on the many unfinished tasks ahead of us in the global development agenda.

Since the global community met in New York in September 2010 to review the progress on MDGs, we have registered some advances, though overall the picture is mixed. The high political commitment notwithstanding, the hard truth is that countries have done little to shore up Global Partnership- MDG 8. In this regard, the commitment made by developed countries of 0.7% of GNI ODA ought to be fulfilled at the earliest. Equally significant is the need for ensuring access to technology in an affordable manner and building capacity.

Poverty reduction, gender empowerment, maternal health and infant mortality figures continue to show variable trends with marked disparities between regions. Acute rural-urban divide in all the indicators make the progress lopsided. What is most worrisome is that despite significant reductions in extreme poverty in the developing world, the proportion of people who go hungry has remained static. This glaring disconnect calls for renewed attention to the mechanisms governing access to food in the developing world.

Mr. President,

We believe that it is important for the UN system to focus on the needs of the most vulnerable populations in developing countries. Sustained priority must be given to the special needs of the LDCs, LLDCs, and SIDs. Member-states and the UN system need to ensure timely action on the Istanbul commitments. We must also pay particular attention to Africa in recognition of its special needs.

The focus on women’s issues in the UN system received a substantial boost through the transformative step member-states took last year in creating a unified gender entity - UN WOMEN. We are happy to note that the new entity has embarked on its important tasks with purpose and vigour even as it settles into its new structures and mandate.

Mr. President,

My delegation’s efforts at the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change will be to ensure that the negotiations move forward expeditiously leading to an ambitious, balanced and fair outcome. While doing so, we ought to be mindful that the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibility, and respective capabilities must be its defining features.

I also draw your attention to the UN Conference on Sustainable Development to be held in Rio de Janeiro next year which holds strong promise for the global sustainable development agenda. We must seize the opportunity to bring back sustainable development, as defined by the Rio Principles, to the centre of the global development matrix.

Mr. President,

We appreciate the efforts of the Secretary-General in advocating the principles of promotion and protection of human rights, and the rule of law. We also recognize their synergistic link with human welfare and socio-economic development, including the achievement of the MDGs.

The review of the Human Rights Council last year was a welcome development.

Mr. President,

Peacekeeping constitutes the most visible enterprise of the United Nations. India has had the proud privilege of contributing more than 100,000 peacekeepers to peacekeeping operations in the past six decades. As one of the largest troop and resource contributors, India is acutely conscious of the dramatic changes in the peacekeeping landscape.

We remain supportive of all efforts by the Secretary-General to strengthen the capability of peacekeepers to keep peace in increasingly difficult and complex situations by taking into account changed realities. It is imperative to ensure that any decision on peacekeeping mandates does not get isolated from the equally important decisions on resources and capacity to ensure satisfactory execution of such mandates.

Equally, India is conscious that peacekeeping cannot be a substitute for the task of nation-building and peace building. The Government of India is committed to the principle and practice of peace building.

Mr. President,

India attaches the highest priority to the goal of universal disarmament. We continue to be guided by the visionary action plan for a Nuclear- Weapons-Free and Non Violent World presented by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in 1988 and which sets out a road map for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner.

We further welcome the attention given to the issue of ‘Nuclear Safety and Security’. We support international efforts under the aegis of the International Atomic Energy Agency to enhance levels of safety and security.

In closing, Mr. President, we look forward to forging ahead on the crucial issues before us in the current session of the General Assembly and working towards meaningful and result-oriented outcomes.

I thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to begin by congratulating you and your bureau on assuming the leadership of the Second Committee.

India associates itself with the statement delivered by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairman,

we meet at uncertain times. The global economic situation remains a matter of great concern. Many leading economies face structural impediments. The sovereign debt situation in Europe and jobless growth in other parts of the world pose a severe challenge.

If only the world had taken note of our constant reminder that unsustainable pattern of consumption and production in the developed world needed urgent course correction, we could have avoided the unhealthy debt situation that plagues major economies today.

It seems the path to global economic recovery would be long and winding. And the only way to beat this tepid pace of recovery is to pursue sustained economic growth. Enhancing economic growth is not an option but a necessity, especially for developing countries that have huge development challenges to meet, first and foremost being poverty eradication.

While the global economic situation may be fluid, we must not lower our ambition on the MDGs or Other Internationally Agreed Development Goals. Poverty eradication and Sustainable Development must continue to be at the forefront of the global development agenda. Promotion of universal access to food and energy ought to be the core elements of our development strategy.

Mr. Chairman,

We are just four years away from the MDG target year. Our singular focus, therefore, must be on its implementation. Discussion on the future of MDGs should in no way dilute our efforts towards attainment of these goals.

The political commitment of the UN member states to do their best to achieve the MDGs by 2015 must see accelerated action. In this regard, the commitment made by developed countries of 0.7% of GNI ODA ought to be fulfilled at the earliest. Equally significant is the need for ensuring access to technology in an affordable manner and building capacity.
India, on its part, remains committed to sharing its development experience with fellow developing countries. Such promises by us and by other developing countries, as part of South-South Cooperation, however, cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

Similarly, innovative sources of financing cannot be equated with traditional sources of development finance.

Mr. Chairman,

The upcoming UN Conference on Sustainable Development next year in Brazil holds strong promise for the global sustainable development agenda. We must collectively work to renew our commitment to Sustainable Development as defined by the RIO Principles. While doing so, we must ensure that the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibility are at the very heart of the understanding we reach at RIO+20.

In the run up to the RIO conference, as we grapple with the concept of “Green Economy”, India wishes to see sustainable solutions for food security, energy access, water stress, natural resource re-generation and rapid urbanisation to be its salient features. Poverty eradication ought to be the fundamental action point in the envisaged outcome from RIO+20.

Means of implementation supported by transfer of technology is fundamental to the success of RIO+20. The “generics” in medicine have shown how flexibility in the IPR regime could be used for greater public good. India would advocate a template which balances fair returns to innovators with larger public good to make Rio+20 a success.

Mr. Chairman,

At the Durban UNFCCC meeting, India would push for an outcome that is comprehensive, equitable, balanced and based on the principles of equity and common but differentiated responsibility. A second commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol is imperative in this regard.

We would also seek an early implementation of the Cancun Agreements including the Green Fund, the Technology Mechanism and the Adaptation Framework so as to ensure credible action on all the four pillars of the UNFCCC process – mitigation, adaptation, finance and technology. India is acutely aware of the existential threat that Climate Change poses to the Small Island Developing States and believes that adaptation needs of these countries must be met at the earliest.

Mr. Chairman,
The Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries, Small Island Developing States and countries in Africa need enhanced support from the international community. The Istanbul Programme, the Mauritius Strategy for Implementation, the Almaty Programme and the issues deliberated at the recently held UN General Assembly meeting on Desertification should receive our highest attention.

Last year, we finalised the Access and Benefit Sharing Protocol after years of labour. We must now concentrate on its implementation to ensure equitable benefits to all, and especially to those who have so far been denied ownership of their biotic resources. Establishment of the Inter-Governmental Panel on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services to strengthen science-policy interface would be most rewarding in this pursuit.

Mr. Chairman,

In these uncertain times, the Second Committee has to assume a larger role in fashioning and guiding the global development agenda. Under your leadership, I am confident that it would meet all expectations. You can count on our delegation’s full support in all your endeavours.

Thank You.
to strengthen the United Nations attention to the Rule of Law at all levels.

I extend my sincere gratitude to the United Nations Secretary-General for his annual report entitled “Strengthening and Coordinating United Nations Rule of Law Activities” (A/66/133) of 08 August 2011 presented pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 65/32 of 06 December 2010. Secretary-General’s Report reflects in an excellent manner the United Nations approach towards the rule of law both at the national and international levels. The Report highlights both the achievements and challenges in strengthening the rule of law at the national and international levels over the past year, and gives an over-view of the continuing progress towards a more comprehensive and coordinated approach in support of national priorities and plans, by identifying critical gaps and challenges.

At the national level, the United Nations approach inter alia involves, strengthening national ownership of reform initiatives, providing support to national reform constituencies, developing strategic approaches aligned with national assessments and coordinating activities with key stakeholders including civil society. At the international level, the UN approach stresses the need for fostering the rule of law by codification, development, promotion and implementation of an international framework of norms and standards by analyzing the role and contribution of international courts, tribunals and non-judicial mechanisms.

Mr. Chairman,

We appreciate the issuance of a Guidance Note by the Secretary-General in May 2011, which provides the guiding principles and framework for the promotion of the rule of law in relations between States, between States and international organizations and between international organizations. The Guidance Note identifies the major legal instruments that guide the action of the United Nations in implementing the guiding principles including in specific areas of rule of law assistance at the international level.

Mr. Chairman,

We agree in entirety with the statement in paragraph 6 of the Secretary-General’s report that Rule of law at the international level is the very foundation of the United Nations Charter and that the Organization aims to establish conditions under which justice and the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law are respected. We consider the promotion of the rule of law as an essential tool for promoting harmony, and ensuring development, peaceful co-existence and cooperation among States and strengthening international peace and security.

India believes that the advancement of the rule of law at the national level is an essential tool for the protection of democracy, sustainable economic growth, sustainable development, eradication of poverty and hunger and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The development and implementation of international legal norms have the key role in achieving the goal of international peace and stability and in bringing the discipline in human life. The statement in paragraph 8 of the Secretary-General’s Report that the United Nations continued to assist in the development and implementation of international norms and standards related to the rule of law over the past year, including in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, is worth appreciation. In this context, I gladly recall India’s action of ratifying the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption in May 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Pursuant to General Assembly Resolution 65/32, the focus of our debate in this session is on the sub-topic “Rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict situations”. I would like to mention that India is a strong believer in respect for the rule of law and the application thereof and related principles both in the internal affairs of a state and at the international level. The Indian Constitution is firmly rooted in the promotion of healthy democracy and peaceful co-existence. It provides for the law based and peaceful formation of governments. India strongly believes in the peaceful handling of any conflict situation in accordance with the applicable legal rules and principles without using force.

India is the largest democracy of the world with a lot of diversities. I feel proud while mentioning that India has always adhered to democratic principles in the formation and change of governments. At the international level, India do believe in avoiding any unauthorized intervention in a State’s internal affairs or use of force in any conflict or post-conflict situation. In the case of any conflict situation and which requires political change, transition must be ensured in a peaceful manner ensuring full justice to the population of the state concerned.

Mr. Chairman,

India reiterates the call for strengthening the capacity of States, especially of developing States, as the rule of law assistance has sometimes been piecemeal and, in some instances, donor-driven and not in line with national priorities of the recipient countries. There is an urgent need to move towards approaches that are nationally-driven and sustainable, and approaches that can garner the requisite political and popular support.

I Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Thank you Madam Chairperson

May I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your election as Chairman of the Fourth Committee? I would also like to felicitate other members of the Bureau on their election.

I also take this opportunity to congratulate former Chairman, the Permanent Representative of Zimbabwe, Ambassador Chitsaka Chipaziwa for the way he conducted the work of this Committee during the 65th session. I assure you of my delegation's full cooperation and support during this 66th session of the UN General Assembly. My delegation broadly aligns itself with the statement of the Chair of the NAM delivered on October 3, 2011.

Madam Chairperson,

Colonialism is not only anachronistic, archaic and outmoded. It also contravenes the fundamental tenets of democracy, freedom, human dignity and rights. Today, as we discuss decolonization, many countries of the world are witnessing major social and political upheavals. These developments clearly indicate that the time has come to get rid of all aspects of colonialism.

The General Assembly in 1960, under Resolution 1514 (XV), adopted the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. The Declaration solemnly proclaimed the necessity of bringing to a speedy and unconditional end, colonialism in all its forms and manifestations. The right of peoples under alien subjugation, domination and exploitation, to freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development was recognized as a result of this declaration.

The following year, the Special Committee on the Implementation of the Declaration on Decolonization was established to study, investigate and recommend action to bring an end to colonialism. India was in the forefront of these initiatives and was also the first Chairman of the Decolonization Committee.

Madam Chairperson,

Decolonization is in fact, one among the visible achievements of the United Nations since its formation in 1945. The fact that today, fewer than 2 Million people live under colonial rule in the remaining 16 Non-Self-Governing Territories when compared to 750 Million in 1945 is a testimony to the efforts to this august body.

However, these 16 territories also serve as constant reminders that the process of decolonization is as yet incomplete and that more needs to be done if we are to move the people in the Territories closer to their legitimate political status options defined in the Declaration.

Now we are in the third international Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2011-2020). It is our hope that by the end of this decade, these 16 territories would overcome the vestiges of a bygone system.

Madam Chairperson,

The way ahead must be a judicious mix of urgency and activism on the one hand, and one of sensitivity and circumscription, on the other. It must take into account, first and foremost, the needs and aspirations of the people of the Territories and their special circumstances, particularly developmental issues in context of geographical location, remoteness and fragile ecosystem in some cases.

It should be our common endeavours to work with the people of the remaining non-self-governing territories to realize what they perceive to be in their best interest. They should be given an opportunity to determine this freely from a well-informed standpoint. Many of the 16 territories already have threshold to form functional institutions that can thrive on their own.

Madam Chairperson,

We welcome the efforts of Special Committee on Decolonization (Committee of 24) to engage the administering Powers in a positive and constructive manner to end colonialism. Their role is crucial in attaining the objectives that we have laid down for ourselves. Cooperation, and not confrontation, is the key to our work. We are happy to note that this spirit has imbued the ongoing dialogue with the administering Powers.

India also appreciates the efforts taken by the Special Committee on Decolonization in formulating the report (A/66/23) and its recommendations. We would like to assure the Chairman of the Committee of 24, Ambassador Francisco Carrion-Mena of our full support and involvement in his efforts to move the agenda ahead and successfully complete the mandate of the Special Committee.

The Committee under his stewardship has already taken many initiatives such as the Caribbean regional seminar organized in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines on 31 May to 2 June 2011 on the implementation of the Third International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism. Such seminars help to mobilize world opinion to support and assist the peoples of the Territories in speedily ending colonialism.

Madam Chairperson,

India—as always, is a strong believer in ideals of democracy, human rights, dignity and peaceful co-existence which are the corner stones of a civilized society. India has ceaselessly struggled for an end to colonialism since her independence in 1947 which was in itself was one of the most important milestones in the history of decolonization.

In conclusion, as a founding member of the UN and the Special Committee on the Implementation of the Declaration on Decolonization, I would like to reaffirm India’s unrelenting commitment to achieving the goal of complete decolonization.

Thank you.

765. Statement by Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament Ambassador Sujata Mehta at the General Debate of the First Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 6, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

May I begin by congratulating you on your appointment as Chair of the First Committee. I am confident that under your leadership we will accomplish our tasks efficiently and smoothly.

India aligns itself with the statement made by Indonesia on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Mr. Chairman,

India has been steadfast in its support for global, non-discriminatory and verifiable nuclear disarmament. The Rajiv Gandhi Action Plan for a Nuclear-Weapon-Free and Non-Violent World Order was presented in 1988. As Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh said in his address to the 66th UNGA, this Action Plan sets out a concrete roadmap for achieving nuclear disarmament in a time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable manner.

The goal of nuclear disarmament can be achieved by a step-by-step process underwritten by a universal commitment and an agreed multilateral framework that is global and non-discriminatory. There is need for a meaningful dialogue among all states possessing nuclear weapons to build trust and confidence and for reducing the salience of nuclear weapons in international affairs and security doctrines. The progressive de-legitimization of nuclear weapons is essential to the goal of their complete elimination. India’s Working Paper on Nuclear Disarmament of 2006 contains specific proposals for consideration of the international community.

Without prejudice to the priority we attach to nuclear disarmament, we support the negotiation in the Conference on Disarmament of a non-discriminatory and internationally verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices that meets India’s national security interests. India is a nuclear weapon state and a responsible member of the world community, and would approach these negotiations as such.

While we share the disappointment among Member States on the continuing impasse in the CD, we believe that this is not due to the CD or its rules of procedure. The CD has the mandate, the membership and the rules of procedure to discharge its responsibilities. We believe that the First Committee should send a strong and clear signal of support for the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum and provide political impetus to the multilateral agenda, which includes early commencement of negotiations on FMCT in the Conference on Disarmament on the basis of the agreed mandate. As an essential stakeholder in this process, India is prepared to work with other likeminded countries towards this end.

Mr. Chairman,

India subscribes to a policy of credible minimum nuclear deterrent. We do not subscribe to any arms race, including a nuclear arms race. India has espoused a policy of no first-use and non-use against non-nuclear weapon states and is prepared to convert these undertakings into multilateral legal arrangements. We support negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear weapon States against the use and threat of use of nuclear weapons. We also support a Global No-first Use Treaty.

India remains committed to maintaining a unilateral and voluntary moratorium on nuclear explosive testing.
There is a strong development rationale for the expansion of nuclear energy, which is indispensable also for energy security and addressing climate change concerns. Expansion of nuclear energy can and must be ensured in a manner that does not enhance proliferation risks and is based on enhanced nuclear safety or security standards evolved under the aegis of the IAEA. India has participated in the Nuclear Security Summit process and activities.

Mr. Chairman,

This is an important year for the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention, one of the only two treaties banning an entire category of weapons of mass destruction. We view the upcoming 7th Review Conference as a valuable opportunity for States Parties to review and strengthen the Convention and improve its effective implementation, particularly in view of the new challenges facing the international community in the 21st century, including addressing the threat posed by bio-terrorism.

India is an original signatory to the CWC and has faithfully discharged all its obligations. As a responsible state party, we have demonstrated our commitment by destroying all our chemical weapon stockpiles under OPCW verification within the timeframe prescribed by the Convention. It is important to ensure the full and effective implementation of all provisions of the Convention by all States party to the Convention. India believes that it is important to maintain the credibility and integrity of the Convention as a whole.

The Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, including the safety of assets in space, continues to be a priority in light of the expanding uses of outer space and the spread and evolution of space technologies. India supports efforts to strengthen the international legal framework on the security of space assets to enhance space security for all space users and specifically to prevent the weaponization of outer space. While universal and non-discriminatory TCBMs can be useful complementary measures, they cannot substitute legally binding instruments in this field.

Mr. Chairman,

While we have participated actively in the preparatory meetings with regard to the proposed Conference on an Arms Trade Treaty in 2012, we believe that prospects for a viable and effective Treaty of universal acceptance would be enhanced only if the interests of all the stakeholders are addressed in a consensus based process and outcome, without artificial deadlines.

As a party to the CCW and all its Protocols, India looks forward to a successful 4th Review Conference of the Convention next month. The CCW has proved to be a dynamic instrument in the field of international humanitarian law. India has participated actively in negotiations in the Group of Government Experts on a protocol that seeks to address the humanitarian impact arising from the use of cluster munitions while striking a balance between humanitarian and legitimate security concerns.

Mr. Chairman,

As in previous years, India would be presenting three resolutions for action by the First Committee. These include a draft resolution on a Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons and a draft Resolution on Reducing Nuclear Danger. We would also be presenting a draft Resolution on Measures to Prevent Terrorists from Acquiring Weapons of Mass Destruction.

Mr. Chairman,

The First Committee has a vital responsibility to help the international community forge a renewed consensus on non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. Our work is also important in building public awareness and support for the international disarmament agenda, especially the cherished goal of a world without nuclear weapons. I assure you of the full cooperation of the Indian delegation in the discharge of your important responsibility.

✶✶✶✶✶

766. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Prof. Ram Gopal Yadav on Agenda Item 82 – ‘Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the UN and on the strengthening of the Role of the Organization at the 6th Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 6, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

I once again congratulate you on your election as the Chairman of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly and also the other members of the Bureau on their election. Please be assured of full cooperation of my delegation in the work of the Committee. We are confident of good progress in the work of the Sixth Committee under your leadership.

My delegation attaches great significance to the work of the “Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization.” All the specific proposals on the agenda of the Special Committee deserve due consideration. While my delegation will address the specific proposals as and when taken up, we would like to make some general remarks at this time with specific reference to maintenance of international peace and security: impact and application of sanctions; peaceful settlement of disputes and on the overall thrust of some of the proposals under consideration.

Mr. Chairman,

The impact of the application of sanctions in the context of maintenance of international peace and security is a significant issue for all. Maintenance of international peace and security is the primary responsibility of the Security Council, which acts on behalf of all UN member States in the discharge of its duties. The Security Council, which mandates sanctions, has the nodal responsibility for finding solution to the problems of third States affected by the sanctions. Article 50 of the UN Charter confers the right on third States confronted with special economic problems, because of the Security Council sanctions, to consult the Security Council for solution to those problems. Article 50 cannot therefore be considered as merely procedural. It obliges the Security Council to find definitive solution to the problems of the affected third States.

India reiterates its position along with other NAM countries that the Security Council is obliged to directly focus upon the effects on third States of any sanction under Chapter VII of the UN Charter. Further, it is necessary to ensure timely and adequate assistance to the affected third States giving consideration to ‘humanitarian aspects.”

Mr. Chairman,

At the same time, we are happy over the shift of the Security Council from general sanctions against States to targeted sanctions against individuals and entities, especially in the global fight against terrorism. The Security Council has adopted both substantive as well as procedural safeguards to mitigate the adverse effects of sanctions on third states. These measures range from standardizing humanitarian exemptions to developing procedures and establishing a focal point. We consider that the proper implementation of targeted financial sanctions, focused arms embargoes and travel sanctions will minimize the economic, social and humanitarian impact in targeted as well as non-targeted States.

Mr. Chairman,

India believes that sanctions can only be further reinforced and made more acceptable by finding viable and predictable solutions to the problems of third
States that could be affected by sanctions. It requires the establishment of a mechanism for the assessment and evaluation of the impact of sanctions on third States and individuals and proper implementation thereof.

We thank the UN Secretary-General for his report A/66/213 of 29 July 2011 entitled “Implementation of the provisions of the UN Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions”, submitted pursuant to resolution 65/31 of the UN General Assembly. We note with appreciation the information provided in the report that the shift from comprehensive to targeted sanctions has reduced the incidence of unintended harm to third States and that no official appeals have been received to monitor or evaluate special economic problems since 2003. It is worth mentioning that the Secretary-General’s report provides information that in the case of economic sanctions against Libya, the Security Council has made exceptions for authorizing access to frozen funds for a variety of basic and extraordinary expenses to help mitigate economic burdens arising from the implementation of assets freezes.

Mr. Chairman,

The world community cannot over-emphasize the need for developing a universal consensus on the core issues concerning assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions and related issues. We consider that it is important to ensure that sanctions are issued in accordance with the provisions of the UN Charter and do not violate the principles of international law. In this regard, we support the main findings of the ad-hoc expert group meeting contained in the document A/53/312.

India is supportive of proposals aimed to bring transparency in the functioning of the Security Council and support their consideration within the existing framework of the Charter.

The Outcome of the World Summit 2005 has reiterated commitment to multilateralism and the importance of acting strictly in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter in order to deal with threats to international peace and security. It has reiterated the obligation of all member States to refrain, in their international relations, from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the UN Charter.

In this context, India supports in principle, the proposal for an advisory opinion of the ICJ on the use of force by a state or a group of states without the express sanction of the Security Council. Such an advisory opinion will help clarify the legal principles governing the right to use of force under the Charter.

We support, in principle, the new topic being suggested for a study on the functional relationship between the different organs of the United Nations. However, the modality for the study involves the creation of an open-ended working group, through which the States could raise the issues or proposals before the Special Committee. It is unclear that whether the working group or the Special Committee would be the final examining body. The rational of the creation of the WG is also not clear as any proposal can directly be brought before the Special Committee itself without creating an additional stage.

Mr. Chairman,

The Outcome of the World Summit, 2005 has reaffirmed the commitment to strengthen the United Nations, by highlighting the role of the General Assembly as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the UN. The Summit has called for the strengthening of relationship between General Assembly and other principal organs of the UN and has stressed for the early reforms of the Security Council to make it more broadly representative.

India thus attaches significance to the reforms of the United Nations, including the revitalization of the General Assembly and democratization and expansion of the Security Council in both permanent and non-permanent category of membership.

Mr. Chairman,

We the UN member States owe the responsibility to settle disputes by peaceful means, which is a fundamental principle under article 2, paragraph 3 of the UN Charter. Article 33 of the Charter further strengthens this duty and provides the means which the parties to a dispute can choose freely, including arbitration, enquiry, mediation and judicial settlement. The International Court of Justice, being the principal judicial organ of the United Nations plays an important role in the settlement of disputes.

India supports the continuous existence of the topic “Peaceful Settlement of Disputes between States” on the agenda of the Special Committee, although currently there is no specific proposal before the Special Committee under this agenda item.

Mr. Chairman,

India commends all efforts of the Secretary General towards the continued publication and updating of the Repertory of Practice of the UN Organs and the Repertoire of Practice of the Security Council, as these documents are very important sources of reference.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

I congratulate you on your assuming the Chairmanship of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly. I also congratulate the other members of the Bureau on their election. I assure full cooperation of my delegation in the work of the Sixth Committee.

Mr. Chairman,

We extend our sincere thanks to the UN Secretary General for his Report A/66/174 of 25 July 2011, presented pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 65/20 dated 06 December 2010. The Report outlines the information received from member States on the extent to which their national laws establish jurisdiction, particularly over crimes of a serious nature committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission. It also provides information on cooperation among States and with the United Nations in the exchange of information and the facilitation of investigations and prosecution of such offenders.

Mr. Chairman,

We align with the NAM statement on this agenda item. We condemn the instances of serious crimes committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission in spite of clear code of conduct and a policy of zero tolerance by the United Nations. It is imperative that all UN officials and experts on mission perform their duties in a manner consistent with the UN Charter that promotes the image, credibility and integrity of the United Nations. India is committed to punish those who may be found guilty of any misconduct. We concur with the view that the officials and experts on mission should be held accountable whenever they commit criminal acts not only because of the prejudice or harm caused to the victims but also because they undermine the work and image of the United Nations. It is essential to ensure that in no circumstance are any United Nations personnel exempt from the consequences of criminal acts committed by them at their duty station.

New York, October 7, 2011.
The General Assembly resolution 65/20 strongly urges all States to consider establishing jurisdiction over crimes of a serious nature committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission, at least where the conduct of the person amounts to a crime both in the host country and the country of his nationality as well. We sincerely hope that the implementation of this Resolution would help fill the jurisdictional gap in respect of member States that do not assert extra-territorial jurisdiction over crimes committed by their nationals abroad.

Mr. Chairman,

Regarding India’s position, the provisions of the Indian Penal Code do extend to extra-territorial offences committed by Indian nationals. Accordingly, the offences committed by Indian officials or experts on mission while serving abroad are subject to the jurisdiction of Indian courts and are thus punishable under the Indian law.

The Resolution further encourages all States to cooperate with each other in the conduct of investigation and prosecution of those who are alleged to have committed offences.

The Indian law has provisions for mutual assistance in criminal matters, which enables to seek from and extend to a foreign State assistance in criminal matters. These provisions are part of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. It inter-alia includes provisions on assistance concerning service of judicial processes; execution of orders of attachment or forfeiture of property identified as unlawfully acquired; management of property so seized or forfeited; taking of evidence and making a person available for that purpose. India has concluded bilateral treaties with about forty countries on mutual assistance in criminal matters. These treaties are designed to provide and seek assistance in criminal matters that are necessary for the investigation and prosecution of offences.

The Indian Extradition Act, 1962 deals with extradition of fugitive criminals. The Act allows for extradition in respect of extraditable offences in terms of an extradition treaty with another State. The Act also allows consideration of an international Convention as the legal basis for considering an extradition request in the absence of a bilateral extradition treaty.

Also, where there is no bilateral treaty on extradition or mutual legal assistance in criminal matters with a State, the Government of India can provide assistance on a reciprocal and case by case basis in accordance with the provisions of applicable national laws.
Mr. Chairman,

We note with appreciation the information in the Secretary General’s report that the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support continued to pursue efforts to address sexual exploitation and that the training and awareness-raising on United Nations standards of conduct remained central. It is also praiseworthy that an induction training programme on conduct and discipline was developed and a regional workshop was held in November 2010 in Entebbe, Uganda, followed by a repeat session for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti in the Dominican Republic in June 2011 as a means to address conduct and discipline issues among the United Nations personnel in peacekeeping and special political missions.

Mr. Chairman,

India considers it extremely important that any kind of violation of any national or international law by the UN officials and experts on mission by their indiscipline, misbehave, sexual abuse or other wrong doings are fully stopped. In our view, dealing with the wrongdoings of UN officials or experts on mission, does not require the development of an international convention. The member States need to ensure that their laws provide jurisdiction and have adequate provisions for prosecuting any such conduct of their nationals serving as the UN officials or experts abroad and that their laws also have provisions for international assistance for the investigation and prosecution of the crimes involved.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

I congratulate you on your election as Chairman of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly and also I congratulate other members of the Bureau on their election.

Mr. Chairman,

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (the Commission) is the core legal body of the United Nations system in the field of international trade law. The Commission has the mandate to remove legal obstacles in international trade by modernizing and harmonizing trade law. Through its working groups, the Commission is actively engaged in the negotiations and preparation of legal texts in a number of important areas such as international commercial dispute settlement, transport law, electronic commerce, insolvency, sale of goods and, procurement and infrastructure development. In the recent past, one of the major achievements of the Commission has been the adoption, by the General Assembly, of its Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea, in December 2008, which is known as the “Rotterdam Rules.”

Mr. Chairman,

We extend our gratitude to the Commission for its report A/66/17 on its work at the 44th session. During this session, the Commission dealt with a number of important issues related to subjects that are under consideration of its working groups. One of those is the adoption, by the Commission, of the Model Law on Public Procurement. The Model Law prescribes procedures and contains principles aimed at achieving value for money and avoiding abuses in the procurement process. The new Model law will replace the 1994 Model law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services. We are convinced that the new Model Law will be useful for States in updating their existing procurement laws and in formulating the procurement laws for those States which have not enacted the procurement laws so far. We are hopeful that it will lead to the development of harmonious international economic relations and increased economic development.
Mr. Chairman,

Another important subject currently under consideration of the Commission is the preparation of legal standards on Online Dispute Resolution (ODR). The traditional judicial system, through the courts and tribunals is very complex, costly and time consuming, in particular when a dispute involves an international element. The Commission took up the topic of Online Dispute Resolution as a solution that could provide quick resolution and enforcement of disputes across borders, arising from small value, high volume business to business and business to consumer transactions.

Mr. Chairman,

In the area of arbitration, we are hopeful that the Working Group-II will come out with the practically viable legal standards on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration.

The Commission has further undertaken work in the field of electronic transferable records. We share the view that the formulation of uniform legal standards in the field of electronic transferable records would be beneficial both for the generic promotion of electronic communications in international trade, and in the implementation of legal instruments having provisions on electronic records, including the “Rotterdam Rules” and aviation business.

In the field of insolvency, we welcome the consideration of the proposal concerning the responsibilities and liabilities of directors and officers of an enterprise solely in the context of insolvency, avoiding legislating on the criminal liability as such or on the core areas of company law.

Mr. Chairman,

Finally, we reiterate the importance of technical cooperation and assistance to the developing countries, in particular on the adoption and use of texts, adopted by the Commission, at the national level. We encourage the Secretariat to continue to provide such assistance to the broadest extent possible and to improve its outreach to the developing countries, in particular.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
769. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Moinul Hassan Ahamed on Agenda Item 143 – ‘Administration of Justice at the UN’ at the 6th Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 10, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

I, once again congratulate you on your election as the Chairman of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly and also the other members of the Bureau on their election. We are confident of good progress in the work of the Sixth Committee under your leadership.

Mr. Chairman,

The agenda item “Administration of Justice at the United Nations” assigned to the Sixth Committee is of special importance. The establishment of a viable, transparent and principle based justice system within the Organization is not only a highly justifiable requirement for the protection of overall interests of the staff of the Organization, but it would also have positive impact over the overall functioning of the Organization.

Mr. Chairman,

The informal resolution of conflict is a crucial element of the system of administration of justice. We welcome the report of the Secretary-General A/66/224 of 02 August 2011 on “Activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services.”

This Office delivers informal conflict resolution services to the staff of the Secretariat, and various United Nations agencies. We are happy to note that the decentralization of the informal conflict resolution services has provided the Office with better access to its constituencies and enabled it to provide in-person intervention at the field level, which is the most effective means for conflict resolution. It is encouraging that the Mediation Service has provided staff and managers an additional alternative tool to resolve workplace disputes.

The Secretary-General’s report highlights the budgetary constraints and challenges that made it difficult for regional ombudsmen to travel to provide in-person intervention for the resolution of conflicts and to deploy rapid response ombudsmen and mediation teams as needed. To overcome these difficulties, the report contains a request for additional resources for the Office in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012-2013, which in our view deserve positive attention.
Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary-General for his report A/66/275 of 08 August 2011 on “Administration of Justice at the United Nations”, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 65/251 of 24 December 2010. The report provides consolidated data and information on the functioning of the new justice system and related matters. The report describes the accomplishments of the new system during the past year including the data and information on requests for review received by the Management Evaluation Unit; resolution of cases by the Office of Staff Legal Assistance; handling of cases by the Office of Legal Affairs and; judgements rendered by the Tribunals.

Mr. Chairman,

We note with satisfaction the averment in the report of the Internal Justice Council A/66/158 of 19 July 2011 that the new justice system is working well as a result of the dedication of the judges, Registrars, lawyers and staff. The Council has, inter-alia recommended for consideration of the Code of conduct for judges; additional appointments in Tribunals, Office of Staff Legal Assistance and Management Evaluation Unit; reporting system of the Office of Administration of Justice to ensure independence; resource requirements and; review of the statutes of the UN Dispute Tribunal and the UN Appeals Tribunal. In our view the recommendations deserve positive attention of ours.

Mr. Chairman,

We also thank the Secretary-General for his report A/66/86 of 01 June 2011 and Addendum thereto of 19 July 2011. The report has two annexes concerning amendments to the Rules of Procedure of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and to the Rules of Procedure of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. The amendments would further strengthen the procedural requirements of justice delivery and deserve positive attention of ours.

Mr. Chairman,

Finally, we support all efforts towards the strengthening of the new system of administration of justice at the United Nations inter-alia by ensuring the availability of adequate human and financial resources to all associated offices and departments. We are hopeful that strengthening of the system would ensure access to justice to all members of the United Nations workforce, irrespective of the designation or nomenclature and that no one will be left out without recourse.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to begin by expressing my appreciation for the detailed reports brought out by the Secretary General on important macroeconomic policy questions, some of which are being considered on the agenda today. We associate ourselves with the statement delivered by Argentina on behalf of G-77.

The world economy is in trouble. The shoots of recovery which were visible after the economic and financial crisis of 2008 have yet to blossom. In many respects the crisis has deepened even further. The traditional engines of the global economy such as the United States, Europe and Japan, which are also the sources of global economic and financial stability, are faced with continued economic slowdown. Recessionary trends in these countries are affecting confidence in world financial and capital markets.

These developments are bound to have a negative impact on developing countries which also have to bear the additional burden of inflationary pressures. Declining global demand and availability of capital, increasing barriers to free trade and mounting debt pose a threat to the international monetary and financial system. Questions are being asked about the efficacy of the Bretton Woods institutions.

Mr. Chairman,

The hardest-hit by the crisis are people living in the developing world, especially in the Least Developed Countries. Developing countries have seen more than 100 million people slipping back into poverty last year, and their socio-economic situation continues to worsen.

It is ironical that those least responsible for the crisis must become the biggest victims of it. Quite clearly then, Mr. Chairman, the international financial and economic system is in need of urgent reform. Inequity in the system must make way for democracy, transparency, and accountability.

Mr. Chairman,

Our foremost priority, however, must be to pursue sustained economic growth to bring the global economy firmly back on track. The development agenda must be brought firmly back to the centre stage of the United Nations’ priorities. We need a much more determined effort to ensure balanced, inclusive and sustainable development for the benefit of vast sections of humanity. Many developing countries are not in a position to implement counter-cyclical measures. There is an urgent need for international assistance - be it ODA, concessional finance, debt relief and moratorium or FDI- to help such economies gather momentum.

Mr. Chairman,

A critical lesson from the crisis is that the unregulated capital flows are highly destabilizing in nature. The withdrawal of huge amounts of money has left developing countries without adequate coping mechanisms and in fact even more financially unstable than before.

On the other hand, the spurt in short-term capital flows to some developing countries has led to significant inflationary pressures on the host economies. While excessive capital flows in itself poses a risk, their volatility adds further complications. We call upon the Financial Stability board, the IMF and the Bank of International Settlements to further work on developing effective tools to mitigate the impact of excessive capital flows.

Mr. Chairman,

We should not allow the global economic slowdown to become a trigger for building walls around ourselves through protectionism or erecting barriers to movement of people, services and capital. Effective ways and means must be deployed to promote coordination of macro-economic policies of major economies. The reform of governance systems of international financial institutions ought to be pursued with speed and efficiency. Regulatory, surveillance and monitoring frameworks must be tailored to meet the highest standards of accountability and financial controls.

India supports the Basel-III framework for bank capital and liquidity regulation and calls for its early implementation. We also are fully supportive of the move to ensure that systemically important financial institutions have loss absorbing capacity beyond the general standards set by Basel-III rules.

Mr. Chairman,

India fully recognizes that the global economic and financial architecture, so overwhelmingly loaded against the developing world needs urgent reform. We call for early implementation of the two phase package of reforms of the World Bank to enhance voice and participation of developing countries. The decision to shift 6% quota shares in the IMF to developing countries must also be attended to in the right earnest.
Mr. Chairman,

The financial crisis has led to acute debt problems in the developing world. The LDCs are the worst affected. Despite significant debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries programme and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative, the total debt service burden of LDCs in the year 2008 reached US$ 7.5 billion. Many of the countries which are part of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative have been classified as being prone to debt distress once again.

The sovereign debt crisis in Europe and its possible contagion effect is a matter of deep concern. We ought to put in place mechanisms to deal with such crisis and its overall consequences.

The external debt burden constrains the national policy space and policy independence of developing countries and their ability to play the role of a developmental State.

Debt sustainability analysis frameworks remain limited and subjective. We must work towards a debt structure which is linked to a country’s ability to pay.

Mr. Chairman,

The international community must remain vigilant in monitoring the debt situation of the affected countries. We should work to design policies that promote safer debt instruments, reduce destabilizing capital flows and limit solvency crisis by promoting responsible sovereign borrowing.

The roadmap of our global economic and financial reform agenda is clear and unambiguous. Let us pursue it.

Thank you.

New York, October 11, 2011.

Mr. President,

It gives me great pleasure to address today’s Joint Debate on the New Partnership for Africa’s Development and the promotion of peace and development in Africa, including in its efforts to fight malaria.

In the immortal words of India’s first Prime Minister, Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru, Africa is our “sister continent”. India’s links with Africa are civilizational. They are anchored in centuries of trade across the Indian Ocean; in the shared struggle against the yoke of colonialism; in our endeavour of post-colonial nation-building, and in our common quest to unshackle our people from the bondage of poverty, disease, hunger, illiteracy, and apartheid.

We also owe a debt of gratitude to this great continent for being the political birthplace of the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, who first tested his central precepts of non-violence and peaceful resistance in South Africa.

Mr. President,

Ten years after the adoption of NEPAD, it is befitting to recognize the noteworthy progress made so far in pursuing sectoral priorities in agriculture, infrastructure, health, education, science, information technology, and environment. Nevertheless, this decadal milestone also offers an opportunity for sober reflection on the unfinished tasks ahead in fulfilling the vision of socio-economic growth and sustainable development that was envisaged when this framework was first conceived.

Particularly relevant to this discussion is the pivotal contribution of international cooperation in Africa’s development, especially in its efforts to make progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and in surmounting the difficult challenges confronting post-conflict and transitional societies in Africa.

As rightly emphasized by the Secretary-General in his Report, the international community needs to step up its efforts and bridge the gap between promise and delivery. The shortfall of 18 billion US dollars in meeting ODA commitments to Africa is a cause of concern. In these times of political uncertainty and fragile transitions in many African countries, it is more incumbent than ever for the continent’s development partners to stay the course and help African countries achieve their developmental goals.

Mr. President,

On India’s part, we have together with our African partners transformed our age old and special engagement into an enduring and multi-dimensional relationship. After careful nurturing over successive years, today our partnership with Africa is aligned with the priorities integral to the developmental goals of Africa and is built on the foundations of mutual equality and common benefit. Sectoral areas of cooperation that have been accorded high priority include infrastructure development, capacity-building, agriculture, health, food security and technology cooperation.

Earlier this year, we reaffirmed our abiding commitment to working with our African partners at the second India-Africa Forum Summit in Addis Ababa in May 2011. At the Summit, India announced fresh lines of credit worth five billion US dollars over the next three years for Africa and an additional 700 million US dollars grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology, and building new institutions and training programmes, in consultation with the African Union, the Regional Economic Communities and our African partners. In keeping with NEPAD’s emphasis on infrastructure development, we have also decided to support the development of a new Ethio-Djibouti Railway line at 300 million US dollars. We are also discussing with the African Union the augmentation of capacities for the development of regional structure in railways.

Building on the success of the Pan African E-network project that shares with all African countries our expertise in the fields of healthcare and education through satellite, fiber optics and wireless links, we are looking at setting up an India-Africa Virtual University. The proposed University will set aside 10,000 new scholarships for African students.

We are further going to significantly raise the number of African beneficiaries of our scholarships and training slots, including under our flagship technical and economic assistance initiative- the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation Programme (ITEC). We have committed ourselves to offering more than 22,000 scholarships to African students over the next three years.

With a view to encouraging trade and investment flows, there is also a proposal to establish an India-Africa Business Council. India is already unilaterally making available duty free and quota free market access for goods from 34 Least Developed Countries in Africa. This covers 94% of India’s total tariff lines and provides preferential market access on tariff lines that comprise 92.5% of global exports of all LDCs.

India’s private sector has played an increasingly important part in recent years in supporting trade and investment flows. Indian companies have made large investments in Africa in industry, agriculture, services, human resource development and infrastructure. The Indian conglomerate Tata has emerged as the second largest investor in Sub-Saharan Africa. New initiatives to establish an India-Africa Food Processing Cluster, an India-Africa Integrated Textiles Cluster, an India-Africa Civil Aviation Academy, an India-Africa Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting, and an India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural Development are on the anvil.

Mr. President,

India has also contributed actively in efforts to maintain peace and security on the African continent through our six decade long involvement in UN peacekeeping efforts. Our most substantial presence remains in Africa, including in the latest peacekeeping mission in South Sudan.

Further, India will contribute 2 million US dollars for the African Union Mission in Somalia in line with our consistent support to the development of African capacities in the maintenance of peace and security. We have consistently held the position that the international community must further encourage regional and sub-regional organizations in Africa to play a more important role both in peacekeeping and peace-building issues within Africa.

Mr. President,

Before concluding, I would like to speak to the global anti-malaria campaign, particularly in Africa, dealt with in the WHO Report transmitted by the Secretary-General. The Report emphasizes the need to intensify efforts to reach the recently revised and more ambitious targets by 2015.

The analysis presented in the Report draws on empirical evidence to suggest a strong link between injection of significant funding and rise in the number of lives saved as a result of anti-malarial efforts. The fact that funding has stagnated in the past two years is therefore particularly worrisome. We would urge all donors to step up efforts at this critical juncture.

India’s own cooperation agenda with Africa includes capacity building programmes for medical and health specialists to tackle pandemics like malaria, filarial polio, HIV and TB. India’s private sector has been investing in establishing pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities in African countries. We are willing to do more.

Mr. President,

In conclusion, India’s vision of the 21st century sees a great and dynamic role for Africa as an emerging growth pole of the world. We will offer our fullest cooperation to translate this vision into reality. We will take our partnership from pillar to pillar founded on mutual solidarity and kinship to harness the great potential of the more than 2.1 billion Indians and Africans.

I thank you, Mr. President.

772. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Dr. Ratna De on Agenda Item 65[A]: Promotion and Protection of the Rights of the Children at the 3rd Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 13, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

At the outset, please allow me to thank the Secretary General, his Special Representatives and Special Rapporteur for their reports under agenda item 65. I would also like to thank the previous speakers for their useful and informative presentations under this agenda item.

Mr. Chairman,

The Government of India accords the highest priority to ensuring that the rights of children in India are protected. Nineteen percent of the world’s children are Indian. The age group 0-18 years constitutes 44% of our population. We have put in place a comprehensive legal and institutional framework to protect and promote their rights and their well being.

A National Charter for Children has been adopted. Free and compulsory education up to the age of 14 years has been declared a fundamental right. As part of the public-private partnership, even private schools have to reserve 25% of seats to children from economically weaker sections of the society with budgetary support from the government. A National Plan of Action for Children has also been adopted. One flagship programme, namely the Integrated Child Development Services Scheme, focused on early childhood care and education caters annually to around 75 million children under 6 years of age. The Government of India is committed to creating, through these and other initiatives, a protective environment for children.

In this connection, I would also like to point out that civil society in India is an integral and active part of this framework. We consider civil society to be a valued partner in our national and international efforts on children’s issues.

Mr. Chairman,

Violence against children must be strictly condemned and vigilantly and actively monitored. Ending exploitation and violence against children is fundamental to ensuring a healthy future for every child. In this regard, India has set up a National Commission for the Protection of Child’s Rights in 2007 to provide speedy trial of offenders committing crimes against children and violating the rights of children.

We are encouraged to note that the Special Representative for Violence against Children will devote special attention in the forthcoming period, inter alia, to further consolidating regional mechanisms on violence against children and continuing the series of expert consultations on violence-related topics.

Mr. Chairman,

The eradication of child labour in all occupations and industries is one of the most important priorities of the Government of India. We are strictly enforcing a ban on employment of children under 14 years of age. Cognizant of the fact that this problem cannot be divorced from its social conditions, we are addressing this issue in a holistic manner by implementing measures to improve access to education, health and nutrition for children. The National Human Rights Commission and civil society, including non-Governmental organisations, have been supplementing the Government’s efforts in the eradication of child labour in the country.

Mr. Chairman,

In 2009, the government of India launched a new scheme called the Integrated Child Protection Scheme (ICPS) to create a safe environment for children in need of care and protection, children in conflict and contact with law and any other vulnerable child. This scheme brought under one umbrella several existing schemes of child protection, namely, a) A Programme for Juvenile Justice; b) An Integrated Programme for Street Children; and c) Scheme for Assistance to Homes to Promote In-country Adoption.
The primary focus of this new scheme is to provide quality and better accessible child protection services; to raise public awareness about child rights; to clearly articulate responsibilities and enforced accountability for child protection; and to establish functioning structures at all government levels for delivery of statutory and support services to children in difficult times.

Mr. Chairman,

Today, a special mention of the girl child deserves our attention. The girl child is one of the most vulnerable members of any society. A number of initiatives to enhance the status of the girl child have been initiated in India, such as effective policies to ban sex selective abortion and child marriage. Since 2009, every year, January 24 is marked as “National Girl Child Day” in India to highlight the different problems faced by the girl child and the need to spread gender sensitization amongst various sections of the society.

Mr. Chairman,

India is fully committed to the rights proclaimed in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights. India is a signatory to the six core human rights covenants, and also the two Optional Protocols to the Convention of the Rights of the Child.

India’s commitment to children and their welfare and development is manifest in our commitment and ongoing efforts to meet the goals of the outcome document “A World fit for Children” and the related Millennium Development Goals. We have made much progress. Yet, a lot more needs to be accomplished.

Children are our future. India will continue to take measures to ensure that children are able to grow and develop in safe environments that will lead to healthy and productive adult lives. India will continue to strive to achieve the full realization of the potential and value in every child-boy and girl.

Mr. Chairman,

The child is an instrumental stakeholder in the social contract. Let us reaffirm our commitment to promotion and protection of the rights of our children.

Thank You.
Mr. Chairman,

Allow me to begin by thanking the Secretary General for his incisive reports on financing for development. India aligns itself with the statement delivered by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

Development finance lies at the heart of the global development agenda. The global community must fulfil the commitments it made in Monterrey and Doha, if we have to see credible action on the attainment of the MDGs and Other Internationally Agreed Development Goals.

The global economic downturn has made development financing even more critical. The crisis has had regressive impact on the capacity of countries to meet their development aspirations. Soaring energy and food prices coupled with limited growth continue to impose severe challenges on developing countries. In such a situation, these countries, in spite of their best efforts, are hardly in a position to mobilise higher domestic resources for development.

We must, therefore, ensure that economic growth is pursued as a priority for poverty eradication and development. Growth-promoting policies are central to raising public revenues.

Mr. Chairman,

Developing countries fully realise the benefits of relying on domestic resources for development as it enables them national ownership and to implement policies in line with their priorities. However, they have limited ability to exercise this option. Their dependence on external aid and support is not out of choice but compulsion.

We deeply appreciate the policy initiative undertaken by countries to pursue “financial inclusion” as an instrument of domestic mobilisation of resources and for promoting inclusive growth. In India, we have set ourselves a target of making all Indians bankable by 2012. A dedicated programme called ‘swabhimaan’ has been launched for the purpose.
Mr. Chairman,

Foreign Direct Investment and trade are important for financing development. However, on their own, they are not sufficient to tackle poverty, hunger and disease, especially in the current global economic order which is most unfavourable to developing countries. Lack of market access, aid-for-trade and a multilateral rule-based trading system severely restricts the growth opportunities of developing countries.

The debt situation in a large number of developing countries has been untenable for quite some time, with their ratio of external debt to GDP being as high as 21.6% in 2010. This fundamental economic weakness has further retarded their development process.

Mr. Chairman,

It is clear that developing countries, especially the LDCs, LLDCs, SIDS and countries in Africa cannot meet the developmental challenges without external assistance. Official Development Assistance remains an important source of financing for them for which there is no substitute.

The gap in financing for development continues to widen. In 2010, only five donor countries had met their ODA commitment of 0.7%. The aid flow to developing countries last year stood at US$ 129 billion, representing only 0.32% of the total GNI of the donor countries and well short of the 0.7% mark. It is deeply worrisome that the global crisis is being made an excuse for not meeting existing commitments.

A large share of ODA continues to be allocated to social sector. In 2009, aid to productive sectors represented only 8% of the total ODA disbursed. This situation must change if we are serious about meeting the MDGs. There is need to improve aid predictability and transparency as well.

The commitment that the international community made in Monterrey and Doha of ensuring predictable development assistance including ODA, concessional financing and debt relief to developing countries and supporting nationally owned development strategies need to be fulfilled urgently.

South-South financial and technical assistance may be expanding lately but it cannot be a substitute for the North-South commitment. Nor can developing countries, which are burdened with huge socio-economic challenges of their own, be expected to meet the obligations of the developed world.

Mr. Chairman,

Given the resource gap in financing for development, it is imperative that innovative sources of financing are explored. We, however, see innovative sources as additional to and not a substitute for ODA.

There is also a need to have a common understanding on what constitutes innovative sources of financing. In the absence of a clear cut understanding, in many cases innovative financing is passed off as ODA. It is also important that these finances are disbursed in accordance with the priorities of countries and do not lay unfair burden on them.

We also note that while innovative financing may have worked in the health sector and in climate finance, it is yet to establish itself as an institutional support in other areas of development.

Mr. Chairman,

A comprehensive reform of the international financial architecture to address systemic issues is at the heart of general implementation of the financing for development process. India has been working closely with countries to ensure greater voice and participatory space for developing countries in the international financial institutions.

Mr. Chairman,

The financing for development process, as embodied in the Monterrey Consensus and the Doha Review Conference, is crucial for attainment of our development aspirations. We must adhere to its principles in letter and spirit.

Thank you.
Madam Chair

The Indian Delegation is pleased to note the successful deliberations of the 54th session of UN-COPUOS, under the able chairmanship of Mr. Dumitru-Dorin Prunariu of Romania, and the substantial progress made during the session. The delegation notes with appreciation that UNCOUPOS, under the mandate of the General Assembly, continues to contribute significantly towards capacity building for sustainable development, and strengthening international co-operation to utilise outer space for peaceful purposes towards serving the humanity. The Indian Delegation also expresses its full satisfaction at the work carried out by the two sub-committees of UNCOUPOS, the Scientific and Technical Sub-committee at its 48th session and the Legal Sub-committee at its 50th session.

Madam Chair

While acknowledging the significant achievements of various member states in space endeavors during the last one year, the Indian delegation desires to brief the Assembly on the significant achievements made by India in the field of space since the last Session.

On April 20, 2011, the Polar Satellite Launch Vehicle (PSLV C-16) precisely placed RESOURCESAT-2 and two auxiliary satellites namely YOUTHSAT and X-SAT into their intended orbits. RESOURCESAT-2 is augmenting the multispectral imaging capability of India as a follow-on mission to RESOURCESAT-1. YOUTHSAT is a small satellite built with participation of the Moscow State University; and X-SAT is a small satellite built by Nanyang Technological University (NTU) with ISRO’s support.

On May 21, 2011, India’s advanced communication satellite, GSAT-8, was successfully launched by Arianespace from Kourou, French Guiana. GSAT-8 carries 24 Ku-band transponders and a navigation payload “GAGAN”.

An advanced communication satellite HYLAS (Highly Adaptable Satellite), built by ISRO on commercial basis in partnership with EADS-Astrium, was successfully launched on November 27, 2010.

On July 15, 2011, PSLV-C17, in its eighteenth successive successful flight, India has achieved significant progress in the last one year, in realizing GSLV Mk III, a heavier class launch vehicle, capable of launching 4-ton class communication satellites into a Geostationary Transfer Orbit.

Madam Chair

The Indian delegation is proud to inform this Assembly that the Indo-French joint satellite mission for monitoring tropical atmosphere, named ‘Megha–Tropiques’, has been launched from Sriharikota yesterday through PSLV-C18. This has been a good example of international cooperation and the data from this satellite is to be used by the global scientific community including NASA, NOAA and EUMETSAT. Megha Tropiques will be one of the eight satellites of the Global Precipitation Measurement (GPM) constellation, contributing to the global scientific community’s research to study the dynamics of climate system.

In the coming months, India plans to augment her constellation of remote sensing and communication satellites.

Madam Chair

The Indian space programme continues to integrate the advances in space technology and applications with national developmental goals. Many national and regional programmes of societal relevance are continuing, apart from newer initiatives to reach the space-based products and services to the society.

India places considerable importance on International Cooperation for peaceful use of outer space. Currently, formal instruments of cooperation are in place with more than 35 countries and international organizations.

Madam Chair

In the field of capacity building, India continues to share its expertise and services in the application of Space Technology. The Center for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific, affiliated to the UN and operating from India, has so far benefitted 994 scholars from 31 countries from the Asia-Pacific region and 28 scholars from 17 countries outside the Asia-Pacific region.

Madam Chair

In conclusion, the Indian delegation greatly acknowledges the potential of space technology and the need to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes. India fully supports UNCOPUOS in all its endeavours to increase awareness in this regard.

Thank you Madam Chair.
Mr. Chairman,

As I am speaking first time in this Committee, I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your assuming the chairmanship of the Sixth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly. I also congratulate the other members of Bureau on their election.

Mr. Chairman,

This agenda item, which is aimed to promote the international law, is of high importance given the fact that one of the principal goals of the international community remains establishing the sound international legal norms to govern the international relations. We are convinced that better knowledge of international law certainly serves as a means of strengthening peace and security and promotes friendly relations between States. We are happy that this topic is on the agenda of the Sixth Committee for consideration on annual basis.

Mr. Chairman,

We welcome the report of the Secretary-General A/66/505 of 07 October 2011, presented on this agenda item pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 65/25 of 06 December 2010. The report provides information concerning the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law during the current year, in accordance with the guidelines and recommendations contained in Secretary-General’s report presented at the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly.

The report provides information about the international law seminars and training courses conducted through the fellowship programme, especially to the lawyers from developing countries. It gives information about the Hague Academy lectures and the seminars organized by the Codification Division on a wide range of international law topics.

Mr. Chairman,

We agree, as stated in paragraph 15 of the report that the regional courses on international law provide unique opportunity to participants to focus on contemporary issues of international law of common concern in the region. It makes the participants to understand the international legal system and functioning thereof that further develops the sense of co-existence and brotherhood.

We note with appreciation that a regional seminar on international law topics was organized in Addis Ababa in February 2011 for lawyers from the African countries. In addition to imparting the knowledge of international law to the lawyers of African region, this event gave an opportunity to the officials of the African Union to elaborate upon their approach towards the human rights and the peace and security, when the participants paid a visit to the Union. We welcome the offer of the government of Ethiopia indicating willingness to further host regional courses on international law including the one proposed in Addis Ababa in March 2012.

We also appreciate offers of Thailand and Mexico for hosting international law courses in the Asian and the Caribbean regions respectively. It is also encouraging to note that The Hague Academy of International Law has the interest in cooperating with the Codification Division with respect to the fellowship programme to include the regional courses on international law.

Mr. Chairman,

We have great appreciation for States who have voluntarily contributed to the Programme of Assistance and attach great value to even a small contribution toward this important task.

The Secretary-General’s report has indicated about the resource constraints in pursuing the activities concerning the Programme of Assistance in the biennium 2012-2013. In that regard, we support the idea of exploring the possibilities of meeting the financial requirements of these activities from the regular budget, to ensure the continuation thereof. In our view, it serves the interest of the international community as a whole to encourage the continuation and further strengthening of international law programmes and training courses around the world.

Mr. Chairman,

Finally, we express our appreciation for the Office of Legal Affairs, the Codification Division and other agencies and offices for their continued efforts towards the arrangements for the implementation of the Programme of Assistance.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
776. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Prakash Javadekar on agenda items: Culture of peace at the 66th Session of the United Nations General Assembly.

New York, October 17, 2011.

Mr. President,

I am deeply honored and privileged to participate in today’s joint debate under the agenda items of Culture of Peace and express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the Secretary General for his comprehensive reports on intercultural, inter-religious and inter-civilizational dialogue.

We note with deep satisfaction that celebration of the International Year of Rapprochement of Cultures (2010) and the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010) provided a unique opportunity for the UN system to reaffirm its fundamental commitment to the plurality of humanity, in which cultural diversity and intercultural dialogue are mutually reinforcing. This is exactly what Indian ethos stands for.

Mr. President,

In today’s world we are witnessing the rise of extremism and intolerance, outbreak of sectarian violence and increasing use of language of hatred and violence. These pose a serious challenge to the very foundations of our society. Here we must salute Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King who proved power of non-violence.

Mr. President,

We need to create an environment conducive to fostering a dialogue between diverse cultures, races, faiths and religions that inculcates the values that promote transition from force to reason, from conflict and violence to dialogue and peace.

Dialogue amongst different cultures and religions is also important because it is precisely in the absence of such a dialogue and understanding, that intolerance, bigotry and violence flourish.

Mr. President,

It is heartening to note that the Alliance of Civilizations (AoC) which includes a Group of Friends with 128 members has now become one of the premier platforms for intercultural and interreligious dialogue within and between diverse societies.
We welcome the Doha Pre-Forum and support the initiative to establish and further explore the linkage between AOC’s mission and aims and Millennium Development Goals during the Doha AOC Forum.

Mr. President,

We support the Department of Public Information in its endeavor to strengthen its voice on intercultural dialogue by organizing and covering a wide range of events.

It may be mentioned that the Indian Mission associated itself with DPI and the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) in organizing an Authors Colloquium on “Unlearning Intolerance” at UN headquarters on May 5. The Indian Mission also organized a function to mark the International Day of non-Violence at the UN on September 30 this year, in which the Secretary General was the Chief Guest. India’s leading historian Dr Ramachandra Guha delivered the keynote address.

Mr. President,

India, the largest democracy in the world, a nation of unparalleled diversity with a population of over one billion, is the second most populous nation in the world.

While India, of course, has the largest Hindu population, we also have one of the largest Muslim populations in the world.

And India provides a home to very significant number of practitioners of practically every other major religion of the world, be it Christianity, Buddhism, Sikhism, Jainism, Zoroastrianism or the Bahais. India is the birthplace of Jainism. Gautam Buddha gave his first sermon in Sarnath, an eminent centre of Indian philosophy, after he attained enlightenment in Bodh Gaya. All this happened as our kings offered land and facilities to all religions.

The history of India, in essence, is a narrative of conversations between different civilizations and, indeed, conversation with nature itself. India is home to scores of languages, hundreds of dialects, thousands of cuisines, a medley of races, colours, landscapes and cultures. This assimilation and accommodation of diversity has contributed to the richness of our composite culture and durability of our civilization. This is “Unity in Diversity”.

Our civilizational legacy treats nature as a source of nurture and there is high value placed on living in harmony with nature. The Vedas are a repository for holistic development of the human-being in full harmony with its surroundings. The continuous strand of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam i.e. “the entire world is one family” has guided our constant interaction and exchange of thoughts with the outside world. The noble principles of life and spiritualism, including non-violence, have influenced successive generations of people worldwide.

Mr. President,

We, in India, understand the importance of building alliances between religions, cultures and ethnic groups and we have always supported all efforts to build bridges of understanding between nations, peoples, religions, cultures across the world.

It is our considered view that successful pluralism must be grounded on the basic tenets of mutual understanding and respect for diverse traditions. Indian ethos believes in tenet of Ek Sat Wipra Bahudha Vandani meaning that there are many ways to reach God. Indian ethos also treats believers and non-believers equally. This is also critical for harmonious development of all sections of the society, including gender equity and empowerment of women all over the world.

Mr. President,

The only way to achieve this goal is to move conceptually to a new dimension of dialogue and harmony among diverse cultures, races, faiths and religions so that all human beings can live in a sane and peaceful global society of our collective dreams.

Thank You.

Mr. President, Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am privileged to participate in today’s discussion on “Sports for Peace and Development” and would like to thank this august house for providing me this opportunity.

Mr. President,

Sport is an important element in building character. It helps motivate young people, teaches them to work in a spirit of partnership with others, develops leadership skills and promotes a sense of team spirit, apart from ensuring fitness and a healthy life style.

Sport also helps foster peace and a feeling of equality and friendship among all people and nations. There can be no more powerful medium to inspire and bring people together for a common purpose.

Mr. President,

The intrinsic linkage between sports and games, and the human quest for excellence, was recognized at the very inception of human civilization. It reached its high point during the ancient Greek civilization, which was the beginning of the modern Olympic movement.

Sports, games and physical fitness have also been an integral part of the Indian heritage, evident even today in the highly evolved system of yoga, as well as the vast range of indigenous games and martial arts practiced in different parts of India since time immemorial.

After Indian independence in 1947, the first five-year plan gave due importance to physical education and sports, and emphasized its integration in the formal education system. As part of our efforts to broad-base sports and encourage creation of modern sports infrastructure, a National Sports Policy was also adopted by India in 2001.

Today in India, all sections of our society, including the media and business sector, are actively involved in the promotion of sports. We have also been encouraging the autonomous functioning of our national sports federations.
Mr. President,

Sport is also an effective tool to help achieve development objectives in the areas of health, education, child protection, and child development. Besides, it helps generate public awareness and inspires broad, inclusive and committed action in support of the developmental agenda. I am glad to note that there is today a good recognition of the value of sports to help achieve the Millennium Development Goals, and that many sports personalities have associated with the UN in creating public awareness and help in the understanding of various issues that affect the youth and society. In this context, I would like to draw attention to our national icon for cricket Sachin Tendulkar, who is a Goodwill Ambassador of the United Nations Environment Programme and our former tennis star, Vijay Amritraj, who was a UN Ambassador of Peace in 2001.

Mr. President,

India has in the recent past successfully held the 19th Commonwealth Games, an event that featured participation by 71 countries and over 7000 athletes, who celebrated sporting excellence, human skill and endurance, and above all courage and character. These games upheld and renewed the essential spirit of peace, equality and friendship among all people and nations.

Recognizing the importance of sports in building a peaceful and better world, India has co-sponsored the resolution “building a peaceful and better world through sport and the Olympic ideal”, which will be adopted today. We sincerely believe that all sporting events strengthen the cherished ties of goodwill and understanding that unite us as one family.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

India has been a consistent proponent of general and complete disarmament and remains committed to the goal of total elimination of all Weapons of Mass Destruction. We attach the highest importance to the two non-discriminatory and multilaterally negotiated treaties, the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention (BWC) and the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC), which ban two entire categories of weapons of mass destruction globally in a non-discriminatory fashion.

Mr. Chairman,

The Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention is the first disarmament instrument that bans the development, production, stockpiling and use of an entire category of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs). India ratified the Convention in 1974. We believe that the prohibitions against biological weapons enshrined in the Convention must be upheld. We fully support initiatives to strengthen the Convention, ensure its full implementation by all States Parties and to make it universal. We believe that only a multilaterally agreed mechanism for verification of compliance can provide the assurance that all States Parties to the Convention are in compliance with their obligations under the BWC.

India has been participating constructively in the inter-sessional meetings of the BWC following the sixth Review Conference in 2006. This is an important year for the Convention and we thank Ambassador Paul van den Ijssel for his briefing on preparations for the 7th Review Conference. We assure him of our full cooperation for a successful Seventh Review Conference in December. We hope to reach positive results by consensus at the Review Conference taking into account scientific and technological developments in the field of biological sciences.

The Chemical Weapons Convention is a unique disarmament treaty providing for the elimination of an entire category of WMDs through a multilaterally negotiated, non-discriminatory and internationally verifiable instrument. We believe that the primary objective of the Convention is the elimination of chemical weapons. We completed destruction of our chemical weapons stockpile in March 2009 within the deadline prescribed for India. It is important that all state parties uphold and fulfill their commitments under the treaty.
While recognizing the disarmament and non-proliferation aspects of both the BWC and the CWC, we must not lose sight of the promotional aspects of both these Conventions. The economic and technological development of developing countries through international cooperation is fundamental to the achievement of the object and purpose of these Conventions. It is important that developed countries ensure full, effective and balanced implementation of all provisions of these Conventions regarding international cooperation in transfer of technology, material and equipment for peaceful purposes.

Mr. Chairman,

The risk of WMDs falling into the hands of terrorists presents a grave security challenge to the international community. India is committed to supporting international efforts to prevent non-State actors and terrorists from acquiring WMDs and their means of delivery. We have a well-established and effective export control system which has worked well for over six decades. Our commitment to prevent terrorists and non-state actors from acquiring WMDs and related materials and technologies is enshrined in domestic law inter alia through the enactment of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 2005.

Our First Committee resolution entitled “Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction”, first adopted in 2002 has continued to command consensus and growing support both in the First Committee and the General Assembly. The resolution gives expression to the concerns of the international community and is a clear reaffirmation of the Member States to take measures aimed at preventing terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction. It underlines that the international response to the threat needs to be national as well as multilateral and global. As in previous years we are introducing our draft resolution this year and we hope that it will continue to elicit strong support of all countries.

Thank you.
779. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Ms. Viplove Thakur on Agenda Decade for the Eradication of Poverty [2008 – 2017] at the Second Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 17, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by congratulating you on your leadership of the Second Committee.

India aligns itself with the statement delivered by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

The subject matter of the debate today – Poverty eradication and other Development issues - is critical to the attainment of our cherished Millennium Development Goals.

Though we may take satisfaction in the number of global poor living on US$ 1.25 a day to have come down from 1.8 billion in 1990 to 1.4 billion in 2005 and that global poverty level is projected to fall below 900 million by the MDG target year of 2015, we all recognise that the work at hand is still a daunting
one. Poverty eradication, therefore, must continue to be the foremost priority of the global development agenda.

The ongoing impacts of the global economic and financial crisis, and the faltering recovery, pose persistent impediments to combating poverty. High and volatile food and energy prices continue to erode the policy space developing countries have to advance their development process. In 2009 and 2010, more than 160 million people slipped back into poverty, reversing years of development gains.
What is of deeper concern is that many more people are at the risk of falling into the poverty trap.

Ensuring economic growth is, therefore, fundamental not only to strengthen the economic recovery but equally for eradicating poverty.

Sustained economic growth in developing countries has been the principal instrument of poverty alleviation. In India, we have been singularly successful on this, notwithstanding the turbulence of the 2008 crisis and its aftermath. In spite of the global economic slowdown, we are projected to grow at 7.5% this year. As per estimate, India would have taken out 188 million people out of the poverty net by 2015 compared to the 1990 level, but would still be home to the largest number of global poor.
We do, however, recognise that growth in itself is not sufficient to distribute opportunities and resources and have, therefore, adopted policies to ensure inclusive growth. This is the overarching objective of our Eleventh Five Year Plan (2007-2012) and without doubt would continue to be so for the future plans as well.

Mr. Chairman,

Recognising that poverty is multi-dimensional in nature, our Government has launched large scale socio-economic programmes and interventions to reduce poverty, fight malnutrition and hunger, reduce infant mortality and promote health and gender empowerment.

With a view to tackle poverty, enhance our food security and upgrade rural infrastructure, India has launched the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Scheme, the largest cash for work programme in the world. The programme guarantees 100 days of work annually to those willing. This pro-job strategy of poverty eradication is of particular relevance at a time when the world is confronted with job-less growth.

The National Rural Health Mission to ensure better healthcare; School Lunch Programme to fight malnutrition; Sarva Shiksha Abhiyaan for universal education, Swabhimaan programme for financial inclusion for all, are some of the other targeted initiatives undertaken by India to combine equity with growth.

We have also kept women at the centre of all our development policies and programmes. We have been particularly successful in promoting participation of women in our local self governments. We have reserved 50% seats for women in our local bodies.

India deeply appreciates the work being done by UN-WOMEN to promote gender empowerment.

Mr. Chairman,

Strategies for poverty reduction in developing countries must necessarily focus on agriculture and rural development as majority of the people in these countries are dependent on agriculture and allied activities.

Countries must also adopt policies tailor made to their needs to spur job enhancing growth, undertake social protection measures to assist the poor and induce larger domestic mobilisation of resources through financial inclusion and other policies.

Fundamental to job-creation, especially in developing countries, is to pursue skill development and training. In India, we have launched the National Skill Development Mission, a public-partnership initiative to build and upgrade employable skills with focus on the informal sector. The World Bank in 2008 initiated the Rural Migrant Skills Development and Employment Project to support transition of rural workers to urban areas. Such innovative programmes could be productive templates to follow.

Mr. Chairman,

Developing countries, constricted by the global economic slowdown, of which they have become the principal victims, need enhanced resources and policy space to pursue their development aspirations. With the MDG target year just four years away we need accelerated action by all stakeholders. The 0.7% ODA commitment of developed countries, with some honourable exceptions, still remains to be met. It is disconcerting that the global economic crisis is being made an excuse to get away from even the minimal commitment made.

Developing countries, in particular the Least Developed Countries, the Landlocked Developing Countries, the Small Island Developing States and countries in Africa are in urgent need of an enabling international environment that is conducive for meeting their foremost challenge- poverty eradication. In this context, it is imperative that we move forward on the Doha Development Round, on Climate Change Negotiations to seek an ambitious and comprehensive outcome and on a comprehensive reform of the Bretton Woods Institutions for equitable participation of developing countries.

South-South Cooperation in recent years has complemented global resources targeted at development agenda, but it cannot be a substitute for North South Cooperation.

India has been privileged to share its development experience with fellow developing countries. We remain committed to doing more in the coming years with our partners in the South and stepping up our support to South-South Cooperation.

Let our actions to fight poverty be worthy of our commitment.

I thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary General for his reports under the agenda item Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and also the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the various treaty bodies for their reports.

Mr. Chairman,

The mission of the promotion and protection of human rights within the United Nations was put on a firm footing with the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) in 1948. We are proud of the part played by India’s Hansa Mehta in drafting the UDHR, giving prominence in the Declaration for equal rights for women and men. The international community has since adopted several international human rights instruments in the last 60 years.

The Human Rights Council is an important body that the international community has carefully constructed to strengthen the protection of human rights around the globe. We are happy with the successful completion of the Review process in which India actively participated. We must consciously ensure that Council continues to function in a non-selective, non-politicized and transparent manner.

We consider the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) to be a positive, indeed a unique mechanism that enhances our commitment to making a genuine difference to the improvement of human rights on ground. We must congratulate ourselves on the successful completion of the first UPR Cycle just last week when review of all the 192 States of the UN was completed. The UPR is truly a universal, transparent mechanism, a potent instrument for change where all stakeholders participate directly or indirectly.

We acknowledge the important role played by treaty bodies in monitoring the implementation of the treaty obligations by the state parties. Recommendations made by these bodies have greatly contributed to strengthening domestic legal regimes and best practices identified have assisted governments in finding new ways to promote and protect human rights of their citizens. We encourage them to uphold their independence in the performance of their functions.
Mr. Chairman,

Every time a gross violation of human rights occurs in any part of the world, it shocks the conscience of the international community. The process of monitoring and protecting human rights is not easy and the international community must continue its endeavor to unify their forces in the fight against perpetrators who commit gross violations. In that context it is important to recognize that targeting countries for intrusive monitoring is only indicative of a bias and does not further the cause of human rights. There is no doubt that human rights abuses must be addressed but it should be done in a comprehensive manner through cooperation, dialogue and consultation.

Mr. Chairman,

The international community took a major step in the promotion and protection of human rights by adopting the Vienna Declaration and Programme of action in 1993. It was explicitly recognized for the first time that gross violations of human rights anywhere is a matter of grave concern for the international community. The Programme of Action exhorted states to adopt policies and programmes to enhance human rights situation including introduction of human rights, humanitarian law, democracy and rule of law as subjects in the curricula of all learning institutions in formal and non-formal settings.

India attaches much importance to the Right to Development, and recognizes that development is a comprehensive economic, social, cultural and political process. Lasting progress in this respect requires effective development policies at national level as well as equitable economic relations at the international level. A co-ordinated international effort is required to ensure that States establish, promote and sustain national and international arrangements that create an enabling environment for the realization of the Right to Development. The occasion of the 25th anniversary of the adoption of the Right to development by the General Assembly provides the international community an opportunity to reiterate its commitment to make a global concerted effort to effectively translate the Right to Development into a reality for all.

As a State Party of the principal covenants on human rights, and of practically all other major human rights instruments, India has accorded equal importance to all rights. India has consistently promoted civil and political rights on the one hand, and economic, social and cultural rights on the other. While the Constitution of India is the bedrock of our legal and political system, India’s independent judiciary, a free and vibrant media and civil society have reinforced the safeguards in order to ensure that these human rights for our citizens are not denied.
India has made important strides in facilitating the enjoyment of human rights of its citizens in the last two decades. India established an Independent Human Rights Commission in 1993. India has also enacted the ‘Right to Information Act’ to ensure transparency and accountability of government’s activities. The remedy of public interest litigations, was crafted by the judiciary, to ensure that even the most vulnerable sections of society who may not be able to approach courts otherwise, can seek justice via a public-spirited person or organization. This process of judicial redressal has been extremely effective in providing remedies to detainees, children and other vulnerable groups. A separate institutional mechanism in the form of National Commission for Women was also created to investigate and register complaints of violations of rights of women. Recently India began implementing the Right to education Act which applies to all schools whether private or public. Various laws relating to human rights are underway in parliament including the National food Security bill and the National rural employment guarantee bill.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

781. Statement by the First Secretary at the Permanent Mission at the UN Dr. Vishnu Dutt Sharma on Agenda Item 85 – The Law of Trans Boundary Aquifers at the 6th Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 18, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

As I am speaking for the first time in this Committee, I take this opportunity to congratulate you on assuming the chairmanship of this important Committee. I also congratulate other members of the Bureau on their election.

Mr. Chairman,

It may be recalled that in resolution 63/124, the General Assembly took note of the recommendation of the International Law Commission (ILC) and commended the Draft Articles on Trans-boundary Aquifers to the attention of governments, without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action. The General Assembly also encouraged States to make appropriate bilateral or regional arrangements for the proper management of their trans-boundary aquifers taking into account the draft articles.
Aquifers are important as life-supporting groundwater resources for mankind, particularly in view of the increasing demand for freshwater around the world. There is certainly a need to protect and manage the underground water ensuring availability of fresh water to all through proper utilization thereof. Draft article 3 expressly recognizes the sovereignty of an aquifer State over the portion of trans-boundary aquifers or aquifer system located within its territory.

Mr. Chairman,

The draft articles have tried to balance the equitable and reasonable utilization of aquifer systems with the obligation to prevent causing significant harm to other aquifer States and in cases where harm has been caused, to take measures to eliminate or mitigate such harm. The draft articles contain a number of useful provisions such as the factors relevant to equitable and reasonable utilization, the obligation to cooperate, regular exchange of data as well as the obligation of protection, preservation and management of aquifer system. We are convinced that the draft articles can serve as a useful guide for States in concluding their bilateral or regional arrangements on this subject.

Mr. Chairman,

We appreciate the efforts of the delegation of Japan in introducing the draft resolution on this important subject, with a view to examining the possibility of adopting the draft articles as a framework convention.

We note that the debates in the ILC as well as in the Sixth Committee have also highlighted the lack of adequate scientific knowledge in the field of management and protection of aquifers and that there was further need to study these aspects before coming to a firm conclusion on the nature of the outcome of the draft articles.

Given the complex nature of the subject, and the lack of state practice, it is necessary that States are provided with further scientific and technical assistance in understanding the complex issues associated with the management and protection of aquifer systems and based upon the state practice through bilateral and regional arrangements between states, the General Assembly will, at a later stage, be able to decide whether the time is ripe to develop a legally binding instrument, such as a convention, based on the draft articles adopted by the ILC.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Madam Chair,

At the outset, on behalf of my delegation, let me congratulate you as well as the rest of the members of the Bureau, for the manner in which you have conducted the work of the Committee thus far. We wish you all the best of success.

Madam Chair,

We welcome the report of the Secretary General on the three-fold activities of the Department of Public Information (DPI), namely strategic communications, news and outreach services.

The DPI's role is pivotal in helping to fulfill the substantive purpose of the United Nations by strategically communicating the activities and concerns of the Organization with the greatest public impact in a situation where the UN confronts a variety of complex challenges and opportunities.

We note with satisfaction that the DPI has made some advances towards delivering its messages to the targeted audience in an effective way. The DPI's Strategic Communications Division, under its thematic campaigns, worked closely with the Department of Peace Keeping Operations (DPKO) and the Department of Field Support (DFS) and produced 27 press releases and 1206 articles in English on peacekeeping matters for the UN web portal, during the period from July 2010 to February 2011. The UNifeed produced and disseminated 250 stories and UN Radio produced 120 stories on the subject during the same period to generate greater public support for peacekeeping operations.

Madam Chair,

We, however, reiterate that information being produced and disseminated has to be relevant and meaningful and, to the extent pertinent, it has to be spread in a manner that makes it not only interesting but also enjoyable for the target audience. This is not easy to achieve and those working on content management must be driven by a constant yearning for further improvement. DPI's programmes must seek to further deepen and strengthen their coverage and projection of the most noteworthy activities of the UN, in particular, those that directly impact upon the lives of ordinary people. These include humanitarian activities as also the work performed, often under extremely demanding circumstances, by UN peacekeepers in strife-torn lands.

As regards the latter, we would like to see DPI, DPKO and DFS working more closely in highlighting UN peacekeeping success stories and providing accurate, impartial and timely information on the regular activities of UN peacekeepers, as also on the exceptional work that they often do that goes beyond the routine keeping of the peace and the call of duty.

Madam Chair,

The DPI needs to use the widest possible range of technologies in order to make its work as pertinent and accessible as possible to the largest number of users, making it an effective channel for the flow of information between the UN and the peoples of the world. However, as many countries simultaneously span several centuries in technological terms, it is essential that the end product offered by DPI is dispensed through a wide spectrum of media channels. Thus, while the selection employed should incorporate the latest technologies, such as webcasts and podcasts, a strong emphasis must also be retained on using traditional and very cost-effective means of communication, such as radio and print. These remain of tremendous importance in reaching out to ordinary people in many parts of the developing world and must constantly be kept in sight.

It is encouraging to note that social media followers of UN Radio have grown to 21 thousand, an increase of 275 percent over the second half of 2010. It is a testimony to DPI’s efforts to address the need of varied audiences in different parts of the world, particularly in the developing countries, by maintaining a strong focus on traditional means of communication while, at the same time, capitalizing on new media platforms like internet and social networking sites.

Madam Chair,

We also fully support the effort to enable the emergence of a more linguistically equal world, in which information is disseminated not merely in the official languages of the UN, but also in other languages. We congratulate the DPI for now producing information in over 150 languages and note with satisfaction that among other languages, UN radio programmes are also being made in Hindi, Bengali and Urdu. This promotion of multilingualism by the DPI in its activities needs to be further widened and intensified, including in particular parity between the six official languages in terms of content on the website.

There is also much value in raising the level of local content and local involvement in the production of DPI programme material. Doing so will also encourage local talent and creativity to involve itself in the work of the UN. In this regard, we consider the UN Information Centers (UNIC), which have the capacity to work in 48 languages and maintain websites in 29 languages, as crucial in enhancing the public image of the UN and in disseminating its message, particularly in the developing world. We would encourage the DPI to work closely with host countries in strengthening these information outposts of the UN. We would also support adequate budgetary resources being made available for UNICs.

Madam Chair,

India appreciates DPI’s Outreach Division for its Academic Impact and Celebrity Advocacy programmes. We are pleased to mention that of more than seven hundred members Academic Impact initiative, institutions of India aggregate second largest number and that the University of Calcutta, one of our oldest and most renowned universities, is the Academic Impact’s global hub for peace and conflict resolution. Our cricketing icon Sachin Tendulkar is a Goodwill Ambassador of UN Environment Programme.

Furthermore, the Indian Mission was associated actively with the DPI and the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) in organizing a symposium on the theme “Can literature effect change” with a panel of eminent Indian authors on May 5. The event was dedicated to our former President R. Venkataraman.

Madam Chair,

We would like to assure you of India’s full support to the DPI in its endeavor to project the UN story and build support for the Organization and its noble aims.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

New York, October 19, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by expressing my delegations full support in making the 66th UN General Assembly a success.

I wish to thank the President of the ECOSOC for presenting the report of the Council and for his encouraging leadership.

We have just heard the important steps and actions the ECOSOC has taken on the global development agenda.

The Council has an acknowledged role as a principal body for coordination, policy review, policy dialogue and recommendations on issues of economic and social development. It has been singularly successful in promoting an integrated and coordinated implementation of the commitments made in the major UN conferences and summits.

Through the Annual Ministerial Review (AMR) and the Development Cooperation Forum, the Council has been able to review efforts to achieve the Internationally Agreed Development Goals including MDGs. The focus of the AMR each year on one of the Millennium Development Goals has, indeed, helped to accelerate action on them.

The July 2011 ECOSOC AMR based on the theme “Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to education” helped us track the achievement on MDG 2 and the Dakar Declaration in a holistic manner. The ECOSOC session, in general, focused on promoting greater coherence between policy and development goals, and making development partnership more effective, participatory and transparent.

We welcome the oversight role of the Council of its commissions and committees and appreciate its recent decisions to take corrective actions in maintaining the sanctity of this global body.
We deeply appreciate the high level policy dialogue the Council has been promoting with the international financial and trade institutions on current developments in the world economy. This is of particular relevance in the present uncertain global economic scenario.

There is a clear recognition that global economic governance needs a wider participation from developing countries, especially in the decision making structures of the BWIs, and we are hopeful that the Council will play a proactive role in achieving this objective.

Mr. Chairman,

The United Nations conferences and summits held since the 1990s have generated an unprecedented global consensus on the need to pursue sustained, inclusive and equitable growth and development.

Without sharing prosperity there can be no just and equitable world.

This imperative was emphatically reiterated at the Fourth UN Conference on Least Developed Countries (LDCs) in Turkey this year. The 10 year Istanbul Programme, which though an ambitious document seeks only a minimal commitment from the global community. If we are able to give the LDCs a helping hand, they would be more than willing to run the finish line.

The global economic crisis has not borne well for the MDGs. Reverses on poverty alleviation and other development goals need accelerated action to neutralize the regression. The Least Developed Countries which are the biggest laggards on the MDGs need stepped up external support including ODA, FDI and trade.

Mr. Chairman,

Inter-linkages between the various UN development summits and conferences are strong, and their synergies must be tapped.

The Mauritius Strategy for Implementation would derive immense benefits from a comprehensive, ambitious and equitable outcome of the Climate Change negotiations. Similarly, the Convention on Biological Diversity and its Access and Benefit Sharing Protocol through protecting biodiversity has an important role to play in poverty eradication.

Multiple UN conferences and summits focused on attainment of Internationally Agreed Development Goals must, therefore, have a seamless, holistic and integrated working relationship with each other. The role of ECOSOC in providing this important interface cannot be over emphasized.
Mr. Chairman,

With just four years to go for the MDG target year, follow-up action on all UN Summits and Conference need to be pushed. The global economic uncertainties should not become an excuse for inaction on our development agenda, more so when the economic recovery itself would get a boost from addressing the development deficit.

Follow up on the Monterrey Consensus and the DOHA review Conference on Financing for Development is fundamental to ensuring resources and the required policy space for developing countries to meet their socio-economic challenges. The 0.7% ODA commitment must be met at the earliest. Equally important is the need to ensure technology transfer and capacity building to developing countries.

We need to give a renewed push to the DOHA Development round. At the upcoming UN Conference on Sustainable Development, we must ensure that the opportunity to bring back the sustainable development agenda to the center stage is fully harnessed.

Mr. Chairman,

Over the years, ECOSOC has played an important role in advancing a holistic and coordinated approach to global economic and social development taking into account the inter-relatedness of the different goals and targets of major UN conferences.

We must work to make ECOSOC even more meaningful than what was originally envisaged by the UN Charter and subsequently strengthened by the various UN resolutions, particularly resolution 61/16.

I thank you.
784. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Mrs. Viplove Thakur on Agenda Item 22 – Groups of Countries in Special Situations [A] Follow up to the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries [B] Specification Actions related to the particular needs and problems of Landlocked Developing Countries; Outcome of the International Ministerial Conference on Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation at the Second Committee of the 66th Session of the General Assembly.

New York, October 20, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

India aligns itself with the statement delivered by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

At the 4th United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, the world clearly recognized the acute development challenges faced by the LDCs. We saw high political commitment and expression of support to help the poorest and the most vulnerable of the international community.

The Istanbul Program of Action adopted at the conference spells out a clear roadmap to help the LDCs lift themselves out of hunger, poverty and disease. It specifically stresses on the need to build productive capacity, infrastructure, institutional base and strong domestic economy sustained and strengthened by international trade.

At Istanbul, the LDCs set themselves an ambitious target to bring 50% of the countries to the threshold of graduation by the end of the Program. In their aspiration, Mr. Chairman, they have legitimate expectations from us, and we must not belittle them.

We believe that with a strong commitment from the global community combined with accelerated domestic action, the LDCs can achieve this target.

Mr. Chairman,

With the program clearly defined and targets visibly outlined, it is time now for action and implementation. The promises made in Istanbul must be fulfilled at the earliest.
Mobilization of adequate resources to fill the huge financing gap for development in LDCs should receive our highest attention. In this regard, we call upon the countries to fulfill the commitments made by them to provide 0.15-0.20 % of GNI as ODA to LDCs. Transfer of technology, capacity building and strengthening economic support measures are equally crucial to strengthen their resource base.

Integrating and enhancing the participation of LDCs in the global trading network through full implementation of the duty free and quota free market access needs urgent action.

We must also push for a balanced and development oriented outcome of the DOHA Round to create greater trade policy space for the LDCs.

The global financial and economic crisis has worsened the debt situation of LDCs. We call upon the international financial institutions and developed countries to provide immediate debt relief and make available concessional finance to spur economic growth and investment in the LDCs.

Climate Change poses a serious challenge to development in these countries. They need immediate financial and technology support to undertake adaptation strategies.

Mr. Chairman,

India remains fully committed to the needs of the LDCs. As part of South-South Cooperation, we are pleased that India-LDC partnership has gone beyond technical assistance to include trade, investment and humanitarian assistance.

In keeping with our WTO commitment, we have extended duty free tariff preference scheme to all LDCs. Our Lines of Credit worth 4.8 billion US Dollars to LDCs since 2003 and Aid for Trade programs have led to expansion in India-LDC trade from 16.7 billion US Dollars in 2008-09 to 20.5 billion US Dollars in 2009-10, with the balance of trade being in favour of the LDCs.

We have separately announced US Dollars 1 billion as Lines of Credit in support of the Istanbul Program. We urge the LDCs to make productive use of it. The additional 250 training slot for capacity building announced at the India-LDC Ministerial Meeting in Delhi has already been implemented. We have also kept a grant of US dollar 5 million for follow up activities of the Istanbul Program.

South-South Cooperation no doubt will play an important part in supporting the LDCs but it cannot be a substitute for North-South Cooperation.

Mr. Chairman,
The inherent geographical difficulties of landlocked developing countries have placed them at a distinct disadvantage as far as international trade and economic linkages are concerned.

The global economic crisis has hit the LLDCs hard. They need external support to help them overcome their development challenges including building resilience against external shocks.

The Almaty Programme of Action has resulted in a clear acknowledgement of the special needs of landlocked developing countries. Equally important is the understanding that any effective solution must address the constraints and challenges faced by the transit developing countries that neighbour landlocked developing countries.

We must work to provide efficient transportation and communication services to LLDCs including reliable logistic chain to offset transit and access difficulties and costs. According to UNCTAD, LLDCs, on an average, spent two times more on payment of transport and insurance services for their exports in comparison to other developing countries and three times more than the developed economies.

India has special bilateral cooperation agreements with its landlocked neighbours for easy transit of their goods through India. We accord the highest priority to further strengthening our ties with these countries including through regional initiatives. We will continue to contribute economic and technical support to their development efforts as well as of other landlocked and transit developing countries, as part of South-South cooperation.

We would also urge cooperation for meeting special transit requirements of landlocked regions within a country, which due to geography or political boundaries have similar difficulties in accessing international markets as LLDCs.

Mr. Chairman,

India, as always, remains fully committed to strengthening its partnership with LDCs and LLDCs.

Thank you
At the outset, on behalf of my delegation, let me congratulate you Madam Chair and all members of the Bureau, for the manner in which you have conducted the work of the Committee. We also wish you all the best of success in future.

Madam Chair,

We also express our deep appreciation for the excellent work done by the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR) in analyzing the sources and effects of radiation exposure on man and the environment, world-wide. We commend the Committee’s Draft Report to the General Assembly, which is evidence of its methodical approach on crucial issues of radiation exposure and its possible environmental impact.

India welcomes the Committee’s proposal to prepare a scientific report on the radiological consequences of the nuclear accident in the Fukushima-Daiichi power plant, following the great earthquake and Tsunami in East Japan. Initial estimates of exposure and radioactive contamination are available, and need to be updated constantly. While we believe that the radiological consequences of this episode may not be as far-reaching or of a magnitude comparable to those of Chernobyl, however drawing upon the experience of Chernobyl, it is necessary to create a multidisciplinary, multi-institutional framework for collection and analysis of the voluminous data.

Madam Chair,

While welcoming the offer from the Member States to share their data with the scientific committee and appreciating the persistent demands to monitor the radioactive contamination in the wake of Fukushima, India recognizes that this is a difficult and demanding task in terms of availability of trained human resources.

Madam Chair,

We would like to place on record our appreciation of the Committee’s efforts to develop a scientific document on ‘Attributability of Health Effects to Ionizing Radiation’ and ‘Uncertainties in risk estimates for cancer due to radiation exposure’. We would like to underline that the Committee, in its report to the 65th General Assembly, has accepted that there is no epidemiological or experimental evidence for increased incidence of cancer for a dose of 100 mSv (millisievert). We therefore hope that the issue of Linear no Threshold (LNT) as a basis for stipulating the limits of radiation exposure to occupational workers and the general public, will be revisited.

Madam Chair,

The UNSCEAR also deserves to be complimented for undertaking the development of some other very relevant scientific annexes, namely the methodology for estimating radiation exposure due to discharges, biological effects of internal emitters and radiation exposure from different options for electricity generation. We hope that these documents, after their publication, would facilitate informed decision-making by UN Member States. As India is emerging as a major user of electricity generated from nuclear power plants, the safety of our citizens is our top priority.

The collection of reliable data, which requires support of different agencies in the Member States, is crucial to the Committee’s work. In this regard, we would like to mention that the data collection format should not be too elaborate, and the form in which this information is conveyed to the public should be such that it does not create a fear psychosis.

Madam Chair,

India appreciates the Committee’s initiative to prepare a scientific annexe on epidemiology related to the environmental sources at low doses. We are pleased to mention that the Committee will be taking note of the published work from India and China on cancer, as well as biological and genetic effects in high background radiation areas which do not show excessive positive risk. India shall be happy to share its data on the biological and genetic studies in high-level natural radiation areas of Kerala.

Medical radiation exposure is becoming a major source of exposure, depending on the healthcare level of a country. In this regard, we welcome the publication of UNSCEAR’s 2008 report on Medical Radiation Exposures.

Madam Chair,

India believes that the UNSCEAR, with its present composition, is doing outstanding work in its mandated area. Therefore, while appreciating the demand for expansion of membership of the committee, we would like to emphasize that the membership of the committee should not exceed a practical limit, in view of financial and logistic considerations in organizing its sessions with a large membership.
Madam Chair,

Let me conclude by seconding the resolution on Effects of Atomic Radiation, while also strongly recommending that sufficient financial resources be made available to the UNSCEAR for its effective functioning.

Thank you Madam Chair.

786. Statement by Minister of State E. Ahamed at UN Security Council’s Open Debate on the Situation in the Middle East including the Palestinian Question.

New York, October 24, 2011.

Thank you, Madam President.

I would like to express our deep condolences to the Government and people of Saudi Arabia on the passing away of His Royal Highness of Saudi Arabia Sultan bin Abdel Aziz Al Saud.

I would also like to express our solidarity with the Government and people of Turkey in dealing with the aftermath of the devastating earthquake.

First of all, I would like to thank you for organizing this Open Debate on the Middle East, a region witnessing momentous transformation.

I would also like to thank Under Secretary General Lynn Pascoe for his comprehensive briefing on developments in the region.

Madam President,

Clearly, the issue of Palestine has taken a decisive turn in the history of the Middle East conflict after President Mahmoud Abbas filed an application with the Secretary General on 23 September 2011 for Palestine’s full membership to the United Nations.

Speaking a day after President Abbas filed the application, my Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh said in the General Assembly on 24 September 2011 that India has been steadfast in its support for the Palestinian people’s struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable and united state of Palestine with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognized borders side by side and at peace with Israel, as per the relevant resolutions of this Organization, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet Roadmap.
The Prime Minister added that we look forward to welcoming Palestine as an equal member of the United Nations.

Madam President,

India recognized the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people in 1975 and its Office in New Delhi was accorded full diplomatic recognition in 1980.

India was the first non-Arab country to recognize the State of Palestine in 1988. We have maintained diplomatic relations with Palestine for over two decades now.

It is also pertinent to note that Palestine has been recognized by more than two-thirds of the membership of this Organization.

Obviously, the State of Palestine fulfills all criteria mentioned in Article 4 of the Charter for membership to this Organization.

We, therefore, support Palestine’s application and hope that the process will be concluded expeditiously.

Madam President,

During my long political career, I have had the honour to work closely with the Palestinian leaders.

I had met the undisputed leader of the Palestinian people late President Yasser Arafat on 17 September 2004 at Ramallah, just a few months before he left his earthly abode.

At that meeting, I had the opportunity to reiterate India’s solidarity with the Palestinian people and support for their cause.

He had warmly recalled his close relations with Indian leaders, particularly Mrs Indira Gandhi and Mr Rajiv Gandhi, and appreciated India’s unwavering support for the cause of the Palestinian people.

We have continued our interactions with the Palestinian leadership under President Abbas. He has paid state visits to India in 2008 and 2010.

Madam President,

As the world’s largest democracy and arguably its most diverse country, India recognizes the democratic aspirations of all peoples, including in the Middle East.

The call of the international community for democracy and respect of fundamental rights will sound hollow if the present impasse continues and Palestinians are denied their aspirations.

It is also our firm conviction that lasting peace and security in the region can be achieved only through peaceful dialogue and not through use of force.

In this context, we have noted the Quartet Statement of 23 September and hope that the timelines indicated in the Statement would be realized.

The biggest stumbling block to direct negotiations between the Isarelis and Palestinians remains continuing settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territories.

We call upon Israel to stop settlement activities. This will facilitate resumption of negotiations in which all Final Status issues should be addressed.

We cannot, however, make Palestine’s membership to the United Nations conditional upon a peace agreement for that will be legally untenable, even while we support resumption of direct talks to resolve the outstanding issues.

Madame President,

We welcome the recent agreement between Israel and Hamas on exchange of prisoners. We hope this will ease tension and build confidence.

We also hope this would pave the way for an early and significant easing of restrictions on movement of goods and people into the Gaza Strip, thereby addressing the dire humanitarian situation there.

India on its part has continued its development support to the Palestinian Authority.

From the year 2009-10, we enhanced our annual contribution to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency [UNRWA] to US$ 1 million, in addition to a special contribution of US $ 1 million to UNRWA in response to a flash appeal in 2010.

During the last two years, India has also contributed US$ 10 million annually as untied budgetary support to the Palestinian Authority.

We are offering 100 slots to the Palestinian Authority for capacity building and human resource development under our technical and economic cooperation programme.

We have also undertaken joint projects with our IBSA partners in Palestine with a sports complex having just been completed.
Madam President,

While the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is the most serious one in the region, we need to be mindful that resolution of this conflict by itself may not result in achievement of a comprehensive and durable peace in the region.

Other issues relating to Arab lands that remain under occupation are equally important. Progress in the Lebanese and Syrian tracks of the Middle East Peace Process is, therefore, necessary for comprehensive and lasting peace in the region.

Developments in the Middle East since February this year underline the need for reinvigorating the search for this comprehensive peace, while the countries in the region undertake inclusive political processes and implement reforms to meet the legitimate aspirations of their people.

It is important that the grievances of the people are addressed through dialogue and negotiations rather than resorting to arms.

It is the responsibility of all countries to create conditions that enable their people to freely determine their pathways to development. This is the essence of democracy and fundamental human freedoms.

No action should be taken from outside that exacerbates problems and gives space for the rise of extremism.

The international community should stand ready to assist the countries in these efforts while respecting sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of all countries.

As my Prime Minister said in the General Assembly on 24 September, societies cannot be reordered from outside through military force.

Observance of the rule of law is as important in international affairs as it is within countries.

Guided by these principles, Madam President, India stands ready to play its role in our collective endeavours to achieve a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

Thank you.
Mr. Chairman,

I thank Prof. Maurice Kamto, Chairman of the sixty-third session of the International Law Commission, for his detailed and informative introduction to the work of the Commission at its sixty-third Session on the first cluster of topics, and for guiding the work of the Commission at this session.

I also commend all members of the Commission on a very successful and productive session in which it has completed its work and adopted on second reading, sets of Draft Articles on three major topics on its agenda, namely, the Responsibility of International Organizations; the Effects of Armed Conflicts on Treaties; and Reservations to Treaties. The Commission has also made substantial progress in its consideration of the other topics on its agenda, including the identification of new topics. I also thank the Secretariat for their contribution to the work of the Commission.

Mr. Chairman,

On the topic “Reservations to Treaties”, we congratulate the Special Rapporteur, Prof. Alain Pellet, for the adoption by the Commission of the “Guide to Practice on Reservations to Treaties”, along with commentaries. Prof. Pellet submitted a total of 17 reports, beginning with his first report on the topic in 1995. The “Guide to Practice” is very detailed and exhaustive, and tries to cover all situations, and is based on an in-depth and exhaustive analysis of State practice and case law, and is sure to be an invaluable tool for government legal advisers as well as practitioners in resolving problems posed by reservations to treaties and interpretative declarations. We also appreciate the important contribution made by the Working Group chaired by Mr. Vasquez Bermudez to the Commission’s work on this topic.

In addition to the Guide to Practice, The Commission has also adopted an annex on the “reservations dialogue” as well as a recommendation on “mechanisms of assistance in relation to reservations”.

My delegation will comment on these proposals when the Sixth Committee decides to take up its detailed consideration of the Guide to Practice.
Mr. Chairman,

On the topic of “Responsibility of International Organizations”, we commend the Special Rapporteur, Prof. Giorgia Gaja, for the adoption by the Commission, of a set of 67 draft articles together with Commentaries. We appreciate the work of the Special Rapporteur, Professor Giorgio Gaja of Italy, for his comprehensive eight Reports submitted from 2003-2009. The completion of the Commission’s work on this topic is a significant achievement, as it has been engaged on the topic relating to the law of responsibility for more than 60 years.

We note that the draft articles essentially follow the pattern of the articles on Responsibility of States for International Wrongful Acts, with necessary adjustments taking into account the different nature, structure and functions of international organizations. The present version of the draft articles has some new developments which are to be welcomed. The draft articles lay down rules of attribution, circumstances precluding wrongfulness, effects of a breach, and the principle of reparation.

Mr. Chairman,

Draft article 5 establishes that “the characterization of an act of an international organization as internationally wrongful is governed by international law”. This provision would clarify that international law determines the fact whether or not an act of an international organization is wrongful. In this regard, we also welcome the provisions of Part Six which safeguard the application of special rules of international law that may be applicable, and the provisions of the United Nations Charter.

An internationally wrongful act may create direct liability, in the form of joint or several responsibilities, between an international organization and its member States. In addition, acts by a State that assists an international organization that commits an internationally wrongful act may trigger indirect responsibility, which needs to be examined carefully.

Mr. Chairman,

On the issue of countermeasures, we reiterate our view that disputes between an international organization and its members should be settled in accordance with the rules of the organization and through the internal procedures, and that there should be no question of countermeasures unless expressly provided for in the rules of the organization. In this regard, we welcome the detailed criteria and conditions added to the countermeasures regime (under draft articles 22, 51-57). These provisions, which lay down the conditions under which countermeasures can be resorted to by a state or intergovernmental organization, as well as the object and limits, and the requirement of proportionality, would ensure that countermeasures may be resorted to only in exceptional cases.

Mr. Chairman,

We support the recommendation of the Commission that the General Assembly take note of the draft articles in a resolution and annex them to the resolution, and to consider, at a later stage, the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles.

Mr. Chairman,

In Chapter III of the Report, the Commission has listed a number of specific issues on which comments of States have been sought. We thank the Commission for having identified and listed out these issues in detail and would be providing our responses separately.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I once again congratulate the International Law Commission and, in particular, the Special Rapporteurs, for a very successful session.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
Mr. President,

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to address the General Assembly.

My delegation associates itself with the statements made by Argentina on behalf of the G 77 and Egypt on behalf of the NAM.

Mr. President,

We meet yet again to deliberate on the agenda item: Necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States against Cuba.

In all these years, this Assembly has repeatedly rejected the imposition of laws and regulations with extra-territorial impact and all other forms of coercive economic measures that hurt the progress and prosperity of people the world over.

The General Assembly has also called upon all States to respect their obligations under the United Nations Charter and international law, as well as repeal and invalidate laws and measures that have “extra-territorial effects” on other States.

It is unfortunate that in spite its rejection by this august Assembly, year after year, the US embargo on Cuba continues to remain in full force. We see this as a violation of the world opinion, and an act that severely undermines multilateralism and the credibility of the United Nations itself.

Mr. President, The nearly half a century old US embargo on Cuba has brought immense suffering for its people. It has severely undermined the progress and development of the country. The embargo, which perhaps, has no parallel in history, is a transgression of the right of a sovereign state to development and to enjoy freedom of trade, economy and navigation.

On the one hand we, the global community, make tall promises on Millennium Development Goals, of striving for human dignity and achieving equitable growth, but when it comes to action, we do the exact opposite. The embargo has denied a life of respect and basic standard to the people of Cuba. Action, Mr. President, must speak louder than words.

The embargo, particularly through its extraterritorial effects, has adversely affected the economic prosperity of the Cuban people. The global economic slowdown along with spiraling food and energy prices has made matters worse.
The embargo has denied Cuba access to US market, investment, technology, financial services and scientific, educational, cultural and sporting institutions. Cuba has had to pay enormous extra cost for sourcing products, technology and services from third countries located thousands of kilometers away.

The extra-territorial application of the US embargo has discouraged investment, technology transfer and sale and other forms of business collaborations between Cuba and third countries.

The denial of technology and related scientific support, particularly due to extra-territorial application of the embargo, has severely impacted health care, an MDG commitment, in Cuba. It has also undermined its ability to provide health assistance to developing countries as part of South-South cooperation.

Mr. President,

The report of the Secretary General on the agenda item is illustrative of the detrimental impact the embargo has had on international efforts to undertake socio-economic advancement in Cuba. The UN Resident Coordinator in Havana has noted the high cost and negative impact of the embargo on humanitarian and development cooperation implemented by the UN system in Cuba.

Mr. President,

There is huge potential for strengthening economic and commercial ties between Cuba and the United States.

Taking advantage of limited openings under the US Trade Sanctions Reform and Export Enhancement Act of 2000, the US has become the largest exporter of agricultural products to Cuba.

Congressional efforts in the United States to relax or lift the embargo lend further credence to the UN annual resolutions calling for lifting of the US embargo against Cuba. People to people contact between the two countries remain severely curtailed.

The steps taken by the US Administration in January 2011 to reduce restrictions on travel and remittances to Cuba are positive developments. However, it is far from making a fundamental change in the complex framework of laws and regulations which are part of the embargo against Cuba. Much more needs to be done.

India joins other nations in calling for an immediate end to the US embargo against Cuba. India supports the resolution moved by Cuba.

Thank you.
789. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Mrs. Viplove Thakur on Agenda item 69 (b) Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and (c) Human Rights situations and reports of Special Rapporteurs and Representatives.

New York, October 26, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary General for his valuable reports on Agenda item 69 and the special rapporteurs for their informative reports as well.

Observance of human rights is at the core of any civilized society and has therefore been appropriately recognized as the third pillar of the United Nations. We welcome the report of the Secretary General on the Right to Development. The Right to Development is a fundamental link in the web of human rights that promotes social progress and better standards of life for every person.

We support the work of the Working Group on the Right to Development and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in their continued endeavour to operationalize and mainstream the issue of promotion and protection of all human rights in policies and operational activities of relevant actors at the national, regional and international level, including multilateral financial, trade and development institutions. The changing global context has necessitated a well-coordinated approach to development cooperation and as stated in the Secretary-General’s report on the right to development, a global partnership for development, underpinned by human rights-based policy coherence and coordination at all levels, is the best foundation for realizing the right to development.

Mr. Chairman,

Terrorism is one of the major threats to the full enjoyment of human rights. Terrorists violate the most fundamental human right of their victims - the right to life. By instilling fear and using tactics of intimidation, terrorists also infringe on several other human rights of innocent citizens. Terrorism is also an attack on democracy, human dignity, human rights and development.

While security of its people is the first responsibility of a Government, States must also be very mindful of their responsibility to protect human rights. The challenge lies in striking the right balance between the imperatives of effectively tackling terrorism on the one hand, and fully observing international law and human rights standards, on the other.
Terrorism has emerged as a truly global threat – one that no country should consider itself isolated from. Terrorism must be crushed if the concept of human rights is to retain any meaning for the common man. It should be our collective endeavour to ensure that the human rights debate is not misused for the pursuit of narrow political agendas, or to fulfill territorial ambitions as part of States with destructive foreign policy objectives. States must take unequivocal and resolute position against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

Mr. Chairman,

The interim report of the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Food, has elaborated on contract farming and the constraints and risks associated with this model which also offers benefits in the realization of the right to food. States indeed play a key role in protecting individuals against the many risks involved and in ensuring that contract farming and other business models support the right to food of the smallest producer and the poorest of the population. The national efforts must be complimented by international cooperation in an environment of transparency and equity, which involves, transfer of technology and provision of financing.

International cooperation and solidarity between States are indeed indispensable for sharing the benefits and burdens of globalization. This concerns all spheres of cooperation, including aid, trade, investment, debt relief, transfer of technology, access to medicines, financing for development and climate change. In this regard, the reform of global economic governance is vital so as to ensure that all countries and peoples can benefit equally from globalization. Such reform must take into consideration the enhanced and effective participation of developing countries, least developed countries, small island developing States, landlocked developing countries and civil society in global decision-making, in order to create more favourable international conditions for equitable, inclusive and sustainable development respectful of all human rights.

The Special Rapporteur on Foreign Debt has highlighted that export credit agency-supported activities can have serious consequences on a country’s debt burden and sustainable development and, consequently, on the lives of people. A number of countries owe more than 50 per cent of their total debt to export credit agencies, which very often add to the sovereign debt liability of governments, especially those of developing countries. This calls for a concerted international effort to bear in mind the unintended consequences that their good intentions or actions can have.

Mr. Chairman,

With its democratic, pluralistic and secular polity, an autonomous and impartial judiciary, a vibrant civil society, a free media, and independent human rights institutions, India has been successful in ensuring effective guarantees for the protection and promotion of human rights. Our vibrant democratic polity also requires that we continuously pursue higher norms and standards, be it in the area of human rights or development. As the world’s largest democracy, India considers it an honour to uphold and cherish the values of human rights and fundamental freedoms of each and every citizen. It will be our constant endeavour to continue to do so.

I thank you Mr. Chairman

790. Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Dushyant Singh on Agenda Item 16 – Information and Communication Technologies for Development at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 26, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

We thank the Secretary-General for his report on enhanced cooperation on public policy issues pertaining to the Internet, contained in document A/66/77, which provides a useful introduction to the discussions under this agenda item.

As a multi-ethnic, multi-cultural and democratic society with an open economy and an abiding culture of pluralism, India emphasizes the importance that we attach to the strengthening of the Internet as a vehicle for openness, democracy, freedom of expression, human rights, diversity, inclusiveness, creativity, free and unhindered access to information and knowledge, global connectivity, innovation and socio-economic growth. We believe that the governance of such an unprecedented global medium that embodies the values of democracy, pluralism, inclusion, openness and transparency should also be similarly inclusive, democratic, participatory, multilateral and transparent in nature. Indeed, this was already recognized and mandated by the Tunis Agenda in 2005, as reflected in paragraphs 34, 35, 56, 58, 59, 60, 61 and 69 of the Agenda. Regrettably, in the six long years that have gone by, no substantial initiative has been taken by the global community to give effect to this mandate. Meanwhile, the internet has grown exponentially in its reach and scope, throwing up several new and rapidly emerging challenges in the area of global internet governance that continue to remain inadequately addressed. It is becoming increasingly evident that the Internet as a rapidly-evolving and inherently global medium, needs quick-footed and timely global solutions and policies, not divergent and fragmented national policies. The range and criticality of these pressing global digital issues that continue to remain unaddressed, are growing rapidly with each passing day. It is, therefore, urgent and imperative that a multilateral, democratic participative and transparent global policy-making mechanism be urgently instituted, as mandated by the Tunis Agenda under the process of ‘Enhanced Co-operation’, to enable coherent and integrated global policy-making on all aspects of global Internet governance.

Operationalizing the Tunis mandate in this regard should not be viewed as an attempt by governments to “take over” or “regulate and circumscribe” the internet. Indeed, any such misguided attempt would be antithetical not only to the internet, but also to human welfare. As a democratic and open society that has historically welcomed outside influences and believes in openness to all views and ideas and is wedded to free dialogue, pluralism and diversity, India attaches great importance to the preservation of the Internet as an unrestricted, open and free global medium that flourishes through private innovation and individual creativity and serves as a vehicle for open communication, access to culture, knowledge, democratization and development. India recognizes the role played by various actors and stakeholders in the development and continued enrichment of the internet, and is firmly committed to multi-stakeholderism in internet governance, both at the national and global level. India believes that global internet governance can only be functional, effective and credible if all relevant stake-holders contribute to, and are consulted in, the process.

Bearing in mind the need for a transparent, democratic, and multilateral mechanism that enables all stakeholders to participate in their respective roles, to address the many cross-cutting international public policy issues that require attention and are not adequately addressed by current mechanisms and the need for enhanced cooperation to enable governments, on an equal footing, to carry out their roles and responsibilities in international public policy issues pertaining to the Internet, India proposes the establishment of a new institutional mechanism in the United Nations for global internet-related policies, to be called the United Nations Committee for Internet-Related Policies (CIRP). The intent behind proposing a multilateral and multi-stakeholder mechanism is not to “control the internet” or allow Governments to have the last word in regulating the internet, but to make sure that the Internet is governed not unilaterally, but in an open, democratic, inclusive and participatory manner, with the participation of all stakeholders, so as to evolve universally acceptable, and globally harmonized policies in important areas and pave the way for a credible, constantly evolving, stable and well-functioning Internet that plays its due role in improving the quality of peoples’ lives everywhere.

The CIRP shall be mandated to undertake the following tasks:

i. Develop and establish international public policies with a view to ensuring coordination and coherence in cross-cutting Internet-related global issues;

ii. Coordinate and oversee the bodies responsible for technical and operational functioning of the Internet, including global standards setting;

iii. Facilitate negotiation of treaties, conventions and agreements on Internet-related public policies;

iv. Address developmental issues related to the internet;

v. Promote the promotion and protection of all human rights, namely, civil, political, social, economic and cultural rights, including the Right to Development;

vi. Undertake arbitration and dispute resolution, where necessary; and,

vii. Crisis management in relation to the Internet.

The main features of CIRP are provided in the annex to this statement. In brief, the CIRP will comprise 50 Member States chosen on the basis of equitable geographical representation, and will meet annually for two working weeks in Geneva. It will ensure the participation of all relevant stakeholders by establishing four Advisory Groups, one each for civil society, the private sector, inter-governmental and international organizations, and the technical and academic community. The Advisory Groups will provide their inputs and recommendations to the CIRP. The meetings of CIRP and the advisory groups will be serviced by the UNCTAD Secretariat that also services the meetings of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development. The Internet Governance Forum will provide inputs to CIRP in the spirit of complementarity between the two. CIRP will report directly to the General Assembly and present recommendations for consideration, adoption and dissemination among all relevant inter-governmental bodies and international organizations. CIRP will be supported by the regular budget of the United Nations; a separate Fund would be set up by drawing from the domain registration fees collected by various bodies, in order to mainly finance the Research Wing to be established by CIRP to support its activities.

Those familiar with the discourse on global internet governance since the beginning of the WSIS process at the turn of the millennium, will recognize that neither the mandated tasks of the CIRP, nor its proposed modalities, are new. The Working Group on Internet Governance (WGIG) set up by the UN Secretary-General had explicitly recognized the institutional gaps in global internet governance and had proposed four institutional models in its report to the UN General Assembly in 2005. The contours of the CIRP, as proposed above, reflect the common elements in the four WGIG institutional models. While the excellent report of the WGIG was much discussed and deliberated in 2005, unfortunately, no concrete follow-up action was taken to give effect to its recommendations on the institutional front. We hope that this anomaly will be redressed at least six years later, with the timely establishment of the CIRP.

In order to operationalize this proposal, India calls for the establishment of an open-ended working group under the Commission on Science and Technology for Development for drawing up the detailed terms of reference for CIRP, with a view to actualizing it within the next 18 months. We are open to the views and suggestions of all Member States, and stand ready to work with other delegations to carry forward this proposal, and thus seek to fill the serious gap in the implementation of the Tunis Agenda, by providing substance and content to the concept of Enhanced Co-operation enshrined in the Tunis Agenda.

ANNEX

The United Nations Committee for Internet-Related Policies (CIRP)

The United Nations Committee for Internet-Related Policies (CIRP) will have the following features:

Membership: The CIRP will consist of 50 Member States of the United Nations, chosen/elected on the basis of equitable geographical representation. It will provide for equitable representation of all UN Member States, in accordance with established UN principles and practices. It will have a Bureau consisting of one Chair, three Vice-Chairs and a Rapporteur.

Meetings: The CIRP will meet annually for two working weeks in Geneva, preferably in May/June, and convene additional meetings, as and when required. The UNCTAD Secretariat will provide substantive and logistical support to the CIRP by servicing these meetings.
Multi-stakeholder participation: Recognizing the need to involve all stakeholders in Global Internet Governance in their respective roles, the CIRP shall ensure the participation of all stakeholders recognized in the Tunis Agenda. Four Advisory Groups – one each for Civil Society, the Private Sector, Inter-Governmental and International Organisations, and the Technical and Academic Community - will be established, to assist and advise the CIRP. These Groups would be self-organized, as per agreed principles, to ensure transparency, representativity and inclusiveness. The Advisory Groups will meet annually in Geneva and in conjunction with any additional meetings of the CIRP. Their meetings will be held back-to-back with the meetings of the CIRP, so that they are able to provide their inputs and recommendations in a timely manner, to the CIRP.

Reporting: The CIRP will report directly to the UN General Assembly annually, on its meetings and present recommendations in the areas of policy and implementation for consideration, adoption and dissemination to all relevant inter-governmental bodies and international organizations.

Research Wing: The Internet is a rapidly-evolving and dynamic medium that throws up urgent and rapidly-evolving challenges that need timely solutions. In order to deal effectively and prudently with these emerging issues in a timely manner, it would be vital to have a well-resourced Research Wing attached to the CIRP to provide ready and comprehensive background material, analysis and inputs to the CIRP, as required.

Links with the IGF: Recognizing the value of the Internet Governance Forum as an open, unique forum for multi-stakeholder policy dialogue on Internet issues, the deliberations in the IGF along with any inputs, background information and analysis it may provide, will be taken as inputs for consideration of the CIRP. An improved and strengthened IGF that can serve as a purposeful body for policy consultations and provide meaningful policy inputs to the CIRP, will ensure a stronger and more effective complementarity between the CIRP and the IGF.

Budget: Like other UN bodies, the CIRP should be supported by the regular budget of the United Nations. In addition, keeping in view its unique multi-stakeholder format for inclusive participation, and the need for a well-resourced Research Wing and regular meetings, a separate Fund should also be set up drawing from the domain registration fees collected by various bodies involved in the technical functioning of the Internet, especially in terms of names and addresses.

Excerpts from the Tunis Agenda

Paragraph 34 of the Tunis Agenda defines Internet Governance as “the development and application by governments, the private sector and civil society, in their respective roles, of shared principles, norms, rules, decision-making procedures, and programmes that shape the evolution and use of the Internet”.

Paragraph 35 reaffirms the respective roles of stakeholders as follows: “(a) Policy authority for Internet-related public policy issues is the sovereign right of States. They have rights and responsibilities for international Internet-related public policy issues”. (b) The private sector has had, and should continue to have, an important role in the development of the Internet, both in the technical and economic fields. (c) Civil society has also played an important role on Internet matters, especially at community level, and should continue to play such a role. (d) Intergovernmental organizations have had, and should continue to have, a facilitating role in the coordination of Internet-related public policy issues. (e) International organizations have also had and should continue to have an important role in the development of Internet-related technical standards and relevant policies.”

While delineating the respective roles of stakeholders,

Paragraph 56 recognizes the need for an inclusive, multi-stakeholder approach by affirming that “The Internet remains a highly dynamic medium and therefore any framework and mechanisms designed to deal with Internet governance should be inclusive and responsive to the exponential growth and fast evolution of the Internet as a common platform for the development of multiple applications”.

Paragraph 58 recognizes “that Internet governance includes more than Internet naming and addressing. It also includes other significant public policy issues such as, inter alia, critical Internet resources, the security and safety of the Internet, and developmental aspects and issues pertaining to the use of the Internet”.

Paragraph 59 further recognizes that “Internet governance includes social, economic and technical issues including affordability, reliability and quality of service”.

Paragraph 60 further recognizes that “there are many cross-cutting international public policy issues that require attention and are not adequately addressed by the current mechanisms”.

Paragraph 61 of the Tunis Agenda therefore concludes that “We are convinced that there is a need to initiate, and reinforce, as appropriate, a transparent, democratic, and multilateral process, with the participation of governments, private sector, civil society and international organisations, in their respective roles. This process could envisage creation of a suitable framework or mechanisms, where justified, thus spurring the ongoing and active evolution of the current arrangements in order to synergize the efforts in this regard”.

Paragraph 69 further recognizes “the need for enhanced cooperation in the future, to enable governments, on an equal footing, to carry out their roles and responsibilities, in international public policy issues pertaining to the Internet, but not in the day-to-day technical and operational matters, that do not impact on international public policy issues”.

791. Statement by Minister of State for External Affairs E. Ahamed on Agenda Item 72 – Report of the International Court of Justice at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October, 26, 2011.

Mr. President,

I would like to thank Judge Hisashi Owada, President of the International Court of Justice, for his comprehensive and detailed report, covering the judicial activities of the Court over the last year. I also thank him and Vice-President Judge Tomka for their leadership of the Court over that period.

India attaches the highest importance to the Court as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. The peaceful resolution of disputes is fundamental for the maintenance of international peace and security. The Court has fulfilled that task admirably since its establishment and has acquired a well deserved reputation as an impartial institution with the highest legal standards, in accordance with its mandate under the Charter of the United Nations.

The Court remains the only judicial body with legitimacy derived from the UN Charter and enjoying universal character with general jurisdiction, whereas other international judicial institutions have competence and jurisdiction in specific areas only. The Statute of the ICJ is an integral part of the UN Charter. This is a unique status enjoyed by the ICJ among the international courts or tribunals. One of the primary goals of the United Nations, as stated in the Preamble to the United Nations Charter, is to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations of international law can be maintained. The International court of Justice, as the only international Court with general international law jurisdiction, is uniquely placed to fulfill that role.

The report of the Court clearly illustrates the confidence that States have in the Court, as shown by the number and scope of cases entrusted to it and the Court’s growing specialization in complex aspects of public international law. This clearly illustrates the universality of the Court and the great importance that Member States attach to it. I am especially glad to see that the Court’s docket of pending cases has grown consistently in recent years and now stand at 17 cases, involving more than 30 different States, as well as one request for an Advisory Opinion, as Judge Owada mentioned. The variety of the subject matter of recent cases, from territorial and maritime disputes to the obligation to prosecute or extradite, also demonstrates the significant role played by the Court in solving international disputes between States and providing its opinion on important questions of international law.

Mr. President,

The judgments delivered by the ICJ have played an important role in the interpretation and clarification of rules of international law as well as in the progressive development and codification of international law. In the performance of its judicial functions, the Court has remained highly sensitive in respecting political realities and sentiments of States, while acting within the provisions of the UN Charter, its own Statute and other applicable international law. The Court has contributed significantly towards settling legal disputes between Sovereign States, thus promoting the rule of law in international relations.

The Court has, since its inception, dealt with a variety of complex legal issues. It has pronounced judgments in areas covering territorial and maritime delimitation, diplomatic protection, environmental concerns, racial discrimination, violation of human rights and interpretation and application of international treaties and conventions.

The Court’s second function, of providing advisory opinions on legal questions referred to it by organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, continues to fulfill the important role of clarifying key international law issues.

Mr. President,

It is praiseworthy to note that the Court has taken significant steps over recent years to enhance its efficiency to cope with the steady increase in its workload including inter-alia re-examination of its procedures and working methods, updating of its practice directions for use by the States appearing before it and, setting a particularly demanding schedule of hearings and deliberations in order that the Court may consider several cases at the same time. As a result, we are happy to note that the Court has successfully cleared its backlog of cases, which has the effect of further strengthening the confidence of States in the Court’s competency and efficiency.

Mr. President,

In concluding my remarks, I wish to reiterate the great importance the international community attaches to the work of the International Court of Justice and to draw the Assembly’s attention to the importance of strengthening the functioning of the Court, including the provision of additional staff, as requested by the Court. India reaffirms its strong support for the International Court of Justice.

Thank You, Mr. President.

Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Mrs. Viplove Thakur on Agenda Item 17: Macro-Economic Policy Questions [A] International Trade and Development and [D] Commodities at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 27, 2011.

Mr. Chairperson,

We thank the Secretary General and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) for the reports on “International Trade and Development”.

India aligns itself with the statement made by Argentina on behalf of the G-77.

Mr. Chairperson,

The sharp and sudden decline in world trade from 2008 to 2009 was followed by a modest recovery in 2010. The overall global economic recovery, however, continues to be fragile and halting. The prospects for global trade do not appear to be too encouraging. We must work to boost global demand and growth to stimulate trade and the world economy.

The sovereign debt crisis in Europe and the recessionary trends in the traditional engines of the global economy – the United States, Europe and Japan are sending negative signals to the world financial and capital markets which are showing signs of acute distress.

Recessionary trends in these countries are affecting international trade. Developing countries cannot remain untouched by the negative impacts of these developments. Their ability to address their developmental challenges has been adversely affected.

We hope that effective and early steps will be taken by Europe and other advanced economies to calm the capital and financial markets and prevent the global economy from slipping into a double dip recession.

Declining global demand and availability of capital, increasing barriers to free trade and mounting debt pose a threat to the international trading and financial systems.

To act as an engine of development, the international trade framework should work towards removing barriers that prevent developing countries from fully participating in global trade. Eschewing protectionism and enhancing market access for developing countries are critical in this regard.
The UNCTAD report on trade and development, 2011 emphasizes on strict regulation of the financial sector, and focuses on policies that emphasize income growth as the basis for sustainable and balanced development worldwide. We are pleased to note that the G-20 is actively pursuing these policy suggestions.

Transforming trade dynamism into greater income opportunities through job creation remains a critical development challenge, more so in the present job-less growth scenario. The crisis has left a large worldwide pool of unemployed, totaling 205 million in 2010.

Mr. Chairperson,

Commodities are key export products for a large number of developing countries, especially the Least Developed Countries and have a direct impact on their socio-economic advancement. Growing commodity price volatility is having a negative impact on global food and energy security. It has made commodity-dependent developing countries highly vulnerable to external shocks. Increasing financialization of the commodities market and excessive speculation, of late, have become a matter of deep concern for most developing countries.

We must also find solutions to adding value to the products of developing countries, in place of simply perpetuating the role of developing countries as providers of raw materials.

The UNCTAD report states that the burden of high and volatile food prices falls disproportionately on low-income developing countries. Innovative and coherent policies at national, regional and international levels are necessary to ensure that price volatility does not impede growth and poverty eradication efforts.

The G20 Agricultural Ministers released a Ministerial Declaration establishing an Action Plan on Food Price Volatility and Agriculture. We welcome this timely action. India looks forward to the Agricultural Market Information System (AMIS), the focus of the Action Plan, which aims to address high and volatile food prices through tougher regulation on speculative investments in commodity markets, and on bio-fuels.

India is of the view that commodity dependent developing countries must pursue for a more diversified export basket, including high value processed agricultural commodities.

Mr. Chairperson,

Due to their structural constraints, the LDCs are overwhelmingly dependent on trade as an engine of growth and development. In spite of this, their share in global trade in 2010 was less than 1%.
We ought to create an enabling international environment to address their limited trading options. In this regard, we call for early implementation of the Duty Free Quota Free market access for the LDCs.

The DOHA Development Round presents a valuable opportunity to make international trade a vehicle for growth and development, and we must push for an outcome that it is fair, balanced and equitable.

The reform of global financial and economic institutions lies at the heart of creating a more responsive, equitable and democratic global trading order. We look forward to working with the global community to achieve this objective.

I thank you.

793. Statement by First Secretary at the Permanent Mission at the UN Dr. Vishnu Dutt Sharma on Agenda Item 81 – Report of the International Law Commission of the work of its sixty-third Session – Chapter VI, VIII and IX – at the Sixth Committee of the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

Mr. Chairman,

I extend my gratitude to the Chairman of the International Law Commission (ILC) Mr. Maurice Kamto for introduction of the Report of the sixty-third session of the Commission on the second cluster of topics.

Mr. Chairman,

Concerning the topic of “Effects of armed conflicts on treaties”, we commend the work of Special Rapporteur Mr. Lucius Caflisch on the topic and congratulate him for adoption, by the Commission, of the entire set of draft articles on this topic. We also recognize the scholarly work done on this topic by his predecessor Sir Ian Brownlie, as the first Special Rapporteur.

Mr. Chairman,

We support the general proposition of draft articles that the treaties are not automatically terminated or suspended as a result of an armed conflict. The termination, withdrawal or suspension of a treaty in the event of an armed conflict would be determined in accordance with the law on treaties, taking into account all relevant factors including the nature of the treaty, its subject-matter, object and purpose, and the characteristics of the armed conflict. We welcome the provision under draft article 4 which preserves the operation of the provisions of existing treaties applicable in situations of armed conflict.

Mr. Chairman,

The set of 18 draft articles has an annex which contains an indicative list of treaties. We are of the view that all the 12 category of treaties cannot be combined into one list. The treaties listed out are different in nature and scope. Some are permanent in character such as treaties establishing land and maritime boundaries. The treaties of permanent character need to be listed separately from other treaties whose continued existence depends on the intention of the parties. In this regard, we take note of the statement by the Chairman of the ILC which he made during the introduction of work on this topic that the list of treaties is neither definitive nor exhaustive.

Mr. Chairman,

In our view, the scope of this topic should be limited to treaties concluded between States and should not include treaties concluded between international organizations. Further, the definition of ‘armed conflict’ should be limited to armed conflicts between States and should not include internal conflicts, as treaties are entered into by States, and internal conflicts do not directly affect treaty relationship.

As recommended by the Commission, we are in favour of taking note of the draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties in a resolution, and annexing them to the resolution for consideration at a later stage for the elaboration of a convention, which would depend upon the result of detailed examination by States and position thereupon.

Mr. Chairman,

Turning to the topic of “Protection of persons in the event of disasters”, we would like to congratulate the Special Rapporteur, Mr. Eduardo Valencia-Ospina, for his fourth report. We also express our appreciation for the members of Drafting Committee, as a result of whose work, the Commission was able to adopt at its sixty-third session, draft article 6-11 on this topic with commentaries.

We support in principle, the provision under draft article 10 recognizing the duty of the affected State to seek assistance from the other States and relevant international organizations including the NGOs. Draft article 9 clearly indicated the duty of the affected state to ensure the protection of persons and provision of disaster relief and assistance on its territory. It recognizes the primary role of the affected state in direction, control, coordination, and supervision of such relief and assistance. This conforms to Resolution 46/182 of the General Assembly, which held that: Each State has the responsibility first and foremost to take care of the victims of natural disasters and other emergencies occurring on its territory.

Mr. Chairman,

We are in agreement with the notion in draft article 11 that external assistance requires the consent of the affected State. We stress that the sovereignty, territorial integrity and national unity of States must be fully respected in accordance with the UN Charter while providing the assistance within the territory of the affected State.

Mr. Chairman,

Regarding the topic of “Expulsion of aliens”, we recognize the importance of work done by the Special Rapporteur Mr. Maurice Kamto. We congratulate the Special Rapporteur on the presentation of his seventh report at the last session of the Commission. Seventh report provided an account of recent developments in relation to the topic and also proposed a restructured summary of the draft articles. Additionally, the Commission considered addendum 2 to the sixth report of the Special Rapporteur.

We support the general approach taken by the Special Rapporteur which deals with the right of a state to expel and the rights and remedies available to the person subject of expulsion, including the legal consequences of unlawful expulsion. Regarding the provision concerning extradition, although both expulsion and extradition have the effect of a person leaving the territory of one state for another, however, the legal basis and the laws governing the process and the procedure involved are altogether different and one cannot be used as an alternate for the other from the legal and technical stand point.

We are in favour of continued work by the ILC to come up with viable guidelines to be observed by states in cases of expulsion of aliens.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.
Statement by Member of Parliament and Member of the Indian Delegation to the UN Shatrughan Sinha on Agenda Item 27[B] – Meeting Devoted to the Launch of the International Year of Cooperatives 2012 at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 31, 2011.

Mr. President,

I am thankful to you for giving me this opportunity to address the General Assembly.

As we gather here to mark 2012 as the International Year of Cooperatives, it is most befitting that the United Nations is taking leadership to raise awareness about Cooperatives as a progressive model of socio-economic advancement. Considering the role that Cooperatives have played the world over in bringing about social change, rural development and raising economic productivity, this global recognition has been long overdue.

The Cooperative model of development has met with remarkable success in varied socio-economic contexts in both developed and developing countries. Yet, its true potential as a means of socio-economic organization remains to be fully harnessed, and the model itself to be better understood by the larger global development community.

Its space in global development discourse, thus far, has been limited. In fact, the Internationally Agreed Development Goals including the MDGs (Millennium Development Goals) have really not focused on this people-centric development option.

Mr. President,

They say in every crisis lies an opportunity. There is a strengthened push for financial inclusion, promoting social protection and empowering small and medium enterprises and marginal farmers to act as levers against economic shocks. This has pitched forth Cooperatives as a viable choice for social and economic action. We must fully capitalize on the situation.

India calls upon Member States, the United Nations system, civil society and the private sector to strongly advocate for Cooperative Movement. This would be most timely, as the global community prepares to renew its commitment to Sustainable Development at the RIO+20 Conference next year.

The decentralized nature of Cooperative structure based on popular participation and bottom-up approach makes it an ideal platform for local action. Cooperatives have contributed significantly in ensuring economic productivity, rural development; promoting social empowerment and cohesion; opening marketing channels for village and artisanal produce; and providing credit and input support to farmers, consumers and workers. Their catalytic role in national advancement, both in developed and developing countries has been well recognized.

Mr. President,

India’s experience with Cooperatives has been singularly successful. This has been duly noted by the Secretary General in his report. Given that almost 70% of our people are dependent on agriculture, it is natural for our Cooperative Movement to have an agricultural bias, both in credit and non-credit segments. Our national priority for poverty eradication, inclusive growth, women empowerment and promoting self-reliance underpins the fundamentals of the Indian Cooperative Movement. In the process, we have constantly drawn inspiration from the Father of our Nation, Mahatma Gandhi who desired to see village societies and cooperative farming at the center of his idea of GRAM SWARAJ or Rural Independence.

A unique feature of the Cooperative Movement in India has been that the State has played an active role in it. We believe such responsibilities are part of a developmental State, especially in the early years of its existence. With the Cooperative Movement having gathered strength of its own, the Government now is largely playing a facilitator’s role.

Cooperatives have been the lifeline of India’s white revolution or milk production, and have made us the largest producer of milk in the world. Milk Cooperatives have been most successful in the dry parts of India, not the most ideal setting for dairy, making cooperative action even more note-worthy. A Milk Cooperative, AMUL is a household name in India with its products available throughout the length and breadth of the country. Behind the brand AMUL, stands a milk marketing federation, a union of 15,712 village milk cooperatives comprising 3 million milk producers, with a daily milk collection of 12 million liters and supported by one million retailers. Milk Cooperative under the brand name SUDHA has contributed significantly to ensuring healthy, nutritive and affordable food to the people in our State of BIHAR- the land of Lord Buddha.

The Indian Farmers’ Fertiliser Cooperative Limited [IFFCO], the largest fertiliser producing cooperative in Asia is another stellar example of cooperative success in India. It has a membership base of more than 39,000 agricultural cooperatives throughout the country. It has recently diversified itself in insurance, IT services and other developmental activities in rural areas, establishing new networks of group action to empower people.
There are a large number of other such success stories from the cooperative sector in India. Our cooperatives have shown impressive results in banking, sugarcane farming, urban housing, fishery, poultry, home-based economic activities, marketing of village produce and social welfare. India’s cooperative action in providing affordable housing in the urban areas has been instrumental in making progress on slum development, an MDG commitment.

Mr. President,

Given India’s success in Cooperatives, we have taken steps to integrate it fully into our planning and development process. We have established the National Cooperative Union of India, an apex body to guide and strengthen the movement. To support its growth and professional needs, we have established a network of Cooperative Management institutes. In order to improve the functioning of the Cooperatives, we are placing greater emphasis on consolidation, internal resource mobilization, meeting their training needs and re-orienting the role of Government as a facilitator.

Mr. President,

We are living in uncertain times. New and emerging challenges of food security, energy access, rapid pace of urbanization, degeneration of natural resources, and growing rural-urban inequality seek an enhanced collective action. We are compelled to do more with less resource. How do we do it? One of the answers, Mr. President, lies in the Cooperative Movement. Let’s do our best to project, protect and promote it.

I thank you.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Madam President,

At the outset, I would like to thank you for organizing this timely debate. Your initiative will not only be significant in determining the relevance and effectiveness of this Council but also of the larger United Nations system in the decades to come.

I would like to thank ASG Judy Cheng-Hopkins and Chair of Peacebuilding Configuration for Guinea Ambassador Sylvie Lucas for their useful briefings. Our sincere appreciations are also for Ambassador Gasana for his able stewardship of the Peace-building Commission.

Madam President,

The idea of peace-building essentially emanates from experience of peacekeeping distilled over decades.

The United Nations has made enormous investments of manpower and resources in “multidimensional” PKOs.

In such a scenario, the Council would do well to effectively consult major troop and police contributing countries, both individually and through the instrumentality of the PBC, while formulating and revising mandates of UN missions.

India’s excellence in peacekeeping is a result of our long partnership with the UN missions wherein our consolidated contributions outsize the magnitude of the current peacekeeping operations.

Our peacekeepers have invariably also been early peace-builders.

India has also shared its experience and expertise with a range of countries that have embarked onto the path of transition from conflict to peace.

We will happily continue to make available our capacities to societies emerging from post-conflict situations and will partner UN in its peace-building endeavours.

As a member of its Organisational Committee, India has partnered PBC actively, since its inception in December 2005, and has made contributions to the Peace Building Fund.
Madam President,

Peace-building is a cooperative and coordinated venture.

Peace-building strategies need to be harmonized within the UN system first. The existing structures and networks of strength need to be consolidated as we explore alternatives elsewhere.

Harnessing capacities from the global South will energize our peace-building enterprise.

It is also important to keep in mind that national ownership is the critical determinant of success in peace-building.

It is the duty of the international community to ensure assistance for capacity building to national authorities.

Madam President,

Security is, of course, the key pillar for peace-building.

It is, however, equally important that we focus on economic opportunity, particularly for the youth in tandem with political and social stability.

This demands a holistic approach.

It is also important that there is an effective two-way dialogue between countries on the Agenda of the PBC and the Commission itself through all phases.

Let us also acknowledge the fact that lack of funding constitutes a major impediment to the success of peace-building initiatives.

It goes without saying that other elements such as human resource, technical assistance, managerial assistance, assistance in kind and other programmes of assistance through provision of appropriate technologies are also important.

Predictable and appropriate level of resources over an extended period will guarantee sustainability of peace-building initiatives.

Madam President,

Enhancing civilian capacity will have a major impact on staffing, resourcing and the peacekeeping missions themselves.

These are essential but should neither dilute nor detract from the requirements of peacekeeping.

It is also important that the civilian capacities are sourced with the requisite measure of ground experience. In this context priority should be given to obtain capacities on secondment from Governments of developing countries.

My delegation is hopeful of constructive and meaningful discussions on the substance of the Secretary-General’s report on civilian capacities.

It is essential that these discussions take place in inter-governmental settings and involve the C-34 and the Fifth Committee.

Thank you, Madam President.

796.  Statement by Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri, Permanent Representative of India at the First Exchange of the Eighth Round of Intergovernmental Negotiations on the Question of Equitable Representation on and increase in the Membership of the Security Council and other matters related to the Council.

New York, November 28, 2011.

Mr. Chairman,

Let me begin by congratulating you on being re-appointed as Chair of the intergovernmental negotiations on Security Council reform.

As we stated in the formal plenary meeting in the General Assembly on 8 November, you are a highly experienced and wise Chair and we believe that the PGA could not have chosen a better person for this important task. In fact your letter of 10 November which outlined your general approach towards the issue in the current General Assembly session reiterates our assessment about your skills and abilities.

At the outset, I would like to place on record my delegation’s willingness and determination to continue to participate actively in these negotiations.

We also align ourselves with the statement made by Ambassador Raymond Wolfe of Jamaica on behalf of the L69 Group.

Mr. Chairman,

Your letter rightly mentioned that in the course of the 66th General debate, world leaders once again highlighted the importance of the reform of the United Nations and the Security Council in particular.
In our count, around 100 world leaders articulated their views on the matter. Some leaders were particularly forthright and frank in their comments.

For instance, His Excellency, the President of Nigeria told the Assembly on 24 September and I quote, “A reformed UN Security Council is the only way to demonstrate that all nations have equal stake in the UN.”

My own Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh said, “The reform and expansion of the Security Council are essential if it is to reflect contemporary reality. Such an outcome will enhance the Council’s credibility and effectiveness in dealing with global issues.”

Mr. Chairman,

The entire international community is aware of the far-reaching impact of the outreach undertaken by a wide coalition of member-states on a short resolution that calls for reform comprising expansion of the Council in both the permanent and non-permanent categories and improvement in its working methods.

As Ambassador Wolfe rightly pointed out, the outreach initiative took as its starting point your own assessment in September 2009 that the reform model seeking an expansion in both categories “commanded the most support from the delegations taking the floor.” And these Mr. Chairman are your words. Further, the initiative is completely in accordance with the parameters laid down in GA decision 62/557, which established the intergovernmental negotiations, and other relevant resolutions.

The results of the outreach indicate that this proposition enjoys broad support from delegations across various regions. To date, an overwhelming majority of delegations have signaled their support for this proposition, including 80 or more that have done so in writing.

Again at the formal plenary meeting held on 8 and 9 November, two out of every three speakers called for a reform model based on expansion in both the permanent and non-permanent categories. In fact, my distinguished colleagues from Australia, Hungary and the Netherlands who was also speaking on behalf of Belgium went so far as to state that the short resolution should be put on the agenda of the intergovernmental negotiations.

Mr. Chairman,

The principles captured in the short resolution are simple and straightforward. These principles enjoy strong support among the UN membership. In our view, therefore, the intergovernmental negotiations should continue its work on the basis of these principles.
We could even adopt this as a GA resolution. It does not necessitate any Charter amendment and it does not exclude any other model. In fact, its adoption will articulate the general membership’s resolve to engage in good faith negotiations on the basis of the said principles.

Delegations with other points of view should feel encouraged to likewise put forward their principles and seek the support of the rest of the UN membership. Such efforts are par for the course in all intergovernmental negotiations.

The elements of the short resolution could also be appropriately reflected in the Rev3 along with the degree of wide support that it enjoys.

In addition, as regards the size of an expanded Council, the area of convergence seems to be in the mid-20s. Further, the great amount of numerical support for what we have been loosely calling the ‘veto restraint agreement’ is writ large in Rev3. So is the case with the overwhelming support for “equitable geographical distribution” as selection criteria for new members. All these aspects could be articulated in the negotiation text without repeating different formulations of the same principles. This will in one swoop considerably reduce the length of the negotiation text.

And let me add, lest I am misunderstood, all original proposals remain on the table!

Mr. Chairman,

My distinguished colleague from Egypt has made several comments regarding the ideas of the L69, including on the rights and obligations of new permanent members. Even though he spoke after Ambassador Wolfe, who spoke on behalf of L69, it would appear that he did not really hear the L69, which was clear that these rights and obligations must be the same as those of current permanent members.

I must also mention that the L69 and the Chair of the C-10 of the AU are in close contact given that the two Groups are on the same page with common goals on Security Council reform.

Maybe my distinguished colleague from Egypt whose activism and political maturity I personally greatly admire, is not on the same page as our distinguished colleague from Sierra Leone. And I would like to quote from the statement of our colleague from Sierra Leone where he says in the penultimate paragraph, in the second half, “At this stage, all of us must bear the responsibility to be flexible if we are truly committed to reforming the Council as resolved by our leaders at the 2005 World Summit, to make it more inclusive, democratic, transparent, accountable, legitimate, efficient and effective.”
Mr. Chairman,

India is a member of two groupings devoted to early reform of the Security Council, namely the G4 and the L69. The positions of these two groups have a number of common elements with other groups and member-states who have made proposals on the subject. We are keen to enhance our convergences with such other like-minded groups during this General Assembly session, in particular with the African Group whose aspirations we support.

Mr. Chairman,

It is useful when we are immersed in any process to take a step back and reflect on the big picture.

We, the Indian delegation, see a mosaic that is neither appealing nor sustainable. The moot questions that are being asked the world over are: What is the alternative to the current Security Council?; How long should the world be subject to the mercies of a woefully inadequate system erected in 1945?; What prevents the international community from replacing an outdated governing architecture based on a selective interpretation of the dictum ‘to the victor belong the spoils’?

There are two propositions that can help us unlock these mysteries, if you will.

First, there is a growing recognition of the fact that the widespread feeling of marginalization among the un-represented and under-represented is now leading to a sharp sense of frustration which carries with it the potential to unravel the existing system.

Second, the established order should hasten to acknowledge the frustration and act credibly on it by ensuring a managed and orderly transformation so as to make it reflective of contemporary realities. Those who swear by the status quo and therefore latch on to their national positions risk contributing to a process that could endanger the entire edifice of international relations as it is presently structured and as we know it.

Mr. Chairman,

Change should usher in a new order. The new order has to assume responsibility. Once such responsibility is effectively discharged the Security Council will be taken seriously on all issues, and not merely on those in which by a conspiracy of factors unrelated to the maintenance of international peace and security some of the powerful are able to agree!

I am sure that you will agree with me when I say that we can witness more effective and efficient functioning of the Security Council if and when the Council is able to utilize the energies and resources of its most willing and most capable member-states on a permanent basis.

Along with membership will have to come responsibility, along with responsibility will come the willingness of burden sharing including where the costs are beginning to pinch and hurt the permanent members.

In conclusion, let me reiterate that India is of the view that reform and expansion of the Security Council are essential if it is to reflect contemporary reality. Such an outcome will enhance the Council’s credibility and effectiveness in dealing with global issues. Early reform of the Security Council must be pursued with renewed vigour and urgently enacted.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

New York, December 1, 2011.

Mr. President,

I am honoured to address the General Assembly on behalf of my country at today’s joint debate.

We believe that the issue of General Assembly revitalization has assumed particular significance in recent years. This is quite vividly captured in the emphasis that PGA has placed on UN reform, including the revitalization of the General Assembly and reform of the Security Council which are among the four priorities for the new PGA.

I am happy to place on record our appreciation for the good work done by the Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group last year, H.E. Mr. Camillo Gonsalves, the Permanent Representative of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and H.E. Mr. Dalius Cekoulis, the Permanent Representative of the Republic of Lithuania.

Equally, I would like to place on record my delegation’s appreciation for the work done by the Algerian delegation as the NAM Chair on this issue as well as for the other negotiating partners who worked in a spirit of cooperation during the last session.

Let me also welcome the appointments of the Permanent Representatives of Georgia and United Republic of Tanzania as co-Chairs of the ad-hoc Working Group for this Session. The Indian Delegation will support you in your task this Session.

Before I proceed to articulate our position, permit me to use some modern-day analogy to elaborate our basic approach to the two agenda items at hand.

Mr. President,

Whenever Face book users want to express themselves through a post, they get feedback from their friends who in turn express themselves through three basic options: “Like”, “Comment” and “Share.” The best posts usually get large number of “Likes” and are “Shared” repeatedly, but the good ones get an equally large number of “Comment” because there is still scope for further improvement.

Spoken in face book terminology, at present, GA revitalization is highly “commented” upon, much “liked” but rarely “shared.” There is even the danger that if not acted upon quickly, the only function that would be applied to GA revitalization is that it would be consigned to the “event” category with its ‘status’ updated once a year!

Mr. President,

UN reform is a process that has to evolve with the evolving international situation.

An illustrative case in point is the extremely useful role that the major troop contributing countries could play in the UN, but are not being allowed to do so merely because we have not yet reformed the UN to make it reflect contemporary global realities.

Starker still is the stubborn refusal to implement the obvious, such as the commitment by world leaders in 2005 to bring about early reform of the Security Council.

The perpetuation of this state of affairs, sometimes with the active connivance of delegations purely out of narrow-minded national positions emanating from limited ambitions, is a travesty of the Assembly’s prerogatives.

Such state of affairs is the most appalling disservice to Article 10 of the UN Charter which vests in the Assembly the power to discuss any questions or matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the Charter, i.e. the Security Council, the ECOSOC, Trusteeship Council, the ICJ as well as the Secretariat, save those expressly excluded.

The starting point of my delegation's position on the issue of General Assembly revitalization is the firm belief that the General Assembly can be revitalized only when its position as the chief deliberative, policy-making and representative organ of the United Nations is respected both in letter and in spirit.

The General Assembly should take the lead in setting the global agenda and restoring the centrality of the United Nations in formulating multilateral approaches to resolving transnational issues.

In keeping with these guidelines, my delegation participated actively in the deliberations of the Ad Hoc Working Group on General Assembly revitalization in the 65th session. We provided a number of inputs at the meetings during the last session. These inputs were provided in a spirit of constructive engagement and we are pleased that they were taken on board in the negotiations leading to the adoption of Resolution 65/315.

While we are generally happy that Resolution 65/315 has been able to highlight some of the important steps required on our collective journey towards a revitalized General Assembly, we firmly believe, Mr. President that we have some distance still to travel.

Mr. President,

Without prejudging the proceedings of the Ad Hoc Working Group that should start soon, I would like to place on record the Indian delegation's considered views on some of the important aspects of the issue which concern General Assembly Revitalization.

First of all, it is critical that we establish a proper relationship of respect for respective mandates between the General Assembly and the Security Council in the spirit of the Charter. In this it is particularly important that the Council not encroach upon the mandate of the General Assembly through extremely wide and permissive interpretations of what constitutes a threat to international peace and security, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression and to the situations under which it can take action under Chapter VII of the UN Charter.

It is clear that the Council's agenda is, to say the least, overburdened because it has anointed itself with the responsibility of dealing with issues, which though seemingly important, leave it with less time to deal with the real hotspots that constitute the real threats to international peace and security. The balance between the General Assembly and the Council is only one of the dimensions of what needs to be addressed. We propose to raise these issues in the Ad Hoc Working Group.
The Assembly must have a greater say in the process of selection of the Secretary General. The continued circumscribing of the Assembly’s role and responsibilities in the process of selection and appointment of the Secretary General needs to change in the interests of the United Nations system in general and the Assembly’s prerogatives in particular. And, as it was the General Assembly which limited its own role, it will have to be the General Assembly that claws back its rightful place in the process of selecting the Secretary-General.

The Assembly and the other entities that form part of the UN system must reflect diplomatic best practices in its day to day functioning. And it has a lot to learn from member-states in this regard.

Mr. President,

In conclusion, let me re-emphasize the need to discuss substantive measures that would strengthen the role of General Assembly as the chief deliberative, legislative, policy-making and representative body of the international community.

The General Assembly can expect India’s constructive support and participation in these efforts.

I thank you.
Madam President,

Permit me at the outset to thank the Executive Director and Under Secretary-General, Madam Michelle Bachelet for her statement and for introducing the first biennial institutional budget of UN Women.

We would also like to thank the UN Women Secretariat for the timely issuance of documents and for engaging member-states in a transparent and consultative fashion throughout the preparation for this Session.

As we draw close to the end of the first operational year of UN Women, my delegation is satisfied to note the progress achieved in laying the foundation of the new entity as it scales up its operations and embarks on its important work.

While we are fully conscious that the task at hand is enormous, my delegation is encouraged by the beginning made to reinstate the leading role of the United Nations in pursuing gender equality and the empowerment of women under the able leadership of Madam Bachelet.

The creation of UN Women flows from the firm conviction of the international community that undiluted focus on women’s issues is central to addressing many of the challenges that the world faces today.

As the entity settles into its new structures and mandates, it is imperative that the initial enthusiasm and good will is not allowed to dissipate so that UN Women is best placed to fulfill the high expectations that member-states have entrusted to it.

Madam President,

I belong to a country that is home to more than 500 million women. In India, we are firmly convinced that ensuring the rightful place of women in society is not only a moral imperative but an essential pre-requisite for achieving peace, prosperity and sustainable development.

This acknowledgement is reflected in the priorities and policies that we have pursued at the national level. Over the years, we have implemented a raft of measures that focus on the socio-economic upliftment of women, with special emphasis on education, health, employment, micro-finance, access to agricultural land, social security measures and rural infrastructure.
Our well-recognized success in the political empowerment of women is transforming the traditional and entrenched power dynamic in both rural and urban India. Women are finding their place in all walks of professional and political life from corporate empires to the bureaucracy. Women adorn the highest offices in India including, at present, that of the President of the country, Speaker of the Lower House of Parliament, and Leader of the Opposition. Further, today, more than a million women are represented on local bodies where they exercise decision making authority almost on a daily basis.

In the realm of legislative action, India has enacted laws against domestic violence, child marriage, and prenatal sex selection. More recently, a Bill has been tabled in the Parliament for prevention of sexual harassment at the work place.

Madam President,

Let me now turn to the institutional budget that is the main agenda for this session of the Executive Board. My delegation recognizes that it is a foundational budget and sets the tone for what will follow. This budget is important from our perspective in laying a sound basis for implementing the strategic plan approved earlier in the year by the Board.

The budget proposal addresses the need to deploy a strengthened field presence critical in accomplishing the vision championed by UN Women and member-states. As ultimately, UN Women will be judged by what and how it delivers in the field.

We look forward to the findings of the regional architecture review and the organizational efficiency initiative that will take further the work of establishing UN Women’s global presence and the effective and efficient delivery of its mandate.

Madam President,

We are also aware that the ability of UN Women to marshal adequate resources will play a crucial role in its capacity to fulfill the aspiration and ambition bestowed on it by the international community.

In this regard, we have noted that UN Women has scaled down its resource mobilization targets to US$ 700 million for the biennium 2012-2013 keeping in mind the constrained global financial environment. Nevertheless, we urge donors to not let contributions flag, particularly in today’s difficult development landscape where women as a vulnerable section are more adversely impacted than otherwise, and need all the support they can get.

I would like to inform you that the Government of India has already pledged five million US dollars to UN Women as part of its commitment to provide core predictable funding to the best of its capacity. In April this year, my delegation handed over the first one million dollars.

I am happy to take this opportunity to announce that India will contribute another one million US dollars to UN Women in the coming days.

Let me conclude, Madam President, by reaffirming India’s steadfast commitment to the global, regional and national effort to achieve gender equality, the empowerment of women and gender mainstreaming. We assure you that India will not be found wanting in our support and cooperation to realizing the shared vision envisaged in the creation of UN Women.

799. Statement by Permanent Representative at the UN

Ambassador Hardeep Singh Puri on Agenda Item 18 – Follow up and Implementation of the Outcome of the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development and the 2008 review Conference at the 66th Session of the UN General Assembly.

New York, December 7, 2011.

Mr. President,

Allow me to begin by thanking you for organising this high-level dialogue on Financing for Development.

We are just four years away from the MDG target year. While there has been progress in several areas, it is clear that many of the targets will remain unmet. A key element in our not being able to realize even the minimum goals that were set for those in the greatest need is the gap in development financing. While gap in aid delivery and external finance has undermined the capacity of the developing world to meet their development aspirations, the global economic crisis has further burdened them with limited growth, higher unemployment and increasing poverty resulting in lower domestic resources targeted at development.

With global output continuing to show a downward trend in 2011, the prospect of developing countries increasing their exports, managing external debt and attracting foreign direct investments appear to be less encouraging. It is, therefore, essential that growth-promoting policies are pursued to strengthen global economic recovery which in turn would allow countries to raise higher public revenues. In this regard, it is imperative that countries work towards financial inclusion and progressive tax policies but it is equally important to strengthen and democratise international tax cooperation and policy making.

Mr. President,

Foreign Direct Investment is important for financing development. However, its quantum, especially in the adverse economic circumstances of today, cannot be expected on its own to tackle poverty, hunger and disease in developing countries. FDI must also forge productive linkages with the wider local economy and be consistent with the broader objectives of Sustainable Development to have a meaningful impact.

International trade has long been seen as an engine of development, especially by developing countries that are dependent on exports. In recent times, however, significant risk factors including rising food and energy prices, increasing tariff and non-tariff barriers and other forms of export restrictions have negatively impacted trade prospects for developing countries.

Lack of market access, aid-for-trade and a skewed multilateral rule-based trading system continues to deny a level playing field to developing countries. If we wish to make trade a credible engine of inclusive growth, there is no getting away from a balanced and development oriented outcome of the DOHA Round. And while doing so, we must ensure that trade distorting factors including agricultural subsidies in developed countries are comprehensively addressed.

The debt situation in a large number of developing countries remains untenable, with their ratio of external debt to GDP being over 20% in some cases. This fundamental economic weakness has further retarded their development process. Much remains to be done on debt relief and debt sustainability.

Mr. President,

It is clear that developing countries, especially LDCs, LLDCs, SIDS and countries in Africa cannot meet their developmental challenges without external assistance. Official Development Assistance remains an important source of development financing for them for which there is no substitute.

Meanwhile, the gap in ODA financing continues to widen. In 2010, only five donor countries had met their ODA commitment of 0.7%. The aid flow to developing countries last year stood at US$ 129 billion, representing 0.32% of the total GNI of the donor countries and well short of the 0.7% mark. It is deeply worrisome that the global crisis is being made an excuse for not meeting existing commitments.
The commitment that the international community made in Monterrey and Doha of ensuring predictable development assistance including ODA, concessional financing and debt relief to developing countries and supporting nationally owned development strategies need to be fulfilled urgently. India, on its part, is privileged and committed to share its development expertise with fellow developing countries. Under our flagship development cooperation platform, the Indian Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) programme, we are extending capacity building and technical support to 161 developing countries with around 7400 vocational training slots on an annual basis.

Our development partnership in recent years has expanded to include lines of credit and grants to boost economic and trade partnerships. India has committed 1 billion US Dollars in lines of credit for the implementation of the Istanbul Programme of Action for the LDCs, in addition to 250 new training slots annually. We have also committed 5 billion US Dollars in lines of credit to Africa over the next three years and an additional 700 million US dollars grant assistance for human resource development, transfer of technology and building new institutions in consultation with the African Union.

Mr. President,

South-South financial and technical assistance may be expanding but we need to be clear that it can neither be a substitute for the North-South aid nor dilute those aid commitments. It is also important to recognize that developing countries, which are burdened with huge socio-economic challenges of their own, cannot be expected to meet the obligations of the developed world.

What is acutely worrisome is that the discourse on global aid architecture these days is increasingly focused on drawing developing countries into the North-South aid paradigm. South-South Cooperation cannot be viewed through the traditional “donor-recipient” prism of North-South development cooperation. It also cannot be subjected to the demand for harmonization of aid by donors, given its distinct paradigm and particularities. In this context it is noteworthy that the recently concluded High Level Meeting on Aid Effectiveness in Busan has accepted that South-South Cooperation is different from North-South aid.

Mr. President,

Given the resource gap in financing for development, it is imperative that innovative sources of financing be explored. We, however, see innovative sources as additional to and not a substitute for ODA. There is, therefore, a need to have a common understanding on what constitutes innovative sources of financing. It is also important that these finances are disbursed in accordance with the priorities of developing countries and do not place an unfair burden on them.
Mr. President,

A comprehensive reform of the international financial architecture to address systemic issues lies at the heart of general implementation of the financing for development process. India has been working closely with like-minded countries to ensure greater voice and participatory space for developing countries in the international financial institutions. Much work, however, remains to be done to ensure that global economic governance and the development agenda complement each other.

The financing for development process, as embodied in the Monterrey Consensus and the Doha Review Conference, is crucial for attainment of our development aspirations. We must adhere to its principles in letter and spirit.

Thank you.
